Police receive anonymous phone tip that man in gold Maverick brandished shotgun, police stop green Maverick, seize guns, drugs; held: because record is devoid of information whether informant was eyewitness, there is no basis of knowledge or reliability established, State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940 (1975), Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833 (1982), State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), cf.: State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015), nor other indicia or reliability; although potential danger to public may be factor to consider, it cannot substitute for reliability of informant, State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013), , Florida v. J.L., 579 U.S. 266, 272, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), distinguishing State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985); but see: State v. Randall, 73 Wn.App. 225 (1994), State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008); II.

State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591 (1992)

Police observe respondent and another female in high drug area both looking and pointing at an object in respondent's hand; upon observing officer, respondent says, "Oh shit," two females separate and walk in different directions, respondent closes hand and puts it in pocket, police ask her to remove her hand and give him what is in it, she says nothing is in hand, officer motions to give it to him, she hands him drugs; held: while observed behavior itself is insufficient to justify Terry stop, respondent's reaction to officer's presence prior to the actual stop was sufficiently consistent with behavior suggesting that a drug buy was taking place to justify the stop, but see: State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995), cf.: State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008); scope of search after stop was properly expanded because actions of respondent gave rise to reasonable suspicion she possessed evidence in danger of being destroyed, or a weapon, State v. Pimintel, 55 Wn.App. 569 (1989), State v. Dorsey, 40 Wn.App. 459, 473 (1985); respondent's denial of having anything in her hand further justifies expanded intrusion, State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509, 515 (1991); see also: State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687, 691-3 (1995); I, 2-1.

State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693 (1992)

Police observe a suspect involved in apparent drug activity, later see defendant walking with original suspect, asks if he can talk to defendant, has him empty his pockets, asks if officer can search pockets, defendant agrees, finds drugs; held: while initial encounter was not a seizure, State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), direction to empty pockets is a show of authority which transformed the encounter to a seizure because objective facts would lead any reasonable person to believe he was not free to leave, irrespective of officer's statement that they were free to go, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000); mere proximity to others involved in criminal activity do not warrant a reasonable suspicion to seize, State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57 (2010), State v. Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011), State v. Fuentes, 183 Wn.2d 149, 161 (2015), State v. Weyand, 188 Wn.2d 804 (2017); III.

State v. Walker, 66 Wn.App. 622 (1992)

Police radio reports individuals going door-to-door asking for people who do not live in area, police observe defendant who matches description, appears startled by police, stops on request, states he was looking for an apartment, is patted down, fruits of burglary found; held: even if stop was valid, patdown was not, as frisk occurred on a residential sidewalk in the middle of the afternoon, suspect alone with two police officers, thus facts do not support officer's safety concerns, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733 (1984), State v. Mitchell, 80 Wn.App. 143 (1995), State v. Pines, 17 Wn.App.2d 483 (2021), distinguishing State v. Sweet, 44 Wn.App. 226 (1986); I.

Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993)

Police, during Terry frisk, feel no weapons but feel lump in pocket, examine it with fingers, conclude it's crack cocaine, seize it; held: police may seize nonthreatening contraband during a lawful frisk if officer feels an object whose contour or mass makes its identity immediately apparent; here, while officer could lawfully feel lump, his continued exploration of the pocket after he concluded it was not a weapon exceeded the scope of the Terry frisk, thus suppressed, State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), see: State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995), State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168 (1993)

Police stop vehicle at night for traffic infraction, recognize driver as someone whom officer had, 2 months earlier, arrested on a felony warrant during which bullets, holster and handcuffs but no gun were found, patdown, find drugs; held: time of day, prior felony, presence of ammunition at prior felony arrest justify Terry frisk, see: State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181 (1998); prior felony is a factor to justify a frisk after a valid stop, but not a factor to justify a stop, distinguishing State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437 (1980); reliable information that suspect may have a gun plus "other circumstances that contribute to a reasonable safety concern" will justify a frisk, see: State v. Holbrook, 33 Wn.App. 692 (1983), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), but see: State v. Terrazzas, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1994), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); 8-0.

State v. Galbert, 70 Wn.App. 721 (1993)

Police, executing search warrant on residence, find defendant inside, cuff and frisk him, find drugs near defendant, re-frisk and find drugs on defendant; held: record establishes no reason why first frisk was insufficient, defendant did nothing to raise suspicions, there was no evidence that defendant was presently dangerous, defendant's presence and proximity to drugs does not justify search incident to arrest, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289, 303 (1982), State v.

Lennon, 94 Wn.App. 573 (1999), State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008), State v. Bee Xiong, 164 Wn.2d 506 (2008), thus suppressed; I.

State v. Terrazas, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1993)

Trooper stops vehicle for weaving, asks driver for license, defendant says he has none, trooper asks for name and birthdate, suspects false name, pats down driver, finds nothing, arrests driver for driving without license, observes passenger with blanket on lap, suspects weapon, removes passengers from car, searches, finds guns, drugs; held: an arrest solely for driving without a license, without other reasonable grounds, is improper, State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978), State v. Barajas, 57 Wn.App. 556 (1990), State v. Watson, 56 Wn.App. 665 (1990), see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992), State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005); mere suspicion that driver gave a false name is not enough; search of vehicle for officer safety was improper, as blanket on passenger's lap does not rise to an articulable suspicion that passenger was dangerous or armed, see: State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573, 578-9 (1986), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 238 (1998), State v. Adams, 144 Wn.App. 100 (2008), State v. Cruz, 195 Wn.App. 120 (2016), review dismissed, on other grounds, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017), but see: Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), cf.: State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); III.

State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669 (1994)

FBI, investigating bombing, go to suspect's home, suspect's mother signs general consent to search but orally consents to a search for evidence of bombing, agents enter suspect's bedroom, observe shotgun, unload it, take it to mother who agrees they can take it, shotgun is later linked to homicide, the res of this appeal; held: removing shotgun from bedroom and unloading it is a seizure, distinguishing Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1971); seizure of shotgun was reasonable, as police conducting a search may briefly seize and secure any weapon for safety, Michigan v. Summers, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981); II

State v. Fowler, 76 Wn.App. 168 (1994)

Police officer stops vehicle for traffic infraction, observes furtive movements, frisks defendant, feels hard object and soft objects, removes a pager and a package containing drugs; held: because officer had ample time and opportunity to retrieve the hard object without disturbing the others, the seizure of the package was unlawful, State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), see: State v. Hudson, 124 Wn.2d 107, 113 (1994), cf.: State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181 (1998); III.

State v. Olsson, 78 Wn.App. 202, 207-8 (1995)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, is told by driver he has a knife, which driver produces, officer observed "a heightened awareness to his surroundings. His pupils would not react and were fixed at midrange. He had glassy eyes with redness around the membrane," police patdown, find drugs; held: officer had sufficient and specific facts leading him to believe driver was under the influence of drugs, also had legitimate safety concerns prompting patdown search; III.

State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995)

Police officer observes defendant intently looking at a plastic bag in his hand, when defendant sees officer he turns away and makes shoving motions into pants, officer stops defendant and pats him down, seizing bag with drugs; held: stop was made to search pocket where officer suspected he might find evidence, not a weapon, thus search exceeded scope of Terry stop, distinguishing State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995), State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591 (1992); I.

State v. Laskowski, 88 Wn.App. 858 (1997)

Officer, dispatched to vehicle prowl, sees six suspects matching description, some hesitate to remove hands from pockets, defendant is nervous, officer knows one suspect has a weapon history, patdown of all suspects discloses shotgun shell, officer then pats down defendant's backpack, feels long hard object, opens pack and finds shotgun; held: any reasonable basis supporting an inference that the investigatee or a companion is armed will justify a protective search for weapons, at 860, State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812, 818 (1990); totality of suspicious circumstances supported officer's belief that respondent was armed and dangerous, protective frisk may extend beyond a person to his area of immediate control if there is reasonable suspicion that suspect is dangerous and may gain access to weapon, State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 579, 582 (1986), State v. Bray, 143 Wn.App. 148 (2008), cf.: State v. Martinez, 135 Wn.App. 174 (2006); I.

State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181 (1998)

Police observe two men yelling at each other at night in high crime area, defendant's finger pointing at other man's face, police approach, defendant walks away, is told to stop, defendant attempts to enter building, officer tells defendant to show hands, defendant puts hands in pocket, officer frisks, feels what he believes to be a knife, seizes 3x4" canister, opens it to look for a weapon, finds drugs; held: stop of defendant was proper to "maintain the status quo" and determine whether or not violence was about to erupt, Adams v. Williams, 32 L.Ed.2d 612 (1972), frisk was "prudent" as defendant attempted to flee and refuse to turn or show hands, State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993), officer may withdraw object s/he believes may be a weapon, State v. Hudson, 124 Wn.2d 107, 113 (1994), officer's belief that canister could contain a Derringer justifies opening, State v. Belieu, 112 Wn.2d 587, 601-2 (1989), but see: State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29 (2006), State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); II.

State v. Lennon, 94 Wn.App. 573, 579-82 (1999)

During search pursuant to warrant, defendant (not subject of warrant) knocks on door, enters, is acquainted with police who pat him down and find drugs; held: generalized suspicion of police that they often find weapons on premises searched for drugs does not justify patdown as there was no evidence that defendant was armed or dangerous, defendant did not act in any furtive or suspicious manner, thus suppressed, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), State v. Douglas S., 42 Wn.App. 138 (1985), State v. Galbert, 70 Wn.App. 721 (1993), State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008), State v. Bee Xiong, 164 Wn.2d 506 (2008), cf.: State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181, 185 (1998), but see: State v. Styles, 93 Wn.2d 173 (1980); III.

Florida v. J.L., 579 U.S. 266, 272, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000)

Anonymous call to police reports young black male at a bus stop wearing plaid shirt carrying a gun, police respond to specific bus stop, see black male in plaid shirt, frisk, find gun; held: anonymous tip that a person is carrying a gun, without more, is insufficient to justify a stop and frisk, State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019), distinguishing Alabama v. White, 110 L.Ed.2d 301 (1990), cf.: State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985), Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Cormier, 100 Wn.App. 457 (2000)

Police, serving a warrant, observe defendant at night ride by on bicycle several times, stop and stare, police approach, ask him to remove hands from pockets, defendant refuses, is told he will be arrested for obstructing, officers try to take him in custody, defendant strikes police who search and find drugs; held: police had no reasonable belief that defendant was armed, thus had no basis to stop; once defendant assaulted the officer, police had probable cause to arrest, State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460, 50 A.L.R.5th 921 (1995), State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1, 21-22 (1997), State v. McKinlay, 87 Wn.App. 394, 398-99 (1997), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017), and may search incident to that arrest, irrespective of the legality of the initial encounter; 2-1, III.

State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.App. 30, 36-38 (2001)

Police hear gunshots, observe defendant run down alley, lean into vehicle then walk away, does not respond to officers' commands to stop, is forced to ground, handcuffed, placed in police van, defendant's car is searched, gun found; held: because there was no danger to officers, defendant would not have to re-enter car to get registration, State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849 (1997), State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812 (1990), and because no one else was in the vehicle, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1986), State v. Watkins, 86 Wn.App. 726, 730 (1995), then search of vehicle was beyond scope of investigatory stop, State v. Turner, 114 Wn.App. 653 (2002), State v. Swetz, 160 Wn.App. 122 (2011); I.

State v. Bailey, 109 Wn.App. 1 (2000)

Police observe suspect in school parking lot next to two liquor bottles, frisk suspect, find gun; held: police were outnumbered, suspect was near bottles which could have been used as weapons, patdown for possible liquor violation was valid; I.

State v. Duncan, 146 Wn.2d 166 (2002)

Police observe defendant in a park next to open alcohol container, possession of an open container is a civil infraction (although police apparently believed it was a crime, at 173), pat him down, find contraband; held: police may not patdown a suspect for a non-criminal infraction, Terry v. Ohio is inapplicable for a non-traffic infraction, State v. Day, 161 Wn.2d 889 (2007); because defendant did not actually possess the container, the infraction did not occur in the presence of the officer, so police had no basis to stop defendant, RCW 7.80.050(2); 9-0.

State v. Acrey, 110 Wn.App. 769, 777 (2002), aff'd, 148 Wn.2d 738, 754 (2003)

An officer is entitled to frisk for weapons before placing an individual in a patrol car, State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230, 235-36 (1987), even if transport is for non-criminal community caretaking function, but see: State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015); I.

Hiibel v. Sixth Judicial Dist. Ct., 159 L.Ed.2d 292 (2004)

State statute which requires one who has been lawfully detained on reasonable suspicion to identify himself does not violate Fourth Amendment, see also: State v. Stratton, 139 Wn.App. 511, 516-17 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Jacobs, 121 Wn.App. 669 (2004), rev'd, on other grounds, 154 Wn.2d 596 (2005)

Police approach trailer, smell chemicals which become stronger as door is opened, question defendant who admits using meth, having acetone and pressure cooker, police observe "weapon-shaped bulge" in defendant's pants pocket, ask defendant to turn out pocket, defendant complies, knife and canister with white powder fall out; held: police had reasonable and articulable suspicion of drug lab, unknown object in defendant's pocket gave rise to police concern for safety, allowing a Terry search; II.

State v. Santacruz, 132 Wn.App. 615 (2006)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, defendant has no license, officer observes eyes dilated, asks if defendant used drugs, defendant acknowledges using meth that day, officer asks if he has drugs or paraphernalia, defendant says he has syringes in pocket and consents to search, police find meth; held: lawful scope of a Terry stop may be enlarged or prolonged as needed to investigate unrelated suspicions that crop up during the stop, at 619; observation of dilation is a specific, articulable reason to inquire further, distinguishing State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997) State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544 (1995), State v. Tijerina, 61 Wn.App. 626 (1991), extended detention was lawful; III.

State v. Martinez, 135 Wn.App. 174 (2006)

Officer, patrolling apartment complex where vehicle prowling had occurred in the past, observes defendant near cars, defendant walks quickly away, officer asks if he lives there, defendant says no, officer detains, pats down, finds drugs; held: no crime was reported, there was no particularized suspicion that criminal conduct had occurred or was about to occur, general inchoate suspicion was insufficient here, distinguishing State v. Laskowski, 88 Wn.App. 858 (1997), State v. Ozuna, 80 Wn.App. 684 (1996), cf.: State v. Bray, 143 Wn.App. 148 (2008); III.

State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29 (2006)

Sheriff's deputy stops vehicle for traffic infractions, observes meth manufacturing items in back seat, arrests driver, orders defendant-passenger out of vehicle, pats him down, finds open cigarette pack, searches it, finds drugs; held: even though deputy had probable cause to arrest passenger, he did not do so, thus search was a Terry frisk as defendant had not been arrested and thus could not be searched incident to arrest, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003); a Terry frisk is limited to a "superficial patdown of the outer clothing for weapons," at 38, once officer determines that an item is not a weapon, the justification for the intrusion ends, State v. Allen, 93 Wn.2d 170, 172 (1980), State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); III.

State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008)

Officer receives report of a man under the influence of drugs in welfare office, approaches defendant who gives two names, is "nervous and fidgeting," office believes defendant was on methamphetamine, pats down, finds drugs; held: police may frisk for weapons only if (1) suspect is justifiably stopped, (2) officer has a reasonable concern of danger, and (3) the frisk's scope is limited to finding weapons, State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993); here, while the initial stop was conceded by the defense as justified, there was not some basis from which the court could determine that the detention was not arbitrary or harassing, State v. Belieu, 112 Wn.2d 587, 601-02 (1989); no threatening gestures or words were present, "[t]his is not a situation where the officers encountered [defendant] in a dark alley in a crime-ridden area," see: State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509, 514 (1991), State v. Bee Xiong, 164 Wn.2d 506 (2008), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Bee Xiong, 164 Wn.2d 506 (2008)

Police, serving a warrant on Kheng Xiong at his residence, defendant drives up, officer thinks he is Kheng Xiong, defendant is immediately handcuffed, frisked, tells police he is Bee Xiong, brother of Kheng Xiong, officer notices a bulge, touches the bulge, defendant pulls away and says he doesn't wish to be searched, police squeeze bulge, decide it is a "potential weapon," pull out drug pipe with drugs; held: because no specific facts support a reasonable belief that defendant was armed and presently dangerous, as defendant was handcuffed and made no suspicious movements, the frisk was unlawful, see: State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008), State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008), reversing State v. Bee Xiong, 137 Wn.App. 720 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008)

Police are about to serve a search warrant on a house, car drives into driveway, two men approach door, two women remain in car, police order women out at gunpoint, "women smelled of methamphetamine," retrieve defendant's purse from car, find drugs; held: while an occupant may be detained during execution of a residential search warrant, those merely present may not be detained or frisked absent independent factors, other than arrival at the scene, tying the person to the illegal activities or raising a reasonable suspicion that the person is armed and dangerous, State v. Bee Xiong, 164 Wn.2d 506 (2008), State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289, 300-04 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993), overruling State v. Howard, 7 Wn.App. 668 (1972); III.

State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490, 494-98 (2008)

Police respond to forgery in a bank, suspect in bank states that person who drove him is in car outside, gun in car, police detain driver, remove him, seize gun from floorboard of car; held: protective search exception to warrant requirement applies when a valid Terry stop includes a vehicle search to ensure officer safety, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 12 (1986), State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849, 853 (1997), State v. Swetz, 160 Wn.App. 122 (2011); had police discovered that driver was not part of forgery, police would have released him, giving him access to weapon in car, thus seizure was proper, State v. Glenn, 140 Wn.App. 627, 633-39 (2007); I.

State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008)

Police observe pedestrian approached by a car, speak to occupants and walk away looking frightened, officer approaches woman who identifies herself and says occupants of car asked her to smoke crack with them, showing her bag of crack and pipe, police stop car, order passenger to exit, pipe falls from his person, arrest for drug parephernalia, search, find drugs; held: Aguilar-Spinelli test is inapplicable to a Terry stop, distinguishing State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432 (1984), totality of circumstances here was sufficient for police to stop car, State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); I.

State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009)

During patdown, once police ascertain that there is no weapon, they may not continue squeezing and seize what they determine is contraband; as soon as the officer knows there is no weapon, further search exceeds the lawful bounds of Terry, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993), State v. Hudson, 124 Wn.2d 107 (1994), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Ibrahim, 164 Wn.App. 503, 508-10 (2011)

Police, with well-founded suspicion to detain, stop defendants who keep putting their hands in their pockets, turning sideways, repeatedly come "into the officer's space" despite repeated requests not to, police patdown, find weapon; held: while Terry v. Ohio uses the words "armed and presently dangerous" to justify a patdown on less then probable cause, "the actual measure appears to be more modest," deference to the officer on the street trying to protect himself justifies the patdown; III.

State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014)

Officer stops defendant for a bicycle infraction, recognize him as a week earlier defendant denied he had a weapon but during prior stop officer found a loaded derringer, officer frisks, feels small hard container that he knew was not a gun, opens it, finds syringe with drugs; held: initial frisk was justified as police could point to specific and articulable facts that supported a belief that defendant could be armed and dangerous, State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168 (1994), state need not establish validity of the prior encounter but once officer determined that the item seized did not contain a weapon the scope exceeded a lawful Terry stop, State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29, 38-39 (2006), State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014)

911 caller at 2:45 a.m. asks for civil standby at defendant's residence to recover property, told to call back at a more reasonable hour, 13 minutes later 911 caller says he witnessed a man threaten woman with a shotgun in front of defendant's residence, gives a name and describes a specific car parked outside residence, says he's at a gas station, police drive by house, no lights, go to gas station, no one present, return to house, use loudspeaker, defendant exits, is handcuffed and placed in patrol car, says no women have been present, says 911 caller had been there earlier, denies waving a shotgun, police sweep house, no women present, officer asks defendant if he has a shotgun, defendant says yes and consents to search, police find shotgun, defendant is charged with felon in possession; held: while a 911 phone call from an unknown caller who gives a contemporaneous eyewitness account of a serious offense presenting an exigent threat to public safety may provide a valid basis for a Terry stop, Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), here police had good reason to question reliability of the 911 call, suspicion of exigent circumstances dissipated before officer asked if defendant had a gun and would consent, thus admission and consent were not within the scope of a valid Terry stop, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64, 72-73 (2004), State v. Wakely, 29 Wn.App. 288, 241 (1981), State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 42, 48 (1980), State v. Hopkins, 128 Wn.App. 855, 858-59 (2005), Florida v. J.L., 529 U.S. 266, 270, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940 (1975); I.

State v. Rooney, 190 Wn.App. 653 (2015)

CCO with DOC warrant enter a home with police, enter bedroom of subject of the warrant, arrest subject, defendant is co-habitant of the room who objects to search, police search and find drugs and sees lots of swords and knives, defendant asks to dress, police search pants before defendant puts them on, finds a gun which defendant may not possess, is charged with drugs and VUFA; held: a probationer may be searched without a warrant not as an exception to the warrant requirement, but because a probationer must consent to a search, RCW 9.94A.631(1), but a cohabitant with common authority over the premises who is present and who objects has the right to require a warrant, State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), thus drugs suppressed; frisk of defendant's pants was valid for safety reasons due to weapons in room; II.

State v. Cruz, 195 Wn.App. 120 (2016), review dismissed,, on other grounds, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017)

Officer arrests and cuffs defendant at defendant's truck for fishing misdemeanor, places him in patrol car intending to cite and release, inquires if there are weapons in the truck, defendant says guns, officer enters truck, removes guns, discovers defendant has a felony record, charged with unlawful possession a firearm; held: Terry frisk extends to a car if there is a reasonable suspicion that suspect is dangerous and may gain access to a weapon in the vehicle, State v. Glossbrener, 146 Wn.2d 670, 680-81 (2002), both components must be present, here there was no indication of dangerousness thus seizure of guns was improper, distinguishing State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986), no exigent circumstance justifying search without a warrant existed as there was no true emergency, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747, 753 (2009), even though only one officer was present; III.

State v. Weyand, 188 Wn.2d 804 (2017)

Police observe defendant leave a known drug house at 2:30 a.m., looks up and down the street twice then drives off, stopped, drugs found; held: a reasonable observer would not have grounds to believe that a crime was occurring or was about to occur, reliance upon "furtive movements" is "problematic;" reasonable suspicion must be individualized to the person being stopped, leaving a known drug house is no more than being located in a high crime area which is insufficient, State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638, 645 (1980), State v. Fuentes, 183 Wn.2d 149 (2015), State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693 (1992), State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57 (2010), State v.

Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), cf.: State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Muhammad, 4 Wn.App.2d 31 (2018)

Following homicide police view surveillance video, see a "distinctive" car approached by the victim shortly after which her body is found, three days later officer observes the distinctive car, identified defendant-driver and released him, resulting in further investigation and ultimately arrest and conviction; held: a Terry stop of a car is permitted where there is a substantial possibility that criminal conduct has occurred, is not limited to a crime in progress, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 198 (2012), a temporary seizure of property based on a reasonable and articulable suspicion of criminal activity and the object's connection to a crime is lawful, United States v. Van Leeuwen, 397 U.S. 249, 25 L.Ed.2d 282 (1970), State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 605-06 (1996); reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019); III.

State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019)

Citizen calls 911, identifies himself, reports that there is a man with a gun in a car in a parking lot, police observe car which drives off, police stop car, find gun, learn that defendant has a felony conviction, defendant is convicted of felon in possession of a firearm; held: possession of a firearm in public is insufficient, standing alone, to support an investigatory stop, Florida v. J.L., 529 U.S. 266, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013); III.

State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020)

Police are called about a man sleeping in a coffee shop, officer approaches, attempts to awaken defendant, notices the end of a metal utensil sticking out of his pocket, removes the utensil which is a cook spoon with residue, continues searching, finds drugs; held: there was no evidence that a crime had been committed justifying a stop and frisk, coffee shop had not stated that defendant was trespassing, officer's belief that awakening sleeping person might cause a safety concern to other patrons is without support from the record, could have asked other customers to move away; even if the officer was conducting a criminal investigation, the removal of the spoon exceeded the scope of a limited pat-down, State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008), State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29 (2006), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982); because officer's actions were not "totally divorced" from a criminal investigation, State v. Boisselle, 194 Wn.2d 1, 14 (2019), community caretaking function does not justify the search and seizure; I.

State v. Pines, 17 Wn.App.2d 483 (2021)

Officer recognizes defendant and was aware of a bulletin a month earlier stating he had a warrant, three officers follow him into a restaurant, tackle and handcuff him, observe his hand move towards his waistline, defendant says he has a gun, police seize gun, verify warrant, defendant is convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm; held: police did not see a weapon, did not testify they feared for their safety, Terry stop requires a reasonable safety concern to justify a protective frisk, State v. Duncan, 146 Wn.2d 166, 172 (2002), State v. Walker, 66 Wn.App. 622 (1992), seizure exceeded scope of valid Terry stop, distinguishing State v. Mitchell, 80 Wn.App. 143 (1995); I.

SEARCH
Use of Force

State v. Young, 15 Wn.App. 581 (1976)

Police may use reasonable, but not excessive, force in preventing destruction or concealment of evidence; police may constrict throat, pinch nose of arrested suspect attempting to swallow balloons.

State v. Williams, 16 Wn.App. 868 (1977)

Choking, preventing breathing, or obstructing blood supply to head is excessive force, cf.: State v. Young, 15 Wn.App. 581 (1976).

State v. Taplin, 36 Wn.App. 664 (1984)

Police order defendant to spit out balloons, he refuses; officer grabs defendant's nose, other officer chokes defendant; held: as long as suspect can breathe, force is not excessive, State v. Young, 15 Wn.App. 581 (1976), State v. Williams, 16 Wn.App. 868 (1977); I.

Winston v. Lee, 84 L.Ed.2d 662 (1985)

State seeks court order to permit operation on defendant under general anesthesia, to remove a bullet from defendant's body to use as evidence of attempted robbery; held: applying balancing test of medical risks versus state's compelling need to obtain evidence, operation in this case would violate defendant's right to privacy; 9-0.

SEARCH
Warrant

State v. Trinidad, 23 Wn.App. 418 (1979)

Search pursuant to arrest warrant which had previously been quashed is improper even if police reasonably believe warrant is extant, but see: Arizona v. Evans, 131 L.Ed.2d 34 (1995); III.

Ybarra v. Illinois, 62 L.Ed.2d 238 (1979)

Warrant to search bar does not extend to search of patrons; 6-3.

State v. Frye, 26 Wn.App. 276 (1980), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Rivera, 76 Wn.App. 519 (1995)

To attack affidavit, must show deliberate falsehood or reckless disregard for truth; search of vehicle okay even if affidavit did not concern vehicle, only residence, but see: State v. Niedergang, 43 Wn.App. 656 (1986); II.

State v. Higby, 26 Wn.App. 457 (1980)

Affidavit establishes one sale two weeks prior to application for warrant; held: stale, no probable cause, State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895, 903 (1991), see: State v. Spencer, 9 Wn.App. 95 (1973), State v. Maddox, 152 Wn.2d 499 (2004), but see: State v. Perez, 92 Wn.App. 1, 8-9 (1999); affidavit further stated that unnamed informant who was known to officer to be reliable saw marijuana six months previously, held does not meet Aguilar test as unnamed, insufficient indicia of reliability; II.

Seattle v. See, 26 Wn.App. 891 (1980)

Inspection warrant (fire department) may be issued upon finding of probable cause based upon a showing that reasonable legislative or administrative standards for conducting an inspection are satisfied with respect to a particular establishment; see: Camara v. Municipal Court, 18 L.Ed.2d 930 (1967); See v. Seattle, 18 L.Ed.2d 943 (1967); administrative warrant cannot be used once inspectors focus their attention on assembling proof of a crime; see: Michigan v. Tyler, 59 L.Ed.2d 486 (1978); I.

State v. Mathiesen, 27 Wn.App. 257 (1980)

Trial court may excise portions of affidavit in support of a warrant to prevent disclosure of informant, but must release the remainder of affidavit to defense; court may not seal entire affidavit; I.

State v. Melin, 27 Wn.App. 589 (1980)

Police, executing a search warrant on a residence, stop a car which approaches residence and search it; held: police may stop vehicle approaching scene to prevent interference, but may not search, therefore evidence suppressed; I.

State v. Parker, 28 Wn.App. 425 (1981)

Fact that copy of warrant served on defendant was unsigned and undated, when original had been signed and dated, is not grounds to suppress absent showing of prejudice, State v. Temple, 170 Wn.App. 156, 161-62 (2012), cf.: State v. Linder, 190 Wn.App. 638 (2015); III.

Seattle v. Leach, 29 Wn.App. 81 (1981)

Administrative search warrant affidavit must include either specific evidence of an existing violation of health or safety codes or a description of a general inspection program; I.

State v. Larson, 29 Wn.App. 669 (1981)

Affidavit fails to establish reliability of informant, states no dates when "recent purchases" of drugs were made, alleges that a named person was arrested with marijuana in his possession after leaving defendant's residence without indicating that he did not have marijuana on his person when he entered, all fatally defective; III.

State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981)

Police officer, investigating an unrelated matter, knocks on door, receives no response, knows from prior experience that occupants can't hear knock on front door, proceeds toward back door, observes what he believes to be marijuana plant but which turned out to be tomatoes, gets warrant, seizes marijuana in a greenhouse; held: officer had the right to go toward back door as curtilage may be impliedly open to public, see: State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 1670 (2018); tomato plants were in "open view" (distinguished from plain view, wherein there is an invasion; here there is no invasion), see: State v. Creegan, 123 Wn.App. 718 (2004); innocent but mistaken belief that tomatoes are marijuana does not invalidate warrant (N.B. affidavit claimed officer had eight years' experience observing marijuana); affirms State v. Seagull, 26 Wn.App. 58 (1980); 9-0.

Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S.692, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981)

Police, executing warrant, encounter defendant leaving his residence, require him to return to house, detain him while searching, find drugs in house, then search defendant and find drugs on his person, held: existence of warrant justified detention of occupant of home while search is conducted, Muehler v. Mena, 544 U.S. 93, 161 L.Ed.2d 299 (2005), but see: Bailey v. United States, 568 U.S. 186, 185 L.Ed.2d 19 (2013), and, upon finding contraband in house, justifies arrest and search of occupant on probable cause; this type of detention is "less intrusive than an arrest," Illinois v. McArthur, 148 L.Ed.2d 838 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Maffeo, 31 Wn.App. 198 (1982)

A recent sale of drugs supports an inference that more drugs will be found at the place of sale; II.

State v. Lingo, 32 Wn.App. 638 (1982)

Warrant specifying "any and all evidence of assault and rape including but not limited to bedding . . ." does not authorize a general search, State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 701, 753-55 (2001), State v. Askham, 120 Wn.App. 872, 877-80 (2004); II.

State v. Van Pilon, 32 Wn.App. 944 (1982)

Purse containing items taken from victim was found in a van which was searched pursuant to a warrant authorizing a search for items showing ownership and control of the van; held: search was within the scope of the warrant, since the purse was a logical repository for such items.

State v. Huff, 33 Wn.App. 304 (1982)

60 hours between informants' observations and service of warrant is not stale; warrant authorizing search of residence and search of "John Doe" is adequate to search resident; III.

State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962 (1982)

Where warrant incorrectly lists address of place to be searched, it is sufficient if the description is such that the officer can, with reasonable effort, ascertain and identify the place intended, State v. Bohan, 72 Wn.App. 335 (1993), State v. Dodson 110 Wn.App. 112, 124-25 (2002), State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989); 6-3.

State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982)

Warrant to search residence does not authorize search of all persons present, State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008); extends Ybarra v. Illinois, 62 L.Ed.2d 238 (1979); 5-3.

State v. Mannhalt, 33 Wn.App. 696 (1983), reversed, on other grounds, Mannhalt v. Reed, 847 F.2d 576 (1998)

Police appear before magistrate who hears and electronically records testimony and issues search warrant; held: signed affidavit is not required to support a warrant, see also: State v. Ettenhofer, 119 Wn.App. 300 (2003); use of sworn testimony, contemporaneously recorded, is substantial compliance with CrR 2.3(c); I.

State v. Bonaparte, 34 Wn.App. 285 (1983)

Marital privilege does not bar a spouse's statements offered to demonstrate probable cause; II; see: State v. Cahoon, 59 Wn.App. 606 (1990).

State v. Kuberka, 35 Wn.App. 909 (1983)

Information relied upon by a magistrate in issuing a search warrant need not be recorded contemporaneously with the issuance of the warrant, JCrR 2.10, distinguishing Fed. R. Crim. Pro. 41(c), but see: State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991), see: State v. Munoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609 (2007); where affidavit establishes that suspect obtained travelers checks from one bank under one name and then tried to do the same thing 45 minutes later at a bank in another town, when police question suspect he gives another false name, police search suspect and find car keys that fit a car parked nearby, warrant is proper to search car as there was a "fair probability" that suspect drove to second bank and that redemption receipts from first bank would be in car; II.

State v. Hightower, 36 Wn.App. 536 (1984)

Warrant affidavit stated victim identified defendant as person who shot her, witnesses described defendant's car, bullets smashed victim's side window, glass fragments were gathered at scene, FBI lab said similar glass fragment could have been transferred to defendant's car via his shoes, held: sufficient to raise "inference of probable cause" to search car; I.

State v. Stephens, 37 Wn.App. 76 (1984)

Officer states in affidavit that he observed defendant water marijuana plants, at suppression hearing, officer testified he did not observe it, but saw defendant approach plants, then later observed that plants had been watered; held: statement in warrant was either a deliberate falsehood requiring excision, Franks v. Delaware, 57 L.Ed.2d 667 (1978), State v. Larson, 26 Wn.App. 564 (1980) or a conclusion without the facts leading to the conclusion, United States v. Ventresca, 13 L.Ed.2d 684 (1965); fact that magistrate would have issued warrant if he had been given basis for officer's conclusion is irrelevant as reviewing court may consider only information that was before the magistrate, Seattle v. Leach, 29 Wn.App. 81 (1981), cf.: State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288, 295-302 (2001) ; 2-1; III.

State v. Anderson, 37 Wn.App. 157 (1984)

Affidavit asserts that residents of searched premises were customers of the store burglarized, smoked cigarettes of the type stolen and that police observed soda pop, in a refrigerator outside of the premises, similar to that stolen, held: no substantial basis for probable cause, cf.: State v. Condon, 72 Wn.App. 638, 642-4 (1993); I.

State v. Worth, 37 Wn.App. 889 (1984)

Warrant authorizes search of premises and person of owner of premises; police serve warrant, arrest owner, search purse belonging to nonowner occupant, find bindle of cocaine; held: search of purse exceeded scope of warrant, State v. Campbell, 166 Wn.App. 464 (2011); police may detain occupants not listed in warrant and may, if suspicious activities justify it, search for weapons, but may not be more intrusive, c.f: State v. Hill, 123 Wn.2d 641 (1994), State v. Carter, 79 Wn.App. 154 (1995); II.

State v. Weaver, 38 Wn.App. 17 (1984)

Police serve warrant for drugs and papers "showing dominion and control," seize paraphernalia, pick up a cardboard box to carry seized items, discover defendant's name on box, later discover drugs hidden in box; held: box was "paper" pursuant to warrant and was properly seized; 2-1; I.

State v. Reid, 38 Wn.App. 203 (1984)

Police obtain warrant for specific items "and any other evidence of a homicide," seize photographs not specified nor clearly evidence of homicide; held: "any other evidence" is sufficiently specific to limit officers' discretion, State v. Lingo, 32 Wn.App. 638, 641 (1982), State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 753-55 (2001), State v. Askham, 120 Wn.App. 872, 877-80 (2004); photos were properly seized although not described in warrant as they would aid in apprehension or conviction, State v. Turner, 18 Wn.App. 727, 729 (1977); 2-1, I.

State v. Neslund, 103 Wn.2d 79 (1984)

Special inquiry judge, RCW 10.27, is not precluded from issuing a search warrant, State v. Reeder, 184 Wn.2d 805 (2015); 7-2.

United States v. Leon, 82 L.Ed.2d 677 (1984)

Good faith exception: the Fourth Amendment exclusionary rule should not be applied to bar the use of evidence seized pursuant to officer's reasonable reliance on a warrant issued by a neutral magistrate even if warrant is determined to be invalid; suppression remains a remedy if the magistrate was misled by an affidavit that affiant knew was false or acted with reckless disregard for truth, or if magistrate abandoned his detached and neutral judicial role, or if affiant so lacked indicia of probable cause to render official belief in its existence entirely unreasonable, or if the warrant was facially defective; accord: Massachusetts v. Sheppard, 82 L.Ed.2d 737 (1984), Herring v. United States, 172 L.Ed.2d 496 (2009), but see: State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 179-84 (2010); 6-3.

State v. Christiansen, 40 Wn.App. 249 (1985)

Affidavit asserts aerial surveillance disclosed growing marijuana, legal description of plot where marijuana observed, warrant authorized search of 60 acres, marijuana found at other locations; held: reasonable to conclude that marijuana would be found at other locations on the premises, cf.: State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999); legal description is sufficient; 2-1; III.

State v. Ludvik, 40 Wn.App. 257 (1985)

Heavy traffic at a residence plus observation of a baggie containing a dark substance exchanged for money plus another person leaving residence with baggie with dark substance equals probable cause, see: State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999); III.

State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985)

Affidavit asserts that, five days previously, defendant appeared to be under influence of drugs, a witness saw defendant shoot up, officer's opinion is that drug users commonly have drugs in their homes and cars held insufficient to establish probable cause, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), State v. Dalton, 73 Wn.App. 132 (1994), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999), State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366 (2006), cf.: State v. Condon, 72 Wn.App. 638, 644 (1993), State v. Dunn, 186 Wn.App. 889 (2015); I.

State v. Rollie M., 41 Wn.App. 55 (1985)

Warrant authorizing search of "John Doe," without other identifying information such as occupation, personal appearance, peculiarities or place of residence, lacks particularity and is invalid, see: State v. Carter, 79 Wn.App. 154 (1995), Groh v. Ramirez, 157 L.Ed.2d 1068 (2004); III.

State v. Alexander, 41 Wn.App. 152 (1985)

Police serve valid warrant on single family dwelling; upon execution of warrant, police learn that persons other than suspect lives in dwelling, search two bedrooms, obtain drugs; held: multiple unit exception: if building appears to be a single occupancy structure, and neither the affiant nor officers knew or had reason to know of the multiple occupancy until execution of warrant was underway, reasonable efforts must be made to limit the search to the subunit most likely connected to the activity described in the warrant; community living exception: where several persons share the premises in common but have separate bedrooms, a single warrant describing the entire premises is valid and will justify a search of the entire premises; here, community living exception should have been applied by trial court, thus search is valid; see: W. LaFave, Search and Seizure ' 4.5(d)(1978); 11 ALR 3d 1330; II.

State v. Douglas S., 42 Wn.App. 138 (1985)

"John Doe" warrant cannot authorize the search of any individual who resides in the premises described in the warrant, see: State v. Carter, 79 Wn.App. 154 (1995), State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609 (2007); where a person is present at a location police are searching pursuant to a valid warrant, that person may be frisked only if police have reasonable grounds to believe he is armed and dangerous, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008); where a minor lives in his parents' home, dominion and control is not established by mere residence; III.

State v. Cord, 103 Wn.2d 361 (1985)

Affidavit asserted that sheriff had previously identified marijuana from an airplane ten times and that he flew over defendant's property and identified marijuana; affidavit failed to state altitude (3500 ft.); held: negligent omission of a material fact does not invalidate warrant if affidavit establishes probable cause and omission was neither intentional nor reckless, State v. Clark, 124 Wn.2d 90, 105-6 (1993); 7-2.

State v. O'Neill, 103 Wn.2d 853 (1985)

Local police may use information obtained by federal officers from electronic eavesdropping conducted by them in accordance with federal law, even if the information would be inadmissible in state courts, to establish probable cause to obtain a state court order authorizing electronic eavesdropping, distinguishing State v. Williams, 94 Wn.2d 531 (1980); 5-2.

State v. Hansen, 42 Wn.App. 755 (1986)

Where marijuana is found growing outside the premises, warrant may authorize search inside premises, State v. Helmka, 86 Wn.2d 91 (1975), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999); III.

State v. Chasengnou, 43 Wn.App. 379 (1986)

Affidavit is sufficient if it establishes that a prior warrantless search was a valid border search; border searches are not subject to Fourth Amendment analysis, United States v. Ramsey, 52 L.Ed.2d 617 (1977); where affidavit establishes probable cause to search premises for a parcel containing drugs, warrant may authorize search of entire premises, State v. Olson, 32 Wn.App. 555 (1982); I.

State v. Irwin, 43 Wn.App. 553 (1986)

Requirement of RCW 9.73.130(3)(f) that warrant for surreptitious tape recording contain particular statement showing that normal investigative procedures have failed or reasonably appear to be unlikely to succeed met here where property enclosed by fence, guard dogs protected area, and previous attempts to gain access to neighboring property failed; suppression is not a remedy for failure to give notice to persons whose conversations were recorded within 30 days, RCW 9.73.140; suppression is not a remedy for failure of judge authorizing warrant to give notice to Administrator for the Courts, RCW 9.73.120; I.

State v. Niedergang, 43 Wn.App. 656 (1986)

Warrant authorizes search of residence and curtilage; police seize drugs from car parked in front of residence; held: curtilage is the area to which extends the intimate activity associated with the sanctity of the home, Oliver v. United States, 80 L.Ed.2d 214, 225 (1984), and depends upon the circumstances, including proximity to home, use and expectations of privacy; here, parked car was not within curtilage, as it was set off from residence by curb, and anyone could have parked there, thus evidence suppressed; accord: State v. Kelley, 52 Wn.App. 581 (1988); II.

State v. Sterling, 43 Wn.App. 846 (1986)

Affidavit alleging anonymous tip of marijuana growing operation plus police observation of blacked out windows in garage plus vent on roof of garage plus sound of loud electric motor plus observation that garage door had not been opened for some time plus observation that garage was walled off from rest of house plus 400-500% increase in power consumption plus defendant's prior drug convictions plus officer's experience that power consumption history is indicative of marijuana growing operation established probable cause, distinguishing State v. McPherson, 40 Wn.App. 298 (1985); but see: State v. Whik, 44 Wn.App. 215 (1986), State v. Rakosky, 79 Wn.App. 229 (1995), Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997); cf.: State v. Huft, 106 Wn.2d 206 (1986); I.

State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986)

Even though an information is filed in superior court, district court judge has jurisdiction to issue a search warrant; I.

State v. Unthoff, 45 Wn.App. 261 (1986)

District court judge has jurisdiction to issue a search warrant anywhere within the county, with or without the prosecutor's approval, but not outside county, State v. Davidson, 26 Wn.App. 623 (1980); I.

State v. Hashman, 46 Wn.App. 211 (1986)

Smell of growing marijuana plus bluish light around a covered window plus mold and mildew along the ceiling of the wall adjacent to locked room establishes probable cause for warrant, State v. Johnson, 79 Wn.App. 776 (1995); II.

Maryland v. Garrison, 94 L.Ed.2d 72 (1987)

Police obtain a warrant to search the third floor apartment in a building; after serving warrant, searching an apartment and seizing drugs, police discover that there were two apartments on third floor and they searched the wrong one; held: warrant was valid when issued, albeit it was determined later that it was ambiguous; because the facts available to the officers reasonably led them to believe that there was only one apartment on the third floor and warrant was executed in a reasonable manner, the motion to suppress was properly denied; 6-3.

State v. Coates, 107 Wn.2d 882 (1987)

Where illegally obtained information is included in an affidavit, but, when excised, there is still probable cause to search, then the warrant is valid; 9-0.

State v. Petty, 48 Wn.App. 615 (1987)

Informant's information is not fatally stale where informant observed growing marijuana two weeks prior to search and police verify by odor day before search, see: State v. Patterson, 37 Wn.App. 275 (1984), State v. Hett, 31 Wn.App. 849 (1982); I.

State v. Pourtes, 49 WnApp. 579 (1987)

Warrant authorizing search of residence, outbuildings and real and personal property on the property does not authorize search of a vehicle parked on the shoulder in front of the residence as the street and its shoulder are not within the curtilage of the residence; police moving vehicle onto the property does not validate the search; III.

State v. Thetford, 109 Wn.2d 392 (1987)

When an informant's involvement with and control by the police is so great that he is a de facto police officer, then he is no longer protected by the informer's privilege, RCW 5.60.060(5), CrR 4.7(f)(2); merely paying the informant does not remove the informant from the informant's privilege; where the defense has correctly identified the informant, then the informant is no longer protected by the informant's privilege, Rovario v. United States, 1 L.Ed.2d 639, 644-645 (1957); where a de facto police officer-informant makes reckless or false statements to a police officer-affiant, then those statements shall be excised from the affidavit in support of the warrant; 9-0.

State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33 (1988)

Affiant states that he smelled growing marijuana, specifically described the odor, and stated that he had smelled it ten times before held to establish probable cause, State v. Johnson, 79 Wn.App. 776 (1995); cf.: State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28, 39-41 (1994); III.

State v. Murray, 110 Wn.2d 706 (1988)

Affidavit states that tipster told reliable informant that tipster saw marijuana growing in basement of a house, and that police obtained power records establishing double average power consumption, police heard exhaust fan operating in basement at 11 p.m. with no steam escaping thus inconsistent with showering, and that use of an infrared viewing device established high heat in basement area consistent with grow lights; held: tipster meets basis of knowledge prong as he saw marijuana, State v. Creelman, 75 Wn.App. 490 (1994); police corroboration establishes basis of knowledge prong, State v. Corvin, 116 Wn.App. 752, 758-601 (2003), State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 160-64 (2007), cf.: State v. Rakosky, 79 Wn.App. 229 (1995); failure of defense counsel to cite authority in support of argument that obtaining power records without a warrant and failure to elicit evidence that police trespassed when using infrared viewing device precludes review on those issues; see: Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Martinez, 51 Wn.App. 397 (1988)

Warrant authorizes search of (1) "Mex/male 20's, 5'8", med build, curly blk hair" and (2) "Mex/male 20's, 5'6", heavy build, blk hair" at specific residence; police serve warrant at residence, search defendant who meets description; held: because warrant limited search to described persons who lived at particular address, then descriptions were adequate and reasonable; 2-1, III.

State v. Smith, 52 Wn.App. 27 (1988)

Search warrant is issued by an arguably unqualified court commissioner; held: because the commissioner was in actual possession of his office, exercising its functions and discharging its duties under color of title, he is a de facto officer and can only be challenged through a quo warranto proceeding, thus warrant was valid, State v. Franks, 7 Wn.App. 594 (1972); I.

State v. Kelley, 52 Wn.App. 581 (1988)

Warrant authorizing search of house and carport is insufficient to support search of outbuildings, State v. Niedergang, 43 Wn.App. 656 (1986), State v. Gebaroff, 87 Wn.App. 11 (1997), cf.: State v. Llamas-Villa, 67 Wn.App. 448 (1992), State v. Witkowski, 3 Wn.App.2d 318 (2018), where affidavit supports probable cause to search outbuildings, it does not then follow that probable cause exists to search the house; II.

State v. J-R Distributors, 111 Wn.2d 764 (1988)

A search warrant affidavit for purported First Amendment materials is tested under the same probable cause standard as for other types of materials; a large scale seizure of allegedly obscene materials constitutes an impermissible prior restraint unless preceded by an adversary hearing on the issue of obscenity; 9-0.

State v. Stanphill, 53 Wn.App. 623 (1989)

Where a federal warrant is served, apply totality of the circumstances standard, Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983), even though evidence is used in state court; II.

State v. Morse, 55 Wn.App. 188 (1989)

Affidavit states that police obtained a photograph depicting a marijuana grow operation inside a metal building, at suppression hearing defendant testifies that photographs were of another operation; trial court suppresses, ruling that affidavit contained material misstatement of fact; held: remand for court to determine if misstatement was made deliberately or recklessly and, if so, does remainder of warrant affidavit still establish probable cause; III.

State v. Dobyns, 55 Wn.App. 609 (1989)

Six weeks between informant's observations and service of warrant is not stale for marijuana growing operation where affidavit states that it takes four months for plants to mature, see: State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989); I.

State v. Stone, 56 Wn.App. 153 (1989)

Warrant to obtain unlisted telephone number is based in part upon license plate number obtained by an unidentified person; held: where a citizen provides nonaccusatory information which does not describe criminal activity, and the nature of the information strongly suggests it was obtained by personal observation, then credibility and reliability need not be demonstrated, United States v. Melvin, 596 F.2d 492 (1st Cir. 1979), State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171, 181 (2002), see: State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); affidavit stated that a burglary occurred, jewelry taken, named neighbors observed a specifically described vehicle adjacent to residence on day of crime, later same vehicle is observed at another address from which defendant departed, police are aware that defendant had prior burglary convictions, had previously employed same method of operation, woman's jewelry observed in defendant's vehicle; held: a reasonably prudent person would conclude evidence of burglary would be found in vehicle and residence; III.

State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989)

Controlled buy is sufficient to establish probable cause without establishing reliability of informant where informant is strip searched prior to entry, upon return informant has drugs but not the money given by police, police surveil place during buy, and had previously observed known drug dealers and users go in on several occasions, State v. Casto, 39 Wn.App. 229 (1984); even though address on warrant is incorrect, police may consider other descriptive factors as long as a reasonable officer would know which place to search, State v. Bohan, 72 Wn.App. 335 (1993), State v. Dodson, 110 Wn.App. 112, 124-25 (2002); III.

State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761 (1990)

Search warrant affidavit states that police telephoned public utility district and obtained power records of defendant; held: magistrate should not have considered this information, as public utility records may only be obtained by police if request is in writing, and if written request states that it is suspected that a particular person has committed a crime and that police have a reasonable belief that the records could determine whether the suspicion may be true, RCW 42.17.314, In re Rosier, 105 Wn.2d 606 (1986), Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), reversing State v. Maxwell, 55 Wn.App. 446 (1989); cf.: State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378 (1994), State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 289-91 (1995), State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557, 561-3 (1997); application for search warrant is a criminal proceeding for purpose of RCW 42.17.314; 9-0.

State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999)

Letter from suspect revealing ongoing drug trafficking is a basis for believing that drugs are in suspect's home/place of business, distinguishing State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985), as a drug trafficker is a greater evil than mere drug user, increasing governmental justification to search, and if homes of drug users could be searched as readily as traffickers, a much greater invasion of privacy would result, but see: State v. Dalton, 73 Wn.App. 132, 139-40 (1994), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999); I.

State v. Ridgway, 57 Wn.App. 915 (1990)

Tax assessor observes marijuana, returns to take photograph which he gives to police; warrant states that police, trained in identifying marijuana, believe photo to be of marijuana; held: ambiguity was insufficient to issue warrant; II.

State v. Salazar, 59 Wn.App. 202 (1990)

Warrant describes a particular duplex and "a newer white GM car with temporary license sticker in the rear window"; affidavit recites that informant observed cocaine in vehicle; vehicle stopped near duplex, drugs found; held: implicit from affidavit and warrant that there was a nexus between duplex and vehicle, thus description of vehicle was not overbroad, State v. Smith, 39 Wn.App. 642, 648-49 (1984); even if description was insufficient, police acted in good faith in serving warrant, Massachusetts v. Sheppard, 82 L.Ed.2d 737 (1984), United States v. Leon, 82 L.Ed.2d 677 (1984), State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 179-84 (2010); I.

State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991)

Recording in support of telephonic warrant, CrR 2.3(c), was either erased or erroneously not recorded, magistrate does not clearly recall the grounds he used to issue warrant; held: parties may reconstruct recording if omission in contemporaneous recording does not impair reviewing court's ability to ascertain what magistrate considered, State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609 (2007); entire sworn statement may only be reconstructed if detailed and specific evidence of a disinterested person, like the magistrate or a court clerk, corroborates the reconstruction; accord: State v. Smith, 87 Wn.App. 254 (1997).

State v. Young, 60 Wn.App. 95 (1991)

Affidavit's information that items were seen one year before warrant is signed is stale, State v. Higby, 26 Wn.App. 457 (1980), State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895, 903-4 (1991), cf.: State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 727-30 (2009); I.

State v. Smith, 60 Wn.App. 592 (1991)

Affidavit establishes "pedophile profile," that defendant had written letters describing his possession of child pornography 14-16 years previously, and that defendant's name was on a list seized by Portuguese police from a raid on a child porn distributor in Lisbon; held: when letters were written, child pornography was not illegal, inference is that citizens obeyed the law and destroyed materials when made unlawful; "fellow officer" rule probably does not apply to foreign police; affidavit fails to establish a specific date of defendant's possession or receipt of child porn, thus information stale, cf.: State v. Hosier, 124 Wn.App. 696, 711-16 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 1 (2006), State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 727-30 (2009); nothing establishes that defendant fits pedophile profile, as there is no evidence of defendant's recent criminal conduct; I.

State v. Colin, 61 Wn.App. 111 (1991)

Warrant is executed authorizing search of man meeting defendant's description, police conduct strip search without touching defendant in private room, observed by officers of same sex, find drugs in defendant's underwear; held: search did not exceed limitations of RCW 10.79.080, 10.79.100(1), (2), (3) and, while strip search was not authorized by warrant, was justified by state's interest in obtaining evidence, see: State v. Hampton, 114 Wn.App. 486 (2002); III.

State v. Wright, 61 Wn.App. 819 (1991)

Police, executing warrant to search for and seize vibrator and to "photograph crime scene," seize vibrator and, while photographing, observe bag which appears to be handgun case, open it, observe gun; held: opening gun case was "no more than a de minimis invasion of right to privacy" and not a general search that exceeds scope of warrant, Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1971); photographs taken during a search pursuant to a warrant is not a seizure any more than the knowledge the officers gained during execution of the warrant as long as the observation was otherwise legally made and the officers did not exceed the scope of the warrant by taking the photographs; I.

State v. Bohannon, 62 Wn.App. 462 (1991)

Affiant claims suspect took obscene photos, put them in locker, six months later suspect said photos still there, two months later warrant is issued and executed, held: keeping photos in locker for six months supports logical inference they were still there two months thereafter, thus not stale, see also: State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 727-30 (2009); II.

State v. Garcia, 63 Wn.App. 868 (1992)

Informant's report of bindles plus odor of diesel fuel plus numerous phone calls during all hours establish probable cause to search for cocaine where officer testifies diesel fuel is used in manufacture and transport of cocaine, and defense presents no evidence to contrary, State v. Courcy, 48 Wn.App. 326, 329 (1987), State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706, 716-7 (1981); III.

State v. Remboldt, 64 Wn.App. 505 (1992)

Affidavit states officer smelled what he recognized from experience and training as marijuana; at suppression hearing, officer testified he had obtained many warrants based on smell, never wrong; defense chemist testifies that, based upon immaturity of plants seized, officer could not have smelled marijuana; court suppresses, determining that officer believed he smelled marijuana but was wrong; held: where trial court believed officer's testimony but adopted a subjective standard of probable cause based on technical information unavailable to issuing magistrate, magistrate did not abuse discretion, see: State v. Lyons, 160 Wn.App. 100 (2011), thus suppression reversed, State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33, 41 (1989); cf.: State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28, 39-41 (1994), State v. Weller, 76 Wn.App. 165, 168 (1994); III.

State v. Garrison, 118 Wn.2d 870 (1992)

37-page affidavit leaves out informant's statement that contraband had been moved; held: court cannot infer from the content of an omission that the omission was deliberate or reckless, even if omitted fact was crucial to finding of probable cause, disapproving State v. Jones, 55 Wn.App. 343 (1989); defense must prove deliberate falsehood or deliberate omission or reckless disregard of the truth, Franks v. Delaware, 57 L.Ed.2d 667 (1978), State v. Chenoweth, 160 Wn.2d 454, 479-81 (2007), State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 69-71 (2018), see: State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 157-60 (2007), after which court determines whether challenged information is necessary to finding of probable cause; fact that omitted statement tends to negate probable cause is not the proper inquiry, see: State v. Clark, 124 Wn.2d 90, 105-6 (1994), State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 388, 295-302 (2001), State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 751-53 (2001), State v. Jackson, 111 Wn.App. 660, 678-80 (2002), 150 Wn.2d 251 (2003); 7-0.

State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538 (1992)

Affidavit establishes probable cause to search for child pornography, warrant authorizes seizure of child and adult pornography, police seize films, magazines, drawings and books, some involving children, trial court suppresses; held: "child pornography" in warrant is too broad, leaving too much to discretion of officer in deciding what to seize, as greater particularity is required where First Amendment considerations are concerned, State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171, 181-86 (2002), State v. Reep, 161 Wn.2d 808 (2007), State v. Besola, 184 Wn.2d 605 (2015), see: Fort Wayne Books, Inc. v. Indiana, 103 L.Ed.2d 34 (1989), State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 659-62 (1997), State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 65-67 (2018), State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018), remanded, on other grounds, 193 Wn.2d 271 (2019), State v. Vance, 9 Wn.App.2d 357 (2019), cf.: State v. Friedrich, 4 Wn.App.2d 945, 960-62 (2018); where warrant is found to be an unconstitutional general warrant, invalidity due to unlimited language of warrant taints all items seized without regard to whether they were specifically named, and thus redaction is inappropriate; here, extensive editing would be required to obtain potentially valid parts of warrant, which should not be done under severability doctrine; reverses State v. Perrone, 59 Wn.App. 687 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Solberg, 66 Wn.App. 66 (1992), rev'd, on other grounds, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993)

Affidavit: increased power consumption consistent with four or five halide lamps, State v. Dice, 55 Wn.App. 489, 494 (1989), plus odor of marijuana outside residence based upon distinctive odor from past arrests and training, State v. Wilke, 55 Wn.App. 470, 476 (1989), State v. Johnson, 79 Wn.App. 776 (1995), plus windows blacked out plus mildew consistent with marijuana grow operation establish probable cause; cf.: Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997); I.

State v. Bittner, 66 Wn.App. 541 (1992)

Affidavit states informant was with a friend who stopped at defendant's home, told informant he purchased drugs and showed drugs to informant; held: single unobserved transaction by an unidentified friend of informant uncorroborated by evidence with no effort to establish friend's reliability is insufficient to support search; I.

State v. Llamas-Villa, 67 Wn.App. 448 (1992)

Warrant authorizes search of apartment for drugs, police serve warrant, seize keys from suspect, leave apartment, observe door marked "storage" next to defendant's apartment door, enter locker with same number as defendant's apartment using keys seized, find drugs; held: locker was in same building, came with apartment, was not intentionally excluded from warrant, would have been included in warrant if police had known layout of building, thus locker was within scope of warrant, State v. Witkowski, 3 Wn.App.2d 318 (2018), distinguishing State v. Kelley, 52 Wn.App. 581 (1988), cf.: State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593 (2004); I.

State v. Goodin, 67 Wn.App. 623 (1992)

Police lack probable cause to search defendant's home for drugs, serve an arrest warrant on a co-occupant, find drugs in plain view; held: a pre-existing warrant may be served regardless of police motives; pretext search rule does not apply where there is a valid warrant, State v.

Davis, 35 Wn.App. 724, 727 (1983), State v. Busig, 119 Wn.App. 381 (2003), cf.: State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 464-9 (1994); II.

State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993)

Warrant which permits seizure of broad categories of material that is not limited by reference to any specific crime is overbroad and invalid, State v. Keodara, 191 Wn.App. 305 (2015), cf.: State v. Askham, 120 Wn.App. 872, 877-80 (2004), State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018), State v. Scherf 192 Wn.2d (2018), State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); executing officer's personal knowledge of the crime being investigated may cure a warrant's description of the place to be searched, State v. Smith, 39 Wn.App. 642, 648-9 (1984), but may not cure an inadequacy in the things to be seized; an overbroad warrant that is not executed overbroadly does not validate the warrant; a specific affidavit that is not incorporated by reference in the warrant and is not attached to the warrant will not cure the warrant even if the executing officer has a copy of the affidavit, State v. Higgins, 136 Wn.App. 87 (2006), see: State v. Kelley, 52 Wn.App. 581 (1988), State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 695-96 (1997), State v. Chambers, 88 Wn.App. 640 (1997); 7-0.

State v. Thomas, 121 Wn.2d 504 (1993)

Search warrants for drugs must be executed within ten days of issuance under CrR 2.3 [and CrRLJ 2.3, State v. Wallway, 72 Wn.App. 407, 414-5 (1994)] and returned within three days of execution, RCW 69.50.509, affirming State v. Thomas, 65 Wn.App. 347 (1992); cf.: State v. Kern, 81 Wn.App. 308 (1996), State v. Linder, 190 Wn.App. 638 (2015); 8-0.

State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525 (1993)

A valid search warrant based upon probable cause is sufficient to obtain a blood sample from a suspect, no adversarial hearing is necessary; 9-0.

State v. Kennedy, 72 Wn.App. 244 (1993)

Affidavit: informant, meeting neither Aguilar-Spinelli test, claims defendant is a dealer plus defendant displaying at hotel large amount of cash plus drives car reported by informant plus shades on hotel window closed plus maids refused entrance plus strong chemical odor plus person who answered door appeared stoned plus presence of several cars and different people using hotel room are sufficiently probative to corroborate informant's information, and thus are not merely innocuous facts consistent with innocence; 2-1, II.

State v. Bohan, 72 Wn.App. 335 (1993)

In controlled buy, police watch informant enter apt. A-8, informant tells police it is apt. D-8, warrant authorizes search of D-8, when police arrive to serve warrant, they notice the error, serve warrant on A-8; held: information concerning location of premises based on officer's personal knowledge of location may be considered when a correct address is missing, State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962, 967 (1982), State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989), State v. Dodson, 110 Wn.App. 112, 124-25 (2002); burden of proving reasonable probability of mistaken search lies with moving party, Fisher at 967, State v. Trasvina, 16 Wn.App. 519, 623 (1976); here, detective's knowledge was sufficient to cure defect.

State v. Condon, 72 Wn.App. 638, 642-4 (1993)

Affidavit consisting of statements from murder victim's wife that there were physical conflicts between defendant and victim, defendant was upset with victim on day of homicide, defendant was watching ranch where homicide occurred, defendant stayed at ranch for several days after homicide in spite of the fact that he was usually fearful of confrontations with victim, and defendant told victim's wife that she would have to say they were together night of homicide establishes probable cause, as magistrate could reasonably infer that defendant had a strong motive for the crime and his behavior demonstrated guilty knowledge, distinguishing State v. Anderson, 37 Wn.App. 157 (1984); where object of search is a weapon, it is reasonable to infer that the weapon may be found at the perpetrator's residence, distinguishing State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771, 772 (1985), see: State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625, 632-34 (2014), but see: State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), State v. Dalton, 73 Wn.App. 132 (1994), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999), cf.: State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366 (2006), State v. Dunn, 186 Wn.App. 889 (2015); I.

State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173 (1994)

Anonymous tip that defendant was growing marijuana plus confirmation of address and telephone number given by informer plus high electricity consumption plus dramatic increase in consumption over three years plus observed absence of utilities such as hot tubs plus covered basement windows is insufficient to establish probable cause; see: State v. Duncan, 81 Wn.App. 70, 76-8 (1996), Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), State v. Orick, 129 Wn.App. 654 (2005); 9-0.

Seattle v. McCready, 123 Wn.2d 260 (1994)

Absent a statute or court rule, a superior court judge is not authorized to issue a search warrant to enforce building safety codes on less than probable cause, see: State v. Lansden, 144 Wn.2d 654 (2001); exclusive jurisdiction to issue warrants to enforce municipal ordinances is vested in municipal courts, RCW 3.46.030, 35.20.030, but see: Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 308-12 (1994), Exendine v. Sammamish, 127 Wn.App. 574 (2005); 8-0.

State v. Hill, 123 Wn.2d 641 (1994)

Police, serving premises warrant for drugs, find defendant, who did not appear to be a mere visitor, naked, defendant asks for his pants, police patdown pants on floor which were not obviously associated with defendant, feel nothing, then search pants, find drugs; held: premises warrant authorizes search of household objects, pants here were not sufficiently associated with a visitor to preclude search; reverses State v. Lee, 68 Wn.App. 253 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Flores-Moreno, 72 Wn.App. 733, 738-42 (1994)

Where police watch suspect conduct a drug deal which calls for suspect to return with drugs, follow suspect, observe suspect put something in trunk of car, drug dog reacts positively to trunk, see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L.Ed.2d 492 (2015), probable cause for warrant is established, cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); 50 minute detention of vehicle to get warrant is reasonable; II.

State v. Dalton, 73 Wn.App. 132 (1994)

Unconfirmed statements of unidentified informants that defendant was trafficking in drugs plus package of marijuana addressed to defendant's post office box with return address from another person is insufficient to support probable cause for a warrant, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771, 772 (1985), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999); while there may have been sufficient evidence to support conclusion that defendant was about to possess marijuana from his post office box, probable cause to believe that defendant committed a crime on the street does not necessarily give rise to probable cause to search his home, cf.: State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366 (2006), State v. Dunn, 186 Wn.App. 889 (2015); II.

State v. Olson, 73 Wn.App. 348, 356-57 (1994)

A trained, experienced officer who detects the odor of marijuana establishes probable cause to justify a search, State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641, 647-8 (1992), State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 289 (1995), State v. Jacobs, 121 Wn.App. 669, 677-79 (2004), rev'd, on other grounds, 154 Wn.2d 596 (2005), cf.: State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135 (2008); officer's assertion that, based upon experience individuals who cultivate marijuana hide marijuana and records in safe houses is insufficient to establish probable cause to search a different house, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999), see: State v. Perez, 92 Wn.App. 1 (1998), State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625, 632-34 (2014), State v. Constantine, 182 Wn.App. 635, 645-48 (2014); II.

State v. Clark, 124 Wn.2d 90, 105-6 (1994)

Where exculpatory information is not deliberately or recklessly withheld from affidavit in support of a warrant, then the additional information need not be included in the record for a new determination of whether probable cause exists, State v. Jones, 55 Wn.App. 343, 345 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111 (1994)

Where police deliberately or recklessly omit drug informer's criminal status relationship to defendant and other facts that might identify informer, it is not material to a finding of probable cause, at 117-9, see: State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286, 294-5 (1989); ulterior motive of informer need not be disclosed to magistrate, since informants frequently have records and self-serving motives; I.

State v. Olson, 74 Wn.App. 126 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 126 Wn.2d 315 (1995)

Affidavit that details officer's training and experience in drug seminars and investigations need not explicitly state that officer was trained to identify the smell of marijuana where odor was basis for probable cause, at 129-131, cf.: State v. Remboldt, 64 Wn.App. 505, 507 (1992), State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 907 (1981); estimate of normal power consumption to suspect's power consumption that turns out to have been wrong does not establish reckless misstatement by itself to require excision, at 131-3, State v. Garrison, 118 Wn.2d 870, 872 (1992), but see: State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999); I.

Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 308 (1994)

Municipal courts lack authority to issue administrative inspection warrants supported by probable cause to believe a civil infraction, rather than a crime, has occurred, State v. Lansden, 144 Wn.2d 654 (2001), see: Seattle v. McCready, 123 Wn.2d 260 (1994), Exendine v. Sammamish, 127 Wn.App. 574 (2005); 8-0.

State v. Goucher, 124 Wn.2d 778 (1994)

During search of residence pursuant to warrant, phone rings, police answer, caller asks to buy drugs, police agree, defendant arrives, is sold drugs by police and arrested; held: no reasonable privacy interest under state or United States constitutions for a person to disclose information to an acknowledged stranger on the telephone, State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021); defendant lacks standing to challenge police answering telephone as beyond scope of warrant; 9-0.

State v. Sanchez, 74 Wn.App. 763 (1994)

Affidavit states that named informant obtained drugs from Joe at a certain house at some undisclosed time, that the house had been raided seven months earlier with drugs found, house had been marred by shotgun blasts, unidentified citizens had complained about drug activity at the house; held: while probable cause to believe that informant obtained drugs from the house existed, there was not enough to believe, under these facts, that "some means more"; while "some may mean more," State v. Mejia, 111 Wn.2d 892, 894-6 (1989), State v. Maffeo, 31 Wn.App. 198, 199 (1982), State v. Helmka, 86 Wn.2d 91, 93 (1975), here there is only a showing of a single delivery made by a largely unidentified individual ("Joe"), at an unknown time, who may or may not have resided at the house, State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999); III.

State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28, 39-41 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996)

Bare assertion that citizen smelled marijuana is insufficient to support a warrant, distinguishing State v. Remboldt, 64 Wn.App. 505, 510 (1992), State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33 (1988); I.

State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 604-7 (1995)

Affidavit states that white girl was sexually assaulted and beaten to death in woods, significant amount of blood at scene, two Negroid hairs on body, two witnesses had seen a black male within a mile of body near time of murder, one witness took police to home of man she saw, defendant met description, was in jail on rape charge at time warrant was sought, prior homicide conviction; held: probable cause existed to search and seize bloodstained shoes; 9-0.

State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 469-70 (1994)

Where defendant is searched incident to arrest on a warrant, defense has burden of proof to challenge the validity of the facially valid warrant, State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962, 968 (1982); I.

State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 692, 709-10 (1994)

Tip from a concerned citizen of marijuana growing plus corroboration of some details provided from the citizen plus utility records showing low electricity consumption consistent with indoor grow operation (?) is insufficient to provide probable cause, State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 160-64 (2007); II.

State v. Rivera, 76 Wn.App. 519 (1995)

Warrant authorizes search of any vehicle on the property, police search defendant-visitor's vehicle, find drugs; held: warrant authorizing search of any vehicle violates particularity requirement and is overbroad, overruling, in part, State v. Frye, 26 Wn.App. 276, 280-2 (1980); distinguishes State v. Claflin, 38 Wn.App. 847, 853 (1984); see: State v. Carter, 79 Wn.App. 154 (1995), State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609 (2007); II.

State v. Hunt, 76 Wn.App. 625 (1995)

Defendant is released pending appeal; upon issuing of mandate affirming conviction, court clerk issues a warrant, police serve warrant and, in search incident to arrest, find drugs; held: as soon as mandate is filed, the judgment and sentence is self-executing, RCW 10.70.020, and arrest and search incident thereto are proper; I.

Arizona v. Evans, 131 L.Ed.2d 34 (1995)

Police search and find drugs pursuant to an arrest warrant which had been ordered quashed by a judge, but court clerk failed to notify police; held: exclusionary rule is intended to deter improper police behavior, not clerical errors; since police acted in good faith in serving warrant, United States v. Leon, 82 L.Ed.2d 677 (1984), motion to suppress should be denied,Herring v. United States, 172 L.Ed.2d 496 (2009), cf.: State v. Trinidad, 23 Wn.App. 418 (1979); 7-2.

State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 285-92 (1995)

Where power records are obtained via search warrant, law enforcement need not comply with RCW 42.17.314, distinguishing State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761 (1990); 6-3.

State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44 (1995)

Affidavit asserts that informants heard one suspect in a residence tell another suspect to "go out to the truck and get the 'weed,' which he did," no further reference to a truck, warrant authorizes search of premises and a specific pickup truck which police find parked next to and slightly in the public street at the house; held: affidavit does not show that informant saw truck or drugs in truck or ownership of truck, thus a reasonable person would not think that drugs likely would be found in the specific truck, thus no probable cause for issuance of warrant to search truck, at 50-1; vehicle parked in a space that lawfully could be used by anyone coming to the house is not within curtilage, at 51-52, State v. Niedergang, 43 Wn.App. 656, 661-2 (1986); II.

State v. Goss, 78 Wn.App. 58 (1995)

Superior court commissioner, CONST. Art. 4, § 23, is authorized to issue a search warrant; II.

State v. Gonzales, 78 Wn.App. 976 (1995)

Police, serving search warrant, answer ringing telephone, defense moves to suppress conversation; held: answering phone falls within scope of warrant, no legitimate expectation of privacy in incoming calls; I.

State v. Carter, 79 Wn.App. 154 (1995)

Warrant authorizes search of residence and all persons at residence at the time warrant is served; held: "search all persons present" warrant is overbroad, at least absent a showing that only illegal conduct occurs on the site, see: State v. Worth, 37 Wn.App. 889 (1984), State v. Rollie M., 41 Wn.App. 55 (1985), State v. Douglas S., 42 Wn.App. 138 (1985), State v. Rivera, 76 Wn.App. 519 (1995), State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609, 622-24 (2007); while warrant is severable, premises warrant does not authorize search of a sleeping resident, see: State v. Halverson, 21 Wn.App. 35 (1978); II.

State v. Rakosky, 79 Wn.App. 229 (1995)

Affidavit establishes that game officers observe security fence, guard dogs, windowless outbuilding, police determine nonresident owner has drug conviction, uses false name, electricity use three-four times previous owner, outbuilding consumes electricity, no snow accumulation on outbuilding held insufficient to establish probable cause for warrant, State v. Huft, 106 Wn.2d 206, 209-11 (1986), State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432, 436-8 (1984), State v. Mickle, 53 Wn.App. 39, 44 (1988), State v. McPherson, 40 Wn.App. 298, 301 (1985), but see: State v. Murray, 110 Wn.2d 706, 713 (1988), State v. Patterson, 83 Wn.2d 49, 61 (1973); 2-1, III.

State v. Johnson, 79 Wn.App. 776 (1995)

Affidavit states that anonymous informant says defendant grows marijuana and drives a specific car, car registered to defendant, roof of defendant's home has no snow while neighbors have two feet, higher electric usage than other months, infrared scans show high temperatures in basement and roof, agents smell marijuana from street in front of house; held: excluding infrared scan, State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173 (1994), affidavit establishes sufficient evidence of agent's experience and expertise in smelling marijuana, State v. Hansen, 42 Wn.App. 755, 761 aff'd, 107 Wn.2d 331 (1986), State v. Hashman, 46 Wn.App. 211 (1986), State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33 (1988); 2-1, III.

State v. Werner, 129 Wn.2d 485 (1996)

Superior court judge may issue arrest warrant for a juvenile, reversing State v. Werner, 79 Wn.App. 872 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Kern, 81 Wn.App. 308 (1996)

Police serve search warrant for bank records on bank within authorized ten days, bank officials retrieve records and mail them to police beyond ten days; held: search begins before warrant expires, thus service on bank within warrant period was sufficient, completion of search beyond ten days does not warrant suppression where probable cause continued to exist, see: State v. Thomas, 121 Wn.2d 504 (1993), distinguishing State v. Gonzalez, 71 Wn.App. 715 (1993); police presence is not necessary for bank officials to search for records purusuant to a warrant, distinguishing CrRLJ 2.3(c); police need not provide defendant with inventory when searching bank records, distinguishing CrRLJ 2.3(d); police filing inventory before records were seized violates CrRLJ 2.3(d), but is ministerial and harmless, cf.: State v. Linder, 190 Wn.App. 638 (2015).

State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 603-4 (1996)

An "alert" by a trained drug dog is sufficient to establish probable cause for the presence of a controlled substance, State v. Stanphill, 53 Wn.App. 623 (1989), State v. Wolohan, 23 Wn.App. 813 (1979), Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005), Florida v. Harris, 568 U.S. 237, 185 L.Ed.2d 61 (2013), see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), but see: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), cf.: Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L.Ed.2d 492 (2015); II.

State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 660-2 (1997)

Because leading organized crime is a broad offense which state must prove income sources and uses, a broad warrant permitting seizure of "all records pertaining to finances" is not overbroad, distinguishing State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538 (1992); II.

State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668 (1997)

Where a warrant authorizes search for documents that relate to a business relationship, police executing the warrant who read documents to determine if they are covered by the warrant may seize other documents if they will "aid in a particular apprehension or conviction, or ha[ve] a sufficient nexus with the crime under investigation," State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632, 648 (1986), State v. Turner, 18 Wn.App. 727, 729 (1977); an overbroad warrant may be cured where affidavit is attached and the warrant expressly refers to the affidavit and incorporates it with suitable words of reference, State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1983), State v. Kelley, 52 Wn.App. 581, 585 (1988), cf.: State v. Higgins, 136 Wn.App. 87 (2006), State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018); 8-0.

Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997)

PUD employee volunteers to police that defendant's power usage is high, after further investigation, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: there is a privacy interest in public power records (plurality of four justices holds pursuant to state constitution), cf. State v. McKinny, 148 Wn.2d 20 (2002), PUD employee lacked statutory authority to disclose record to police, thus suppressed, State v. Orick, 129 Wn.App. 654 (2005), see: State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54, 67-8 (1986); RCW 42.17.314 authorizes police to demand power records only after setting forth in writing a reasonable suspicion, State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761 (1990); overrules, on state grounds, State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378 (1994), reverses Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 81 Wn.App. 705 (1996); 5-4.

State v. Gebaroff, 87 Wn.App. 11 (1997)

Affidavit states that informant walked to a residence, describing it with nonspecific directions from a highway, gave his friend money who knocks on a door and is greeted by a woman, buys drugs, police have tips of a methamphetamine lab in the area, obtain warrant; held: affidavit is insufficient to describe the premises to be searched; II.

State v. Smith, 87 Wn.App. 254 (1997)

Where telephonic affidavit recording fails, testimony of officer from notes he claims he read to the magistrate is insufficient to reconstruct the affidavit where the judge's recollection is "foggy," as there must be detailed and specific evidence of a disinterested person, which the police are not, State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991), State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609 (2007); II.

State v. Goble, 88 Wn.App. 503 (1997)

Telephonic declaration claims that, following a valid search, drugs are in a package in defendant's post office box, magistrate authorizes search of defendant's home if he picks up package and takes it to his home, police observe defendant take package to his property and enter his house, serve warrant, seize drugs; held: probable cause requires a nexus between the items to be seized and the place to be searched at the time the warrant issues, not based upon some future act; here, magistrate had no reason to believe drugs were in house when he issued the warrant, thus suppressed, see: State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999) cf.: State v. Dunn, 186 Wn.App. 889 (2015); II.

State v. Chambers, 88 Wn.App. 640 (1997)

Affidavit establishes probable cause to search for marijuana, warrant allows police to search for "any and all controlled substances," trial court suppresses, finding warrant was not sufficiently specific; held: in a drug case, "controlled substances" is sufficient in warrant to seize marijuana, State v. Christiansen, 40 Wn.App. 249, 254 (1985), State v. Olson, 32 Wn.App. 555 (1982), distinguishing State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22, 28 (1993), but see: State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999); II, 2-1.

State v. Perez, 92 Wn.App. 1 (1998)

Affidavit: reliable informant provided defendant's pager number, when defendant is paged he will bring drugs to customer, police complete controlled buy, then follow defendant to residence, observe defendant leave residence on more than one occasion after being paged and go to customer; police serve warrant on house from which defendant is seen to leave before transactions; held: reasonable inference that house is a "safe house" establishing nexus between defendant and house searched, distinguishing State v. Olson, 73 Wn.App. 348, 357 (1994); evidence of ongoing drug dealing will defeat staleness argument where affidavit establishes drugs in premises three-four days prior to issuance and execution of warrant, distinguishing State v. Higby, 26 Wn.App. 457, 460 (1980); I.

State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999)

Affidavit establishes that defendant is a drug trafficker, magistrate issues warrant to search defendant's home based upon officer's experience and training that drug traffickers store drugs in their residence; held: officer's general conclusions and conclusory predictions and inferences do not establish the necessary specific underlying circumstances that establish evidence of illegal activity to authorize search of home, State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 489, 497-502 (2001), State v. Keodara, 191 Wn.App. 305 (2015); probable cause to believe that a person has committed a crime does not necessarily give rise to probable cause to search his home, State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985), State v. Dalton, 73 Wn.App. 132, 136 (1994), State v. Olson, 73 Wn.App. 348, 357 (1994), State v. Goble, 88 Wn.App. 503, 509 (1997), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999), cf.: State v. McGovern, 111

Wn.App. 495 (2002), State v. Denham, 197 Wn.2d 759 (2021), overruling State v. O'Neil, 74 Wn.App. 820 (1994) State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625, 632-34 (2014), State v. Constantine, 182 Wn.App. 635, 645-48 (2014), overruling, in part, State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549 (1990), State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 568-70 (2000), State v. Dunn, 186 Wn.App. 889 (2015); reverses State v. Thein, 91 Wn.App. 476 (1998), State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619, 623-29 (1999)

Police, serving arrest warrant, observe defendant smoking hand-rolled cigarette in house, smell marijuana, obtain warrant to search house and outbuildings, seize drugs in shed behind house; held: where there is probable cause to believe defendant possesses drugs but no evidence of trafficking, then warrant to search premises where drugs were seen does not extend to other buildings on the premises, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), distinguishing State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549 (1990), see: State v. Christiansen, 40 Wn.App. 249 (1985), State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985), State v. Hansen, 42 Wn.App. 755 (1986), State v. Dalton, 73 Wn.App. 132 (1994), State v. Olson, 73 Wn.App. 348, 356-57 (1994), State v. Sanchez, 74 Wn.App. 763 (1994), State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625, 632-34 (2014); II.

State v. Walker, 101 Wn.App. 1 (2000)

Municipal court clerk issues bench warrant without prior approval by a judge, on service of warrant police find drugs; held: a clerk may not order the issuance of a warrant of arrest absent a statute, court rule or ordinance; remedy for all violations of CONST. Art. I, § 7 is suppression, see: State v. Parks, 136 Wn.App. 232 (2006); 2-1.

Illinois v. McArthur, 148 L.Ed.2d 838 (2001)

Police, with probable cause to believe drugs are inside house, prevent resident from entering for two hours awaiting warrant; held: police had "good reason" to believe that defendant would destroy drugs, restrained, but did not arrest, defendant for limited period of time, thus there were exigent circumstances justifying the restraint, State v. Ng, 104 Wn.2d 763 (1985), Michigan v. Summers, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981), Warden, Md. Penitentiary v. Hayden, 18 L.Ed.2d 782 (1967), Segura v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 599 (1984), cf. Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984), Bailey v. United States, 568 U.S. 186, 185 L.Ed.2d 19 (2013); 8-1.

State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288, 295-302 (2001)

Affidavit in support of warrant for blood sample omits fact that victim picked out another person from montage, trial court denies hearing to determine material misrepresentation, Franks v. Delaware, 57 L.Ed.2d 667 (1978), finding lack of materiality of the omitted facts; held: where omitted facts are immaterial and nothing in the affidavit is alleged to be false, then Franks does not require a hearing, see: State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 157-60 (2007); even if the omitted facts were material and were included in the affidavit, if they do not negate probable cause, then no hearing is necessary, State v. Jackson, 111 Wn.App. 660, 678-80 (2002), 150 Wn.2d 251 (2003), see also: State v. Stephens, 37 Wn.App. 76 (1984), State v. Garrison, 118 Wn.2d 870 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 746-56 (2001)

Magistrate may consider prior convictions, State v. Stone, 56 Wn.App. 153, 158 (1989), and polygraph results, State v. Cherry, 61 Wn.App. 301, 305 (1991); polygrapher's curriculum vitae need not be included in affidavit to support basis of knowledge, State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706, 712 (1981); where there are omitted facts from affidavit, to invalidate warrant court must find deliberate material omission or statements made in reckless disregard of truth, State v. Garrison, 118 Wn.2d 870, 872 (1992), reckless disregard means that affiant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of facts or statements in the affidavit, State v. O'Connor, 39 Wn.App. 113, 117-19 (1984), which are shown by (1) actual deliberation or (2) the existence of obvious reasons to doubt veracity of the informant or accuracy of informant's reports, State v. Chenoweth, 160 Wn.2d 454 (2007); warrant authorizing search for "trace evidence" is not overbroad, State v. Reid, 38 Wn.App. 203, 211-12 (1984), State v. Lingo, 32 Wn.App. 638, 640-42 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 489, 497-500 (2001)

Affidavit states that child victims were raped with a vibrator in suspect's home, officer adds that based upon training and experience, child rapists have porn, police serve warrant, seize dildo, view videotapes which contain scenes of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct; held: general statements regarding common habits of child abusers are not alone sufficient to establish probable cause, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), State v. Keodara, 191 Wn.App. 305 (2015); II.

State v. Anderson, 105 Wn.App. 223 (2001)

Police observe a man watering plants outside defendant's home, determine that the man was wanted on a misdemeanor escape warrant, obtain search warrant to search defendant's home, find drugs; held: existence of a misdemeanor arrest warrant and the belief that the subject may be a guest in a third party's home is insufficient legal authority to enter the third party's home, State v. Chrisman, 100 Wn.2d 814, 820-22 (1984), State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80 (2005), see: State v. McKinney, 49 Wn.App. 850, 857 (1987), State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 635-39 (2002), State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009), cf.: State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390 (2007), see also: State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013); III.

State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003)

Police are maintaining status quo on a house while awaiting a warrant, car drives up, defendant is passenger, defendant exits, is told to stop, police request identification , defendant complies, officer uses hand-held radio to call, discovers warrant, arrests defendant, finds drugs; held: while police may stop and question persons approaching a place to be searched to determine their business at the location and to prevent them from interfering with the search, State v. Melin, 27 Wn.App. 589, 592 (1980), there is no authority allowing police to question persons approaching a scene where police have not yet obtained a warrant; even with a warrant, such a stop is not a license to detain and frisk all who approach, absent a reasonable articulable suspicion; while the initial request for identification was not a detention, State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997), State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575, 576 (2000), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), retaining identification during a warrants check is a seizure, State v. Coyne, 99

Wn.App. 566, 572 (2000), State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn.App.2d 641 (2019), but see: State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008); here, defendant complied with all police requests, there was no basis to suspect him, thus drugs suppressed; 2-1, II.

State v. Lansden, 144 Wn. 2d. 654 (2001)

Absent statute or court rule, district court judge has no authority to issue a warrant for civil nuisance, zoning and building violations, Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 309 (1994), see: Exendine v. Sammamish, 127 Wn.App. 574 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Fisher, 145 Wn.2d 209 (2001)

Before sentencing, court issues bench warrant based upon affidavit from CCO stating that another client overheard defendant say she would not appear and that she was high on drugs, and that she was spending time with a drug dealer, upon arrest, police find drugs; held: a post-conviction bench warrant may issue on less than probable cause, CrR 3.2(j)(1), 3.2(f), State v. Lucas, 56 Wn.App. 236 (1989), distinguishing Fourth Amendment; here, affidavit was insufficient for well-founded suspicion, thus drugs suppressed; reverses State v. Fisher, 104 Wn.App. 772 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Dodson, 110 Wn.App. 112 (2002)

Police provide telephonic information to judge to search for meth, judge finds probable cause, authorizes police to sign warrant, police do not read warrant to judge, warrant calls for seizure of marijuana, does not specify time for execution; held: clerical error calling for search for wrong drug does not defeat probable cause, detective changing word on warrant to read meth rather than marijuana was valid, no prejudice; CrR 2.3(c) does not require officer to read warrant into record, see: FRCP 41; absent prejudice, failure to specify time is not error; III.

State v. Tarter, 111 Wn.App. 336 (2002)

Motel owner tells police that tenant paid cash, 20 calls came to room within an hour, high traffic to room, people from room crossed street to truck stop for brief encounters, police determine that tenant has prior drug arrests, obtain warrant, find drugs; excluding evidence of prior arrests, commonsense approach supports probable cause; III.

State v. McGovern, 111 Wn.App. 495 (2002)

Following traffic stop, police lawfully seize 182 grams of marijuana from car, defendant states that he bought more than he needed for own use in Oregon and was intending to sell some, that he was on his way from home, denied growing at home, refused consent to search home, saying that he had stuff he doesn't want police to see, a gun, police obtain telephonic warrant, search, seize growing marijuana; held: defendant's statements that he was selling marijuana, has too much for own use, that there's stuff he doesn't want police to find plus fact that 182 grams "is not an extraordinarily large amount" leading magistrate to believe defendant had more elsewhere, establish probable cause, distinguishing State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), see: State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625, 632-34 (2014); II.

State v. Wible, 113 Wn.App. 18 (2002)

Warrant need not specify the crime under investigation where particularity requirement is otherwise met, State v. Askham, 120 Wn.App. 872, 877-80 (2004), distinguishing State v. Riley, 121 Wn.App. 22, 26 (1993), see: State v. Ollivier, 161 Wn.App. 307 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 178 Wn.2d 813 (2013), State v. Henson, 11 Wn.App.2d 97 (2019); affidavit which asserts that citizen saw files on defendant's computer that were named "11 year old" and "8 year old rape" plus images of young girls "sexual of nature" establishes probable cause for issuance of warrant to search for images depicting children engaged in sexually explicit activity; where warrant for child pornography limits "seizable" items to images of child pornography, the warrant is not overbroad; II.

State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171 (2002)

Where affidavit is unsigned but magistrate indicates on affidavit that it is "acknowledged and sworn to before me," warrant is valid, at 180-81; in analyzing a warrant for seizure of a computer, court must closely scrutinize compliance with particularity and probable cause requirements due to First Amendment concerns, State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538, 547 (1992), State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018); affidavit that describes noncriminal computer use of suspect and conclusion that scrutiny of hard disk will show when suspect was at his residence is insufficiently particular to demonstrate required nexus between computer and evidence of crimes under investigation, see: State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133, 140 (1999), State v. Grenning, 142 Wn.App. 518, 533-35 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 47 (2010), State v. Keodara, 191 Wn.App. 305 (2015), State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018); II

State v. Hampton, 114 Wn.App. 486 (2002)

Affidavit establishes informant's reliability, states that informant had seen defendant dealing cocaine ten times and that defendant keeps rocks in a container "on his person," police obtain warrant, arrest and search defendant in van with tinted windows, find drugs between penis and scrotum; held: a warrant which authorizes a search of a suspect's person automatically authorizes a strip search, see: RCW 10.79.070; II.

State v. Maddox, 116 Wn.App. 796, 805-10 (2003), aff'd, 152 Wn.2d 499 (2004)

Following controlled buy of meth from residence, police obtain a warrant for drugs and records showing identity of co-conspirators, do two more controlled buys 3 and 9 days after issuance of warrant, at last buy suspect tells informant that he is out of meth, next day police search and seize marijuana, ecstasy, cash and papers, find no meth; held: warrant was overbroad as there was no probable cause to search for records of co-conspirators, but severability doctrine applies, State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538 (1992), where (1) warrant lawfully authorized entry into premises, (2) warrant lists items for which there was probable cause, (3) the part of the warrant that includes proper items is significant when compared to warrant as a whole, (4) police must find and seize disputed items while executing valid part of warrant, (5) police must not have conducted a general search in which they flagrantly disregard the warrant's scope, State v. Temple, 170 Wn.App. 156, 162-65 (2012); I.

State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 331 (2003)

Analysis of the validity of a warrant is not limited to the four corners of the officer's affidavit, CrR 2.3(c), State v. Jansen, 15 Wn.App. 348, 350 (1976), but see: State v. O'Connor, 39 Wn.App. 113, 119 (1984), State v. Martin, 169 Wn.App. 620, 631 (2012); III.

State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 259-69 (2003)

Police seize vehicle pursuant to valid warrant, obtain a second warrant to place global positioning system device (GPS) in vehicle, return vehicle to suspect, track vehicle, find evidence; held: placing GPS device in a vehicle requires a warrant, as it involves a more intrusive method of viewing than binoculars, State v. Manley, 85 Wn.2d 120, 124 (1975) or flashlight, State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388, 400-01 (1996), see: State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173 (1994), CONST., art. I, § 7, United States v. Jones, 565 U.S. 400, 132 S.Ct. 945,181 L.Ed.2d 911 (2012), Grady v. North Carolina, 575 U.S. 306, 135 S.Ct. 1368, 191 L.Ed.2d 459 (2015); while claim in affidavit that perpetrators return to crime scenes is a generalization that cannot establish probable cause, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), there was sufficient other facts set forth to establish probable cause for placing the GPS device; travel pattern of suspect's truck and location of suspect's movements are sufficiently particular such that the search was not general, see: United States v. Karo, 82 L.Ed.2d 530 (1984); affirms State v. Jackson, 111 Wn.App. 660 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Ettenhofer, 119 Wn.App. 300 (2003)

Police call judge who swears officer, judge finds probable cause, CrR 2.3(c), authorizes search but neither judge nor police execute a written warrant, drugs seized; held: absent a written warrant, search is invalid under state constitution; II.

State v. Busig, 119 Wn.App. 381 (2003)

Police obtain search warrant to search for a person who had arrest warrants for drugs, warrant form signed by magistrate authorized search for drugs for which there was no probable cause, police enter, arrest suspect, observe meth lab, obtain another telephonic warrant, seize lab and drugs; held: the first warrant form was a clerical error, State v. Wible, 113 Wn.App. 18, 25-26 (2002), the defect in which may be cured by reference to the affidavit attached to the warrant, State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 696 (1997); a warrant is not subject to pretext analysis, State v. Goodin, 67 Wn.App. 623, 625-26 (1992), State v. Lansden, 144 Wn.2d 654, 662 (2001), distinguishing State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343, 353 (1999); III.

Groh v. Ramirez, 157 L.Ed.2d 1068 (2004)

Application and affidavit in support of warrant set forth weapons ATF is seeking, warrant signed by magistrate fails to identify any items agents intended to seize, did not incorporate by reference itemized list in application; held: warrant was invalid, as Fourth Amendment requires that no warrant shall issue unless "particularly describing...the things to be seized," application does not save warrant from facial invalidity, see: Massachusetts v. Sheppard, 82 L.Ed.2d 737 (1984); 5-4.

State v. Aase, 121 Wn.App. 558 (2004)

Handing suspect a search warrant minutes into the search, as opposed to the outset, is sufficient, see: State v. Parker, 28 Wn.App. 425 (1981), cf.: State v. Linder, 190 Wn.App. 638 (2015); II.

State v. Jacobs, 121 Wn.App. 669 (2004), rev'd, on other grounds, 154 Wn.2d 596 (2005)

Affidavit: manager of trailer park smells chemical odor from defendant's space, received information that defendant was manufacturing methamphetamine, police corroborate iodine smell which increases as trailer door opens, defendant admits living there, having chemicals, film canister with white powder which field tests for meth falls from defendant's pocket; held: all establish probable cause, see: State v. Olson, 73 Wn.App. 348, 356 (1994); II.

State v. Maddox, 152 Wn.2d 499 (2004)

Following controlled buy of methamphetamine, police obtain a warrant but, before serving, do two more controlled buys, 3 and 9 days after warrant issued, at last buy suspect tells informant he is out of meth, next day police serve warrant, seize other drugs, no meth; held: police were not required to return to magistrate for redetermination of probable cause because after-acquired information did not negate probable cause; affirms State v. Maddox, 116 Wn.App. 796 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Merkt, 124 Wn.App. 607, 614 (2004)

Affidavit states that one witness had purchased drugs four months prior to warrant, the other one month prior, defendant's vehicle was used to purchase drug precursors three months prior; held: because police knew defendant had a past criminal drug history, totality of information establishes probable cause that drug sales were current, not stale, deferring to trial court's decision and resolving doubts in favor of the warrant, but see: State v. Higby, 26 Wn.App. 457, 463 (1980); 2-1, III.

State v. Hosier, 124 Wn.App. 696, 711-16 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 1 (2006)

Defendant leaves notes threatening to tie up young girls, warrant seeks writing materials, police seize rope; held: evidence not described in a warrant is properly seized where it has a nexus with the crime under investigation, State v. Gonzales, 78 Wn.App. 976, 983 (1995); II.

State v. Nusbaum, 126 Wn.App. 160 (2005)

Affidavit establishes that a controlled substance was to be delivered to defendant's home, having been intercepted by U.S. customs inspectors, that search would occur upon delivery of the substance to defendant's residence, warrant merely authorizes search without addressing anticipated delivery, police knock, on porch hold out package, defendant's fingers touch package, defendant is arrested, police search house, find drugs; held: nexus between drugs and residence was dependent on delivery and acceptance into the residence without which there was no probable cause, see: State v. Gonzalez, 77 Wn.App. 479, 484 (1995); II.

State v. Spring, 128 Wn.App. 398 (2005)

When a warrant is based in part on illegally obtained information, warrant is nonetheless valid if affidavit contains otherwise sufficient facts to establish probable cause independent of the illegally obtained information, Murray v. United States, 101 L.Ed.2d 472 (1988), State v.

Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761, 769 (1990), and prosecutor proves that police would have sought the warrant in the absence of the unlawfully obtained evidence, State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989), State v. Miles, 159 Wn.App. 282 (2011); I.

State v. Evans, 129 Wn.App. 211, 219-21 (2005), rev'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 402 (2007)

Defense seeks hearing to challenge affidavit, Franks v. Delaware, 57 L.Ed.2d 667 (1978), as police did not disclose to magistrate that informer had forgery convictions, trial court denies hearing; held: while police could or perhaps should have known of informer's criminal history, failure to discover it does not rise to the level of intentional or reckless disregard, negligence fails to meet the preliminary showing, State v. Garrison, 118 Wn.2d 870, 872-73 (1992); II.

State v. Griffith, 129 Wn.App. 482, 485-89 (2005)

Affidavit: defendant hosted a party, 16-year old girl allowed defendant to take nude photos of her with a digital camera, puts photos on computer; magistrate issues search warrant for child pornography, authorizing seizure of computers, all cameras, videotapes, unprocessed film and storage media; held: warrant was overbroad, but severing those portions for which there was no probable cause, state was properly permitted to use evidence seized from computer; while not all nude photos of minors are illegal, State v. Grannis, 84 Wn.App. 546, 548-49 (1997), given deferential standard of review, affidavit contains facts sufficient to establish a crime; 2-1, II.

State v. Orick, 129 Wn.App. 654 (2005)

Police, suspicious of marijuana grow operation, ask Public Utility District to check for possible power diversion, two PUD employees enter property past no trespassing signs and determine diversion, police obtain warrant; held: while Fourth Amendment and art I, § 7 generally do not apply to PUD employees, here employees acted at express request of, and thus jointly and in concert with, police, who lacked probable cause, thus evidence suppressed, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332, 337-38 (1997); III.

United States v. Grubbs, 164 L.Ed.2d 195 (2006)

Defendant orders pornographic videotape, police obtain anticipatory warrant wherein affidavit asserts warrant would be served after videotape was delivered, warrant itself does not contain anticipatory language; held: where affidavit establishes that if the triggering condition occurs, there is a fair probability that the res of the warrant will be found and that there is probable cause that the triggering condition will occur, warrant is valid; particularity requirement of a search warrant only addresses the place to be searched and the things or persons to be seized, need not set forth the triggering condition; 8-0.

State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366, 371-72 (2006)

Affidavit establishes defendant left from and returned to residence before and after he sold drugs establishes nexus that defendant had drugs in house, State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625, 632-34 (2014), distinguishing State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999); III.

State v. Higgins, 136 Wn.App. 87 (2006)

Warrant authorizes seizure of "evidence of a crime, to-wit: Assault 2nd DV," attached affidavit specifies items; held: where warrant does not describe items to be seized and does not incorporate affidavit by reference, then the fact that the affidavit is attached does not cure overbreadth of the warrant, State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22, 29-30 (1983), State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 696 (1997), cf.: State v. Temple, 170 Wn.App. 156, 163-65 (2012); III.

State v. Parks, 136 Wn.App. 232 (2006)

Municipal court issues bench warrant without finding probable cause to detain, police serve warrant, find drugs; held: a pre-conviction bench warrant is not valid unless the record establishes that the court made a finding of probable cause at some point in the history of the case; where a warrant lacking probable cause is served, a search pursuant to that warrant is invalid and the evidence must be suppressed, see State v. Walker, 101 Wn.App. 1 (2000), State v. Erickson, 168 Wn.2d 41 (2010); I.

State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390 (2007)

Police with misdemeanor warrant for 3rd person find that person's two trucks at a residence, neighbors say they see the 3rd person at the house, one says he lives there, police knock, person who answers says that the 3rd person is home, police enter, see drugs, find 3rd person, charge defendant with drug offenses; held: an arrest warrant allows police limited power to enter a residence for an arrest as long as (1) the entry is reasonable, (2) the entry is not a pretext for conducting a search or other investigation, State v. Michaels, 60 Wn.2d 638, 644 (1962), (3) police have probable cause to believe the person named in the warrant is a resident, see: State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620, 628-31 (2009), and (4) the named person is actually present at the time of the entry, State v. McKague, 143 Wn.App. 531 (2008), cf.: Stegald v. United States, 68 L.Ed.2d 38 (1981), State v. Anderson, 105 Wn.App. 223, 232 (2001); here, despite mistaking named person as a resident, police had probable cause to believe that 3rd person resided at home because his two cars were at the scene, neighbor said he lived there, even though 3rd person's cars were not registered at that home, but see: State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Reep, 161 Wn.2d 808 (2007)

Warrant authorizing seizure "of any evidence supporting the suspected criminal activity of …'Child Sex'" is overbroad, State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538 (1992), as child pornography is presumptively protected by the First Amendment and thus the particularity requirement must be followed with scrupulous exactitude; 9-0.

State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 100-01 (2007)

Affidavit provides that a man on defendant's property had an existing warrant, possessed a pill container with pseudoephedrine prescribed for a female, responded evasively and furtively to police questions, propane tanks on back porch, strong smell of propane establish probable cause to search property; II.

State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609 (2007)

Officer calls magistrate with telephonic warrant, CrR 2.3(c), reads affidavit which states that confidential informant observed drugs in motel room, informs magistrate that informant provided a written statement, was familiar with drugs based on personal experience, known to officer for 8 years, no criminal history, recording fails, magistrate and officer testify at suppression hearing, warrant calls for search of all persons present; held: because both officer and magistrate testified that officer read affidavit to magistrate, reconstructed record was adequate, distinguishing State v. Smith, 87 Wn.App. 254 (1997), State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991); although search of all persons present was overbroad, State v. Carter, 79 Wn.App. 154, 158 (1995), that portion of warrant is severable, State v. Halverson, 21 Wn.App. 35, 37 (1978); III.

State v. Grenning, 142 Wn.App. 518, 530-35 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 47 (2010)

Police seize computer pursuant to warrant, take more than ten days to search hard drive and find evidence; held: 10-day limit of CrR 2.3(c) does not limit police to only ten days viewing the information on the computer where probable cause does not lapse, delay is reasonable, no prejudice, no bad faith; II.

State v. McKague, 143 Wn.App. 531 (2008)

Police have a DOC warrant to arrest Jay McKague, warrant cites Jay's address, police go to a different address where they had arrested Jay before, are told Jay is not there but that Ken McKague may be in an out-building, police enter out-building, find drugs; held: to search for a probationer, police may enter probationer's home as long as the search was reasonable and police had specific and articulable facts which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, support that the searched residence was the probationers, State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390 (2007), but see: State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009), State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018); here, evidence was not sufficient to persuade a rational person that probationer's last known address was the one searched; II.

State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008)

Police are about to serve a search warrant on a house, car drives into driveway, two men approach door, two women remain in car, police order women out at gunpoint, "women smelled of methamphetamine," retrieve defendant's purse from car, find drugs; held: while an occupant may be detained during execution of a residential search warrant, those merely present may not be detained or frisked absent independent factors, other than arrival at the scene, tying the person to the illegal activities or raising a reasonable suspicion that the person is armed and dangerous, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289, 300-04 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993), overruling State v. Howard, 7 Wn.App. 668 (1972); III.

Herring v. United States, 172 L.Ed.2d 496 (2009)

Police serve arrest warrant, search, find drugs, later discover warrant had been recalled but it was not entered by police into database; held: exclusionary rule does not apply where police mistakes leading to an unlawful search are the result of isolated negligence attenuated from the search, far removed from the deterrent impact of the exclusionary rule, Arizona v.

Evans, 131 L.Ed.2d 34 (1995), United States v. Leon, 82 L.Ed.2d 677 (1984), but see: State v. Trinidad, 23 Wn.App. 418 (1979); 5-4.

State v. Neth, 165 Wn.2d 177 (2008)

Defendant is stopped for infraction, has no identification, has clear plastic bags, admits he has more than $2500 in car, police bring drug dog which reacts positively, impound car, obtain warrant, at suppression hearing trial court disregards dog evidence as affidavit did not establish reliability, drugs found; held: without the dog evidence, while the evidence is suspicious, it does not rise to probable cause, c.f.: State v. Denham, 197 Wn.2d 759 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 727-31 (2009)

Warrant is not stale where five months lapse between police discovery of child porn and issuance of the warrant where affidavit states that in affiant's experience collectors of child porn retain it, distinguishing child pornography from drugs; I.

State v. Collins, 152 Wn.App. 429, 438-42 (2009)

A warrant for defendant to provide a voice exemplar for purposes of identification is permissible, United States v. Dionisio, 35 L.Ed.2d 67 (1973); where defendant refuses to provide the exemplar in the face of a court order, that refusal may be admitted as evidence of consciousness of guilt; I.

State v. Fry, 168 Wn.2d 1 (2010)

Police smell marijuana at residence, defendant hands deputies medical marijuana authorization, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: medical use certificate cannot negate probable cause to search, McBride v. Walla Walla County, 95 Wn.App. 33, 40 (1999), State v. Ellis, 178 Wn.App. 801 (2014), State v. Reis, 180 Wn.App. 438 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 197 (2015), State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625 (2014); III.

State v. Lyons, 160 Wn.App. 100 (2011)

Affidavit: "[w]ithin the last 48 hours a reliable...source...contacted...Detectives and stated he/she observed narcotics" at a house, Superior Court reverses, finding that affidavit is ambiguous as to whether informant saw narcotics within 48 hours or reported what he saw to the police within 48 hours; held: hypertechnical analysis of an affidavit for search warrant that does not give great weight and deference to magistrate is improper, State v. Walcott, 72 Wn.2d 959, 962 (1967), United States v. Ventresca, 380 U.S. 102, 109, 13 L.Ed.2d 684 (1965); affidavit should be "seen and weighed not in terms of library analysis by scholars, but as understood by those versed in the field of law enforcement," United States v. Cortez, 449 U.S. 411, 418, 66 L.Ed.2d 621 (1981); 2-1, III.

State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 201-03 (2011), aff'd, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012)

Affidavit states that anonymous informant said defendant admitted rapes and robberies and provided an address, defendant resembled sketch of suspect and that defendant was associated with a "Samoan" male, police verify home address and that defendant is a suspect described as and "Asian/Pacific Islander;" held: veracity prong can be corroborated by independent police investigation, State v. Vickers, 148 Wn.2d 91, 112 (2002), which here is sufficient to establish probable cause; II.

State v. Lyons, 174 Wn.2d 354 (2012)

Affidavit: "[w]ithin the last 48 hours a reliable...source...contacted...Detectives and stated he/she observed narcotics" at a house, trial court suppresses, finding that affidavit is ambiguous as to whether informant saw narcotics within 48 hours or reported what he saw to the police within 48 hours; held: because affidavit for warrant did not relate when CI observed the drugs, it did not provide sufficient support for magistrate's finding of timely probable cause, reversing State v. Lyons, 160 Wn.App. 110 (2011); overrules, in part, State v. Partin, 88 Wn.2d 899 (1977); 9-0.

State v. Lohr, 164 Wn.App. 414 (2011)

Police serve search warrant on residence, tell defendant-visitor she is free to leave, defendant requests her purse, police search purse, find drugs; held: police serving a warrant may search the personal effects of the owner and may detain others present, but they may not conduct a personal search of other individuals found on the premises or property that is "readily recognizable" as belonging to a visitor, State v. Hill, 123 Wn.2d 641 (1994), State v. Worth, 37 Wn.App. 889 (1984); here, although the purse was some feet from defendant, it was with her clothing and was clearly associated with her, thus search was improper; II.

State v. Campbell, 166 Wn.App. 464 (2011)

Police stop a vehicle, remove occupants, obtain search warrant to search the vehicle, defendant-passenger asks for her purse from the vehicle, police refuse, search vehicle, find drugs in purse; held: warrant for search of entire vehicle includes search of purse (parties do not dispute validity of warrant), distinguishing State v. Worth, 37 Wn.App. 889, 893-94 (1984); III.

State v. Temple, 170 Wn.App. 156 (2012)

Error in caption describing a non-existent court does not invalidate a warrant where it is signed by a judge authorized to issue the warrant, at 160-61; failure to file a warrant and warrant return does not invalidate the warrant, at 161-62, State v. Parker, 28 Wn.App. 425, 426-27 (1981), cf.: State v. Linder, 190 Wn.App. 638 (2015); I.

Bailey v. United States, 568 U.S. 186, 185 L.Ed.2d 19 (2013)

Police, about to serve a search warrant, observe defendant, meeting description of suspect, leave residence to be searched, follow him for a mile, detain him, patdown, find evidence; held: while police may detain individuals incident to a search warrant, Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S. 692, 69 l340 (1981), once an individual has left the immediate vicinity of premises to be searched, detention must be justified by some other rationale; 6-3.

State v. Clark, 178 Wn.2d 19 (2013)

Absent federal pre-emption or a tribe's regulation of the manner in which state agents could execute search warrants on an Indian reservation, a state court may issue a search warrant and state agents can execute the warrant on a reservation, Nevada v. Hicks, 533 U.S. 353, 150 L.Ed.2d 398 (2001); affirms State v. Clark, 167 Wn.App. 667 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Ollivier, 161 Wn.App. 307 (2011), 178 Wn.2d 813 (2013)

Named informant, in exchange for leniency, tells police that he observed child pornography on defendant's computer, search warrant issued; held: where information is exchanged for a promise of leniency, reliability prong is established, State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991), State v. Bean, 89 Wn.2d 467, 469-71 (1978), citizen informants are presumptively reliable, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64, 73 (2004), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015), cf.: State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); informer's observations satisfies basis of knowledge prong, State v. Wolken, 103 Wn.App. 823, 827 (1985); fact that informant "was under psychiatric care" does not rebut credibility; warrant that specifies computers is sufficiently particular to justify seizing computers, search of computer system is sufficiently particular where warrant cites the statute defendant is accused of violating, see: State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22, 28 (1993), State v. Wible, 113 Wn.App. 18 (2002), State v. Scherf 192 Wn.2d (2018); failure to show warrant to defendant before search as required by CrR 2.3(d) does not invalidate the warrant, State v. Aase, 121 Wn.App. 558, 567 (2004), see: United States v. Banks, 540 U.S. 31, 157 L.Ed.2d 243 (2003), see also: Groh v. Ramirez, 540 U.S. 551, 157 L.Ed.2d 1068 (2004), cf.: State v. Linder, 190 Wn.App. 638 (2015), rule does not require that copy of warrant must be provided before the search is begun; 5-4.

State v. Higgs, 177 Wn.App. 414 (2013)

Informant tells police she observed defendant smoke meth in his home and that she recognized it because she had smoked before, police obtain warrant authorizing search for meth, items used for "distribution and packaging and for records related to a 'distribution operation,'" police seize meth residue, amphetamine pills, rental agreement for the house, defendant's driver's license and another DOL document; held: probable cause existed to seize meth and packaging, cf.: State v. Davis, 79 Wn.App. 591, 595-96 (1995), warrant did not refer to items of dominion and control over premises rather authorized seizure of items evidencing dominion and control over assets, not supported by probable cause as informant did not report distribution, only possession and use; severability doctrine requirements that "the part of the warrant that includes particularly described items supported by probable cause must be significant when compared to the warrant as a whole," State v. Maddox, 116 Wn.App. 796, (2003), aff'd, 152 Wn.2d 499 (2004), was met as the significant part of the warrant was a search for meth; severability requirement that police seized disputed items while executing the valid part of the warrant that was supported by probable cause and described with particularity, Maddox, supra., at 807-08, did not support seizure of the documents, as they were not contraband, State v. Temple, 170 Wn.App. 156, 164 (2012), and should have been suppressed; II.

State v. Powell, 181 Wn.App. 716 (2014)

Trial court need not enter written CrR 3.6 findings if there is no evidentiary hearing; II.

State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625, 632-34 (2014)

Helicopter flyover reveals growing marijuana in greenhouse, police obtain warrant for greenhouse, house and shed; held: close proximity of greenhouses to home and shed, single entrance for both house and greenhouses provide probable cause to believe that house and shed were related to the marijuana growing, State v. Constantine, 182 Wn.App. 635, 645-48 (2014), distinguishing State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999); III.

State v. Figeroa Martines*,* 184 Wn.2d 83 (2015)

A search warrant authorizing taking a blood sample for DUI is sufficient to authorize the testing of that sample, cf.: State v. Fairley, 12 Wn.App.2d 315 (2020); reverses State v. Figeroa Martines, 182 Wn.App. 519 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Brock*,* 184 Wn.2d 148 (2015)

Defendant, wearing backpack, is detained, told to remove backpack, lawfully frisked, told to accompany officer to patrol car, officer carries backpack, arrests defendant, searches backpack, finds drugs; held: when an officer removes an item from an arrestee's person during a Terry stop which ripens into an arrest, passage of time does not negate a lawful search of the item incident to arrest, State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. MacDicken, 179 Wn.2d 936 (2014), State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675 (1992); see: State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019); reverses State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Besola*,* 184 Wn.2d 605 (2015)

Search warrant for child pornography that authorizes seizure of "[a]ny and all printed pornographic materials [and] [a]ny photographs, but particularly of minors" is overbroad as it authorizes seizure of legal items including adult pornography, State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538 (1992), cf.: State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 65-67 (2018), State v. Vance, 9 Wn.App.2d 357 (2019); citation at top of warrant to child pornography statute does not narrow the warrant, State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11, 25-27 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Dunn*,* 186 Wn.App. 889 (2015)

While probable cause to believe a person has committed a crime does not necessarily give rise to probable cause to search his or her home, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1989), it may be proper to infer that stolen property is at the person's residence if the property is bulky (here an ATV) and perpetrator had an opportunity to return home before apprehension by the police, State v. McReynolds, 194 Wn.App. 560, 569-70 (2000); III.

State v. Peppin*,* 186 Wn.App. 901 (2015)

Police remotely access, without a warrant, child pornography that defendant shared via peer to peer software, obtain warrant to search defendant's computer; held: images files shared with the public do not create a constitutionally protected privacy right; III.

State v. Linder*,* 190 Wn.App. 638 (2015)

Police officer obtains a warrant and, working alone, opens container and finds drugs; held: CrR 2.3(d) requires that service of warrant be in presence of the person from whom the property was taken or in the presence of at least one person other than the officer, there being no other remedy for violation of the rule other than suppression, suppression is the remedy, distinguishing State v. Bowman, 8 Wn.App. 148 (1972), State v. Smith, 15 Wn.App. 716 (1976), State v. Wraspir, 20 Wn.App. 626 (1978), State v. Parker, 28 Wn.App. 425, 426 (1981), State v.

Kern, 81 Wn.App. 308 (1996), State v. Aase, 121 Wn.App. 558 (2004), State v. Temple, 179 Wn.App. 156 (2012); III.

State v. Reeder, 184 Wn.2d 805, 813-25 (2015)

Special Inquiry Judge, ch. 10.27, RCW, may issue a subpoena duces tecum for bank records based upon a reason to suspect crime or corruption, less than probable cause; affirms State v. Reeder, 181 Wn.App. 897 (2014); 7-2.

State v. Keodara, 191 Wn.App. 305 (2015)

Police arrest defendant, impound car, obtain warrant for car, find drugs and cell phone, obtain second warrant to search cell phone, affidavit asserts that detective is a gang expert, common for gang members to take pictures with firearms, often text each other about drugs, magistrate authorizes search of everything on the phone; held: general statements about what gang members do is not sufficient to establish probable cause, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1989), warrant was overbroad and failed to satisfy particularity requirement, State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993), State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018), cf.: State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018); I.

In re Search Warrant, 194 Wn.App. 365 (2016)

Superior Court has jurisdiction to hear a motion for return of property, CrR 2.3, seized pursuant to a municipal court search warrant; I.

State v. Sleater, 194 Wn.App. 470, 474 (2016)

Defendant is ordered to pay LFOs, enters "pay or appear" program requiring monthly payments or appear and schedule a hearing to explain why she could not pay, defendant misses payment, fails to schedule hearing, warrant is issued, upon arrest police find drugs; held: court cannot place onus on defendant to schedule her own hearing, State v. Klinker, 85 Wn.2d 509 (1975), State v. Fisher, 145 Wn.2d 209 (2001), State v. Nason, 168 Wn.2d 936 (2010), summons or prior court order requiring defendant to attend a specific hearing before a warrant can issue is necessary, thus drugs must be suppressed; III.

State v. Blizzard, 195 Wn.App. 717, 729-32 (2016)

Affidavit: Mendez confesses to conspiracy to murder, admits knowing defendant, her phone records show texts with defendant on day of murder, bad blood between defendant and victim, defendant is beneficiary of life insurance on victim; held: reasonable to infer that evidence about the murder would be found on defendant's cell phone; III.

State v. Betancourth, 190 Wn.2d 357, 413 P.3d 566 (2018)

District court issues search warrant to Verizon for cell phone records, Verizon provides records to police, prosecutor realizes that only Superior Court can issue warrants for out of state records, RCW 10.96.060 (2008), obtains same warrant from Superior Court judge referencing the fact that District Court had previously issued the warrant, Verizon declines to re-supply the same records as they had already provided them; held: the first unlawful search did not contribute to the issuance of the lawful warrant, nothing in the substance of the evidence seized contributed to the issuance of the second warrant, the law does not require the police to return the evidence and then re-seize it, thus independent source doctrine applies and the evidence is admissible, State v. Miles,x 159 Wn.App. 282, 286-87 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 65-67 (2018)

Warrant authorizing seizure of photographs of minors engaged in "sexually explicit conduct as defined in RCW 9.68A.011(3)" is not overbroad, State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538 (1992), State v. Vance, 9 Wn.App.2d 357 (2019), cf.: State v. Besola, 184 Wn.2d 605 (2015); warrant is not overbroad merely because it authorizes seizure of "lawful items" as they may be relevant to a crime; affidavit in support of warrant does not disclose that another state chose not to indict defendant on same material, that child victim had denied having sex with defendant before admitting it does not invalidate warrant as detective did not deliberately or recklessly omit it, at 69-71, State v. Garrison, 118 Wn.2d 870 (1992), Franks v. Delaware, 57 L.Ed.2d 667 (1978); I.

State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018)

Affidavit establishes probable cause to search cell phone for depictions of exploitation of a minor, warrant authorizes search of phone for "images, video, documents, text messages, contacts, audio recordings, call logs, calendars, note, tasks, data/internet usage" and authorize a "physical dump" of the memory, police find depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, defendant is so charged; held: warrant authorized search of cell phone without limitation, was overbroad and did not meet particularity requirement of Fourth Amendment, State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538, 547 (1992), State v. Heutink, 12 Wn.App.2d 336 (2020), cf.: State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668 (1997), warrant did not set out objective standards by which executing officers could differentiate items subject to seizure from those which are not, State v. Keodara, 191 Wn.App. 305 (2015), because warrant violated particularity requirement all evidence must be suppressed, see: Carpenter v. United States, 585 U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2206, 201 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018);. I.

State v. Witkowski, 3 Wn.App.2d 318 (2018)

Police serve search warrant for stolen property in a residence, observe locked gun safe, knowing defendant is a felon obtain addendum authorizing search for firearms although affidavit and addendum warrant do not specifically reference locked safe, seize guns; held: warrant authorizing search of premises for firearms includes locked gun safe, State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 886-87 (1998), under Fourth Amendment and state constitution, failure to specifically include reference to locked safe does not exclude search of the safe by "negative implication;" II.

State v. Friedrich, 4 Wn.App.2d 945 (2018)

Microsoft, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 2258A which requires computer companies to report child pornography, informs police that it has found depictions that it became aware of, police obtain warrant, seize computers; held: the fact that the depictions were found when Microsoft "became aware" of it rather than when it was uploaded did not make the warrant stale as detective, in affidavit, pointed out that items remain on hard disks even after deletion; while the police may have seized more than authorized by the warrant, the severability doctrine prevails as the only evidence introduced was within the scope of probable cause; III.

State v. Vance, 9 Wn.App.2d 357 (2019)

Depictions warrant authorizing search for "evidence of the crime(s) of: RCW 9.68.050 Dealing in depictions of a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct and RCW 9.68A.070 Possession of depictions of a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct" which authorizes a search for computers or various devices "capable of being used to commit or further the crimes outlined above, or to create, access, or store the types of evidence, contraband, fruits, or instrumentalities of such crimes," is sufficiently particular, State v. Martinez, 2 Wash. App. 2d 55 (2018), distinguishing State v. Perrone, 119 Wn.2d 538, 545 (1992), State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018), rev'd on other grounds,, 193 Wn.2d 271 (2019), State v. Besola, 184 Wn.2d 605 (2015); II.

State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019)

Warrant authorizes search for digging equipment and biological trace evidence, police serving warrant dig, find a body, defense argues search exceeded scope; held: finding more evidence than expected does not exceed the scope of a warrant; because police were authorized to seize digging equipment it was proper to search areas that appeared to have been dug; I.

State v. Fairley, 12 Wn.App.2d 315 (2020)

Police obtain warrant authorizing search of residence and seizure of cell phone, pursuant to warrant police search cell phone, seize text messages that are offered at trial; held: a cell phone warrant must specify the types of data to be seized to distinguish between material for which there is probable cause from information that should remain private, and might limit search to specific areas of the phone, e.g., text messages between target and victim, time frame and set out a protocol to minimize intrusion, Riley v. California, 573 U.S. 373, 385-86, 134 S. Ct. 2473, 189 L. Ed. 2d 430 (2014), see: State v. McKee, 3 Wn.App.2d 11 (2018), distinguishing State v. Figeroa Martines, 184 Wash.2d 83, 355 P.3d 1111 (2015); 2-1, III.

State v. Denham, 197 Wn.2d 759 (2021)

Affidavit asserts that burglary of jewelry store occurred, defendant had pawned jewelry stolen at burglary, probation officer informed police of defendant's phone number, that a purchaser of jewelry reached defendant at the phone number, boilerplate language in affidavit describing role of cell phones, warrant authorizes seizure of subscriber information, billing records, call records, images over five months, state concedes at suppression hearing that some of it was overbroad both in time and scope; held: affidavit is sufficient to support reasonable grounds to believe that the phone belonged to defendant based on his use of the phone with his probation officer, that defendant had the phone at the time of the burglary, used it to arrange sale of diamond, all sufficient to raise a reasonable inference that evidence of burglary would be found in cell site location information, State v. Neth, 165 Wn.2d 177 (2008), State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), no overbreadth challenge was made on appeal; 5-4.

State v. Gudgell, 20 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021)

In unlawful fishing case district court issues search warrant for names of passengers so that investigators can interview them to determine if there is evidence to charge captains; held: records of who was on the fishing trips is evidence of the crime justifying issuance of the warrant; evidence of a crime is broader than evidence proving a crime was committed, it also includes evidence relating to or connected with or concerning a crime, State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350, 364 (2018); II.

Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022)

Police, following K-9 hit, obtain search warrant for defendant's car, find drugs, defense maintains police did not have probable cause that a crime was committed as possession of drugs is not a crime, State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021); held: because police could not have perceived that Supreme Court would hold that statute prohibiting possession of drugs is unconstitutional probable cause existed to justify the warrant; III.

State v. Moses, 22 Wn.App.2d 550 (2022)

Officer observes drug paraphernalia in car, K-9 dog alerts to drugs, obtains search warrant for VUCSA possession and paraphernalia, seizes drugs, pipe and firearm, subsequently Supreme Court invalidates VUCSA possession, State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021), trial court suppresses and dismisses; held: officer relied upon an apparently valid statute in obtaining the warrant, Michigan v. DeFillippo, 443 U.S. 31, 37 99 S.Ct. 2627, 61 L.Ed.2d 343 (1979), State v. Potter, 156 Wn.2d 835 (2006), State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311 (2006), VUCSA statute was not flagrantly unconstitutional, State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92, 103 (1982), thus warrant was valid; that portion of the warrant seeking drug paraphernalia was enough to validate the search; I.

State v. Chambers, 23 Wn.App.2d 917 (2022)

Washington sheriff obtains and serves search warrant seeking evidence of child pornography accompanied by an Idaho detective who investigated the case and who, per the Washington sheriff, is an expert in the field; held: Washington police are authorized to use an out-of-state officer in a search where the Idaho officer was not arresting the suspect or otherwise enforcing the law but assisted in forensic examination of the evidence, cf.: State v. Bartholomew, 56 Wn.App. 617 (1990), see: Wilson v. Layne, 526 U.S. 603, 614, 119 S. Ct. 1692, 143 L. Ed. 2d 818 (1999); III.

SEARCH
Warrantless

United States v. Allard, 634 F.2d 1182 (9th Cir. 1980)

Police "secure" defendant's hotel room and curtail defendant's movement following which they obtain valid warrant; held: unlawfully securing room taints subsequent search in spite of warrant, thus evidence suppressed; accord: United States v. Griffin, 502 F.2d 959 (6th Cir. 1974).

State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981)

Police arrest juvenile for traffic violations, pat him down, decide to release him to parents, then do a full search discovering cocaine; held: once decision was made to release defendant, any further intrusion on his privacy was unreasonable, State v. McKennon, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), cf.: State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 581 (1990), State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002).

State v. Jordan, 30 Wn.App. 335 (1981)

Aguilar-Spinelli test can apply to a warrantless search; police investigation can supply corroboration to informant's tip.

State v. Christian, 95 Wn.2d 655 (1981)

Tenant partially vacates apartment at end of rental period telling landlord he was vacating; landlord enters, finds drugs in apartment, calls police who seize drugs; held: defendant had no reasonable expectation of privacy, cf.: State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28 (1994), State v. Davis, 86 Wn.App. 414 (1997).

State v. Grinier, 34 Wn.App. 164 (1983)

Informants advise police that a shipment of drugs will arrive at a residence; police observe the suspected delivery truck arrive at residence, see luggage moved into residence, then see luggage moved from residence to defendant's vehicle, police stop vehicle, find drugs in luggage; held: police had no evidence to establish that drugs were in luggage, no exigent circumstances applied; where the suspected locus of contraband is luggage being transported at the time of the stop, and not the car in which it is being carried, the relationship between the car and the luggage is coincidental, and the automobile exception does not apply; 2-1; II.

State v. Garcia, 35 Wn.App. 174 (1983)

Defendant is lawfully arrested, taken to station; before it was decided whether or not to place defendant in jail, he was booked and, in searching his wallet, police seize razor and drugs; held: search was pursuant to lawful arrest, it was reasonable to search his wallet as an inventory search, distinguishing State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981), wherein police had already decided to release defendant, whereas here that decision had not been made, State v. McKennon, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998); III.

State v. Childress, 35 Wn.App. 314 (1983)

California police unlawfully search defendant's home, seize nude photograph of minor girl; photograph delivered to Everett police, who find girl's parents who ask girl if she has any secrets, she admits to sex with defendant; defense moves to suppress witness's testimony as fruit of unlawful search; held: testimony was sufficiently attenuated from search to dissipate taint, United States v. Ceccolini, 55 L.Ed.2d 268 (1978); I.

State v. Keller, 35 Wn.App. 455 (1983)

Defendant is sentenced to probation, a condition being that he submit to searches by probation officer; defendant appeals, is ordered to be supervised by probation pending appeal; P.O. and police search residence without warrant, seize drugs; held: warrantless searches of probationers are permitted where reasonable, Hocker v. Woody, 95 Wn.2d 822, 926 (1981), State v. Cochran, 27 Wn.App. 664, 666 (1980), State v. Simms, 10 Wn.App. 75, 85 (1973), United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001), cf.: Griffin v. Wisconsin, 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987), see: State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018), but here defendant was released pending appeal without an explicit condition of release permitting searches, thus suppressed; III.

Jacobsen v. Seattle, 98 Wn.2d 668 (1983)

Intensive patdown searches by police of patrons attending rock concerts are unconstitutional; 9-0.

United States v. Villamonte-Marquez, 77 L.Ed.2d 22 (1983)

Pursuant to 19 USC § 1581(a), customs officials may validly board any vessel at any place in the United States and examine documents without any suspicion of wrongdoing where the vessel is located in waters providing ready access to the open sea; 6-3.

Illinois v. Lafayette, 77 L.Ed.2d 65 (1983)

Police may search any container or article in possession of an arrestee without a warrant as inventory search "in accordance with established inventory procedures," State v. Dunham, 194 Wn.App. 744 (2016); 9-0.

United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983)

Airline passenger's behavior arouses suspicion of police, who discover that tags on luggage do not match, addresses are false; police seize bags, hold for 90 minutes until dog sniffs outside of luggage, reacts positively for narcotics, police obtain warrant, find drugs; held: canine sniff is not a search, Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005), see: Florida v. Harris, 568 U.S. 237, 185 L.Ed.2d 61 (2013), but see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L. Ed. 2d 492 (2015); where police have reasonable belief luggage contains drugs, they may detain luggage temporarily to investigate and permit dog to sniff outside; here, 90 minute detention exceeded permissible scope, exacerbated by fact that police lied about where luggage was to be taken; 9-0.

Illinois v. Andreas, 77 L.Ed.2d 1003 (1983)

Customs officers lawfully open a container, find drugs, call DEA agent, who seals package and delivers it to defendant's home; defendant accepts delivery, takes container inside for 30-45 minutes; when defendant leaves home with container, he is arrested and container is re-opened without a warrant; held: act of re-sealing lawfully searched container does not restore privacy rights, thus no search occurred when it was re-opened; gap in surveillance such that police are not 100% sure that contents were not removed is insufficient to recreate privacy interest; 6-3.

State v. Drumhiller, 36 Wn.App. 592 (1984)

Police observe drug activity through window of house, arrest occupants, search house, seize drugs; held: police can seize evidence of a crime committed in officer's presence in open view without warrant, State v. Mueller, 15 Wn.App. 667 (1976), State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996); III.

State v. Taplin, 36 Wn.App. 664 (1984)

Police, without warrant but with probable cause, force defendant to spit out balloons full of heroin; held: possibility that swallowed balloons would not pass through digestive tract establish exigent circumstance due to possible destruction of evidence; I.

State v. McAlpin, 36 Wn.App. 707 (1984)

Suspect, after traffic accident, takes a satchel and runs to a restaurant, police arrive, leave with suspect, who appeared high, remind him of satchel, suspect rushes for it, struggles with police, is handcuffed, patrons of restaurant tell police suspect had been waving gun around, police open satchel, find drugs, gun; held: emergency search for the gun which could have fallen into "untrained or malicious hands" establishes exigency for warrantless search, State v. Lowen, 97 Wn.2d 562, 568 (1982); I.

State v. Welker, 37 Wn.App. 628 (1984)

Rape victim reports she scratched suspect's face, police enter suspect's home without warrant or consent, arrest suspect; held: exigent circumstance to avoid destruction of evidence, State v. Counts, 99 Wn.2d 54 (1983), excuses nonconsensual entry into home to arrest; containing premises to obtain warrant would take too long, defendant could destroy trace evidence, United States v. Minick, 455 A.2d 874 (D.C. 1983); cf.: State v. Muir, 67 Wn.App. 149 (1992); II.

State v. Reid, 38 Wn.App. 203 (1984)

Police arrest homicide suspect outside his home and knowing co-suspect is at large and may be in suspect's home, enter without warrant, arrest co-defendant and seize evidence; held: concern for safety by police plus lack of time to obtain telephonic warrant justify exigency of warrantless arrest in home; 2-1, I.

State v. Arnett, 38 Wn.App. 527 (1984)

Police, looking for missing child, enter suspect's home with consent, hear scraping sound and walk through house; held: potential life-threatening danger to victim is exigent circumstance justifying warrantless "walk-through" search, State v. Welker, 37 Wn.App. 628 (1984); II.

State v. Dresker, 39 Wn.App. 136 (1984)

Police, believing some minors may be drinking at a party, enter residence and find drugs; held: mere possibility of escape is not sufficient exigent circumstance to enter residence without warrant; police must observe specific person commit specific misdemeanor to justify a warrantless arrest for a misdemeanor being committed in the presence of the officer, RCW 10.31.100, see: State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013); III.

Michigan v. Clifford, 78 L.Ed.2d 477 (1984)

After residential fire is extinguished, arson investigators enter house, seize evidence; held: where reasonable expectations of privacy remain in fire-damaged premises, administrative searches into the cause or origin of fire are subject to the warrant requirement; 5-4.

United States v. Jacobsen, 80 L.Ed.2d 85 (1984)

Private carrier employees examine damaged box, observe white powder, return same to box, call DEA; DEA removes powder, field tests a trace, obtain warrant to search place to which package was addressed; held: because DEA already knew contents were a white powder, reopening box and inspecting contents did not invade any legitimate privacy interest; field test which consumed trace of the powder was reasonable invasion of defendant's privacy interest; 7-2.

Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984)

Police enter suspect's home without warrant and arrest for DUI, claiming hot pursuit; held: warrantless home arrest for minor offense is not justified by hot-pursuit doctrine where there was no continuous pursuit, no threat to public safety, cf.: State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991), State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), Stanton v. Sims, 571 U.S. 3, 187 L.Ed.2d 341 (2013); 7-2.

Nix v. Williams, 81 L.Ed.2d 377 (1984)

Where police unlawfully obtain evidence as a result of an unlawfully obtained confession, the evidence is admissible if court determines by preponderance that it inevitably would have been discovered by lawful means, State v. Richman, 85 Wn.App. 568 (1997), see: State v. Reyes, 98 Wn.App. 925 (2000), State v. Avila-Avina,99 Wn.App. 9 (2000); state need not prove the absence of bad faith; 7-2.

Hudson v. Palmer, 82 L.Ed.2d 393 (1984)

Prison inmates have no Fourth Amendment protection against unreasonable search in their individual cells, Pers. Restraint of Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 909 (1998), see also: State v. Rainford, 86 Wn.App. 431 (1997); 5-4.

United States v. Karo, 82 L.Ed.2d 530 (1984)

Monitoring of a beeper in a private residence not open to visual surveillance violates Fourth Amendment rights of those who have a justifiable interest in the privacy of the residence, distinguishing United States v. Knotts, 75 L.Ed.2d 55 (1983); placing beeper in a closed container and then transferring container to suspect is neither a search nor a seizure; 6-3.

Segura v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 599 (1984)

Police, with probable cause to search but without warrant, arrest defendants just outside their apartment, enter and secure apartment, observing drug accouterments, obtain search warrant 19 hours later; held: while initial seizure of the apartment was unlawful, the information on which the warrant was secured came from sources unconnected with the initial entry, thus the ultimate seizure of the evidence was so attenuated as to dissipate the taint; see: State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993), cf.: Illinois v. McArthur, 148 L.Ed.2d 838 (2001); 5-4.

Thompson v. Louisiana, 83 L.Ed.2d 246 (1984)

No "murder scene exception" to the warrant requirement, Mincey v. Arizona, 57 L.Ed.2d 290 (1978); 9-0.

State v. Crandall, 39 Wn.App. 849 (1985)

A police officer's warrantless trespass on unoccupied undeveloped land which is not posted, frequented by hunters, not part of the curtilage, part of which is fenced, does not offend the Fourth Amendment or Article I, § 7 as there is no privacy interest in open fields; 2-1; III.

State v. Komoto, 40 Wn.App. 200 (1985)

Police, having probable case to believe suspect was involved in hit and run and had been drinking, and believing that victim was dying, arrest defendant in his home without a warrant and take blood sample; held: "natural and inexorable dissipation" of blood alcohol, plus gravity of underlying offense (negligent homicide) are sufficient exigencies to permit warrantless arrest in home, distinguishing Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984); need for immediate blood sample justified proceeding without telephonic warrant, as any delay creates risk that suspect would consume additional intoxicants; I.

State v. Williamson, 42 Wn.App. 208 (1985)

Undercover officers in civilian attire are invited into home where they arrest defendant without warrant; held: where invited, undercover police may effectuate a warrantless arrest in home, distinguishing Payton v. N.Y., 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980); knowing and voluntary waiver analysis does not apply to Fourth Amendment issues, Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973); II.

State v. Ng, 104 Wn.2d 763 (1985)

Police enter a residence with consent, post officer in front of a bedroom door to secure it while other officers obtain a warrant to search the bedroom; held: police needed only probable cause to "impound" the bedroom while a warrant was being secured; because the warrant was obtained expeditiously, the seizure was reasonable; Segura v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 599 (1984), State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993), Illinois v. McArthur, 148 L.Ed.2d 838 (2001); 9-0.

New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985)

Fourth Amendment applies to searches by public school authorities as representatives of the state; school officials may search a student on reasonable suspicion, short of probable cause, without a warrant, State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49 (2010), see also: Safford U. Sch. Dist. v. Redding, 174 L.Ed.2d 354 (2009), cf.: State v. Meneese, 174 Wn.2d 937 (2012), State v. A.S., 6 Wn.App.2d 264 (2018); 7.2.

Hayes v. Florida, 84 L.Ed.2d 705 (1985)

Absent probable cause police may not take a suspect to the station for fingerprinting; dicta that an investigative detention for fingerprinting in the field is lawful; 8-0 (holding), 6-2 (dicta).

United States v. Montoya de Hernandez, 473 U.S. 531, 87 L.Ed.2d 381 (1985)

Defendant, upon arrival at airport from Columbia, is strip searched and found to have "firm fullness" in abdomen, is detained for 24 hours for bowel movement; ultimately magistrate issues order for rectal exam, drugs found; held: detention of traveler at border, beyond routine customs inspection, is justified if customs agents, considering all of the facts of traveler and her trip, reasonably suspect traveler is smuggling contraband in her alimentary canal; 7-2.

California v. Ciraolo, 90 L.Ed.2d 210 (1986)

Police fly in airplane over defendant's fenced backyard, observe marijuana growing from 1000 feet with naked eye, obtain warrant; held: mere fact that individual has taken measures to restrict some views of his activities by building a fence does not preclude police observation from a public vantage point where he has a right to be and which renders activities clearly visible, see also: State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625 (2014); 5-4.

Dow Chemical Co. v. United States, 90 L.Ed.2d 226 (1986)

Aerial photography of a manufacturing plant by EPA does not require warrant, as open areas of an industrial plant complex are not analogous to curtilage of a dwelling, but are closer to an open field; 5-4.

State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398 (1986)

Police seize and search possessions hidden in woods, not on defendant's property; held: no reasonable expectation of privacy, as defendant could not have expected to keep anybody who discovered the items from looking at them; 9-0.

State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986)

Exigent circumstances for warrantless arrest in home, distinguishing Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 573 (1980); accord: State v. McIntyre, 39 Wn.App. 1 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.2d 898 (1986)

United States Customs Officer's search of defendant's vehicle without a warrant is not unlawful under state constitution as long as it complied with federal law on border searches; 9-0.

State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986)

Long distance telephone records may only be obtained by police through a search warrant or subpoena, see also: State v. Miles, 160 Wn.2d 236 (2007); a pen register may only be placed on a telephone line pursuant to a search warrant or court order obtained in accordance with RCW 9.73; 9-0.

State v. Carey, 42 Wn.App. 840 (1986)

Right to challenge warrantless search and investigation of fire-damaged premises requires showing of objective, reasonable expectation of privacy, including whether property is defendant's home, extent of fire damage, whether defendant attempted to secure premises after fire; I.

State v. Brooks, 43 Wn.App. 560 (1986)

Search of student's school locker upheld where school official learns from informant that respondent was selling drugs from locker, informant had locker near respondent's, respondent was believed to be a drug user based on three observations by teachers, and respondent frequented a location believed to be site of drug trafficking; CONST. Art. 1, § 7 provides no more demanding a standard than Fourth Amendment,, New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985); I.

State v. Dold, 44 Wn.App. 519 (1986)

Police receive an envelope addressed to police, open envelope, find another envelope addressed to defendant marked "delivered and opened in error"; inner envelope was open, police read letter, learn that defendant had access to drugs, investigate and arrest defendant for VUCSA; held: where a private citizen, acting without governmental authority, searches property, then a subsequent warrantless search by the government that does not exceed the bounds of the prior private search does not violate the Fourth Amendment, but see: State v. Eisfeldt, 163 Wn.2d 628 (2008); burden is on the defense to establish collusion between the citizen informant and the police; I.

State v. Boyce, 44 Wn.App. 724 (1986)

Canine sniff of safe deposit box is not a search under CONST. Art. 1, § 7 where the defendant has no reasonable expectation of privacy and the sniff is minimally intrusive, State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 148-49 (2009), State v. Hartzell, 156 Wn.App. 918, 928-30 (2010), cf.: Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L. Ed. 2d 492 (2015); court declines to hold that a canine sniff is never a search, distinguishing United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983), see also: State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173, 187-8 (1994), State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998); I.

State v. Bakke, 44 Wn.App. 830 (1986)

Police respond to a burglary call, observe evidence of forced entry, occupant not present, police enter to look for suspect and safeguard residence, find drugs; held: entry into residence without a warrant to secure it following a burglary report does not violate Fourth Amendment or CONST. Art. 1, § 7 as long as the intrusion is not greater than necessary to check for intruders and safeguard property, State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409 (2001), cf.: State v. Morgavi, 58 Wn.App. 733 (1990); I.

State v. Lampman, 45 Wn.App. 228 (1986)

Exclusionary rule applies in probation revocation proceedings, CONST. Art. 1, § 7; probationer may be searched without a warrant where the police or probation officer has a well founded suspicion that a probation violation has occurred, see: United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001), State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018); flight from pursuing probation officer plus P.O.'s knowledge of defendant's drug problems equals a well founded suspicion to search; cf.: Griffin v. Wisconsin, 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987); II.

State v. Wood, 45 Wn.App. 299 (1986)

In making an arrest for a felony parole violation, police may accompany the arrestee into his residence without a warrant, distinguishing State v. Chrisman, 100 Wn.2d 814 (1984), see: State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80 (2005), Samson v. California, 165 L.Ed.2d 250 (2006); I.

Illinois v. Krull, 94 L.Ed.2d 364 (1987)

Police seize evidence during a warrantless administrative search; subsequently, the law permitting the administrative search is declared unconstitutional; held: because the police reasonably relied upon the statute, then the evidence is admissible; 5-4.

O'Connor v. Ortega, 94 L.Ed.2d 714 (1987)

Searches of government employees' workplaces by their employers are subject to limited Fourth Amendment restraints.

New York v. Burger, 96 L.Ed.2d 601 (1987)

Warrantless search of automobile junkyard pursuant to state statute authorizing inspection of pervasively regulated industries does not violate Fourth Amendment even though purpose of statute and search is to enforce penal laws, Donovan v. Dewey, 69 L.Ed.2d 262 (1981), cf.: City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000), but see: State v. Miles, 160 Wn.2d 236, 250 (2007); 6-3.

Griffin v. Wisconsin, 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987)

Where probationer, by statute, is in legal custody of the state, then probation officer may search probationer's home without warrant on "reasonable grounds," less than probable cause, United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001), but see: State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018), tip from police there "were or might be," guns in probationer's home establishes reasonable grounds; 5-4.

State v. Butterworth, 48 Wn.App. 152 (1987)

Police may not obtain telephone listing from phone company where customer has requested the number be unlisted without a warrant or other valid legal process; cf.: State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761 (1990), State v. Dice, 55 Wn.App. 489 (1989), State v. Faydo, 68 Wn.App. 621 (1993), Pers. Restraint o. Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997); I.

State v. Courcy, 48 Wn.App. 326 (1987)

Single purpose container doctrine: a container found by police during the course of a search which, by its very nature cannot support any reasonable expectation of privacy because its contents can be inferred from the outward appearance may, if properly seized, be searched without a warrant; here, a bindle of a type known to police to contain drugs, may be opened without a warrant, Arkansas v. Sanders, 61 L.Ed.2d 235 n. 13 (1979); III.

State v. Berber, 48 Wn.App. 583 (1987)

Police enter tavern restroom, observe defendant standing in partially partitioned toilet stall with hands at his chest, look over his shoulder, observe drugs; held: stall was partially opened, placement of defendant's hands were such that it was obvious he was not using the area for its customary purpose, thus no reasonable expectation of privacy; see also: State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409 (1992); 2-1, III.

State v. Petty, 48 Wn.App. 615 (1987)

Police approach residence, knock on door, when opened smell marijuana, use that observation to obtain warrant; held: no reasonable expectation of privacy in approaching residence by access route impliedly open to public irrespective of motivation of police, State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 399 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), see: State v. Graffius, 74 Wn.App. 23 (1994), State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), cf.: State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86 (2007); I.

State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 814 (1987)

Police smell marijuana smoke emanating from hotel room, enter without warrant and seize drugs; held: exigent circumstance of destruction of evidence does not apply where the crime is a misdemeanor, Welch v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984), Johnson v. United States, 92 L.Ed. 436 (1948), State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), thus evidence suppressed; RCW 10.31.100(1), permitting arrest without a warrant where police have probable cause for a marijuana offense, only applies to an arrest in a public place or an automobile, not a residence, Samson v. California, 165 L.Ed.2d 250 (2006); III.

State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33 (1988)

Where a tax appraiser enters property to revalue it, the Fourth Amendment and CONST. Art. 1, § 7 are implicated, distinguishing State v. Ludvick, 40 Wn.App. 257 (1985); however, where the appraiser is legitimately on the property, does not exceed the scope of his appraisal, and his route is a normal one, no search has occurred, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981), see: State v. Creegan, 123 Wn.App. 718 (2004); III.

State v. Patterson, 51 Wn.App. 202 (1988)

Warrantless search of a parolee's vehicle, while the parolee is in custody, by a parole officer acting in a supervisory capacity (although assisting police in their investigative capacity) is valid upon a reasonable suspicion, see: Samson v. California, 165 L.Ed.2d 250 (2006); anonymous tip verified by tentative identification by victim who said robber had a gun plus information from the owner of the lot where the vehicle was stored that there may be a gun in the car is sufficient, cf.: Florida v. J.L., 579 U.S. 266, 272, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000); III.

California v. Greenwood, 100 L.Ed.2d 30 (1988)

Garbage bags left for collection on curb outside home may be searched without a warrant under Fourth Amendment; but see: State v. Boland, 115 Wn.2d 571 (1990) for contrary state constitution analysis; 6-2.

Murray v. United States, 101 L.Ed.2d 472 (1988)

Police observe drug traffickers driving in and out of a warehouse, lawfully seize vehicles elsewhere, find drugs, enter warehouse without warrant, observe bales, leave, obtain warrant for warehouse without disclosing their entry, serve warrant, find drugs; held: because obtaining warrant was wholly independent of the unlawful entry, then evidence is admissible, Segura v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 599 (1984), State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005); 4-3.

State v. Summers, 52 Wn.App. 767 (1988)

Adult sister of juvenile respondent, acting as head of household while parent was away, consents to search of respondent's bedroom, respondent having exclusive use of that room; held: a person acting as the responsible adult has the same authority to consent as the parent would have had, had the parent been present; a parent may consent to the search of a dependent child's room irrespective of the parent's prior agreement to tolerate the child's desire for exclusive domain of his/her room; issue of whether the relationship is that of a dependent child or that of landlord-tenant is a factual question to be decided by trial court; I.

State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989)

Police, having probable cause but no warrant, approach residence, observe bong in window, knock, ask for consent to search, which is denied; police enter residence to secure home, remain for 22 hours until warrant arrives, search, find drugs; held: no exigencies for the entry existed, however the information provided in support of the warrant was independent of the entry, bong having been seen prior to entry, thus evidence admissible; III.

Seattle v. Altschuler, 53 Wn.App. 317 (1989)

Defendant is observed by police running a red light, police follow with lights on, defendant does not stop, drives into garage, officer runs into garage as door is closing, defendant is charged with resisting arrest; held: hot pursuit and fleeing suspect alone are not exigent circumstances that would justify warrantless entry of home to arrest for minor offense, State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), particularly where police had blocked defendant's vehicle in garage, Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984), Lange v California, __ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 2011, 210 L.Ed.2d 486 (2021), cf.: State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991), Stanton v. Sims, 571 U.S. 3, 187 L.Ed.2d 341 (2013), see: State v. Wolters, 133 Wn.App. 297 (2006); I.

State v. Downey, 53 Wn.App. 543 (1989)

Police smell strong ether odor coming from residence, learn it is dangerous, enter residence without warrant to ensure no one is inside, find drug lab; held: emergency justified entry as an exigent circumstance, State v. Thompson, 112 Wn.App. 787, 797-99 (2002), rev'd, on other grounds, 151 Wn.2d 793 (2004), see: State v. Muir, 67 Wn.App. 149 (1992); I.

State v. Stanphill, 53 Wn.App. 623 (1989)

Police receive information that defendant will receive a package containing drugs in the mail, notify USPS who calls police when package arrives in post office, police bring dope dog to post office, dog reacts positively to package, postal inspector holds package for three nonjudicial days until federal warrant is obtained; held: release of information by USPS does not violate privacy rights, distinguishing State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986) (pen register), State v. Butterworth, 48 Wn.App. 152 (1987) (unlisted phone number), but see: State v. Miles, 160 Wn.2d 236 (2007); delay in delivering mail was not unreasonable to obtain warrant, State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 604-7 (1996), distinguishing State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983); canine sniff did not invade reasonable expectation of privacy, State v. Hartzell, 156 Wn.App. 918, 928-30 (2010), see: State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173, 187-8 (1994), State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005), Florida v. Harris, 568 U.S. 237, 185 L.Ed.2d 61 (2013), Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L.Ed.2d 492 (2015); accord: State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 148-49 (2009); III.

Tukwila v. Nalder, 53 Wn.App. 746 (1989)

Police officer looks over locked public restroom stall, observes defendant masturbating, arrests for lewd conduct; held: sitting in closed restroom stall provides high expectation of privacy, irrespective of height of the stall door; officer looking over the door was impermissibly intrusive, thus observations suppressed, distinguishing State v. Berber, 48 Wn.App. 583 (1987); see also: State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409 (1992); but see: State v. White, 129 Wn.2d 105 (1996); I.

State v. Patterson, 112 Wn.2d 731 (1989)

Police, investigating burglary, observe vehicle going wrong way on one-way street two blocks from burgled store, five minutes later find vehicle parked six blocks from store, treads wet, observe possible proceeds of burglary in vehicle, search vehicle without warrant, find identification, arrest suspect who confesses; held: search of a parked, immobile, unoccupied vehicle must be authorized by a warrant or exigent circumstances other than the potential mobility of the vehicle, Oregon v. Kock, 725 P.2d 1285 (1986), State v. Kypreos, 110 Wn.App. 612, 624-28 (2002), 115 Wn.App. 207 (2002), see: Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663 (2018); Supreme Court declines to follow California v. Carney, 85 L.Ed.2d 406 (1985); here, immediacy of time between crime and location of vehicle, evidence of recent flight from vehicle (wet treads, presence of evidence in vehicle) showing fresh pursuit establish exigent circumstances; 9-0.

State v. Steinbrunn, 54 Wn.App. 506 (1989)

Unconscious vehicular homicide suspect is taken from accident scene in Washington to Oregon hospital where Washington police officer directs drawing of blood sample; held: taking of blood from unconscious suspect pursuant to implied consent statute, RCW 46.20.308, can only be done if suspect is lawfully arrested; Washington officer was in fresh pursuit even though he lacked probable cause to arrest until he arrived in Oregon and smelled defendant's breath, Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit, 10.89 RCW, but see: Clarkston v. Stone, 63 Wn.App. 500 (1991), see: License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005); III.

State v. Raines, 55 Wn.App. 459 (1989)

Police respond to domestic violence call, observe male through window, knock on door, female answers, denies problem, police ask to speak to male, female denies male is present, police ask to enter, female does not object, steps back, police enter; female shuts inside door, states it is her room, police state they will investigate, female does not object, police open door, see suspect, drugs; held: failure to object and stepping aside is more than mere acquiescence; failure to object is an implied waiver, but see: State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746, 756-59 (2011); entry of bedroom was justified by exigent circumstance in response to domestic violence report in light of fact that police knew suspect was violent, State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994); 2-1, I.

State v. Sweeney, 56 Wn.App. 42 (1989)

Job Corps student leader informs dormitory supervisor that defendant sells drugs; supervisor previously suspected defendant due to other students entering defendant's room at unusual hours, pats down defendant, finds unidentified leaf, strip searches, finds drugs in underwear; held: patdown was justified, as quasi-school officials had reasonable grounds to believe the search was necessary to maintain school discipline and order, State v. Brooks, 43 Wn.App. 560 (1986); no additional operative facts existed to justify expansion of the initial search to a strip search, cf.: Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 566 U.S. 318, 132 S.Ct. 1510, 182 L.Ed.2d 566 (2012); further, strip search violated Job Corps rules; III.

State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989)

Police arrest defendant on $25 bench warrant; at jail, without advising defendant of right to post bail, search purse, find drugs; held: inventory search before giving defendant opportunity to post bail is unlawful, RCW 10.31.030, State v. Caldera, 84 Wn.App. 527 (1997), see also: State v. Ward, 65 Wn.App. 900 (1992); distinguishes State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144 (1986), as no search incident to arrest was undertaken immediately subsequent to defendant's arrest, State v. Boyce, 52 Wn.App. 274, 279 (1988), but see: State v. Harris, 66 Wn.App. 636 (1992), see also: State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25 (1998), State v. Ross, 106 Wn.App. 876 (2001), State v, Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 222 (2012); III.

State v. Lucas, 56 Wn.App. 236 (1989)

A defendant released on conditions of probation supervision pending appeal has the same diminished expectation of privacy as a probationer serving his sentence, thus a warrantless search of defendant's home by a probation officer is permissible where defendant signed an agreement that a condition of release was to submit to a search by a community corrections officer, well-founded suspicion is sufficient, State v. Patterson, 51 Wn.App. 202 (1988), see: State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018), observation by probation officer of suspected drugs in residence four days before search plus defendant's nervousness when officers arrived plus defendant's demand for warrant even though officers had not conveyed a desire to search establish well-founded suspicion, State v. Lampman, 45 Wn.App. 228 (1986); I.

Maryland v. Buie, 108 L.Ed.2d 276 (1990)

Police obtain arrest warrant for armed robber who wore red running suit, serve warrant in home, arrest suspect emerging from basement, police enter basement to look for other people, observe and seize red running suit in plain view; held: a protective sweep of premises in conjunction with a home arrest is permissible, incident to the arrest, limited to a cursory visual inspection of those places in which a person might be hiding, where police possess a reasonable belief based on specific and articulable facts which, taken together with the rational inferences from those facts, reasonably warrant an officer in believing that the area swept harbored an individual posing a danger to officers or others, State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954 (2002), State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262, 268 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009), State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-25 (2008), cf.: State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593 (2004), State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 122-28 (2016), State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018); police do not need probable cause to believe that a serious and demonstrable potentiality for danger existed; 7-2.

State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990)

Police stop vehicle for speeding, determine driver is drunk, ask passenger if he wishes to drive vehicle from scene in lieu of impound, passenger agrees, officer orders passenger to return to and remain in vehicle, requests driver's license from passenger, runs computer check, finds warrant, arrests passenger, searches, finds drugs; held: directing passenger to remain in vehicle was not a detention, reversing State v. Mennegar, 53 Wn.App. 257 (1989), as a reasonable person would not have believed himself to be detained, as passenger had agreed to drive the vehicle away; requesting passenger's license was reasonable, as passenger was free to refuse, State v. Mote, 129 Wn.App. 76 (2005), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), cf.: State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011); within community caretaking function to call in to determine if license was valid, see: State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761 (1990)

Search warrant affidavit states police telephoned public utility district and obtained power records of defendant; held: magistrate should not have considered this information, as public utility records may only be obtained by police if request is in writing, and if written request states that it is suspected a particular person has committed a crime and that police have a reasonable belief that the records could determine whether the suspicion may be true, RCW 42.17.314, In re Rosier, 105 Wn.2d 606 (1986), reversing State v. Maxwell, 55 Wn.App. 446 (1989); cf.: Pers. Restraint of. Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), State v. Rakosky, 79 Wn.App. 229, 237-8 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Slattery, 56 Wn.App. 820 (1990)

School officials may search a student's car, locked trunk and a locked briefcase within that trunk without a warrant on reasonable suspicion, State v. Brooks, 43 Wn.App. 560 (1986); New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1983), State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49 (2010), State v. E.K.P., 162 Wn.App. 675 (2011), cf.: State v. Meneese, 174 Wn.2d 937 (2012), where car was parked in school parking lot, cf.: State v. A.S., 6 Wn.App.2d 264 (2018); reliable student-informant's information of drug dealing plus discovery of large amount of cash on respondent plus pager provide reasonable grounds to search car, cf.: State v. B.A.S., 103 Wn.App. 549 (2000); I.

State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999)

Canine-conducted narcotics search will be upheld where evidence establishes that dog was trained, certified by Washington State Police Canine Association and Criminal Justice Training Commission, had detected narcotics on other occasions, Florida v. Harris, 568 U.S. 237, 185 L.Ed.2d 61 (2013), see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998); I.

State v. Barbosa, 57 Wn.App. 822 (1990)

Police receive complaint of armed kidnapping from residence, observe bullet hole in car; complainant tells police that kidnappers left and they should not enter the home; police enter, observe drugs; held: emergency doctrine to make sure no one had been shot and no assailant was in the house justifies entry in spite of complainant's claim that no one was there, as complainant "may have been upset and confused, or there may have been someone there unbeknownst to her"; I.

Minnesota v. Olson, 109 L.Ed.2d 85 (1990)

Warrantless, nonconsensual entry into residence to arrest an overnight guest violates the guest's Fourth Amendment rights, Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980); but see: State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409 (1992); 7-2.

State v. Morgavi, 58 Wn.App. 733 (1990)

Police drive to residence to investigate resident's possible involvement in unrelated crime, observe garage open, hinge on door broken, vehicle in driveway, other door open, suspect burglary, enter garage, see marijuana; held: while police subjectively believed a burglary may have occurred, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 21 (1989), state must also prove an objectively reasonable belief that emergency existed; here, officers were following their own hunch, not responding to report of a third party who witnessed crime, emergency was not apparent, thus no exigent circumstance, distinguishing State v. Campbell, 15 Wn.App. 98 (1976), State v. Bakke, 44 Wn.App. 830 (1986); accord: State v. Muir, 67 Wn.App. 149 (1992); see: State v. Goodin, 67 Wn.App. 623 (1992); II.

State v. Whitaker, 58 Wn.App. 851 (1990)

Officers testify that they know defendant, regularly talk to him in park area and regularly pat him down; in instant case, police walk toward defendant in park, he drops bottle, they seize it, find drugs; held: because defendant failed to demonstrate that prior patdowns were not based upon reasonable suspicion, he failed to establish that he had involuntarily abandoned the drugs, thus police may retrieve voluntarily abandoned drugs, State v. Serrano, 14 Wn.App. 462, 464 (1975), State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), police walking toward defendant was not a seizure, State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455-56 (1985), State v. Machado, 54 Wn.App. 771, 775 (1989); whether a seizure occurred depends on objective facts surrounding the encounter, not suspect's subjective perceptions, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), see: State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000); 2-1, I.

State v. Gwinner, 59 Wn.App. 119 (1990)

Evidence lawfully seized by federal officers in violation of Washington constitution is admissible in state courts as long as federal officers did not act as agents of state or under color of state law, pursuant to "silver platter" doctrine, Pers. Restraint of Teddington, 116 L.Ed.2d 761 (1991) State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 583-91 (1997), State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 63 (2018); telephone call from Washington police officer to DEA providing federal probable cause does not establish agency; but see: State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 692, 698-701 (1994); I.

State v. Boland, 115 Wn.2d 571 (1990)

Garbage can left for collection on curb outside home may not be searched by police without warrant under CONST. Art. 1, § 7, reversing State v. Boland, 55 Wn.App. 657 (1989), State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 881 (2005), cf.: State v. Hepton, 113 Wn.App. 673, 678-81 (2002); for contrary holding under United States Constitution, see: California v. Greenwood, 100 L.Ed.2d 30 (1988); but see: State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990)

Police stop defendant's vehicle for littering, observe drug paraphernalia in car, patdown defendant, find drugs; at suppression hearing, officer testifies he would not have taken defendant into custody only on paraphernalia charge; held: officer had made merely a conditional decision to release defendent on result of patdown, distinguishing State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981), see: State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002); where probable cause to arrest exists, it is irrelevant whether search incident to arrest occurs before or after arrest, Rawlings v. Kentucky, 65 L.Ed.2d 633 (1980), see: State v. Ward, 24 Wn.App. 761 (1979), State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002), but see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), see: State v. Rankin, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004); I.

State v. Swenson, 59 Wn.App. 586 (1990)

Police, responding to neighbor's call reporting that defendant's front door is open at 2:30 a.m., enter residence looking for burglar, find drugs; held: while probable cause under the emergency exception is not required, here there were no facts upon which the officer could conclude that a person was inside needing medical care, nor that a crime had been or was being committed, thus suppressed, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 21 (1989), State v. Bakke, 44 Wn.App. 830, 834 (1987), State v. Campbell, 15 Wn.App. 98 (1976), State v. Muir, 67 Wn.App. 149 (1992), State v. Leffler, 142 Wn.App. 175 (2007), see: State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994), State v. Davis, 86 Wn.App. 414, 420-3 (1997); I.

Pers. Restraint of Teddington, 116 Wn.2d 761 (1991)

Member of armed forces is arrested for civilian offense, sergeant performs routine inventory search of his locker, discovers letter in which petitioner states he will commit robbery; held: because petitioner was under arrest and thus would be away from his unit, routine inventory search of locker was valid, reading of letter was appropriate to determine ownership; evidence lawfully seized by federal officials under Fourth Amendment is admissible in state court even if obtained in violation of CONST. Art. 1, § 7, State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 583-91 (1997), State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 63 (2018), cf.: State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 692, 698-70 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991)

Police observe suspect commit traffic infractions and strike a sign, follow with emergency lights, at residence suspect jumps out, runs toward residence, officer calls to stop, suspect proceeds to front door, enters, officer prevents door from closing, smells alcohol, has suspect take sobriety tests, arrests for DUI; held: suspect's presence inside her home requires analysis of exigent circumstances, State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426 (1985), Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980), although rationale diminishes considerably when suspect is fleeing to the home to avoid arrest; exigencies include (1) grave offense, (2) armed, (3) reasonably trustworthy information suspect is guilty, (4) strong reason to believe suspect is present, (5) suspect likely to escape if not swiftly apprehended, (6) entry is peaceable, State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 101 (1991), (7) hot pursuit, (8) fleeing suspect, (9) danger to officer, (10) mobility of vehicle, (11) mobility or destruction of evidence, State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986); here, there was hot pursuit, as officer did not enter home and there was more than a mere infraction, distinguishing Seattle v. Altschuler, 53 Wn.App. 317 (1989) plus fleeing suspect, destruction of evidence, Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984), cf.: State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), State v. Wolters, 133 Wn.App. 297 (2006), Lange v California, __ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 2011, 210 L.Ed.2d 486 (2021); III.

California v. Hodari D., 113 L.Ed.2d 690 (1991)

Suspect sees police and runs, police chase without reasonable suspicion, suspect throws drugs while fleeing, is stopped and arrested, police recover drugs; held: absent the application of physical force or submission to a show of authority, no seizure for purposes of the Fourth Amendment occurs, Michigan v. Chesternut, 100 L.Ed.2d 565 (1988), see: United States v. Mendenhall, 64 L.Ed.2d 497 (1980), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 344 (1997), Torres v. Madrid, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 989, 209 L.Ed.2d 190 (2021); here, suspect was not seized until he was tackled; but see: State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn.App.2d (2019); 7-2.

Florida v. Bostick, 115 L.Ed.2d 389 (1991)

Police routinely board bus at scheduled stop and ask passengers for permission to search luggage, defendant grants permission, police seize drugs; held: no seizure where a reasonable innocent person would feel free to say no, United States v. Drayton, 153 L.Ed.2d 242 (2002), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); cramped confines of bus is but one factor in determining if consent is voluntary; 6-3.

Clarkston v. Stone, 63 Wn.App. 500 (1991)

Washington police chase speeding vehicle into Idaho, arrest for DUI; held: Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit, RCW 10.89 (and identical Idaho counterpart) only applies to felony, but see: License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005); because Washington officer did not have authority to arrest for misdemeanor in Idaho, fruits must be suppressed; III.

State v. Barber, 118 Wn.2d 335 (1992)

"Racial incongruity," i.e., a person of any race being out of place in a particular area, should never constitute a finding of reasonable suspicion of criminal behavior.

State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992)

Fire department paramedic, while giving medical assistance to injured motorcyclist, hands drugs to police at scene; held: no evidence that police knew of and acquiesced in search, even if paramedic recognized vial as drugs, State v. Clark, 48 Wn.App. 850 (1987), State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 382-84 (2001); search and seizure rules do not apply to paramedic employed by fire department, distinguishing Michigan v. Tyler, 56 L.Ed.2d 486 (1978), State v. Bell, 108 Wn.2d 193 (1987), cf.: State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210, 214-17 (2004); III.

State v. Hastings, 119 Wn.2d 229 (1992)

Undercover police, after receiving complaints, knock on residence door, state they wish to buy drugs, are admitted, buy drugs, obtain warrant; held: there is no reasonable expectation of privacy in a home where illegal business is openly conducted, thus it is not entitled to Fourth Amendment protection, Lewis v. United States, 17 L.Ed.2d 312 (1966); police do not need a justifiable and reasonable basis to suspect criminal activity before they may effect a ruse entry, State v. Weller, 76 Wn.App. 165, 167 (1994), effectively overruling State v. Hashman, 46 Wn.App. 211 (1986); affirms State v. Hastings, 57 Wn.App. 836 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409 (1992)

Police, with consent of lessee, enter apartment, arrest defendant, a temporary resident, in bathroom, search community dumpster outside apartment, find evidence; held: defendant's expectation of privacy was qualified by possibility that lessee would consent to search; defendant's presence in bathroom does not provide a separate privacy right from that of lessee, distinguishing State v. Berber, 48 Wn.App. 583 (1987), see also: Tukwila v. Nalder, 53 Wn.App. 746 (1989); search of garbage in a community dumpster does not violate privacy rights, State v. Hepton, 113 Wn.App. 673, 678-81 (2002), see: State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 881 (2005), distinguishing State v. Boland, 115 Wn.2d 571 (1990); III.

State v. Ward, 65 Wn.App. 900 (1992)

Following arrest on warrant, defendant informs police officer he lacks funds to post $325 bail, is booked, drugs found; held: trial court's finding defendant was given opportunity to post bail is supported by substantial evidence, distinguishing State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989); III.

State v. Harris, 66 Wn.App. 636 (1992)

Juvenile is arrested on warrants, told amount of warrants, does not indicate "desire to post bail," is taken to precinct prior to booking and, prior to being placed in holding cell, strip searched because respondent was a gang member and police had prior experience with gang members taping razor blades to skin, drugs found; held: exigent circumstances justified search due to police knowledge of gang behavior, see: Zehrung v. State, 569 P.2d 189, modified, 573 P.2d 858, 859 (Alaska 1978), distinguishing State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989), see: State v. Caldera, 84 Wn.App. 527 (1997), Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 566 U.S. 318, 132 S.Ct. 1510, 182 L.Ed.2d 566 (2012); suppression is not a remedy for failure to obtain statutorily-required written approval of a supervisor before a strip search, RCW 10.79.140(2), as long as oral approval was obtained, cf.: State v. Barron, 170 Wn.App. 742 (2012); reasonable suspicion may support a strip search; here, knowledge of gang activity plus respondent's holding buttocks tightly together during frisk plus request to be taken directly to youth center plus request to use bathroom establish reasonable suspicion to strip search; I.

State v. Muir, 67 Wn.App. 149 (1992)

Police, responding to broadcast of burglary of empty residence, find evidence of burglary, smell marijuana, enter residence, see marijuana plants, leave, obtain warrant; held: police entered house to search for evidence, not to render aid or assistance, unjustified either by exigent circumstances or emergency exception; emergency exception applies where police enter building if they subjectively and reasonably believe persons are in imminent danger of death or harm or where objects are likely to burn or explode, State v. Sanders, 8 Wn.App. 306, 310 (1973), State v. Nichols, 20 Wn.App. 462, 465 (1978), State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 21 (1989), State v. Cahoon, 59 Wn.App. 606, 608 (1990), State v. Downey, 53 Wn.App. 543, 545 (1989), State v. Welker, 37 Wn.App. 628 (1984), State v. Swenson, 59 Wn.App. 586 (1990); cf.: State v. Morgavi, 58 Wn.App. 733 (1990); exigent circumstances involve a law enforcement emergency as opposed to medical one; I.

State v. Goodin, 67 Wn.App. 623 (1992)

Police with arrest warrant ask suspect to step out of house, arrest him, observe a juvenile inside bolt into bathroom, flush toilet; police enter bathroom, seize drugs; police had, two days earlier, found drugs in house; held: police knowledge of drugs in house earlier plus juvenile's behavior typical of an attempt to destroy contraband plus knowledge of defendant's drug convictions would lead a reasonable person to believe juvenile possessed drugs and was trying to destroy them, thus exigent circumstances to search existed, distinguishing State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437, 446-7 (1980), State v. Morgavi, 58 Wn.App. 733 (1990), see: State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445, 448 (1991), State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989); II.

State v. Faydo, 68 Wn.App. 621 (1993)

A published telephone number may be obtained by police from a telephone company without a warrant, where suspect has not requested that the company not release it, distinguishing State v. Butterworth, 48 Wn.App. 152 (1987), State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986), but see: State v. Miles, 160 Wn.2d 236 (2007); III.

State v. Lund, 70 Wn.App. 437 (1993)

With well-founded suspicion, jailers detain paralegal for smuggling drugs, seize her purse, move her to reception area for four minutes, whereupon she produces drugs; held: where police make valid seizure of a purse, then desire to obtain a search warrant, they may retain the purse for the time reasonably needed to secure a warrant, see: State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641, 653 (1992); II.

State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993)

Police seize a telepager from third party, defendant calls in, police return call and set up drug deal; held: by transmitting his number to telepager, defendant did not reasonably expect confidentiality, police did not intercept a private communication, thus no violation of CONST. Art. 1, § 7, Fourth Amendment, or RCW 9.73, State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021), cf.: State v. Hinton, 179 Wn.2d 862 (2014), see: State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986), State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993), State v. Farmer, 80 Wn.App. 795 (1996); II.

State v. Cleator, 71 Wn.App. 217 (1993)

Owner of tent erected without permission on public land not in campsite has no legitimate expectation of privacy in the contents of the tent other than his personal belongings under United States and Washington constitutions, but see: State v. Pippin, 200 Wn.App. 826 (2017), United States v. Ross, 456 U.S. 798, 822, 102 S.Ct. 2157, 72 L.Ed.2d 572 (1982), see also: State v. Pentecost, 64 Wn.App. 656 (1992); I, 2-1.

State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993)

Police may make a warrantless arrest on probable cause when suspect voluntarily exits residence to speak to officers on unenclosed front porch, State v. Carlow, 44 Wn.App. 821, 826 (1986), State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474, 481 (1984), State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35, 40 n.2 (1991), State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426, 429 (1985), see: State v. White, 129 Wn.2d 105 (1996), reversing State v. Solberg, 66 Wn.App. 66, 79 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173 (1994)

Police use of infrared thermal detection device to detect heat distribution patterns in a home, undetectable by naked eye or other senses, violates, CONST. Art. 1, § 7, Kylo v. United States, 150 L.Ed.2d 94 (2001), Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), distinguishing State v. Manley, 85 Wn.2d 120, 124 (1975), State v. Ludvik, 40 Wn.App. 257, 264 n.1 (1985)(binoculars confirm what could otherwise lawfully be seen with naked eye, but see:

Florida v. Jardines, supra, at 185 L.Ed.2d 505 (Kagan, concurring), and Fourth Amendment; cf.: State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996), see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998)(drug dog), accord: Kyllo v. United States, 150 L.Ed.2d 94 (2001), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 259-69 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Hoke, 72 Wn.App. 869 (1994)

Police knock on front door then walk around to yard which is partially obstructed by stacked wood, broken vehicle, wheelbarrow, tools, yard covered with grass, no pathway, thick foliage borders yard, officer forced to deviate from direct access route, smells growing marijuana; held: yard was not an area of curtilage impliedly open to public, thus officer exceeded scope of implied invitation, State v. Ridgway, 57 Wn.App. 915, 920 (1990), distinguishing State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 902-3 (1981), State v. Ferro, 64 Wn.App. 181, 183 (1992); homeowner need not take overt steps signalling that an area of curtilage is private; see: State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), State v. Hornback, 73 Wn.App. 738 (1994); I.

State v. Hornback, 73 Wn.App. 738 (1994)

Police drive up driveway and stop in parking area, use ruse to speak with defendant, smell marijuana; held: within curtilage impliedly open to public, distinguishing State v. Ridgway, 57 Wn.App. 915, 918 (1990), State v. Gave, 77 Wn.App. 333 (1995), cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); I.

State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 692 (1994)

DEA agents receive a tip of a marijuana grow operation, go with state officer to defendant's property, stop at gate, leave, DEA returns later without state officers, open gate, enter property, smell marijuana, aim Thermal Imaging Device and obtain readings consistent with marijuana grow operation, obtain power records, warrant, seize marijuana with state officers who prosecute in state court; held: federal and state officials were cooperating to an extent sufficient to trigger state constitutional protection, see: State v. Gwinner, 59 Wn.App. 119, 124-6 (1990), In re Teddington, 116 Wn.2d 761, 772-4 (1991), State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 583-91 (1997); agents trespassed on private property, never attempted to approach the house or contact occupants, furtively entered property in darkness to look for operation, access was not open, no trespassing signs plus fence manifest that area was not impliedly open, distinguishing State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981), State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33 (1988), State v. Hornback, 73 Wn.App. 738 (1994), State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), accord: State v. Ross, 144 Wn.2d 304 (2000); police entry into defendant's posted, fenced "open field" was unreasonable, Washington having rejected open fields doctrine of Oliver v. United States, 80 L.Ed.2d 214 (1984), see: State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506, 512 (1984); cf.: State v. Gave, 77 Wn.App. 333 (1995); II.

State v. Jones, 76 Wn.App. 592 (1995)

Police removing vial that is partially protruding from defendant's anus without touching defendant's body have engaged in a strip search, RCW 10.79.070(1), and not a body cavity search, RCW 10.79.070(2), thus no warrant is required where defendant is being booked into jail, RCW 10.79.130(1)(a), 10.79.130(2)(c), Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 566 U.S. 318, 132 S.Xt. 1510, 182 L.Ed.2d 566 (2012); I.

State v. Gave, 77 Wn.App. 333 (1995)

Police, with permission from owner of private road, drive up road past "no trespassing" signs which were not posted by defendant, go to defendant's front door, knock, speak with defendant using a ruse, smell marijuana, obtain warrant; held: defendant cannot rely upon signs he did not post, police did nothing more than approach residence within curtilage impliedly open to public, thus no search occurred, State v. Hornback, 73 Wn.App. 738 (1994), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 696 (1994), but see: State v. Ross, 144 Wn.2d 304 (2000), cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); II.

State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995)

Officer observes man give defendant money, defendant shows man object cupped in his hand, someone yells "police" when officer approaches, defendant and companion leave scene quickly, police stop defendant and search pockets, find drugs; held: police had probable cause to believe defendant had committed offense of possession with intent to deliver drugs, State v. White, 76 Wn.App. 801, 804-5 (1995), aff'd, 129 Wn.2d 105 (1996), but see: State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995), thus search incident to arrest was valid, State v. Ward, 24 Wn.App. 761, 765 (1979); I.

State v. Audley, 77 Wn.App. 897 (1995)

Defendant is arrested for delivery of drugs, police having observed him reach into his pants and retrieve what police suspect is rock cocaine, at precinct police perform strip search, RCW 10.79.130, find drugs; held: crime for which defendant was arrested plus his conduct prior to the arrest were sufficient to establish reasonable suspicion that he might have been carrying drugs that would be uncovered during a strip search, cf.: State v. Barron, 170 Wn.App. 742 (2012), Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 566 U.S. 318, 132 S.Ct. 1510, 182 L.Ed.2d 566 (2012); RCW 10.79.130(1)(a) does not violate Fourth Amendment or CONST. Art. 1, § 7; I.

State v. Carter, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995)

Defendant sells drugs to undercover officer in motel room, officer leaves, following which police approach room with weapons drawn, another woman opens door, sees police, tries to flee away from room, police force door open and seize drugs in room; held: exigent circumstances exist (no analysis); affirms, in part, State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 320 (1994); 5-4.

State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995)

Police officer observes defendant intently looking at a plastic bag in his hand, when defendant sees officer he turns away and makes shoving motions into pants, officer stops defendant and pats him down, seizing bag with drugs; held: stop was made to search pocket where officer suspected he might find evidence, not a weapon, thus search exceeded scope of Terry stop, distinguishing State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995), State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591 (1992); I.

State v. Kealey, 80 Wn.App. 162 (1995)

Defendant, while shopping, leaves purse in store, clerk opens it and finds drugs, clerk tells police who search purse for identification, police "set up a sting operation," defendant recovers purse, is arrested; held: owner of misplaced, as opposed to abandoned, property maintains reasonable expectation of privacy; searches of misplaced property for identification are an exception to the warrant requirement, thus police search here was proper; II.

State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996)

Police enter property, walk to shed behind premises, smell marijuana, approach front porch, knock, peer through window with flashlight, see marijuana, obtain warrant; held: absent signs or fences, front porch is impliedly open to public, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 902 (1981), thus police lawfully on porch can intentionally look through unobstructed window beside front door without leaning, bending or straining, at 396, State v. Manly, 85 Wn.2d 120, 124 (1975), State v. Drumhiller, 36 Wn.App. 592, 595-6 (1984), see: State v. Creegan, 123 Wn.App. 718 (2004), cf.: State v. Ross, 144 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400 (2002), use of flashlight "does not transform an observation...within the open view doctrine during daylight into an impermissible search simply because darkness falls," at 398-9, State v. Young, 28 Wn.App. 412 (1981), State v. Cagle, 5 Wn.App. 644 (1971), State v. Regan, 76 Wn.2d 331 (1969), United States v. Lee, 71 L.Ed. 1202 (1927), United States v. Dunn, 94 L.Ed.2d 326 (1987), Texas v. Brown, 75 L.Ed.2d 502 (1983), cf.: State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 259-69 (2003), distinguishing State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173, 182-3 (1994), reversing State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28 (1994); 5-4.

Whren v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996)

Police may stop vehicles upon probable cause that traffic law has been violated irrespective of the motive of the officers, Arkansas v. Sullivan, 149 L.Ed.2d 994 (2001), or the pretextual nature of the stop, but see: State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999); selective enforcement based on race may be challenged under the equal protection clause, not the Fourth Amendment; but see: State v. Michaels, 60 Wn.2d 638, 645 (1962), State v. Blumenthal, 78 Wn.App. 82 (1995); 9-0.

State v. White, 129 Wn.2d 105 (1996)

Police, with probable cause but without warrant, follow suspect into public restroom, look over stall, observe suspect sitting on toilet with pants below knees, inform suspect he is under arrest and order him out of stall; held: a toilet stall is not entitled to the same "place" protection as a home, at 111, police limited intrusion into the stall to effect a warrantless arrest based on probable cause offends neither United States nor state constitutions, distinguishing Tukwila v. Nalder, 53 Wn.App. 746 (1989), State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993); affirms State v. White, 76 Wn.App. 801 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 604-7 (1996)

Police officer is told by another officer that an informant, known to the reporting officer, had given information that led to arrests previously, that suspect received weekly packages from Federal Express containing drugs, police independently verify address and fact that packages are delivered weekly, and that Federal Express presently possessed a package addressed to suspect; officer advises Federal Express he will obtain warrant for package, Federal Express delivers package to police, drug dog reacts positively, see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), police obtain warrant; held: police had well-founded suspicion to detain package, temporary seizure of mail is justified if police have reasonable and articulable suspicion of criminal activity, United States v. Van Leeuwen, 25 L.Ed.2d 282 (1970), Arkansas v. Sanders, 61 L.Ed.2d 235 (1979), overruled on other grounds in California v. Acevedo, 114 L.Ed.2d 619 (1991), State v. Stanphill, 53 Wn.App. 623 (1989); holding package for time necessary to bring in drug dog is reasonable, see: Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005), Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 133 S.Ct. 1409, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); II.

State v. Caldera, 84 Wn.App. 527 (1997)

Police arrest defendants on warrants, take to jail, search and find drugs before giving them the opportunity to post bail; held: RCW 10.31.030 requires police to give persons arrested on warrants opportunity to post bail before inventory search, State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989), but see: State v. Ross, 106 Wn.App. 876 (2001), thus evidence suppressed; police may search incident to arrest first, State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25 (1998), State v, Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 222 (2012); III.

State v. Davis, 86 Wn.App. 414 (1997)

Defendant in motel for several days, pays each day hours after checkout time, after checkout time does not respond to knocks or phone calls, manager calls police, police knock, hear dog sniffing but no response, enter with pass key, find defendant who consents to search of room, police find drugs and videos, police view videos which contain evidence of other crimes; held: defendant had reasonable expectation of privacy in room in light of the fact that he was present, had paid late before, it was only an hour after checkout time, at 419, distinguishing State v. Christian, 95 Wn.2d 655, 660-1 (1981); police entry is minimally sufficient for application of medical emergency exception, at 420-3, distinguishing State v. Swenson, 59 Wn.App. 586, 588-90 (1990); II.

State v. Rainford, 86 Wn.App. 431 (1997)

Dry cell search in a prison initiated on reasonable articulable suspicion conducted in a nonabusive manner is reasonable under state and United States constitutions, see: State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 23 (1984), State v. Baker, 28 Wn.App. 423 (1981); II.

State v. Dane, 89 Wn.App. 226, 231-2 (1997)

Prison officials receive anonymous note that defendant-visitor may smuggle drugs for her prisoner-husband who associates with inmates known to have drug problems in prison, defendant is nervous when questioned; held: officials had well founded suspicion to detain and question defendant, but see: Florida v. J.L., 579 U.S. 266, 272, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000) , but because WAC §§ 275-80-905, -915, -925 require prison investigators to ask for consent, expel if consent refused and allow local police to handle searches, which were not followed here, drugs suppressed; II, 2-1.

State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998)

Police observe suspect in high crime area, make a "social contact" and get name, run records check, find drug priors, shine spotlight on suspect who discards materials, detain suspect, find imitation controlled substance; held: shining flashlight on suspect did not constitute such a show of authority that a reasonable person would not believe himself free to leave, cf.: State v.

Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011), spotlight did not illuminate anything suspect sought to keep private as he was in the open on a public street, spotlight did not reveal the contraband he had concealed on his person, thus suspect was not seized, cf.: State v. Smith, 154 Wn.App. 695 (2010); Washington declines to adopt United States Supreme Court test that because suspect did not submit to authority, no seizure occurred, California v. Hodari D., 113 L.Ed.2d 690 (1991), Torres v. Madrid, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 989, 209 L.Ed.2d 190 (2021); 7-2.

State v. King, 89 Wn.App. 612 (1998)

Police obtain consent to search apartment for a gun used in a homicide, enter a bedroom, see defendant in bed covering an item with a sheet which looks like a gun, defendant says it's a gun, police handcuff defendant, seize gun, ask if gun is his, defendant says it is, police call in serial number and discover gun is stolen, advise of Miranda warnings, defendant admits he knows gun is stolen; held: entry of bedroom was within scope of consent, seizure of defendant and gun was reasonable to minimize risk of harm to officers, State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669 (1994), briefly holding gun to check serial number was reasonable, see; State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340, 344 (1993), aff'd in part, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994); II.

State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998)

Drug dog reacts positively to garage adjacent to private residence, police obtain warrant, find marijuana; held: like infrared thermal detection devices, using narcotics dog goes beyond merely enhancing natural human senses, allows police to "see through walls" of a home, State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173 (1994), thus, to use the dog, a warrant is required, CONST. Art. 1, § 7, Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 133 S.Ct. 1409, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L.Ed.2d 492 (2015), see: Kylo v. United States, 150 L.Ed.2d 94 (2001), cf.: United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983), Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005), but see: State v. Boyce, 44 Wn.App. 724 (1986), State v. Stanphill, 53 Wn.App. 623 (1989), State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549 (1990), State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 604-7 (1996), State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 148-49 (2009), 156 Wn.App. 918, 928-30 (2010), Florida v. Harris, 568 U.S. 237, 185 L.Ed.2d 61 (2013); I.

State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999)

Gang-unit officers who do not make routine traffic stops tail suspected gang member's car seeking justification to stop the car, observe infraction, pull over suspect vehicle, discover driver's license is suspended, arrest driver, search, find guns and drugs; held: pretextual traffic stops violate CONST. Art. I, § 7, but see: Whren v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996); in determining whether stop is pretextual, court should consider totality, including subjective intent of officer and objective reasonableness of the officer's behavior; reverses State v. Ladson, 86 Wn.App. 822 (1997); see: State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 462-69 (1994), State v. Rainey, 107 Wn.App. 129, 138-39 (2001), State v. Myers, 117 Wn.App. 93 (2003), State v. Meckelson, 133 Wn.App. 431 (2006), State v. Nichols, 161 Wn.2d 1 (2007), State v. Montes-Malindas, 144 Wn.App. 254 (2008), State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 951-53 (2009), State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.App. 270 (2010), abrogated, on other grounds, State v. Byrd, 162 Wn.App. 612 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. McLean, 178 Wn.App. 236 (2013), but see: State v. Hoang, 101 Wn.App. 732 (2000); cf.: State v. Arreola, 176 Wn.2d 284 (2012), Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022); 5-4.

Flippo v. West Virginia, 145 L.Ed.2d 16 (1999)

Police find defendant outside cabin, murdered wife inside, "process crime scene" and seize evidence from cabin; held: there is no "homicide crime scene" exception to the warrant requirement, Mincey v. Arizona, 57 L.Ed.2d 290 (1978); per curiam.

State v. Rulan C., 97 Wn.App. 884 (1999)

Police, serving search warrant, take phone call from defendant who offers to sell drugs, when defendant arrives he is strip searched, drugs found in shoe; held: because it was not impractical to obtain a telephonic warrant, no exigent circumstance applies, see: State v. Johnson, 128 Wn.2d 431, 447 (1996), State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), drugs were found during the course of the strip search, thus suppressed; strip search statute is inapplicable as the search did not occur at a detention facility, RCW 10.79.060; I.

Bond v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 365 (2000)

Agent boards bus, squeezes defendant's soft luggage, feels "brick-like object," asks passenger if he could open it, passenger agrees, agent finds drugs; held: physical manipulation of luggage is a search, violates Fourth Amendment; 7-2.

State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000)

Police are given a coat found by a citizen, defendants in car contact officer, one says that the coat is his, officer states he needs identification of both driver and passenger, officer testifies he was satisfied with driver's identification and ownership of coat, finds warrant for passenger, while retaining coat and driver's identification asks permission to search trunk which is granted, finds drugs; held: retaining coat and license was a seizure without authority, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70 (1988), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019), community caretaking function was complete when police were satisfied of ownership, State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509, 513 (1990), consent was tainted by the seizure, State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996); III.

State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000)

Police observe girl whom they believe to be 11-13 years old in high crime area late at night with adults known to be associated with drugs, hail her, she walks away, restrain her, observe drugs; held: community caretaking function may not be used as a pretext for a criminal investigation; balancing a citizen's privacy interest in freedom from police intrusion against public interest in having police perform caretaking, privacy must prevail, State v. Lawson, 135 Wn.App. 430 (2006); police may conduct noncriminal investigation as long as it is necessary and strictly relevant to performance of caretaking function, cf.: State v. Acrey, 110 Wn.App. 769 (2002), 148 Wn.2d 738 (2003), see: State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015); reverses State v. L.K., 95 Wn.App. 686 (1999); 5-4.

City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000)

Police set up drug roadblock, stop a predetermined number of vehicles, ask for identification, look for signs of impairment, conduct open-view examination of cars, drug dog walks around vehicles, search if particularized suspicion develops; held: because primary purpose of stop is to detect evidence of ordinary criminal wrongdoing, as opposed to border, United States v. Martinez-Fuerte, 49 L.Ed.2d 1116 (1976), or sobriety checkpoints, Michigan Dept. of State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), drug roadblock violates Fourth Amendment, see: Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004), Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005); 6-3.

Ferguson v. City of Charleston, 149 L.Ed.2d 205 (2001)

State hospital drug tests urine of obstetric patients, turns over positive results to police for prosecution; held: urine test is a search, because hospital turned results over to police without knowledge or consent of patient, "special need" does not justify warrantless search or lack of individualized suspicion, Chandler v. Miller, 137 L.Ed.2d 513 (1997), cf.: Vernonia School Dist. 47J v. Acton, 132 L.Ed.2d 564 (1995), Board of Education v. Earls, 153 L.Ed.2d 735 (2002); 6-3.

Kylo v. United States, 150 L.Ed.2d 94 (2001)

Use of thermal imaging device to detect relative amounts of heat within a home is a search and, absent warrant, violates Fourth Amendment, State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173 (1994); 5-4.

State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001)

Police observe juvenile holding beer, chase him to defendant's home, demand entry, defendant refuses absent warrant, defendant is convicted of obstructing; held: minor in possession of alcohol is a minor offense, no indication juvenile was armed or likely to escape, was not a threat, telephonic warrant could have been obtained, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), thus insufficient exigent circumstances to enter without a warrant, thus defendant did not obstruct, see: State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 814 (1987), State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991), Seattle v. Altschuler, 53 Wn.App. 317, 321 (1989), State v. Wolters, 133 Wn.App. 297 (2006); III.

State v. Ross, 106 Wn.App. 876 (2001)

Defendant is arrested on misdemeanor warrant, patted down by arresting officer, turned over to police from warrant jurisdiction who search incident to arrest and find drugs, defense seeks suppression because defendant was not taken "directly and without delay" to post bail, RCW 10.31.030; held: while RCW 10.31.030 precludes inventory searches at time of booking where a defendant is not given the opportunity to post bail, State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989), State v. Caldera, 84 Wn.App. 527 (1997), police are not precluded from searching incident to arrest, State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25 (1998), State v, Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 222 (2012); initial arresting officers were not obliged to take defendant immediately to jail to post bail; I.

State v. Schroeder, 109 Wn.App. 30 (2001)

Police are called to residence to investigate suicide, find deceased and defendant who identifies deceased, police search body for identification, find none, search house for identification, find drugs; held: because identity of deceased was provided by defendant, the search of identification was not so compelling under community caretaking function, that it overshadowed privacy of homeowner, other less-intrusive methods of confirming identification existed, no emergency existed; II.

United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001)

Condition of probation obliges defendant to submit to searches without a warrant or reasonable cause, police search defendant's home without a warrant with reasonable cause; held: probationer may be searched without a warrant on reasonable cause, Griffin v. Wisconsin, 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987), State v. Lampman, 45 Wn.App. 228 (1986), but see: State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018), search need not relate to a "probationary purpose"; 9-0.

State v. Dugas, 109 Wn.App. 592 (2001)

During detention, suspect removes his jacket and puts it on his car hood, following arrest, police take jacket and, during inventory find closed key pouch, open it, find drugs; held: while police were authorized to impound the jacket for safekeeping, it is not reasonable for police to search the contents of closed containers found in the jacket incident to impound, State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015), see: State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980) , State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.aApp. 652 (2015), cf.: State v. Dunham, 194 Wn.App. 744 (2016), State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019); I.

State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400 (2002)

Police receive report of armed residential robbery in progress, two suspects flee in large vehicle with a different color passenger door, "possibly orange," suspect vehicle in motel parking lot, upon arrival police observe brown car with blue door in front of a room, car hood warm, items matching items taken in rear, officers bend knees, look through partially opened curtains, see two males sorting papers, knock without announcing "police," men "dart" to back of motel, police enter, arrest; held: 6 exigent circumstance factors: (1) gravity of offense, here robbery; (2) armed; (3) trustworthy information that suspect is guilty; (4) strong reason to believe suspect is on premises; (5) likelihood of escape if not apprehended; (6) entry is peaceable, State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632, 644 (1986), State v. Wolters, 133 Wn.App. 297, 304-05 (2006), State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262, 268-70 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009); not every factor need be met to find exigent circumstances, only that factors are sufficient to show that police needed to act quickly, State v. Patterson, 112 Wn.2d 731, 736 (1989); looking through window did not violate open view doctrine, as sufficient exigent circumstances existed before police looked; 5-4.

State v. Hepton, 113 Wn.App. 673, 678-81 (2002)

Police look in garbage can found next to abandoned house, next door to defendant, find evidence, obtain warrant; held: there is no right to privacy in the contents of a neighbor's trash can, see: State v. Graffius, 74 Wn.App. 23 (1994), State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409 (1992), cf.: State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 881 (2005), distinguishing State v. Boland, 115 Wn.2d 571 (1990); III.

State v. Smith, 113 Wn.App. 846 (2002)

Police observe marijuana plants from adjoining property, one officer leaves to get warrant, others walk about the property, beyond curtilage, but don't enter marijuana patch, when warrant arrives, marijuana is seized; held: while officer's wandering on property was unlawful, the evidence was seized pursuant to the warrant, an independent source akin to inevitable discovery, see: State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989), State v. Bean, 89 Wn.2d 467 (1978), State v. Spring, 128 Wn.App. 398 (2005), State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 454, 459-60 (2006), State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 718 (2005), State v. Betancourth, 190 Wn.2d 357 (2018), but see: State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620, 631-36 (2009), thus suppression is not required; II.

State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954 (2002)

Police, with an arrest warrant for defendant and a search warrant to search for the defendant "including outbuildings…and documents" arrest defendant, do a "security check" and "protective sweep" in shed, find meth lab; held: because search warrant was issued only on the basis of the arrest warrant, its scope is no greater than the arrest warrant; to justify a "protective sweep," state has burden of proving that the sweep was reasonable for security purposes and limited to a cursory visual inspection of places where a person may be hiding, Maryland v. Buie, 108 L.Ed.2d 276 (1990), State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262, 268 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009), State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-25 (2008), State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018); here, there were no articulable facts warranting a reasonably prudent officer in believing that the area to be swept harbored an individual posing a danger, thus drugs suppressed, State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 122-28 (2016); III.

United States v. Drayton, 153 L.Ed.2d 242 (2002)

Police board bus, state they are looking for drugs, ask defendant "mind if I check you?," defendant agrees, patdown reveals drugs; held: police are not obliged to advise bus passengers of their right to refuse search as they were not seized, were free to leave, nothing said would suggest to a reasonable person that he was barred from leaving or refusing, Florida v. Bostick, 115 L.Ed.2d 389 (1991), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 634-43 (2003)

Police seize defendant's shoes from jail property box without a warrant; held: once police have conducted a valid inventory search of inmate's property at booking, inmate has no privacy interest in the items that have already been lawfully exposed to police view, per Fourth Amendment, United States v. Edwards, 39 L.Ed.2d 771 (1974) and CONST., art. I, § 7, State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 216-22 (2012), see also: State v. Puapuaga, 164 Wn.2d 515, 520-24 (2008); affirms State v. Cheatam, 112 Wn.App. 778 (2002); 7-2.

State v. Ettenhofer, 119 Wn.App. 300 (2003)

Police call judge who swears officer, judge finds probable cause, CrR 2.3(c), authorizes search but neither judge nor police execute a written warrant, drugs seized; held: absent a written warrant, search is invalid under state constitution; II.

State v. Carter, 151 Wn.2d 118 (2004)

Private firearms instructor brings illegal machine gun to class, invites students to handle it, investigators in class seize it, defendant is charged with possession of a machine gun, RCW

9.41.190(1); held: presenting firearm in open view of students precludes any expectation of privacy, exigent circumstance existed for seizure due to apparent attempt to destroy evidence and endanger others, State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 70-71 (1996); 8-1.

State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005)

Police, with probable cause but without a warrant, unlawfully open locked trunk of car, observe evidence, other police later obtain warrant, seize evidence; held: independent source exception to the exclusionary rule complies with U.S. and state constitutions where police would have sought a warrant for the trunk even absent the initial, illegal search, Murray v. United States, 101 L.Ed.2d 472 (1988), State v. Coates, 107 Wn.2d 882, 886-89 (1987), State v. Spring, 128 Wn.App. 398 (2005), State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 454, 459-60 (2006), State v. Hilton, 164 Wn.App. 81, 89-93 (2011), see: State v. Miles, 159 Wn.App. 282 (2011), State v. Smith,177 Wn.2d 533 (2013), State v. Betancourth, 190 Wn.2d 357 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Wallin, 125 Wn.App. 648 (2005)

Trial court, without objection, extends community custody without legal authority, probation officer searches defendant's home on well-founded suspicion, seizes child porn; held: absolute exclusionary rule of CONST., art. I, § 7 precludes admissibility of evidence seized without a warrant or lawful exception to the warrant requirement; no good faith exception applies to state constitutional analysis, State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 173-84 (2010), but see: State v. Riley, 154 Wn.App. 433 (2010); State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); I.

State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 881 (2005)

Police instruct city refuse collector to obtain defendant's garbage can, dump it in a clean truck and drive the truck down the block, police search hopper, find evidence, obtain warrant, seize drugs from defendant's home; held: under state constitution, an individual has a privacy interest in garbage collected from the curb by a municipal garbage collector that is intentionally kept separate from other garbage and then made available to police, State v. Boland, 115 Wn.2d 571 (1990); II.

Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005)

Following stop for traffic infraction, police bring in drug dog to sniff car, reacts positively, police open trunk, seize marijuana; held: where duration of traffic stop was justified by the traffic offense and the ordinary inquiries to such a stop, see: United States v. Jacobsen, 80 L.Ed.2d 85 (1984), a lawful canine sniff, United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983), Florida v. Harris, 568 U.S. 237, 185 L.Ed.2d 61 (2013), but see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), does not implicate legitimate privacy interests; 5-3.

State v. Spring, 128 Wn.App. 398 (2005)

When a warrant is based in part on illegally obtained information, warrant is nonetheless valid if affidavit contains otherwise sufficient facts to establish probable cause independent of the illegally obtained information, Murray v. United States, 101 L.Ed.2d 472 (1988), State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761, 769 (1990), and prosecutor proves that police would have sought the warrant in the absence of the unlawfully obtained evidence, State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989); I.

State v. Walker, 157 Wn.2d 307 (2006)

Statutory expansion of common law rule allowing for warrantless misdemeanor arrests only when the misdemeanor occurs in the officer's presence, RCW 10.31.100(1), does not violate CONST. art I, § 7, see: State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120, 130 (1986), Staats v. Brown, 139 Wn.2d 757, 766-67 (2000), or Fourth Amendment, see: Atwater v. City of Lago Vista, 149 L.Ed.2d 549 (2001); legislature may provide exceptions to the common law "in the presence" rule for warrantless misdemeanor arrests; 9-0.

State v. Williams, 135 Wn.App. 915 (2006)

Staff at McNeil Island Special Commitment Center discover nude photo in common area belonging to defendant who was being detained pending trial as a sexually violent predator, staff search defendant's computer, find child pornography; held: involuntarily committed resident has reduced expectation of privacy in both his room and computer, residents are on notice that their possessions are subject to search without notice, thus warrantless search was valid; II.

State v. Jorden, 160 Wn.2d 121 (2007)

Police random check of a motel guest registry which identifies defendant's whereabouts violates CONST., art. 1, § 7, Los Angeles v. Patel, 576 U.S. 409, 135 S.Ct. 2443, 192 L.Ed.2d 435 (2015), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Nichols, 171 Wn.2d 370, 376-79 (2011); reverses State v. Jorden, 126 Wn.App. 70 (2005); 7-2.

State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 97-101 (2007)

Police, knowing a vehicle registered to a man with a warrant is located on defendant's property, drive up driveway past a no trespassing sign, knock on front door, hear noise from rear of property, follow noise, observe propane tanks with valves turned open being purged, detain and search a man finding pill bottle with pseudoephedrine pills, release the man when they discover it's not the wanted man, obtain warrant, search premises, find drugs; held: substantial evidence supports trial court's finding that a reasonable, respectful citizen would believe he could drive down driveway to where deputies stopped, despite the sign, State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), cf.: State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008); defendant has no standing to challenge search of man in yard; II.

State v. Carney, 142 Wn.App. 197 (2007)

Police, investigating a report of reckless driving by a motorcyclist, approach a man meeting the operator's description standing by a car and a motorcycle, man jumps on motorcycle and flees, officers order two women in car to show hands, request identity, discover warrant, arrest, search, find drugs; held: ordering citizen to show hands, demanding identification is a seizure as a reasonable person would not have felt free to ignore the officer's "request to identify herself after being seized," see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003); police belief that a citizen may be able to provide information material to the investigation of a crime does not justify a warrantless seizure absent reasonable suspicion based on objective facts that the individual is involved in criminal conduct, State v. Dorey, 145 Wn.App. 423 (2008), cf.: State v. Rubio, 185 Wn.App. 387 (2015); 2-1, II.

State v. Puapuaga, 164 Wn.2d 515 (2008)

Defendant is sent to state hospital for competency evaluation, hospital staff inventory his possessions upon arrival, find unredacted discovery and note containing possible threat to a witness, advise prosecutor who obtains ex parte seizure order; held: pretrial detainee lacks a protectable privacy interest in property inventoried, seized and held by state officials under state and U.S. constitutions, State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Houvener, 145 Wn.App. 408 (2008)

College dormitory resident reports burglary, police enter dorm hallway, listen at defendant's door, hears incriminating statements, knocks and orders door to open, defendant opens, comes out, is questioned, confesses; held: because university housing rules preclude the general public from accessing residence floors without permission of a resident, there is a reasonable privacy interest in the hallway, which is not the equivalent of curtilage, see: State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304, 312 (2000), thus search was unlawful; III.

State v. Dorey, 145 Wn.App. 423 (2008)

Police get report of "disturbance" involving a man in a black shirt, observe a man in a black shirt nearby, order him to "hold on a minute," ask for identification, record information, release man, find warrant, follow man who tosses a bag into bushes, arrest for warrant, find drugs in bag; held: there is no authority to detain a witness, State v. Carney, 142 Wn.App. 197, 203 (2007), cf.: State v. Rubio, 185 Wn.App. 387 (2015)no crime was being investigated, the stop was not reasonable, the recordation of defendant's identity was improper, but for the recording the warrant would not have been discovered nor would the drugs have been seized, thus evidence should have been suppressed; III.

State v. Rose, 146 Wn.App. 439 (2008)

Trial court imposes urinalysis as condition of pretrial release; held: absent evidence that drug use is a good indicator that defendant would fail to appear, court may not require a UA as a condition of release, see: Butler v. Kato, 137 Wn.App. 515 (2007), cf.: State v. Olsen, 189 Wn.2d 118 (2017); II.

State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-27 (2008)

Police enter defendant's home on legitimate emergency, seeking a minor with whom defendant is alleged to be engaged in sadomasochistic sex, arrest defendant, engage in cursory visual inspection of places in home where someone could be hiding, then return later to seek evidence for use in a search warrant affidavit; held: initial protective sweep was lawful, State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954, 959-60 (2002), but second warrantless entry was improper as it was an entry to investigate a possible crime; remanded to allow inquiry into independent source doctrine, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005); 2-1, II.

State v. Smith, 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009)

Police, investigating theft of tanker truck containing anyhdrous ammonia, discover truck near house, see rifle through window, arrest occupants, police then see that rifle is missing, enter house for "safety sweep," search for places where a person could be hiding, observe evidence of meth lab, obtain warrant, seize drugs and lab; held: exigent circumstances of danger to police and public, fear that a person hiding in the house would shoot officers or shoot the tanker of ammonia support entry and search under community caretaking function, State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400, 406 (2002), , State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 953-58 (2009); affirms State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262 (2007); 6-3.

State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009)

Police, with probable cause to arrest for DUI, go to defendant's home, smell alcohol through screen door which defendant leaves shut, open door, grab defendant and arrest; held: absent evidence of a "major crisis demanding immediate entry," and failure of state to make a showing that destruction of evidence (alcohol dissipation) was imminent or that arresting officers could not have obtained a warrant, see: State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), no exigent circumstance existed for a warrantless arrest in the home; no exigency is created simply because there is probable cause to believe that a serious crime has been committed, Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980); III.

Safford U. Sch. Dist. v. Redding, 174 L.Ed.2d 354 (2009)

School official is told by one student that another student delivered contraband ibuprofen or naproxen, official searches student's bag, then engages in strip search; held: "[i]f a student is reasonably suspected of giving out contraband pills, she is reasonably suspected of carrying them on her person," at 363, thus search of her bag and outer clothing is valid, New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985); because the type of pills sought lacked an indication of danger to other students and because there was no reason to believe the pills were in the student's underwear, the strip search was unreasonable; 6-3.

State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009)

Probationer informs DOC that he had moved to a trailer next door to his previous address, CCO and police search previous address, erroneously believe that it was the last address he had reported, find meth lab; held: probation officers are required to have probable cause to believe that their probationers live at the residence they seek to search, State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374, 388 (2010), trial court's determination that CCO only needed reasonable suspicion is reversed; inevitable discovery exception to the exclusionary rule is inapplicable under CONST., art. I, § 7, reversing State v. Winterstein, 140 Wn.App. 676 (2007), overruling State v. Avila-Avina, 99 Wn.App. 9, 17 (2000), State v. Reyes, 98 Wn.App. 923, 930-33 (2000), State v. Richman, 85 Wn.App. 568, 577 (1997), not retroactive on collateral review, Pers. Restraint of Haghighi, 167 Wn.App. 712 (2012), 178 Wn.2d 435 (2013), intent of framers of state constitution was to protect personal rights rather than curb government actions, whenever the right is unreasonably violated suppression must follow; 9-0.

State v. Hartzell, 156 Wn.App. 918, 928-30 (2010)

Defendant is arrested, removed from his vehicle, K-9 dog jumps on vehicle, sniffs at window, then runs away and finds a gun police were looking for; held: canine sniff from an area where defendant does not have a reasonable expectation of privacy is not a search, defendant did not have an expectation of privacy in air coming from open window of car, State v. Stanphill, 53 Wn.App. 623, 630-32 (1989), but see: State v. Boyce, 44 Wn.App. 724 (1986), State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998); I.

State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374 (2010)

Police, acting on tip that probationer was selling drugs, ask CCO to see if probationer was in violation of community custody by not living where he had reported he lived, accompany CCO to residence where probationer was believed to be living, CCO arrests outside, opens door, smells marijuana, police obtain warrant, defendant claims unlawful pretext; held: probation officer's warrantless search is valid even if based upon a tip from law enforcement as long as CCO had probable cause to believe probationer lived at the residence searched, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009), but see: United States v. Knights, 534 U.S. 112, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001), State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018); II.

Kentucky v. King, 563 U.S. 452, 131 S.Ct. 1849, 179 L.Ed.2d 865 (2011)

Police, without a warrant, follow a suspected drug dealer to an apartment, smell marijuana, knock and announce, hear noises of people inside moving and things being moved, believe drug-related evidence was about to be destroyed, kick in door, enter seize drugs; held: imminent destruction of evidence is an exigency justifying a warrantless search, Brigham City v. Stuart, 547 U.S. 398, 403, 164 L.Ed.2d 650 (2006); where police conduct causes the exigency, the warrantless search is justified as long as the police conduct is objectively reasonable; knocking loudly, shouting "police" in order to see if occupants will open the door or consent to a search is reasonable; court rejects bad faith, reasonable foreseeability that suspects would destroy evidence if police knock and announce as tests; 8-1.

State v. Miles, 159 Wn.App. 282 (2011)

State obtains evidence pursuant to an administrative subpoena which is deemed invalid by Supreme Court, State v. Miles, 160 Wn.2d 236 (2007), because bank records are protected under CONST., art. I, § 7, as a "pervasively regulated industry," state obtains search warrant for same records, trial court suppresses, holding that independent source doctrine, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711, 717 (2005), Murray v. United States, 487 U.S. 533, 101 L.Ed.2d 472 (1988), does not allow warrant because state would not have sought the warrant but for the original flawed subpoena; held: while the inevitable discovery doctrine is rejected in Washington, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620, 636 (2009), test for independent source is (1) whether information improperly obtained is not included in the affidavit in support of the later search warrant and thus did not impact the decision to issue the warrant and (2) were the officers motivated to seek the warrant by the earlier unlawful entry?; here, while evidence exists that shows the Supreme Court's invalidation of the administrative subpoena prompted the state to seek the warrant, trial court must determine as a question of fact whether this motivation prong is met, see: State v. Spring, 128 Wn.App. 398 (2005), State v. Betancourth, 190 Wn.2d 357 (2018); I.

Pers. Restraint of Nichols, 171 Wn.2d 370, 376-79 (2011)

Police informant buys drugs at a motel, police ask desk clerk who is registered in a room, clerk shows registration form, after further investigation police arrest petitioner; held: while random checking of a motel guest registry violates CONST., art. I, § 7, State v. Jorden, 160 Wn.2d 121 (2007), Los Angeles v. Patel, 576 U.S. 409, 135 S.Ct. 2443, 192 L.Ed.2d 435 (2015), an examination of a registry as a result of individualized suspicion does not violate the constitution; 5-4.

State v. E.K.P., 162 Wn.App. 675 (2011)

Assistant principal hears from unnamed "reliable" student that respondent smells of alcohol and might possess alcohol, assistant principal approaches respondent in parking lot, asks her to come to office, sees her try to hide backpack, in office does not smell alcohol, searches backpack, finds alcohol; held: informant's report and attempt to hide backpack gave school official reasonable grounds to suspect that a search of backpack would find alcohol, New Jersey v. T.L.O., 469 U.S. 325, 341-42, 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985), State v. B.A,S., 103 Wn.App. 549, 553-54 (2000); Aguilar-Spinelli test is inapplicable unless search is by a police officer, see: State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-48 (1980); II.

State v. Parris, 163 Wn.App. 110 (2011)

Defendant is on community custody for failure to register as a sex offender, conditions include no contact with minors, no alcohol, no possession of sexually explicit materials, CCO learns he was seen by a police officer with an underage woman, goes to his home, knocks, no answer, looks in window, sees defendant and young female hiding, orders them to exit, arrests defendant, searches room, observes syringes, alcohol, pornography, seizes storage media, later views it and observes defendant having sex with 17 year old, is convicted of child porn; held: probationers and sex offenders have reduced privacy rights, Det. Of Campbell, 139 Wn.2d 341, 355-56 (1999), State v. Lucas, 56 Wn.App. 236, 239-40 (1989); CCO may search an offender's personal property without a warrant, RCW 9.94A.631(1) (2009), see: State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018), thus search of memory cards was lawful as CCO had reasonable suspicion that they contained evidence of additional violations based upon defendant's mother's report that he was out of control and threatened to shoot CCO, cf.: State v. Jardinez, 184 Wn.App. 518 (2014), State v. Livingston, 197 Wn.App. 590 (2017); because memory card was apparently not password-protected, it was not a locked container; II.

State v. Hilton, 164 Wn.App. 81, 89-93 (2011)

Homicide victim is shot, nearby are shell casings of the same caliber as gunshots but an unusual brand, police begin contacting local ammunition sellers, seize pursuant to a warrant used shell casings which testing shows were fired from the murder weapon, ammo seller is found who sold that type of bullet to defendant, Court of Appeals suppresses evidence seized by warrant, on retrial trial court admits seller's testimony that he sold that type of ammo to defendant; held: because police had recognized unusual nature of the ammunition and had begun tracing it before seeking the warrant, independent source doctrine justifies admission at trial, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005), *State v. Smith,*177 Wn.2d 533 (2013), State v. Betancourth, 190 Wn.2d 357 (2018), distinguished from inevitable discovery which is not recognized in Washington; III.

United States v. Jones, 565 U.S. 400, 132 S.Ct. 945, 181 L.Ed.2d 911 (2012)

Placing a GPS device on a car is a search which requires a warrant, State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 259-69 (2003), Grady v. North Carolina, 575 U.S. 306, 135 S.Ct. 459, 191 L.Ed.2d 459 (2015); 9-0.

Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 566 U.S. 318, 132 S.Ct. 1510, 182 L.Ed.2d 566 (2012)

Defendant is arrested for failing to appear at a hearing regarding nonpayment of a fine, booked into jail and, before being placed in general population, strip searched; held: strip search of an arrestee commmitted to general population does not violate Fourth Amendment; 5-4.

State v. Meneese, 174 Wn.2d 937 (2012)

Uniformed police officer assigned as a school resource officer observes respondent in bathroom with marijuana, takes him to principal's office, searches respondent's locked backpack, finds weapon; held: school search exception, New Jersey v. T.L.O., 469 U.S. 325, 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985), does not apply where officer is a fully commissioned law enforcement officer employed by a police department who has no ability to discipline students, officer was seeking to obtain evidence for criminal prosecution not school discipline, search was not to maintain order as respondent was being removed from school regardless of the search; reverses State v. J.M., 162 Wn.App. 27 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Barron, 170 Wn.App. 742 (2012)

Police respond to residence on assault with knife call, find defendant outside bleeding and crying, she tells police she was chased out at knife point, police ask her to sit in patrol car, she agrees, take her purse, speak to other witnesses, arrest defendant for disorderly conduct, search purse, find drug residue, take defendant to police station, observe nervousness, strip search and find drugs; held: when defendant was placed in patrol car, she was a witness, not a suspect, State v. Dorey, 145 Wn.App. 423, 429 (2008), State v. Carney, 142 Wn.App. 197 (2007), but exigency of report of assault with a weapon, defendant's acknowledgement she was in an altercation are sufficient to justify brief detention, State v. Rubio, 185 Wn.App. 387 (2015); arrest for misdemeanor not committed in officer's presence was justified as officers had probable cause that physical harm and theft occurred, thus warrantless arrest for misdemeanor was proper, RCW 10.31.100 (2010); strip search based upon nervousness alone, where arrest was not for a violent offense, escape, burglary, use of a deadly weapon or drug offense, is unlawful absent written approval from jail supervisor RCW 10.79.130 (1986), cf.: State v. Audley, 77 Wn.App. 897, 905-08 (1995), Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 566 U.S. 318, 182 L.Ed.2d 566 (2012); III.

Florida v. Harris, 568 U.S. 237, 185 L.Ed.2d 61 (2013)

Evidence of a drug dog's satisfactory performance in a certification or training program can itself provide sufficient reason to trust his alert; "[i]f a bona fide organization has certified a dog after testing his reliability in a controlled setting, a court can presume (subject to any conflicting evidence offered) that the dog's alert provides probable cause to search. The same is true, even in the absence of formal certification, if the dog has recently and successfully completed a training program that evaluated his proficiency in locating drugs;" 9-0.

Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1. 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013)

Police bring drug dog to front door of home, dog alerts, obtain warrant, find drugs; held: curtilage of home is constitutionally protected and, while knocking on front door is not a privacy violation, Breard v. Alexandria, 341 U.S. 622, 95 L.Ed. 1233 (1951), Kentucky v. King, 563 U.S. 452, 131 S.Ct. 1849, 179 L.Ed.2d 865 (2011), because there is a "customary invitation" for citizens to do so, introducing a trained police dog exceeds that invitation and is a search, Kyllo v. United States, 533 U.S. 27, 150 L.Ed.2d 94 (2001); 5-4.

Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013)

In DUI investigations, natural dissipation of alcohol in bloodstream does not constitute an exigency in every case sufficient to justify a blood test without a warrant, whether a warrantless blood test is reasonable must be determined case by case based upon totality of the circumstances, Schmerber v. California, 384 U.S. 757, 771, 16 L.Ed.2d 908 (1966), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), see: State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), , State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), but see: Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016), state's proposed per se rule fails to account for advances that allow for the more expeditious processing of warrant applications; 5-4.

State v. Smith,177 Wn.2d 533 (2013)

Police unlawfully run names in a motel registry to check for warrants, State v. Jorden, 160 Wn.2d 121 (2007), arrest defendant at threshold of motel room, see bloodied victims in room, enter room, rescue victims who tell police about evidence in a dumpster which police search and seize without warrants, trial court admits evidence under inevitable discovery doctrine, later invalidated, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009), Court of Appeals affirms under attenuation and independent source doctrine, State v. Smith, 165 Wn.App. 296 (2011); held: police presence at room door was the fruit of the unlawful motel registry search, thus independent source doctrine does not justify entry, but community caretaking and need to render emergency aid do justify entry, State v. Acrey, 148 Wn.2d 738, 748 (2003), search was not motivated by any investigatory purpose, victims were in plain view, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 19-23 (1989), State v. Stevenson, 55 Wn.App. 725 (1989), evidence in dumpster was discovered from victim's information volunteered contemporaneous with efforts to render aid; willing victim's testimony is not amenable to suppression; 8-1.

State v. Green, 177 Wn.App. 332 (2013)

Police arrest defendant for vehicular homicide, impound and inventory vehicle, in a paper bag find and seize suspicious gift card receipts, obtain warrant to search for evidence of vehicular homicide without mentioning what was seized in the bag, warrant authorizes seizure of evidence of drug and alcohol use and papers of dominions and control, during execution of warrant police find credit cards, put them back and obtain a warrant for identity theft and seize cards which were false or stolen; held: police did not recognize the gift card receipts as inventory items or as evidence of a crime, looking in the paper bag was proper to see if anything of value was present but seizure was for investigatory purposes and thus improper, distinguishing State v. Montague, 73 Wn.2d 381, 382-85 (1968); independent source doctrine, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005), State v. Miles, 159 Wn.App. 282 (2011), does not justify seizure of receipts as they were not found while executing first search warrant, belief that they would have been found had they not been seized during the initial search is speculative, inevitable discovery doctrine is not valid in Washington, State v. Smith, 165 Wn.App. 296, 310, aff'd, 177 Wn.2d 533 (2013); I.

Heien v. North Carolina, 574 U.S. 54, 135 S.Ct. 530, 190 L.Ed.2d 475 (2014)

Defendant is driving with one burnt out brake light, sheriff asks to search car, finds drugs, state law does not require two brake lights; held: a reasonable mistake of law by a police officer (here, there was some ambiguity and inconsistency in the equipment code, see: Kagan, J., concurring) may constitutionally establish reasonable suspicion to stop a car, see also: Michigan v. DeFillippo, 443 U.S. 31, 61 L.Ed.2d 343 (1979), but see: State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); 8-1.

State v. Hinton, 179 Wn.2d 862 (2014)

Officer is handed a smartphone that was seized from an arrestee, defendant sends text message thinking recipient is the arrestee, officer replies, defendant asks to buy drugs, is convicted of attempted possession; held: a text message is a "private affair," protected from warrantless search, CONST. art. I, § 7, a person does not lose all privacy interest in text messages merely because they are disclosed to a recipient, State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021), reversing State v. Hinton, 169 Wn.App. 28 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Roden, 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014)

Incident to drug arrest of Lee, police seize smartphone, detective looks through the phone, sees a text message offering to sell drugs, posing as arrestee Lee replies, arranges to buy drugs, arrest defendant Roden; held: a text message to an individual, as opposed to a group texting function, manifests a subjective intent of privacy, illicit subject matter indicates a belief in privacy, thus text messages were private communications protected by privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(1), detective reading the texts intercepted the messages, police should have obtained a warrant, thus evidence must be suppressed, State v. Hinton, 179 Wn.2d 862 (2014), but see: State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021), see also: State v. Faford, 128 Wn.2d 476 (1996), cf.: State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666 (2002), State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993); reverses State v. Roden, 169 Wn.App. 59 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Allen, 178 Wn.App. 893, 910-13 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 182 Wn.2d 364 (2015)

Police learn from several informants that accomplice to murder of four police officers is in motel room, check register, see known alias on motel register, don't know if defendant is armed, knock, announce, door is opened, defendant says he knew they were "coming and coming hard," see him appear to reach towards a pillow, SWAT team enters, arrests, apparently evidence seized is offered at trial; held: crime was extremely violent, entry was "relatively peaceable," hands were not visible thus exigent circumstances justified warrantless entry; II.

State v. Hamilton, 179 Wn.App. 870 (2014)

Protected party with protection order finds respondent-defendant in his house where defendant had lived, calls police who ask defendant to come out, protected party finds purse with drugs and hands it to police, defendant tells police it is not her purse but she found it, her rings were in it, she decided to keep it, police search and seize drugs; held: purse was in defendant's home where she had a privacy interest and had her property in the purse so, in spite of her denial of ownership she had a privacy interest, State v. Evans, 159 Wn.2d 402, 409 (2007); judicial estoppel does not preclude defendant from raising a privacy interest because she denied ownership at trial is not material as the evidence should have been suppressed pretrial, defendant did not argue she had no privacy interest, she argued she had no ownership interest; leaving purse in her house is not consistent with abandonment, distinguishing State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282, 291 (2001); II.

State v. Jardinez, 184 Wn.App. 518 (2014)

Defendant misses meeting with CCO, two weeks later they meet, defendant admits he used marijuana, CCO orders defendant to empty pockets, seizes and searches iPod, finds video from that day showing defendant with shotgun, search his home, find shotgun, at felon in possession trial court suppresses, state appeals; held: while a CCO is authorized to search a probationer's person and property without a warrant if there is reasonable cause or a well-founded suspicion, RCW 9.94A.631(1) (2012), State v. Masey, 81 Wn.App. 198, 200 (1996), the suspicion must relate to the suspected violation of a condition of community custody, State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374 (2010), State v. Livingston, 197 Wn.App. 590 (2017), see also: State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296(2018), distinguishing State v. Parris, 163 Wn.App. 110 (2011); here there was no relationship between the failure to report and the device, trial court affirmed; III.

Grady v. North Carolina, 575 U.S. 306, 135 S.Ct. 1368, 191 L.Ed.2d 459 (2015)

Requiring a sex offender to be subjected to satellite-based monitoring implicates the Fourth Amendment, court must first determine if it is a reasonable search, see: United States v. Jones, 565 U.S. 400, 132 S.Ct. 945,181 L.Ed.2d 911 (2012), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 259-69 (2003); per curiam.

Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L. Ed. 2d 492 (2015)

Absent reasonable suspicion, police extension of a traffic stop in order to conduct a dog sniff violates Fourth Amendment, see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), cf.: United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983), Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005); 6-3.

City of Los Angeles v. Patel, 576 U.S. 409 135 S.Ct. 2443, 192 L.Ed.2d 435 (2015)

Ordinance which requires hotel operators to provide the police with guest information upon demand violates Fourth Amendment as it does not provide for precompliance review; 5-4.

State v. Brock, 184 Wn.2d 148 (2015)

Defendant, wearing backpack, is detained, told to remove backpack, lawfully frisked, told to accompany officer to patrol car, officer carries backpack, arrests defendant, searches backpack, finds drugs; held: when an officer removes an item from an arrestee's person during a Terry stop which ripens into an arrest, passage of time does not negate a lawful search of the item incident to arrest, State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. MacDicken, 179 Wn.2d 936 (2014), State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675 (1992), see: State v. Alexander, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019); reverses State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Rubio, 185 Wn.App. 387 (2015)

Police, investigating a domestic violence offense, knowing that the apparent suspect has fled, enters apartment, observes defendant on couch, to "check on his welfare and to find out what happened" ask for identification, find warrants, arrest, at jail find drugs; held: detention was reasonable due to exigent circumstances, imperative that police locate victim, had reasonable cause to believe crime was just committed at the address involving injury, that defendant had knowledge that would aid in investigating and request for identification was "necessary to determine the true identity," State v. Dorey, 145 Wn.App. 423 (2008), State v. Barron, 170 Wn.App. 712 (2012), but see: State v. Carney, 142 Wn.App. 197 (2007); III.

State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015)

Police lawfully arrest defendant wearing a backpack, search backpack incident to arrest, find locked container, pry open container, observe drugs, obtain warrant; held: neither inventory nor search incident to arrest authorize search of a locked box absent a warrant, cf.: State v. Dunham, 194 Wn.App. 744 (2016), State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019), warrant issued here was based upon unlawful search, State v. Dugas, 109 Wn.App. 592 (2001), State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 155-56 (1980); II.

State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015)

Mother reports 15 year old son ran away, officer finds him, detains intending to take him to secure facility for juveniles pursuant to Family Reconciliation Act, RCW 13.32A.050(2), knows facility requires full search so on street searches and finds drugs; held: unlike detention pursuant to involuntary treatment act, ch. 13.32A RCW, State v. Dempsey, 88 Wn.App. 918 (1997), detainee here did not pose imminent threat of harm thus pat-down strictly for weapons was sufficient to protect officer, State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020), cf.: State v. Acrey, 148 Wn.2d 738 (2003); III.

State v. Rooney, 190 Wn.App. 653 (2015)

CCO with DOC warrant enter a home with police, enter bedroom of subject of the warrant, arrest subject, defendant is co-habitant of the room who objects to search, police search and find drugs and sees lots of swords and knives, defendant asks to dress, police search pants before defendant puts them on, finds a gun which defendant may not possess, is charged with drugs and VUFA; held: a probationer may be searched without a warrant not as an exception to the warrant requirement, but because a probationer must consent to a search, RCW 9.94A.631(1), but a cohabitant with common authority over the premises who is present and who objects has the right to require a warrant, State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), thus drugs suppressed; frisk of defendant's pants was valid for safety reasons due to weapons in room; II.

State v. Mitchell, 190 Wn.App. 919 (2015)

Defendant departs public bus, fare enforcement officer (FEO) asks for proof of payment, RCW 35.58.580, defendant says he paid but lacks proof, RCW 35.58.020(16), FEO is authorized to write a civil infraction, RCW 35.58.585(2)(b)(ii), asks for identification which defendant lacks, detains and calls for police, RCW 7.80.060, who discover warrant, arrest, find gun, defendant is convicted of VUFA; held: FEO is authorized to request proof of fare after passenger leaves bus and can detain absent identification if passenger lacks proof of fare; I.

State v. Mecham, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016)

A field sobriety test is not a search, defendant has no constitutional right to refuse, refusal may be used at trial, per four justices in lead opinion; four justices in dissent hold that FSTs are a seizure, defendant has the right to refuse; concurrence would hold that FSTs following a traffic stop based on evidence of impaired driving or following a stop for an unrelated offense where officer immediately discovers signs of impairment but suspect is not yet under arrest, are a seizure that may be justified as a Terry stop; thus, per Justice Wiggins lead opinion, "five justices hold that an FST is a seizure but not a search as long as the suspect has not already been arrested for an unrelated offense and the seizure is justified under Terry, cf.: Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019); reverses State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932 (2014).

State v. Samalia, 186 Wn.2d 262 (2016)

Vehicle driven by defendant is stopped by police as stolen, defendant escapes on foot, officer finds cell phone in car, without a warrant uses contents of cell phone to identify driver who moves to suppress; held: defendant abandoned privacy interest in cell phone and its data by voluntarily leaving it in the stolen vehicle; fleeing establishes abandonment as opposed to misplaced property, cf.: State v. Kealey, 80 Wn.App. 162 (1995); affirms State v. Samalia, 186 Wn.App. 224 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Gutierrez-Meza, 191 Wn.App. 849 (2015)

Following the filing of a theft charge court enters an ex parte order requiring a bank to freeze defendant's bank account; held: the order entered was not a search warrant nor the functional equivalent of a search warrant, State v. Garcia-Salgado, 170 Wn.2d 176 (2010), see: State v. Phillip, 9 Wn.App.2d 464 (2019) Carpenter v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2206, 201 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018), and was thus error; III.

Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. 232, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016)

During unlawful investigative stop of vehicle police learn of arrest warrant, defendant is arrested for the warrant, search incident to arrest yields drugs; held: discovery of arrest warrant during the unconstitutional detention breaks the causal chain thus attenuation doctrine applies, Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S.Ct. 2254, 45 L.Ed.2d 416 (1975), but see: State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019), and drugs are admissible; attenuation doctrine analysis: (1) look to the "temporal proximity" between the unconstitutional conduct and the discovery of evidence to determine how closely the discovery of evidence followed the unconstitutional search(2) consider the presence of intervening circumstances; (3) and "particularly" significant, examine "the purpose and flagrancy of the official misconduct;" 6-3.

Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, admits to smoking marijuana, police obtain warrantless blood test, at suppression hearing officers testify that it would take up to 1½ hours to obtain a warrant by email but could have obtained a telephonic warrant, toxicologist testifies that marijuana dissipates, trial court holds that this was an exigent circumstance justifying warrantless seizure; held: government has burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence that a warrant could not have been obtained within a reasonable period of time, natural dissipation is a factor but is not a per se exigent circumstance; here blood test results should have been suppressed on different grounds, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009), State v. Rulan

C., 97 Wn.App. 884 (1999), State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 133 S.Ct. 1552, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020); I.

State v. Olsen, 189 Wn.2d 118 (2017)

Following DUI conviction in district court probation condition of random UAs is authorized, RCW 3.66.067 (2013), 46.61.5055 (2016), and does not violate state or U.S. constitutions, where ordered to monitor compliance with a condition of abstention; probation officer need not have a well-founded suspicion to demand UA; affirms State v. Olsen, 194 Wn.App. 264 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Blockman, 198 Wn.App. 34, 38-40 (2017) , aff'd, on other grounds, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018)

Police, investigating a report of assault in an apartment, contact resident of apartment who invites them in, informs officer that there were two other people in apartment, agrees to protective sweep, officer "had concerns for his safety," officer enters room, observes drug transaction, arrests defendant [facts are unclear]; held: a protective sweep need not be preceded by an arrest, police were investigating a violent crime in an apartment, told about two other people, thus had an articulable, reasonable belief that people might "jump out and surprise him," thus protective sweep was valid, State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262, 268 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009); I.

State v. Pippin, 200 Wn.App. 826 (2017)

A "tent-like structure" on public land without permission is entitled to CONST. art. I § 7 protection from search without a warrant; Division II declines to follow State v. Cleator, 71 Wn.App. 217 (1993).

Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 201 L.Ed.2d 9 (2018)

Police, with probable cause to believe motorcycle is stolen and that it is located in driveway alongside defendant's house enter driveway, remove tarp from motorcycle; held: a driveway is part of the curtilage, when a law enforcement officer physically intrudes on the curtilage to gather evidence, a search within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment has occurred. Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 6, 133 S.Ct. 1409, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013) and thus is presumptively unreasonable absent a warrant; 8-1.

Carpenter v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2206, 201 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018)

Police obtain court order for cell phone site location information on "reasonable grounds" based upon 18 U.S.C. § 2703(d) (2018); held: cell site location information is protected by the Fourth Amendment and can only be obtained, even from a third party, on probable cause with a warrant, State v. Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019), *overruled, on other grounds, State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022); 5-4.

State v. Cornwell, 190 Wn.2d 296 (2018)

Driver, on probation, is stopped for a warrant, arresting officer calls CCO who searches car and finds drugs; held: while a probationer may be searched by a probation officer without a warrant if s/he suspects that the probationer has violated probation, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620, 628 (2009), Griffin v. Wisconsin 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987), there must be a nexus between the property searched and the probation violation; here, the only known violation of probation was failure to report, thus there was no nexus with the vehicle; 7-1.

State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 63 (2018)

Texas police seize defendant's computer pursuant to search warrant, make a mirror image and send it to Washington State Patrol which searches it without another warrant, observes child porn; held: under "silver platter" doctrine evidence seized in another state is admissible in Washington even if the manner in which the evidence was seized would violate Washington law as long as the forum state's officers were not acting as agents of Washington law enforcement, State v. Fowler, 157 Wn.2d 387 (2006), State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 587-88 (1997), State v. Mezquia, 129 Wn.App. 118, 132-34 (2005), State v. Gwinner, 59 Wn.App. 119 (1990), Pers. Restraint of Teddington, 116 Wn.2d 761 (1991); I.

State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281, 290-95 (2018)

Defendant is found near motorcycle crash, smells of alcohol, admits drinking and driving, before medivac takes defendant to hospital deputy draws blood at scene, at suppression hearing testifies that he lacked cell phone coverage and a warrant takes 45 minutes, telephone warrant process is "problematic" and hasn't worked in the past, court admits blood test results; held: obtaining a warrant for blood draw was "not practical," medical treatment may have impacted efficacy of blood sample, delay in obtaining blood at hospital might have resulted in dissipation of alcohol, thus exigent circumstances existed for warrantless search, State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), distinguishing Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 133 S.Ct. 1552 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013); II.

State v. A.S., 6 Wn.App.2d 264 (2018)

Vice-principal of school searches non-student's backpack, finds drugs; held: school search exception, State v. Brooks, 43 Wn.App. 560 (1986), New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1983), State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49 (2010), State v. E.K.P., 162 Wn.App. 675 (2011), applies to students absent some emergency; I.

Mitchell v. Wisconsin, 588 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 2525, 204 L.Ed.2d 1040 (2019)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, is too lethargic for a breath test at the scene, police drive him to station to take a more reliable breath test but on the way defendant becomes unconscious, is taken to hospital where blood is drawn; held: exigent circumstances "almost always" permits a blood draw without a warrant where a driver suspected of drunk driving is unconscious and therefore cannot be given a breath test; while the time required to obtain a warrant has shrunk with technology, it has not disappeared, and with an unconscious driver, forcing police to put off other tasks justify a blood draw without a warrant, distinguishing Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019)

Police unlawfully seize defendant, advise him of his right to refuse a search, defendant consents to search of his vehicle, police find drugs, trial court denies suppression under attenuation doctrine, Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. ——, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 2061, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016), concluding that consent attenuated the unlawful seizure; held: under the state constitution the attenuation doctrine must be narrowly applied such that "[t}he State must prove that intervening circumstances gave rise to a superseding cause that genuinely severed the causal connection between official misconduct and the discovery of evidence. If the State fails to meet its burden then the attenuation doctrine cannot apply, regardless of whether the official misconduct was flagrant and purposeful, and regardless of whether suppression is likely to deter similar misconduct in the future;" here, the requested consent occurred while the illegal seizure was ongoing and the consent was not an independent act of free will sufficient to establish a superseding cause, State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997); 9-0.

State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019)

Defendant is arrested by a stolen car parked on private property, police impound, during inventory search open small zippered nylon CD case, find drugs; held: while a warrantless inventory search of closed luggage or a car trunk is impermissible, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 155 (1980), State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.App. 652, 675-76 (2015), "a nylon case that looked like it contained CDs does not possess the same aura of privacy as a purse, shaving kit, or personal luggage," at 159, at least where the case is found in a stolen vehicle; 5-4.

State v. Phillip, 9 Wn.App.2d 464 (2019)

Trial court issues a subpoena duces tecum for cell site location information; held: cell site location information may only be obtained via a warrant on probable cause, regardless if there is probable cause for issuance of a subpoena, Carpenter v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2206, 201 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018), but see: State v. Garcia-Salgado, 170 Wn.2d 176 (2010); op. at 9 Wn.App.2d 464 is withdrawn and superseded; I.

State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019)

Following collision with multiple deaths and injuries defendant is transported to hospital for his own injuries, blood test taken without a warrant; held: state proved by clear and convincing evidence that exigent circumstances existed for warrantless blood draw because of defendant's need for medical treatment which "could impair the integrity of the blood sample, officer testified that it would take 40 to 90 minutes to obtain a warrant for blood, delay caused by obtaining a warrant would result in destruction of evidence or postponing defendant's receipt of necessary medical care, State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281, 290-95 (2018), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), distinguishing Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App.802 (2016), but see: Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016); I.

State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019)

Following homicide police view surveillance video, see a "distinctive" car approached by the victim shortly after which her body is found, three days later officer observes the distinctive car, identified defendant-driver, informed him of the homicide and releases him, obtain warrant to search the car but cannot locate it, three days later police ask defendant's cell phone carrier to

"ping" his phone, discover that he is in a field in Idaho, police there seize the car, inculpatory evidence is found in the car; held: while a cell phone ping is a search pursuant to state and U.S. constitutions, Carpenter v. United States, ___ U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 2206, 201 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018), fear that defendant would flee or otherwise act such as to dissipate the evidence that the car might contain evidence justify a warrantless "ping," exigent circumstances doctrine is not abrogated here even though police might have been able to obtain a telephonic warrant; (fractured opinion, 6 justices affirm State v. Muhammed, 4 Wn.App.2d 31 (2018).

State v. Griffith, 11 Wn.App.2d 661 (2019)

Defendant enters courthouse, is screened for weapons, screener may have felt a cellphone in pocket, told to empty pockets, screener finds drugs; held: special needs doctrine authorizes courthouse area-entry searches, see: York v. Wahkiakum Sch.Dist. No. 200, 163 Wn.2d 297 (2008), State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.2d 898, 902 (1986), Jacobsen v. City of Seattle, 98 Wn.2d 668, 672 (1983), but case is remanded for trial court to determine whether or not screener felt a cellphone and, if not, then search was not properly "cabined" to the scope of the permissible administrative search; III.

State v. Harrier, 14 Wn.App.2d 17 (2020)

Cloud storage company discovers child porn, reports it to police as required, 18 U.S.C. § 2258A, police open images, obtain search warrants which are served on cloud storage company for name of customer, then obtain warrant for defendant's computer, observe child porn; held: customer has no privacy interest in images held by a third party State v. Eisfeldt, 163 Wn.2d 628, 636 (2008); child porn is contraband and there is no privacy interest in contraband, citing State v. Carter, 151 Wn.2d 118, 126-27 (2004); II.

Lange v California, __ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 2011, 210 L.Ed.2d 486 (2021)

Officer observes defendant-driver listening to loud music, repeatedly honking horn, turns on overhead lights, defendant drives 100 feet to his own driveway, enters his garage, officer follows him in, observes signs of intoxication, processes and arrests for DUI, California Court of Appeal concludes that an officer's hot pursuit into a house to prevent suspect from frustrating the arrest is always permissible; held: while entry into a home to chase a fleeing felon is always permissible, United States v. Santana, 427 U.S. 38, 96 S.Ct. 2406, 49 L.Ed.2d 300 (1976), pursuit of a fleeing misdemeanant does not trigger a categorical rule allowing a warrantless home entry, Welsh v. Wisconsin, 466 U.S. 740, 742–743, 104 S.Ct. 2091, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984), rather gravity of the offense must be considered in a case-by-case analysis, Seattle v. Altschuler, 53 Wn.App. 317 (1989), State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991); 9-0.

Caniglia v. Strom, et al., ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 1596, 209 L.Ed.2d 604 (2021)

Police see petitioner sitting on his porch, he agrees to be transported for psychiatric evaluation, police enter his home and seize firearms; held: while an impounded vehicle may be searched for firearms without a warrant, Cady v. Dombrowski, 413 U.S. 433, 93 S.Ct. 2523, 37 L.Ed.2d 706 (1973), community caretaking function does not justify entering a home without a warrant; 9-0.

State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021)

Homeland Security agent arrests a drug dealer who gives them permission to search his cell phone, discover texts between arrestee and defendant regarding drugs, agent uses his own cell phone to contact defendant posing as arrestee, defendant agrees to meet, is arrested, drugs found; held: while defendant had a privacy interest in the text messages he sent to the arrestee, texts sent to defendant by agent did not "physically invade" defendant's cell phone, ruse merely capitalized on validly obtained information from the consenting arrestee, distinguishing State v. Hinton, 179 Wn.2d 862, 876-77 (2014); while defendant has a privacy interest in the texts he sent to the arrestee, Hinton, supra., at 865; agent's ruse in posing as the arrestee does not violate defendant's privacy rights under U.S. or state constitution, Hoffa v. United States, 385 U.S. 293, 302, 87 S. Ct. 408, 17 L. Ed. 2d 374 (1966), State v. Goucher, 124 Wn.2d 778 (1994); sending uninvited text messages as a ruse is not a trespass on defendant's cell phone as there is no physical invasion; reverses State v. Bowman, 14 Wn.App.2d 562 (2020); 9-0.

SENTENCING*

State v. Blight, 89 Wn.2d 38 (1977)

Court may consider arrests that have not resulted in convictions; 9-0.

In Re George, 90 Wn.2d 90 (1978)

Escape starts maximum sentence anew; accord: In re Mayner, 107 Wn.2d 512 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Gibler, 22 Wn.App. 640 (1979), disapproved, in part, State v. Sanchez, 146 Wn.2d 339 (2002)

Defense must object when state breaches plea bargain or no specific performance or withdrawal of plea, see: State v. Crider, 78 Wn.App. 849 (1995); new offense may justify breach of plea bargain; I.

State v. Sterling, 23 Wn.App. 171 (1979)

Where substantial delay between verdict and sentencing, apply balancing test; I.

State v. Bolton, 23 Wn.App. 708 (1979)

Court may consider unsworn statement on matters not directly related to the crime if defendant has opportunity to rebut; II.

State v. Scott, 92 Wn.2d 209 (1979)

Court can vacate sentence per CR 60(b); see also: State v. Duncan, 21 Wn.App. 323 (1978); 9-0.

State ex rel. Schillberg v. Cascade Dist. Ct., 94 Wn.2d 772 (1980)

Court can defer prosecution, RCW 10.05, on defendant's motion over state's objection; 9-0.

Roberts v. United States, 63 L.Ed.2d 622 (1980)

Sentencing judge can consider defendant's refusal to cooperate with officials conducting investigation in imposing penalty, but Fifth Amendment claim or expression of fear of retaliation may limit trial court's ability to enhance if raised in timely fashion; 8-1.

Whalen v. United States, 63 L.Ed.2d 715 (1980)

While holding that, in this case, felony-murder (rape) and rape of same victim merge, majority leaves open possibility that legislatures could permit double punishment; 7-2.

State v. Dorosky, 28 Wn.App. 128 (1981)

Change in circumstances occurring after entry of judgment is not grounds for modification of sentence under CR 60(b)(11); modifies State v. Scott, 92 Wn.2d 209 (1979); accord: State v. Cirkovich, 42 Wn.App. 403 (1985), see: State v. Snapp, 119 Wn.App. 614, 626-27 (2004), but see: State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106, 113-15 (2004; I.

---

* See also: GUILTY PLEAS, PLEA BARGAINS

In re Shriner, 95 Wn.2d 541 (1981)

Sentences for multiple convictions arising from same act shall run concurrently unless, at the time of sentencing, the court expressly orders consecutive sentences, per RCW 9.92.080(2), see: State v. King, 149 Wn.App. 96(2009); thus, where court suspends sentence, and is silent as to concurrent or consecutive sentences, court cannot impose consecutive sentences upon revocation, see: State v. Mahone, 164 Wn.App. 146 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Cunningham, 96 Wn.2d 31 (1981)

Trial judge sentenced defendant to prison for robbery 1° while armed with a firearm, stating that it always sentences defendants to prison for armed robbery, held: court properly exercised discretion; no constitutional right to individualized sentencing determinations except in death penalty cases; 7-2.

Albernaz v. United States, 67 L.Ed.2d 275 (1981)

Where a defendant is convicted of two counts of conspiracy, which arise from a single conspiracy having multiple objectives, consecutive sentences may be imposed; 9-0.

State v. Russell, 31 Wn.App. 646 (1982)

Defendant pleads guilty to possession with intent to deliver marijuana; presentence report alleges that defendant was involved in major marijuana activities after the plea was entered, whereupon defendant requests and is granted an opportunity to controvert the presentence report in an evidentiary hearing; at hearing, police testify that a reliable, confidential informant observed defendant load large quantities of marijuana into a truck; defendant requests disclosure of informant's identities; court continues sentencing, holds in camera interview with police and informants and declares that informant's identity should not be disclosed and that informant's information is reliable, sentences defendant to prison; held: defendant was granted opportunity to rebut, informants were examined under oath, defendant does not have right to submit written questions for judge to ask informant, affirmed; I.

State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 680 (1982)

Defendant charged with multiple counts of promoting prostitution for having multiple prostitutes working for him may be convicted on each count but must receive concurrent sentences; but see: State v. Song, 50 Wn.App. 325 (1988), State v. Barbee, 187 Wn.2d 375 (2017); II.

State v. Delange, 31 Wn.App. 800 (1982)

Sentencing judge discloses intended sentence, then grants defendant right of allocution, held: no error, cf.: State v. Gonzales, 90 Wn.App. 853 (1998), but see: State v. Crider, 78 Wn.App. 849 (1995), State v. Aguilar-Rivera, 83 Wn.App. 199 (1996); III.

State v. Hall, 32 Wn.App. 108 (1982)

Defendant pleaded guilty to probation recommendation by state, receives deferred sentence; after sentencing, state determines that defendant gave false name and had a record; sentence is vacated and defendant is sent to prison; held: defendant's giving false name to induce a plea bargain is fraud justifying rescission of plea agreement and vacation of original sentence, CR60(b), and/or revocation of probation, RCW 9.95.230, see: State v. Hardesty, 129 Wn.2d 303 (1996); I.

In re James, 96 Wn.2d 847 (1982)

Defendant pleads guilty to felony, with probation recommendation by state; prior to sentencing, defendant is arrested for two misdemeanors; based upon these arrests, state recommends prison; held: remanded for withdrawal of plea or specific performance of plea bargain, as state did not prove misdemeanors, State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151 (2003); 5-4.

Avlonitis v. Seattle District Court, 97 Wn.2d 131 (1982)

District court's jurisdiction is limited to the term of sentence actually imposed; where court sentences defendant to 30 days suspended, court cannot revoke probation after 30 days; district court can defer for one year and revoke and impose a jail term within that year; municipal courts may not impose probation for more than six months; reverses Avlonitis v. Seattle District Court, 27 Wn.App. 606; 8-0.

In re Phelan, 97 Wn.2d 590 (1982)

Where defendant is sentenced to prison, s/he is entitled to credit for time served against maximum sentence for all time served prior to imposition of sentence, including pre-trial detention, presentence detention and time served in jail as a condition of probation, State v. Poston, 117 Wn.App. 925 (2003), cf.: State v. Williams, 59 Wn.App. 379 (1990), State v. Speaks, 119 Wn.2d 204 (1992), State v. Vasquez, 75 Wn.App. 896 (1994), Pers. Restraint of Costello, 131 Wn.App. 828 (2006), State v. Enriquez-Martinez, 198 Wn.2d 98 (2021), see: Pers. Restraint of King, 146 Wn.2d 658 (2002); overrules, in part, State v. Wills, 68 Wn.2d 903 (1966) and State v. Monday, 12 Wn.App. 429, aff'd on other grounds, 85 Wn.2d 906 (1975); court should specify on judgment and sentence amount of credit to which defendant is entitled, but see: Postsentence Review of Combs, 176 Wn.App. 112 (2013); defendant is not entitled to credit against maximum sentence for nondetention probation time; 9-0.

State v. Peterson, 97 Wn.2d 864 (1982)

At plea, state agrees to recommend no jail time; at sentencing, defense counsel asks prosecutor to speak in support of state's recommendation; court refuses to permit prosecutor to speak, although court acknowledges state's recommendation and sentences defendant to jail; held: court abused discretion by refusing to grant defendant's request to allow prosecutor to explain the recommendation and remands for resentencing before a different trial judge; but see: United States v. Benchimol, 85 L.Ed.2d 462 (1985), State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866 (1990); 5-4.

Hutto v. Davis, 70 L.Ed.2d 556 (1982)

Sentence of consecutive 20 year prison terms and $20,000 fine for possession and distribution of 9 oz. of marijuana held not to be cruel and unusual, see: Ewing v. California, 155 L.Ed.2d 108 (2003), Lockyear v. Andrade, 155 L.Ed.2d 144 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Theroff, 33 Wn.App. 741 (1983)

Court can defer sentence for murder 2°; court may not condition probation upon paying money to a private charity; III.

State v. Romano, 34 Wn.App. 567 (1983)

Sentencing judge contacts individuals about defendant ex parte without revealing the fact prior to sentencing; held: judge may not make an *ex parte, undisclosed investigation, see: State v. Watson, 120 Wn.App. 521, 534-36 (2004); remanded for resentencing before a different judge; II.

State v. Morley, 35 Wn.App. 45 (1983)

Defendant pleads guilty to probation recommendation, prior to sentencing is arrested for two misdemeanors; at sentencing prosecutor equivocates; court, at sentencing, states that defendant "committed two more crimes," sentences to prison, motion to withdraw plea is denied; held: court failed to hold evidentiary hearing to permit defense to call witnesses and require state to prove defendant's alleged breach by a preponderance, In re James, 96 Wn.2d 847 (1982), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151 (2003); remanded for a determination whether to allow withdrawal of plea or specific performance "with the defendant's preference to be accorded considerable weight"; court defines specific performance as resentencing before different judge with state bound to make an unequivocal recommendation, State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); III.

State v. Niemann, 35 Wn.App. 89 (1983)

Defendant does not have right to presentence report, CrR 7.2(a)(5) or time for defense counsel to prepare written report; III.

State v. Thomas, 35 Wn.App. 161 (1983)

Defendant receives suspended sentence, RCW 9.92.060, for assault, completes probation and has civil rights restored, RCW 9.92.066; defendant is charged with felon in possession of pistol, RCW 9.41.040; held: restoration of civil rights following suspended sentence will not prevent subsequent conviction of Uniform Firearms Act prosecution, RCW 9.41.040, Dickeson v. New Banner Institute, Inc., 74 L.Ed.2d 845 (1983); I.

State v. Hall, 35 Wn.App. 302 (1983)

Three-hour deferred sentence for robbery 2° conviction is invalid, as too short to permit rehabilitation; when probation is granted court must order defendant to report to probation officer, RCW 9.95.210; I.

State v. Elmore, 36 Wn.App. 38 (1983)

Without a plea bargain, respondent pleads guilty, but is misinformed as to the standard range, seeks specific performance; held: no right to specific performance in the absence of a plea bargain that is breached; sole remedy is withdrawal of plea; II.

Harris v. Kastama, 98 Wn.2d 765 (1983)

Prisoners sentenced under repealed statute sought habeas corpus relief alleging that their sentences were cruel and unusual since legislature had subsequently reduced the maximum terms for the class of crime; held: under these facts (sex abuse of children), sentences were not unconstitutionally disproportionate; 8-0.

State v. Phelan, 100 Wn.2d 508 (1983)

All jail incarceration in connection with a charge must be credited against the maximum, mandatory minimum and discretionary minimum term set by Parole Board; reverses In re Quinlivan, 22 Wn.App. 240, 243-245 (1978); judgment and sentence must reflect this credit; cf.: State v. Williams, 59 Wn.App. 379 (1990), State v. Speaks, 119 Wn.2d 204 (1992); 6-3.

Missouri v. Hunter, 74 L.Ed.2d 535 (1983)

Defendant is convicted of robbery and "armed criminal action" on same facts in one trial; state statute mandates sentences shall run consecutively; held: with respect to cumulative sentences imposed in single trial, double jeopardy does no more than prevent sentencing court from prescribing greater punishment than legislature intended; 7-2.

Solem v. Helm, 77 L.Ed.2d 637 (1983)

Defendant, convicted of his seventh nonviolent felony, is sentenced as a recidivist to life without parole; held: Eighth Amendment requires proportionality analysis, to include gravity of offense and harshness of penalty, sentences imposed on other criminals in the same jurisdiction, and the sentences imposed for commission of same crime in other jurisdictions; here, life sentence was cruel and unusual, see: State v. Moen, 4 Wn.App.2d 589 (2018), but see: Harmelin v. Michigan, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991), Ewing v. California, 155 L.Ed.2d 108 (2003), Lockyear v. Andrade, 155 L.Ed.2d 144 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Mahoney, 36 Wn.App. 499 (1984)

In 1976, defendant is sentenced to three years probation and appeals; 1978, conviction is affirmed; 1981, state files petition to revoke probation, trial court determines it lost jurisdiction in 1979; held: an appeal tolls the commencement of a probationary period until mandate is issued, thus trial court had jurisdiction to revoke, State v. Robinson, 142 Wn.App.649 (2008); II.

State v. Glasser, 37 Wn.App. 131 (1984)

Court cannot defer prosecution, RCW 10.05, after conviction; I.

State v. Peterson, 37 Wn.App. 309 (1984)

Defendant pleads guilty on state's no jail recommendation; at sentencing, defendant demands that prosecutor state reason for recommendation; prosecutor states that co-defendants were only charged with obstructing, but that this defendant was the "star," and that county lacked a jail; held: no breach of plea bargain, prosecutor adequately advocated his agreement, State v. Peterson, 97 Wn.2d 865 (1982); III, 2-1.

State v. Perdang, 38 Wn.App. 141 (1984)

Abuse of discretion for district court to refuse to grant compromise of misdemeanor, RCW 10.22.010-020, except under unique or extraordinary circumstances; court must consider a defendant's "individual circumstances"; see: State v. Cunningham, 96 Wn.2d 31, 35 (1981); I.

State v. McDowell, 102 Wn.2d 341 (1984)

Juvenile accused of reckless endangerment rejects diversion, prosecutor files assault 2° for same incident; held: no presumption of vindictiveness or abuse of discretion, United States v. Goodwin, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982); disposition may exceed that allowed in a diversion agreement, distinguishing RCW 13.40.160(3), unless defense proves actual vindictiveness State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); 9-0.

In re Knapp, 102 Wn.2d 466 (1984)

As condition of probation, petitioner was ordered to enter a state mental hospital for treatment, following hospitalization, petitioner's probation was revoked; held: criminal defendants are entitled to credit for time served for involuntary treatment in a mental hospital; 9-0.

Wasman v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 424 (1984)

After retrial and conviction following a defendant's successful appeal, court may justify increased sentence by identifying conduct or events that occurred subsequent to the original sentencing; here, defendant was convicted of another offense while this case was on appeal even though the offense occurred prior to the original sentencing on this case, the subsequent conviction justifies increased sentence, 9-0.

State v. Smissaert, 103 Wn.2d 636 (1985)

Defendant convicted of murder 1° is sentenced to 20 years; two years later, court corrects sentence to mandatory life; held: court properly resentenced defendant, who is entitled to credit against minimum and maximum; new sentence must not be nunc pro tunc; 7-1.

Seattle v. Stokes, 42 Wn.App. 498 (1986)

Compromise of misdemeanor statute, RCW 10.22, is inapplicable to a charge of reckless driving, since property damage or personal injury is not a necessary element of the charge, State ex rel. Fitch v. Roxbury Dist. Court, 29 Wn.App. 591 (1981), cf.: State v. Stalker, 152 Wn.App. 805 (2009); where court finds that the elements of an offense have been proved, court may not defer a finding, and must impose sentence, JCrR 5.03(b); I.

State v. Soto, 45 Wn.App. 839 (1986)

Defendant is not entitled to same sentencing judge as the one who heard the trial, State v. Sims, 67 Wn.App. 50 (1992); cf.: State v. Bryant, 65 Wn.App. 547 (1992); I.

Texas v. McCullough, 89 L.Ed.2d 104 (1986)

Defendant, convicted of murder, chooses to be sentenced by jury, receives 20 years; trial judge grants new trial, after which defendant is convicted again, chooses to be sentenced by judge, receives 50 years; held: presumption of vindictiveness, North Carolina v. Pearce, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969), where greater sentence is imposed after retrial, is inapplicable here since the judge who granted the retrial is the judge who increased the sentence, see: Alabama v. Smith, 104 L.Ed.2d 865 (1989), State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003), State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004); 6-3.

McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 91 L.Ed.2d 67 (1986)

State statute which mandates a minimum five year sentence if judge finds by preponderance that accused visibly possessed firearm while committing a felony does not violate due process or right to jury trial, Harris v. United States, 153 L.Ed.2d 524 (2002), but see: Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L. Ed.2d 314 (2013); 6-3.

In re Chapman, 105 Wn.2d 211 (1986)

Pre-SRA, where judge revokes a suspended sentence following conviction and sentencing in another county, the judge who revoked may order that sentences run concurrently, overruling In re Jenkins, 32 Wn.App. 269 (1982), approving State v. Lopez, 37 Wn.App. 248 (1984); 9-0.

In re Mayner, 107 Wn.2d 512 (1986)

Murder defendant who escapes and is recaptured is not entitled to credit for time served prior to escape; RCW 9.95.115 does not violate equal protection clause, reversing In re Mayner, 41 Wn.App. 598 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Quiroz, 107 Wn.2d 791 (1987)

A diversion agreement, RCW 13.40.080, may be used to enhance sentence in a subsequent proceeding where the agreement stated the crimes charged, the respondent was given written notice of his right to counsel; juvenile need not be notified of all of the constitutional rights which would apply if he were to plead guilty, see: State v. Phillips, 94 Wn.App. 313 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Escoto, 108 Wn.2d 1 (1987)

Juvenile court may order a psychological evaluation of respondent for use in disposition where the court permits counsel to be present at the evaluation and where the respondent is aware of his right to remain silent, see: State v. Decker, 68 Wn.App. 246 (1993), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967 (1999), State v. Diaz-Cardona, 123 Wn.App. 477 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Jorgenson, 48 Wn.App. 205 (1987)

Where a district court imposes a fine as a condition of probation, the court's jurisdiction to collect the fine expires upon expiration of the probationary period, but see: Smith v. Dist. Court, 147 Wn.2d 98, 108-110 (2002); I.

State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987)

Where co-defendants are sentenced to disparate sentences for the same crime, there must be a rational basis established for the disparity to survive equal protection analysis, see: State v. Caffee, 117 Wn.App. 470 (2003); different sentencing judges is not a rational basis; but see: State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990), State v. Conners, 90 Wn.App. 48 (1998); I.

State v. Bowen, 51 Wn.App. 42 (1988)

A defendant convicted of a lesser included misdemeanor may be sentenced to more than the sentence range for the greater felony; III.

Seattle v. Hogan, 53 Wn.App. 387 (1989)

Where a city ordinance provides for a greater punishment than a state statute having the same elements, then the city may not impose a greater punishment than provided by state law; I.

State v. Ankney, 53 Wn.App. 393 (1989)

Legislation which permits the state to seek either criminal or civil penalties or both does not violate equal protection, Yakima Cy. Clean Air Auth. v. Glascam Builders, Inc., 85 Wn.2d 255 (1975); I.

State v. Pepper, 54 Wn.App. 583 (1989)

Trial court lacks authority to grant good time; III.

State v. Wright, 54 Wn.App. 638 (1989)

Court cannot impose jail as a condition of a deferred prosecution, RCW 10.05; II.

State v. Linnemeyer, 54 Wn.App. 767 (1989)

A felony sentence of less than a year cannot be combined with a misdemeanor sentence to justify a prison term; II.

Alabama v. Smith, 104 L.Ed.2d 865 (1989)

Defendant pleads guilty, is sentenced, later obtains vacation of guilty plea, goes to trial, is convicted, receives greater sentence; held: no presumption of vindictiveness following vacated guilty plea, distinguishing North Carolina v. Pearce, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); 8-1.

State v. Shattuck, 55 Wn.App. 131 (1989)

Where deferred prosecution, RCW 10.05.020, is revoked, defendant's stipulation to police report waives all defenses, State v. Melick, 131 Wn.App. 835, 844-45 (2006), but see: State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23 (2010); I.

State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989)

Defendant is entitled to credit for time served in another state while fighting extradition; II.

State v. Gettman, 56 Wn.App. 51 (1989)

Trial court may not defer prosecution on two misdemeanors which occur more than seven days apart, RCW 10.05.010; III.

State v. Larson, 56 Wn.App. 323 (1989)

Defendant receives consecutive sentences totalling 363 months, appeals; appellate court remands for findings supporting exceptional sentence; on remand, trial court imposes concurrent sentences one of which, 360 months, exceeded that imposed at first sentencing on that count; held: because aggregate sentence is less severe than original sentence, and because "increase" in original sentence was fully explained by trial court's original sentencing intent, State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707, 712-13 (2004), no presumption of vindictiveness, Alabama v. Smith, 104 L.Ed.2d 865 (1989), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), distinguishing North Carolina v. Pearce, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969); no double jeopardy violation, because defendant appealed original case; legal sentence on multiple count charge may be increased to effectuate trial court's original sentencing scheme when scheme is upset by successful legal action of defendant, Pennsylvania v. Goldhammer, 88 L.Ed.2d 183 (1985), Jones v. Thomas, 105 L.Ed.2d 322 (1989); I.

In re Borders, 114 Wn.2d 171 (1990)

Defendants committed to Western State Hospital as sexual psychopaths, RCW 71.06, who are subsequently revoked are not entitled to good time credit for time served at hospital; 9-0.

State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990)

To establish an equal protection violation due to disparate sentence from that of co-defendant, defendant must (1) establish that he is similarly situated by virtue of near identical participation in the crime; if there is no rational basis for the differentiation, then there is an equal protection violation, see: State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992); or (2) if defendant is a member of a suspect class and can establish that she received disparate treatment because of that membership, then there is an equal protection violation; distinguishes State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987); here, co-defendants' roles differed significantly, thus defendant cannot establish that he was similarly situated State v. Conners, 90 Wn.App. 48 (1998); affirms State v. Handley, 54 Wn.App. 377 (1989); see also: State v. Entz, 58 Wn.App. 112 (1990), State v. Caffee, 117 Wn.App. 470 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Gutierrez, 58 Wn.App. 70 (1990)

Defendant is not entitled to counsel at a presentence interview where defendant pled guilty and defense counsel was given notice and did not choose to attend, distinguishing State v. Sargent, 111 Wn.2d 641, 645-46 (1988); I.

State v. Anderson, 58 Wn.App. 107 (1990)

A challenge to sentence contrary to law may be raised on appeal for the first time, State v. Loux, 69 Wn.2d 855 (1966), State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993), State v. Armstrong, 91 Wn.App. 635 (1998), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782, 786-91 (2010), State v. Irwin, 191 Wn.App. 644 (2015); I.

State v. Vinge, 59 Wn.App. 134 (1990)

Twenty-five months after deferred prosecution is granted, court revokes for failure to complete treatment, defense claims court lost jurisdiction after two years; held: because RCW 10.05.120 provides that court shall dismiss "upon proof of successful completion of the two-year" program, then district court maintains authority to revoke beyond the two years, State v. Skrobo, 17 Wn.App.2d 197 (2021); I.

State v. Friend, 59 Wn.App. 365 (1990)

District court cannot impose court costs on a deferred prosecution petitioner, RCW 10.05, absent statutory authority; RCW 10.01.160 allows costs to be imposed only upon convicted defendants; legislatively overruled, RCW 10.01.160(1), (2); II.

State v. Williams, 59 Wn.App. 379 (1990)

Where defendant is detained on parole suspension warrant and a new charge, then at sentencing on the new charge, defendant is not entitled to credit for time served, as he is not being held "solely" on the new charge, RCW 9.94A.120(13) [recodified as RCW 9.94A.505 (2010)], Pers. Restraint of Schillereff, 159 Wn.2d 649 (2007), State v. Lewis, 185 Wn.App. 338 (2014), Matter of Allery, 6 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018), distinguishing State v. Phelan, 100 Wn.2d 508 (1983), see: Pers. Restraint of Costello, 131 Wn.App. 828 (2006), State v. Enriquez-Martinez, 198 Wn.2d 98 (2021); I.

State v. Johnson, 59 Wn.App. 867 (1990)

$700 recoupment ordered where counsel is paid $4000 for 15 indigent defense cases (average $266.67 per case), held: because negotiated fee for each defendant was not $266.67, it is reasonable to conclude some cases would be disposed of summarily and others would take time; in light of time spent on this case, as reflected in the record, apportioning $700 to this defendant was reasonable, RCW 10.01.160; III.

State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131 (1991)

Life without parole for 13-year old is not cruel and unusual; II.

State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991)

Trial court orders HIV test prior to sentencing to corroborate testimony that defendant had AIDS at time he solicited juvenile prostitutes; held: absent a legitimate compelling state interest, nonconsensual HIV testing may not be ordered, except as required by RCW 70.24.330; because the results of HIV testing could not be related back in time, the order requiring the test is reversed; 9-0.

State v. Lua, 62 Wn.App. 34 (1991)

Enhanced penalties for delivery of drugs within 1000 feet of school grounds, RCW 9.94A.310(5), former RCW 69.50.435, are constitutional, cf.: State v. Coria, 62 Wn.App. 44 (1991); III.

State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 336 (1991)

Proof of insurance is not a prerequisite to eligibility for deferred prosecution where defendant states he won't drive during term, RCW 10.05.141, -.160; II.

Harmelin v. Michigan, 115 L.Ed.2d 836 (1991)

Mandatory life sentence for possessing 672 grams of cocaine not cruel and unusual, distinguishing Solem v. Helm, 77 L.Ed.2d 637 (1983), see: Ewing v. California, 155 L.Ed.2d 108 (2003), Lockyear v. Andrade, 155 L.Ed.2d 144 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Saas, 118 Wn.2d 37 (1991)

Imposing suspended sentence rather than deferred is not abuse of discretion where trial court states it is seeking to achieve consistency between its treatment of pre- and post-SRA defendants, thus is not manifestly unreasonable, State v. Cunningham, 96 Wn.2d 31, 34 (1981); 9-0.

State v. Watson, 63 Wn.App. 854 (1992)

Absent mandatory joinder, a defendant has no right to have all crimes sentenced at same time to preclude overlapping sentences; failure to join for purposes of allowing concurrent sentences does not support dismissal for preaccusatorial delay; I.

State v. Curry, 118 Wn.2d 911 (1992)

Imposition of court costs, former RCW 10.01.160, and victim penalty assessment, RCW 7.68.035(1), do not require entry of formal findings of ability to pay, State v. Lundy, 176 Wn.App. 96 (2013), State v. Mathers, 193 Wn.App. 913 (2016), State v. Seward, 196 Wn.App. 579 (2016), affirming State v. Curry, 62 Wn.App. 676 (1991), see also: State v. Bower, 64 Wn.App. 808 (1992), State v. Crook, 146 Wn.App. 24 (2008); 8-0.

State v. Speaks, 119 Wn.2d 204 (1992)

Defendant is statutorily entitled to credit for time served on electronically-monitored pre-trial home detention, RCW 9.94A.120(13), 9.94A.030(7), (31), State v. Swiger, 159 Wn.2d 224 (2006), reversing State v. Speaks, 63 Wn.App. 5 (1991), cf.: State v. Vasquez, 75 Wn.App. 896 (1994), State v. Anderson, 132 Wn.2d 203 (1997), Harris v. Charles, 151 Wn.2d 455 (2011), State v. Dockens, 156 Wn.App. 793 (2010), State v. Alejandro Medina, 180 Wn.2d 282 (2014), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 297-300 (2016), State v. Wheeler, 14 Wn.App.2d 571 (2020), State v. Shelley, 19 Wn.App.2d 451 (2021), but see: RCW 10.21.030(2)(d) (2010); 9-0.

State v. Sims, 67 Wn.App. 50 (1992)

Judge other than one who heard trial is empowered to impose exceptional sentence, State v. Soto, 45 Wn.App. 839 (1986), Jaime v. Rhay, 59 Wn.2d 58, 61-2 (1961), State v. Lindsey, 194 Wash. 129, 132-3 (1938), where no mitigating factors were presented at trial, and even if trial judge is available; I.

State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992)

Prior convictions posit a rational basis for disparity of sentences for co-defendants similarly situated by near identical participation in the crime, State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990); I.

State v. Decker, 68 Wn.App. 246 (1992)

Trial court may order predisposition psychological evaluation of respondent, State v. Escoto, 108 Wn.2d 1 (1987), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967 (1999), and may preclude counsel from attending, cf.: State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992), State v. Diaz-Cardona, 123 Wn.App. 477 (2004); trial court has authority to grant use immunity absent prosecutor's motion, CrR 6.14; I.

United States v. Dunnigan, 122 L.Ed.2d 445 (1993)

Enhancement of sentence for willful perjury based upon impeding or obstructing administration of justice, USSG § 3C1.1, does not undermine the constitutional right to testify; cf.: State v. Houf, 64 Wn.App. 580 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993)

Conditions of sentence on computer trespass defendant that he not own a computer, associate with computer hackers or communicate with computer bulletin boards are reasonably related to defendant's conviction, see also: State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 607-09 (2006); 7-0.

State v. Davis, 69 Wn.App. 634 (1993)

When concurrent sentences are imposed, defendant is not entitled to credit for time served on other sentences, only credit for time served on the instant case, RCW 9.94A.120(14), see: Pers. Restaint of Costello, 131 Wn.App. 828 (2006); I.

State v. Olivas, 122 Wn.2d 73 (1993)

Statute requiring blood draw for DNA identification analysis following conviction of sex or violent offense, RCW 43.43.754, does not violate search and seizure provisions of United States and Washington Constitutions, State v. Surge, 160 Wn.2d 65 (2007), State v. S.S., 122 Wn.App. 725 (2004), is not vague, does not violate equal protection, see also: State v. Freeman, 124 Wn.App. 413 (2004); 8-0.

Wisconsin v. Mitchell, 124 L.Ed.2d 436 (1993)

Penalty enhancement for hate-crime motive does not violate First Amendment; accord: State v. Talley, 122 Wn.2d 192 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Havens, 70 Wn.App. 251 (1993)

Defendant is sentenced to 60 months, prevails on appeal, is retried, convicted and sentenced to an exceptional sentence of 136 months; held: trial judge's denial that the sentence was in retaliation for appealing rebuts the presumption of vindictiveness, distinguishing North Carolina v. Pearce, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969), State v. Franklin, 56 Wn.App. 915 (1989), see: State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300, 306 (1989), State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); III.

State v. Mireles, 73 Wn.App. 605, 616-7 (1994)

Consecutive sentence is within successive sentencing court's discretion, RCW 9.94A.400(3), now 9.94A.589 (2015), )see: Setser v. United States, 566 U.S. 231, 182 L.Ed.2d 455 (2012), State v. King, 149 Wn.App. 96 (2009), absent deliberate delay or manipulation of sequence of trials; III.

State v. Parsley, 73 Wn.App. 666 (1994)

In pre-SRA case, probation period cannot exceed maximum term of sentence, former RCW 9.95.210, distinguishing Pitts v. Rhay, 64 Wn.2d 481 (1964), State v. Alberts, 51 Wn.App. 450 (1988); thus, where a deferred sentence is imposed and subsequently revoked, court cannot then stack a suspended sentence such that total period of probation exceeds maximum sentence; I.

State v. Aguirre, 73 Wn.App. 682 (1994)

Court may not vacate sentence, CrR 7.8(b)(5), to prevent deportation, State v. Quintero Morelos, 133 Wn.App. 591 (2006), accord: State v. Cortez, 73 Wn.App. 838 (1994); I.

State v. Kuhn, 74 Wn.App. 787 (1994)

Defendant, on deferred prosecution, RCW 10.05, is convicted of new DUI and appeals, claims new DUI is not conviction requiring mandatory revocation, RCW 10.05.100, until appeal is terminated; held: conviction is judgment that accused is guilty as charged, trial court may not await appellate determination before revoking; II.

Custis v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 517 (1994)

In federal sentencing proceeding, defendant may not collaterally attack prior convictions to avoid enhancement, except convictions obtained in violation of the right to counsel, Baldasar v. Illinois, 64 L.Ed.2d 169 (1980), State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556, 560 (2008), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013), see: State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175 (1986), State v. Holsworth, 93 Wn.2d 148 (1980), Lackawanna County Dist. Attorney v. Coss, 149 L.Ed.2d 608 (2001), Daniels v. United States, 149 L.Ed.2d 590 (2001); 6-3.

Nichols v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 745 (1994)

A prior uncounseled misdemeanor conviction in which no jail time was imposed may be used to enhance punishment at a subsequent conviction, Scott v. Illinois, 59 L.Ed.2d 383 (1979), overruling Baldasar v. Illinois, 64 L.Ed.2d 169 (1980); but see: McInturff v. Horton, 56 Wn.2d 704 (1975); 6-3.

State v. Kessler, 75 Wn.App. 634, 636-41 (1994)

In pre-prosecution diversion supervised by prosecutor, court's role in reviewing prosecutor's decision to terminate and prosecute is to determine whether state has proved breach of agreement by a preponderance, and whether decision by the prosecutor to terminate was reasonable, State v. Marino, 100 Wn.2d 719, 723-27 (1984), State v. Harrison, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 244 (2022), see: State v. Varnell, 137 Wn.App. 925 (2007), State v. Ashue, 145 Wn.App. 491 (2008); I.

State v. Ellis, 76 Wn.App. 391 (1994)

Sentencing is delayed for two years through no fault of defendant, who turns life around, trial court dismisses on grounds that lengthy delay is oppressive; held: no abuse of discretion, two year delay is presumptively prejudicial, cf.: State v. Modest, 106 Wn.App. 660 (2001); III.

State v. Kelley, 77 Wn.App. 66 (1995)

Department of Corrections may not draw blood for DNA analysis except for inmates convicted of sex offenses or violent offenses, former RCW 43.43.754; possession with intent to deliver is not subject to the DNA statute; II.

State v. Shilling, 77 Wn.App. 166, 175 n.5 (1995)

"The defendant's action or reaction at sentencing should not ordinarily determine whether consecutive sentences are ordered;" I

Reno v. Koray, 132 L.Ed.2d 46 (1995)

Defendant awaiting sentencing in a treatment center to which he was ordered confined 24-hours a day is not entitled to credit against his sentence under Sentencing Reform Act of 1984, 18 USC § 3585(b); 8-1.

State v. Pierce, 78 Wn.App. 1 (1995)

Sentence enhancement for manufacturing drugs within 1000 feet of a school bus stop, RCW 69.50.435(a), applies to marijuana; III.

State v. Buchanan, 78 Wn.App. 648 (1995)

Following hung jury, defendant pleads guilty to lesser charge, is ordered to pay costs for mistried jury trial; held: because plea was prosecuted in same cause on same facts as mistrial, trial court was authorized to impose the costs for the prior mistrial, see: State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564, 571-72 (2000); I.

State v. Crider, 78 Wn.App. 849 (1995)

At plea, state recommends six months followed by sexual deviancy treatment (SSOSA), RCW 9.94A.120(7), at sentencing state offers testimony, without objection, of probation counselor that defendant had had other sex offenses and uncharged involvement with other juveniles, state argues that in case before the court, it was victim's first sexual experience the fear and coercion of which she will have to live for the rest of her life; court imposes prison sentence, then offers allocution; held: in context, state's argument focused on length of jail sentence rather than a breach of plea bargain, State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 873-4 (1990), see: State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862 (1999), distinguishing In re Palodichuk, 22 Wn.App. 107 (1978); right to allocution before sentence is imposed is mandatory, State v. Happy, 94 Wn.2d 791, 793-4 (1980), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151 (2003), former RCW 9.94A.110 [now 9.94A.500], but see: State v. Delange, 31 Wn.App. 800, 802-3 (1982), State v. Gonzales, 90 Wn.App. 853 (1998), Pers. Restraint of Echeverria, 141 2323 (2000), State v. Lathrop, 125 Wn.App. 353, 358-59 (2005), State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390, 405-06 (2007), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 109-10 (2007), cf.: State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 152-53 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), remedy is remand for resentencing before different judge; 2-1, III.

State v. Sandefer, 79 Wn.App. 178 (1995)

Trial judge is asked by defendant why sentence is at top of range after trial when he was offered low end on a plea, court responds that it often imposes more lenient sentence on guilty plea because it saves victims some grief; held: judge's remarks do not indicate improper consideration of defendant's right to stand trial; I.

Abad v. Cozza, 128 Wn.2d 575 (1996)

Local court rule and forms that oblige a defendant to waive jury and waive presentation of evidence in order to obtain deferred prosecution is consistent with RCW 10.05.020, reversing Abad v. Cozza, 77 Wn.App. 762 (1995); 7-2.

State v. Klump, 80 Wn.App. 391 (1996)

Defendant receives a sentence consecutive to a federal sentence, which is later reversed and remanded, whereupon defendant receives the identical federal sentence; more than a year after state sentencing, defendant moves for relief from judgment, CrR 7.8, trial court deems it time-barred, RCW 10.73.090(1); held: reversal of federal sentence occurring after judgment entered qualifies as an "extraordinary circumstance," thus one-year time limit does not apply; III.

State v. Besio, 80 Wn.App. 426 (1995)

Defendant sentenced to prison for a felony must serve a consecutive gross misdemeanor sentence in county jail; I.

State v. Eaton, 82 Wn.App. 723, 732-5 (1996)

Trial court may order sex offender to enter into and cooperate in counseling or therapy as condition of community placement, RCW 9.94A.120(9), see: State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998) , abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010); defendant may not challenge trial court's order that defendant make reasonable progress in treatment until after a revocation or modification hearing, State v. Langland, 42 Wn.App. 287, 292 (1985), State v. Phillips, 65 Wn.App. 239, 244 (1992), State v. , but see: Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782, 786-91 (2010), State v. Armstrong, 91 Wn.App. 635 (1998), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), State v. Irwin, 191 Wn.App. 644 (2015); I.

State v. Manussier*, 129 Wn.2d 652 (1996)

"Three strikes" law, Initiative 593, does not require prosecutor to file a separate information alleging the status, defendant is not entitled to jury trial on issue, State v. Ben, 114 Wn.App. 148 (2002), status need not be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Powell, 172 Wn.App. 455, 459-62 (2012), distinguishing State v. Holsworth, 93 Wn.2d 148 (1980), is not a bill of attainder, does not violate separation of powers doctrine, does not violate guarantee of a republican form of government, does not violate equal protection or cruel and unusual punishment clauses, State v. Johnson,150 Wn.App. 663, 679-81 (2009); accord: State v. Thorne, 129 Wn.2d 736 (1996), State v. Davis, 133 Wn.2d 187 (1997), see: State v. Carpenter, 117 Wn.App. 673 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Aguilar-Rivera, 83 Wn.App. 199 (1996)

When the right of allocution is omitted until after the court has orally announced the sentence it intends to impose, remedy is to send defendant before a different judge for a new sentencing hearing, State v. Crider, 78 Wn.App. 849, 861 (1995), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151, 160-62 (2003), but see: State v. Delange, 31 Wn.App. 800 (1982), State v. Gonzales, 90 Wn.App. 853 (1998), State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390, 405-06 (2007), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 109-10 (2007), cf.: State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 152-53 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); I.

State v. Britton, 84 Wn.App. 146 (1996)

Compromise of misdemeanor statute, RCW 10.22, applies to gross misdemeanors; I.

Bellevue v. Hard, 84 Wn.App. 453 (1996)

Defendant receives one year deferred sentence on condition of five days in jail, which is revoked and court imposes 365 days in jail with 335 suspended, defense claims subsequent sentence cannot be harsher than the deferred sentence; held: pursuant to RCW 3.66.067, a deferred sentence means no sentence is imposed although jail may be a condition of probation, RCW 9.95.210; when deferred sentence is revoked he can be ordered to serve the maximum term less what he has served, State v. Parsley, 73 Wn.App. 666 (1994); I.

United States v. Watts, 136 L.Ed.2d 554 (1997)

Defendant is convicted on one count, acquitted on another, sentencing court finds facts on acquitted count by preponderance and adds points based on that count in imposing sentence; held: acquittal does not preclude government from relitigating an issue in a subsequent action governed by a lower standard of proof, Dowling v. United States, 107 L.Ed.2d 708 (1990), McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 91 L.Ed.2d 67 (1986), but see: Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L. Ed. 2d 314 (2013), Williams v. New York, 93 L.Ed. 1337 (1949); 7-2.

State v. Anderson, 132 Wn.2d 203 (1997)

Defendant is sentenced to prison, appeals, is granted electronic home detention pending appeal, conviction affirmed; held: equal protection clause requires that defendant receive credit against his prison sentence for electronic home detention pending appeal, see: State v. Swiger, 159 Wn.2d 224 (2006), cf.: Harris v. Charles, 171 Wn.2d 455 (2011), State v. Dockens, 156 Wn.App. 793 (2010), State v. Min Sik Kim, 7 Wn.App.2d 839 (2019), but see: RCW 10.21.030(2)(d) (2010); 8-1.

State v. Campbell, 84 Wn.App. 596 (1997)

Where defendant fails to pay financial obligations, defendant has the burden of showing that a violation was not willful, State v. Gropper, 76 Wn.App. 882, 887 (1995), RCW 9.94A.200(2)(a); incarceration for failure to pay does not violate due process or equal protections clauses, State v. Barklind, 87 Wn.2d 814 (1976), State v. Curry, 118 Wn.2d 911 (1992); II.

State v. Henthorn, 85 Wn.App. 235 (1997)

State need not provide notice of a prior conviction to increase mandatory minimum sentence under 1994 DUI statutory scheme, as first offense sentencing statute, RCW 46.61.5051, is inapplicable to a person with a prior conviction within five years, RCW 46.64.5053, In re Bush, 95 Wn.2d 551, 554 (1981), distinguishing State v. Frazier, 81 Wn.2d 628 (1972), State v. Theroff, 95 Wn.2d 385 (1980); failure to object to sufficiency of evidence of a prior to enhance waives issue, State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718-9 (1986); I.

State v. Gomez-Florencio, 88 Wn.App. 254 (1997)

After sentencing, state discovers additional prior convictions under different names, defendant is then resentenced; held: absent proof of fraud, CrR 7.8(b)(3), which state did not prove, State v. Hardesty, 129 Wn.2d 303, 316-9 (1996), only basis for resentencing would be excusable neglect, CrR 7.8(b)(1), state did not offer evidence why the priors were not discovered before the original sentencing, thus no factual support; "extraordinary circumstances," CrR 7.8(b)(5), does not apply when the circumstances allegedly justifying the relief existed at the time the judgment was entered, State v. Cortez, 73 Wn.App. 838 (1994), see: State v. Quintero Morelos, 133 Wn.App. 591 (2006); 2-1, III.

Monge v. California, 114 L.Ed.2d 615 (1998)

At sentencing, trial court finds defendant previously was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon, thus imposes "three strikes" sentence, appellate court reverses sentence based upon insufficiency of evidence of deadly weapon, state seeks remand for "retrial" on issue of deadly weapon; held: in a noncapital sentencing, double jeopardy clause does not preclude remand and rehearing on a prior conviction allegation, distinguishing Bullington v. Missouri, 68 L.Ed.2d 270 (1981); 8-1.

State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998) , abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010)

Requiring polygraph testing to monitor compliance with other conditions of community placement, RCW 9.94A.120(9)(c), is valid, State v. Combs, 102 Wn.App. 949 (2000), State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 603 (2008); plethysmograph testing may be imposed by sentencing court as part of a treatment program, RCW 9.94A.120(9)(c)(iii), but may not order it unless it also requires crime-related treatment for sexual deviancy, State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 605-06 (2013), State v. Johnson, 184 Wn.App. 777 (2014), State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018); affirms, in part, State v. Riles, 86 Wn.App. 10 (1997), overruling State v. Holland, 80 Wn.App. 1 (1995), State v. Flores-Moreno, 72 Wn.App. 733, 742-5 (1994); accord: State v. Castro, 141 Wn.App. 485, 493-94 (2007); 7-2.

State v. Conners, 90 Wn.App. 48 (1998)

Disparate sentences for nonsuspect class co-defendants are justified by one defendant's not being a "kingpin" in drug operation, being directed by the other defendant, cooperating with authorities and pleading guilty, see: State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275, 290-1 (1990), State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987), State v. Entz, 58 Wn.App. 112 (1990); III.

State v. Angehrn, 90 Wn.App. 339 (1998)

Persistent Offender Accountability Act (POAA/Three Strikes) does not constitute ex post facto punishment where it was enacted effective prior to defendant's current offense; I.

State v. Burke, 90 Wn.App. 378, 383-5 (1998)

"Hard Time for Armed Crime" Act, Initiative 159, relative to burglary of a building as opposed to a residence, RCW 9A.52.020, does not violate single subject rule, CONST. Art. II, §19, see: State v. Holm, 91 Wn.App. 429, 439-40 (1998), State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 699-702 (1998); I.

State v. Gonzales, 90 Wn.App. 853 (1998)

Where defendant does not seek an exceptional sentence downward and court imposes low end of sentence range, failure to allow for allocution is harmless, State v. Hatchie, 133 Wn.App. 100, 117-18 (2006), aff'd, 161 Wn.2d 390, 405-06 (2007), distinguishing State v. Aguilar-Rivera, 83 Wn.App. 199, 202 (1996), State v. Crider, 78 Wn.App. 849 (1995), see: State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151, 160-62 (2003), State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 152-53 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); I.

State v. Jackson, 91 Wn.App. 488 (1998)

A guilty plea or verdict of guilty is a conviction, RCW 9A.46.100, for purposes of enhancement of a willful violation of a court order from a misdemeanor to a felony, RCW 10.99.040(4), even before judgment and sentence is entered; I.

State v. Armstrong, 91 Wn.App. 635 (1998)

Defendant does not waive right to appeal conditions of community placement by failing to object in trial court, State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873, 884 (1993), State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535, 547 (1996), State v. Rasmussen, 109 Wn.App. 279, 283 (2001), but see: State v. Massey, 81 Wn.App. 198 (1996), State v. Langland, 42 Wn.App. 287, 292 (1985), State v. Phillips, 65 Wn.App. 239, 244 (1992), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), cf.: State v. Peters, 10 Wn.App.2d 574 (2019); I.

State v. Anderson, 92 Wn.App. 54, 57-61 (1998)

Absent proof of prejudice, delay of sentencing beyond 40 day statutory period, former RCW 9.94A.110 [9.94A.500], is not grounds for dismissal, distinguishing State v. Krall, 125 Wn.2d 146 (1994); I.

Mitchell v. United States, 143 L.Ed.2d 424 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty, at sentencing co-defendant testifies for government, defendant does not testify, court notes defendant's failure to testify as a factor persuading court to rely upon testimony of co-defendant; held: guilty plea is not a waiver of the right not to testify at sentencing, as under the Fifth Amendment, incrimination is not complete until sentence is imposed and judgment is final, thus court may not draw adverse inference from defendant's silence at sentencing; 5-4.

State v. Phillips, 94 Wn.App. 313 (1999)

Juvenile diversion agreement that does not on its face reflect that a respondent waived his right to counsel, JuCR 6.3, State v. Quiroz, 107 Wn.2d 791 (1987), is invalid on its face and may not be used to enhance disposition of a subsequent offense, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 187-89 (1986), but see: State v. Gimarelli, 105 Wn.App. 370, 375 n. 3 (2001); III.

Alwood v. Harper, 94 Wn.App. 396 (1999)

Court grants deferred prosecution, later reviews file, sets hearing, vacates order as improvidently granted, suppresses statements made at original hearing and sets for trial; held: deferred prosecution is an interlocutory order, not a judgment, thus trial court is free to vacate it as long as due process considerations are met; I.

State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862, 866-68 (1999)

In homicide case, evidence of victim's prior bad acts and character unknown to defendant at time of offense are irrelevant to establish mitigating factors, see: State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561, 564 n.1 (1991); III.

State v. Humphrey, 139 Wn.2d 53 (1999)

Victim penalty assessment increase from $100 to $500 is prospective to offenses committed after effective date of statute, reversing State v. Humphrey, 91 Wn.App. 677 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000)

Following guilty plea to rape of a child, trial court orders defendant, as a condition community custody, to have no unsupervised contact with children, including her own who were not the victim, and not to profit from publishing or commercializing the story of her crime; held: prosecutor failed to demonstrate that the no-contact order was reasonably necessary to protect those children, nor was the order a crime-related prohibition, thus it is stricken, State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650 (2001), State v. Sanford, 128 Wn.App. 280, 288-89 (2005), State v. Torres, 198 Wn.App. 685 (2017), State v. DeLeon, 11 Wn.App.2d 837 (2020), State v. McGuire, 12 Wn.App.2d 88 (2020), State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021), cf.: State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 31-35 (2008), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923, 941-44 (2008); financial gain prohibition was not directly related to defendant's crimes, thus it is an improper condition of community custody, see: RCW 7.68.310; I.

Apprendi v. New Jersey, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000)

State statute provides that following conviction of a crime, if trial judge finds by preponderance that the offense was a "hate crime," maximum penalty becomes 20 years, defendant is convicted of a substantive offense with maximum of ten years, increased to 20 with court's finding; held: any fact that increases a penalty beyond the prescribed maximum, other than the fact of a prior conviction, State v. Holgren, 106 Wn.App. 477, 482-83 (2001), must be submitted to a jury and proved beyond a reasonable doubt, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), see: State v. Wheeler, 145 Wn.2d 116 (2001), State v. Hopkins, 109 Wn.App. 558 (2001), State v. Ortega, 120 Wn.App. 165 (2004), rev. granted and remanded, 154 Wn.2d 1031 (2005), revised on remand, 131 Wn.App. 591 (2006); 5-4.

State v. Julian, 102 Wn.App. 296, 304-06 (2000)

Ordering abstention from alcohol in the absence of a finding that use of alcohol contributed to the offense exceeds statutory authority, State v. Parramore, 53 Wn.App. 527, 530 (1989); III.

State v. Combs, 102 Wn.App. 949, 954 (2000)

Under SRA, court cannot order, as a condition of community placement, no possession of any weapon, as opposed to firearm; III.

State v. Chapple, 103 Wn.App. 299 (2000), aff'd, 145 Wn.2d 310 (2001)

Disruptive defendant may be excluded from courtroom during sentencing; II.

State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564, 571-72 (2000)

Defendant, charged with assault 2°, obtains appointed diminished capacity expert, is acquitted of assault but convicted of unlawful display of a weapon as a lesser, court imposes costs of expert; held: although defendant was acquitted of the offense for which he retained the expert, where conviction is linked both substantively and procedurally to the same prosecution, court did not exceed its authority, RCW 10.01.160(1), see: State v. Buchanan, 78 Wn.App. 648, 653 n.3 (1995); III.

State v. Piñeda-Guzman, 103 Wn.App. 759 (2000)

Trial court declines to "conditionally release" drug offender for deportation, RCW 9.94A.280, stating that to do so would put defendant in a better position than a United States citizen and that he had a recent prior drug conviction; held: statute allowing conditional release pending deportation is discretionary, court's denying based upon recent prior conviction is a valid exercise of discretion, although dissatisfaction with statute is not; III.

State v. Gallaher, 103 Wn.App. 842 (2000)

Successful completion of conditions of a deferred sentence, RCW 3.66.067, may result in dismissal whether defendant went to trial or pled guilty, although dismissal does not equate to expungement, 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. 1 at *3 (10 Jan. '97), see: State v. Noel, 101 Wn.App. 623, 627 (2000), but see: GR 15; III.

State v. Chance, 105 Wn.App. 291, 299 (2001)

Court may not consider a court-ordered competency evaluation in determining future dangerousness unless defendant was warned prior to the evaluation that it might be used at sentencing, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), see: State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002); II.

State v. Montgomery, 105 Wn.App. 442 (2001)

Trial court denies sex offender a SSOSA sentence, RCW 9.94A.670, because by taking his case to trial, defendant indicated his unwillingness to acknowledge his problem, thus was not amenable to treatment; held: "[a] defendant may not be subjected to more severe punishment for exercising his constitutional right to stand trial," at 446; I.

Pers. Restraint of Garcia, 106 Wn.App. 625 (2001)

Ordering prisoner to attend religious-based treatment program violates Establishment Clause unless there are nonreligious alternatives available; I.

State v. Modest, 106 Wn.App. 660 (2001)

Defendant is sentenced to 30 years, sentence reversed on appeal, state errs and waits two years to bring defendant back for resentencing; held: if sentencing delay is "purposeful or oppressive," Pollard v. United States, 1 L.Ed.2d 393 (1957), it violates speedy sentencing; here, defendant was not prejudiced, thus no violation, State v. Bratton, 193 Wn.App. 561 (2016), distinguishing State v. Ellis, 76 Wn.App. 391 (1994), see: State v. Braithwaite, 34 Wn.App. 715 (1983), cf.: State v. Rich, 160 Wn.App. 647 (2011); III.

State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of violating a no contact order against his wife, children present during offense, sentencing court orders no contact with wife and children; held: state failed to demonstrate that the order prohibiting defendant form contacting his children was reasonably necessary to prevent the children from witnessing domestic violence, thus order deprived defendant of his fundamental right to parent, , State v. Torres, 198 Wn.App. 685 (2017), State v. DeLeon, 11 Wn.App.2d 837 (2020), State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021)but see: State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 31-36 (2008), State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923, 941-44 (2008), State v. Cortes Aguilar, 176 Wn.App. 264, 277-78 (2013); while supervised visitation may have been appropriate as a condition of sentence, generally a criminal sentencing court is not a proper forum; I.

Pers. Restraint of Waggy, 111 Wn.App. 511 (2002)

As long as defendant is advised at plea that there is a period of mandatory community placement, State v. Ross, 129 Wn.2d 279, 284-87 (1996), he need not be informed of the specific restrictions to be associated with that placement; in child sex offense, court may limit defendant's association with children, State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424, 439 (2000), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923, 941-44 (2008), and may require defendant to advise CCO of "romantic/sexual relationships with women;" III.

Smith v. Dist. Court, 147 Wn.2d 98 (2002)

District court has subject matter jurisdiction to enforce a fine by jailing defendant for nonpayment, limited to ten years, not two years, former RCW 3.66.068 (1999), distinguishing State v. Jorgenson, 48 Wn.App. 205 (1987); "pay or stay" is civil contempt; due process clause requires that defendant be given notice that failure to pay may be contempt that may result in incarceration, defendant is entitled to a public defender, court must at least inquire into ability to pay, although defendant has burden to prove inability to pay, State v. Bower, 64 Wn.App. 227, 234 (1992), State v. Sleater, 194 Wn.App. 470, 474 (2016), see: State v. Gropper, 76 Wn.App. 882 (1995), record must show that all less restrictive alternatives to jail have failed, In re Pers. Restraint of King, 110 Wn.2d 793, 802 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Phelps, 113 Wn.App. 347 (2002)

In plea bargain, defendant agrees to a sentence excluding him from four counties for a year, and agrees to extend statute of limitations for a count that is dismissed with prejudice; held: invited error doctrine precludes defendant's complaint that the trial court erred in excluding him from counties, but see: State v. Hockaday, 144 Wn.App. 918, 924 n.5 (2008), since there is no statute that prohibits such a condition of community custody; because statute of limitations is statutory, a defendant cannot grant a court authority to punish him more severely than the sentencing statutes allow, cf.: State v. Peltier, 181 Wn.2d 290 (2014); II.

State v. Harrison, 148 Wn.2d 550 (2003)

Defendant receives exceptional sentence, on appeal Court of Appeals reverses, holding that state breached plea bargain and orders specific performance; on remand, different judge holds that he is bound by the exceptional sentence previously imposed, although he reduces offender score in accordance with mandate; held: when state breaches, neither collateral estoppel nor "law of the case" doctrine prevent trial court from independently determining whether an exceptional sentence is warranted, see: State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106 (2004), State v. Amos, 147 Wn.App. 217, 232 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Caffee, 117 Wn.App. 470 (2003)

Defendant goes to trial, is found guilty of murder 1°, co-defendant pleads guilty to murder 2°, cooperates with police and testifies at defendant's trial, defendant is sentenced to lesser term, trial court finding equal protection violation; held: disparate sentences between co-defendants satisfy rational basis analysis where one pleads guilty to a lesser crime and cooperates with police while a second is convicted at trial of a more serious offense, State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990), distinguishing State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987); I.

State v. Poston, 117 Wn.App. 925 (2003)

A revoked drug court offender is entitled to credit for time served in jail and electronic home detention pursuant to the drug court's order, RCW 9.94A.505(6), see: State v. Wheeler, 14 Wn.App.2d 571 (2020); II.

State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003)

After trial and standard range sentence, defendant wins appeal, is convicted anew and receives standard range sentence, appeals again and prevails, trial court imposes exceptional sentence; held: because trial court did not identify specific objective facts drawn from the record of the thrid trial and not known when the standard range sentences were imposed, presumption of vindictiveness, North Carolina v. Pearce, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969), requires vacation of sentence and remand for resentencing, but see: State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), reserving power in sentencing court to justify exceptional sentence; II.

Mortell v. State, 118 Wn.App. 846 (2003)

District court has authority to impose consecutive sentences which, in the aggregate, exceed one year, cf.: State v. Parent, 164 Wn.App. 210 (2011), State v. Rice, 180 Wn.App. 308 (2014); I.

State v. Snapp, 119 Wn.App. 614, 626-27 (2004)

At sentencing, trial court discusses need for treatment, after sentencing discovers treatment was not included in judgment and sentence so court modifies sentence; held: where record establishes court's original intention to include a provision, its omission is a clerical error which court is authorized to correct, CrR 7.8(a), CR 60(a), cf.: State v. Dorosky, 28 Wn.App. 128 (1981), State v. Cirkovich, 42 Wn.App. 403 (1985); II.

State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004)

Defendant is convicted of one felony and three misdemeanors, is sentenced to 12 months for each to run consecutively, after remand order requiring merger of two counts new judge imposes higher exceptional sentence, setting forth aggravating factors; held: because a different judge imposed sentence, Texas v. McCullough, 89 L.Ed.2d 104 (1986), and because sentencing court exercised independent sentencing discretion setting forth non-vindictive reasons, Alabama v. Smith, 104 L.Ed.2d 865 (1989), State v. Havens, 70 Wn.App. 251, 259 (1993), the presumption of vindictiveness does not arise, distinguishing State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003), see.: State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); I.

State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106, 111-13 (2004)

Defendant is convicted of a felony and a misdemeanor, is sentenced at a single proceeding with two judgment and sentence forms, Court of Appeals reverses felony sentence due to error in offender score, at resentencing trial court imposes additional conditions on misdemeanor; held: because this was one combined trial under a single cause number, the sentencings were interrelated and court was not collaterally estopped from resentencing on the misdemeanor as well as the reversed felony sentencing; III.

State v. Diaz-Cardona, 123 Wn.App. 477 (2004)

Juvenile court may not require a juvenile who has pled guilty to participate in a sexual deviency evaluation, even with a protective order, where the juvenile objects, see: State v. Decker, 68 Wn.App. 246 (1992), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967 (1999), State v. Escoto, 108 Wn.2d 1, 6 (1987), see: State v. N.B., 127 Wn.App. 776, 780-82 (2005), as it would violate respondent's privilege against self incrimination, RCW 13.40.180(8); I.

State v. Freeman, 124 Wn.App. 413 (2004)

DNA sample is not required following conviction for attempted harassment even though it is required for felony harassment, RCW 43.43.754(1); I.

State v. Davis, 125 Wn.App. 59 (2004)

For purposes of a motion to withdraw a plea, CrR 4.2(f), sentence is not imposed until the judgment and sentence is signed by the court, even if it is orally stated, State v. Hampton, 107 Wn.2d 403 (1986), State ex. rel. Echtle v. Card, 148 Wash. 270 (1928); written statement on plea of guilty, CrR 4.2(g), is prima facie verification of a constitutional plea and, when supported by a court's oral inquiry on the record, "the presumption of voluntariness is well nigh irrefutable," at 68 ¶17, State v. Perez, 33 Wn.App. 258, 261-62 (1982); a cheek swab for DNA collection is valid, State v. S.S., 122 Wn.App. 725 (2004); I.

State v. Felix, 125 Wn.App. 575 (2005)

A judicial finding that a crime constituted domestic violence need not be submitted to a jury, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), as it does not increase punishment, see: State v Winston, 135 Wn.App. 400 (2006), see: State v. Ortega, 131 Wn.App. 591, 595 (2006); firearm prohibition following misdemeanor domestic violence conviction is not punishment, State v. Schmidt, 143 Wn.2d 658 (2001); I.

State v. Hughes,154 Wn.2d 118, 152-53 (2005)

Where defendant does not object to trial court's failure to provide for allocution, error need not be addressed by appellate court, as allocution is a non-constitutional issue, State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390, 405-06 (2007), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 109-10 (2007); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of West, 154 Wn.2d 204 (2005)

In a plea bargain to avoid persistent offender sentence, defendant agrees to a ten year term without good time, trial court notes on judgment and sentence that defendant stipulated to ten years without earned early release, DOC treats trial court's notation as an order, defendant files PRP more than a year after sentencing; held: irrespective of the trial court's intent, noting defendant's agreement on the judgment and sentence and DOC's belief that it is an order gives the note the "imprimatur of the trial court," State v. Phelps, 113 Wn.App. 347 (2002), requires remand to trial court to strike the note, as good time may only be addressed by the Department of Corrections, Pers. Restraint of Mota, 114 Wn.2d 465, 478 (1990), RCW 9.94A.728(1); 7-2.

State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630 (2005)

Community custody condition that defendant may not possess pornography as defined by CCO is both vague and an improper delegation, State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), see: State v. Williams, 97 Wn.App. 257, 262-63 (1999), State v. Wilkerson, 107 Wn.App. 748 (2001), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 729 (2008), but see: State v. Smith, 130 Wn.App. 721 (2005),; I.

State v. Schimelpfenig, 128 Wn.App. 224 (2005)

Banishing murder defendant from residing in county where victim's family lives violates his right to travel, State v. Sims, 152 Wn.App. 526 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 171 Wn.2d 436 (2011), see: Pers. Restraint of Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 904 (2018); II.

State v. Smith, 130 Wn.App. 721, 724-28 (2005)

Following sex offense conviction, defendant is ordered by DOC not to "possess…any pornography, catalogs or material which can be read or viewed for sexual gratification" and which "involved children," defendant is sanctioned for possessing Brooke Shield film Blue Lagoon; held: because an ordinary person would know, without having to consult a specialist, that the film was prohibited, then the restriction was not vague, distinguishing State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630 (2005), see: State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018), but see: State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 729 (2008), State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018); I.

State v. Swiger, 159 Wn.2d 224 (2006)

Release pending appeal on GPS monitoring must be applied as credit for time served, RCW 9.95.062(3) (1996), State v. Anderson, 132 Wn.2d 203 (1997), State v. Wheeler, 14 Wn.App.2d 571, 579-80 (2020), cf.: Harris v. Charles, 171 Wn.2d 455 (2011), State v. Shelley, 19 Wn.App.2d 451 (2021), but see: RCW 10.21.030(5) (2010), State v. Min Sik Kim, 7 Wn.App.2d 839 (2019); reverses State v. Swiger, 130 Wn.App. 222 (2005); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Williams, 59 Wn.App. 828 (2006)

Where sentences are consecutive, defendant is only entitled to credit for time served against one of the sentences, see: State v. Davis, 69 Wn.App. 634 (1993), Pers. Restraint of Schillerett, 159 Wn.2d 649 (2007); I.

State v. Melick, 131 Wn.App. 835, 844-45 (2006)

Defendant, having stipulated to police reports, is terminated from drug court, challenges evidence in reports claiming one was not properly signed, testimony was inconsistent and hearsay; held: by stipulating to police reports, defendant waives all legal challenges, State v. Shattuck, 55 Wn.App. 131, 13 (1989), but see: State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23 (2010); deferred prosecution principles, ch. 10.05 RCW, apply to drug court prosecutions, see also: State v. Daniels, 8 Wn.App.2d 160 (2019); I.

State v. Dalseg, 132 Wn.App. 854 (2006)

Defendants are sentenced to work release at Nisqually Tribal Jail which, unbeknownst to the court and prosecutor, release defendants each night to sleep at home, trial court revokes and orders full sentence in traditional partial confinement work release facility; held: equitable doctrine of credit for time spent at liberty: "a convicted person is entitled to credit against his sentence for time spent erroneously at liberty due to the State's negligence, provided that the convicted person has not contributed to the release, has not absconded legal obligations while at liberty, and has had no further criminal convictions," Pers. Restraint of Roach, 150 Wn.2d 29, 37 (2003); cf.: State v. Shelley, 19 Wn.App.2d 451 (2021); II.

State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 431 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008)

Consecutive misdemeanor sentences can be structured to require more than two years' probation, see: Mortell v. State, 118 Wn.App. 846 (2003), but see: State v. Parent, 164 Wn.App. 210 (2011), State v. Rice, 180 Wn.App. 308 (2014); III.

State v. Quintero Morelos, 133 Wn.App. 591 (2006)

One day after court imposes 365 day suspended misdemeanor sentence, defense moves to modify sentence to 364 days to avoid deportation, 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a)(2)(A)(iii), - § 1101(a)(43)(F), granted by trial court, state appeals; held: court may resentence based upon defense counsel's excusable neglect, CrR 7.8(b)(1), distinguishing State v. Gomez-Florencio, 88 Wn.App. 254, 259 (1997), State v. Cortez, 73 Wn.App. 838 (1994), see: State v. Aguirre, 73 Wn.App. 682 (1994), State v. Smith, 159 Wn.App. 694 (2011); 2-1, III.

State v. Hatchie, 133 Wn.App. 100, 117-19 (2006)

Trial judge states he is "ready to rule" and will impose a 55-month sentence "unless your client has something else to add," defendant addresses the court and gets 55 months; held: oral expression of informal opinion as to sentence and "premature statement of … contemplated sentence" is not an imposition of sentence depriving defendant of right of allocution, State v. Delange, 31 Wn.App. 800 (1982), State v. Gonzales, 90 Wn.App. 852 (1998), State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 152-53 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), but see: State v. Crider, 78 Wn.App. 849, 860-61 (1995), State v. Aguilar-Rivera, 83 Wn.App. 199, 203 (1996); II.

State v. Acrey, 135 Wn.App. 938 (2006)

Defendant, convicted of theft for draining the retirement account of an elderly man, is ordered as a condition of sentence no to work as a caretaker for the elderly or disabled; held: sentencing court has authority to impose crime-related prohibitions, RCW 9.94A.505(8), State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007), even if not specifically authorized by some other provision of ch. 9.94A RCW; prohibition here was directly related to the crime; I.

State v. Surge, 160 Wn.2d 65 (2007)

Requiring DNA sample following conviction, RCW 43.43.754, does not violate Fourth Amendment or CONST., art. I, § 7; affirms State v. Surge, 122 Wn.App. 448 (2004); 7-2.

State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007)

As part of any felony sentence, a crime-related prohibition may include orders prohibiting contact with victims or witnesses for the statutory maximum term, State v. Acrey, 135 Wn.App. 938 (2006), State v. Duran, 16 Wn.App.2d 583 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Gailus, 136 Wn.App. 191 (2006)

A misdemeanor sentence that purports to impose a suspended sentence and probation on condition of 12 months in jail is erroneous; probation is not authorized when the maximum jail sentence is imposed; I.

Pers. Restraint of Schillereff, 159 Wn.2d 649 (2007)

Prisoner who is held on a Texas sentence, transported to Washington, sentenced to consecutive terms is not entitled to credit for time served before Washington sentencing as he is not held solely for his Washington offense, RCW 9.94A,505(6); per curiam.

State v. Davenport, 140 Wn.App. 925, 932 (2007)

Defendant is sentenced to life without parole, court of appeals reverses and remands for a new sentencing, dismissing one count, trial court imposes same sentence in defendant's absence, declining to hear challenges to the sentence that were not raised at first sentencing; held: where a case is reversed and remanded for resentencing, trial court has discretion to consider issues defendant did not raise at his initial sentencing or in his first appeal, State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71 (2015), see: State v. Parmalee, 172 Wn.App. 899 (2013), State v. Gleim, 200 Wn.App. 40 (2017); where trial court exercises discretion at a resentencing, defendant has the right to be present, State v. Rodriguez, 171 Wn.2d 46 (2011); here, trial court exercised discretion by declining to hear motions, thus defendant's presence is required; II.

State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 31-35 (2008)

As a condition of sentence in child sex abuse case, trial court orders no contact with his wife, victim's mother, who was a witness against defendant; held: because spouse is mother of victims, testified against defendant who attempted to induce her not to cooperate, and defendant having a prior murder conviction and had previously been convicted of beating his wife, and wife did not object, the order is reasonably related to the crime, Stte v. Pablo Navarro, 188 Wn.App. 550, 556-57 (2015), see: State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000), State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007), cf.: State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650 (2001), State v. DeLeon, 11 Wn.App.2d 837 (2020); 5-4.

State v. Kolesnik, 146 Wn.App. 790, 802-06 (2008)

Enhancement for an offense committed against a law enforcement officer, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(v), applies to assault 1º; 240 months is not clearly excessive for knowingly and violently assaulting an officer with a deadly weapon; II.

State v. Alphonse, 142 Wn.App. 417, 439 (2008), 147 Wn.App. 891, 909-11 (2008)

An order banishing defendant from Everett does not survive strict scrutiny absent repeated offenses or previous violations of orders restricting contact, State v. Schimelpfenig, 128 Wn.App. 224 (2005), State v. Sims, 152 Wn.App. 526 (2009), reversed, on other grounds, 171 Wn.2d 436 (2011), see: State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 904 (2018); I.

State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923, 941-44 (2008)

Defendant is convicted of molesting a child with whom he lived, sentencing court orders no contact with any female minors, defendant's request for an exception for other children in the household denied; held: an order prohibiting contact with one's own children is valid where, as here, defendant engaged in abuse by exploiting a child's trust in defendant as a parent figure, distinguishing State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000); I.

State v. Coucil, 170 Wn.2d 704 (2010)

Defendant is charged with felony harassment and felony bail jumping, is convicted of lesser misdemeanor harassment and felony bail jumping, claims bail jumping must be reduced; held: classification of bail jumping depends upon the classification of the underlying charge at the time defendant failed to appear, not at verdict; affirms State v. Coucil, 151 Wn.App. 1312 (2009); 9-0.

Harris v. Charles, 171 Wn.2d 455 (2011)

A misdemeanant is not constitutionally entitled to credit for time served for electronic home monitoring, Bremerton v. Bradshaw, 121 Wn.App. 410 (2004), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 132 Wn.2d 203 (1997), see: RCW 10.21.030(2)(d), State v. Min Sik Kim, 7 Wn.App.2d 839 2019), cf.: State v. Wheeler, 14 Wn.App.2d 571 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011)

Defendant pleads guilty to felony DUI, plea agreement states no community custody, trial court does not impose community custody, DOC notifies court that community custody is mandatory, at resentencing defendant is offered option of withdrawal of plea or specific performance, defendant chooses the latter, trial court imposes same sentence with community custody, defendant argues on appeal that he is entitled to the original agreed sentence in spite of the statute; held: where a plea agreement contains a mutual mistake, only remedy available to defendant is withdrawal of plea, not specific performance of a sentence unpermitted by statute, abrogating State v. Miller, 152 Wn.2d 223 (1988), effectively overruling Personal Restraint of Hoisington, 99 Wn.App. 423 (2010), Personal Restraint of Fonseca, 132 Wn.App. 464 (2006), Personal Restraint of Hudgens, 156 Wn.App. 411 (2010); affirms State v. Barber, 152 Wn.App. 223 (2009); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Talley, 172 Wn.2d 642 (2011)

Pretrial detainee is statutorily entitled to earn good-time credits, RCW 9.92.151 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Lee, 158 Wn.App. 513 (2010)

After felony sentencing, trial court's oral advisement that defendant could not be "anywhere near a firearm" or "in the same house or the same car with a firearm" misstates law of constructive possession; I.

State v. Smith, 159 Wn.App. 694 (2011)

Defendants are sentenced to partial confinement, RCW 9.94A.505, county eliminates its partial confinement programs, court modifies sentences to low end of range so that they are released, state appeals; held: after sentencing, the court's power to modify the sentence, CrR 7.8(b)(5), is limited to "extraordinary circumstances [that] relate to fundamental, substantial irregularities in the court's proceedings or to irregularities extraneous to the court's action," State v. Olivera-Avila, 89 Wn.App. 313, 319 (1997), Postsentence Review of Wandell, 175 Wn.App. 447 (2013), see; State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83 (1989), State v. Dana, 59 Wn.App. 667 (1990), State v. Murray, 118 Wn.App. 518 (2003); here, defunding partial confinement programs was unforeseeable and unanticipated when defendants were sentenced, thus court properly exercised discretion; III.

State v. Rich, 160 Wn.App. 647 (2011)

State and trial court delay resentencing after remand for three years, over objection, resulting in change of law detrimental to defendant who received exceptional sentence; held: delay was lengthy, defendant asserted his right to speedy sentencing, reason for delay was anticipation of favorable law change for state, defendant was prejudiced by losing standard range sentence, State v. Ellis, 76 Wn.App. 391, 394 (1994), Pollard v. United States, 352 U.S. 354, 361, 1 L.Ed.2d 393 (1957), cf.: State v. Bratton, 193 Wn.App. 561 (2016); II.

State v. Parent, 164 Wn.App. 210 (2011)

Court may not impose consecutive gross misdemeanor probationary sentences, State v. Rice, 180 Wn.App. 308 (2014), but see: Mortell v. State, 118 Wn.App. 846 (2003), State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 431 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), as RCW 9.95.210(1) is ambiguous; I.

Setser v. United States, 566 U.S. 231, 182 L.Ed.2d 455 (2012)

Federal court may impose a sentence consecutive to an anticipated but not yet imposed state sentence; 6-3.

State v. Villano, 166 Wn.App. 142 (2012)

Juvenile disposition order that respondent not possess "gang paraphernalia" is vague, State v. Weatherwax, 193 Wn.App. 667, 676-81 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 139 (2017); III.

State v. Jones, 171 Wn.App. 52, 55-56 (2012)

Defendant seeks drug offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.660 (2009), court notes defendant has another case and defers until disposition, sentences to standard range, on appeal defense claims court refused to consider DOSA; held: where defendant asks for an alternative authorized by statute, court's categorical refusal to consider it is a failure to exercise discretion, State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333, 342 (2005), but here court considered several factors and therefore did exercise discretion, see: State v. Hender, 180 Wn.App. 895 (2014), State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017); II.

Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L. Ed. 2d 314 (2013)

Facts that increase the mandatory minimum sentence are elements and must be submitted to the jury and found beyond a reasonable doubt, United States v. Haymond, 588 U.S, ___ , 139 S.Ct. 2369, 204 L.Ed.2d 897 (2019), overruling Harris v. United States, 536 U.S. 545, 153 L.Ed.2d 524 (2002) and McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 477 U.S. 79, 91 L.Ed.2d 67 (1986); 5-4.

Peugh v. United States, 569 U.S. 530, 186 L.Ed.2d 84 (2013)

Sentencing guidelines adopted after the offense cannot be applied as a violation of ex post facto clause; 5-4.

State v. Parmelee, 172 Wn.App. 899 (2013)

Mandate from Supreme Court vacates exceptional sentence based solely on lack of jury finding, Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), at resentencing defendant argues that his offender score was wrongly calculated, judge allows argument but expressly declines to consider it, stating that the "offender score is 13," the same as it was at original sentencing; held: where sentencing court declines to consider an issue that was not remanded, and merely states what the score is, the court has not independently reviewed the issue (rejecting state's concession) and thus may not be appealed, State v. Barberio, 121 Wn.2d 48, 50 (1993), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71 (2015); I.

Postsentence Review of Wandell, 175 Wn.App. 447 (2013)

Community custody condition prohibits defendant from living with minor children, after transfer of supervision out-of-state court modifies condition to allow other state's DOC to modify conditions, Washington DOC appeals, RCW 9.94A.585(7) (2002); held: modification of a sentence may only be entered if permitted by SRA which does not provide for the post-sentence addition of a community custody provision of the sort added here, State v. Shove, 113 83, 86 (1989); I.

State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 804 (2013)

Court may not order a mental health evaluation and treatment as a condition of community custody absent a presentence report and findings that offender is mentally ill and mental illness impacted the offense, RCW 9.94B.080 (2008), State v. Halverson, 176 Wn.App. 972 (2013); 2-1, II.

Postsentence Review of Combs, 176 Wn.App. 112 (2013)

Following DOSA revocation, sentencing court orders 42 days credit for time served while defendant was in jail for an unrelated felony, DOC seeks review after asking trial court to modify, RCW 9.94A.587(7) (2002), to which state objected since the credit was part of a plea bargain; held: following revocation of a DOSA sentence, trial court may order that defendant is entitled to credit, but DOC determines amount of credit following revoked DOSA; since state acted in good faith in agreeing to the plea bargain defendant is not entitled to specific performance of an illegal sentence; II.

State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 150-55 (2013)

Sentencing judge, after trial, orders forfeiture of unclaimed property seized, and orders defendant to comply with "conditions per DOC;" held: because defendant did not move for return of seized property, CrR 2.3(e), court did not abuse its discretion, see also: Walla Walla v. $401,333.44, 150 Wn.App. 360 (2009), 164 Wn.App. 236 (2011), State v. Card, 48 Wn.App. 781 (1987), State v. Marks, 114 Wn.2d 724, 734-35 (1990), but see: State v. Roberts, 185 Wn.App. 94 (2014), State v. Rivera, 198 Wn.App. 128 (2017); DOC may establish conditions of community custody, RCW 9.94A.704(2)(a) (2012), State v. Ortega, 21 Wn.App.2d. 488 (2022); II.

State v. Alejandro Medina, 180 Wn.2d 282 (2014)

A pretrial condition of release that a murder defendant report to a non-residential day reporting program (King County CCAP enhanced) does not entitle defendant to credit for time served in that program, former RCW 9.94A.030(26) (1991), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 297-300 (2016), State v. Shelley, 19 Wn.App.2d 451 (2021), nor does equal protection clause mandate credit, cf. RCW 9.94A.680 (2009) authorizing courts to grant credit for nonviolent offenders, see also: State v. Speaks, 119 Wn.2d 204 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Deskins, 180 Wn.2d 68, 77-82 (2014)

Following animal cruelty convictions, district court has authority to impose condition of probation that defendant not live with or own animals, RCW 2.66.067, -.068 (2001, 2013), distinguishing RCW 16.52 200(3) (2011); denying motion to continue sentencing "to prepare" is not an abuse of discretion; 5-4.

State v. Mercado, 181 Wn.App. 624 (2014)

Following drug conviction sentencing court may only order HIV testing if it finds that defendant's possession "entailed use of a hypodermic needle," RCW 70.24.340 (2011); III.

State v. Button, 184 Wn.App. 442 (2014)

Trial court lacks authority under SRA to order defendant to hold a sign saying "I stole money…;" II.

State v. Trebilcock, 184 Wn.App. 619 (2014)

Sentencing judge making a biblical reference to underscore a secular principle has not violated due process clause, at 627-3; defendant waives jury after which state adds aggravating factors, defendant claims she has right to jury on the factors; held: waiver covered aggravating factors where defendant did not move to rescind her jury waiver or request a jury, at 631-34; II.

State v. Johnson, 184 Wn.App. 777 (2014)

Sentencing court may order CCO to order plethysmograph testing for the purpose of sexual deviance treatment and not for monitoring purposes, State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010), State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018); II.

State v. Barry, 184 Wn.App. 790 (2014)

Trial court may not decline to consider a compromise of misdemeanor, ch. 10.22, RCW, because it was sought the day of trial in violation of a local rule; superior court has authority to grant a compromise of misdemeanor, cf.: State v. Ford, 99 Wn.App. 682 (2000); III.

State v. Roberts, 185 Wn.App. 94 (2014)

Trial court lacks authority to order forfeiture of lawfully seized property, distinguishing CrR 2.3(e), State v. McWilliams, 185 Wn.App. 94 (2014), State v. Rivera, 198 Wn.App. 128 (2017); II.

State v. Lewis, 184 Wn.2d 201 (2015)

Defendant is detained pretrial for burglary and assault, while jailed is charged with failure to register, pleads guilty and is sentenced for the latter, later pleads guilty and is sentenced for the former charges, trial court grants credit for time served for all charges since original arrest, state appeals; held: defendant is only entitled to credit for confinement solely in regard to the sentenced offense, RCW 9.94A.505(6) (2010), State v. Williams, 59 Wn.App. 379, 381-82 (1990), Matter of Allery, 6 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018), State v. Enriquez-Martinez, 198 Wn.2d 98 (2021), thus defendant gets credit for time served up to the filing of and detention on the failure to register charge, after which he was serving time on the failure to register and thus not detained solely on the burglary and assault charges, Pers. Restraint of Schillereff, 159 Wn.2d 649, 651-52 (2007); affirms, in part, State v. Lewis, 185 Wn.App. 338 (2014); per curiam.

State v. Ellison, 186 Wn.App. 780 (2015)

Allocution is intended to provide a plea for mercy and to allow defendant to present mitigation information, State v. Canfield, 154 Wn.2d 698, 701 (2005), but trial court may cut off allocution where defendant disputes facts or complains about counsel, State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 897-98 (1991); II.

State v. Dyson, 189 Wn.App. 215 (2015)

Defendant is convicted of assault 1°, sentencing judge finds defendant's conduct qualified for mandatory five-year minimum because force could likely have resulted in death, RCW 9.94A.540 (2014); held: fact-finding triggering a mandatory minimum must be submitted to the jury, Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013), but see: State v. McChristian, 158 Wn.App. 392 (2010); 2-1, III.

State v. Schmeling, 191 Wn.App. 795 (2015)

Eighth Amendment cruel and unusual clause does not require state to prove intent to possess a controlled substance, see: State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.2d 373 (1981), McFadden v. United States, 576 U.S. 186, 135 S.Ct. 2298, 192 L.Ed.2d 260 (2015), but see: State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021); II.

State v. Bratton, 193 Wn.App. 561 (2016)

Pending appeal sentence is stayed, 18 months after mandate affirming conviction defendant is sentenced; held: defendant is not entitled to dismissal for violation of speedy sentencing where delay is between pronouncement of sentence and enforcement of sentence, cf.: State v. Rich, 160 Wn.App. 647 (2011), State v. Modest, 106 Wn.App. 660 (2001); III.

State v. Rivera, 198 Wn.App. 128 (2017)

Sentencing court lacks authority to order forfeiture of "all property," State v. Roberts, 185 Wn.App. 94 (2014); II.

State v. Torres, 198 Wn.App. 685 (2017)

Defendant persuades his son to lie, is convicted of witness tampering, sentencing court orders no contact with son for five years; held: court must consider a defendant's constitutional right to parent in imposing a no contact order with his or her children, State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650, 654-55, 27 P.3d 1246 (2001), State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000), State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007), State v. DeLeon, 11 Wn.App.2d 837 (2020), State v. McGuire, 12 Wn.App.2d 88 (2020), State v. Martinez Platero, 198 Wn.App.2d 98 (2021); III.

State v. Gleim, 200 Wn.App. 40 (2017)

At original sentencing state recommends, per plea agreement, exceptional sentence below standard range, judge imposes standard range, on appeal sentence is reversed due to excessive community custody and LFOs, at resentencing state advises court that it may adjust original sentence or do a full resentencing, State v. Davenport, 140 Wn.App. 925, 932 (2007), defense moves to withdraw plea maintaining that state did not adhere to the original plea bargain, court declines to resentence and adjusts prior sentence pursuant to the remand; held: prosecutor merely presented the court with its remand options, thus did not undercut plea agreement; had the court decided to resentence then prosecutor would have been obliged to advocate the plea agreement; III.

State v. Martell, 200 Wn.App. 293 (2017)

Where defendant has a prior rape conviction, a conviction for possession of depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct 2° requires an indeterminate life sentence, RCW 9.94A.507(1)(b) (2008), code revisers note is inaccurate; II.

State v. Bassett, 192 Wn.2d 67 (2018)

Sentencing a juvenile to life without parole is cruel punishment per se under the state constitution; affirms State v. Bassett, 198 Wn.App. 714, 744 (2017); 5-4.

State v. Moen, 4 Wn.App.2d 589, 597-604 (2018)

Sentencing man with dementia to life without parole is not cruel and unusual, State v. Johnson, 150 Wn.App. 663, 676-79 (2009); II.

United States v. Haymond, 588 U.S, ___ , 139 S.Ct. 2369, 204 L.Ed.2d 897 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of possession of child pornography, is sentenced to prison followed by supervised release during which defendant is found with child pornography, federal statute provides for a five-year mandatory minimum for new child porn, 18 U.S.C. § 3583(k), district court finds by a preponderance that defendant violated supervised release by possessing child porn and sentences him to five years; held: while a judge can revoke supervised release and impose a sentence up to the remaining maximum, where there is a mandatory minimum a jury must find the facts to invoke it beyond a reasonable doubt, Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S.

466, 477, 120 S.Ct. 2348, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000), Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 309, 124 S.Ct. 2531, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Min Sik Kim, 7 Wn.App.2d 839 (2019)

RCW 9.994A.505(7) (2015) which forbids credit for time served for pretrial electronic home monitoring for, inter alia, violent offenses does not violate double jeopardy or equal protection clauses, cf.: State v. Anderson, 132 Wn.2d 203, 213 (1997), Harris v. Charles, 171 Wn.2d 455 (2011); II.

State v. Daniels, 8 Wn.App.2d 160 (2019)

Entry into a therapeutic court must be approved by prosecutor, RCW 2.30.030 (2018), see: State v. DiLuzio, 121 Wn.App. 822 (2004); I.

State v. DeLeon, 11 Wn.App.2d 837 (2020)

At sentencing for rape of a child other than his own child court orders no contact with all minors, including his own children; held: sentencing court did not consider on the record defendant's constitutional right to parent, State v. McGuire, 12 Wn.App.2d 88 (2020), State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000), State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650 (2001), State v. Martinez Platero, 198 Wn.App.2d 98 (2021), or how the order was reasonably necessary to protect his own children from harm, thus remanded for court to conduct analysis on the record; II.

State v. Wheeler, 14 Wn.App.2d 571 (2020)

Work crew is partial confinement, RCW 9.94A.030(57) (2020), which entitles a defendant to credit for time served on work crew if later revoked, cf:.: State v. Shelley, 19 Wn.App.2d 451 (2021), Harris v. Charles, 171 Wn.2d 455 (2011); I.

Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 197 Wn.2d 94 (2021)

A juvenile sentenced to a lengthy sentence in 1998, prior to adoption of the SRA, who has served twenty years is entitled to a release hearing before the Indeterminate Sentencing Review Board with a presumption of release, RCW 9.94A.730, regularly held parole hearings are not an adequate substitute for a "Miller-fix" hearing, Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 480, 132 S. Ct. 2455, 183 L. Ed. 2d 407 (2012); State v. Bassett, 192 Wn.2d 67, 81-82 (2018); State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1, 18 (2017); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021)

Judges must exercise discretion in sentencing defendants who committed crimes when they were 20 years or younger regardless of mandatory life without parole statutes, see Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 132 S.Ct. 2455, 183 L. Ed.2d 407 (2012), State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1 (2017), State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022); 5-4 (fractured opinion on timeliness issue).

State v. Enriquez-Martinez, 198 Wn.2d 98 (2021)

Defendant is arrested, charged with a crime in Oregon, while in custody in Oregon he is charged with a crime in Washington where court issues a no bail warrant, he is transferred to Washington where he pleads guilty and is sentenced, then is returned to Oregon where he pleads guilty and is sentenced to concurrent terms, DOC declines to give him credit for the time served in Oregon; held: defendant is entitled to credit for all the time confined on charges prior to sentencing, reversing State v. Enriquez-Martinez, 14 Wn.App.2d 192 (2020), but an offender is not entitled to credit for time held on a pending charge if simultaneously is serving time on a sentence already imposed in another case, State v. Lewis, 184 Wn.2d 201, 206 (2015), nor is defendant entitled to credit on a charge for time served on a parole or probation violation; 9-0.

State v. Haag, 198 Wn.2d 309 (2021)

At 17 defendant is sentenced to mandatory life without parole; at a subsequent Miller-fix resentencing, Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 132 S. Ct. 2455, 183 L. Ed. 2d 407 (2012), RCW 10.95.030, sentencing court finds defendant is not "irretrievably depraved or irreparably corrupt" but resentences to 46 years; held: 46 years is a de facto life sentence, sentencing judge placed more emphasis on retribution than on mitigation due to heinous nature of the crime, abused his discretion because its finding lacked substantial evidence that defendant had not "overcome the factors that led to the murder; 8-1.

Pers. Restraint of Richmond, 16 Wn.App.2d 751 (2021)

Prosecutor's use, during closing, of an animal analogy, here comparing defendant to a hornet's nest, is "problematic" but absent objection, and absent some indication that the analogy is a racist or dehumanizing code, is not error, cf.: State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 39 (2007), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 754-55 (2012), State v. Rivers, 96 Wn.App. 672, 673 (1999) State v. Wilson, 16 Wn.App. 348, 357 (1976), State v. Perry, 24 Wn.2d 764, 769-70 (1946), State v. McKenzie, 21 Wn.App.2d 722 (2022); 2-1, III.

State v. Duran, 16 Wn.App.2d 583 (2021)

Defendant pleads guilty to unlawful imprisonment (5 year maximum) for kidnapping a man and forcing him to drive her to a residence, and burglary (10 year maximum) for burglarizing that residence, court imposes ten year no contact order as to the kidnap victim; held: court may impose no contact orders as to witnesses as well as victims, State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007), State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 31-35 (2008), kidnap victim was a witness to the burglary; II.

State v. Skrobo, 17 Wn.App.2d 197 (2021)

Deferred prosecution for DUI can be revoked anytime within five years, State v. Vinge, 59 Wn.App. 134 (1990); II.

State v. Geyer, 19 Wn.App.2d 321 (2021)

Defendant is convicted of attempted rape of a child for seeking sexual contact with a fictitious juvenile via a sting operation, court orders no contact with minors, not be in a romantic relationship with a partner who has minors, not use the internet and not use photo equipment including cell phones, all without permission of CCO; held: broad restrictions on defendant's right to interact with children and intimate partners was not shown to be reasonably necessary as it includes his own children and wife, State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000); internet restriction is overbroad, a filter will meet the need, State v. Johnson, 197 Wn.2d 740 (2021), State v. Fredeerick, 20 Wn.App.2d 1081 (2022); since the instant crime did not involve defendant taking photographs the restriction on photo equipment and cell phones is overbroad; III.

State v. Shelley, 21 Wn.App.2d 514 (2021)

Defendant, serving time, is granted temporary release to attend birth of child, extended due to COVID, demands credit for time served while he was released; held: absent monitoring or home detention, a person on temporary release is not entitled to credit, State v. Swiger, 159 Wn.2d 224 (2006), State v. Speaks, 119 Wn.2d 204 (1992); I.

State v. Greenfield, 21 Wn.App.2d 878 (2022)

Defendant seeks a Parent Offender Sentencing Alternative, RCW 9.94A.655, court fails to order a current report from DCYF as required in statute, denies POSA; held: while a POSA is discretionary with the sentencing court the court abuses its discretion if it fails to follow a statutory procedure; I.

State v. Zwede, 21 Wn.App.2d 843 (2022)

Defendant was 19-years old when he pleaded guilty to a sex offense, court imposed a SSOSA, as agreed to by the parties, when defendant was 24 court revoked the SSOSA and imposed ten years to life, which had been previously suspended; held: when court revokes a SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670(11), it must impose the entire sentence that had been suspended, RCW 9.94A.670(4); at sentencing defendant did not seek an exceptional sentence, was not a youthful offender when he violated the conditions, court did not violate his rights when it declined to consider his youthfulness at the time of the crime at his revocation hearing; 2-1, I.

State v. Peluso, 22 Wn.App.2d 282 (2022)

Defendant is convicted of numerous offenses occurring before and after the legislature amended the Parent Offender Sentencing Alternative, RCW 9.94A.655; under prior statute a person was eligible if s/he had physical custody of his or her child, defendant did not have physical custody thus trial court erred in granting the POSA; under the more recent statute an offender is eligible if he is an expectant parent, but while defendant was an expectant parent at the time of the offenses, he was not at the time he was sentenced and thus was not eligible for a POSA; court cannot grant a POSA on any count unless it grants the alternative on all counts; in dicta Division I suggests that an exceptional sentence may be appropriate on remand, distinguishing State v. Amo, 76 Wn.App. 129, 134 (1994), State v. Hodges, 70 Wn.App. 621, 623 (1993), State v. Law, 154 Wn.2d 85, 102-03 (2005).

State v. Paniuaga, 22 Wn.App.2d 350 (2022)

Defendant was charged with possession of drugs and convicted of bail jumping on that case, in subsequent sentencing seeks reduction of offender score for the bail jumping because it arose from a VUCSA possession, ruled unconstitutional; held: like escape, State v. Gonzales, 103 Wn.2d 564 (1985), bail jumping is not vacated because the charge for which defendant jumped bail is deemed unconstitutional, State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App.. 185 (2004), distinguishing State v. French, 21 Wn.App.2d 891 (2022); III.

State v. Booker, 22 Wn.App.2d 80 (2022)

Following sentencing law enforcement, not the court, has discretion to take a DNA sample regardless of whether it has previously been done, RCW 42.43.754(4); I.

SENTENCING REFORM ACT
Aggravating Factors -Exceptional Sentences

State v. Baker, 40 Wn.App. 845 (1985)

Well-planned attempted escape does not, by itself, justify sentence outside standard range, RCW 9.94A.120(2); use of weapons, injuries, hostage-taking or destruction of property could be a substantial and compelling reason for an exceptional sentence; court may consider degree of sophistication and planning as an aggravating factor for any crime, RCW 9.94A.390; II.

State v. Hartley, 41 Wn.App. 669 (1985)

Criminal history is not a factor which justifies an exceptional sentence, former RCW 9.94A.210 [recodified ast 9.94A.585]; II.

State v. Wood, 42 Wn.App. 78 (1985)

Where the victim's age is an element of the offense (indecent liberties), then age will generally not provide justification for exceeding the standard range, unless the victim is particularly vulnerable due to extreme youth; where court finds that victim was particularly vulnerable due to age, court may consider a prior crime as an aggravating factor, even though the prior is already factored into the standard range, if the prior crime involved a vulnerable victim; II.

State v. Harp, 43 Wn.App. 340 (1986)

Defendant pleaded guilty to statutory rape, alleged to have occurred during a two month period; trial court found, as an aggravating factor, additional incidents, with no stipulation to the incidents, RCW 9.94A.370, exceeded standard range; trial court also found defendant was not amenable to treatment and had not shown remorse: held: absent a stipulation, court may not consider uncharged criminal activity when deciding whether to impose a sentence outside the standard range; II.

State v. Taatjes, 43 Wn.App. 109 (1986)

Manufacturing controlled substances for distribution to others establishes that the defendant occupies a high position in the drug distribution hierarchy, RCW 9.94.390(4)(e), justifying an exceptional sentence; II.

State v. Payne, 45 Wn.App. 528 (1986)

In the absence of corroboration of a history of similar acts, a psychological report predicting that the defendant is dangerous is insufficient to support an exceptional sentence, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), State v. Stuhr, 58 Wn.App. 660 (1990); a finding that a crime was committed with deliberate cruelty without an explanation on the record will not support an exceptional sentence, RCW 9.94A.390; see: State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992); II.

State v. Swanson, 45 Wn.App. 712 (1986)

Following conviction of taking and riding a motor vehicle, court imposes exceptional sentence, finding that defendant caused unusual economic damage by destroying the vehicle; held: court may not depart from sentence range by relying on facts which constitute a separate, uncharged crime, RCW 9.94A.370; accord: State v. Tunnell, 51 Wn.App. 274 (1988), State v. Grewe, 59 Wn.App. 141, 145-46 (1990), see: State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002); II.

State v. Dennis, 45 Wn.App. 893 (1986)

Multiple penetration by multiple persons of rape victim is aggravating circumstance justifying exceptional sentence; see: State v. Herzog, 69 Wn.App. 521 (1993); III.

State v. Weaver, 46 Wn.App. 35 (1986)

In vehicular assault case, court may consider as aggravating factors history of alcohol abuse, disdain for rehabilitation, see: State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134, 140-1 (1995), but see: State v. Bolton, 68 Wn.App. 211 (1992), driving without insurance, contempt of court for driving while license suspended, level of intoxication, driving as establishing that the offense was more onerous than contemplated by the legislature in setting sentence range; accord: State v. Roberts, 55 Wn.App. 573 (1989), State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182 (1997), State v. Perez, 69 Wn.App. 132 (1993); but see: State v. Dunivan, 57 Wn.App. 332 (1990); III.

State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 325 (1986)

Misdemeanor convictions are aggravating factors justifying an exceptional sentence, State v. Roberts, 55 Wn.App. 573 (1989), State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621 (1990), State v. Vasquez, 95 Wn.App. 12, 17 (1998), State v. Teuber, 109 Wn.App. 640 (2001), State v. Atkinson, 113 Wn.App. 661, 669 (2002), see also: State v. Dunivan, 57 Wn.App. 332 (1990); I.

State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388 (1986)

Defendant is convicted of one count of burglary, search immediately after arrest discloses some property stolen from residence; victim testifies at real facts hearing, RCW 9.94A.370, that she lost much property not recovered, and that defendant's family members had worked in her home, court finds major economic offense and breach of trust in imposing exceptional sentence; held: no evidence that defendant stole the additional property, no evidence that defendant obtained or used inside information, thus findings not supported by the record, see: State v. Jackson, 55 Wn.App. 562 (1989), cf.: State v. Harding, 62 Wn.App. 245 (1991); court's additional finding that because SRA at the time required that defendant's priors count as one offense as they ran concurrently, former RCW 9.94A.360(11) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)] was too lenient was improper; III.

State v. Nordby, 106 Wn.2d 514 (1986)

In a vehicular assault case, RCW 46.61.522, striking a pedestrian is grounds for an exceptional sentence, as victim was particularly vulnerable, State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182 (1997), State v.

Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390, 396 (1992), State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 10-12 (1996), see: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 204-05 (2001); fact that defendant intentionally turned steering wheel and turned it in direction of victim establishes a higher mental state (intent) than necessary to prove the offense (reckless or intoxication), justifying an exceptional sentence, State v. Roberts, 55 Wn.App. 573 (1989), State v. Morris, 87 Wn.App. 654, 663-5 (1997); severity of injuries may not justify an exceptional sentence, as serious bodily injury is an element of the offense, State v. Bourgeois, 72 Wn.App. 650, 661-4 (1994), Cardenas, supra, at 7, State v. E.A.J., 116 Wn.App. 777, 789 (2003), State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117 (2010); 6-3.

State v. Oxborrow, 106 Wn.2d 525 (1986)

A properly imposed exceptional sentence does not violate the "clearly excessive" standard, former RCW 9.94A.210(4)(b) [recodified as 9.94A.585], unless the length of the sentence is an abuse of discretion, taking into consideration the aggravating circumstances, RCW 9.94A.390, see: State v. Dyer, 61 Wn.App. 685 (1991), State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 324-26 (2007); consecutive sentences may be imposed if concurrent sentences would be "clearly too lenient," RCW 9.94A.390(4)(h), and the length of each sentence may exceed the presumptive range, subject to review for abuse of discretion, see: State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754 (2010); 6-3.

State v. Armstrong, 106 Wn.2d 547 (1986)

Inflicting multiple injuries on a single victim is grounds for an exceptional sentence, former RCW 9.94A.390(3), State v. Worl, 58 Wn.App. 443 (1990), State v. Crane, 116 Wn.2d 315, 334 (1991), State v. Hicks, 61 Wn.App. 923 (1991), State v. McClure, 64 Wn.App. 528 (1992), State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889, 896-7 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999); assaulting an infant is grounds for exceptional sentence, former RCW 9.94A.390(2); absence of aggravating circumstances, former RCW 9.94A.390(1) is not a mitigating circumstance; five years for assault 2°, where sentence range is 12-14 months, is not an abuse of discretion here; see: State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Olive, 47 Wn.App. 147 (1987)

While future dangerousness itself is not grounds for an exceptional sentence, State v. Payne, 45 Wn.App. 528 (1986), here it is corroborated by other similar, prior sexually deviant acts and is thus a proper factor to consider, but see: State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990); prior misdemeanors may be grounds to enhance sentence as long as they are not factored into the sentence range, State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 325 (1986), State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621 (1990), State v. Teuber, 109 Wn.App. 640 (2001); II.

State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419 (1987)

In indecent liberties case with 5½ year old victim, age is proper aggravating factor even though element of offense is that victim was less than 14 years, State v. Garibay, 65 Wn.App. 919 (1992), State v. Russell, 69 Wn.App. 237 (1993), State v. J.S., 70 Wn.App. 659 (1993), State v. Bedker, 74 Wn.App. 87, 94-5 (1994), State v. Rotko, 116 Wn.App. 230, 242-43 (2003), see also: State v. Tunell, 51 Wn.App. 274 (1988); whereas defendant was convicted of two counts, multiplicity of incidents is not proper aggravating factor, State v. Tunell, supra, State v.

Pittman, 54 Wn.App. 58 (1989), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992), State v. Morris, 87 Wn.App. 654, 660-3 (1997), but see: State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003), State v. Harris, 123 Wn.App. 906, 914-16 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); if multiple offenses resulted in multiple harms to multiple victims or increasingly severe harm to one victim, then multiple offense policy, RCW 9.94A.400, may apply, State v. Holt, 63 Wn.App. 226 (1991), State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361 (1998), see: State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51, 55-6 (1993), not here; no remand for resentencing, as Supreme Court finds that one factor affirmed justified exceptional sentence; 6-3.

State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987)

Age of rape victim (67 years) is sufficient by itself to justify exceptional sentence under "particularly vulernable" aggravating factor, State v. Vandervlugt, 56 Wn.App. 517 (1990), State v. Sims, 67 Wn.App. 50 (1992), State v. Butler, 75 Wn.App. 47, 52-3 (1994); use of a carrot to commit rape 1° does not justify exceptional sentence, as penetration by an object is already factored into grid; where one co-defendant is sentenced within sentence range and one gets exceptional sentence, state must justify disparity by setting forth a rational basis; I.

State v. Hernandez, 48 Wn.App. 751 (1987)

Abducting rape victim from her own front porch is not a substantial and compelling reason for exceptional sentence; abduction, physical blows, verbal threats to life, threats with weapon over two hours are not circumstances contemplated by rape 1° and are grounds for exceptional sentence; III.

State v. Woody, 48 Wn.App. 772 (1987)

A seven-year old indecent liberties victim is not particularly vulnerable, State v. Garibay, 65 Wn.App. 919 (1992); but see: State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989) State v. Overvold, 64 Wn.App. 440 (1992); defendant, having been in treatment and thus being aware of psychological consequences of sexual acts on children, may be sentenced to exceptional sentence, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990); use of knife and threat of death cannot be used to enhance for indecent liberties, as forcible compulsion is an element; II.

State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987)

Because planning is already included in premeditation element, it is not an aggravating factor for murder 1°; shooting a victim, leaving room then returning and shooting again is deliberate cruelty and multiple incidents, State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 17 (2002), see also: State v. Smith, 82 Wn.App. 153, 164 (1996), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008), see: State v. Worl, 58 Wn.App. 443 (1990), State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Holyoak, 49 Wn.App. 691 (1987)

Vulnerability of victim is an aggravating factor where victim's size makes her more defenseless than ordinary to the type of assault perpetrated, State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288, 316-18 (2001); dicta that assault with a gun makes victim's size irrelevant; repeated striking of victim with a rock plus strangulation plus repeated pounding of victim's head against cement establish deliberate cruelty, State v. Harmon, 50 Wn.App. 755 (1988), State v. McClure, 64 Wn.App.

528 (1992), State v. Sims, 67 Wn.App. 50 (1992), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008); a prior conviction that is factored into standard range may not be used to predict future dangerousness, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990); but see: State v. Roberts, 55 Wn.App. 573 (1989); III.

State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987)

In rape case, threatening to injure or kill victim, penetrating twice and repeatedly calling her a "bitch" is deliberate cruelty justifying exceptional sentence, State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 756, 761-3 (1996), aff'd, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), overruled, in part sub nom., State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783, 790-91 (1999), State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 768-70 (2001), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350, 369-72 (2003), State v. Monroe, 135 Wn.App. 880 (2006), but see: State v. Delarosa-Flores, 59 Wn.App. 514 (1990), State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 205 (2001); raping victim twice is multiple incidents, justifying exceptional sentence, State v. Herzog, 69 Wn.App. 521 (1993); committing rape in victim's bedroom invades her zone of privacy, an aggravating circumstance, State v. Hicks, 61 Wn.App. 923 (1991), State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), State v. Coleman, 152 Wn.App. 552, 565-66 (2009), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995), but see: State v. Post, 59 Wn.App. 389 (1990), State v. Campas, 59 Wn.App. 568 (1990); I.

State v. Tunell, 51 Wn.App. 274 (1988)

In statutory rape case, very serious psychological effects from the crime and injury beyond the usual are grounds for an exceptional sentence; State v. Wilson, 96 Wn.App. 382, 387-89 (1999), see: State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992); I.

State v. Cook, 52 Wn.App. 416 (1988)

Defendant's lies to court about name and criminal history are aggravating factors, but see: State v. Martinez, 66 Wn.App. 53 (1992); defendant's being on escape status, even if no escape charge is filed, is proof of future dangerousness and is thus an aggravating factor, State v. Woody, 48 Wn.App. 772, 779 (1987) but see: State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), State v. Hammond, 65 Wn.App. 585 (1992); assaulting a custody officer while awaiting trial is an aggravating factor; washed out juvenile convictions may be used as aggravating factors; II.

State v. Garnier, 52 Wn.App. 657 (1988)

Committing burglaries on Sunday or on second stories of buildings do not establish a high degree of sophistication, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(c)(iii); where offender score grossly exceeds the maximum set forth in statute, RCW 9.94A.310 (here, 29 vs. 9+), exceptional sentence is appropriate, see: State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238 (1991), State v. Whitehead, 51 Wn.App. 841 (1988) State v. Holt, 63 Wn.App. 226 (1991); III.

State v. Shephard, 53 Wn.Ap. 194 (1988)

Familial relationship with indecent liberties victim is grounds for exceptional sentence, as victim is particularly vulnerable, RCW 9.94A.390(2); accord: State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107 (1989); see: State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211 (1991), but see: State v. Brown, 60 Wn.App. 60 (1990); post-SRA sentences for pre-SRA crimes may be based in part upon uncharged acts, In re George, 52 Wn.App. 135 (1988); III.

State v. Davis, 53 Wn.App. 306 (1989)

Injuring others in an accident resulting in vehicular homicide is an aggravating factor even though defendant was not charged with vehicular assault, as the injuries were a consequence of the charged crime, see: State v. Bourne, 90 Wn.App. 963 (1998); prior alcohol offenses plus numerous failures to complete treatment supports a finding of future dangerousness, In re George, 52 Wn.App. 135, 148 (1988), State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403 (1990), but see: State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), State v. Campas, 59 Wn.App. 561 (1990); I.

State v. Pockert, 53 Wn.App. 491 (1989)

In arson 1° case, "getting even" with victim is not deliberate cruelty as malice is an element of the offense, but see: State v. Tierney, 74 Wn.App. 346, 354-6 (1994), see: State v. Goodman, 105 Wn.App. 355, 363-64 (2001); $100,000 damage is not a major economic offense; great potential for harm is not an aggravating factor as manifestly dangerous to human life is an element of the offense; III.

State v. Bissell, 53 Wn.App. 499 (1989)

Former employee who uses knowledge gained during employment to burglarize business uses position of trust, making offense major economic offense, an aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(c)(iv), see: State v. Jackson, 55 Wn.App. 562 (1989), State v. Elza, 87 Wn.App. 336, 340-2 (1997); II.

State v. Edwards, 53 Wn.App. 907 (1989)

In a pre-SRA rape case, future dangerousness is an aggravating factor where defendant flunks out of in-patient sexual psychopathy treatment program, In re George, 52 Wn.App. 135 (1988); I.

State v. Crutchfield, 53 Wn.App. 916 (1989), overruled, in part, State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390, 396 (1992)

Defendant's use of drugs during homicide is not aggravating factor under real facts doctrine; concealing body after homicide is not aggravating factor as it is an additional uncharged crime and would violate defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, see: State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669 (1996); impact on victim's family may be aggravating factor where impact is of such a distinctive nature that it is not normally associated with commission of the offense in question and where the impact is foreseeable to the defendant, State v. Tuitoelau, 64 Wn.App. 65 (1992), State v. Cuevos-Dias, 61 Wn.App. 902, 906 (1991), State v. Johnson, 69 Wn.App. 528 (1993), aff'd, 124 Wn.2d 57, 73-6 (1994),; trial court's belief that defendant acted intentionally is not an aggravating factor where defendant was convicted of reckless manslaughter, but see: State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390 (1990); expectation of good time is not an aggravating factor; I.

In re King, 54 Wn.App. 50 (1989)

Presence of a young child during a sexual assault is an aggravating factor, State v. Tuitoelau, 64 Wn.App. 65 (1992); I.

State v. Pittman, 54 Wn.App. 58 (1989)

In assault 2° case, use of firearm and creating apprehension inhere in the offense and do not support an exceptional sentence; where multiple charges are filed, multiple victims does not support an exceptional sentence, State v. Kidd, 57 Wn.App. 95 (1990), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992); I.

State v. Strauss, 54 Wn.App. 408 (1989)

In rape case, holding victim by throat and telling her it was worth her life to cooperate is not deliberate cruelty, defined as "gratuitous violence, or other conduct which inflicts physical, psychological or emotional pain as an end in itself," State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992); multiple penetrations without a weapon over a limited time is not deliberate cruelty, distinguishing State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), see: State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401 (1992), but see: State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750, 761-3 (1996), aff'd, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), overruled, in part, sub nom., State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783, 790-91 (1999), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350, 369-72 (2003); III.

State v. Jackmon, 55 Wn.App. 562 (1989)

To establish a disability as victim vulnerability for an exceptional sentence, state must prove that defendant knew or should have known of disability and that disability must have rendered the victim more vulnerable to the particular offense than a nondisabled victim, State v. Mitchell, 149 Wn.App. 716, 724-25 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 437 (2010), see also: State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211 (1991), State v. Serrano, 95 Wn.App. 700, 712 (1999).

State v. Roberts, 55 Wn.App. 573 (1989)

In vehicular homicide case, trial court may consider prior negligent driving convictions as aggravating factors, State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 325 (1986); negligent driving where record reflects a certain blood-alcohol level may be considered alcohol-related conviction as aggravating factor; negligent driving that had been reduced from DUI may not, by itself, be considered alcohol-related conviction; likelihood of reoffending is proper aggravating factor where there had been frequent adverse contacts with law enforcement, lack of remorse, failure in alcohol treatment, distinguishing State v. Holyoak, 49 Wn.App. 691 (1987), but see: State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), State v. Bolton, 68 Wn.App. 211 (1992); cf.: State v. Dunivan, 57 Wn.App. 332 (1990), State v. Atkinson, 113 Wn.App. 661, 669 (2002); I.

State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989)

In statutory rape case, age of victim alone is not sole basis to consider vulnerability; where defendant abused victim from early age and perpetuated abuse by psychological means designed to keep her within cycle of abuse, court may find aggravating factor of vulnerability; primary caretaker abusing child is an abuse of trust, justifying exceptional sentence, State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211 (1991), State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992); where defendant is convicted of more than one count, multiple incidents may be an aggravating factor where defendant is a "resident child molester," distinguishing State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419 (1987); II.

State v. Creekmore, 55 Wn.App. 852 (1989)

Multiple assaults against deceased on the day of a homicide where only one specific blow could have caused death establish multiple incidents as an aggravating factor; lack of mitigating factors is not an aggravating factor; anticipated earned good time is not a proper factor for an exceptional sentence; I.

State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107 (1989), aff'd, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Ritchie, 126 Wn.2d 388 (1995)

To support a finding of future dangerousness or predatory behavior as an aggravating factor in sex offense, court must find both a history of similar acts and evidence that defendant is not amenable to treatment, distinguishing State v. Wood, 42 Wn.App. 78 (1985); see: State v. Shephard, 53 Wn.App. 194, 201-2 (1988), State v. Holyoak, 49 Wn.App. 696, 696 (1987), State v. Tunell, 51 Wn.App. 274, 283 (1988), State v. DeMara, 62 Wn.App. 23 (1991), State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401 (1992), Pers. Restraint of Rama, 73 Wn.App. 503 (1994); an eight-year old is not particularly vulnerable due to extreme youth, State v. Woody, 48 Wn.App. 772 (1987), however because defendant was in care-giver role, victim was particularly vulnerable, State v. Harp, 43 Wn.App. 340, 343 (1986), State v. Mitchell, 149 Wn.App. 716, 724-25 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 437 (2010), but see: State v. Brown, 60 Wn.App. 60 (1990); death threat by care-giver to particularly vulnerable child to assure silence supports a finding of deliberate cruelty, cf.: State v. Strauss, 54 Wn.App. 408 (1989); see: State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), State v. James, 65 Wn.App. 58 (1992), State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992); III.

State v. Vandervlugt, 56 Wn.App. 517 (1990)

Consecutive sentences as an exceptional sentence to protect the community affirmed where Western State Hospital reports that defendant is dangerous, prognosis for change is poor, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a); I.

State v. Daniels, 56 Wn.App. 646 (1990)

Multiple incidents of child abuse over a long period of time is grounds for an exceptional sentence, does not violate real facts doctrine, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(e), State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989), State v. Overvold, 64 Wn.App. 440 (1992), State v. Quigg, 72 Wn.App. 828, 840-1 (1994), "because it would be unrealistic for the [s]tate to charge a separate count for each particular instance of abuse," at 654; I.

State v. Franklin, 56 Wn.App. 915 (1990)

A second stab in attempted murder case establishes deliberate cruelty, State v. Worl, 58 Wn.App. 443 (1990), State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 16 (2002), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008), see: State v. Valentine, 108 Wn.App. 24, 29-30 (2001), does not inhere in premeditation element, State v. Scott, 72 Wn.App. 207, 215-7 (1994); "deliberate cruelty" is not vague; III.

State v. Kidd, 57 Wn.App. 95 (1990)

Shooting at police is not an aggravating factor in absence of evidence that defendant knew he was shooting at police, see: State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 465 (1994); unprovoked assault on unarmed victims is not, by itself, deliberate cruelty; shooting a person two times in rapid succession is not deliberate cruelty, distinguishing State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207, 219 (1987), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008); shooting point blank is an unusually severe injury, not deliberate cruelty; I.

State v. Dunivan, 57 Wn.App. 332 (1990)

In vehicular homicide case, court may consider washed-out DUI convictions as aggravating factor in determining whether offender is a significantly more active criminal than the score itself suggests, State v. McAlpin, 108 Wn.2d 458 (1987), State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 466 (1987), State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768 (1993), State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701, 720-21 (2000), State v. Rawls, 114 Wn.App. 719 (2002); here, two prior washed-out DUIs do not demonstrate a callous disregard of the consequences of alcohol abuse, thus exceptional sentence reversed, distinguishing State v. Roberts, 55 Wn.App. 573, 583 (1989); State v. Weaver, 46 Wn.App. 35, 43 (1986); II.

State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182 (1997)

To find future dangerousness due to alcohol abuse, court must find both history of similar offenses and evidence defendant is not amenable to treatment, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), State v. Davis, 53 Wn.App. 306, 314-5 (1989); but see: State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), State v. Bolton, 68 Wn.App. 211 (1992); III.

State v. Wood, 57 Wn.App. 792 (1990)

Aggravated or egregious lack of remorse is aggravating factor, State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556, 563 (1993), State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 18 (2002), see also: State v. Garibay, 65 Wn.App. 919 (1992), see: Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 139 Wn.2d 166 (1999); sophistication of a kind not usually associated with commission of offense is aggravating factor, State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332 (1992), State v. Ross, supra, at 564-5; II.

State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990)

A defendant's lack of intent that victim not be injured is not controlling when defendant knew or should have known that victim was particularly vulnerable and that it was likely victim would be injured; defendant need not be physically present at scene to have abused a position of trust; affirms, on somewhat different grounds, State v. Handley, 54 Wn.App. 377 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Gutierrez, 58 Wn.App. 70 (1990)

Imposing exceptional sentence because sentence range is insufficient due to release on good time credit is improper; sentencing judge must specify facts and reasons relied upon in arriving at the imposition of each exceptional sentence on each count, even if counts run concurrently; I.

State v. Payne, 58 Wn.App. 215 (1990)

Inflicting serious bodily injury cannot be aggravating factor for murder as it inheres in crime charged; where victim dies instantly, then heinous, cruel or depraved manner is not an aggravating factor; victim is not particularly vulnerable where she is shot in the back at home, off guard, State v. Wall, 46 Wn.App. 218 (1986); I.

State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990)

Abuse of trust is an aggravating factor for a babysitter convicted of statutory rape, State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390 (1992), State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992); absent a special first-time offender sentence or sexual offender option, court cannot order defendant to enter a program upon release; I.

State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621 (1990), rev'd sub nom., State v.Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991)

Sniper shoots a stranger; held: (1) random, senseless irrational violent act committed without warning is an aggravating factor, (2) history of violent crimes, including misdemeanors not included in offender score, justify departure from sentence range, State v. McAlpin, 108 Wn.2d 458, 464 (1987), State v. Olive, 47 Wn.App. 147, 150 (1987), State v. Rawls, 114 Wn.App. 719 (2002), (3) where present conviction could affect parole status independently of the sentence, then parole status is not an aggravating factor, cf.: State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992), (4) multiple offense policy, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(g) applies only to the determination of whether current offenses should be served concurrently or consecutively, does not apply to adjust for prior felony convictions, (5) psychological disorder with low probability of success may justify an exceptional sentence; but see: State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991) re: last factor, see also: State v. Perez, 69 Wn.App. 133 (1993); I.

State v. Stuhr, 58 Wn.App. 660 (1990)

Merely being a guest in murder victim's home is not a position of trust, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(c)(iv), to justify exceptional sentence, see: State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992); lack of remorse is an aggravating factor, State v. Creekmore, 55 Wn.App. 852, 862 (1989), State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 18-19 (2002); II.

State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740 (1990)

Failure to object to finding of vulnerability based upon size of victim who appeared in court, State v. Payne, 45 Wn.App. 528 (1986), precludes review of issue, but see: State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993); throwing rock at robbery 2° victim while she was getting money for robber is deliberate cruelty, State v. Strauss, 54 Wn.App. 408, 418 (1989), however the fact of rock throwing establishes uncharged crime of robbery 1°, thus not a proper aggravating factor, State v. Crutchfield, 53 Wn.App. 916 (1989), , overruled, on other grounds, State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390, 396 (1992), RCW 9.94A.370(2); see also: State v. Tierney, 74 Wn.App. 346, 350-4 (1994); I.

State v. Post, 59 Wn.App. 389 (1990), aff'd, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992)

In rape 1° and burglary 1° case, choking to exact compliance, multiple attempts at vaginal penetration with one actual penetration over as much as one hour is not deliberate cruelty, State v. Strauss, 54 Wn.App. 408 (1989), distinguishing State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), but see: State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750, 761-3 (1996), aff'd, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), overruled, in part, sub nom., State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783, 790-91 (1999), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350, 369-72 (2003), State v. Monroe, 135 Wn.App. 880 (2006); invasion of victim's zone of privacy is not an aggravating factor where unlawful entry into victim's home is an element of offense (here, burglary), distinguishing State v. Falling, supra; see: State v. Hicks, 61 Wn.App. 923 (1991), State v. Harding, 62 Wn.App. 245, 249-50 (1991), but see: State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995), State v. Coleman, 152 Wn.App. 552, 565-66 (2009); I.

State v. Delarosa-Flores, 59 Wn.App. 514 (1990)

Vaginal, anal, oral rape of 67-year old, slapping more than once, calling victim "stupid lady," holding scissors is not deliberate cruelty, as trauma was not significantly more serious than is typical, distinguishing State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47, 55 (1987), but see: State v. Herzog, 69 Wn.App. 521 (1993), State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669, 677-8 (1996), State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 768-70 (2001)` State v. Monroe, 135 Wn.App. 880 (2006); mere claim of innocence is insufficient to establish lack of remorse, distinguishing State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 466, 470 (1987), State v. Creekmore, 55 Wn.App. 852, 861-62 (1989)(opinion is silent as to whether defendant testified at trial); III.

State v. Campas, 59 Wn.App. 561 (1990), remanded, 118 Wn.2d 1014 (1992), for reconsideration in light of State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991)

Expert testimony that defendant's drug use can lead to uncontrolled behavior, that condition is deteriorating, and defendant was unwilling or unable to complete treatment support future dangerousness finding, State v. Davis, 53 Wn.App. 306 (1989); murder may be deliberately cruel; catching victim by surprise, attacking from rear is not abuse of trust; Division II doubts that invasion of zone of privacy supports an exceptional sentence, State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995), [N.B.: Division I holds that this dicta was overruled in State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649, 662 (1992)], State v. Coleman, 152 Wn.App. 552, 565-66 (2009), but see: State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), State v. Hicks, 61 Wn.App. 923 (1991).

State v. Jones, 59 Wn.App. 744 (1990)

In child manslaughter case, mens rea element has no bearing upon whether defendant abused trust and knew of victim's vulnerability; victim vulnerability is an aggravating factor where father kills four-month old child; extreme youth is an aggravating factor in imposing exceptional sentence for manslaughter; see: State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390 (1992), State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 11-12 (1996); I.

State v. Hobbs, 60 Wn.App. 19 (1990)

Trial court's finding that extreme emotional distress justified exceptional sentence is unsupported by expert testimony that defendant's condition significantly impaired his capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the law, thus reversed, State v. Rogers, 112 Wn.2d 180 (1989); in domestic violence case, subsequent reconciliation is not a mitigating factor; I.

State v. Brown, 60 Wn.App. 60 (1990)

Father is convicted of assault 2° for beating his 11-year old son, trial court finds abuse of trust and vulnerability as aggravating factors; held: a natural parent's use of unreasonable force is not abuse of trust, distinguishing State v. Harp, 43 Wn.App. 340 (1986)(stepfather), State v. Shephard, 53 Wn.App. 194 (1988)(uncle), State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107 (1989), aff'd, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990)(baby-sitter), but see: State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390 (1992), nor is victim particularly vulnerable as age, size and condition are built into the offense, RCW 9A.16.100, see: State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211 (1991); 90-month sentence based upon trial court's desire to incarcerate defendant until child reaches majority was clearly excessive; even where imposing exceptional sentence, trial court must calculate standard range, distinguishing State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403, 411 (1990); I.

State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238 (1991), overruled, in part, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 140 (1991), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

Where standard sentence range would result in there being no additional punishment for one or more of the current convictions because offender score is higher than maximum statutory offender score, then an exceptional sentence may be appropriate, State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893, 898 (1995), reversing State v. Stephens, 57 Wn.App. 748 (1990); see: State v. Garnier, 52 Wn.App. 657 (1988), State v. Coats, 84 Wn.App. 623, 627-9 (1997), State v. Holt, 63 Wn.App. 226 (1991), State v. Modest, 88 Wn.App. 239, 253 (1997), State v. McCollum, 88 Wn.App. 977, 985 (1997), State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361 (1998), State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 597-99 (1999), aff'd, on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002), State v. Borg, 145 Wn.2d 329, 336-40 (2001) , State v. France, 176 Wn.App. 463, 468-73 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Crane, 116 Wn.2d 315 (1991)

Multiple bruises and burns inflicted upon an already sick and injured child demonstrate deliberate cruelty, State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889, 896-7 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 1997), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 295-7 (1996).

State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991)

Knowingly patronizing a juvenile prostitute while infected with AIDS is deliberate cruelty, cf.: State v. Ferguson, 142 Wn.2d 631 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Miller, 60 Wn.App. 914 (1991)

Prior sex offense followed by treatment is insufficient by itself to justify finding of future dangerousness based upon a lack of amenability to treatment, but see: State v. Jackson, 62 Wn.App. 53, 61 (1991); while a mental health evaluation may not be required to find a lack of amenability to treatment, State v. Stewart, 72 Wn.App. 885, 896 (1994), see: State v. McNallie, 123 Wn.2d 585 (1994), cf.: State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445, 454 (1990), nothing in record here indicates whether defendant's prior treatment was successful or whether he currently is amenable to treatment, Pers. Restraint of Rama, 73 Wn.App. 503 (1994); washed-out prior can be considered in determining future dangerousness; I.

State v. Batista, 116 Wn.2d 777 (1991)

"Clearly too lenient" factor, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(f), can be remedied by either lengthening concurrent sentences or by imposing consecutive sentences if there are (1) egregious effects of defendant's multiple offenses and (2) the level of culpability is beyond what is accounted for in presumptive sentence, State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51, 55-6 (1993); conclusory statement that presumptive sentence is clearly too lenient without supporting factual basis is inadequate, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419 (1987), State v. DeMara, 62 Wn.App. 23 (1991); where exceptional concurrent sentences are not justified, then neither is an exceptional consecutive sentence, as standard is the same; reverses State v. Hernandez, 54 Wn.App. 323 (1989); see: State v. McClure, 64 Wn.App. 528 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Harper, 62 Wn.App. 69 (1991)

Where standard range is greater than one year, trial court cannot order defendant into drug treatment merely because crimes were caused by addiction, State v. Gaines, 122 Wn.2d 502 (1993), State v. Pennington, 112 Wn.2d 606, 610 (1989), State v. Estrella, 108 Wn.2d 527 (1987), State v. Laik, 62 Wn.App. 734 (1991), State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993), distinguishing State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527 (1987); I.

State v. Henshaw, 62 Wn.App. 135 (1991)

Exerting pressure on victim to get her to recant is not an aggravating factor, as it constitutes an additional crime (witness tampering or intimidating a witness), RCW 9.94A.370, distinguishing State v. Cook, 52 Wn.App. 416, 421 (1988); difficulty in prosecution of uncharged crime does not excuse breach of real facts doctrine; I.

State v. Harding, 62 Wn.App. 245 (1991)

Rape defendant, entrusted with a key to victim's apartment to clean it, abused trust, supporting exceptional sentence, distinguishing State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388, 406 (1986); I.

State v. Guerin, 63 Wn.App. 117 (1991)

An exceptional sentence in sex offense may include more than a year of community placement following release, RCW 9.94A.120(8), State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527, 533, (1987), overruled on other grounds, State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83 (1989), Postsentence Review of Smith, 139 Wn.App. 599 (2007), see: State v. Williamson, 72 Wn.App. 619, 622 n. 6 (1994), State v. Schmeck, 98 Wn.App. 647 (1999); II.

State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991)

Future dangerousness is not aggravating factor in nonsexual offense cases absent specific legislation, distinguishing State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990); reverses, in part, State v. Barnes, 58 Wn.App. 465 (1990), State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621 (1990), State v. Worl, 58 Wn.App. 443 (1990), State v. Stark, 66 Wn.App. 423 (1992); see: Pers. Restraint of Rama, 73 Wn.App. 503 (1994), State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596, 615 (1992); 6-3.

State v. Soderquist, 63 Wn.App. 144 (1991)

Abuse of trust and victim vulnerability are aggravating factors for rape 2° by forcible compulsion, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(a), State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211 (1991); III.

State v. Warren, 63 Wn.App. 477 (1991)

Defendant is acquitted of attempted murder 2°, convicted of lesser assault 3° by criminal negligence, receives exceptional sentence; held: because injuries were more serious than typically involved in crime, seriousness and multiplicity of injuries are proper aggravating factors, State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134, 141-2 (1995), see: State v. Cowen, 87 Wn.App. 45, 53-6 (1997), see also: State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117 (2010), irrespective of absence of finding of intent; "alcohol-firearms milieu" is unlikely aggravating factor; II.

State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992)

Upon remand, trial court may impose exceptional sentence even though one was not imposed at the prior sentencing, State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), see: State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773 (1992), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003), State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106 (2004), but see: State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Tuitoelau, 64 Wn.App. 65 (1992)

Psychological trauma to rape victim due to rape occurring in victim's child's presence is an aggravating factor, but see: State v. Cuevas-Diaz, 61 Wn.App. 902, 906-7 (1991); prosecutor's assertion of a fact, adopted by trial court in findings and not objected to by defense, may be considered at sentencing, State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275, 282-3 (1990), State v. Herzog, 112 Wn.2d 419, 430-1 (1989); I.

State v. Overvold, 64 Wn.App. 440 (1992)

In indecent liberties case, while age of child at offense alone does not establish particular vulnerability, State v. Woody, 48 Wn.App. 772, 777 (1987), trial court may consider the fact that abuse started at an extremely young age in terms of consequent psychological vulnerability, State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738, 754 (1989), State v. Jennings, 106 Wn.App. 532 (2001); while defendant being victim's father does not require a finding of vulnerability, length of relationship within household may establish particular vulnerability, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 427 (1987), State v. Hamby, 69 Wn.App. 131 (1993), State v. J.S., 70 Wn.App. 659 (1993); promises to stop abuse is not an aggravating factor; where defendant agrees that court may consider a witness statement to support Alford plea, then in absence of objection court may consider same at sentencing, see: State v. Bell, 116 Wn.App. 678 (2003), distinguishing State v. Young, 51 Wn.App. 517, 521-2 (1988); I.

State v. McClure, 64 Wn.App. 528 (1992)

Multiple blows in which injuries vastly exceed those of most assault 2° victims in number and severity is an aggravating factor, State v. Armstrong, 106 Wn.2d 547 (1986), State v. Harmon, 50 Wn.App. 755 (1988), State v. Holyoak, 49 Wn.App. 691 (1987); evidence of a brief interruption between infliction of injuries is not required; a single aggravating factor which applies to only one of two offenses is insufficient to support both an exceptional sentence and consecutive sentences, at 534, Pers. Restraint of Holmes, 69 Wn.App. 282 (1993); see: State v. Quigg, 72 Wn.App. 828, 895 (1994), but see: State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51, 58 (1993), State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174, 181-3 (1994), State v. Worl, 91 Wn.App. 88, 94-6 (1998); III.

State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390 (1992)

Nursing home employee thrusts 87-year old woman into chair, breaking her hip which causes death, pleads guilty to manslaughter 1°, receives exceptional sentence; held: victim vulnerability is aggravating factor, as victim vulnerability is not inherent in reckless manslaughter, State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990), State v. Nordby, 106 Wn.2d 514 (1986), disapproving, in part, State v. Crutchfield, 53 Wn.App. 916 (1989); where caretaker commits crime against someone in his care, conduct may constitute reckless abuse of trust regardless of whether defendant used position of trust to facilitate commission of the crime, disapproving State v. Crutchfield, supra, State v. Brown, 60 Wn.App. 60, 76-77 (1990), affirming State v. Chadderton, 60 Wn.App. 907 (1991); accord: State v. Wakefield, 130 Wn.2d 464, 475-7 (1996); remanded for further fact finding to determine whether aggravating factors are sufficiently substantial and compelling to justify enhanced sentence; 9-0.

State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401 (1992)

Following reversal on appeal of exceptional sentence, trial court is not barred from imposing new exceptional sentence by double jeopardy clause, United States v. DiFrancesco, 66 L.Ed.2d 328 (1980), Bullington v. Missouri, 68 L.Ed.2d 270 (1981), see: State v. Stewart, 72 Wn.App. 885, 891-3 (1994); trial court may not reenter findings previously invalidated by appellate court, RAP 12.5; Rules of Evidence do not strictly apply at SRA sentencing hearings, ER 1101(c)(3), although due process clause requires that evidence be reliable and defendant be given opportunity to refute; to enhance for future dangerousness, a mental health care professional's evaluation is mandatory, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), Pers. Rrestraint of Rama, 73 Wn.App. 503 (1994), but see: State v. McNallie, 123 Wn.2d 585 (1994); report from community correction officer is insufficient; 9-0.

State v. Smith, 64 Wn.App. 620 (1992)

Murder committed to further the criminal enterprise of a gang is an aggravating factor, although gang membership by itself may not be, State v. Riley, 69 Wn.App. 349 (1993), State v. Bluehorse, 159 Wn.App. 410, 423-31 (2011), but see: State v. Johnson, 124 Wn.2d 57, 73-6 (1994), cf.: State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171, 211-13 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016), State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App, 512, 534-36 (2015), aff'd, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 244 (2017); II.

State v. James, 65 Wn.App. 58 (1992)

In rape case, threatening victim with death of her nearby sleeping child is aggravating factor, which is not element of rape 1° where state proved defendant already threatened to kill victim of rape; failure of court to articulate reasons for number of months imposed in exceptional sentence is preferable and, in some instances necessary, State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107 (1989), aff'd on other grounds, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), but not fatal here, as sentence is not so excessive that no reasonable person would impose it; I.

State v. Hammond, 65 Wn.App. 585 (1992)

Particular vulnerability/position of authority was an aggravating factor for indecent liberties for 14 year old victim, former RCW 9A.44.100(1)(b), but not for 16 year old victim, former RCW 9A.44.100(1)(c); bail jumping is not an aggravating factor, distinguishing State v. Cook, 52 Wn.App. 416 (1988); I.

State v. Garibay, 65 Wn.App. 919 (1992)

Particular vulnerability due to extreme youth of four-year old child rape victim is a proper aggravating factor, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419 (1987)(52 years old), State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990)(three-years old), distinguishing State v. Woody, 48 Wn.App. 772, 777 (1987)(seven-years old); abuse of trust is not an aggravating factor where there is no evidence that defendant used trust to facilitate commission of crime, State v. Brown, 60 Wn.App. 60, 74-6 (1990); absent evidence that defendant was symptomatic with gonorrhea at time of offense, insufficient evidence to support aggravating factor of deliberate cruelty; trial court may not use defendant's silence or continued denial of guilt as a basis for justifying exceptional sentence for lack of remorse, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 139 Wn.2d 166 (1999), State v. Strauss, 93 Wn.App. 691, 698-70 (1999), State v. Serrano, 95 Wn.App. 700, 708-9 (1999), nor is "mundane lack of remorse found in run-of-the-mill criminals" sufficient to aggravate, as lack of remorse must be aggravated or egregious, State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332, 348 (1992), see: State v. Wood, 57 Wn.App. 792, 800 (1990), State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 18-19 (2002); III.

State v. Martinez, 66 Wn.App. 53 (1992)

Lying under oath about identity and prior record does not justify an exceptional sentence under real facts doctrine, RCW 9.94A.370(2), as perjury is a separate offense; but see: State v. Cook, 52 Wn.App. 416 (1988); III.

State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332 (1992)

Seeking out victims, assuming false identity and history, selecting suitably remote location of crime, carrying no identification, using car which could not be traced, possessing items to be used to tie up victims establish high degree of sophistication and planning not usually associated with commission of offense in question, State v. Wood, 57 Wn.App. 792, 801 (1987), cf.: State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288, 318-21 (2001); creating a condition of trust does not establish a position of trust where relationship with victims was brief, defendant is not a caregiver, victims were not particularly vulnerable to trust; female real estate agents, working alone showing clients vacant houses, does not establish particular vulnerability; III.

State v. Stark, 66 Wn.App. 423 (1992)

Future dangerousness is not an aggravating factor to assault 2° by intentionally exposing sexual partners to HIV, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(e), as it is not a sexual offense, State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), but see: Pers. Restraint of Rama, 73 Wn.App. 503 (1994); II.

State v. Vazquez, 66 Wn.App. 573 (1992)

Delivery of $20,000 worth of cocaine and $3000 worth of heroin justifies exceptional sentence as transfer was a quantity "substantially larger than for personal use," RCW 9.94A.390(2)(d); prior deportations and threats to kill if sent to prison do not support exceptional sentence, as future dangerousness is not a basis for exceptional sentence in nonsexual offense; II.

State v. Hillman, 66 Wn.App. 770 (1992)

Murder of a "Good Samaritan" is an aggravating factor, see: Pers. Restraint of Crow, 187 Wn.App. 414, 421-25 (2015); I.

State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992), aff'd on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 51 (1993)

Multiple victims is not proper aggravating factor where multiple charges are filed, State v. Pittman, 54 Wn.App. 58, 62-3 (1989), State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 426 (1987), but see: State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003); consistent re-offending after release from prison is invalid aggravating factor, as it supports future dangerousness, State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701, 711 (1991); I.

State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Ritchie, 126 Wn.2d 388, 395 (1995), further overruled, in part, State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 7 (1996)

Parole status is an aggravating factor, see: State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621, 627 (1990), rev'd on other grounds, sub nom. State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991); brutality of assault perpetrated on an elderly, defenseless victim qualifies as a worst case of robbery, assault and rape, justifying maximum sentence, State v. Armstrong, 106 Wn.2d 547, 555 (1986), State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107, 119 (1988), State v. Woody, 48 Wn.App. 772, 778 (1987); I.

State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992)

Abuse of trust is aggravating factor where scout leader sexually abuses younger scout, as respondent was both in position of trust as well as position of authority, State v. Marcum, 61 Wn.App. 611, 614-5 (1991), and there is circumstantial evidence that perpetrator abused position of trust to facilitate crime, State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738, 754 (1989), State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478, 500 (1990), State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211, 218 (1991), distinguishing State v. Stuhr, 58 Wn.App. 660, 662-3 (1991); I.

State v. Houf, 120 Wn.2d 327 (1992)

Trial judge's belief that defendant lied under oath is not an aggravating factor due to real facts doctrine, RCW 9.94A.370(2), and because an exceptional sentence should be related to crime with which defendant is charged; affirms State v. Houf, 64 Wn.App. 580 (1992); but see: United States v. Dunnigan, 122 L.Ed.2d 445 (1993), State v. Tierney, 74 Wn.App. 346, 350-4 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Bolton, 68 Wn.App. 211 (1992)

In vehicular homicide case, callous disregard for effects of alcohol is equivalent of future dangerousness, and is thus not an aggravating factor, State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), State v. Bartlett, 74 Wn.App. 580, 591-3 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 323 (1995), cf.: State v. Weaver, 46 Wn.App. 35, 43 (1986), State v. Roberts, 55 Wn.App. 573 (1989), State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403 (1990), but see: State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134, 140-1 (1995), State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 599-600(1999), aff'd, on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002), State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701 (2000); pending charges are not an aggravating factor, even if a violation of a condition of pretrial release; 2-1, I.

United States v. Dunnigan, 122 L.Ed.2d 445 (1993)

Enhancement of sentence for willful perjury based upon impeding or obstructing administration of justice, USSG § 3C1.1, does not undermine the constitutional right to testify; cf.: State v. Houf, 64 Wn.App. 580 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Nguyen, 68 Wn.App. 906 (1993)

Particular vulnerability of juveniles robbed at gunpoint support exceptional sentence when supported by evidence of cultural and social dynamics within the victims' immigrant community; high degree of sophistication is supported by defendants coming from California, obtaining weapons, identifying immigrant victims who own a jewelry store and speak same language as defendants, following them home, tying them up, standing guard, using threats to extort information; terrorizing victims to an extent unnecessary to achieve the criminal purpose establishes deliberate cruelty, State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008); I.

State v. Perez, 69 Wn.App. 133 (1993)

Exceptionally egregious facts is a nonstatutory basis for an exceptional sentence, see: State v. Weaver, 46 Wn.App. 35, 43 (1986), State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621, 624, 626-7 (1990), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701, 712 (1991); in vehicular homicide case, high BAC, high speeds at night, weaving, headlights deliberately turned off, striking victim head on in opposite lane, previous DUIs make present offense more egregious than typical, justifying exceptional sentence; accord: State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768 (1993), State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134 (1995); cf.: State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 9-10 (1996); 2-1, II.

State v. Sanchez, 69 Wn.App. 195 (1993)

Delivery of one kilogram of cocaine supports a major VUCSA finding, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(d), State v. Gunther, 45 Wn.App. 755 (1986), State v. McCollum, 88 Wn.App. 977, 983-7 (1997); where defendant is charged with and pleads to one count of delivery, and state proves three deliveries by a preponderance at sentencing, then trial court may find a major VUCSA, as real facts doctrine does not apply to uncharged crimes that are used for purposes of establishing an aggravating factor pursuant to former RCW 9.94A.390(2)(c), (d)(i), cf.: State v. Henshaw, 62 Wn.App. 135 (1991), State v. Houf, 120 Wn.2d 327 (1992); I.

State v. Russell, 69 Wn.App. 237 (1993)

In homicide by abuse case, RCW 9A.32.055, preventing medical aid, hiding pain-inflicted victim, partying after death of victim supports lack of remorse as aggravating factor, State v. Creekmore, 55 Wn.App. 852 (1989); 20-month old victim is particularly vulnerable even though statute defines age of victim up to 16 as an element, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419 (1987); abuse of trust and deliberate cruelty are aggravating factors; 69 years in prison is not clearly excessive where court relied on prosecutor's recommendation of 60 years to life plus sentence imposed in another reported case, Creekmore, supra; II.

State v. Elsberry, 69 Wn.App. 793 (1993), overruled, in part, State v. Ritchie, 126 Wn.2d 388, 394-5 (1995)

Defendant is acquitted of assault 1° on two-year old, is convicted of lesser assault 2°, court imposes exceptional sentence eight times high end of standard range, which is within standard range of greater offense; held: while exceptional sentence is supported, here there is no reasonable connection between reasons and duration, State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390, 399 (1992); sentence is excessive, as reckless conduct is not so heinous or egregious that it justifies sentence meant for intentional conduct, plus court failed to consider mitigating factors that defendant summoned help, related well previously; 2-1, III.

State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993)

State's failure to object to exceptional sentence based on drug addiction does not preclude state from appealing; when sentencing court acts without statutory authority, error can be addressed for first time on appeal, State v. Anderson, 58 Wn.App. 107 (1990), State v. Loux, 69 Wn.2d 855 (1966), State v. Akin, 77 Wn.App. 575, 578 (1995); but see: State v. Danis, 64 Wn.App. 814 (1992), State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740 (1990), State v. Wiley, 63 Wn.App. 480 (1991); I.

State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), aff'd on other grounds, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995)

Rape in victim's living room is an invasion of victim's zone of privacy, State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649, 662 (1992), but see: State v. Campas, 59 Wn.App. 561, 568 (1990), State v. Post, 59 Wn.App. 389 (1990), aff'd, 118 Wn.2d 596, 614 (1992), State v. Coleman, 152 Wn.App. 552, 565-66 (2009); raping a physically helpless victim by drugging her supports a finding of planning and sophistication beyond that which is encompassed in the charge; 2-1, I.

State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768 (1993)

Washed-out priors which demonstrate a far-reaching history of criminal activity meriting treatment differently from defendants with similar offender scores is a proper aggravating factor, State v. McAlpin, 108 Wn.2d 458, 463 (1987), State v. Dunivan, 57 Wn.App. 332, 337 n. 1 (1990), State v. Rawls, 114 Wn.App. 719 (2002); in vehicular homicide case, high blood alcohol level and egregious driving are aggravating factors, State v. Perez, 69 Wn.App. 133, 139 (1993), State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134 (1995), cf.: State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 9-10 (1996); multiple victims is an aggravating factor even if they encompass the same criminal conduct, but see: State v. Morris, 87 Wn.App. 654, 660-3 (1997); I.

State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993)

Whether drug case is major VUCSA violation, i.e., more onerous than the "typical offense of its statutory definition," RCW 9.94A.390(2)(d), should not be determined by comparing the instant facts to other published appellate decisions, reversing State v. Solberg, 66 Wn.App. 66 (1992), cf.: State v. Ermels, 125 Wn.App. 195, 201 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 156 Wn.2d 528 (2006); 316 mature marijuana plants, 180 starter plants, 473 grams of cut marijuana, four halide lights plus irrigation equipment supports trial court's finding of a high degree of sophistication, justifying exceptional sentence, see: State v. Hrycenko, 85 Wn.App. 549 (1997); 6-3.

State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51 (1993)

Exceeding by one point the maximum offender score set by SRA is sufficient to support the "clearly too lenient" criteria for an exceptional sentence, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 423 (1987), see: State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361 (1998); burglarizing occupied residences is an aggravating factor; affirms State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992); trial court may impose an exceptional sentence consisting of lengthening of the term and consecutive terms, State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174, 181-3 (1994), State v. Worl, 91 Wn.App. 88, 94-96 (1998); 6-3.

State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556 (1993)

100 stab wounds justifies deliberate cruelty conclusion, State v. Harmon, 50 Wn.App. 755, 761 (1988), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008); trial court's disbelief of defendant's claim of remorse may establish a lack of remorse, State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 18 (2002); picking robbery victims who are alone in their offices which are open to public establishes vulnerability, cf.: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 204-05 (2001), which can be result of characteristics other than victim's physical condition or stature, see: State v. Nguyen, 68 Wn.App. 906 (1993), State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 11-12 (1996); public place of business does not qualify as zone of privacy; "escalation of violence," on this record, is not aggravating factor; extraordinary danger to women is tantamount to future dangerousness, not a proper aggravating factor absent sex offense and mental health evidence, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445, 454 (1990); trial court may use future dangerousness to determine length of an exceptional sentence, State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 227 (1992), State v. Hillman, 66 Wn.App. 770-777-8 (1992), State v. McCune, 74 Wn.App. 395 (1994); length of exceptional sentence is proper unless it is based upon an impermissible reason or shocks the conscience of the reviewing court, State v. Atkinson, 113 Wn.App. 661 (2002); use of actuarial tables to determine what the length of a life sentence should be is proper; taking potential earned good time into account in setting length of sentence is improper, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 429 (1987), State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889, 898-9 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999) State v. Wakefield, 130 Wn.2d 464, 477-8 (1996), State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 843-6 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Crow, 187 Wn.App. 414, 425-26 (2015); I.

State v. Negrete, 72 Wn.App. 62, 68-71 (1993)

Delivery of one oz. of cocaine, where evidence at sentencing establishes one gram is typical amount for personal use, is sufficient for an exceptional sentence due to size of transaction, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(d)(ii), State v. McCollum, 88 Wn.App. 977, 983-7 (1997); trial court may not use testimony at CrR 3.5 hearing, which does not focus on a statement's content, to enhance sentence, at 70; an offer to sell a large quantity of drugs is not sufficient evidence of an agreement or attempt to deliver to justify an exceptional sentence, at 70 n. 8; III.

State v. Scott, 72 Wn.App. 207 (1993), aff'd, 126 Wn.2d 388 (1995)

Prolonged attack, lingering suffering by murder victim, physical and sexual assault followed by strangulation establishes deliberate cruelty, at 214-5, State v. Harmon, 50 Wn.App. 755, 757-9 (1988), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 295-7 (1996), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008); multiple injuries which may establish premeditation may also be used to justify an exceptional sentence in murder 1° case, at 215-7, State v. Franklin, 56 Wn.App. 915, 919 (1990), State v. Drummer, 54 Wn.App. 751, 759 (1989); 78-year old victim with Alzheimer's disease who walks with a cane, needs daily care and supervision, all known to defendant, establish particular vulnerability, at 217, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(b), State v.

George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 221-2 (1992), State v. Hicks, 61 Wn.App. 923, 930 (1991), State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 204-05 (2001); defendant's access to home to do chores for elderly victim establishes violation of a position of trust; defendant's youth (17 years) by itself does not establish mitigating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(1)(e), State v. Ha'mim, 132 Wn.2d 834 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015), but see: State v. Ronquillo, 190 Wn.App. 765 (2015), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017); sentence is not clearly excessive where trial court relies solely on valid aggravating factors, duration does not shock appellate court's conscience, at 219-222, State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 324-26 (2007); (2-1 on duration); I.

State v. McNallie, 123 Wn.2d 585 (1994)

Current evaluation of sex offender states he is not amenable to treatment because he does not admit guilt, case being on appeal; prior history establishes reoffenses after treatment, trial court imposes exceptional sentence based on future dangerousness, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990); held: without addressing due process/self-incrimination issue, a therapist's report indicating nonamenability is not necessary if there are other objective indications showing that defendant is not a candidate for successful rehabilitation, effectively modifying State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401, 420-1 (1992); see: State v. Bedker, 74 Wn.App. 87, 98-100 (1994), State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 333-4 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 463-6 (1994)

Consecutive sentences for two or more current offenses is an exceptional sentence, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), 9.94A.120(15); "pattern of assault against police" is not an aggravating factor where prior assaults were factored into sentence range, State v. McAlpin, 108 Wn.2d 458, 463 (1987); knowingly assaulting police is an aggravating factor, State v. Ramires, 109 Wn.App. 749, 763-67 (2002), see: State v. Kidd, 57 Wn.App. 95, 104 (1990); I.

State v. Bourgeois, 72 Wn.App. 650, 656-8 (1994)

In assault 1° case, gunshot wounds not atypical of injuries by firearms do not establish particularly egregious injuries to justify juvenile court manifest injustice, see: State v. Nordby, 106 Wn.2d 514 (1986), State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 222 (1992), State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117 (2010); I.

State v. Flores-Moreno, 72 Wn.App. 733, 742-5 (1994)

Simple possession of a very large quantity of heroin is "more onerous or egregious" than is typical for that crime, justifying an exceptional sentence; II.

State v. Quigg, 72 Wn.App. 828 (1994)

Ongoing pattern of sexually abusing the same minor victim, involving multiple incidents over a prolonged time, is an exception to the real facts doctrine where there is proof of multiple incidents per count, at 840, State v. Daniels, 56 Wn.App. 646, 653-4 (1990), State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738, 755-6 (1990); sexual contact over three days is insufficient to demonstrate an ongoing pattern, at 841, State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 204-05 (2001), but see: State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378, 390-92 (2010); to establish future dangerousness, state must show (1) the offender has a history of similar acts of sexual deviancy, State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596, 615 (1992), State v. DeMara, 62 Wn.App. 23, 28-9 (1991), which may be with same victim of instant offense and (2) opinion of a mental health professional establishes defendant would not likely be amenable to treatment; exceptional sentences on two counts run consecutively involve multiple exceptional sentences which must be supported by more than one aggravating factor, see: State v. McClure, 64 Wn.App. 528, 534 (1992), In re Holmes, 69 Wn.App. 282, 292-3 (1993), State v. Stewart, 72 Wn.App. 885, 901 (1994); III.

State v. Johnson, 124 Wn.2d 57 (1994)

A defendant who discharges a deadly weapon at persons fleeing in cars near a public school in session should reasonably foresee impact on children and parents, thus community impact, where proved, justifies exceptional sentence, State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 273-76 (2003), cf.: State v. Cuevas-Diaz, 61 Wn.App. 902, 905 (1991), State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750, 760 (1996), aff'd, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), State v. Morris, 87 Wn.App. 654, 665-6 (1997), State v. Way, 88 Wn.App. 830 (1997); gang motivation may support an exceptional sentence, although mere membership may be insufficient, see: Dawson v. Delaware, 117 L.Ed.2d 309 (1992), State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016), State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App, 512, 534-36 (2015) , aff'd, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 244 (2017); here, expert testimony established that the instant offense involved violent gang behavior; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Rama, 73 Wn.App. 503 (1994)

Future dangerousness is a factor in a nonsex crime where the motivation for the offense was sexual, State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893, 900 (1995), at 506-8; where defendant is treated and reoffends, evidence is still required to establish a lack of amenability to treatment, State v. Miller, 60 Wn.App. 914 (1991), thus remanded for sentence within standard range; I, 2-1.

State v. Bedker, 74 Wn.App. 87, 94-102 (1994)

Age of victim and prior victimization known to sex assault-defendant establish victim vulnerability, at 94-5, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 423-5 (1987), see: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 204-05 (2001); family relationship between victim and predator, where crimes occurred at the home of victim and defendant's father, establish abuse of trust, at 95-6, State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 771-72 (2001), distinguishing State v. Stuhr, 58 Wn.App. 660 (1991); to establish future dangerousness, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445, 454 (1990), court may consider prior uncharged sexual offenses as an objective basis for establishing defendant's history of similar conduct, which does not violate real facts doctrine, see: State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701, 708 (1991); opinion of a mental health professional, to establish future dangerousness, may be based upon the record where defendant refuses to participate in an evaluation, State v. McNallie, 123 Wn.2d 585 589-91 (1994), see: State v. Tinkham, 74 Wn.App. 102 (1994), State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002); I.

State v. Tierney, 74 Wn.App. 346 (1994)

At arson and burglary sentencing, trial court enhances for cruelty based upon threats to victim and use of obscene language in a letter, all of which were admitted at trial; held: "real facts doctrine does not preclude reliance on facts that establish elements of additional uncharged crimes to enhance when those facts are part and parcel of the current offense. The real facts doctrine only bars reliance on those facts wholly unrelated to the current offense or those facts which would elevate the degree of crime charged to a greater offense than charged," at 352, distinguishing State v. Houf, 120 Wn.2d 327, 331-4 (1992), see: State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740, 749 (1990), State v. Reynolds, 80 Wn.App. 851, 856-8 (1996), State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783, 789-92 (1999), State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002), State v. Van Buren, 112 Wn.App. 585 (2002); ongoing harassment justifies an exceptional sentence as deliberate cruelty for arson, distinguishing State v. Pockert, 53 Wn.App. 491, 497 (1989), see: State v. Goodman, 109 Wn.App. 355, 363-64 (2001); I.

State v. McCune, 74 Wn.App. 395 (1994)

Once court has determined that an exceptional sentence for future dangerousness is appropriate, then in setting the length of the exceptional sentence, the court may rely upon factors that could not be considered in determining the appropriateness of an exceptional sentence, such as similar prior offenses and minimal time between release from last offense and the commission of the current offense, State v. Hillman, 66 Wn.App. 770, 778 (1992), State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556, 566-7 (1993), State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 227 (1992); "worst case scenario" may support an exceptional sentence of less than the maximum sentence; III.

State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889, 897-9 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999)

Trial court may not consider good time credits in imposing exceptional sentence, State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556, 573 (1993), State v. Wakefield, 130 Wn.2d 464, 477-8 (1996), State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 843-6 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Crow, 187 Wn.App. 414, 425-26 (2015); III.

State v. Butler, 75 Wn.App. 47, 53 (1994)

In attempted rape case, advanced age (89 years) by itself is an aggravating factor, State v. Hicks, 61 Wn.App. 923, 930 (1991), State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671, 676 (1987), distinguishing State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390 (1992); rapid recidivism (here, same day as release from prison) is an aggravating factor, State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576 (2007), State v. Murray, 190 Wn.2d 727 (2018), see: State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 224 (1992), State v. Goodman, 109 Wn.App. 355, 360 (2001), State v. Combs, 156 Wn.App. 502 (2010); I.

State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174 (1994)

Lengthened sentence and consecutive sentences may be imposed where more than one aggravating factor is proved, at 181-83, State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51, 58 (1993), distinguishing State v. McClure, 64 Wn.App. 528, 534 (1992); seriousness of injuries and effect of injuries on family is a single aggravating factor, State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 223 (1992), State v. Tunell, 51 Wn.App. 274, 279-80 (1988), overruled on other grounds, State v. Batista, 116 Wn.2d 777, 788 (1991); more than one victim of vehicular assault may support multiple victim aggravating factor, State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134, 141-2 (1995), even if only one is charged in information where fact that there were multiple victims was both acknowledged and proved at sentencing, does not violate real facts doctrine, see: State v. Bourne, 90 Wn.App. 963 (1998); driving without insurance is aggravating factor for vehicular assault; I.

State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893 (1995)

Where presumptive sentence is the same for one or two counts, trial court may find presumptive sentence to be clearly too lenient because defendant committed two crimes, State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51, 56 (1993), State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238, 244-5 (1991), State v. Reynolds, 80 Wn.App. 851, 861 (1996), State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361 (1998), but see: State v. Morris, 87 Wn.App. 654 (1997), State v. Wilson, 96 Wn.App. 382, 391-93 (1999), State v. Borg, 145 Wn.2d 329, 336-40 (2001); affirms State v. Stewart, 72 Wn.App. 885 (1994).

State v. Ritchie, 126 Wn.2d 388 (1995)

Once court properly decides to impose an exceptional sentence above the standard range, court need not state reasons for length, nor must length be proportionate to sentences in similar cases, review is limited to abuse of discretion standard, State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556, 573 (1993), State v. Hovig, 149 Wn.App. 1, 14-16 (2009), State v. Sao, 156 Wn.App. 67, 79-82 (2010); overrules, in part, State v. Elsberry, 69 Wn.App. 793, 796 (1993), State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107 (1989), aff'd on other grounds, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 227 (1992), see: State v. Smith, 82 Wn.App. 153, 164 (1996), State v. Baldwin, 111 Wn.App. 631, 646 (2002), aff'd, on other grounds, 150 Wn.2d 448 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Hicks, 77 Wn.App. 1 (1995)

In possession of child pornography case, victim vulnerability is not an aggravating factor where there is not evidence that two-year old depicted in photographs knew photos were taken or that defendant possessed them; before one can be vulnerable victim, he or she must first be victim, at four; using washed-out priors, State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768, 773-4 (1993), to find defendant has proclivity to commit sex offenses effectively applies future dangerousness standard in disguise, which is not proper absent expert testimony, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445, 455 (1990), at 5-6, cf.: State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701, 720-21 (2000); possession of child pornography is not an enumerated sex offense, RCW 9.94A.030(29); III.

State v. Akin, 77 Wn.App. 575 (1995)

Trial court may not recommend work ethic camp sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.137, if it imposes an exceptional sentence; while a defendant may not appeal the length of a presumptive sentence, s/he may challenge the court's authority to impose a sentencing alternative, State v. Onefrey, 119 Wn.2d 572, 574 n. 1 (1992); it is a mitigating factor for an escapee to voluntarily surrender before threat of capture; sanctions imposed by the institution upon the escapee may not be considered as mitigating factors; I.

State v. Roberts, 77 Wn.App. 678 (1995)

A defendant's good conduct after crime cannot support an exceptional sentence; court cannot delay sentencing to see if law will change to permit a reduced sentence; I.

State v. Bartlett, 128 Wn.2d 323 (1995)

While the fact of a prior conviction alone may not justify an exceptional sentence, trial court may depart from sentence range based upon the facts within a prior conviction if they relate to the present case to show extraordinary circumstances; in child homicide case where defendant was previously convicted of assault on a child, defendant's special knowledge about infant vulnerability due to his prior conviction is an aggravating factor based upon defendant's state of mind, State v. Nordby, 106 Wn.2d 514, 518-9 (1986), State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 599-600 (1999), State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134 (1995)

In vehicular assault case, failure of defendant to submit to alcohol evaluation is a proper aggravating factor and is not the equivalent of future dangerousness, State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 599-600 (1999), aff'd, on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002), State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701 (2000), but see: State v. Bolton, 68 Wn.App. 211, 215 (1992); multiple victims in only car hit by defendant and seriousness of injuries are aggravating factors, see: State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 814 (1992), State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174, 183 (1994); III.

State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1 (1996)

In vehicular homicide case, severity of injuries and multiple injuries are inherent in the offense, thus not an aggravating factor, overruling, in part, State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217 (1992), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ritchie, 126 Wn.2d 388 (1995), cf.: State v. Cowen, 87 Wn.App. 45, 53-7 (1997), State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117 (2010); reckless driving that is not identified as particularly egregious is not an aggravating factor, see: State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768 (1993), State v. Perez, 69 Wn.App. 133 (1993); pedestrian is particularly vulnerable where she is struck in her own back yard, State v. Morris, 87 Wn.App. 654, 666-9 (1997); reverses, in part, State v. Cardenas, 77 Wn.App. 112 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 80-3 (1996)

Enhanced penalty for delivery of drugs in a jail includes steps leading into county courthouse in which jail was housed, RCW 9.94A.310(5); 9-0.

State v. Worl, 129 Wn.2d 416, 426-8 (1996)

Multiple injuries and deliberate cruelty are valid aggravating factors for malicious harassment, RCW 9A.36.080, where defendant is also convicted of attempted murder, see: State v. Worl, 58 Wn.App. 443 (1990); reverses State v. Worl, 74 Wn.App. 605 (1994); 5-3.

State v. Reynolds, 80 Wn.App. 851 (1996)

In drug sale case, enhancement for defendant's negotiations to sell additional drugs are part and parcel of current offense, not barred by real facts doctrine, State v. Tierney, 74 Wn.App. 346, 352 (1994); bragging that she "walked" on a prior charge establishes lack of remorse and lack of respect for criminal justice system, which are grounds for an exceptional sentence, does not violate real facts doctrine as punishment is not for prior dismissed case; III.

State v. Smith, 82 Wn.App. 153 (1996)

Efforts to conceal crime is an aggravating factor for attempted murder where victim would likely have died, at 165; random extreme violence is an aggravating factor, at 166-7; I.

State v. Branch, 129 Wn.2d 635, 644-51 (1996)

Theft from limited partnership containing 180 partners establishes multiple victims; a sentence 16 times standard range for theft of $400,000 is not clearly excessive; 9-0.

State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 330-5 (1996)

Trial court using a presentence report prepared for a prior conviction does not violate real facts doctrine, as court may consider current crime and criminal history, State v. Houf, 120 Wn.2d 327, 333 (1992); in rape case, rough treatment, hitting in head with fist, multiple penetrations, verbal humiliation demonstrate deliberate cruelty, State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 768-70 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Baird, 83 Wn.App. 477, 486-9 (1996)

Asleep victim is particularly vulnerable State v. Ogden, 102 Wn.App. 357, 365-69 (2000); cutting off victim's nose and carefully slicing eyelids is deliberate cruelty, see: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 205 (2001), State v. Zatkovich, 113 Wn.App. 70, 81-83 (2002); I.

State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669, 679-80 (1996)

Efforts to conceal crime is an aggravating factor, distinguishing State v. Crutchfield, 53 Wn.App. 916, 926-7 (1989), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390, 396 (1992); 2-1, I.

State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750, 761-3 (1996), aff'd, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), overruled, in part, State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783, 790-91 (1999)

Calling rape victim names after the offense may establish deliberate cruelty, State v. Strauss, 54 Wn.App. 408, 418 (1989), if it manifests cruelty and is a continuation of the crime; multiple penetrations or sexual acts is an aggravating factor, State v. Herzog, 69 Wn.App. 521 (1993), State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669, 678 (1996), but see: State v. State v. Strauss, supra. at 419, State v. Post, 59 Wn.App. 389 (1990), aff'd, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992); I.

State v. Duvall, 84 Wn.App. 439, 446-7 (1996)

Statutory aggravating factor of "ongoing pattern of sexual abuse of same victim," RCW 9.94A.390(2)(f), can apply to instances of abuse in other states; I.

State v. Hrycenko, 85 Wn.App. 543 (1997)

Statute defining major VUCSA violation as "more onerous than typical," "larger than personal use," "broad geographic area," RCW 9.94A.390(2)(d), is not vague; I.

State v. Duvall, 86 Wn.App. 871, 877 (1997)

Multiple incidents is a proper aggravating factor even where the other acts occurred in another state; I.

State v. Cowen, 87 Wn.App. 45, 53-7 (1997)

Seriousness of injuries is an aggravating factor for attempted murder, as the crime could involve no injury at all, cf.: State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1 (1996); I.

State v. Mulligan, 87 Wn.App. 261 (1997)

Victim impact is not a proper aggravating factor solely where one parent murders the other parent, distinguishing State v. Cuevas-Diaz, 61 Wn.App. 902, 905-7 (1991); I.

State v. Elza, 87 Wn.App. 336 (1997)

Abuse of trust is an aggravating factor where former employee (here, 5-6 years prior to crime) uses knowledge gained during employment to commit crime, at 341-2, State v. Bissell, 53 Wn.App. 499, 500-1 (1989); where defendant is acquitted of felony murder but convicted of lesser robbery, death of victim cannot be an aggravating factor under real facts doctrine, at 342-3, see: State v. Wakefield, 130 Wn.2d 464, 476-7 (1996); II.

State v. Morris, 87 Wn.App. 654 (1997)

Vehicular homicide defendant strikes several bicyclists in succession; held: where multiple offense policy, RCW 9.94A.400, is fulfilled by increased offender score, and trial court does not find extraordinarily serious harm left unpunished by presumptive sentence, then multiple victims and offenses is not a proper aggravating factor, at 660-3, distinguishing State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419 (1987), State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768 (1993), see: State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893, 897 (1995), but see: State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003); absent intentional conduct, deliberate cruelty is not a proper aggravating factor for vehicular homicide or assault, distinguishing State v. Nordby, 106 Wn.2d 514, 518-9 (1986); bicyclists are particularly vulnerable, State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 12 (1996); I.

State v. Modest, 87 Wn.App. 239, 251-3 (1997)

"Despicable" crime is an opinion, not an aggravating factor; where state files charges for each victim, multiple victims is not an aggravating factor; in promoting prostitution case, where evidence establishes that prostitutes engaged in "far more acts of prostitution than were reflected in the charges," multiple incidents is an aggravating factor, State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738, 756 (1989); III.

State v. Jeannotte, 133 Wn.2d 847 (1997)

Failed entrapment defense may constitute a mitigating factor supporting an exceptional sentence below the standard range, State v. Hutsell, 120 Wn.2d 913, 921 (1993), State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.2d 491, 499 (1987), State v. Ha'mim, 132 Wn.2d 834, 843 (1997), overruled on other grounds, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015) State v. Flett, 98 Wn.App. 799, 806-08 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Way, 88 Wn.App. 830 (1997)

Shooting and killing victim in front of many college students does not justify an exceptional sentence for community impact as defendant's actions were not sufficiently distinctive, psychological trauma is common following violent crimes, distinguishing State v. Johnson, 124 Wn.2d 57, 74-5 (1994), State v. Cuevas-Diaz, 61 Wn.App. 902, 903-6 (1991), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 273-76 (2003), cf.: State v. Chanthabouly, 164 Wn.App. 134, 142-45 (2011); I.

State v. McCollum, 88 Wn.App. 977, 983-7 (1997)

Trial court imposes exceptional sentence for delivery of four grams of methamphetamine as a quantity of drugs substantially larger than for personal use; held: while record contains no information regarding "normal quantity," defense offered no support for claim that the amount was for personal use, thus failed to show that court's reasoning was clearly erroneous; cf.: State v. Sanchez, 69 Wn.App. 195 (1993), State v. Negrete, 72 Wn.App. 62, 68-71 (1993); multiple transactions over lengthy period of time are statutory aggravating factors, former RCW 9.94A.390(2); II.

State v. Bourne, 90 Wn.App. 970, 974-80 (1998)

In felony hit and run case, injuring more than one person in a single victim-vehicle is grounds for exceptional sentence under multiple victim factor, State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174, 184-6 (1994); II.

State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361 (1998)

Where the range for an unranked offense, RCW 9.94A.120(7) [here, stalking] is found by the court to be clearly too lenient such that defendant would be awarded "free crimes," then an exceptional sentence may be imposed, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 428 (1987), State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238, 243 (1991), State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893, 897-99 (1995); III.

State v. Jacobson, 92 Wn.App. 958 (1998)

In vehicular homicide case, intentionally driving wrong way with lights off at night while fleeing police is more egregious than typical; I.

State v. Halgren, 137 Wn.2d 341 (1999)

Future dangerousness is an aggravating factor only where the crime is a sex offense or the state has pleaded and proved sexual motivation, RCW 9.94A.030(33)(a), State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999), overruling dicta in State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893 (1995); reverses, in part, State v. Halgren, 87 Wn.App. 525 (1997); 5-4.

State v. Strauss, 93 Wn.App. 691 (1999)

Prior to rape sentencing at which state is seeking exceptional sentence for future dangerousness, defendant refuses to participate in evaluation, trial court enhances based upon testimony of certified sex offender treatment provider who bases his evaluation upon discovery, evidence of priors, lack of accountability, refusal to acknowledge any level of culpability, continued denial of crimes and problem and refusal to seek treatment; held: denials of current offense and silence with respect to current offense are not proper bases to justify exceptional sentence, State v. Garibay, 67 Wn.App. 773, 782 (1992), cf.: In re Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 139 Wn.2d 166 (1999); denial of guilt for prior offenses in spite of guilty pleas and past refusals to participate in or seek treatment have no Fifth Amendment implications, Reina v. United States, 5 L.Ed.2d 249, 255 (1960), and may be considered at sentencing; I.

State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783 (1999)

In rape 2° case, court finds choking to unconsciousness is deliberate cruelty, defense argues that force and serious injury establish rape 1°, thus real facts doctrine violated; held: because the injuries do not establish infliction of serious injury as a matter of law, whether the acts constitute deliberate cruelty or rise to the level of serious physical injury under rape 1° is a factual decision for the trial court, thus not clearly erroneous; justifying an exceptional sentence by relying on facts that elevate the seriousness of the crime violates the real facts doctrine, reconsidering State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750, 761-62, aff'd, on other grounds, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), see: State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002); I.

Pers. Restraint of Breedlove, 138 Wn.2d 298 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty to lesser offense, agrees to exceptional sentence, appeals; held: where trial court approves a plea agreement as consistent with the interests of justice and in conformance with SRA, the stipulation to an exceptional sentence is a substantial and compelling reason justifying an exceptional sentence, State v. Cooper, 63 Wn.App. 8 (1991), State v. Hilyard, 63 Wn.App. 413 (1991), but see: State v. Gaines, 121 Wn.App. 687, 696-703 (2004), State v. Gronnert, 122 Wn.App. 214 (2004), trial court must still enter written findings; by agreeing to the sentence, defendant waives right to appeal; 5-1-3.

State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999)

Felony murder/rape is not a sex offense, RCW 9.94A.030(33)(a), thus sexual motivation is a proper aggravating factor, State v. Halgren, 137 Wn.2d 340, 349-50 (1999), overruling, in part, State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Burkins, 94 Wn.App. 677, 696-702 (1999)

Mere fact that victim smoked marijuana, without evidence of impairment, does not support victim vulnerability, State v. Crutchfield, 53 Wn.App. 916, 923-34 (1989), overruled on other grounds, State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390, 396 (1992); statements by defendant to police that he was glad victim was dead establishes lack of remorse; I.

State v. Owens, 95 Wn.App. 619 (1999)

In assault 2° case, defendant's serial beatings in addition to pointing a firearm establish that the crime was more egregious than necessary; clearly too lenient factor only applies due to the operation of the multiple offense policy, see: State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361, 366 (1998); I.

State v. Serrano, 95 Wn.App. 700 (1999)

Victim is shot five times in back while in a device suspended above the ground for apple picking: victim vulnerability was improper, as the vulnerability was not a "substantial factor in the accomplishment of the crime," at 712, State v. Jackmon, 55 Wn.App. 562, 566-67 (1989), State v. Batista, 116 Wn.2d 777, 790 n.8 (1991), State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 205 (2001); shooting victim five times, by itself, does not suggest gratuitous infliction of pain, thus not deliberate cruelty, at 712-13, distinguishing State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556 (1993), State v. Drummer, 54 Wn.App. 751 (1989), State v. Harmon, 50 Wn.App. 755 (1988), cf.: State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 16-17 (2002), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236, 248-51 (2008); defendant being friend and coworker of victim is insufficient for abuse of trust, at 713-14, distinguishing State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211 (1991), State v. Stuhr, 58 Wn.App. 660 (1990), State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 426-27 (1987); III.

State v. Wilson, 96 Wn.App. 382 (1999)

In assault 2°, victim's finger is broken causing surgery and possible permanent injury, victim's knowledge that defendant had sexually assaulted another shortly before, caused "psychological injury," establishing injuries significantly more serious than typical, justifying exceptional sentence, State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174, 183 (1994), State v. Tunell, 51 Wn.App. 274, 279 (1988), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Batista, 116 Wn.2d 777 (1991), State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 584-85 (2002), but see: State v. E.A.J., 116 Wn.App. 777, 789 (2003); unscored misdemeanor failure to register as sex offender is a proper aggravating factor, State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 325 (1986), RCW 9.94A.390(2)(j), where court finds that presumptive sentence is clearly too lenient; even where offender score is less than the maximum such that defendant is not receiving a "free crime," State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893, 897 (1995), court may impose an exceptional sentence upward if it concludes that the multiple offenses policy of RCW 9..94A.400 would result in presumptive sentence that was clearly too lenient, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(i), State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 773-74 (2001); I.

State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 599-600 (1999), aff'd, on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002)

In vehicular homicide case, defendant's extensive history of drug abuse, placing defendant on notice that he had a drug problem that led to violations of law which he failed to correct establishes he was "especially culpable" when he drove, amounting to callous disregard, a proper aggravating factor, State v. Bartlett, 128 Wn.2d 323, 334 (1995), State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134 (1995), but see: State v. Bolton, 68 Wn.App. 211, 214-15 (1992); II.

State v. Hooper, 100 Wn.App. 179 (2000)

Assaulting a known disabled individual establishes particular vulnerability as an aggravating factor; assaulting witness because they call 911 to report a crime is a valid aggravating factor; assaulting a victim while she is on the telephone is not a valid aggravating factor; I.

State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701 (2000)

In vehicular homicide case, special knowledge and increased awareness of the consequences of DUI are proper aggravating factors where defendant had a prior DUI/manslaughter conviction and prior alcohol treatment, State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134 (1995), State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 599-600 (1999), aff'd, on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002), but see: State v. Bolton, 68 Wn.App. 211, 213 (1992); I.

State v. Ferguson, 142 Wn.2d 631 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of assault 2° (transmitting HIV to another with intent to inflict bodily harm), former RCW 9A.36.021(1)(e), trial court finds deliberate cruelty; held: because intent to harm by exposing HIV is an element of the crime, it cannot serve as an aggravating factor, distinguishing State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991), cf.: State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 260-62 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Bridges, 104 Wn.App. 98 (2001)

Defendant sells drugs to informant twice, trial court finds multiple offense policy results in standard range that is clearly excessive because difference between offense is trivial, imposes exceptional sentence below standard range for one delivery; held: while State v. Sanchez, 69 Wn.App. 255 (1993) authorizes an exceptional sentence where the state does not identify any purpose for the second purchase other than to increase the presumptive sentence, the sentence is clearly too lenient where the sentence imposed is below the standard range for a single offense, State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327, 341-48 (2003), see: State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017; III.

State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191 (2001)

Domestic violence pattern of abuse, RCW 9.94A.390(2), requires multiple incidents over a substantial period of time, see also: State v. Osalde, 109 Wn.App. 94 (2001), State v. Blakely, 111 Wn.App. 851, 869-71 (2002), more than two weeks, at 203, see: State v. Schmeck, 98 Wn.App. 647, 651 (1999), State v. Duvall, 86 Wn.App. 871, 877 (1997), State v. Quigg, 72 Wn.App. 828, 841 (1994), State v. Goodman, 108 Wn.App. 355, 360-64 (2001), State v. Atkinson, 113 Wn.App. 661 (2002), but see: State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378, 390-92 (2010; violating protection order immediately after issuance is not an aggravating factor, at 204-04; where victim did not suffer because of age, disability or ill health, State v. Bedker, 74 Wn.App. 87, 94 (1994), State v. Scott, 72 Wn.App. 207, 217 (1993), nor was she incapacitated by the attack, State v. Ogden, 102 Wn.App. 357, 367-68 (2000), nor was she selected as a victim because she was home alone, State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556, 565-66 (1993), then victim was not particularly vulnerable, at 204-05; where defendant did not inflict pain as an end in itself, State v. Serrano, 95 Wn.App. 700, 712-13 (1999), deliberate cruelty is not an aggravating factor, at 205; II.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 489, 507 (2001)

Sentencing court may not order that defendant register as a sex offender where not specifically authorized by statute, even if court finds grounds for an exceptional sentence; II.

State v. Chance, 105 Wn.App. 291 (2001)

Retaliation against a prosecutor for his actions in his official capacity is an aggravating factor, see: State v. Riley, 69 Wn.App. 349, 355 (1983); court may not consider a court-ordered competency evaluation in determining future dangerousness unless defendant was warned prior to the evaluation that it might be used at sentencing, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), see: State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002); retaliation, by itself, is not grounds for an enhanced sentence for felony stalking, RCW 9A.46.110(5)(e), as the crime is enhanced to a felony if the victim is an attorney and the stalking was to retaliate, however here the prolonged duration of the stalking and defendant's flagrant disregard for police efforts to prevent it justify an exceptional sentence; II.

State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762 (2001)

Multiple penetrations, positioning of victim across car hood, threats to kill, victim's begging for mercy is "significantly more egregious and well beyond the force and violence typically associated" with rape 3°, thus constitutes deliberate cruelty, at 768-70, State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 333 (1996), State v. Herzog, 69 Wn.App. 521, 526 (1993), State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47, 55 (1987), State v. Monroe, 135 Wn.App. 880 (2006), but see: State v. Delarosa-Flores, 59 Wn.App. 514, 519 (1990); raping and ejaculating twice, repositioning victim supports multiple incidents; raping juvenile sister-in-law while driving her home is abuse of trust, State v. Bedker, 74 Wn.App. 87, 95-96 (1994), but is not domestic violence, RCW 9.94A.390(2)(h), as not within definition, RCW 10.99.020(1); III.

State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288 (2001)

Victim's small stature supports vulnerability factor, State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 482 (1999), State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740, 748-49 (1990), State v. Holyoak, 49 Wn.App. 691, 695 (1987); planning and sophistication are aggravating factors only where done to a high degree, see: State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669, 679-80 (1996), State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Goodman, 108 Wn.App. 355, 358-64 (2001)

Defendant violates protection order and conditions of release, burns down wife's home, killing dog; held: extraordinary disregard for the law is an aggravating factor, see: State v. Butler, 75 Wn.App. 47, 54-55 (1994), State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 224 (1992), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ritchie, 126 Wn.2d 388 (1995), not the equivalent of future dangerousness or concern for public safety; II.

State v. Osalde, 109 Wn.App. 94 (2001)

Repeated threats to kill domestic partner and testimony at sentencing from victim about psychological abuse is sufficient to establish aggravating factor of ongoing pattern of domestic violence involving psychological abuse, see: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191 (2001); I.

State v. Borg, 145 Wn.2d 329, 336-40 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of six counts of unlawful possession of a firearm, trial court finds same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), concludes that multiple incidents are "more egregious than possessing only one firearm," imposes consecutive sentences; held: where defendant is sentenced for multiple current convictions which are same criminal conduct, see: Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009), an exceptional sentence is not justified solely because those convictions number more than one, must be some extraordinarily serious harm or culpability which would not otherwise be accounted for in determining the presumptive sentencing range, see: State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 427-29 (1987), but see: State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Teuber, 109 Wn.App. 640 (2001)

In felony hit and run, unscored infractions are grounds for an exceptional sentence, see: State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 325 (1986), State v. Olive, 47 Wn.App. 147 (1987); I.

State v. Ramires, 109 Wn.App. 749 (2002)

Knowingly shooting police officer acting in his official duty is an aggravating factor, State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 466 (1994); officer is not in a particularly vulnerable position when making a traffic stop; failed defense shifting blame to another is not an aggravating factor, nor does it establish egregious lack of remorse; III.

State v. Baldwin, 111 Wn.App. 631, 644-49 (2002), aff'd, on other grounds, 150 Wn.2d 448 (2003)

Tying up victims' credit via forgeries and identity theft for "thousands and thousands of dollars" is a major economic offense and high degree of sophistication; I.

State v. Zatkovich, 113 Wn.App. 70, 77-83 (2002)

An exceptional sentence for stalking is authorized where there is domestic violence and an ongoing pattern of psychological, physical or sexual abuse, RCW 9.94A.535(2)(h)(I), 10.99.020(3)(v), even though repeated harassment and intimidation are elements of a separate stalking charge, RCW 9A.46.110; I.

State v. Atkinson, 113 Wn.App. 661 (2002)

Greater mental culpability is an aggravating factor where court finds that defendant had been made aware by a prior conviction that a predictable consequence of alcohol abuse was a proclivity for violence against women, at 669-70; unprovoked hitting, knocking to floor, tearing clothes off, locking victim outside in rain and cold while naked, telling victim to prostitute herself, threatening to kill establishes domestic violence manifesting deliberate cruelty, intimidation and ongoing pattern of abuse, at 670-72, see: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 205 (2001), three incidents of abuse requiring medical attention over 7-10 months establishes a pattern, see: State v. Harris, 123 Wn.App. 906, 914-16 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); III.

State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 273-76 (2003)

Defendant murders his elementary school age daughter, creates false abduction story to cover up, trial court imposes exceptional sentence; held: community impact is grounds for an exceptional sentence where it is of a destructive nature not normally associated with the offense in question and was reasonably foreseeable to the defendant, State v. Johnson, 124 Wn.2d 57, 73-76 (1994), State v. Cuevas-Diaz, 61 Wn.App. 902 (1991), distinguishing State v. Way, 88 Wn.App. 830 (1997); here, impact on children at victim's school justifies exceptional sentence; affirms State v. Jackson, 111 Wn.App. 660 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003)

At resentencing following reversal, State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107 (1999), court imposes exceptional sentence, concluding multiple penetrations over a short period of time constitutes deliberate cruelty; held: because the issue of whether to impose an exceptional sentence was not identical as between the two sentencings because of the change from separate and distinct conduct to the same conduct, collateral estoppel will not bar an exceptional sentence, State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106 (2004), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), see: State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992); threat to kill, demand that rape victim say she "liked it" establish deliberate cruelty, State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 332-24 (1996), State v. Monroe, 135 Wn.App. 880 (2006); multiple penetrations where each is charged and run concurrently may not support deliberate cruelty, see: State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669 (1996); multiple offense policy may justify an exceptional sentence, even where multiple offenses are charged, where the sentences run concurrently, they are the same criminal conduct thus do not increase offender score, "a rapist should not be rewarded with the same sentence for multiple rapes that he would have received for a single penetration," at 375, distinguishing State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 427-29 (1987), State v. Borg, 145 Wn.2d 329, 336-40 (2001); affirms State v. Tili, 108 Wn.App. 289 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 457-61 (2003)

Sentencing guidelines statutes do not create a protected liberty interest, overruling State v. Rhodes, 92 Wn.2d 755 (1979), and thus are not subject to vagueness analysis, State v. Chanthabouly, 164 Wn.App. 134, 141-42 (2011), State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021), see: State v. DeVore, 2 Wn.App.2d 651 (2018); affirms, on other grounds, State v. Baldwin, 111 Wn.App. 631 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Harrison, 148 Wn.2d 550 (2003)

Defendant receives exceptional sentence, on appeal Court of Appeals reverses, holding that state breached plea bargain and orders specific performance; on remand, different judge holds that he is bound by the exceptional sentence previously imposed, although he reduces offender score in accordance with mandate; held: when state breaches, neither collateral estoppel nor "law of the case" doctrine prevent trial court from independently determining whether an exceptional sentence is warranted, State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106 (2004), State v. Amos, 147 Wn.App. 217, 232 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Rawls, 114 Wn.App. 719 (2002)

Washed-out juvenile priors may justify an exceptional sentence, State v. McAlpin, 108 Wn.2d 458 (1987), State v. Dunivan, 57 Wn.App. 332 (1990), State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621 (1990), State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768 (1993), distinguishing State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665 (2001); I.

State v. Hudnall, 116 Wn.App. 190 (2003)

For a Class C felony, trial court imposes exceptional sentence of 36 months confinement and 24 months community custody where statute mandates 36 months of community custody, defendant seeks reduction of confinement and increase of community custody; held: court may impose an exceptional reduction of community custody, Postsentence Review of Smith, 139 Wn.App. 599 (2007), to allow a defendant to complete her sentence before expiration of the maximum sentence, even where court has increased confinement beyond the standard range, see also: State v. Davis, 146 Wn.App. 714 (2008); II.

State v. Rotko, 116 Wn.App. 230 (2003)

In criminal mistreatment 1° case, RCW 9A.42.020(1), starving an 11-month old child is subject to an exceptional sentence for extreme youth of victim making victim particularly vulnerable, even though statute applies to a class of victims under 18 years old, State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990), State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 423-24 (1987); withholding food over a protracted period of time is an aggravating factor; II.

State v. E.A.J., 116 Wn.App. 777, 789-94 (2003)

Heinous, cruel or depraved aggravating factor, RCW 13.40.150(3)(h)(i)(ii), is not void for vagueness, Walton v. Arizona, 111 L.Ed.2d 511 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, Ring v. Arizona, 153 L.Ed.2d 556 (2002), distinguishing Maynard v. Cartwright, 100 L.Ed.2d 372 (1988) and Godfrey v. Georgia, 64 L.Ed.2d 398 (1980); I.

State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003)

After trial and standard range sentence, defendant wins appeal, is convicted anew and receives standard range sentence, appeals again and prevails, trial court imposes exceptional sentence; held: because trial court did not identify specific objective facts drawn from the record of the thrid trial and not known when the standard range sentences were imposed, State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004), presumption of vindictiveness, North Carolina v. Pearce, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969), requires vacation of sentence and remand for resentencing, but see: State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), reserving power in sentencing court to justify exceptional sentence; II.

State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327, 341-48 (2003)

Lawyer makes 67 unauthorized withdrawals from trust account over 16 months, is convicted of 67 counts of felony theft resulting in an offender score of 66, trial court finds multiple offense policy, fact that defendant used a single scheme and cumulative effect of the crimes was virtually nonexistent, thus standard range was clearly excessive; held: because later offenses resulted in foreclosures of property which would not have occurred with the first theft, cumulative effect of the crimes cannot be said to be nonexistent, trivial or trifling, distinguishing State v. Sanchez, 69 Wn.App. 255 (1993), State v. Calvert, 79 Wn.App. 569 (1995), cf.: State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017), thus remanded for standard range sentence; I.

Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004)

Aggravating factors, other than prior convictions, must be submitted to a jury unless defendant waives jury on the issue, not retroactive to cases not on direct review, State v. Evans, 154 Wn.2d 438, 443-48 (2005), see: State v. Pillatos, 159 Wn.2d 459 (2007); not structural error, Washington v. Recuenco, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), but see: State v. Womac, 160 Wn.2d 643, 663-64 (2008); 5-4.

State v. Gronnert, 122 Wn.App. 214 (2004)

Defendant pleads guilty to standard range recommendation for VUCSA, is released pending sentencing, agrees that, if he violates conditions of release he will accept an exceptional sentence, defendant violates, court imposes exceptional sentence without objection; held: because trial court failed to find that the plea agreement itself is a substantial and compelling reason to depart from the standard range, considering the purposes of the SRA, RCW 9.94A.010, and because the exceptional sentence was not related to the crime, sentence is reversed and remanded for sentence within standard range, distinguishing In re Pers. Restraint of Breedlove, 138 Wn.2d 298 (1999), see: State v. Gaines, 121 Wn.App. 687, 696-703 (2004); I.

State v. Van Buren, 123 Wn.App. 634 (2004), overruled, in part, 136 Wn.App. 577 (2007)

Lack of remorse is an aggravating factor that must be submitted to the jury, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004); offender score and criminal history are not jury questions; exceptional sentence under "free crime" analysis, see: State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51, 56 (1993), is not a jury question; because defendant's score exceeds maximum of 9, it is for the judge, not a jury to determine exceptional sentence, State v. Alkire, 124 Wn.App. 169 (2004), State v.

Brundage, 126 Wn.App. 55 (2005), but see: State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005) , abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); trial court's miscalculation of offender score (14 as opposed to 15) was harmless where exceptional sentence is imposed because court sentenced defendant to more time because his score was "higher than 9," thus did not rely on the 15 calculation; II.

State v. Harris, 123 Wn.App. 906 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

Defendant enters into stipulated facts trial, court sua sponte imposes exceptional sentence; held: while defendant stipulated to facts for purposes of trial and a standard range sentence, he did not waive his right to a jury trial for purposes of an exceptional sentence, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), see: State v. Trebilcock, 184 Wn.App. 619, 631-36 (2014), as he did not voluntarily relinquish a known right, see: State v. Ermels, 156 Wn.2d 528 (2006), State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576 (2007); I.

State v. Maestas, 124 Wn.App. 352 (2004) , reversed, sub nom., State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

When an exceptional sentence is reversed because it was not based upon a jury determination of aggravating factors, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), double jeopardy clause does not preclude state from submitting those factors to a jury and imposing an exceptional sentence on remand, see: State v. Pillatos, 159 Wn.2d 459 (2007), State v. Mann, 146 Wn.App. 349 (2008); I.

State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417, 435-38 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007)

Defendant fires one bullet into vehicle with three people, no injury, defendant is convicted of three counts of assault 2° with three firearm enhancements, trial court imposes one day for each assault plus three consecutive 36 month sentences for enhancements, state appeals; held: a single act against three individuals allows court to exercise discretion in determining that the multiple offense policy results in an excessive presumptive sentence, RCW 9.94A.535(1)(g), (2016), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017); 2-1, II.

State v. Kinney, 125 Wn.App. 778 (2005)

Consecutive sentence based upon separate and distinct criminal conduct for two or more serious violent felonies, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(b), is not subject to a jury determination, Oregon v. Ice, 172 L.Ed.2d 517 (2008), State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754 (2010), Pers. Restraint of Finstad, 177 Wn.2d 501, 508 n. 7 (2013), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), cf.: State v. Washington, 135 Wn.App. 42, 51-53 (2006), State v. Cubias, 155 Wn.2d 549, 556 (2005), see also: Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009); I.

State v. Brundage, 126 Wn.App. 55 (2005)

Exceptional sentence under "free crimes" analysis is not a jury question, State v. Van Buren, 123 Wn.App. 634 (2004), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004),

but see: State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), overruled, in part, State v. VanBuren, 136 Wn.App. 577 (2007); II.

Washington v. Recuenco, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

Failure to submit a sentencing factor to the jury, Blakely v. Washington, 159 l03 (2004), like failure to submit an element to the jury, Neder v. United States, 144 L.Ed.2d 35 (1999), is not structural error and is thus subject to harmless error analysis, reversing, in part, State v. Recuenco, 154 Wn.2d 156 (2005), but see: Pers. Restraint of Hall, 163 Wn.2d 346 (2008), State v. Pleasant, 148 Wn.App. 408 (2009), see also: State v. Recuenco, 163 Wn.2d 428 (2008); 5-4.

State v. Clarke, 156 Wn.2d 880 (2006)

Following rape convictions subject to "determinate sentence plus," RCW 9.94A.712, trial court imposes exceptional minimum terms based upon unscored misdemeanors; held: sex assault convictions that are subject to RCW 9.94A.712 [recodified as RCW 9.94A.507 (2008)] are indeterminate sentences, thus Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004) does not apply, as trial court is not enhancing the maximum sentence the judge can impose solely based upon facts reflected in the jury verdict or admitted by defendant, ISRB sets actual release date, State v. Borboa, 157 Wn.2d 108 (2006), State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 323-26 (2007), State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 686-89 (2009), overruling State v. Borboa, 124 Wn.App. 779 (2004), overruling, in part, State v. Monroe, 126 Wn.App. 435, 441-52 (2005), State v. Bobenhouse, 166 Wn.2d 881, 895-97 (2009), see: State v. Woodruff, 137 Wn.App. 127 (2007); affirms State v. Clarke, 124 Wn.App. 893 (2004); 7-2.

State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614, 636-37 (2006)

After defendant withdraws guilty plea, state adds charges resulting in a standard range more than ten times the plea range, trial court declines to impose exceptional sentence; held: while trial court had the discretion to consider a downward departure in light of defendant's criminal history and the seriousness of his offenses, RCW 9.94A.535(1)(g), 9.94A.010(1), declining to do so is not reviewable; reverses State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Suleiman, 158 Wn.2d 280 (2006)

At plea, defendant stipulates to certification for determination of probable cause without stipulating that those facts are a legal basis for an exceptional sentence, trial court imposes exceptional sentence for particular vulnerability of victim; held: the factual conclusion to support an exceptional sentence based on victim vulnerability must be determined by a jury, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), unless defendant specifically stipulates to it, which did not occur here, State v. Hagar, 158 Wn.2d 369 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Beito, 167 Wn.2d 497 (2009), cf.: State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021); remanded to trial court for determination of harmlessness, Washington v. Recuenco, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); 6-3.

State v. Ortega, 131 Wn.App. 591, 595 (2006)

Domestic violence with multiple incidents of sexual abuse over a prolonged period of time is a jury question, Blakely v. Washington, 159 l03 (2004), see: State v. Felix, 125 Wn.App. 575 (2005); III.

State v. Washington, 135 Wn.App. 42, 51-53 (2006)

Trial court cannot impose consecutive sentences for crimes that are not serious violent offenses, as it is an exceptional sentence requiring fact finding by a jury, but see: Oregon v. Ice, 172 L.Ed.2d 517 (2008), distinguishing State v. Cubias, 155 Wn.2d 549, 556 (2005), State v. Kinney, 125 Wn.App. 778 (2005); I.

State v. Woodruff, 137 Wn.App. 127 (2007)

Following child rape convictions subject to "determinate sentence plus," RCW 9.94A.712 [recodified as 9.94A.507 (2008)], trial court imposes consecutive sentences without finding aggravating factors; held: while exceptional sentences for indeterminate sentences need not be submitted to a jury, State v. Clarke, 156 Wn.2d 880 (2006), State v. Bobenhouse, 166 Wn.2d 881, 895-97 (2009), trial court must still specify aggravating circumstances and enter findings of fact consistent with RCW 9.94A.535; II.

State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576 (2007)

Where defendant keys victim's car, having been released from custody for a no contact order violation a month earlier, same victim, trial court's imposition of exceptional sentence was proper, State v. Butler, 75 Wn.App. 47 (1994); 2-1, III.

State v. Gamble, 137 Wn.App. 892, 907-10 (2007), aff'd, on other grounds, 168 Wn.2d 161 (2010)

Punching victim to ground then kicking him in the head until he dies is sufficient for a jury to find victim particularly vulnerable; II.

State v. Poston, 138 Wn.App. 898 (2007)

As part of plea agreement, defendant stipulates to an exceptional sentence upward, trial court finds that defendant so stipulated and finds other aggravating factors but concludes that any of the factors would be grounds for an exceptional sentence, defendant appeals; held: defendant received substantial benefits from the plea (counts dismissed), thus waived right to appeal the exceptional sentence, State v. Ermels, 156 Wn.2d 528, 541 (2006), State v. Dillon, 142 Wn.App. 269 (2007), trial court's finding that any factor is grounds for the sentence makes analysis of other grounds unnecessary; where court fails to include a statement that "the sentence is consistent with the purposes of the SRA," Pers. Restraint of Breedlove, 138 Wn.2d 298, 310 (1999), appellate court can conclude that such a finding is implicit in the record; I.

Postsentence Review of Smith, 139 Wn.App. 599 (2007)

Trial court has authority to impose an exceptional sentence of a longer term of community custody, State v. Hudnall, 116 Wn.App. 190 (2003), State v. Davis, 146 Wn.App. 714 (2008); I.

State v. Grenning, 142 Wn.App. 518, 544-45 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 247 (2010)

Defendant is convicted of multiple sex offenses, one of which includes a jury determination that it was committed with sexual motivation, trial court imposes exceptional sentences; held: because sexual motivation is an aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(f) (2008), trial court properly imposed exceptional sentence; II.

State v. Newlun, 142 Wn.App. 730 (2008)

Judge may impose exceptional sentence without a finding of fact by a jury where court finds defendant "has committed multiple current offenses and the defendant's high offender score results in some of the current offenses going unpunished," RCW 9.94A.535(2), because the aggravating factor is wholly based upon prior convictions, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 6346, 656-61 (2011), State v. Alvarado, 164 Wn.2d 556 (2008), State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 134 (2005) , abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 140 L.Ed.2d 530 (1998), Jones v. United States, 143 L.Ed.2d 311, 329-30 (1999), see: State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754 (2010); III.

State v. Gonzales Flores, 164 Wn.2d 1, 20-24 (2008)

Major VUCSA aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(2)(e), must be determined by a jury, State v. Hagar, 158 Wn.2d 369, 374 (2006); 6-3.

Oregon v. Ice, 172 L.Ed.2d 517 (2008)

Where state law permits a judge to impose consecutive sentences upon finding certain statutorily defined facts, United States Constitution does not require that those facts be found by a jury, distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754 (2010); 5-4.

State v. Mitchell, 149 Wn.App. 716. 724-25 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 437 (2010)

In criminal mistreatment case, RCW 9A.42.005, 9A.42.020(1), withholding food from a 4-year old knowing that victim was preoccupied with food, had an eating disorder supports victim vulnerability; I.

State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66, 94-96 (2009)

Aggravating factors, do not violate double jeopardy clause as legislature intended additional punishment; II.

State v. Gordon, 153 Wn.App. 516, 529-40 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 172 Wn.2d 671 (2011)

Aggravating factors are elements of the aggravated version of the crime, Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, 609, 153 L.Ed.2d 556 (2002), State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018), State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784 (2019), Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013), for purposes of jury instructions, see: State v. Duncalf, 164 Wn.App. 900 (2011), aff'd, 177 Wn.2d 289 (2013), Matter of Fernandez, 20 Wn.App.2d 883 (2022); I.

State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754 (2010)

Defendant is convicted of 8 sex offenses which are not serious violent offenses, has two prior sex offenses, trial court finds that multiple offense policy results in a presumptive sentence that is clearly too lenient, imposes consecutive sentences; held: Sixth Amendment does not require a jury finding of aggravating circumstances to impose consecutive exceptional sentence,

Oregon v. Ice, 172 L.Ed.2d 517 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Finstad, 177 Wn.2d 501, 508 n. 7 (2013), overruling Pers. Restraint of VanDelft, 158 Wn.2d 731 (2006); 9-0. ,

State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117 (2010)

Severity of injuries cannot be an aggravating factor for assault 1°, as no injury can substantially exceed "great bodily harm" short of death, State v. Bourgeois, 72 Wn.App. 650, 662 (1994); reverses State v. Stubbs, 144 Wn.App. 644 (2008); 8-1.

State v. Hylton, 154 Wn.App. 945 (2010)

Adding a statutory aggravating factor that was previously a nonstatutory aggravator, abuse of trust, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(n) (2008), after a crime was committed may apply retroactively and is not an ex post facto law; II.

State v. Sao, 156 Wn.App. 67, 77-82 (2010)

Presumption of innocence does not apply to the penalty phase in a special sentencing proceeding to consider aggravating factors, jury need not be so instructed, State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 668 (1993); II.

State v. McNeal, 156 Wn.App. 340 (2010)

Where the legislature has directed the court, without a jury, to determine aggravating factors, RCW 9.94A.535(2) (free crimes, unscored misdemeanors), trial court may not impanel a jury to consider those factors; state is not precluded from seeking an exceptional sentence where a case has been remanded for resentencing and defendant had not been given pretrial notice of the aggravating factors, State v. Powell, 167 Wn.2d 672, 679-80 (2009); II.

State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378, 390-92 (2010)

Aggravating factor of sexual abuse for "a prolonged period of time," RCW 9.94A.535(3)(g), is a jury question even where the time was only 5-6 weeks, distinguishing State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 203 (2001); II.

State v. Combs, 156 Wn.App. 502 (2010)

Eluding a pursuing police officer committed six months after release from prison for a drug offense is not rapid recidivism, as attempting to elude is an impulse crime, there was no planning, distinguishing State v. Butler, 75 Wn.App. 47 (1994), State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576 (2007), see: State v. Murray, 190 Wn.2d 727 (2018); III.

State v. Mann, 157 Wn.App. 428, 441-42 (2010)

"[W]hile the jury must find the facts supporting an exceptional sentence, the court must determine whether the facts found were sufficient to warrant an exceptional sentence," at 441 ¶ 42, State v. Suleiman, 158 Wn.2d 280, 292-93 (2006); III.

State v. Edvalds, 157 Wn.App. 517, 529-35 (2010)

State need not give notice that it will seek an exceptional sentence based upon the multiple current offenses/free crimes aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(2)(c) (2010); I.

State v. Gordon, 172 Wn.2d 671 (2011)

Appellant may not challenge failure of the trial court to further define terms contained with an aggravating circumstance instruction for the first time on appeal as it is not of constitutional magnitude; reverses, in part, State v. Gordon, 153 Wn.App. 516 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 258-69 (2011)

Defendant admitting to therapist that he had sexual contact with juvenile over six years is sufficient to find multiple incidents over a long period of time; sexual contact with daughter, persuasive pleading, anger, violence is sufficient to find position of trust; because a single act is all that is required for conviction, the elements in the charged sex crimes do not preclude an aggravating factor of multiple incidents, fact that defendant is victim's father does not preclude position of trust factor, distinguishing State v. Ferguson, 142 Wn.2d 631 (2001); jury need not determine that, in addition to aggravating factors, there are substantial and compelling reasons for exceptional sentence, State v. Alvarado, 164 Wn.2d 556, 567 (2008); II.

State v. Williams, 159 Wn.App. 298, 308-15 (2011)

While rapid recidivism is a question for the jury, the issue of whether or not to impose an exceptional sentence upon a finding by the jury is for the court, similarity of the current offense the offense immediately preceding release is a factor for the sentencing judge, not the jury, determines the effect of the similarity, cf.: State v. Gordon, 153 Wn.App. 516, 534 (2009), reversed, on other grounds, 172 Wn.2d 671 (2011); once jury finds an aggravating factor, trial court is not obliged to enter findings to support the exceptional sentence, but see: State v. Friedlund, 182 Wn.2d 388 (2015); "shortly after" release in rapid recidivism statute, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(t) is not vague; jury need not be re-instructed on presumption of innocence in aggravating circumstances portion of bifurcated trial; I.

State v. Bluehorse, 159 Wn.App. 410, 423-31 (2011)

Defendant is convicted of drive-by shooting with gang aggravator, detective as gang expert testifies that gang members retaliate, gang members throwing gang signs might provoke retaliation and gang members often wear bandannas in gang color when committing violent crimes, only evidence regarding defendant's potential retaliatory motive is trading of gang signs some years earlier, no evidence is produced that defendant announced gang status or otherwise committed the crime to obtain, maintain or advance gang membership, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(s) (2011), 9.94A.537(3); held: generalizations from law enforcement are insufficient to satisfy state's burden to prove gang aggravator beyond a reasonable doubt, see: State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133, 136-39 (1999), State v. Moreno, 173 Wn.App. 479 (2013), State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016), State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App, 512, 534-36 (2015) , aff'd, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 244 (2017); trial court's stated reason that it imposed an exceptional sentence equivalent to assault 1° because the facts here resembled that crime violates real facts doctrine; imposing sentence to achieve parity with co-defendant with higher offender score's sentence violates real facts doctrine and is clearly excessive; II.

State v. Webb, 162 Wn.App. 195, 205-08 (2011)

Defendant robs store with his 9-year old daughter present, video of robbery shows daughter "shocked," victim says she was "absolutely stunned," friend of defendant says daughter was "stunned" 1½ hours after robbery, no other evidence presented, jury finds aggravating factor of destructive and foreseeable impact on persons other than the victim, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(r); held: absent a lasting destructive impact, evidence is insufficient to establish the aggravating factor, cf.: State v. Cuevas-Diaz, 61 Wn.App. 902, 904 (1991), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 275-76 (2003); 2-1, III.

State v. Chanthabouly, 164 Wn.App. 104, 142-45 (2011)

Shooting and killing a student in front of other high school students is sufficient to support a finding of destructive and foreseeable impact on persons other than the victim, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(r) (2011), distinguishing State v. Way, 88 Wn.App. 830 (1997); II.

State v. Griffin, 173 Wn.2d 467 (2012)

At a fact finding hearing to determine the existence of an aggravating factor, evidence rules apply, ER 1101(c)(3) only applies to the sentencing itself; 9-0.

State v. Rowland, 174 Wn.2d 150 (2012)

Before Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), trial judge finds an aggravating factor and imposes an exceptional sentence, on collateral review appellate court finds an error in offender score, Pers. Restraint of Rowland, 149 Wn.App. 496, 512 (2009), at resentencing court concludes Blakely is inapplicable, State v. Evans, 154 Wn.2d 438, 443-48 (2005), changes offender score, re-imposes exceptional sentence; held: because no new exceptional sentence was imposed, judge was authorized to reimpose sentence without a jury finding; 9-0.

State v. Siers, 174 Wn.2d 269 (2012)

An aggravating factor need not be charged in the information, overruling State v. Powell, 167 Wn.2d 672 (2009), reversing State v. Siers, 158 Wn.App. 656 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Guzman Nuñez, 174 Wn.2d 707 (2012)

Jury must be unanimous to find that state did not prove aggravating factors, overruling State v. Bashaw, 169 Wn.2d 133 (2010), State v. Goldberg, 149 Wn.2d 888, 894 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Cham, 165 Wn.App. 438, 449-50 (2011), rev. granted, 175 Wn.2d 1022 (2012)

Rapid recidivism, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(t) (2011), does not require a finding of a pattern of prior similar offenses showing heightened culpability and a greater disregard and disdain for the law, State v. Williams, 159 Wn.App. 298, 314 (2011), reoffending an hour after release from jail is sufficient, see: State v. Murray, 190 Wn.2d 727 (2018); 2-1, II.

State v. Zigan, 166 Wn.App. 597 (2012)

Evidence in vehicular homicide case that defendant smiled, laughed and joked about hitting a motorcyclist with a car establishes egregious lack of remorse, State v. Erickson, 108 Wn.App. 732, 739-40 (2001), State v. Wood, 57 Wn.App. 792, 795 (1990); vehicular homicide two months after release on an unrelated crime is sufficient to establish rapid recidivism, State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576 (2007); III.

State v. Duncalf, 177 Wn.2d 289 (2013)

For the same incident defendant is charged with assault 1° (great bodily harm) and alternatively assault 2° (substantial bodily harm) and, with respect to the latter, an aggravating factor that the injury substantially exceeded the level of bodily harm necessary to satisfy substantial bodily harm, defense does not ask for a definition of "substantially exceed," jury acquits of assault 1°, convicts of assault 2° and finds the aggravator; held: while the "substantially exceeds" aggravator cannot apply to assault 1°, State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117 (2010), these verdicts can be reconciled because the mens rea elements differ (assault 1°: intent to inflict great bodily harm; assault 2°: the assault itself must be intended but not the resulting bodily harm); failure to define "substantially exceed" is "merely definitional," State v. Gordon, 172 Wn.2d 671, 677-80 (2011) and not an element and thus cannot be challenged for the first time on appeal, but see: Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013); affirms State v. Duncalf, 164 Wn.App. 900 (2011); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Finstad, 177 Wn.2d 501 (2013)

Trial court imposes consecutive sentence without finding aggravating factor, three years later defendant files PRP seeking concurrent sentences; held: while the court had the authority to impose consecutive sentence without a jury finding of an aggravating factor, State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754, 762 (2010), thus the judgment and sentence here is not valid on its face, a procedural violation as occurred here does not establish prejudice, State v. Chambers, 176 Wn.2d 573 (2013), thus PRP is dismissed; 6-3.

State v. Parmelee, 172 Wn.App. 899 (2013)

Judge, not a jury, may find facts and impose exceptional consecutive sentences, State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754, 762-63 (2010); I.

State v. Moreno, 173 Wn.App. 479, 494-97 (2013)

In assault 1° case, evidence showing that defendant had ties to gang, defendant is in rival gang territory, police expert testifies that the two gangs are uniquely territorial, acts of violence in opposing gang territory improves status in gang, defendant called out gang name just before shooting is sufficient to prove gang aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(s) (2011), State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App, 512, 534-36 (2015) , aff'd, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 244 (2017), but see: State v. Bluehorse, 159 Wn.App. 410 (2011), State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171, 196 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016); 2-1, III.

State v. Douglas, 173 Wn.App. 849 (2013)

Defendant is charged with crimes with an aggravating factor, is convicted, at sentencing receives a 61- month standard range sentence (opinion is unclear as to whether jury found the aggravator), conviction is reversed, state adds more aggravators, jury convicts and finds that the aggravators were proved, court imposes 480 month exceptional sentence; held: RCW 9.94A.537(2) (2007), which permits a jury to be impanelled to consider aggravating factors after a reversal due to Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), does not bar the state from seeking an exceptional sentence in a case that has been remanded even if an exceptional sentence was requested but not imposed following the previous trial; II.

State v. Huynh, 175 Wn.App. 896 (2013)

Major VUCSA aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(e) (2011) does not require unanimity on which statutory factor was proved; I.

State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013)

Decedent murders police officers, defendants withhold details when speaking with police which delay investigation and place families of deceased police officers in fear, defendant convicted of rendering criminal assistance and possession of stolen firearm, state alleges aggravators of destructive and foreseeable impact on persons other than the victim, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(r), and offense was committed against a law enforcement officer, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(v); held: destructive and foreseeable impact factor may apply to rendering but evidence did not support it to firearm possession; law enforcement victim aggravator is legally inapplicable to rendering as the aggravator requires that the offense be committed against a law enforcement officer; because the slain officer was dead by the time defendants' possessed the gun stolen from him, the law enforcement victim aggravator cannot apply as the victim is the owner of the firearm, State v. Haddock, 141 Wn.2d 103, 111 (2000); 2-1, II.

Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L. Ed. 2d 314 (2013)

Facts that increase the mandatory minimum sentence are therefore elements and must be submitted to the jury and found beyond a reasonable doubt, overruling Harris v. United States, 536 U.S. 545, 153 L.Ed.2d 524 (2002) and McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 477 U.S. 79, 91 L.Ed.2d 67 (1986); 5-4.

State v. Sweat, 180 Wn.2d 156 (2014)

In domestic violence case, aggravating factor of pattern of psychological, physical or sexual abuse, RCW 9.94A.535(h)(i) (2011), does not require proof that the prior incidents of abuse involved the same victim; affirms State v. Sweat, 174 Wn.App. 126 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Kinnaman, 180 Wn.2d 197 (2014)

Defendant pleads guilty to eluding a pursuing police vehicle and endangerment enhancement, RCW 9.94A.834 (2008), state's recommendation for the enhancement was 12 months, but statute, RCW 9.94A.533(11) (2013), requires 12 months and one day which court imposed, defendant moves to withdraw plea to the enhancement only; held: sentence was not in excess of statutory authority, defendant did not move to withdraw plea to the crime, rather only to the enhancement, a plea agreement may be divisible if there are multiple counts, State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 519 (2006), a plea to one crime is not divisible; per curiam.

State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 382-85 (2015)

Aggravating sentencing factor that victim was a police officer, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(v) (2008), applies to an accomplice if the jury finds the required elements based on the accomplices own misconduct, State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111, 117 (1982), State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654, 658 (1984); reverses, in part, State v. Allen, 178 Wn.App. 893 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 556-60 (2015)

Instruction regarding domestic violence aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(h)(i) (2008), that states that a "prolonged period of time means more than a few weeks" is a comment on the evidence, distinguishing State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 203 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Trebilcock, 184 Wn.App. 619 (2014)

Ongoing pattern of abuse and abuse of trust may apply to criminal mistreatment 1°, RCW 9A.42.020 (2006), and domestic violence crimes; II.

State v. Friedlund, 182 Wn.2d 388 (2015)

Written findings are mandatory when an exceptional sentence is imposed; 9-0.

State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015)

While an accomplice may have his sentence enhanced as a major economic offense, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(d)(i), -(ii) (2010), jury must return a special verdict finding that accomplice had knowledge that the offense would have multiple victims or multiple incidents per victim or that it involved a high degree of sophistication or planning or would occur over a lengthy period of time, State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111, 119 (1982), State v. Piñeda-Piñeda, 154 Wn.App. 653 (2010); affirms State v. Hayes, 177 Wn.App. 801 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913, 927-31 (2015)

Deliberate cruelty aggravating factor applies to two co-defendants where special verdict asks "[d]id the defendant's conduct…manifest deliberate cruelty to the victim?," State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 382-85 (2015); ongoing pattern of abuse aggravating factor could not apply to co-defendants where special verdict asks "[w]as the crime part of an ongoing pattern…of…abuse," as jury did not specifically find that either co-defendant engaged in an ongoing pattern of abuse or that either knew the other had done so, State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556, 564-65 (2015); II.

State v. Manlove, 186 Wn.App. 433 (2015)

Deliberate cruelty can apply to a property crime, here burglary, where the cruelty is directed to the victim, not the property; III.

Pers. Restraint of Crow, 187 Wn.App. 414, 421-25 (2015)

Good Samaritan aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(w), applies to bystanders who are harmed while providing immediate aid to someone in peril, not to someone who reported an assault a week earlier and was subject to retaliation; II.

State v. Dyson, 189 Wn.App. 215 (2015)

Defendant is convicted of assault 1°, sentencing judge finds defendant's conduct qualified for mandatory five-year minimum because force could likely have resulted in death,

RCW 9.94A.540 (2014); held: fact-finding triggering a mandatory minimum must be submitted to the jury, Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013), but see: State v. McChristian, 158 Wn.App. 392 (2010); 2-1, III.

State v. Gipson, 191 Wn.App. 780 (2015)

Public official aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(x) (2013), does not include a law enforcement officer as an element of assault 3° as charged, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(g) (2013), is that victim is a police officer; II.

State v. Weller, 197 Wn.App. 731 (2017)

With consecutive exceptional sentences court may impose no contact orders for the maximum of each crime consecutively; II.

State v. Murray, 190 Wn.2d 727 (2018)

Sexual motivation aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(f), can enhance a conviction of indecent exposure, RCW 9A.88.010 (2003), State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630, 636 (1999), as indecent exposure lacks an inherent sexual motive; rapid recidivism aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(t) (2003), is not void for vagueness as applied here as a person of reasonable understanding would not have to guess that reoffending 16 days after being incarcerated is within a "short time," see: State v. Cham, 165 Wn. App. 438, 450 (2011), State v. Butler, 75 Wn.App. 47, 54 (1994), State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576, 584–85 (2007), State v. Combs, 156 Wn.App. 502, 505 (2010); 7-2.

State v. Shelley, 3 Wn.App.2d 196 (2018)

Defendant lives with girlfriend and her minor son, assaults girlfriend's son, is convicted of assault with domestic violence enhancement; held: for purposes of sentence enhancement RCW 9.94A.525(21) (2013) limits domestic violence as defined in RCW 9.94A.030(20) (2015) which includes children in common or children 16 years or older residing in the same household, RCW 9.94A.030(3) (2004); while victim's age here is not disclosed in opinion, by context it is less than 16 and thus domestic violence aggravator was improper; I.

State v. Brush, 5 Wn.App.2d 40 (2018)

Domestic violence/ongoing pattern of psychological abuse aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(h), is not overbroad; sentence aggravators are not subject to vagueness challenges, State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 461 (2003), State v. Burrus, 577 Wn.App.2d 190 (2021); seven weeks is a "prolonged period of time" for purposes of domestic violence aggravator, State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378, 391 (2010); II

State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of seven crimes, offender score is greater than nine, trial court declines to impose exceptional sentence based upon free crimes aggravator, following appeal four counts are dismissed, at resentencing offender score remains above nine, state recommends exceptional sentence which trial court imposes, albeit less than original sentence; held: collateral estoppel does not bar the exceptional sentence, State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992), State v. Harrison, 148 Wn.2d 550, 561 (2003), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350, 361 (2003); judicial and prosecutorial vindictiveness, North Carolina v. Pearce, 395 U.S. 711, 723, 89 S.Ct. 2072, 23 L.Ed.2d 656 (1969), is inapplicable as new sentence was less than first one, State v. Larson, 56 Wn.App. 323 (1989), see: State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); 8-1.

State v. Smith, 7 Wn.App.2d 304 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of two non-violent offenses, offender score is 21, court imposes exceptional sentence based upon free crimes aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(2)(c) (2016); held: an exceptional sentence based upon free crimes aggravator is permitted even where "only one conviction would go unpunished;" III.

State v. Butterfield, 10 Wn.App.2d 399 (2019)

Charging document alleges a statutory aggravating factor but omits language in statute that the offense involved domestic violence, court instructs jury per the charging document, also omitting domestic violence language, imposes exceptional sentence; held: because the jury did not find all of the elements of the aggravating factor sentence is reversed, cannot be harmless error, State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.2d 889, 902 (2010); II.

State v. Marjama, 14 Wn.App.2d 803 (2020)

Aggravator of domestic violence in the presence of minor children, RCW 9.94A.535(h)(2) (2019), applies if only one child is present; II.

State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021)

When deliberate cruelty is submitted to a jury the state need not provide comparative evidence of typical attempted first degree murders, distinguishing State v. Suleiman, 158 Wn.2d 280 (2006); "deliberate cruelty" is not vague; I.

State v. Fletcher, 20 Wn.App.2d 476 (2021)

In vehicular homicide case where victim-passengers were drinking with the defendant-driver court imposes exceptional sentence for aggravating factor of severity of injuries, defense does not request exceptional sentence for mitigating factor of "willing participants;" held: sentencing court need not balance mitigating factors against aggravating factors, State v. Davis, 47 Wn.App. 91 (1987), nor need it consider mitigating factors when imposing an exceptional sentence upwards; II.

SENTENCING REFORM ACT
Mitigating Factors -Exceptional Sentences

State v. Pascal, 108 Wn.2d 125 (1987)

Permitting state to appeal sentence below presumptive range does not violate double jeopardy (9-0); 30 days for manslaughter 1° affirmed as there were substantial and compelling reasons relating to particular circumstances of defendant's crime; 7-2.

State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.2d 491 (1987)

Trial court may consider the absence of any criminal record, including misdemeanors, as evidence of a lack of predisposition as a mitigating factor, RCW 9.94A.390, State v. Baucham, 76 Wn.App. 749, 752-3 (1995), but see: State v. Freitag, 127 Wn.2d 141 (1995), State v. Ha'mim, 132 Wn.2d 834 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015), cf.: State v. Powers, 78 Wn.App. 264 (1995); cooperation of the defendant is a mitigating factor, see: State v. Garcia, 162 Wn.App. 678 (2011); holding the bag in a robbery is not a secondary role, State v. Calvert, 79 Wn.App. 569, 579-80 (1995); reverses State v. Nelson, 43 Wn.App. 871 (1986); see also: State v. Moore, 73 Wn.App. 789, 798-800 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Ward, 49 Wn.App. 427 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707 (1993)

Alcoholism is not a mitigating factor; I.

State v. Pennington, 112 Wn.2d 606 (1989)

Drug addiction is not grounds for exceptional sentence to effectuate treatment, State v. Gaines, 122 Wn.2d 502 (1993), State v. Estrella, 115 Wn.2d 350 (1990), State v. Harper, 62 Wn.App. 69 (1991), State v. Laik, 62 Wn.App. 734 (1991), State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993); see: State v. Allert, 58 Wn.App. 200 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Estrella, 115 Wn.2d 350 (1990)

Trial court's "finding" that defendant should be afforded an opportunity at gradual release and reintegration into society is a legal conclusion that should not be considered in support of exceptional sentence; I.

State v. Allert, 117 Wn.2d 156 (1991)

Trial court finds that combined effects of alcoholism, depression and compulsive personality impaired defendant's capacity to appreciate wrongfulness of conduct, imposed exceptional sentence below standard range; held: because voluntary use of alcohol is an improper factor to consider, State v. Pennington, 112 Wn.2d 606 (1989), and the record here does not bear out that absent alcohol abuse defendant would have been impaired, exceptional sentence was improper, reversing State v. Allert, 58 Wn.App. 200 (1990); accord: State v. Hutsell, 120 Wn.2d 913 (1993); fact that defendant is not a threat to the public does not support an exceptional sentence; 6-3.

State v. Grewe, 117 Wn.2d 211 (1991)

Abuse of trust is an aggravating factor for indecent liberties of a person less than 14 years old, RCW 9A.44.100(1)(b), reversing State v. Grewe, 59 Wn.App. 141 (1990); accord: State v. Soderquist, 63 Wn.App. 144 (1991); see: State v. Marcum, 61 Wn.App. 611 (1991); where defendant knew eight-year old victim for four months, victim frequently visited defendant's home where she played, there is sufficient evidence to establish abuse of trust, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 427 (1987)(duration and degree of relationship are factors), State v. Jackmon, 55 Wn.App. 562 (1989), State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967, 978-81 (1999), State v. Jennings, 106 Wn.App. 532, 547-50 (2001), see also: State v. Hammond, 65 Wn.App. 585 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Dyer, 61 Wn.App. 685 (1991)

Defendant gives drugs to 11-year old who dies; defendant pleads guilty to controlled substances homicide, RCW 69.50.415(a), court finds aggravating factors of vulnerability and abuse of trust, imposes exceptional sentence equal to maximum sentence; held: where court properly finds aggravating factors, then standard of review of length of exceptional sentence is abuse of discretion, State v. Oxborrow, 106 Wn.2d 525, 530 (1986), State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107 (1989), aff'd on other grounds, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990); here, facts establish "worst case scenario in which circumstances of the crime distinguish it from other crimes of the same statutory category"; 2-1, III.

State v. Cuevas-Diaz, 61 Wn.App. 902 (1991)

Impact of offense on victim and community is not grounds for an exceptional sentence, as both are foreseeable and exist in any case, but see: State v. Tuitoelau, 64 Wn.App. 65 (1992), State v. Johnson, 69 Wn.App. 528 (1993), aff'd, 124 Wn.2d 73-6 (1994), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 273-76 (2003), cf.: State v. Way, 88 Wn.App. 830 (1997); severe traumatization of minor children who witnessed assault against mother is grounds for exceptional sentence where impact on other persons is of destructive nature not normally associated with offense in question and is foreseeable to defendant; committing assault in private residence results in foreseeable trauma to children, State v. Barnes, 58 Wn.App. 465, 475 (1990), rev'd, in part, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), State v. Crutchfield, 53 Wn.App. 916 (1989), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Chadderton, 119 Wn.2d 390, 396 (1992), see also: State v. Mulligan, 87 Wn.App. 261 (1997), cf.: State v. Webb, 162 Wn.App. 195, 205-08 (2011); II.

State v. Hicks, 61 Wn.App. 923 (1991)

Defendant pleads guilty to burglary 1° and rape 1°; beating and threatening victims is deliberate cruelty beyond the assault element of burglary 1°, State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987); rape in victim's bedroom invades zone of privacy for purposes of rape sentence, State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), but not for burglary, State v. Post, 59 Wn.App. 389 (1990); rendering sleeping victim incapable of resisting by pushing pillow on her face, then raping her, establishes exceptional vulnerability; running exceptional sentences consecutively for multiple rapes is permissible, RCW 9.94A.390, -.400(1)(b); III.

State v. Wiley, 63 Wn.App. 480 (1991)

Failure of state to object to exceptional sentence precludes appellate review absent sentence in excess of jurisdiction, cf.: State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993), State v. Hortman, 76 Wn.App. 454, 459 (1994); I.

State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992)

Upon remand, trial court may impose exceptional sentence even though one was not imposed at the prior sentencing, State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), see: State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773 (1992), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003), State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106 (2004), but see: State v. Ameline, 118 Wn.App. 128 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Hale, 65 Wn.App. 752 (1992)

Attempted murder 1° does not carry a mandatory minimum sentence precluding consideration of mitigating circumstances; where consecutive sentences are "standard," more than one mitigating factor may include shortening sentence and concurrent sentences, State v. Oxborrow, 106 Wn.2d 525 (1986); III.

State v. Hutsell, 120 Wn.2d 913 (1993)

Drug addiction or intoxication at time of offense is not mitigating factor absent proof it was induced by fraud or force, State v. Allert, 117 Wn.2d 159 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Sanchez, 69 Wn.App. 255 (1993)

Defendant sells 1/16 oz. cocaine over nine days to same informant, court sentences below sentence range; held: where multiple offense policy, RCW 9.94A.400, results in standard range that is "clearly excessive" because the difference between the offenses is nonexistent, trivial or trifling, court may grant exceptional sentence downward, RCW 9.94A.390(1)(g), State v. Hortman, 76 Wn.App. 454 (1994), State v. Calvert, 79 Wn.App. 569, 581-3 (1995), State v. Fitch, 78 Wn.App. 546 (1995), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017), State v. Meza , 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022), see: State v. Batista, 116 Wn.2d 777 (1991), State v. Bridges, 104 Wn.App. 98 (2001), State v. McGill, 112 Wn.App. 95 (2002), cf.: State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327, 341-48 (2003), State v. McKee, 141 Wn.App. 22, 33 (2007), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 115 Wn.2d 294 (1990); learning disability or education level is not a mitigating factor where it does not impair capacity to conform conduct to law, State v. Rogers, 112 Wn.2d 180, 185 (1989), State v. Altum, 47 Wn.App. 495, 505-6 (1987); II.

State v. Hodges, 70 Wn.App. 621 (1993)

In drug delivery case, community support, efforts at self-improvement, criminal behavior "to put food on the table," irreparable harm to relationship with defendant's children are not mitigating factors, State v. Pascal, 108 Wn.2d 125, 137-8 (1987), State v. Alexander, 70 Wn.App. 608 (1993), State v. Fowler, 145 Wn.2d 400, 411 (2002), State v. Laws, 154 Wn.2d 85 (2005), but see: State v. Peluso, 22 Wn.App.2d 282 (2022); I.

State v. Gaines, 122 Wn.2d 502 (1993)

Drug addiction and its causal role in an addict's offense is not justification for a durational departure from standard range, State v. Allert, 117 Wn.2d 156, 163 (1991), State v. Hutsell, 120 Wn.2d 913 (1993), State v. Amo, 76 Wn.App. 129, 133-4 (1994), distinguishing State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527 (1987), overruled in part, State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83

(1989); trial court can require in-patient drug treatment as a condition of an exceptional sentence where the exceptional sentence is for one year or less, overruling, in part, State v. Harper, 62 Wn.App. 69 (1991); reverses State v. Gaines, 65 Wn.App. 790 (1992); 5-3.

State v. Moore, 73 Wn.App. 789, 798-800 (1994)

Minimal involvement by an accomplice is a mitigating factor, at least where it is "significantly out of the ordinary for the crime," State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.2d 491, 501 (1987), cf.: State v. Evans, 80 Wn.App. 806 (1996); here, multiple offense policy resulted in a presumptive sentence that was clearly excessive in light of defendant's minimal involvement, RCW 9.94A.390(1)(g), State v. Nelson, supra, at 502, State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017); II.

State v. Amo, 76 Wn.App. 129, 133-4 (1994)

Having a young child is not a mitigating factor, but see: State v. Peluso, 22 Wn.App.2d 282 (2022); III.

State v. Alexander, 125 Wn.2d 717 (1995)

Delivery of an extraordinarily small amount of cocaine and defendant's low level of involvement or sophistication in executing the crime are mitigating factors, reversing State v. Alexander, 70 Wn.App. 608 (1993), see: State v. Thomason, 199 Wn.2d 780 (2022), cf.: State v. Evans, 80 Wn.App. 806 (1996), State v. Garcia, 162 Wn.App. 678 (2011); defendant's peripheral participation in the drug hierarchy is not a basis for a downward departure; 7-2.

State v. Powers, 78 Wn.App. 264 (1995)

Lack of record, including misdemeanors, does not, by itself, constitute a mitigating factor, rather it may be evidence of a lack of predisposition to commit crime, State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.2d 491, 497-8 (1987); trial court may not deviate from guidelines merely because it believes the standard range is excessively low or high, but see: State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600, 613-15 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); where defendant pleads guilty, remand may be appropriate to determine defendant's role in crime regarding predisposition; III.

State v. Clemens, 78 Wn.App. 458 (1995)

In rape of a child 3° case, victim's willing participation is a valid mitigating factor, RCW 9.94A.390(1)(a); 2-1, II.

State v. Fitch, 78 Wn.App. 546 (1995)

Defendant sells two grams marijuana to undercover officer, later that day defendant sells one gram cocaine, four days later defendant sells a bud of marijuana and a gram of cocaine, is convicted of two counts of delivery of marijuana, two counts delivery of cocaine, trial court sentences below standard range, finding it "clearly excessive," RCW 9.94A.390(1)(g); held: 1989 amendments to RCW 9.94A.320, et al., do not conflict with State v. Sanchez, 69 Wn.App. 255 (1993), trial court's determination that multiple offenses policy results in a clearly excessive sentence range authorizes an exceptional sentence; III.

State v. Calvert, 79 Wn.App. 569 (1995)

One who deposits checks knowing they were forged and uses the proceeds does not establish a secondary role significantly out of the ordinary for the crime in question, thus does not qualify as a mitigating factor, at 579-80, State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.2d 491, 501 (1987); mere fact that forgery victims were family members is not a mitigating factor, at 580; nonviolent prior offenses is not a mitigating factor; several forgeries over several days that results in a multiple offense policy resulting in a clearly excessive sentence range authorizes exceptional sentence, at 581-83, State v. Sanchez, 69 Wn.App. 255, 262 (1993), State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327, 341-48 (2003), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017); III.

State v. Medrano, 80 Wn.App. 108, 112 (1995)

Good behavior after offense is not a valid mitigating factor, State v. Hodges, 70 Wn.App. 621, 625-6 (1993); III.

State v. Freitag, 127 Wn.2d 141, 144 (1995)

Lack of prior record is not a mitigating factor, State v. Ha'mim, 132 Wn.2d 834 (1997), overruled,on other grounds, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015), State v. Rogers, 112 Wash.2d 180, 183 (1989), State v. Pascal, 108 Wash.2d 125, 137 (1987), State v. Fowler, 145 Wn.2d 400, 406-07 (2002), cf.: State v. Garcia, 162 Wn.App. 678 (2011), reversing State v. Freitag, 74 Wn.App. 133, 138-46 (1994); 6-3.

State v. Evans, 80 Wn.App. 806 (1996)

In drug delivery cases, motive to obtain drugs for personal use as opposed to making money is not a mitigating factor, distinguishing State v. Alexander, 125 Wn.2d 717 (1995), see: State v. Thomason, 199 Wn.2d 780 (2022); facilitating a drug transaction by making contact with buyer and setting up the deal is not minimal involvement, distinguishing State v. Moore, 73 Wn.App. 789, 798-800 (1994); acting as "middle man" by actually obtaining drugs from a third party and delivering them to police is not minor involvement justifying exceptional sentence; "go-between" is not a minor participant.

State v. Hinds, 85 Wn.App. 474 (1997)

In vehicular homicide case, where deceased provided defendant-minor with alcohol and permitted him to drive her car, then victim was a willing participant if on remand trial court finds that there was a causal connection between defendant's reckless driving and victim's conduct; I.

State v. Ha'mim, 132 Wn.2d 139 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015)

Lack of prior police contacts is not a mitigating factor, State v. Freitag, 127 Wn.2d 141, 144 (1995), cf.: State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.2d 491 (1987), State v. Garcia, 162 Wn.App. 678 (2011); lack of predisposition alone is not a mitigating factor absent inducement, State v. Freitag, supra., see: State v. Jeannotte, 133 Wn.2d 847 (1997); affirms State v. Ha'mim, 82 Wn.App. 139 (1996), see: State v. Law, 154 Wn.2d 85 (2005), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017); 6-3.

State v. Fuller, 89 Wn.App. 136 (1997)

Home detention is not permitted for assault 3°, RCW 9.94A.185, nor for a deadly weapon enhancement, RCW 9.94A.310(4)(e), even as an exceptional sentence; III.

State v. Brown, 139 Wn.2d 20, 25-29 (1999)

Deadly weapon enhancement, RCW 9.94A.310(4), is mandatory, not subject to an exceptional sentence downward, State v. Flett, 98 Wn.App. 799, 805-08 (2000), State v. Mandefero, 14 Wn.App.2d 825 (2020), but see: State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 24-25, (2017); 5-4.

State v. Schmeck, 98 Wn.App. 647 (1999)

Once trial court finds grounds for exceptional sentence, it may impose treatment conditions which are related to the crime, State v. Guerin, 63 Wn.App. 117, 120 (1991); here, because court did not find that offense was related to substance abuse, it was improper to impose drug treatment, finding that defendant had unresolved anger towards victim justifies anger management program; III.

State v. Flett, 98 Wn.App. 799, 807-08 (2000)

Failed defense of lawful use of force is a mitigating factor, State v. Jeannotte, 133 Wn.2d 847, 851 (1997); III.

State v. Whitfield, 99 Wn.App. 331 (1999)

Assault victim's verbal provocation is a mitigating factor, distinguishing State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904, 911 (1999); where victim provokes an assault "to a significant degree, RCW 9.94A.390(1)(a), then trial court need not find that defendant's assault was proportional to the victim's provocation to impose an exceptional sentence; I.

State v. McClarney, 107 Wn.App. 256 (2001)

Extreme remorse is not a mitigating factor, cf.: State v. Wood, 57 Wn.App. 792 (1990); I.

State v. Fowler, 145 Wn.2d 400 (2002)

Defendant's behavior during crime as aberrational and isolated is not a mitigating factor, at 407-09; low risk to reoffend is not a mitigating factor, State v. Estrella, 115 Wn.2d 350, 356 (1990), State v. Pascal, 108 Wn.2d 125, 137 (1987), at 409, cf.: State v. Garcia, 162 Wn.App. 678 (2011); sleep deprivation caused by drugs and alcohol is not a mitigating factor, RCW 9.94A.390(1)(e); strong family support is not a mitigating factor, State v. Hodges, 70 Wn.App. 621, 626 (1993), State v. Law, 154 Wn.2d 85 (2005); 5-4.

State v. McGill, 112 Wn.App. 95 (2002)

Trial court imposes standard range sentence, stating that it has no option, defense fails to cite to trial court a legal basis for an exceptional sentence; held: because sentencing judge was deprived of ability to make an informed decision, it did not exercise discretion, thus reversed for resentencing, cf.: State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 957-58 (2013); I.

State v. Law, 154 Wn.2d 85 (2005)

Personal factors unrelated to the crime cannot support a sentence below the standard range, State v. Freitag, 127 Wn.2d 141, 145 (1995), State v. Pascal, 108 Wn.2d 125, 137-38 (1987), State v. Ha'mim, 132 Wn.2d 834, 836-37 (1997), cf.: State v. Garcia, 162 Wn.App. 678 (2011), but see: State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015), State v. Ronquillo, 190 Wn.App. 765 (2015), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017), State v. Peluso, 22 Wn.App.2d 282 (2022); purposes of SRA, RCW 9.94A.010, by themselves, do not support exceptional sentences; recovery from substance abuse, church activities, positive impact on others, bond with children are not mitigating factors; 6-3.

State v. Murray, 128 Wn.App. 718 (2005)

Trial court may not impose a downward departure and a drug offender sentencing alternative; III.

State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614, 636-37 (2006)

After defendant withdraws guilty plea, state adds charges resulting in a standard range more than ten times the plea range, trial court declines to impose exceptional sentence; held: while trial court had the discretion to consider a downward departure in light of defendant's criminal history and the seriousness of his offenses, RCW 9.94A.535(1)(g), 9.94A.010(1), declining to do so is not reviewable; reverses State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Stevens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 469-70 (2007)

In felon in possession of firearm case, mitigating factors including no predisposition to break the law, no concealing of the firearms, 2 of the 4 firearms were rifles defendant won as prizes at a rodeo justify exceptional sentence downward; III.

Pers. Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007)

Trial court has discretion to impose, as an exceptional sentence, concurrent terms for serious violent offenses, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(b) (2002), -.535 (2008), State v. Miller, 181 Wn.App. 201 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 111 (2016), *State v. Graham,*181 Wn.2d 878 (2014), see also: State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47 (2017), cf.: State v. Brown, 13 Wn.App.2d 288 (2020); 9-0.

State v. McKee, 141 Wn.App. 22, 32-34 (2007)

Trial court grants exceptional sentence downward for separate rapes of prostitutes; held: multiple offense policy cannot serve as a mitigating factor for two rapes committed at different times against different women, see: State v. Hortman, 76 Wn.App. 454, 463-64 (1994); fact that victims were willing to have sex for money does not mean that the victims were willing participants, thus trial court abused its discretion; I.

State v. Bunker, 144 Wn.App. 406, 421-22 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 571 (2010)

In no contact order case, victim's willingness to be in defendant's presence is grounds for a mitigated sentence; I.

State v. Davis, 146 Wn.App. 714 (2008)

Where standard range and community custody exceed maximum sentence, trial court may impose an exceptional sentence for less prison time so that there can be a maximum period of community custody, see: State v. Hudnall, 116 Wn.App. 190 (2003) but see: State v. Thibodeaux, 6 Wn.App.2d 223 (2018), RCW 9.94A.701(9) (2010); I.

State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600, 613-14 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012)

Defendant is convicted of robbery 1°, two counts of assault 1°, two counts of drive-by shooting for one incident, defendant has prior attempted robbery conviction and prior juvenile "residential robbery," trial court finds 46 year presumptive sentence is clearly excessive and that defendant was induced by others to commit the crimes and victim initiated the contact, imposes 129 month mitigated exceptional sentence; held: sentencing judge's consideration of defendant's age (21) and criminal history, substantial evidence supports exceptional sentence; 2-1, III.

State v. Statler, 160 Wn.App. 622, 639-40 (2011)

Defendant's young age (21), lack of serious injuries to victims, lengthy presumptive sentence compared to co-defendants who pleaded guilty justify mitigated exceptional sentence; 2-1, III.

State v. Garcia, 162 Wn.App. 678 (2011)

Homeless sex offender, required to report weekly, calls sheriff to report that his ride failed to show and that he would surrender to DOC at county jail for a warrant, upon arrival at jail after sheriff's office closed, jail turns him away due to time of day, is charged with failure to register as a sex offender, trial court imposes mitigated sentence based upon transportation difficulties, attempts to comply, de minimis nature of violation, state appeals; held: sentencing court may not (and did not) base the exceptional sentence on mitigating factors necessarily considered by legislature in setting the standard range; cooperation with state authorities is a valid mitigating factor, State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.2d 491, 500-01 (1987); de minimis nature of violation is not a proper mitigating factor, State v. Fowler, 108 Wn.2d 400, 405 (2002), nor are "personal characteristics" such as drug use and family support; defendant's transportation difficulties and attempt to comply are mitigating factors as neither relate to defendant's personal conditions, rather are specifically focused on the elements of the crime; crime of failure to register is intended to address location of sex offenders and availability of such information to local authorities, defendant's behavior met both of these factors, thus mitigated sentence affirmed; III.

Pers. Restraint of Green, 170 Wn.App. 328 (2012)

Defendant, while serving time on a no contact order violation calls the same victim and is charged with a new NCO violation, trial court enters exceptional sentence and runs time concurrently; held: although RCW 9.94A.589 requires that when a person under sentence of a felony commits another felony the time shall be consecutive, trial court may run time concurrently if it finds mitigating circumstances; in-custody portion of DOSA sentence was to be consecutive with his non-DOSA sentence, deemed not to be a hybrid sentence because court imposed an exceptional sentence, distinguishing State v. Grayson, 130 Wn.App. 782 (2005), State v. Smith, 142 Wn.App. 122 (2007); 2-1,

State v. Graham, 181 Wn.2d 878 (2014)

Sentencing court may impose an exceptional sentence downward and/or concurrent sentences for multiple current serious violent offenses if it finds that the presumptive sentence is clearly excessive in light of the purposes of the SRA listed in RCW 9.94A.010, Pers. Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007), State v. Ronquillo, 190 Wn.App. 765 (2015), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017), State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47 (2017), State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022), cf.: State v. Brown, 13 Wn.App.2d 288 (2020); reverses State v. Graham, 178 Wn.App. 580 (2013); 9-0.

State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015)

Youth alone can be a mitigating factor, State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129, 137-141 (2016), overruling, in part, State v. Ha'mim, 132 Wn.2d 139 (1997), State v. Ronquillo, 190 Wn.App. 765 (2015), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017); 5-4.

State v. Friedlund, 182 Wn.2d 388 (2015)

Written findings are mandatory when an exceptional sentence is imposed; 9-0.

State v. Ronquillo, 190 Wn.App. 765 (2015)

Sixteen year old is convicted of murder and other violent crimes, receives consecutive sentences, sentencing judge believes he lacks discretion to impose mitigated sentences; held: diminished culpability of youth may serve as a mitigating factor, Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 183 L.Ed.2d 407 (2012), State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 688-99 (2015), Montgomery v. Louisiana, 577 U.S. 190, 136 S.Ct. 718, 193 L.Ed.2d 599 (2016), State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021), see: State v. Ramos, 187 Wn.2d 420 (2017), State v. Scott, 190 Wn.2d 586 (2018); court can find that consecutive sentences for serious violent offenses is clearly excessive, State v. Graham, 181 Wn.2d 878 (2014), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017); I.

State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017)

For an auto-declined juvenile sentencing court must take into account observations that generally show a reduced sense of responsibility, increased impetuousness, increased susceptibility to outside pressures including peer pressure and a great claim to forgiveness and time of amendment of live, Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 183 L.Ed.2d 407 (2012), Graham v. Florida, 560 U.S. 48 (2010), Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 161 L.Ed.2d 1 (2005), State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680 (2015), see: State v. Ramos, 187 Wn.2d 420 (2017), State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021); II.

State v. Ramos, 187 Wn.2d 420 (2017)

Auto-declined homicide defendant who was sentenced to a de facto standard range life without parole term is entitled to an individualized hearing and for the court to "take into account how children are different, and how those differences counsel against irrevocably sentencing them to a lifetime in prison," Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 183 L.Ed.2d 407 (2012), the record here establishes that resentencing court adequately applied Miller, supra., in affirming 85-year sentence, cf.: State v. Delbosque, 195 Wn.2d 106 (2020), State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021); Court declines to apply state constitutional analysis; 9-0.

State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1 (2017)

" Because "children are different" under the Eighth Amendment and hence "criminal procedure laws" must take the defendants' youthfulness into account, sentencing courts must have absolute discretion to depart as far as they want below otherwise applicable SRA ranges and/or sentencing enhancements when sentencing juveniles in adult court, regardless of how the juvenile got there," see also: State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021); reverses State v. Houston-Sconiers, 191 Wn.App. 436 (2015); 8-0.

State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47 (2017)

Defendant is convicted of burglary, ten counts of theft of a firearm and three counts of unlawful possession of a firearm, is sentenced to standard range sentences concurrent to the burglary but the firearm convictions consecutive to each other, defendant claims on appeal that court failed to recognize its power to impose concurrent mitigated sentences; held: pursuant to Pers. Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007), State v. Graham, 181 Wn.2d 878 (2014), trial court had discretion to impose mitigated concurrent sentences, regardless of language in RCW 9.412.040(6) that firearm sentences shall run consecutively "notwithstanding any other law," cf.: State v. Miller, 185 Wn.2d 111 (2016), State v. Brown, 13 Wn.App.2d 288 (2020), State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022), if the court finds that the presumptive sentence is clearly excessive; 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Light-Roth, 191 Wn.2d 328 (2018)

While youth is a mitigating factor, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680 (2015), it is not a new mitigating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(1)(e) (2016), and thus an untimely PRP is time-barred, Matter of Meippen, 193 Wn.2d 310 (2019), see also: Matter of Young, 21 Wn.App.2d 826; reverses Pers. Restraint of Light-Roth, 200 Wn.App. 149 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Alltus, 10 Wn.App.2d 193 (2019)

Trial court's refusal to order a presentence report and permit time for defense to present mitigation evidence related to youth of defendant who committed murder at age 16 is abuse of discretion; III.

State v. Brown, 13 Wn.App.2d 288 (2020)

Sentencing court does not have the authority to impose, as an exceptional sentence, concurrent firearm enhancements, RCW 9.94A.533(3)(e) (2018), for an adult, State v. Brown, 120 Wn.2d 20, 29 (1999) distinguishing Pers Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007), State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1 (2017), see: State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021); I.

State v. Mandefero, 14 Wn.App.2d 825 (2020)

While court may have discretion to impose mitigated sentence based upon youth even if defendant is over 18 at the time of the crime, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680 (2015), State v. Nevarez, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 252 (2022), and thus can impose an exceptional sentence for a firearms related offense, it may not impose an exceptional sentence for firearm enhancements, RCW 9.94A.533(3)(e) (2019), State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47, 55 (2017), State v. Brown, 139 Wn.2d 20, 25-29 (1999), but see: State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1, 24-25 (2017); I.

State v. Rogers, 17 Wn.App.2d 466 (2021)

Juvenile is sentenced to 106 months for murder 1°, state appeals; held: while judges possess broad discretion when sentencing juveniles convicted in adult court, State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1, 8 (2017), appellate review is needed to prevent arbitrary sentencing decisions regardless of Supreme Court's use of phrase "absolute discretion;" Division I will apply standard of review that pre-dates SRA: abuse of discretion exists only where it can be said that no reasonable judge would have taken the view adopted by the trial court, see: State v. Hall, 35 Wn.App. 302 (1983); when sentencing judge determines that youth is a mitigating factor court must explain reasons and they must be rationally related to evidence adduced at trial or sentencing.

State v. Fletcher, 20 Wn.App.2d 476 (2021)

In vehicular homicide case where victim-passengers were drinking with the defendant-driver court imposes exceptional sentence for aggravating factor of severity of injuries, defense does not request exceptional sentence for mitigating factor of "willing participants;" held: sentencing court need not balance mitigating factors against aggravating factors, State v. Davis, 47 Wn.App. 91 (1987), nor need it consider mitigating factors when imposing an exceptional sentence upwards; II.

State v. Thomason, 199 Wn.2d 780 (2022)

Defendant steals food, punches security guard, is convicted of robbery 2°, trial court finds that crime is de minimis but lacks discretion to impose sentence below standard range; held: de minimis nature of a crime can be a mitigating factor, State v. Alexander, 125 Wn.2d 717 (1995), but where legislature considered the de minimis nature of the crime then it cannot support an exceptional sentence; here, legislature did consider a defendant's de minimis use of force when it defined robbery 2° by stating that "the degree of force is immaterial," RCW 9A.56.190; 9-0.

State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022)

Sentencing judge states that he does not have the authority to impose an exceptional sentence but if he did he wouldn't; defendant was 21 years old at the time of the murders; held: the court has authority to impose concurrent sentences for serious violent offenses, State v. Graham, 181 Wn.2d 878 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007), State v. Ronquillo, 190 Wn.App. 765 (2015), State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017), State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47 (2017), thus judge erred but because he made it clear that he wouldn't, not reversible error; while the 50 year sentence is confinement without the possibility of parole, State v. Haag, 198 Wn.2d 309, 327 (2021), there is no bright line rule of age, State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305, 326 (2021), trial judge has discretion to apply youthfulness principles on a case by case basis, State v. Nevarez, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 252 (2022), but here trial judge did consider youthfulness and declined to impose an exceptional sentence; I.

State v. Nevarez, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 252 (2022)

Where defendant is 18 years old at time of murder trial court is permitted but not required to consider the mitigating qualities of youth; 2-1, II.

Matter of Forcha-Williams, ___ Wn.2d ___, 520 P.3d 939 (2022)

State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wash.2d 1, 8 (2017) "does not give judges the discretion to impose a determinate sentence where the legislature has mandated an indeterminate sentence. Rather, Houston-Sconiers gives judges the discretion to impose an indeterminate sentence with a minimum term below the minimum term set by the legislature when required by the mitigating qualities of the offender's youth;" while Houston-Sconiers, supra, is a significant and material change in the law, defendant must still show by a preponderance that he would have received a lower sentence, thus PRP here is untimely, Matter of Meippen, 193 Wn.2d 310 (2019), Matter of Williams, ___ Wn.2d ___, 520 P.3d 533 (2022); reverses Pers. Restraint of Forcha-Williams, 18 Wn.App.2d 167 (2021); 5-4.

SENTENCING REFORM ACT
Procedure

State v. Harris, 41 Wn.App. 561 (1985)

Defendant, at time of guilty plea, is informed that sentence range is 43-56 months; at sentencing court re-calculates and determines sentence range is 54-72 months, and sentences defendant to 72 months; held: absent exceptional circumstances, former RCW 9.94A.210 [recodified as 9.94A.585], defendant is entitled to standard range which he was informed would be applied when he pled guilty or he must be permitted to withdraw his plea; but see: State v. Miller, 48 Wn.App. 625, 629 (1987) ; III.

State v. Hartley, 41 Wn.App. 669 (1985)

Multiple prior convictions shall count as one offense only if their sentences are judicially ordered to run concurrently, former RCW 9.94A.360(11) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)]; accord: State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987), State v. Hartley, 51 Wn.App. 442 (1988), cf.: State v. Roberts, 117 Wn.2d 576 (1991), State v. Lara, 66 Wn.App. 927 (1992), see: Pers. Restraint of Sietz, 124 Wn.2d 645 (1994), State v. Mehaffey, 125 Wn.App. 595, 599-601 (2005); II.

State v. Stalker, 42 Wn.App. 1 (1985)

The fact that sentence is greater than twice the standard range is not evidence that the sentence was clearly excessive; III.

State v. Wood, 42 Wn.App. 78 (1985)

Where defendant disputes aggravating factor, court must either hold a hearing to determine "real facts" or not consider factor, RCW 9.94A.370; remedy for failure to hold hearing may be remand for hearing rather than remand for resentencing within standard range; where court finds that victim was particularly vulnerable due to age, court may consider a prior crime as an aggravating factor, even though the prior is already factored into the standard range, if the prior crime involved a vulnerable victim; II.

State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175 (1986)

SRA, RCW 9.94A, does not violate separation of powers doctrine; RCW 9.94A.100 and 9.94A.370 do not violate defendant's privilege against self-incrimination; state need prove existence of priors by a preponderance, not beyond a reasonable doubt; state need not prove validity of prior conviction unless the judgment and sentence, on its face, is constitutionally invalid, distinguishing State v. Holsworth, 93 Wn.2d 148 (1980), see: Custis v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 517 (1994), State v. Cruz, 91 Wn.App. 389, 399-400 (1998), rev'd, on other grounds, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), State v. Phillips, 94 Wn.App. 313 (1999), Lackawanna County Dist. Attorney v. Coss, 149 L.Ed.2d 608 (2001), State v. Payne, 117 Wn.App. 99 (2003), State v. Thompson, 143 Wn.App. 861, 865-68 (2008), cf.: State v. Gimarelli, 105 Wn.App. 370, 375 n. 3 (2001); identity of names is sufficient proof, State v. Rivers, 130 Wn.App. 689, 700-01 (2005), State v. Derri, 17 Wn.App.2d 376 (2021, )which may be rebutted by defendant's declaration, under oath, that he is not the same person named in the prior conviction, State v. Binder, 106 Wn.2d 417 (1986), State v. Randle, 47 Wn.App. 232 (1987), State v. Priest, 147 Wn.App. 662, 669-700 (2008), State v. Powell, 172 Wn.App. 455, 459-62 (2012); accord: In re Williams, 111 Wn.2d 353 (1988), State v. Chavez, 65 Wn.App. 602 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Andrews, 43 Wn.App. 49 (1986)

A defendant's contention that erroneous sentencing range was applied is subject to accelerated appellate review, RAP 18.12, 18.15, distinguishing former RCW 9.94A.210(1)

[recodified as 9.94A.585]; defendant on parole for pre-SRA felony is not denied equal protection by being required to complete the prior sentence before commencing the SRA sentence; III.

State v. Harp, 43 Wn.App. 340 (1986)

Defendant pled guilty to statutory rape, alleged to have occurred during a two month period; trial court found, as aggravating factor, additional incidents, with no stipulation to incidents, RCW 9.94A.370, exceeded standard range; trial court also found defendant was not amenable to treatment and had not shown remorse: held: absent a stipulation, court may not consider uncharged criminal activity when deciding whether to impose a sentence outside standard range; counsel's general objection to remorse issue was not specific enough to preserve issue for appeal; remanded for trial court to sentence and not consider other criminal activity; II.

State v. Southerland, 43 Wn.App. 246 (1986)

Where defendant contends that his sentence was outside the standard range, accelerated review is appropriate, even if the trial court found that the sentence was within the standard range; where the value of property actually stolen for an out-of-state conviction is sufficient to constitute felony theft in Washington, then the court may correctly accept the prior as a felony even if the out-of-state crime has a lesser threshold monetary amount than in Washington, see: State v. Duke, 77 Wn.App. 532 (1995); trial court may consider presentence report in prior case to determine if prior conviction should count as criminal history; where defense fails to object to the contents of a presentence report, then the information is deemed acknowledged, RCW 9.94A.370; discharge from parole is not a vacation of a conviction, RCW 9.94A.220; III.

State v. Welty, 44 Wn.App. 281 (1986)

A defendant who is simultaneously sentenced on multiple nonviolent felonies may be sentenced as a first time offender, RCW 9.94A.120(5) if he otherwise qualifies as a first time offender, RCW 9.94A.030(12); II.

State v. Huntley, 45 Wn.App. 658 (1986)

When convictions are obtained in separate proceedings, the latter sentence may be required to run consecutively, RCW 9.94A.400 [now 9.94A.589 (2002)], State v. King, 149 Wn.App. 96 (2009), but see: State v. Smith, 74 Wn.App. 844, 851-4 (1994), State v. Rasmussen, 109 Wn.App. 279 (2001), see also: State v. Elmore, 143 Wn.App. 185 (2008), see: RCW 9.94A.589 (2002); II.

State v. Swanson, 45 Wn.App. 712 (1986)

Following conviction of taking and riding a motor vehicle, court imposes exceptional sentence, finding that defendant caused unusual economic damage by destroying the vehicle; held: court may not depart from sentence range by relying on facts which constitute a separate, uncharged crime, RCW 9.94A.370; accord: State v. Tunnell, 51 Wn.App. 274 (1988), State v. Grewe, 59 Wn.App. 141, 145-46 (1990), see: State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002); II.

State v. Gunther, 45 Wn.App. 755 (1986)

State is not required to give notice prior to trial that it may seek an exceptional sentence; failure of defense to request an evidentiary hearing amounts to an admission or acknowledgement of material facts stated by the prosecutor, RCW 9.94A.370; I.

State v. Garrison, 46 Wn.App. 52 (1986)

Trial court may consider any valid conviction which exists prior to the date of sentencing in computing the offender score, see: State v. Amos, 147 Wn.App. 217 (2008), State v. Argo, 81 Wn.App. 552, 569 (1996); I.

State v. Franklin, 46 Wn.App. 84 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987)

In determining prior convictions, trial court should compare an out-of-state offense's elements and the evidence supporting the conviction to a Washington offense; the sentence imposed by the out-of-state court is not relevant; III.

State v. Bembry, 46 Wn.App. 288 (1986)

A facially valid prior guilty plea may not be attacked by defendant's testimony or other evidence; collateral relief must be sought by appellate process, and may not be litigated at sentencing on new charge, State v. Thompson, 143 Wn.App. 861, 865-68 (2008); I.

State v. Perkins, 46 Wn.App. 333 (1986)

After plea is accepted, state informs defense that due to clerical error, sentence range was miscalculated, and the correct sentence range was higher; trial court sentences defendant to lower incorrect sentence range, state appeals; held: remanded to allow defendant to withdraw plea or sentencing within correct sentence range; defendant not entitled to specific performance, State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); I.

State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388 (1986)

Defendant is convicted of one count of burglary, search immediately after arrest discloses some property stolen from residence, victim testifies at real facts hearing, RCW 9.94A.370, that she lost much property not recovered, and that defendant's family members had worked in her home, court finds major economic offense and breach of trust in imposing exceptional sentence; held: no evidence that defendant stole the additional property, no evidence that defendant obtained or used inside information, thus findings not supported by the record, see: State v. Jackson, 55 Wn.App. 562 (1989), cf.: State v. Harding, 62 Wn.App. 245 (1991); court's additional finding that because SRA at the time required that defendant's priors count as one offense as they ran concurrently, former RCW 9.94A.360(11) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)] was too lenient was improper; III.

State v. Knowles, 46 Wn.App. 426 (1986)

In vehicular homicide case, a prior DUI which was prosecuted in district court but occurred before defendant was 18 years old must be treated as a juvenile conviction; I.

State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 466 (1986)

Post-trial conduct which constitutes a new crime should not be considered by court in deciding whether or not to exceed the sentence range; I.

State v. Oxborrow, 106 Wn.2d 525 (1986)

A properly imposed exceptional sentence does not violate "clearly excessive" standard, RCW 9.94A.585, unless length of sentence is an abuse of discretion, taking into consideration aggravating circumstances, RCW 9.94A.535, State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 324-26 (2007), see: State v. Dyer, 61 Wn.App. 685 (1991); consecutive sentences may be imposed if concurrent sentences would be "clearly too lenient," RCW 9.94A.390(4)(h), and length of each sentence may exceed presumptive range, subject to review for abuse of discretion; 6-3.

State v. Sullivan, 47 Wn.App. 81 (1987)

An unloaded firearm is a deadly weapon, RCW 9.94A.125, for purposes of sentence enhancement, RCW 9.94A.310(3); II.

State v. Davis, 47 Wn.App. 91 (1987)

Trial court need not balance mitigating factors vs. aggravating factors in imposing a sentence outside the sentence range, State v. Fletcher, 20 Wn.App.2d 476 (2021); I.

State v. Taylor, 47 Wn.App. 118 (1987)

A conviction entered prior to the date of sentencing is a prior conviction regardless of when the crime occurred, former RCW 9.94A.360 [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)]; III.

State v. Olive, 47 Wn.App. 147 (1987)

While disputed facts should be subject of evidentiary hearing, RCW 9.94A.370, failure to hold a hearing is harmless where the parties are given the opportunity to present information and evidence; prior misdemeanors may be grounds to enhance sentence as long as they are not factored into the sentence range, State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 325 (1986), State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621 (1990); II.

State v. Marsh, 47 Wn.App. 219 (1987)

A judgment and sentence which does not reflect counsel or waiver of counsel may not be used to establish criminal history unless state establishes by other documents of record that defendant had or waived counsel, Burgett v. Texas, 19 L.Ed.2d 319 (1969), but see: Pers. Restraint of Williams, 111 Wn.2d 353, 368 (1988), State v. Booker, 143 Wn.App. 138, 143-47 (2008); I.

State v. Caldwell, 47 Wn.App. 317 (1987)

Deadly weapon finding may be used to enhance penalty of burglary 1°, even though being armed is element of offense, State v. Nguyen, 134 Wn.App. 863 (2006), State v. Toney, 149 Wn.App. 787, 797-98 (2009), State v. Kelley, 168 Wn.2d 72 (2010), distinguishing State v. Hansen, 46 Wn.App. 292 (1986); II.

State v. Brown, 47 Wn.App. 565 (1987)

The mere fact defendant was sentenced as "youth offender" under federal law does not make his prior crime a juvenile conviction for purposes of calculating sentence range; I.

State v. Pascal, 108 Wn.2d 125 (1987)

Permitting state to appeal sentence below presumptive range does not violate double jeopardy (9-0); 30 days for manslaughter 1° affirmed as there were substantial and compelling reasons relating to particular circumstances of defendant's crime; 7-2.

State v. McAlpin, 108 Wn.2d 458 (1987)

Failure of defense to timely challenge or request an evidentiary hearing to challenge prior record waives issue, cf.: State v. Roche, 75 Wn.App. 500, 513 n. 9 (1994); court may consider pre-age-15 juvenile convictions as aggravating factors, State v. Dunivan, 57 Wn.App. 332 (1990), State v. Smith, 58 Wn.App. 621 (1990), State v. Oksoktaruk, 70 Wn.App. 768 (1993), State v. Rawls, 114 Wn.App. 719 (2002); court may not consider arrests handled informally or crimes to which defendant confessed but was not charged; 9-0.

State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527 (1987), overruled, in part, State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83 (1989)

For defendants sentenced to confinement of one year or less, trial court may select which county facility, RCW 70.48.020, best suits defendant's situation if facility has a contract with county, RCW 70.48.210(4) and meets standards in Ch. 289 WAC; exceptional sentence may include treatment as condition of community supervision;; see: State v. Skillman, 60 Wn.App. 837 (1991), State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Holyoak, 49 Wn.App. 691 (1987)

Neither state nor court need give notice of intent to seek exceptional sentence as it is inherent in statute and defendant's statement on plea of guilty; accord, State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), see also: Irizarry v. United States, 171 L.Ed.2d 28 (2008), but see: Burns v. United States, 115 L.Ed.2d 123 (1991); III.

State v. Jones, 110 Wn.2d 74 (1988)

The fact that prior convictions had been deemed invalid in prior habitual criminal proceeding is not dispositive that they cannot be used as criminal history, distinguishing State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 186 (1986); each current conviction must be separately counted even if all current convictions will be served concurrently, State v. King, 47 Wn.App. 38 (1987), overruling, in part, State v. Taylor, 47 Wn.App. 118 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Bates, 51 Wn.App. 251 (1988)

Where a defendant is convicted of more than one crime charged in more than one information at a single proceeding, sentences must run concurrently, former RCW 9.94A.400; I.

State v. Young, 51 Wn.App. 517 (1988)

An Alford plea which incorporates the police reports and certification of probable cause for purposes of establishing a factual basis for the plea does not incorporate the facts contained in those documents for sentencing purposes where the facts are denied by the defendant, thus remanded for fact finding hearing, RCW 9.94A.370(2), State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176, 182-3 (1998), cf.: State v. Overvold, 64 Wn.App. 440, 448 n.10 (1992), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450 (2001), State v. Bell, 116 Wn.App. 678 (2003); I.

State v. Redd, 51 Wn.App. 597 (1988)

Current drug convictions count two points each as prior convictions when the current offense is also a felony drug conviction, former RCW 9.94A.360(8) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)]; I.

State v. Whitaker, 51 Wn.App. 745 (1988)

When revoking a pre-SRA probationary sentence, convictions which occurred after the original sentencing but before the revocation hearing count in offender score; I.

State v. Kenney, 52 Wn.App. 193 (1988)

In escape 2°, where legislature amended RCW 9.96A.360(15) to count all priors in criminal history, but failed to amend matrix, RCW 9.94A.330, the matrix is amended by implication as a clear indication of legislative intent, not controlled by rule of lenity; II.

State v. Rogers, 112 Wn.2d 180 (1989)

Trial court cannot grant an early release except as specifically set forth in RCW 9.94A.150; 9-0.

State v. Herzog, 112 Wn.2d 419 (1989)

When imposing sentence within the standard range, trial court may not consider a constitutionally invalid conviction, United States v. Tucker, 30 L.Ed.2d 592 (1972), see: State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707 (1993), but may consider the undenied facts underlying the invalid conviction; dicta that court may enhance through reliance upon illegally obtained evidence, mere fact of arrest, facts underlying a dismissed charge, facts underlying a charge upon which defendant is acquitted; 9-0.

State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83 (1989)

Trial court may not modify (here, reduce) a sentence that has been imposed merely because it appears that a different decision might have been preferable, State v. Murray, 118 Wn.App. 518 (2003), State v. Harkness, 145 Wn.App. 678 (2008), overruling, in part, State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527, 535 (1987); see: RCW 9.94A.150, 9.94A.260, CrR 7.8(b), CR 60(b), State v. Ibanez, 62 Wn.App. 628 (1991), State v. Brown, 108 Wn.App. 960 (2001), Postsentence Review of Wandell, 175 Wn.App. 447 (2013), cf.: State v. Dana, 59 Wn.App. 667 (1990), see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.App. 694 (2011); trial court may not suspend or defer a sentence, In re Chatman, 59 Wn.App. 258 (1990), even for one year or less; reverses State v. Shove, 51 Wn.App. 538 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Parramore, 53 Wn.App. 527 (1989)

VUCSA defendant may be required, as a condition of community supervision, to undergo urinalysis but may not be obliged to take breath alcohol tests; I.

State v. Johnson, 54 Wn.App. 489 (1989)

Defendant may be sanctioned for 60 days in jail after community supervision ends, as court has jurisdiction under SRA until all conditions are completed, distinguishing State v. Mortrud, 89 Wn.2d 720 (1978), accord: State v. Neal, 54 Wn.App. 760 (1989), State v. Beer, 93 Wn.App. 539 (1999), State v. Acrey, 135 Wn.App. 938, 945-46 (2006), State v. Gamble, 146 Wn.App. 813 (2008), cf.: State v. Ibanez, 62 Wn.App. 628 (1991), see also:State v. Badger, 64 Wn.App. 904, 909-10 (1992) ; II.

State v. Drummer, 54 Wn.App. 751 (1989)

FBI rap sheets are admissible to prove priors absent challenge to contents, see: State v. Reinhart, 77 Wn.App. 454, 456-7 (1995), State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 447-50 (2000); I.

State v. Hays, 55 Wn.App. 13 (1989)

Where trial court declines to invoke special Sexual Offender Sentencing Alternative, RCW 9.94A.120(7)(a), review on appeal is abuse of discretion, State v. J.W., 84 Wn.App. 808 (1997), see: State v. Conners, 90 Wn.App. 48, 53-4 (1998); I.

State v. Taplin, 55 Wn.App. 668 (1989)

Where sentences are concurrent, court may impose 60 days in jail for each violation of community supervision order, RCW 9.94A.200, not for each concurrent sentence; cf.: State v. Hughes, 63 Wn.App. 401 (1991), State v. Hughes, 70 Wn.App. 142 (1993); see: State v. McDougal, 120 Wn.2d 334 (1992); I.

State v. Zabroski, 56 Wn.App. 263 (1989)

Defendant is sentenced to confinement converted to community service plus 12 months community supervision; after expiration of one year, sentence is modified for failure to complete community service; held: court retains jurisdiction over defendant until it affirmatively discharges him, whether sentenced to prison, jail or community supervision, State v. Neal, 54 Wn.App. 760 (1989), State v. Gamble, 146 Wn.App. 813 (2008), but see: State v. Bigsby, 189 Wn.2d 210 (2017); I.

State v. Goss, 56 Wn.App. 541 (1990)

Under Special Sexual Offender Sentencing Alternative (SSOSA), RCW 9.94A.505, court cannot run terms concurrently and conditions consecutively; exceptional sentences are not permitted for SSOSA; I.

State v. Franklin, 56 Wn.App. 915 (1990)

Where defendant is sentenced within standard range, appeals, achieves remand for resentencing, and is then sentenced to same sentence but outside standard range, no presumption of vindictiveness is raised, as sentence was not increased, Wasman v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 424 (1984); III.

State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990)

State offers autopsy report for consideration at sentencing, defendant objects whereupon state calls medical examiner to testify; held: RCW 9.94A.370(2) does not limit sources to presentence reports or plea statements, see: State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450, 456 (2001); affirms, on somewhat different grounds, State v. Handley, 54 Wn.App. 377 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Gutierrez, 58 Wn.App. 70 (1990)

Imposing exceptional sentence because sentence range is insufficient due to release on good-time credit is improper; sentencing judge must specify facts and reasons relied upon in arriving at the imposition of each exceptional sentence on each count, even if counts run concurrently; I.

State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740 (1990)

Failure to object to finding of vulnerability based upon size of victim who appeared in court, State v. Payne, 45 Wn.App. 528 (1986), precludes review of issue, but see: State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993), see also: State v. Tierney, 74 Wn.App. 346, 350-4 (1994); I.

In re Chatman, 59 Wn.App. 258 (1990)

Trial court lacks authority to designate location of confinement for sentences of more than one year, State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527, 544 (1987), or to order community supervision (here, drug treatment) for other than first-time offenders, RCW 9.94A.030(4), (7), 9.94A.383, State v. Harper, 62 Wn.App. 69 (1991), State v. Laik, 62 Wn.App. 734 (1991), or to suspend a portion of a sentence, State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83, 89 (1989), or to forbid or grant good time, RCW 9.94A.150(1), In re Mota, 114 Wn.2d 465, 477-78 (1990), but see: Pers. Restraint of Williams, 121 Wn.2d 655 (1993), see: Pers. Restraint of Talley, 172 Wn.2d 642 (2011); defendant is entitled to credit for time served in mandatory in-patient drug treatment program imposed under SRA, see also: State v. Poston, 117 Wn.App. 925 (2003); I.

State v. Estrella, 115 Wn.2d 350 (1990)

Trial court's "finding" that defendant should be afforded an opportunity at gradual release and reintegration into society is a legal conclusion that should not be considered in support of exceptional sentence; I.

State v. Dana, 59 Wn.App. 667 (1990)

Sentencing court has authority to grant furloughs and order partial confinement after sentence imposed, RCW 9.94A.150(3), cf.: State v. Brown, 108 Wn.App. 960 (2001), distinguishing State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83 (1989), but see 1990 amendments to RCW 9.94A.150, State v. Murray, 118 Wn.App. 518 (2003), see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.App. 694 (2011); III.

Burns v. United States, 115 L.Ed.2d 123 (1991)

Under federal Sentencing Reform Act, trial court must give notice that it is considering departing from sentence range and the grounds upon which it is considering an upward departure absent notice from government; cf.: State v. Holyoak, 49 Wn.App. 691 (1987), State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47 (1987), but see: Irizzary v. United States, 171 L.Ed.2d 28 (2008); 5-4.

State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238 (1991)

Where standard sentence range would result in there being no additional punishment for one or more of the current convictions because offender score is higher than maximum statutory offender score, then an exceptional sentence may be appropriate, State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893, 898 (1995), reversing State v. Stephens, 57 Wn.App. 748 (1990), see: State v. Garnier, 52 Wn.App. 657 (1988), State v. Holt, 63 Wn.App. 226 (1991), State v. Borg, 145 Wn.2d 329, 336-40 (2001),State v. France, 176 Wn.App. 463, 466-73 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Ziegler, 60 Wn.App. 529 (1991)

Trial court need not find defendant to be sexually deviant to apply sex offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.120(7)(a); II.

State v. Skillman, 60 Wn.App. 837 (1991)

Where community placement is not required by RCW 9.94A.120(8)(a), then neither community placement nor community supervision is permitted following a prison commitment, distinguishing State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527 (1987); II.

State v. Jackson, 61 Wn.App. 86 (1991)

Special sexual offender sentencing alternative, former RCW 9.94A.120(7)(a), is available to defendant convicted of attempted rape 2°; I.

Pers. Restraint of Long, 117 Wn.2d 292 (1991)

Where defendant commits a crime, having previously been sentenced for another felony, then the sentence for the new crime must run consecutively to the previous sentence; where a crime is committed but defendant is not under sentence for another felony, then the terms are presumed to be concurrent unless court orders that they run consecutively, irrespective of whether defendant is on parole, RCW 9.94A.589 (2007), In re Caley, 56 Wn.App. 853 (1990), State v. King, 149 Wn.App. 96 (2009), see: State v. Moore, 63 Wn.App. 466 (1991), State v. Russell, 84 Wn.App. 1, 4-5 (1996), State v. Champion, 134 Wn.App. 483 (2006), State v. Jones, 137 Wn.App. 119 (2007), see also: State v. Elmore, 143 Wn.App. 185 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Harper, 62 Wn.App. 69 (1991)

Where standard range is greater than one year, trial court cannot order defendant into drug treatment merely because crimes were caused by addiction, State v. Gaines, 122 Wn.2d 502 (1993), State v. Pennington, 112 Wn.2d 606, 610 (1989), State v. Estrella, 108 Wn.2d 527 (1987), State v. Laik, 62 Wn.App. 734 (1991), State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993), distinguishing State v. Bernhard, 108 Wn.2d 527 (1987); I.

State v. Ibanez, 62 Wn.App. 628 (1991)

Court lacks authority to extend community supervision beyond two years for SSOSA, former RCW 9.94A.120)(7)(a), State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83, 89 (1989), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 54 Wn.App. 489 (1989), but see: State v. Price, 169 Wn.App. 652 (2012); I.

Sentence of Hilborn, 63 Wn.App. 102 (1991)

Former RCW 9.94A.210(7) [recodified as 9.94A.585(7)], requiring that Department of Corrections make reasonable, timely efforts to resolve SRA dispute at superior court level and file certification attesting to same with petition for review is mandatory, and failure to comply will cause petition to be dismissed, see: State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021); I.

State v. Mitchell, 117 Wn.2d 576 (1991)

Pre-SRA convictions count as one offense, former RCW 9.94A.360(6)(c) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], where they were served concurrently; sentences were concurrent when latter sentence refers to former and record establishes judicial intent that they be served concurrently, even if they do not begin and end at the same time, reversing State v. Roberts, 58 Wn.App. 389 (1990), distinguishing State v. Hartley, 41 Wn.App. 669 (1985), State v. Hartley, 51 Wn.App. 442 (1988); accord: Pers. Restraint of Sietz, 124 Wn.2d 645 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Mendoza, 63 Wn.App. 373 (1991)

Conspiracy to deliver a controlled substance, RCW 69.50.407, lacks a sentence range in sentencing grid, RCW 9.94A.310, thus standard range is one year, RCW 9.94A.120(6); accord: State v. Hebert, 67 Wn.App. 836 (1992), State v. Pacheco, 70 Wn.App. 27 (1993); I.

State v. Hughes, 63 Wn.App. 401 (1991)

Where consecutive sentences are imposed, which include confinement followed by community supervision provisions, confinement on consecutive sentences must be served before other sentence conditions are performed, RCW 9.94A.400(5); community supervision provisions remain consecutive upon release from jail; violation of community supervision provision cannot violate conditions of both sentences, only one being served at the time of the violation, see: State v. Taplin, 55 Wn.App. 668, 670-71 (1989), State v. Mahone, 164 Wn.App. 146 (2011); III.

State v. Moore, 63 Wn.App. 466 (1991)

In 1987, defendant fails to appear for sentencing for burglary; in 1990, defendant commits and is convicted of assault 2°; at sentencing, court runs sentences consecutively; held: RCW 9.94A.400 does not preclude consecutive sentences as trial court effectuated what would have been done on burglary case had defendant appeared for sentencing, see: State v. Rasmussen, 109 Wn.App. 279 (2001); cases were not "current offenses," RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), merely because they were sentenced in same jurisdiction at same hearing where defendant absconded; I.

State v. Wiley, 63 Wn.App. 480 (1991), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998)

Failure of state to object to exceptional sentence precludes appellate review absent sentence in excess of jurisdiction, cf.: State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993), State v. Hortman, 76 Wn.App. 454, 459 (1994), State v. Riles, 86 Wn.App. 10, 15 (1997); I.

State v. Allyn, 63 Wn.App. 592 (1991)

Where prior multiple sentences are suspended without reference to one another and then, upon revocation, ordered to be served concurrently, then the priors are separate offenses for determination of offender score, former RCW 9.94A.360(6), [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)]State v. Chavez, 52 Wn.App. 796 (1988), see also: State v. Harper, 50 Wn.App. 578, 582 (1988), State v. Hartley, 41 Wn.App. 669, 673-4 (1985), State v. Harltey, 51 Wn.App. 442, 447-9 (1988), cf.: State v. Roberts, 117 Wn.2d 576 (1991); trial court has power and duty to correct erroneous sentence upon discovery, State v. Smissaert, 103 Wn.2d 636, 639 (1985), State v. Roche, 75 Wn.App. 500, 512-3 (1994); I.

State v. Overvold, 64 Wn.App. 440 (1992)

Where defendant agrees that court may consider a witness statement to support Alford plea, then in absence of objection court may consider same at sentencing, distinguishing State v. Young, 51 Wn.App. 517, 521-2 (1988), see: State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450 (2001), State v. Bell, 116 Wn.App. 678 (2003); I.

State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401 (1992)

Following reversal on appeal of exceptional sentence, trial court is not barred from imposing new exceptional sentence by double jeopardy clause, United States v. DiFrancesco, 66 L.Ed.2d 328 (1980), Bullington v. Missouri, 68 L.Ed.2d 270 (1981), see: State v. Stewart, 72 Wn.App. 885, 891-3 (1994); trial court may not reenter findings previously invalidated by appellate court, RAP 12.5; Rules of Evidence do not strictly apply at SRA sentencing hearings, ER 1101(c)(3), although due process clause requires that evidence be reliable and defendant be given opportunity to refute; to enhance for future dangerousness, a mental health care professional's evaluation is mandatory, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), Pers. Rrestraint of Rama, 73 Wn.App. 503 (1994), but see: State v. McNallie, 123 Wn.2d 585 (1994); report from community correction officer is insufficient; 9-0.

State v. Hale, 65 Wn.App. 752 (1992)

Attempted murder 1° does not carry a mandatory minimum sentence precluding consideration of mitigating circumstances; where consecutive sentences are "standard," more than one mitigating factor may include shortening sentence and concurrent sentences, State v. Oxborrow, 106 Wn.2d 525 (1986); III.

State v. Garibay, 65 Wn.App. 919 (1992)

Absent objection or assertion of prejudice, extending sentencing beyond 40 days after conviction, former RCW 9.94A.110 [recodified as 9.94A.500], is discretionary with trial court; trial court may not use defendant's silence or continued denial of guilt as a basis for justifying exceptional sentence, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 139 Wn.2d 166 (1999), for lack of remorse, nor is "mundane lack of remorse found in run-of-the-mill criminals" sufficient to aggravate, as lack of remorse must be aggravated or egregious, State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332, 348 (1992), see: State v. Wood, 57 Wn.App. 792, 800 (1990), State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 18-19 (2002); III.

State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332 (1992)

Credit cards in different names, even if victims are married, constitute separate offenses, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987); unlawful imprisonment does not further commission of burglary 1° or indecent liberties of same victim; III.

State v. Miles, 66 Wn.App. 365 (1992)

Adding one point to offender score where crime is committed while defendant is on community placement, former RCW 9.94A.360(17) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], does not violate equal protection or due process; III.

State v. Decker, 66 Wn.App. 604 (1992)

Where California convictions were actually served concurrently and where it appears second sentencing judge knew of first offense, then they count as one pre-7/1/86 conviction, former RCW 9.94A.360(6) RCW 9.94A.360(6), see: State v. Luckett, 73 Wn.App. 182, 188-89 (1994); I.

State v. Sims, 67 Wn.App. 50 (1992)

Judge other than one who heard trial is empowered to impose exceptional sentence, State v. Soto, 45 Wn.App. 839 (1986), Jaime v. Rhay, 59 Wn.2d 58, 61-2 (1961), State v. Lindsey, 194 Wash. 129, 132-33 (1938), where no mitigating factors were presented at trial, even if trial judge is available, distinguishing RCW 2.28.030(2); absent request for evidentiary hearing or a specific dispute to material facts, defendant is not entitled to an evidentiary hearing at sentencing, RCW 9.94A.370(2), distinguishing State v. Olson, 47 Wn.App. 514, 519 (1987); sentencing judge is not a trier of fact; I.

State v. Llamas-Villa, 67 Wn.App. 448 (1992)

Community placement condition that defendant not associate with persons using drugs is valid, State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 607-09 (2006), although at revocation hearing defendant may assert he was unaware of their drug use, see: RCW 9.94A.205, State v. Parramore, 53 Wn.App. 527 (1989), State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010); I.

State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572 (1992)

Misdemeanor sentence may run consecutively to SRA felony sentences without aggravating factors, State v. Whitney, 78 Wn.App. 506, 517 (1995); III.

State v. McDougal, 120 Wn.2d 334 (1992)

A first-time offender on community supervision, RCW 9.94A.030, may be sentenced to 60 days for each violation of a condition of sentence, even if it exceeds the original sentence range, former RCW 9.94A.200; reverses State v. McDougal, 61 Wn.App. 847 (1991); 6-3.

United States v. Dunnigan, 122 L.Ed.2d 445 (1993)

Enhancement of sentence for willful perjury based upon impeding or obstructing administration of justice, USSG § 3C1.1, does not undermine the constitutional right to testify; cf.: State v. Houf, 64 Wn.App. 580 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Kisor, 68 Wn.App. 610 (1993)

Community placement may only be ordered following conviction for a specified "serious violent offense," RCW 9.94A.030(27), see: State v. Barnett, 139 Wn.2d 462 (1999), but see: State v. Drew, 77 Wn.App. 339 (1995); II.

State v. Peterson, 69 Wn.App. 143 (1993)

Sex offender is sentenced to prison followed by community supervision, to include crime-related treatment; upon release, defendant is sent to only treatment provider in the area, which rejects defendant as not amenable to treatment, court imposes 60 days for noncompliance; held: RCW 9.94A.120(5) permits a sentence condition of "available outpatient treatment," since counselor determined defendant was not amenable, treatment was not available to defendant; where corrections officer directs defendant to a particular program which will not accept offender, no volitional act of noncompliance occurs, thus no failure to comply was proved; III.

State v. Gurrola, 69 Wn.App. 152 (1993)

Current offenses count for three points of criminal history only for those crimes listed in former RCW 9.94A.360(10) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], which does not include rape of a child 1°; where offense is charged to have occurred when seriousness level is 10, subsequent amendment to increase seriousness level still requires court to use lower level, but see: State v. Parker, 82 Wn.App. 130 (1996), see: State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182, 192 n.14 (1997); where information charges period of time which overlaps effective date of amendment, state must prove by a preponderance, State v. Jones, 110 Wn.2d 74, 77 (1988), that offense occurred after that date to increase seriousness level, State v. Putman, 21 Wn.App.2d 36 (2022); III.

State v. Cook, 69 Wn.App. 412 (1993)

For sentence enhancement, RCW 9.94A.310(3), court must define a deadly weapon as one capable of producing death, RCW 9.94A.125, WPIC 2.07, inflicting injury is insufficient, State v. Thompson, 88 Wn.2d 546, 549 (1977), harmless here; I.

State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707 (1993)

Trial court, in imposing standard range sentence, states it has considered report that was not disclosed to defense, motion to vacate is denied, defense appeals; held: method by which trial court decides standard range sentence in unappealable, former RCW 9.94A.210(1) [recodified as 9.94A.585(1)], except where it is shown that sentencing court had duty to follow some specific procedure required by SRA and failed to do so, see: State v. M.L., 114 Wn.App. 358, 361 (2002); in order to bypass prohibition on appeals, petitioner must show court failed to consider information mandated by former RCW 9.94A.110 [recodified as 9.94A.500], or that petitioner objected to information and no evidentiary hearing was held, see: State v. Garza, 121 Wn.2d 885, 890 (1994), but see: State v. Crockett, 118 Wn.App. 853 (2003); affirms State v. Mail, 65 Wn.App. 295 (1992), overrules, to extent that it is inconsistent, State v. Ward, 49 Wn.App. 427 (1987); accord: State v. Friederich-Tibbets, 123 Wn.2d 250 (1994), see: State v. McNeair, 88 Wn.App. 331 (1997); 8-0.

State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873 (1993)

State's failure to object to exceptional sentence based on drug addiction does not preclude state from appealing; when sentencing court acts without statutory authority, error can be addressed for first time on appeal, State v. Anderson, 58 Wn.App. 107 (1990), State v. Loux, 69 Wn.2d 855 (1966), State v. Akin, 77 Wn.App. 575, 578 (1995); but see: State v. Danis, 64 Wn.App. 814 (1992), State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740 (1990), State v. Wiley, 63 Wn.App. 480 (1991); I.

State v. Hughes, 70 Wn.App. 142 (1993)

Where underlying sentences of community supervision are consecutive, an act of noncompliance can only violate the conditions of the sentence which is active, see: State v. Taplin, 55 Wn.App. 668, 670-1 (1989); III.

State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993)

Where jurisdiction is declined by juvenile court, prior conviction is adult felony for all purposes, including washout after age 23, see: State v. Sharon, 100 Wn.2d 230 (1983); I.

State v. Williams, 70 Wn.App. 567 (1993)

Delivery of drugs within 1000 feet of school, RCW 9.94A.310(5), 69.50.401(a)(1)(i), mandates a 24-month enhancement of sentence if proved beyond a reasonable doubt; enhanced penalty is added to both lower and upper end of sentence range; I.

State v. Morrison, 70 Wn.App. 593 (1993)

Where trial court revokes after suspending sentence under SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.120(a)(ii), court may then impose year of community supervision even if not included in original suspended sentence; accord: State v. Daniels, 73 Wn.App. 734 (1994); I.

State v. Cameron, 70 Wn.App. 598 (1993)

Defendant is sentenced to 14 months for count I, 4 months for count II, both within standard range, concurrent, with one year of community supervision for count II, defense maintains community supervision may only be imposed if total confinement is 12 months or less, RCW 9.94A.383; held: community supervision applies to the offense, not to the sentencing; because the actual sentence for count II was less than a year, then community supervision was proper, although it is only tolled during the four month confinement, and not during the remaining eight months on count I; I.

State v. Sherwood, 71 Wn.App. 481, 486-9 (1993)

Where prior pleas to attempted VUCSA are treated as gross misdemeanors at sentencing on those pleas, sentencing court cannot convert them to felonies to increase offender score even if they fit within RCW 69.50.407; II.

State v. Cameron, 71 Wn.App. 653 (1993)

Defendant is sentenced to 14 months for count I, 4 months for count II, both within standard range, concurrent, with one year of community supervision for count II, defense maintains community supervision may only be imposed if total confinement is 12 months or less; held: community supervision applies to the offense, not to the entire sentencing, RCW 9.94A.383; community supervision on the shorter sentence is tolled during incarceration on the longer sentence, RCW 9.94A.170(3); opinion in State v. Cameron, 70 Wn.App. 598 (1993) is withdrawn; I.

Pers. Restraint of Caudle, 71 Wn.App. 679 (1993)

Where one year of community supervision is imposed following confinement, as required by RCW 9.94A.120(8)(a), trial court need not reduce confinement period by a year and, if defendant was sentenced to high end of sentence range, community supervision does not convert sentence to an exceptional sentence requiring findings; III.

State v. Villegas, 72 Wn.App. 34 (1993)

Prior federal felony conviction that has no comparable Washington offense (reentry of a deported alien) should not be computed in the offender score; I.

State v. Friderich-Tibbets, 123 Wn.2d 250 (1994)

Refusal of trial court to impose sentence below standard range is not appealable, RCW 9.94.210(1), State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707 (1993), State v. Rousseau, 78 Wn.App. 774 (1995), State v. M.L., 114 Wn.App. 358, 361 (2002), reversing State v. Friderich-Tibbets, 70 Wn.App. 93 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Awawdeh, 72 Wn.App. 373, 379-80 (1994)

Following conviction for sale of counterfeit audio tapes, RCW 19.25.040, defendant is ordered to sell no tapes, lawful or not; held: where defendant acknowledges at sentencing he won't do it anymore, an SRA sentence that prohibits lawful activity is overbroad; III.

State v. Cabrera, 73 Wn.App. 165 (1994)

To prove out-of-state priors, state offers, over objection, Washington judgments which contain findings of fact that out-of-state convictions were part of defendant's criminal history; held: where defense does not challenge criminal history, use of prior Washington judgments and sentences satisfies state's burden, see: State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 190 (1986); where defense challenges documents, state is required to present additional evidence that the priors were felonies, at 168-9, State v. Roche, 75 Wn.App. 500, 514 (1994), State v. McCorkle, 88 Wn.App. 485, 493 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999); collateral estoppel does not bar defendant from challenging priors, as there was no evidence defendant objected at prior proceeding, thus court cannot conclude that the identical issue was raised, at 169-70, State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 122, 136-39 (2002); I.

State v. Luckett, 73 Wn.App. 182, 187-9 (1994)

Trial court cannot use probation report to determine that prior out-of-state robbery was armed where elements of prior robbery do not establish he was armed, see: State v. Freeburg, 120 Wn.App. 192 (2004), see also: State v. Mutch, 87 Wn.App. 433 (1997); II.

State v. Garza, 123 Wn.2d 885 (1994)

Where presentence report contains defendant's and victim's versions of the crime, and defendant makes no specific challenge to victim's versions nor requests an evidentiary hearing, then trial court may rely upon victim's version in imposing exceptional sentence, State v. Halgren, 87 Wn.App. 525, 532-3 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 341 (1999), State v. Zatkovich, 113 Wn.App. 70, 75-77 (2002), see: State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707, 712 (1993), State v. Butler, 75 Wn.App. 47, 51 (1994), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450, 456 (2001),

State v. Crockett, 118 Wn.App. 853 (2003), but see: State v. Crockett, 118 Wn.App. 853 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Tinkham, 74 Wn.App. 102 (1994)

Fifth Amendment privilege applies in presentence interview with sexual deviancy expert to determine future dangerousness, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002); I.

Pers. Restraint of Sietz, 124 Wn.2d 645 (1994)

Pre-SRA sentences that are judicially ordered to run concurrently count as one offense even if they were revoked, suspended or deferred sentences, State v. Roberts, 117 Wn.2d 576 (1991), overruling State v. Allyn, 63 Wn.App. 592 (1991) and State v. Chavez, 52 Wn.App. 796 (1988); 6-3.

State v. Wiley, 124 Wn.2d 679 (1994)

Trial court uses prior grand larceny ($75 line between felony and misdemeanor) as prior felony; held: where, as here, elements of prior crime have changed, prior status remains the same, thus trial court was correct in using prior as felony, reversing State v. Wiley, 71 Wn.App. 244 (1993); reclassification of entire crime from a felony to a misdemeanor applies retroactively to calculation of the offender score; accord: State v. Johnson, 51 Wn.App. 836, 840 (1988), State v. Frederick, 100 Wn.2d 550 (1983); 9-0.

State v. Wilson, 125 Wn.2d 212, 219-21 (1994)

Defendant fires gun into tavern, missing intended victims but striking two unintended victims, is convicted of four counts of assault 1°, RCW 9A.36.011, trial court imposes concurrent sentences; held: four assaults involving four victims involve four separate and distinct criminal acts, one for each victim, State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417, 431-33 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), see: State v. elmi, 166 Wn.2d 209 (2009), requiring consecutive sentences under the "serious violent" exception to former RCW 9.94A.400(1)(b), State v. Salamanca, 69 Wn.App. 817, 827-8 (1993), State v. Godwin, 57 Wn.App. 760, 763-4 (1990), Pers. Restraint of Sarausad, 109 Wn.App. 824, 853-55 (2001), see: Boerner, Sentencing in Washington § 5.8(b), at 5-19 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889, 897-9 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999)

Trial court may not consider good time credits in imposing exceptional sentence, State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556, 573 (1993); III.

State v. Moore, 75 Wn.App. 166, 170-1 (1994), dissavowed, in part, Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012)

A pre-SRA deferred sentence that has been dismissed is properly included in defendant's offender score, State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154, 160 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012), State v. Partida, 51 Wn.App. 760, 762 (1988), State v. Haggard, 195 Wn.2d 544 (2020), State v. Conaway, 199 Wn.2d 742 (2022); where prosecutor and defendant at time of plea believed that a prior dismissed deferred sentence did not count, defendant should be permitted to choose whether to withdraw plea or specific performance of the plea agreement, see: State v. Walsh, 143 Wn.2d 1 (2001), State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); II.

State v. Roche, 75 Wn.App. 500, 511-4 (1994)

Sentencing errors of law may be raised for first time on appeal, State v. Hunley, 175 Wn.2d 901 (2012), distinguishing State v. McAlpin, 108 Wn.2d 458, 462 (1987), State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999), cf.: State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668, 674 (2003), State v. Birch, 151 Wn.App. 504, 515-20 (2009), State v. Lucero, 152 Wn.App. 287, 293-96 (2009), thus calculation of offender score is reviewed de novo, Pers. Restr. Of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001); state has the burden of establishing the classification of an out-of-state prior conviction; where record is devoid of facts of prior such that classification can be determined, it must not be counted in criminal history; I.

State v. Clark, 76 Wn.App. 150 (1994), aff'd, on different grounds, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996)

First time offender waiver, RCW 9.94A.120(5), which excludes delivery of a schedule I or II controlled substance, RCW 9.94A.030(20)(a), does not violate equal protection clauses; I.

State v. Roberts, 76 Wn.App. 290 (1994)

Where defendant commits a crime while on community supervision, defendant is "under sentence of felony," RCW 9.94A.400(2), and thus new sentence begins after defendant completes term of confinement for prior offense; III.

State v. White, 76 Wn.App. 811, 810-11 (1995), aff'd, on other grounds, 129 Wn.2d 105 (1996)

As a condition of community supervision, trial court may order a defendant to stay out of drug areas (SODA), RCW 9.94A.120, even absent a prior drug offense as required by RCW 10.66.020; I.

State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893 (1995)

Where presumptive sentence is same for one or two counts, trial court may find presumptive sentence to be clearly too lenient because defendant committed two counts, State v. Smith, 123 Wn.2d 51, 56 (1993), State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238, 244-5 (1991), see: State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361 (1998), State v. Borg, 145 Wn.2d 329, 336-40 (2001); sexual offense cases, for purposes of future dangerousness findings, are not limited to those set forth as sex offenses in SRA, RCW 9.94A.039 (29), State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701, 708 (1991), at 899-900 [dicta]; affirms State v. Stewart, 72 Wn.App. 885 (1994).

State v. Ritchie, 126 Wn.2d 388 (1995)

Once trial court properly determines to impose an exceptional sentence above the standard range, court need not state reasons for length, nor must length be proportionate to sentences in similar cases, review is limited to abuse of discretion standard, State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 556, 573 (1993), State v. Parker, 82 Wn.App. 130 (1996), State v. Hovig, 149 Wn.App. 1, 14-16 (2009), State v. Sao, 156 Wn.App. 67-79-82 (2010); overrules, in part, State v. Elsberry, 69 Wn.App. 793, 796 (1993), State v. Pryor, 56 Wn.App. 107 (1989), aff'd on other grounds, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), State v. George, 67 Wn.App. 217, 227 (1992), see: State v. Baldwin, 111 Wn.App. 631, 646 (2002), aff'd, on other grounds, 150 Wn.2d 448 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Hicks, 77 Wn.App. 1 (1995)

To find that defendant has a proclivity to commit sex offenses effectively applies a "future dangerousness" standard in disguise, which is not proper absent expert testimony, State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445, 455 (1990), at 5-6; possession of child pornography is not an enumerated sex offense, RCW 9.94A.030(29); III.

State v. Shilling, 77 Wn.App. 166, 172-76 (1995)

A prior sentenced offense is a prior conviction for purposes of the offender score irrespective of when the crime occurred relative to the current offense, State v. Worl, 91 Wn.App. 88, 92-95 (1998), State v. Clark, 123 Wn.App. 515, 518-19 (2004), see: State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992), State v. Amos, 147 Wn.App. 217, 230-31 (2008); I

State v. Drew, 77 Wn.App. 339 (1995)

Community placement may be ordered for a burglary 1° conviction where evidence establishes that defendant assaulted victim, State v. Barnett, 139 Wn.2d 462 (1999), but see: State v. Kisor, 68 Wn.App. 610 (1993); I.

State v. Reinhart, 77 Wn.App. 454 (1995)

FBI rap sheet is admissible as a public record, ER 803(a)(8), see: State v. Drummer, 54 Wn.App. 751 (1989), and, along with certified but unsigned judgment and sentence plus presentence report plus state penitentiary record, is sufficient to prove valid prior conviction, at 456-7; II.

State v. Duke, 77 Wn.App. 532 (1995)

A court martial adjudication cannot be included as a prior conviction where the offense is not comparable to a Washington offense, and the facts, as set forth in the charging document, lack an element that would make them a crime in Washington, see: State v. Southerland, 43 Wn.App. 246, 250-1 (1986), State v. Bush, 102 Wn.App. 372 (2000), State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588 (1998), State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 256-57 (2011), Pers. Restraint of Canha, 189 Wn.2d 359 (2017); III.

State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644, 649-51 (1995)

Where alternative means of committing a crime have different penalties, jury need not be unanimous, but special interrogatories are required to determine seriousness level so defendant will be sentenced using the proper standard range, State v. May, 68 Wn.App. 491 (1993), see: State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62, 77-81 (2008); I.

State v. Roberts, 77 Wn.App. 678 (1995)

Court cannot delay sentencing to see if the law will change to permit a reduced sentence; I.

State v. McCraw, 127 Wn.2d 281 (1995)

Trial court has discretion to treat prior convictions served concurrently as one offense even if prior sentencing court treated prior offenses as separate offenses not encompassing same criminal conduct, former RCW 9.94A.360(6)(a) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], State v. Lara, 66 Wn.App. 927 (1992), State v. Wright, 76 Wn.App. 811 (1995), State v. Reinhart, 77 Wn.App. 454 (1995), State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556 (2008), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013), see: State v. Mehaffey, 125 Wn.App. 595, 599-601 (2005); effectively overrules State v. Blakey, 61 Wn.App. 595 (1991); 6-3.

State v. Thomas, 79 Wn.App. 32, 41-2 (1995)

Where plea agreement sets forth standard range and provides that if defendant is convicted of new crimes before sentencing, range and prosecutor's recommendation may change, CrR 4.2(g)(6)(d), post-plea convictions will change the sentence range, State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649, 665 (1992), State v. Clark, 123 Wn.App. 515, 518-19 (2004); II.

State v. Breedlove, 79 Wn.App. 101, 115-17 (1995)

Pre-1975 out-of-state crime should be reclassified under its current classification in computing offender score, State v. Johnson, 51 Wn.App. 836, 839 (1988), State v. Weiand, 66 Wn.App. 29, 34 n. 10 (1992), State v. McCorkle, 88 Wn.App. 485 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999); II.

State v. Mitchell, 81 Wn.App. 387 (1996)

State establishes prior California convictions by a prior Washington judgment and sentence containing defendant's acknowledgment of the out-of-state convictions plus a presentence report, none of which were included in clerk's papers to Court of Appeals; held: because documents are not before Court of Appeals, remanded for sentencing without the priors unless state produces sufficient additional evidence to establish their existence within 30 days; "absent a showing by the State that [defendant] either objected to the criminal history used in the prior proceeding or in fact waived his right to object so that he would be collaterally estopped from raising the issue now..., neither the judgment nor attachments to it would satisfy the State's burden," at 391 n. 1; III.

State v. Smith, 82 Wn.App. 153 (1996)

In imposing exceptional sentences in multi-count information, trial court should specify what sentence it is imposing for each count, at 160; defense may not concede an aggravating factor at sentencing then complain on appeal, at 163, see: State v. Henderson, 114 Wn.2d 867, 870 (1990); I.

State v. Eaton, 82 Wn.App. 723, 732-5 (1996)

Trial court may order sex offender to enter into and cooperate in counseling or therapy as condition of community placement, RCW 9.94A.120(9), see: State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010); I.

State v. Aronson, 82 Wn.App. 762 (1996)

A guilty plea before a general court martial may be included in offender score, State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588 (1998), State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 256-57 (2011); III.

State v. Raines, 83 Wn.App. 312 (1996), overruled, in part, on different grounds, State v. Jones, 118 Wn.App. 199 (2003)

Court lacks authority to extend the term of community placement as a sanction for violating a condition; I.

State v. Dolen, 83 Wn.App. 361 (1996)

Defendant is charged with one count each of child rape and child molestation based upon evidence of six separate incidents, verdict does not specify whether convictions were for the same or separate incidents, trial court finds separate criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a); held: since verdict was silent, state failed to establish separate incidents by a preponderance, former RCW 9.94A.110 [recodified as 9.94A.500], State v. Jones, 110 Wn.2d 74, 77 (1988), but see: State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013), thus trial court abused discretion, State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183 (1993), State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997); II.

State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182 (1997)

Where court imposes exceptional sentence, it must first correctly calculate the standard range, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 485 (1999), reversing State v. Parker, 82 Wn.App. 130 (1996), overruling, in part, State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403 (1990), State v. Altum, 47 Wn.App. 495 (1987), unless record clearly indicates sentencing court would have imposed the same sentence anyway, see: State v. Jennings, 106 Wn.App. 532 (2001), State v. Fletcher, 17 Wn.App. 606 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Broadaway, 133 Wn.2d 118, 135-36 (1997)

Sentencing court must state in judgment and sentence the precise term of community placement, RCW 9.94A.120(9)(a), State v. Barnett, 91 Wn.App. 671, 676-77 (1998), aff'd, 139 Wn.2d 462 (1999), State v. Jones, 93 Wn.App. 14 (1998), State v. Nelson, 100 Wn.App. 226 (2000), see: State v. Jones, 96 Wn.App. 649 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Fawcett, 147 Wn.2d 298 (2002), see: State v. Pharris, 120 Wn.App. 661 (2004), but see: State v. Mitchell, 114 Wn.App. 713 (2002), see also: State v. Rodriguez Ramos, 171 Wn.2d 46 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Coats, 84 Wn.App. 623 (1997)

Defendant pleads to four counts, "stipulates to the real facts" of 27 other uncharged counts, trial court imposes exceptional sentence considering uncharged counts, defense claims violates real facts doctrine; held: the statute and the use of the words 'real facts" was sufficient to allow the court to consider the uncharged crimes for sentencing purposes," at 627; III.

State v. Frazier, 84 Wn.App. 752 (1997)

Trial court may deny special sexual offender sentencing alternative (SSOSA), RCW 9.94A.120(8), for nonstatutory reasons, including defendant's lying at trial, denying the offense until after conviction, and victim's mother's desire defendant go to prison, State v. Hays, 55 Wn.App. 13 (1989); III.

State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997)

Defendant, on SRA community supervision with condition of no new crimes, is charged with a felony and admits to the community supervision violation, which is later stricken; held: a community supervision violation is not a criminal prosecution for double jeopardy purposes, State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98, 111 (1996), distinguishing United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993), see: State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268, 276 (1980), Standlee v. Smith, 83 Wn.2d 405, 407 (1974), State v. Collins, 121 Wn.App. 16 (2004); I.

State v. Vanoli, 86 Wn.App. 643 (1997)

Sale of schedule I drug for profit is not eligible for first-time offender waiver, at 648-9, RCW 9.94A.030(22)(a), 69.50.204; defendant may appeal legal determination even if court imposes standard range sentence, see: State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707 (1993), State v. McNeair, 88 Wn.App. 331, 334-8 (1997); sale of LSD to 3 juveniles back-to-back does not involve the same criminal conduct, at 651-52, State v. Hollis, 93 Wn.App. 804, 816-19 (1999), distinguishing State v. Vike, 125 Wn.2d 407 (1994), State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42 (1993), but see: State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997), State v. Williams, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998), State v. Haddock, 141 Wn.2d 103 (2000); , State v. Linerud, 147 Wn.App. 944 (2009); I.

State v. Archambault, 86 Wn.App. 711 (1997)

First offender option, RCW 9.94A.120(5), is not available for a defendant convicted of burglary 2° with a firearm, RCW 9.94A.310(3); II.

State v. Elza, 87 Wn.App. 336, 343-4 (1997)

Where appellate court determines that some, but not all, aggravating factors were improper, if appellate court is not persuaded that sentencing judge would have imposed same sentence absent struck factors, sentence is remanded for resentencing without considering struck factors, State v. Cardenas, 129 Wn.2d 1, 13 (1996), although sentencing court may consider "any appropriate factors warranting exceptional sentence"; II.

State v. Mutch, 87 Wn.App. 433 (1997)

Test for consideration of foreign convictions in three strikes sentence, RCW 9.94A.120, is same as for any SRA prior, i.e., compare elements to Washington statutes and, if they are the same, the prior conviction is included, State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 439-52 (2001), State v. Robinson, 114 Wn.App. 800 (2003), but see: State v. Delgado, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003); if they are not or the foreign statute is broader, sentencing court may look at defendant's conduct as evidenced by the indictment to determine whether the conduct would have violated a Washington statute, State v. Duke, 77 Wn.App. 532, 535 (1995), see: State v. Bush, 102 Wn.App. 372 (2000), cf.: State v. Freeburg, 120 Wn.App. 192, 199 n. 16 (2004), Shephard v. United States, 161 L.Ed.2d 205 (2005), State v. Moncrief, 137 Wn.App. 729 (2007); I.

State v. Halgren, 87 Wn.App. 525, 537-8 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 341 (1999)

Sentencing hearing should be held within 40 court days of conviction, former RCW 9.94A.110 [recodified as 9.94A.500], may be extended upon showing of good cause; here, defense concurred in continuance to review documents presented to sentencing judge; see: State v. Ellis, 76 Wn.App. 391, 394 (1994); I.

State v. Gomez-Florencio, 88 Wn.App. 254 (1997)

After sentencing, state discovers additional prior convictions under different names, defendant is then resentenced; held: absent proof of fraud, CrR 7.8(b)(3), which state did not prove, State v. Hardesty, 129 Wn.2d 303, 316-9 (1996), only basis for resentencing would be excusable neglect, CrR 7.8(b)(1), state did not offer evidence why the priors were not discovered before the original sentencing, thus no factual support; "extraordinary circumstances," CrR 7.8(b)(5), does not apply when the circumstances allegedly justifying the relief existed at the time the judgment was entered, State v. Cortez, 73 Wn.App. 838 (1994); 2-1, III.

State v. Garcia-Martinez, 87 Wn.App. 322 (1997)

Prohibition on appealing a standard range sentence does not violate equal protection; I.

State v. McNeair, 88 Wn.App. 331, 338-42 (1997)

Precluding special drug offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.120(6)(a), from applying to defendants with prior felony convictions does not violate equal protection; I.

State v. McCorkle, 88 Wn.App. 485 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999)

When using rap sheet to prove priors, court must determine the out-of-state statute underlying the conviction and whether there was a potentially comparable Washington felony, State v. Cabrera, 73 Wn.App. 165, 168 (1994), State v. Weiand, 66 Wn.App. 29 (1992), see: State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 447-50 (2000), State v. Merdop, 139 Wn.App. 693 (2007); where amount of theft in out-of-state offense is less than $250, it cannot be used as a felony prior; out-of-state taking and riding which requires mens rea element of knowingly is not comparable to a Washington felony, which requires intent; where rap sheet states "escape," and other state has three escape offenses which cannot be compared to Washington, the escape cannot be used to enhance; even if standard range is the same when priors are excluded by appellate court, remand is necessary unless record clearly indicates sentencing court would have imposed the same sentence anyway, State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182, 189 (1997), State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 485 (1999), see: Pers. Restr. of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001), State v. Kilgore, 141 Wn.App. 817 (2007), 167 Wn.2d 28 (2009); I.

State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998)

Pursuant to Alford plea agreement, state recommends standard range, court indicates its intent to impose exceptional sentence, defense objects to court considering probable cause certificate, which had been considered in taking plea, court declines to hold evidentiary hearing; held: state's participating in evidentiary hearing to "help the court make its decision" is not a breach of plea agreement, at 186, State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828 (1997) see: State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 871-4 (1990); trial court may not consider probable cause certification where defendant does not admit to those factual allegations, State v. Young, 51 Wn.App. 517, 522-3 (1988), cf.: State v. Bell, 116 Wn.App. 678 (2003); trial court is obliged to hold an evidentiary hearing if it intends to consider disputed facts whether defense wants one or not, State v. Crockett, 118 Wn.App. 853 (2003); real facts doctrine does not prohibit sentencing court from considering facts that could also be used to prove a higher degree crime as long as it does not do so because it is dissatisfied with plea agreement or verdict, but see: State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App.

783, 789-92 (1999), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450 (2001), State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002); affirms State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588 (1998)

General courts-martial are prior convictions for SRA and persistent offender accountability act, State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 256-57 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Flores-Serpas, 89 Wn.App. 521 (1998)

Community placement is not tolled, RCW 9.94A.170(2), for purposes of counting points, former RCW 9.94A.360(18) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], when a defendant is involuntarily arrested and deported by INS; I.

State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010)

Requiring polygraph testing to monitor compliance with other conditions of community placement, RCW 9.94A.120(9)(c), is valid, State v. Combs, 102 Wn.App. 949 (2000), State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 603 (2008); plethysmograph testing may be imposed by sentencing court as part of a treatment program, RCW 9.94A.120(9)(c)(iii), but may not order it unless it also requires crime-related treatment for sexual deviancy, State v. Castro, 141 Wn.App. 485, 493-94 (2007), State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 605-06 (2013), State v. Johnson, 184 Wn.App. 777 (2014), State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018); ordering a defendant convicted of a sex offense with a minor from having no contact with minors or frequenting places where they congregate is valid, State v. McCormick,166 Wn.2d 689 (2009); ordering a sex offender who raped an adult from having no contact with minors is overbroad, cf.: State v. Williams, 157 Wn.App. 689 (2010); affirms, in part, State v. Riles, 86 Wn.App. 10 (1997), overruling State v. Holland, 80 Wn.App. 1 (1995), State v. Flores-Moreno, 72 Wn.App. 733, 742-5 (1994); 7-2.

State v. Conners, 90 Wn.App. 48, 53-4 (1998)

Drug offender sentencing alternative (DOSA), RCW 9.94A.120(6), is not reviewable, State v. J.W., 84 Wn.App. 808, 811-2 (1997), cf.: State v. Hays, 55 Wn.App. 13 (1989), State v. Williams, 112 Wn.App. 171 (2002), State v. Kane, 101 Wn.App. 607 (2000), but see: State v. Williams, 149 Wn.2d 143 (2003); III.

State v. Brown, 91 Wn.App. 361 (1998)

Where the range for an unranked offense, RCW 9.94A.120(7) [here, stalking] is found by the court to be clearly too lenient such that defendant would be awarded "free crimes," then an exceptional sentence may be imposed, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 428 (1987), State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238, 243 (1991), State v. Stewart, 125 Wn.2d 893, 897-99 (1995), State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003); III.

State v. Anderson, 92 Wn.App. 54, 61-63 (1998)

Defendant steals wine from store, hits clerk with bottle, fires bullet into store, is convicted of robbery and assault with firearm, trial court, without entering findings, counts offenses separately without objection; held: trial court could have found that defendant's objective intent was to steal the wine and that intent changed to a desire to injure or frighten the clerk, thus implicit finding, State v. Channon, 105 Wn.App. 869, 877-78 (2001), that intent changed and offenses were not same criminal conduct is neither a misapplication of law nor abuse of discretion; I.

State v. DeBello, 92 Wn.App. 723 (1998)

Trial court may not suspend a portion of a term of confinement imposed for violation of a condition of community supervision under SRA; II.

State v. Traicoff, 93 Wn.App. 248 (1998)

Following remand, trial court changes sentence from one to two-years community placement, based upon erroneous sentence originally imposed, not addressed in original appeal; held: double jeopardy clause does not bar a court from correcting its sentencing error by increasing severity of a sentence to conform to mandatory provisions of a statute, Bozza v. United States, 91 L.Ed. 818 (1947), United States v. DiFrancesco, 66 L.Ed.2d 328 (1980); I.

State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999)

Challenge to the classification of out-of-state convictions can be raised for the first time on appeal, State v. McCorkle, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999), State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 449-50 (2001), State v. Hunley, 175 Wn.2d 901 (2012), cf.: State v. Nitsch, 100 Wn.App. 512 (2000), State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668, 674 (2003), State v. Lucero, 152 Wn.App. 287, 293-96 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 168 Wn.2d 785 (2010); where defense fails to object to defects at sentencing, remand for an evidentiary hearing to allow the state to prove the classification is appropriate, State v. Thiefault, 160 Wn.2d 409, 417 n.4 (2007), but see: Pers. Restr. of Connick, 144 Wn.2d 442 (2001), State v. Hickman, 112 Wn.App. 187 (2002), 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 200 (2004), Pers. Restraint of Cadwallader, 155 Wn.2d 867 (2005), State v. Foster, 140 Wn.App. 266 (2007), State v. Birch, 151 Wn.App. 504, 515-20 (2009), cf.: State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913 (2009), State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007), State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 601-02 (2008), see: State v. Jones, 182 Wn.2d 1 (2014); priors can be proved by certified copy of judgment or "other comparable documents of record or transcripts" to establish criminal history, at 480, Pers. Restraint of Adolph, 170 Wn.2d 556, 565-71 (2010), State v. Cabrera, 73 Wn.App. 165, 168 (1994), State v. Beals, 100 Wn.App. 189, 195-97 (2000), State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 122, 136-39 (2002), State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021), see: State v. Wining, 126 Wn.App. 75, 91-96 (2005); reverses State v. Ford, 87 Wn.App. 794 (1997); 6-3.

State v. Beer, 93 Wn.App. 539 (1999)

Where state files summons for revocation of SSOSA sentence within community supervision period, revocation hearing and imposition of full suspended sentence outside of community supervision period is permissible if there is no unnecessary delay, State v. Hultman, 92 Wn.App. 736 (1979); defendant must be provided allocution at hearing, but see: State v. Canfield, 154 Wn.2d 698 (2005), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 109-10 (2007), remedy for failure to provide allocution is remand before different judge, State v. Aguilar-Rivera, 83 Wn.App. 199, 203 (1996), cf.: State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 152-53 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), but see: State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390, 405-06 (2007); II.

State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783 (1999)

In rape 2° case, court finds choking to unconsciousness is deliberate cruelty, defense argues that force and serious injury establish rape 1°, thus real facts doctrine violated; held: because the injuries do not establish infliction of serious injury as a matter of law, whether the acts constitute deliberate cruelty or rise to the level of serious physical injury under rape 1° is a factual decision for the trial court, thus not clearly erroneous; justifying an exceptional sentence by relying on facts that elevate the seriousness of the crime violates the real facts doctrine, reconsidering State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750, 761-62, aff'd, on other grounds, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), see: State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002); I.

State v. Hale, 94 Wn.App. 46 (1999)

Where defendant is sentenced to more than one year, sentencing court has no power to delay execution of sentence until after defendant completes a treatment program, as jurisdiction passes to DOC, January v. Porter, 75 Wn.2d 768, 773-74 (1969), State v. Law, 110 Wn.App. 36, 40 (2002), Postsentence Review of Cage, 181 Wn.App. 588 (2014); sentencing court may not grant credit against a prison commitment for in-patient treatment time spent before sentence commences; drug treatment may not be credited against a community service portion of a sentence; II.

Pers. Restraint of Breedlove, 138 Wn.2d 298 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty to lesser offense, agrees to exceptional sentence, appeals; held: where trial court approves a plea agreement as consistent with the interests of justice and in conformance with SRA, the stipulation to an exceptional sentence is a substantial and compelling reason justifying an exceptional sentence, State v. Cooper, 63 Wn.App. 8 (1991), State v. Hilyard, 63 Wn.App. 413 (1991), but see: State v. Gaines, 121 Wn.App. 687, 696-700 (2004), State v. Gronnert, 122 Wn.App. 214 (2004), trial court must still enter written findings; by agreeing to the sentence, defendant waives right to appeal; 5-1-3.

State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862, 865-66 (1999)

Court may permit witnesses beyond those included in former RCW 9.94A.110 [recodified as 9.94A.500] to testify at sentencing; III.

State v. Serrano, 95 Wn.App. 700, 708-09 (1999)

Trial court asking defendant at sentencing if he still denies committing the crime is improper, State v. Garibay, 67 Wn.App. 773, 782 (1992), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535 (1996), as trial court should not "ascertain facts" from a defendant at sentencing and professed innocence is not an aggravating factor, State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332, 348-49 (1992); III.

State v. Barnett, 139 Wn.2d 462 (1999)

Burglary 1° is not automatically a "crime against a person," former RCW 9.94A.120(9)(a), for purposes of community placement, where defendant has not injured or threatened another during the crime; affirms State v. Barnett, 91 Wn.App. 671, 674-77 (1998); 9-0.

State v. McRae, 96 Wn.App. 298 (1999)

Juvenile felonies count in offender score pursuant to 1997 SRA amendments even where respondents pled guilty in juvenile court before they were 15 years old, and the plea forms stated that convictions will not remain part of criminal history if committed before the age of 15, as the plea agreements do not establish a promise by the state to disregard future changes in the law or that the law would not change, State v. Webb, 112 Wn.App. 618 (2002), distinguishing State v. Shineman, 94 Wn.App. 57 (1999), State v. T.K., 94 Wn.App. 286 (1999); I.

State v. Sulayman, 97 Wn.App. 185 (1999)

Where legislature amends to include juvenile adjudications in offender score, use of adjudications that occurred before the amendment is not a retroactive application, as the precipitating event (the new conviction) occurred after the effective date of the statute, State v. Randle, 47 Wn.App. 232, 240-41 (1987), see: State v. Perry, 110 Wn.App. 554 (2002), State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171, 191-93 (2002), State v. Dean, 113 Wn.App. 691 (2002), cf.: State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 670-75 (2001); I.

State v. Young, 97 Wn.App. 235, 240-44 (1999)

Committing separate forgeries on separate days at the same victim properly constitute separate criminal intent, even where defendant used the same photocopied forged check, cf.: State v. Calvert, 79 Wn.App. 569 (1995), within trial court's discretion; I.

Sentence of Kindberg, 97 Wn.App. 287 (1999)

Where court imposes a sentence of less than a year concurrent with a separate sentence of more than a year, the sentence is served in DOC, RCW 9.94A.190(3), and the court may impose a period of community supervision rather than community placement; I.

State v. Rowland, 97 Wn.App. 301 (1999)

Stealing more than one firearm in the same burglary is the same criminal conduct, see: State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 885 (1998), State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177, 181 (1997), State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 581-82 (2000); issue may be raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Anderson, 92 Wn.App. 54, 61 (1998), but see: State v. Nitsch, 100 Wn.App. 512 (2000), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 431-34 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007), even where the parties agreed to the sentence, although on remand, trial court may consider what bearing, if any, the agreement may have on remedies at resentencing, see: State v. Hilyard, 63 Wn.App. 413, 418-20 (1991); III.

State v. Johnson, 97 Wn.App. 679 (1999)

Where defendant is sentenced under first-time offender option, RCW 9.94A.030(22), he may be ordered to enter treatment even if it is not related to the offense; II.

State v. Acrey, 97 Wn.App. 784 (1999)

Defendant is sentenced to 60 months for assault, 43 months for drugs plus 12 months community placement, claims community placement sentence exceeds maximum five years for the drug charge since it cannot begin until he completes the assault sentence; held: tolling of community placement, RCW 9.94A.170(3), suspends the period of the sentence, thus it is not extended beyond maximum; I.

State v. Murphy, 98 Wn.App. 42 (1999)

Convictions of multiple counts of theft of firearms or unlawful possession of firearms must run consecutively, RCW 9.41.040(6), at 48-49, State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 342-43 (2003), State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 342-43 (2003); II.

State v. Henderson, 99 Wn.App. 369 (2000)

At plea, state agrees to recommend 26 months, low end of standard range, which court imposes; DOC requests resentencing due to error of law, parties determine that low end of range is 41 months, state recommends exceptional sentence of 26 months, court imposes 41 months, defendant demands specific performance sentence of 26 months; held: where defendant is not misled by the state and state is not responsible for the mistake, then trial court need not impose the recommended sentence in spite of a statute, State v. Morley, 35 Wn.App. 45, 48 (1983), In re Pers. Restraint of Powell, 117 Wn.2d 175 (1991), State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Murillo, 134 Wn.App. 521 (2006), see: State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); II.

State v. Smith, 99 Wn.App. 510 (1999)

Firearms stolen from the same victim at the same time may be considered as same criminal conduct at sentencing in spite of RCW 9A.56.300(3) which, by its plain language, applies only to charging, State v. Roose, 90 Wn.App. 513 (1998), State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 885 (1998), State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623, 641-44 (2013); I.

Pers. Restraint of Rangel, 99 Wn.App. 596, 598-600 (2000)

Defendant fires into another vehicle which crashes, defendant's vehicle turns back, approaches again, defendant opens fire again at same victims, trial court sentences to consecutive terms; held: because defendant formed new criminal intent before his second act, his crimes were sequential, not simultaneous or continuous, thus his conduct was separate and distinct, justifying consecutive sentences, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(b), State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107 (1999), State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997), State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845 (2000), Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009); consecutive sentences for serious violent offenses do not require court to enter findings and conclusions, but see: State v. Friedlund, 182 Wn.2d 388 (2015); III.

Pers. Restraint of McNeal, 99 Wn.App. 617 (2000)

At a community custody revocation hearing, respondent is entitled to due process rights provided in a parole revocation hearing, Morrissey v. Brewer, 33 L.Ed.2d 484 (1972), State v. Abd-Rahmaan, 154 Wn.2d 280 (2005), but is not entitled to appointed counsel; 2-1, I.

State v. Brown, 100 Wn.App. 104 (2000), aff'd, on different grounds, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002)

Two or more serious violent offenses which do not meet the same criminal conduct exception, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), are necessarily separate and distinct, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(b) and must be served consecutively, Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009); I.

State v. Beals, 100 Wn.App. 189, 195-97 (2000)

Before using an out-of-state conviction, state must offer a certified copy of the judgment or comparable transcripts or documents, sentencing court must then properly classify the conviction by comparing the elements of the offense with the elements of potentially comparable Washington crimes, State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 439-52 (2001), but see: State v. Delgado, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003); if elements are not identical, or if the offense is defined more narrowly in Washington, court may need to inquire into the record of the out-of-state conviction to determine whether defendant's conduct would have violated a comparable Washington offense, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 479-80 (1999), see: State v. Bush, 102 Wn.App. 372 (2000), State v. Robinson, 114 Wn.App. 800 (2003), State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 482-89 (2009), State v. Tewee, 176 Wn.App. 964 (2013), c.f: Shephard v. United States, 161 L.Ed.2d 205 (2005), State v. Moncrief, 137 Wn.App. 729 (2007); state bears burden of ensuring the record supports the classification; here, state failed to offer copies of out-of-state statute, trial court did not compare elements but, because defense did not object, state may offer additional evidence on remand, State v. Ford, supra., at 485-86, State v. Jackson, 129 Wn.App. 95 (2005), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 431-34 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007), State v. Thiefault, 160 Wn.2d 409, 417 n.4 (2007), cf.: State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 600-02 (2008); I.

State v. Nitsch, 100 Wn.App. 512 (2000)

Defendant's presentence report concurs with state's standard range calculation, argues for the first time on appeal that burglary 1° and assault 1° during same incident should count as same criminal conduct; held: where defense agrees to the calculation of the standard range, it waives review of whether the crimes constitute the same criminal conduct, Pers. Restraint of Shale, 160 Wn.2d 489, 494-96 (2007), State v. Jackson, 129 Wn.App. 95 (2005), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 431-34 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007), State v. McDougall, 132 Wn.App. 609, 612-13 (2006), distinguishing State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999), State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300, 316-17 (2009), State v. Lucero, 152 Wn.App. 287, 293-96 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 168 Wn.2d 785 (2010), State v. Nailleux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 642 (2010), but see: State v. Rowland, 97 Wn.App. 301 (1999), cf.: Pers. Restr. of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001), State v. Hickman, 112 Wn.App. 187 (2002), 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668, 674 (2003); where defendant, at plea, says his intent at entering victim's home was to kill himself and then committed an assault, then record supports court's implicit finding that the objective intent for the crimes were not the same; I.

State v. Haddock, 141 Wn.2d 103 (2000)

Possession of stolen firearms and felon in possession of the same firearms do not encompass the same criminal conduct as the victims differ (owner of guns vs. general public for VUFA); possession of stolen property and possession of stolen firearms from the same victim do encompass the same criminal conduct; 8-1.

State v. Khanteechit, 101 Wn.App. 137 (2000)

Defendant may appeal a standard range sentence if the court either refuses to exercise its discretion at all or relies on an impermissible basis for refusing to impose an exceptional sentence [dicta]; I.

State v. Tresenriter, 101 Wn.App. 486, 495-97 (2000)

Where defendant steals multiple firearms in course of a burglary, the firearm theft convictions are the same criminal conduct even though they may be charged separately, RCW 9A.56.300(3); possessing stolen property 2° apparently arising from same burglary does not encompass the same criminal conduct as firearm thefts as criminal intent is different and because the crime by definition does not include firearms, RCW 9A.56.160; II.

State v. Kane, 101 Wn.App. 607 (2000)

Expanded drug offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.120(6), is not retroactive, State v. Toney, 103 Wn.App. 862 (2000), Sentence of Holt, 105 Wn.App. 619 (2001), State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 220, 233-41 (2004), see also: State v. Williams, 149 Wn.2d 143 (2003), but see: Addleman v. Board of Prison Terms and Paroles, 107 Wn.2d 503, 509-12 (1986); I.

State v. Root, 141 Wn.2d 701 (2000)

Unit of prosecution for sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68A.040, is each photo session per minor, not each photograph, reversing, in part, State v. Root, 95 Wn.App. 333 (1999), see: State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 878-83 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Howell, 102 Wn.App. 288 (2000)

Defendant pleads guilty to solicitation to deliver cocaine, trial court treats prior VUCSA delivery conviction as one point, relying on In re Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 137 Wn.2d 897 (1999); held: while Hopkins holds that solicitation to deliver drugs is not a drug offense for purposes of the maximum sentence doubling statute, former RCW 9.94A.360(6) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)] unambiguously states that where the present conviction is of an anticipatory offense, priors are to be counted as if the present conviction is for a completed offense, thus prior deliveries count three, see: State v. McCarthy, 112 Wn.App. 251 (2002); I.

State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 447-50 (2000)

State offers NCIC rap sheet to prove out-of-state priors, defense objects and claims that they are misdemeanors, trial court finds state proved priors as felonies; held: where defendant objects to classification of priors shown on rap sheet, state must offer evidence to prove that the priors are felonies, State v. Drummer, 54 Wn.App. 751, 757 (1989), but see: State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 85-86 (2011), failure to do so requires reversal and resentencing without regard to the alleged priors, State v. McCorkle, 88 Wn.App. 485, 500 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999); II.

State v. Walsh, 143 Wn.2d 1 (2001)

Where both parties err as to standard range, defendant may seek to withdraw his plea even if trial court imposes an exceptional sentence upward, and may raise issue for the first time on appeal, Pers. Restr. of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001), see: State v. Calhoun, 134 Wn.App. 84 (2006), State v. Codiga, 162 Wn.2d 912 (2008); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001)

At guilty plea, defendant agrees to offender score containing washed out-of-state convictions, sentence is within range without the out-of-state priors, files PRP; held: because there is no evidence that defendant knowingly agreed to an incorrect offender score or sentence range, he did not invite the error, cf.: State v. Hahn, 100 Wn.App. 391, 394-97 (2000) and may raise issue for first time in PRP; trial court must determine correct offender score and sentence range before imposing sentence, see: State v. McCorkle, 88 Wn.App. 485 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999), but see: State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 329-30 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009), State v. Amos, 147 Wn.App. 217, 230-31 (2008), thus remanded for resentencing; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Connick, 144 Wn.2d 442, 454-58 (2001)

At sentencing, DOC report reflects offender score of 9, state's report reflects 6, defense counsel agrees with DOC report, court adopts score of 9, defendant files PRP, claiming out-of-state priors were same criminal conduct; held: because petitioner failed to present sufficient evidence that priors were committed at same time and place and involved same victims, he is not entitled to relief, in light of the fact that counsel at sentencing agreed with the calculation, State v. Birch, 151 Wn.App. 504, 515-20 (2009), but see: State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999), State v. Lucero, 168 Wn.2d 785 (2010), State v. Cobos, 178 Wn.App. 692, 699 (2013), aff'd, on other grounds, 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014), cf.: State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007); photocopies that do not meet authentication requirements of ER 901, 902, ch. 5.44 RCW or CR 44 should not be considered absent a stipulation, but see: State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021), cf.: State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 91-96 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Hernandez-Hernandez, 104 Wn.App. 263 (2001)

At sentencing, where defense presents mitigating factors but does not seek an exceptional sentence, counsel was effective, as trial court had authority to impose exceptional sentence on its own, but see: State v. McGill, 112 Wn.App. 95 (2002); III.

State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 439-52 (2001)

Detailed analysis determining sentencing consequences of an out-of-state conviction; II.

State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 581-82 (2000)

Statutory requirement that if offender is convicted for unlawful possession of firearm and for theft of the firearm the terms will be served consecutively, RCW 9.41.040(6), does not preclude a finding that the convictions are the same criminal conduct, thus unlawful possession of multiple firearms from same victim may be same criminal conduct because they all involve the same victim, the public at large (?), State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 885 (1998); III.

State v. Chance, 105 Wn.App. 291, 299 (2001)

Court may not consider a court-ordered competency evaluation in determining future dangerousness unless defendant was warned prior to the evaluation that it might be used at sentencing, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), see: State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002); II.

State v. Gimarelli, 105 Wn.App. 370, 374-80 (2001)

An out-of-state conviction, based upon a nonunanimous jury, counts in offender score as long as it is not repugnant to either the United States Constitution or the constitution of the state of conviction; II.

State v. Holgren, 106 Wn.App. 477 (2001)

Prior DUIs more than seven years old may be used to enhance sentence for vehicular homicide, RCW 9.94A.310(7), even though they may not be used to enhance for DUI, RCW 46.61.5055; I.

State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450 (2001)

Following Alford plea to assault 2°, court convenes real facts hearing, over general objection state offers PSI and police report, court finds defendant intended to kill victim and imposes exceptional sentence; held: purpose of real facts hearing is to allow defendant to refute state's allegation, State v. Garza, 123 Wn.2d 885, 890 (1994), and to protect defendant from consideration of unreliable or inaccurate information, State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275, 282-83 (1990), RCW 9.94A.370(2), see: State v. Overvold, 64 Wn.App. 440 (1992), State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), State v. Crockett, 118 Wn.App. 853 (2003); an Alford plea does not restrict state from offering evidence at sentencing; trial court's viewing crime as assault 2° committed under assault 1° circumstances violates real facts doctrine, State v. Young, 51 Wn.App. 517, 523 (1988), but see: State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002); 2-1, III.

State v. Brooks, 107 Wn.App. 925, 932-34 (2001)

To calculate a DOSA sentence, RCW 9.94A.120(6), where high end of the range exceeds the maximum sentence, court must use the maximum and low end to determine midpoint; I.

State v. Brown, 108 Wn.App. 960 (2001)

After sentencing, trial court adds the name of a witness to the no contact order; held: absent statutory authority, court may not amend an SRA sentence, State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83 (1989), State v. Murray, 118 Wn.App. 518 (2003), Postsentence Review of Wandell, 175 Wn.App. 447 (2013), but see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.App. 694 (2011); RCW 9.94A.120(20) allows imposition of a no contact order at sentencing, but does not allow modification later; III.

State v. Rasmussen, 109 Wn.App. 279 (2001)

Where sentences are imposed on the same day, irrespective of whether the pleas or trials were on different days, the sentences must run concurrently absent an exceptional sentence, RCW 9.94A.400(1), State v. Smith, 74 Wn.App. 844, 851-54 (1994), distinguishing State v. Moore, 63 Wn.App. 466, 469-71 (1991), RCW 9.94A.400(3), but see: State v. Huntley, 45 Wn.App. 658, 662 (1986); II.

State v. Smathers, 109 Wn.App. 546 (2001)

DOSA, RCW 9.94A.120(6), is unavailable to a defendant who has prior juvenile sex or violent offenses; II.

Pers. Restraint of Bowman, 109 Wn.App. 869 (2001)

Solicitation to deliver drugs is an anticipatory offense under Ch. 9A.28, RCW rather than under Ch. 69.50, RCW, thus sentence range is not 0-12 months, see: In re Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 137 Wn.2d 897 (1999); I.

In re Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861, 873-76 (2002)

A defendant who stipulates to offender score does not waive right to seek PRP on that score if it includes washed out juvenile crimes, as the sentence would be in excess of that authorized by statute, State v. Huff, 119 Wn.App. 367 (2003), Pers. Restraint of Cadwallader, 155 Wn.2d 867 (2005), State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007), Matter of Sylvester, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1123 (2022), cf.: State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), Pers. Restraint of Shale, 160 Wn.2d 489 (2007), State v. Collins, 144 Wn.App. 547 (2008), State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 642 (2010), State v. Zamudio, 192 Wn.App. 503 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Teitzel, 109 Wn.App. 791 (2002)

For vehicular homicide, a prior DUI acts as a two-year sentence enhancement and doesn't count in offender score, RCW 46.61.520(2); II.

State v. Cox, 109 Wn.App. 937 (2002)

Where community placement is mandatory and court omits it at sentencing, it may amend sentence to reflect community placement; III.

State v. Perry, 110 Wn.App. 554, 560-61 (2002)

Where prior juvenile dispositions occurred on the same day and are treated as a single conviction, they cannot later be treated as separate convictions; III.

State v. Randoll, 111 Wn.App. 578, 582-84 (2002)

Defendant pleads guilty to assault 2˚ (substantial bodily harm), RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b), 9A.36.021(1)(a), at evidentiary hearing court imposes exceptional sentence based upon seriousness of injury, defense objects under real facts doctrine claiming that injury factor elevates crime to assault 1˚, State v. Swanson, 45 Wn.App. 712, 714 (1986); held: because the facts do not establish all of the elements of a greater, uncharged offense (mens rea of assault 1˚ is intent to inflict great bodily harm; mens rea of assault 2˚ does not include intent to injure), real facts doctrine is not violated, State v. Benefiel, 111 Wn.App. 789 (2002), see: State v. Taitt, 93 Wn.App. 783, 790 (1999), State v. Hooper, 100 Wn.App. 179, 186 (2000), but see: State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450 (2001); II.

State v. Lopez, 147 Wn.2d 515 (2002)

At sentencing, defense counsel objects to failure of state to prove priors, state offers to obtain copies of judgments and sentences, trial court declines and sentences defendant to life without parole; held: upon objection, state was obliged to prove prior convictions, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 480-82 (1999), State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913 (2009), State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300, 314-17 (2009), failure to do so, even where trial court stated it would proceed anyway, precludes remand to allow state a further opportunity to meet its burden, State v. McCorkle, 137 Wn.2d 490, 497 (1999), cf.: State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007), but see:

RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008), State v. Jones, 182 Wn.2d 1 (2014); affirms State v. Lopez, 107 Wn.App. 270 (2001); 6-3.

State v. McGill, 112 Wn.App. 95 (2002)

Defendant may appeal a standard range sentence where court has refused to exercise discretion or has relied upon an impermissible basis for refusing to impose an exceptional sentence, see: State v. Garcia-Martinez, 88 Wn.App. 322, 329-30 (1997); here, defense counsel failed to cite or argue for an exceptional sentence where it was clearly authorized under the facts, cf.: State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 957-58 (2013); I.

State v. McCarthy, 112 Wn.App. 231 (2002)

Defendant is convicted of VUCSA delivery, sentencing judge counts prior conviction for solicitation to deliver as one point; held: a prior anticipatory offense is scored the same as if completed, former RCW 9.94A.360(4) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], thus the prior solicitation is tripled, State v. Howell, 102 Wn.App. 288 (2000); I.

State v. Zatkovich, 113 Wn.App. 70, 75-77 (2002)

Trial court need not hold an evidentiary or real facts hearing where state offers documents in support of exceptional sentence and defendant does not object or demand a hearing; II.

State v. Hepton, 113 Wn.App. 673, 688-90 (2002)

Where multiple children are present at a methamphetamine lab, only one sentencing enhancement is authorized, RCW 9.94A.510(6), -.605; III.

State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 13-15 (2002)

Trial court may allow attorney for victim's family to address the court at sentencing and to file a written sentencing memorandum, CONST. art I, § 35, RCW 7.69.030, RCW 9.94A.500(1)(2001); II.

State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003)

At resentencing following reversal, State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107 (1999), court imposes exceptional sentence, having stated at first sentencing that if consecutive sentences are reversed, exceptional sentence may be imposed; held: because the issue of whether to impose an exceptional sentence was not identical as between the two sentencings due to a change from separate and distinct conduct to the same conduct, collateral estoppel will not bar an exceptional sentence, State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), see: State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992), State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106 (2004); affirms State v. Tili, 108 Wn.App. 289 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Mitchell, 114 Wn.App. 713 (2002)

Sentence which provides for community custody for 9 to 12 months or amount of early earned release time, whichever is longer, is sufficiently precise, distinguishing State v. Broadaway, 133 Wn.2d 118, 135-36 (1997), State v. Nelson, 100 Wn.App. 226, 230-31 (2000), State v. Pharris, 120 Wn.App. 661 (2004); I.

State v. Bunting, 115 Wn.App. 135 (2003)

Illinois robbery that does not require specific intent to steal or deprive is not equivalent to Washington robbery, thus is not a strike, at 140-41, State v. Freeburg, 120 Wn.App. 192 (2004); while court should look to the record to see if the conduct would have violated the comparable Washington statute, see: State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588, 606 (1998), State v. Mutch, 87 Wn.App. 433 (1997), State v. Olsen, 180 Wn.2d 468 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Canha, 189 Wn.2d 359 (2017), the complaint and "official statement of facts" cannot be considered, as they are allegations never proven at trial because defendant pleaded guilty, see: State v. Thomas, 135 Wn.App. 474 (2006); while the indictment may be considered, here it does not establish intent to deprive as an element, at 142-43; I.

State v. Williams, 149 Wn.2d 143 (2003)

State may appeal a DOSA sentence challenging defendant's eligibility, reversing State v. Williams, 112 Wn.App. 171 (2002); per curiam.

State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402, 415-21 (2003)

Where jury enters special verdicts finding both a firearm, RCW 9.94A.510(3) and a separate deadly weapon, RCW 9.94A.510(4), the enhancements must run consecutively to each other, State v. Mandanas, 168 Wn.2d 84 (2010), as well as to the base sentence, State v. Spandel, 107 Wn.App. 352 (2001), State v. Fast, 90 Wn.App. 952 (1998), State v. Callihan, 120 Wn.App. 620 (2004), cf.: Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239 (1998), State v. Conover, 183 Wn.2d 706 (2015); reverses, in part, State v. DeSantiago, 108 Wn.App. 855 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Thomas, 150 Wn.2d 666 (2003)

Defendant is convicted of two counts of robbery 2° with firearm allegations, is sentenced to concurrent terms for robbery, consecutive firearm enhancements, State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845, 859-61 (2000), sentence thus exceeds ten years; held: because the maximum sentence for two class B felonies is twenty years, as they can run consecutively, and because firearm enhancements must run consecutively to the base sentences and to each other, RCW 9.94A.599, sentence here does not exceed maximum, overruling State v. Harvey, 109 Wn.App. 157 (2001); affirms State v. Thomas, 113 Wn.App. 755 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Bramme, 115 Wn.App. 844 (2003)

Defendant admits participating in methamphetamine production involving 5000 pills, trial court denies DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(c); held: DOSA statute permits eligibility where offense "involved only a small quantity," "involved" does not require size determination be made solely on basis of drugs seized; if credible evidence exists pointing to defendant's involvement in the production of a significant quantity, court properly may conclude manufacturing offense did not involve a small quantity, "small" being a relative term, see also: State v. Barton, 121 Wn.App. 792 (2004); III.

State v. Reed, 116 Wn.App. 418, 422-24 (2003)

Community custody is the same as community placement for purposes of adding a point to offender score, RCW 9.94A.525(17); III.

State v. Bell, 116 Wn.App. 678 (2003)

At plea, defense checks box on plea form which states, "instead of making a statement, I agree that the Court may review the police reports and/or a statement of probable cause…to establish a factual basis," state offers witness statements to which defense stipulates, stating that it does not agree with "a lot of what is in there," at sentencing court considers these statements and imposes exceptional sentence; held: defense vague and equivocal response, providing no specific mention of what it is defense objected to was insufficient to preclude court from considering statements to support exceptional sentence, State v. Overvold, 64 Wn.App. 440 (1992), distinguishing State v. Young, 51 Wn.App. 517 (1988), cf.: State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998); unsworn victim statements may be considered at sentencing absent objection or demand for cross-examination, see: RCW 9.94A.500(1); III.

State v. Payne, 117 Wn.App. 99 (2003)

A Canadian conviction is sufficiently authenticated, ER 901, where signed by a court transcriber certifying it as a true and accurate transcript, Canadian crown counsel testifies that he would rely on similar transcripts although he did not know whether the transcriber was certified, and the documents are mutually consistent; where a foreign conviction is for a crime not subject to jury trial, it is properly excluded, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 187-88 (1986), cf.: Custis v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 517 (1994); II.

State v. Crandall, 117 Wn.App. 448 (2003)

Statute which requires adding a point to offender score when defendant is on community placement at time of new crime, RCW 9.94A.525(17), applies if defendant is on community custody; II.

State v. Blunt, 118 Wn.App. 1 (2003)

Defense demands that state prove priors,, state offers judgment and sentence at sentencing, defense does not challenge priors and remains silent, trial court notes defendant's failure to challenge and finds that the priors were proved; held: allowing the court to infer acknowlegment from a failure to challenge does not infringe upon defendant's right to remain silent, RCW 9.94A.530(2), State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275, 282-83 (1990), see: State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913 (2009), distinguishing Mitchell v. United States,143 L.Ed.2d 424 (1999); II.

State v. Jones, 118 Wn.App. 199 (2003)

As a condition of community custody, court may order that offender obey all laws, RCW 9A.94A.715(2)(b), overuling State v. Barclay, 51 Wn.App. 404 (1988) and overruling, in part, State v. Raines, 83 Wn.App. 312, 315-16 (1996), abstain from alcohol even if the case is not alcohol-related, former RCW 9.94A.120(8)(a) [may have been repealed, see: RCW 9.94A.505 and this case, at n. 19], cf.: State v. Norris, 1 Wn.App.2d 87 (2017), rev., in part, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018), may not order alcohol treatment if alcohol did not relate to the crime, State v. Warnock, 174 Wn.App. 608 (2013), State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 786 (2014), may not order mental health counseling if not crime-related, State v. Brooks, 142 Wn.App. 842, 849-52 (2008), see: State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870, 890-94 (2015); II.

State v. Johnson, 118 Wn.App. 259 (2003)

Juvenile adjudications are convictions for purposes of the offender score, State v. Cheatham, 80 Wn.App. 269 (1996), distinguishing RCW 13.04.240; a washed juvenile assault 2° adjudication counts to preclude eligibility for a drug offender sentencing alternative (DOSA), State v. Deman, 107 Wn.App. 98, 102-03 (2002); I.

State v. Smith, 118 Wn.App. 288, 291-94 (2003)

Refusing to grant a DOSA to anyone who flunks out of drug court is not an abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Murray, 118 Wn.App. 518 (2003)

Defendant is sentenced to one year work release for felony, trial court subsequently grants defendant's motion to convert sentence to home detention, state appeals; held: sentencing court lacks authority to change the form of partial confinement after sentence was imposed, State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83, 89 (1989), State v. Harkness, 145 Wn.App. 678 (2008), but see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.App. 694 (2011), distinguishing State v. Dana, 59 Wn.App. 667 (1990); I.

State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668, 674 (2003)

At sentencing, where defense counsel states that she agrees with offender score, state is not required to produce further evidence of out-of-state conviction, State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), State v. Birch, 151 Wn.App. 504, 515-20 (2009), but see: State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999), State v. Lucero, 168 Wn.2d 785 (2010), cf.: State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007), State v. Cobos, 178 Wn.App. 692, 699 (2013), 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014), State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018) I.

State v. Crockett, 118 Wn.App. 853 (2003)

Defendant, originally charged with child molestation, enters an Alford plea to assault 2º, agrees that the court may consider investigating officer's affidavit as factual basis but expressly disputes the accuracy, sentence includes psychosexual evaluation and treatment; held: because court considered disputed facts, State v. Garza, 123 Wn.2d 885, 890 (1994), it was obliged to hold an evidentiary hearing even absent a demand for such by defendant, State v. Talley, 83 Wn.App. 750, 759 (1996), aff'd, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), but see: State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707, 713 (1993), State v. Garza, supra., at 889, thus remanded for resentencing; III.

Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004)

Aggravating factors, other than prior convictions, must be submitted to a jury unless defendant waives jury on the issue, not retroactive to cases final on direct review, State v. Evans, 154 Wn.2d 408, 443-49 (2005), State v. Pillatos, 159 Wn.2d 459 (2007); not structural error, Washington v. Recuenco, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), but see: State v. Womac, 160 Wn.2d 643, 663-64 (2007), cf.: State v. Doney, 165 Wn.2d 400 (2008); 5-4.

State v. Robinson, 120 Wn.App. 294 (2004)

Failure to object at sentence modification hearing to hearsay and lack of notice waives appellate review; I.

State v. Watson, 120 Wn.App. 521 (2004), rev'd, in part, 155 Wn.2d 574 (2005)

Prosecutor submits memorandum to sentencing court opposing all DOSA sentences, RCW 9.94A.660, because treatment is not provided, court imposes standard range sentence, defendant appeals; held: absent objection or demand for hearing, trial court properly considered memorandum, State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707, 713 (1993), State v. Garza, 123 Wn.2d 885, 889 (1994), but see: State v. Crockett, 118 Wn.App. 853 (2003); prosecutor's mandatory policy of objecting to all DOSA sentences is not an abuse of discretion, distinguishing State v. Pettitt, 93 Wn.App. 288 (1980); an eligible defendant has no right to a DOSA sentence, see: State v. Davis, 43 Wn.App. 832, 835 (1986), State v. Hender, 180 Wn.App. 895 (2014); II.

State v. Collins, 121 Wn.App. 16 (2004)

Defendant, while on community custody, commits new crimes, DOC sanctions defendant to jail, RCW 9.94A.737, after which prosecutor moves to modify sentence, trial court imposes more jail time, RCW 9.94A.634(3)(c) based upon same violations; held: neither double jeopardy clause nor collateral estoppel preclude trial court from imposing a sanction for acts already punished by DOC, see: State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997), In re Pers. Restraint of Mayner, 107 Wn.2d 512, 521 (1986), Standlee v. Smith, 83 Wn.2d 405, 407 (1974); II.

State v. Gaines, 121 Wn.App. 687, 703-06 (2004)

Prosecutor's policy to recommend exceptional sentence downward for certain defendants who plead guilty does not deny equal protection to a defendant who went to trial before prosecutor enacted its policy, as saving resources of a trial is a rational basis for the distinction; I.

State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 220 (2004)

Where defense affirmatively acknowledges that prior out-of-state convictions are properly included in offender score, trial court need not sua sponte compare elements or require further proof and defendant may not raise issue on appeal, State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), State v. Huff, 119 Wn.App. 367 (2003), State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 483 n.5 (1999), State v. Beasley, 126 Wn.App. 670-685-86 (2005), State v. McDougall, 132 Wn.App. 609, 612-13 (2006), State v. Foster, 140 Wn.App. 266 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Shale, 160 Wn.2d 489 (2007), State v. Birch, 151 Wn.App. 504, 515-20 (2009), , State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 642 (2010), see: State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007), State v. Collins, 144 Wn.App. 547 (2008), State v. Zamudio, 192 Wn.App. 503 (2016), but see: State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007), State v. Cobos, 178 Wn.App. 692, 699 (2013), 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861 (2002); failure to object is not an affirmative acknowledgment, at 233, State v. Ford, supra., at 482, State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913 (2009), State v. Lucero, 168 Wn.2d 785 (2010), State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300, 314-17 (2009), see also: Pers. Restraint of Cadwallader, 155 Wn.2d 867 (2005), State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018), cf.: State v. Thiefault, 160 Wn.2d 409, 417 n.4 (2007), State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 600-02 (2008); affirms State v. Hunter, 116 Wn.App. 30 (2003); amendments to penal statutes lessening penalties are not retroactive absent legislative assertion that they shall be retroactive, at 233-41, State v. McCarthy, 112 Wn.App. 231 (2002), State v. Kane,101 Wn.App. 607 (2000), cf.: State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9, 13-14 (1970), State v. Grant, 89 Wn.2d 678, 684

(1978), but see: Addleman v. Board of Prison Terms and Paroles, 107 Wn.2d 503, 509-12 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 432-33 (2004)

Where offender score is greater than nine, sentencing court may stop calculating at nine so long as court is not considering an exceptional sentence based on the offender score, State v. Fleming, 140 Wn.App. 132, 138 (2007), State v. Priest, 147 Wn.App. 662, 673 (2008), see: State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 329-30 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009); I.

Pers. Restraint of Acron, 122 Wn.App. 886 (2004)

Where seriousness level table, RCW 9.94A.515, fails to list an offense [here, indecent liberties by health care provider against patient, RCW 9A.44.100(1)(d)], then it is an unranked felony with a standard range of 0-12 months, RCW 9.94A.505(2)(b); I.

State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106, 113-15 (2004)

Defendant receives DOSA sentence, appeals and obtains reversal on offender score, at resentencing trial court declines to impose DOSA relying, in part, upon defendant's infraction history in prison; held: trial court properly considered infraction history which occurred subsequent to the prior sentence, but see: State v. Dorosky, 28 Wn.App. 128 (1981), State v. Cirkovich, 42 Wn.App. 403 (1985), see: State v. Snapp, 119 Wn.App. 614, 626-27 (2004); III.

State v. Harris, 123 Wn.App. 906 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

Defendant enters into stipulated facts trial, court sua sponte imposes exceptional sentence; held: while defendant stipulated to facts for purposes of trial and a standard range sentence, he did not waive his right to a jury trial for purposes of an exceptional sentence, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), see: State v. Trebilcock, 184 Wn.App. 619, 631-36 (2014), as he did not voluntarily relinquish a known right, State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576 (2007), see: State v. Ermels, 156 Wn.2d 528 (2006); I.

State v. Law, 154 Wn.2d 85, 104-08 (2005)

Conversion to community service is only available for offenders with sentences of one year or less and is limited to a maximum of 30 days, RCW 9.94A.680; volunteer work at Narcotics Anonymous, as opposed to attendance at NA meetings, is permissible as community service; 6-3.

State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 91-96 (2005)

A combination of guilty plea statements, complaint, minute orders and abstract of judgment are sufficient to prove prior convictions, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 479-80 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Adolph, 170 Wn.2d 556, 565-71 (2010), even if uncertified, State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021), but see: Pers. Restraint of Connick, 144 Wn.2d 442, 455 (2001); where state alleges that offender score is 5 and defendant challenges one of the priors, arguing that the score is 4, he has agreed to the other 4 priors and may not challenge them for the first time on appeal, see: State v. Hunter, 116 Wn.App. 300, 301 (2003), aff'd sub nom,. State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 220 (2004); II.

United States v. Booker, 160 L.Ed.2d 621 (2005)

Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004) applies to Federal Sentencing Guidelines, 18 USCS Appx, which are made effectively advisory; 5-4.

State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 296, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

Although Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004) does not require a jury to determine if prior convictions exist, the SRA's multiple offense policy requires, in addition to prior convictions, that the court find that the presumptive sentence is too lenient, that "there is some extraordinarily serious harm or culpability resulting from multiple offenses which would not otherwise be accounted for in determining the presumptive range," State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 428 (1987), and the court must find either (1) egregious effects of defendant's multiple offenses or (2) the level of defendant's culpability resulting from the multiple offenses, State v. Batista, 116 Wn.2d 777, 787-88 (1991); because these are factual issues, they must be submitted to a jury; a "free crimes" basis for an exceptional sentence, State v. Smith,123 Wn.2d 51, 56 (1993), must be submitted to a jury, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 945, 952-55 (2005), State v. Saltz, 137 Wn.App. 576 (2007), but see:: State v. Newlun, 142 Wn.App. 730 (2008), State v. Alvarado, 164 Wn.2d 556 (2008), State v. Smith, 7 Wn.App.2d 304 (2019), as it is a factual determination that allowing a current offense to go unpunished is clearly too lenient, overruling, in part, State v. Smith, supra.; Blakely violation can never be harmless, but see: Washington v. Recuenco, supra.; because former RCW 9.94A.535 does not authorize jury trials on aggravating factors, courts cannot create the process, State v. Davis, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), but see: State v. Pillatos, 159 Wn.2d 459 (2007), State v. Pleasant, 148 Wn.App. 408 (2009), see also: State v. Doney, 165 Wn.2d 400 (2008), Pers. Restraint of Hall, 163 Wn.2d 346 (2008), State v. Mann, 146 Wn.App. 349 (2008); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249 (2005)

Federal bank robbery, 18 USC § 2113, is not comparable to robbery 2° as the federal statute requires only general intent, state robbery requires specific intent; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Markel, 154 Wn.2d 262, 273-75 (2005)

Determination by trial court that offenses did not constitute same criminal conduct need not be submitted to a jury, distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), RCW 9.94A.525(5)(a), because a finding of same criminal conduct can only reduce the sentence range; 7-2.

State v. Jacobs, 154 Wn.2d 596 (2005)

Where jury returns special verdicts finding both that defendant manufactured methamphetamine while a juvenile was present, RCW 9.94A.605, and within 1000 feet of a school bus stop, RCW 69.50.435, the sentence enhancements, RCW 9.94A.533, must run concurrently, reversing, in part, State v. Jacobs, 121 Wn.App. 669 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Swecker, 154 Wn.2d 660 (2005)

Prior statute which required that multiple juvenile convictions sentenced on the same day counted as one point does not require that they be so counted pursuant to an amended statute, former RCW 9.94A.360(6)(a)(ii) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)] which requires that they be counted separately unless they are the same criminal conduct, distinguishing State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Canfield, 154 Wn.2d 698 (2005)

At a SSOSA revocation hearing, defendant has a limited right to allocution but denial of that right must be raised at the revocation hearing to preserve the issue for appeal, reversing State v. Canfield, 120 Wn.App. 729 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Curtis, 126 Wn.App. 459 (2005)

Trial court imposes exceptional sentence after defendant's allocution admitting abuse of trust; held: admission of defendant does not waive right to have aggravating factor submitted to jury, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), State v. Malicoat, 126 Wn.App. 612 (2005); 2-1, II.

State v. Zavala-Reynoso, 127 Wn.App. 119 (2005)

At sentencing, defense agrees with offender score, more than two years later defendant seeks motion to vacate, CrR 7.8; held: miscalculated offender score argument is subject to the one-year time limit and do not fall within CrR 7.8)b)(4) or –(5), thus motion was time barred; III.

State v. Evans, 154 Wn.2d 438, 443-49 (2005)

Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004) is not retroactive to cases final on direct review, United States v. Booker, 160 L.Ed.2d 621, 665 (2005), see: State v. Pillatos, 159 Wn.2d 459 (2007), State v. Doney, 165 Wn.2d 400 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 945, 952-55 (2005)

Rapid recidivism as an aggravating factor must be submitted to a jury, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), cf.: State v. Newlun, 142 Wn.App. 730 (2008), State v. Alvarado, 164 Wn.2d 556 (2008); II.

State v. Spencer, 128 Wn.App. 132, 143-45 (2005)

A judicial finding that a crime is domestic violence need not be submitted to a jury, State v. Felix, 125 Wn.App. 575 (2005), State v. Winston, 135 Wn.App. 400 (2006), even if the result would be that defendant was disqualified for a higher rate of early-release time; I.

State v. Titialii, 128 Wn.App. 173 (2005)

"Too lenient" finding based on the nature of the crime and defendant's perjury are aggravating factors that must be submitted to a jury, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 119 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), cf.: State v. Newlun, 142 Wn.App. 730 (2008), State v. Alvarado, 164 Wn.2d 556 (2008); II.

State v. Brown, 128 Wn.App. 307 (2005)

Defendant's Florida convictions which occurred when he was a juvenile but were prosecuted in adult court count as adult convictions even though Washington procedure is different, see: State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588, 596-97 (1998); III.

State v. Labarbera, 128 Wn.App. 343 (2005)

PSI and DISCIS printout are adequate to establish the existence of Washington prior convictions where challenged by defense, at 347-48, see: State v.Cross, 156 Wn.App. 568, 586-90 (2010), but see: State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913 (2009), State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300, 314-17 (2009), cf.: State v. Chandler, 158 Wn.App. 1, 5 (2010); to prove that an out-of-state conviction is comparable to a Washington felony where defendant does not challenge the history, state may introduce Washington judgments that used out-of-state convictions to calculate an offender score, at 349 ¶ 15, State v. Cabrera, 73 Wn.App. 165, 168-69 (1994); if defendant fails to object and state fails to prove comparability, appellate court remands for evidentiary hearing to allow proof, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 485 (1999), State v. Thiefault, 160 Wn.2d 409, 417 n.4 (2007), cf.: State v. Bertstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007); when defendant objects and state does not provide evidence of comparability, state is held to the existing record on remand and defendant is resentenced without including the out-of-state priors, State v. Ford, supra, at 485, but see: State v. Jones, 182 Wn.2d 1 (2014), RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008); where state presents information relating to comparibility and trial court fails to consider it on the record, appellate court will remand for resentencing for comparability analysis based on the information before the court at the original sentencing; II.

State v. Cassel, 128 Wn.App. 481 (2005)

Where defendant does not object to offender score calculation which includes out-of-state convictions and later appeals, remedy is to remand for state to provide certified copies of prior judgments or other comparable evidence and for court to compare elements with Washington felonies, State v. Wiley, 124 Wn.2d 679 (1994); II.

State v. Cubias, 155 Wn.2d 549 (2005)

Consecutive sentences for multiple firearm enhancements need not be submitted to a jury, State v. Kinney, 125 Wn.App. 778 (2005), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004); 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Cadwallader, 155 Wn.2d 867 (2005)

Defendant pleads guilty, not pursuant to a plea agreement, to an apparent third strike offense, does not object to priors, later files PRP alleging that one prior washed, Court of Appeals allows state to reopen and prove an out-of-state prior that was not previously included that would unwash the other prior; held: unless a defendant is convicted pursuant to a plea agreement, he has no obligation to disclose priors and no obligation to object to state's failure to include priors, as state has full burden, and state is not permitted to prove a prior on collateral review that it failed to allege at sentencing, see: State v. Harris, 148 Wn.App. 22 (2008); 6-3.

Sentence of Jones, 129 Wn.App. 626 (2005)

For felony sentences of less than a year, community custody may only be ordered for crimes specified in RCW 9.94A.545; III.

State v. Grayson, 130 Wn.App. 782 (2005)

Where court has authority to sentence to consecutive or concurrent terms, RCW 9.94A.589(3), it must do one or the other, not a hybrid, State v. Smith, 142 Wn.App. 122 (2007), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Green, 170 Wn.App. 328 (2012); I.

Washington v. Recuenco, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

Failure to submit a sentencing factor to the jury, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), like failure to submit an element to the jury, Neder v. United States, 144 L.Ed.2d 35 (1999), is not structural error and is thus subject to harmless error analysis, reversing, in part, State v. Recuenco, 154 Wn.2d 156 (2005), but see: Pers. Restraint of Hall, 163 Wn.2d 346 (2008), see also: State v. Recuenco, 163 Wn.2d 428 (2008); 5-4.

State v. Paulson, 131 Wn.App. 579, 588-91 (2006)

For sentences of less than a year where court lacks authority to impose community custody but can convert 30 days of confinement to community service, RCW 9.94A.680(2), court may allow up to two years to complete community service and may supervise it through court supervision; court may also supervise an animal cruelty prevention course where imposed on an animal cruelty conviction, RCW 16.52.200(6); II.

State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 16-23 (2006)

Determination of whether an out-of-state or federal conviction is comparable to a Washington crime need not be submitted to a jury, Pers. Restraint of Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249, 257 (2005), State v. Thomas, 135 Wn.App. 474 (2006), State v. Rudolph, 141 Wn.App. 59 (2007), but see: State v. Larkins, 147 Wn.App. 858 (2008), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004); where federal unlawful firearm possession statute, 18 USC § 922(g)(1), provides that one may not possess a firearm if convicted of a crime punishable by more than a year imprisonment and record does not disclose what prior crime sentencing court considered, then remedy is to remand for trial court to determine what prior felony conviction federal court used to convict; II.

State v. Knight, 134 Wn.App. 103, 106-09 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 162 Wn.2d 806 (2008)

Conspiracy to commit robbery 2º is treated the same as the completed crime, is a violent offense subject to the doubling provision, RCW 9.94A.525(4), 9.94A.030(48), see: State v. Becker, 59 Wn.App. 848, 850-52 (1990), State v. Ashley, 187 Wn.App. 908 (2015), aff'd, on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016); III.

Pers. Restraint of McCarthy, 134 Wn.App. 752, 760-63 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 161 Wn.2d 234 (2007)

Out-of-state prior sex offense that requires proof that victim was under the age of 14 years counts as a Washington child molestation 1º prior where trial court finds that the out-of-state victim was in fact under the age of 12 years; II.

Postsentence Review of Childers, 135 Wn.App. 37 (2006)

Residential burglary is not subject to community custody in spite of RCW 9.94A.501(2)(b)(E); DOC may seek review of a sentence directly in the Court of Appeals and need not file a motion in superior court; III.

State v. Thomas, 135 Wn.App. 474 (2006)

Where defendant has pleaded guilty to an out-of-state felony which on its face is not the equivalent of a Washington felony, sentencing judge should not consider the charging document or other court records to determine factual comparability, State v. Bunting, 115 Wn.App. 135 (2003), as there will be no evidence that the Washington element, missing from the out-of-state crime, was proved beyond a reasonable doubt, plus there was a lack of incentive for the defendant to defend against an allegation that does not affect the determination of guilt, Pers. Restraint of. Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249, 258 (2005), State v. Larkins, 147 Wn.App. 858 (2008), but see: State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 482-89 (2009); I.

State v. Acrey, 135 Wn.App. 938 (2006)

Defendant, convicted of theft for draining the retirement account of an elderly man, is ordered as a condition of sentence no to work as a caretaker for the elderly or disabled; held: sentencing court has authority to impose crime-related prohibitions, RCW 9.94A.505(8), even if not specifically authorized by some other provision of ch. 9.94A RCW; prohibition here was directly related to the crime; court is authorized to impose crime-related prohibitions even if no community custody is authorized or ordered, RCW 9A.94A.634(1), State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007); I.

State v. Jones, 159 Wn.2d 231 (2006)

A judge may determine if defendant was on community placement at the time of an offense in order to add a point to the offender score, RCW 9.94A.525(18)(2006), State v. Rudolph, 141 Wn.App. 59, 68-72 (2007), reversing State v. Jones, 126 Wn.App. 136 (2005); 7-2.

State v. Weber, 159 Wn.2d 252, 258-65 (2006)

Prior juvenile adjudication need not be submitted to a jury to count in offender score; 5-4.

State v. Lampley, 136 Wn.App. 836, 843-44 (2006)

Trial court may order a consecutive sentence to another crime previously sentenced, State v. Champion, 134 Wn.App. 483, 487-88 (2006), RCW 9.94A.589(3), State v. King, 149 Wn.App. 96 (2009), see also: State v. Elmore, 143 Wn.App. 185 (2008); II.

State v. Pillatos, 159 Wn.2d 459 (2007)

State may seek exceptional sentences against defendants for all sentencing proceedings held since 15 April 2005, RCW 9.94A.535, -537(2005), State v. Murawski, 142 Wn.App. 278 (2007), State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885, 903-07 (2010), see: State v. Doney, 165 Wn.2d 400 (2008), State v. McNeal, 142 Wn.App. 777, 789-93 (2008), State v. Mann, 146 Wn.App. 349 (2008), State v. Applegate, 147 Wn.App. 166 (2008), State v. Calhoun, 163 Wn.App. 153 (2011), but see: State v. Rowland, 160 Wn.2d 316 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 137 Wn.App. 119 (2007)

Where defendant commits new crimes pending sentencing and is sentenced on the earlier offenses, court has discretion to impose consecutive sentences on the newer offenses without an exceptional sentence, RCW 9.94A.589(3) (2007), State v. Shilling, 77 Wn.App. 166, 172-76 (1995), In re Caley, 56 Wn.App. 853, 858 (1990), Pers. Restraint of Long,117 Wn.2d 292, 302 (1991), State v. Linderman,54 Wn.App. 137, 139 (1989), State v. Kern, 55 Wn.App. 803 (1989), State v. Mathers, 77 Wn.App. 487, 494 (1995), State v. Champion, 134 Wn.App. 483 (2006), State v. King, 149 Wn.App. 96 (2009), see: State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754 (2010); II.

Postsentence Review of Leach, 161 Wn.2d 180 (2007)

Attempted assault 2º is not a crime against a person as it is not expressly listed in RCW 9.94A.411(2), and thus community custody is not authorized, RCW 9.94A.715, overruling Postsentence Review of Manier, 135 Wn.App. 33 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007)

Defense counsel and prosecutor agree on offender score, at sentencing defendant himself challenges some priors as same criminal conduct, sentencing court accepts counsel's calculation; held: while sentencing court could have declined to consider the pro se motion because defendant was represented by counsel, the court did consider and rule on it and therefore erred when it failed to hold an evidentiary hearing, as defense disputed material facts, Personal Restraint of Cadwallader, 155 Wn.2d 867, 874 (2005); because state reasonably relied upon defense counsel's agreement with state's offender score calculation, on remand state may offer additional evidence to support its calculation of offender score, State v. Cobos, 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014), see: RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008), distinguishing State v. Lopez, 147 Wn.2d 515 (2002), State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 480-82 (1999), see: State v. Jones, 182 Wn.2d 1 (2014), RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008); 5-4.

State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007)

Pursuant to plea bargain, defendant and state sign an "understanding of defendant's criminal history" setting forth priors, at sentencing defense challenges offender score, state seeks to vacate plea for defendant's breach, judge gives defendant a choice of being sentenced under what defendant believed was an improperly calculated offender score or vacation, defendant agrees to vacation of plea, goes to trial, is convicted of more offenses, appeals seeking specific performance; held: trial court cannot vacate a plea agreement without finding a manifest injustice, CrR 4.2(f), and without finding a breach, thus trial court abused its discretion; defendant cannot by way of a negotiated plea agree to a sentence in excess of that authorized by law, Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861, 872 (2002), cf.: State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), State v. Collins, 144 Wn.App. 547 (2008), but see: State v. Ross, 152 Wn.App. 220 (2004); when court wrongfully grants state's motion to vacate a plea, defendant can choose remedy which, here, is specific performance, State v. Tourtellotte, 88 Wn.2d 579, 584 (1977); prior opinion, State v. Malone, 136 Wn.App. 545 (2007), withdrawn; III.

State v. Hibdon, 140 Wn.App. 534 (2007)

Where statute requires community placement, RCW 9.94A.700(1)(b)(iv), and trial court does not impose it, case must be remanded for resentencing; where trial court sentences defendant to statutory maximum without imposing community placement, remand is necessary, although court is not obliged to deduct the period of community placement from the maximum sentence, as an option is to impose the statutory maximum with community placement consisting of earned release time, RCW 9.94A.728; III.

State v. Partee, 141 Wn.App. 355 (2007)

Where sentence is conditionally suspended under sex offender sentencing alternative (SSOSA), RCW 9.94A.670, upon proof of violation trial court has discretion to impose consecutive 60-day sanctions for each violation, RCW 9.94A.634, or revoke and execute original sentence, State v. Badger, 64 Wn.App. 904 (1992); 2-1, II.

State v. Kilgore, 141 Wn.App. 817 (2007), 167 Wn.2d 28 (2009)

At first appeal, State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, aff'd, 147 Wn.2d 288 (2002), two counts are reversed, state chooses not to retry those counts, trial court declines to resentence; held: because offender score was greater than 9 and thus standard range did not change following dismissal of the two reversed counts, defendant is not entitled to a resentencing and may not appeal, see: State v. Argo, 81 Wn.App. 552, 569 (1996); 2-1, II.

State v. Smith, 142 Wn.App. 122 (2007)

Trial court imposes one Drug Offender Sentencing Alternative sentence and one non-DOSA sentence in which the in-custody portions run concurrently but the community custody portion of the DOSA sentence runs consecutively to the non-DOSA sentence; held: hybrid sentences are not authorized by statute, State v. Grayson, 130 Wn.App. 782 (2005), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Green, 170 Wn.App. 328 (2012), Postsentence review of Hardy, 9 Wn.App.2d 44 (2019), but on remand trial court may impose a DOSA on any of the sentences; I.

Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 162 Wn.2d 814 (2008)

Defendant, on community custody, is arrested and in jail commits a crime, Department of Corrections imposes sanction; held: while community custody is statutorily tolled during incarceration, RCW 9.94A.625(3), DOC may still enforce community custody conditions during confinement and tolling; 6-3.

State v. Codiga, 162 Wn.2d 912 (2008)

At plea, defendant discloses two prior felonies, both prosecutor and defense counsel agree that one washed out but presentence report discloses misdemeanors which preclude washout, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: where plea form states that if any additional history is discovered the range may increase and where plea form asks defendant to disclose prior crimes and he fails to disclose entire history including misdemeanors, then defendant assumes the risk that additional crimes may be discovered and may not withdraw his plea, as it was not legal error that caused the increased offender score, but see: State v. Robertson, 172 Wn.2d 783 (2011); 9-0.

Irizarry v. United States, 171 L.Ed.2d 28 (2008)

Because federal sentencing guidelines are not mandatory, United States v. Booker, 160 L.Ed.2d 621 (2005), Gall v. United States, 169 L.Ed.2d 445 (2007), trial court need not give notice that it is considering departing from sentence range, overruling Burns v. United States, 115 L.Ed.2d 123 (1991); 5-4.

State v. Newlun, 142 Wn.App. 730 (2008)

Judge may impose exceptional sentence without a finding of fact by a jury where court finds defendant "has committed multiple current offenses and the defendant's high offender score results in some of the current offenses going unpunished," RCW 9.94A.535(2), because the aggravating factor is wholly based upon prior convictions, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 656-61 (2011), State v. Alvarado, 164 Wn.2d 556 (2008), State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 134 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 140 L.Ed.2d 530 (1998), Jones v. United States, 143 L.Ed.2d 311, 329-30 (1999); III.

State v. Booker, 143 Wn.App. 138, 143-47 (2008)

A judgment and sentence that is silent as to whether defendant was represented by counsel is not facially invalid and may be used to establish criminal history, Pers. Restraint of Williams, 111 Wn.2d 353, 368 (1988), but see: Burgett v. Texas, 19 L.Ed.2d 319 (1967), Carnley v. Cochran, 8 L.Ed.2d 70 (1962), State v. Marsh, 47 Wn.App. 219 (1987); I.

State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 332 (2008), affirmed, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009)

In child rape case, no contact order as to victim's former foster parents who (apparently) were not witnesses is valid as an offender's usual freedom of association may be restricted if reasonably necessary to protect the public order, State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 607 (2006); III.

State v. Moultrie, 143 Wn.App. 387, 396-400 (2008)

Following rape of developmentally disabled woman conviction, trial court orders no contact with "vulnerable, ill or disabled adults;" held: "vulnerable," "disabled" and "ill" are vague, remanded for trial court to clarify "vulnerable" and "disabled," strike "ill;" I.

State v. Berrier, 143 Wn.App. 547 (2008)

State may allege aggravating factors in a document separate from the information; II.

State v. Thompson, 143 Wn.App. 861, 865-68 (2008)

Plea statement on prior conviction shows incorrect maximum penalty, judgment and sentence is correct; held: while defendant's prior conviction may be unconstitutional, the determination cannot be made on the forms alone, thus defendant's only remedy is to seek post-conviction relief on the prior case, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175 (1986), State v. Bembry, 46 Wn.App. 288 (1986); II.

State v. Collins, 144 Wn.App. 547 (2008)

Defendant agrees to plead guilty to reduced charge, agrees that criminal history is accurate, before sentencing declares that he will challenge comparability of out-of-state convictions included in agreed criminal history, trial court vacates plea and reinstates original charge; held: where defendant affirmatively acknowledges that a foreign conviction is properly included in offender score, trial court need not require further proof of classification, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 483 n.5 (1999), State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 220 (2004), State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003); while one cannot waive a legal error in an offender score, cf.: State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007), here the waiver addresses a factual matter, i.e., proof of comparability as opposed to washed out priors, thus defendant breached and the court's decision to vacate was proper; I.

State v. O'Cain, 144 Wn.App. 772 (2008)

Community custody provision following rape conviction prohibited internet access; held: absent evidence that defendant accessed the internet before the rape or that the internet contributed to the crime, prohibiting internet access is not crime-related, RCW 9.94B.050(5)(e), internet access is not affirmative conduct reasonably related to the circumstances of the offense, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.App. 318, 330-31 (2014), thus RCW 9.94A.712(6)(a) (2006) [recodified as 9.94A.507 (2008)] is inapplicable; I.

State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62, 77-81 (2008)

Where jury specifically decides defendant is guilty of more than one mean of committing a crime, and one of the means has a higher seriousness level, sentence must be to the higher level, distinguishing State v. Thanh Dong Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644 (1995), State v. Maurice, 79 Wn.App. 544 (1995); III.

State v. Bryan, 145 Wn.App. 353 (2008)

Defendant is sentenced in one county with an offender score of 8, then pleads guilty in another county to two felonies, moves to modify sentence in first county on grounds that court erred in considering two misdemeanors, court agrees but counts the two new felonies, RCW 9.94A.589 (1)(a) (2002), leaving same offender score; held: no violation of equal protection or due process; I.

State v. Ashue, 145 Wn.App. 491 (2008)

A felony diversion agreement, whereby defendant waives speedy trial, jury trial and agrees that, if terminated, the matter will be submitted on police reports, while nonstatutory, is not a violation of the SRA, State v. Kessler, 75 Wn.App. 634, 636-41 (1994), State v. Marino, 100 Wn.2d 719, 723-27 (1984), nor is it prohibited by the deferred prosecution statute; III.

State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592 (2008)

At sentencing, state fails to provide independent proof of priors or provide a presentence report but does inform court of priors and its intent to use priors to enhance offender score, defense does not object but claims, on appeal, that there was no burden to object as there was nothing to object to; held: defendant had an opportunity to object or demand that state prove priors, thus remedy is remand for resentencing, state may present proof of prior convictions, at 601-02, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 485-86 (1999), see: State v. Jones, 182 Wn.2d 1 (2014), RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008); community placement condition that defendant not possess or consume drugs is mandatory unless waived, RCW 9.94A.700(4)(c) (2003) [recodified, effective

August 2009, as RCW 9.94B.050], which implies that court may order urinalysis to assure compliance, at 603-04; II.

State v. Harkness, 145 Wn.App. 678 (2008)

Two years after defendant is sentenced to prison, trial court amends sentence and imposes a drug offender sentencing alternative (DOSA), RCW 9.94A.660, defers to DOC to do an evaluation; held: an "examination report" is required before imposing a DOSA, court may not defer to DOC; court lacks authority to modify a prison sentence, State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83, 89 (1989), State v. Murray, 118 Wn.App. 518 (2003); I.

Postsentencing Review of Gutierrez, 146 Wn.App. 151 (2008)

Defendant is convicted of VUCSA, 12 to 24 month range, plus enhancement of 24 months, trial court imposes DOSA, orders 20 months in prison and 20 months community custody, DOC appeals, RCW 9.94A.585(7); held: 2006 amendment to DOSA statute, RCW 9.94A.660, do not require the entire 24-month enhancement to be served in confinement, State v. Mohamed, 187 Wn.App. 630 (2015); III.

State v. Hale, 146 Wn.App. 299 (2008)

Where jury finds aggravating circumstance and court imposes exceptional sentence, it must at least prepare conclusions of law, RCW 9.94A.535; jury finding may suffice as findings of fact, at 306 n.4, but see: State v. Friedlund, 182 Wn.2d 388 (2015), see also: State v. Bluehorse, 159 Wn.App. 410, 422-23 (2011); III.

State v. Gamble, 146 Wn.App. 813 (2008)

Courts have authority to enforce sentences with sentence modifications concurrent with DOC's statutory enforcement powers, RCW 9.94A.634(1), State v. Johnson, 54 Wn.App. 489 (1989), but see: State v. Bigsby, 189 Wn.2d 210 (2017).

State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556 (2008), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013)

Defendant may not contest a prior conviction for purposes of reducing offender score on grounds that the priors merged, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 188 (1986), or that the informations of the prior convictions showed merger, State v. Gimarelli, 105 Wn.App. 370, 375 (2001), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Butler, 24 Wn.App. 175 (1979), State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), as he may not collaterally attack a prior conviction; sentencing court must determine if priors are same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.525(5)(a)(i), State v. Reinhart, 77 Wn.App. 454, 459 (1995), State v. Lara, 66 Wn.App. 927, 931-32 (1992); III. overruled, on other grounds,

Oregon v. Ice, 172 L.Ed.2d 517 (2008)

Where state law permits a judge to impose consecutive sentences upon finding certain statutorily defined facts, United States Constitution does not require that those facts be found by a jury, , State v. Vance, 168 Wn.2d 754 (2010), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004) ; 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Tobin, 165 Wn.2d 172 (2008)

Current unranked fish and wildlife felonies count in offender score, RCW 9.94A.525; 9-0.

State v. Priest, 147 Wn.App. 662 (2008)

Where prior offense can be a misdemeanor or a felony depending upon an underlying charge (here, bail jumping), a judgment and sentence that refers to the conviction as a felony is sufficient to prove the prior by a preponderance; a federal prior that is certified by the National Archives and Records Administration rather than the clerk of a court is sufficient; name identity is sufficient absent defendant's denial under oath, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 190 (1986), State v. Powell, 172 Wn.App. 455, 459-61 (2012), but see: State v. Ceja Santos, 163 Wn.App. 780 (2011), *State v. Derri, 17 Wn.App.2d 376, rev. granted, 198 Wn.2d 1017 (2021), cf.: State v. Sapp, 181 Wn.App. 910 (2014), State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 70-71 (2014), an objection by counsel does not rebut identity absent sworn statement, *State v. Derri, supra.; certified copy of a probation revocation judgment plus an uncertified copy of a judgment and sentence under same cause number is sufficiently reliable evidence of the prior, State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 113, 122, 136 (2002), State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 480 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Adolph, 170 Wn.2d 556, 565-71 (2010), State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021),; where sentence range would be the same with or without a specific prior conviction, then any calculation error is harmless, State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 432-33 (2004), State v. Fleming, 140 Wn.App. 132, 138 (2007); III.

State v. Larkins, 147 Wn.App. 858 (2008)

Ohio burglary which rests on intent to commit a misdemeanor during a trespass is not comparable to Washington burglary, as a misdemeanor includes crimes other than those against a person or property which are elements of Washington burglary; sentencing court may not draw a factual inference from the records of the out-of-state conviction, records must establish in themselves, without any fact-finding or inference-drawing, that there was proof beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant entered the habitation with intent to commit a crime against a person or property; I.

State v. Harris, 148 Wn.App. 22 (2008)

Plea form states that prosecutor's statement of criminal history is attached and unless defendant has attached a diferent statement, it's agreed, but no history is attached, defendant challenges range on appeal; at sentencing, state offers Louisiana "package or bundle" with state seal on first page; held: defendant may contest history where he does not sign or otherwise stipulate to it, see: State v. Cadwallader, 155 Wn.2d 867, 875 (2005); documents that meet certification requirements of out-of-state jurisdiction satisfy certification requirement of RCW 5.44.010; if first page of a packet has a state seal affixed, then entire packet is sealed for purposes of certification requirement; II.

State v. Johnson, 148 Wn.App. 33 (2008)

When court receives notice that offender has completed all of the requirements of sentence and determines that the conditions are met, it must issue a certificate of discharge, RCW 9.94A.637(1), effective the date the court received notice that the terms of the sentence were satisfied, see also: State v. Porter, 188 Wn.App. 735 (2015); I.

State v. Draxinger, 148 Wn.App. 533 (2008)

Prior DUI convictions can be used both to enhance a new DUI to a felony, RCW 46.61.5055(4) (2008), and as part of the offender score; II.

State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913 (2009)

At sentencing, prosecutor offers a recitation of what state believed was defendant's criminal history, does not offer certified copies of judgments and sentences, defense counsel does not object, court imposes standard range sentence based upon prosecutor's calculation of offender score; held: a mere failure to object to offender score and prior convictions does not acknowledge the score or waive a challenge to the score, State v. Lucero, 168 Wn.2d 785 (2010), State v. Weaver, 171 Wn.2d 256 (2011), State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018), failure of prosecutor to offer judgments and sentences to prove criminal history failed to prove history by a preponderance, State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300, 314-17 (2009); because defense did not object, on remand state may introduce certified copies of judgments and sentences; unless defendant affirmatively acknowledge the history, state must provide evidence of the history, "generally a certified copy of the judgment and sentence, ¶ 32, see: State v. Hunley, 165 Wn.2d 901 (2012); affirms State v. Mendoza, 139 Wn.App. 693 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Knippling, 166 Wn.2d 93 (2009)

POAA defendant maintains that he was a juvenile at the time he was convicted of a predicate conviction, state offers no evidence that juvenile court declined, trial court rejects the prior; held: a waiver of any right under the Juvenile Justice Act of 1977, ch. 13.40 RCW, must be an express waiver which state must show from the record, or show a decline order, cf.: State v. Saenz, 156 Wn.App. 866, 876-79 (2010), State v. Bailey, 179 Wn.App. 433 (2014), State v. Reynolds, 21 Wn.App.2d 179, rev. granted, 200 Wn.2d 1007 (2022); defense has no burden to collaterally attack a prior conviction as it is the present use of a prior conviction, State v. Carpenter, 117 Wn.App. 673, 678 (2003), but see: State v. Inocencio, 187 Wn.App. 765 (2015); affirms State v. Knippling, 141 Wn.App. 50 (2007); 8-0.

Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664 (2009)

When a defendant is sentenced to confinement and community custody that has the potential to exceed the maximum for the crime, remedy is to remand to amend the sentence to state that the combination of confinement and community custody shall not exceed the maximum, State v. Sloan, 121 Wn.App. 220, 222 (2004), State v. Linerud, 147 Wn.App. 944, 948 (2008), see: State v. Zavala-Reynoso, 127 Wn.App. 119, 121 (2005), State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556, 566 (2008), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013), State v. Winkle, 159 Wn.App. 323 (2011), State v. Franklin, 171 Wn.2d 831 (2011), cf.: State v. Winborne, 167 Wn.App. 320 (2012), RCW 9.94A.701(9) (2010), but see: State v. Boyd, 174 Wn.2d 470 (2012); 9-0.

State v. McCormick, 166 Wn.2d 689 (2009)

Trial court revokes SSOSA sentence for defendant's frequenting areas where minors are known to congregate, fails to find willfulness; held: in a SSOSA revocation, trial court need not find willfulness, State v. Miller, 180 Wn.App. 413 (2014); affirms State v. McCormick, 141 Wn.App. 256 (2007); 8-1.

State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 482-89 (2009)

Where out-of-state conviction is not legally comparable to a Washington offense, state may prove factual comparability with certified copies of foreign charging documents and evidence that defendant pleaded guilty if the law of the foreign state provided that such a plea constituted an admission of the facts alleged in the charging documents, see: State v. Beals, 100 Wn.App. 189, 195-97 (2000), cf.: State v. Thomas, 135 Wn.App. 474 (2006); I.

State v. King, 149 Wn.App. 96 (2009)

Immediately after court convicts defendant of drug offenses, defendant threatens detective, is charged and convicted later of witness intimidation, court imposes sentence on drug offenses and later orders standard range consecutive sentence for intimidating a witness; held: while court must, absent an exceptional sentence, impose concurrent sentences on two or more current offenses, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), the sentences here were not current offenses and thus court had discretion to impose consecutive sentences without finding aggravating factor, which does not violate equal protection clause; III.

State v. Monson, 149 Wn.App. 765 (2009)

Where statute provides "count one point for prior convictions of vehicle prowling 2, and three points for ealch adult and juvenile prior theft 1," RCW 9.94A.525(20) (2008), a prior juvenile conviction for vehicle prowling counts as a point; I.

State v. Johnson, 150 Wn.App. 663, 676-79 (2009)

A conviction is a valid prior in Washington if it is valid under the U.S. constitution and the constitution of the jurisdiction in which it was obtained; an Oregon conviction counts as a strike even though Oregon does not require a unanimous jury; I.

Pers. Restraint of Crawford, 150 Wn.App. 787 (2009)

Kentucky sexual abuse 1º which does not require proof that defendant was not married to the 7 year old victim and that defendant was at least 36 months older than victim is not comparable to child molestation 1º; 2-1, II.

State v. Jones, 172 Wn.2d 236 (2011)

Defendant is sentenced to 130 months plus 36 months community custody, following remand sentence is 51 months plus community custody with credit for 81 months served, trial court declines to give credit for incarceration time to community custody; held: defendant is not entitled to credit for prison time served against community custody, as community custody only means time served out of prison, overruling Pers. Restraint of Knippling, 144 Wn.App. 639 (2008); affirms State v. Jones, 151 Wn.App. 186 (2009); 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Rainey, 168 Wn.2d 367 (2010)

Defendant is convicted of kidnapping 1° of his 3-year old daughter and harrassing his estranged wife, sentencing court imposes lifetime no contact order with each; held: crime-related prohibition, including a no contact order, may be imposed for the maximum of the crime irrespective of the period of community custody, State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106, 118-20 (2007), need not be decided by a jury; while a no contact order of some duration was appropriate as reasonably necessary to protect daughter from further victimization, court provided no reason for the duration, thus remanded for court to address parameters of the order under the "reasonably necessary" standard, State v. Howard, 182 Wn.App. 91, 100-03 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Lucero, 168 Wn.2d 785 (2010)

Defendant acknowledges offender score, which includes an out-of-state conviction, trial court does not conduct comparability analysis; held: defendant's acknowledgement of state's offender score calculation is not an affirmative acknowlegment that the out-of-state conviction is comparable to a Washington crime, State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913, 929 (2009), reversing State v. Lucero, 140 Wn.App. 782 (2007), remanded, 166 Wn.2d 1014 (2009), reaffirmed, 152 Wn.App. 287 (2009), State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Steen, 155 Wn.App. 243 (2010)

Indecent exposure to a person 14 years and older, RCW 9A.88.010(2)(a), with prior sex offenses is an unranked class C felony, thus maximum penalty is one year in jail, RCW 9.94A.505(2)(b); II.

State v. Langstead, 155 Wn.App. 448 (2010)

State need not prove prior convictions to a jury for purposes of POAA, RCW 9.94A.570, where the prior is not an element of the substantive crime; where judgment and sentence is valid on its face, an invalid plea document is not to be considered, State v. Johnson, 150 Wn.App. 663, 678 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Hemenway, 147 Wn.2d 529, 532-33 (2002); I.

State v. Cross, 156 Wn.App. 568, 586-90 (2010)

An uncertified DISCIS printout is sufficiently reliable to prove misdemeanor convictions defeating a claim that a prior felony washed out, State v. Labarbera, 128 Wn.App. 343 (2005), State v. Jones, 159 2231 (2007); 2-1, II.

State v. Dockens, 156 Wn.App. 793 (2010)

Pretrial release on condition of a curfew and requirement to report to a monitoring office weekdays but that is not electronically monitored, RCW 9.94A.030(28) (2010), is not partial confinement entitling defendant to credit against his sentence, State v. Vasquez, 75 Wn.App. 896 (1994), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 297-300 (2016), distinguishing State v. Speaks, 119 Wn.2d 204 (1992), State v. Alejandro Medina, 180 Wn.2d 282 (2014), see: RCW 10.21.030(5); II.

State v. Chandler, 158 Wn.App. 1 (2010)

To prove prior convictions with documents other than judgment and sentences, state must show that a certified copy of the judgment is unavailable for some reason other than the serious fault of the proponent, State v. Lopez, 147 Wn.2d 515, 519 (2002), but see: Pers. Restraint of Adolph, 170 Wn.2d 556, 565-71 (2010), and then must establish that the comparable evidence bears "some minimal indicium of reliability beyond mere allegation," State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913, 920 (2009); here, state's explanation that it requested all court documents could lead a trial court to reasonably infer that the other courts no longer possessed the judg ment and sentence; II.

State v. McChristian, 158 Wn.App. 392, 401-07 (2010)

To impose a mandatory minimum for assault 1°, judge, not a jury, must find that defendant intended to kill or used force or means likely to result in death, RCW 9.94A.540(1)(b) (2005), State v. Clarke, 156 Wn.2d 880, 884 (2006), as minimum did not exceed maximum, distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), court must enter findings of fact; where information alleges facts sufficient to support a mandatory minimum, there is sufficient notice to defendant that he may be subject to mandatory minimum; an accomplice may be subject to a mandatory minimum for assault 1°; II.

State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 834 (2011)

Defendant pleads guilty to felony DUI, plea agreement states no community custody, trial court does not impose community custody, DOC notifies court that community custody is mandatory, at resentencing defendant is offered option of withdrawal of plea or specific performance, defendant chooses the latter, trial court imposes same sentence with community custody, defendant argues on appeal that he is entitled to the original agreed sentence in spite of the statute; held: where a plea agreement contains a mutual mistake, only remedy available to defendant is withdrawal of plea, not specific performance of a sentence unpermitted by statute, abrogating State v. Miller, 152 Wn.2d 223 (1988), effectively overruling Personal Restraint of Hoisington, 99 Wn.App. 423 (2010), Personal Restraint of Fonseca, 132 Wn.App. 464 (2006), Personal Restraint of Hudgens, 156 Wn.App. 411 (2010); affirms State v. Barber, 152 Wn.App. 223 (2009); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Adolph, 170 Wn.2d 556 (2010)

While best method of proving a prior conviction is a certified copy of judgment and sentence, other documents or transcripts of prior proceedings are admissible, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 480 (1999), State v. Vickers, 148 Wn.2d 91, 120-21 (2002), State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021), overruling, in part, State v. Lopez, 147 Wn.2d 515, 519 (2002); a conviction is not a writing and thus best evidence rule, ER 1001-02, does not apply; 8-1.

State v. Wilson, 170 Wn.2d 682 (2010)

To count in an offender score, an anticipatory offense must actually have been a felony, RCW 9.94A.525(4); an erroneously scored prior conviction is a legal error requiring resentencing, defendant cannot waive any challenge by accepting a plea agreement, Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861, 874 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Franklin, 172 Wn.2d 831 (2011)

RCW 9.94A.701 (2009) which retroactively directs Department of Corrections to reduce community custody length does not entitle defendant to a new sentencing hearing, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664 (2009), State v. Winborne, 167 Wn.App. 320 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 158 Wn.App. 501 (2010)

An offender may have a felony conviction vacated, RCW 9.94A.640(2)(d), even if subsequently convicted of a misdemeanor if that misdemeanor was vacated because there was no subsequent conviction as legislature intended to prohibit all adverse consequences of a vacated misdemeanor, RCW 9.96A.060(3), State v. Sleater, 200 Wn.App, 638 (2017), except for use in a subsequent criminal conviction; I.

State v. Acevedo, 159 Wn.App. 221, 231-34 (2010)

When sentenced to a first time offender waiver, RCW 9.94A.650 (2006), court can order as conditions of community custody that defendant maintain employment, former RCW 9.94A.650(2), 9.94A.700(4)(b), not associate with persons on probation or parole, former RCW 9.94A.700(5)(b), not possess drugs, former RCW 9.94A. 700(5)(d), not consume alcohol in excess, participate in drug treatment, take polygraph to monitor compliance, State v. Combs, 102 Wn.App. 949, 952 (2000), former RCW 9.94A.715(2), but may not order him not to possess deadly weapons other than firearms; III.

State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 256-57 (2011)

Court-martial conviction counts in offender score if comparable, State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588 (1998), State v. Aronson, 82 Wn.App. 762 (1996), see: State v. Duke, 77 Wn.App. 532 (1995); II.

State v. Winkle, 1569 Wn.App. 323 (2011)

For sex offense, sentence of statutory maximum plus community custody for the period of earned early release not to exceed the maximum is proper, RCW 9;.94A.701(8) (2008), Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664 (2009), see: State v. LaBounty, 17 Wn.App.2d 576 (2021), cf.: State v. Winborne, 167 Wn.App. 320 (2012); I.

State v. Smith, 159 Wn.App. 694 (2011)

Defendants are sentenced to partial confinement, RCW 9.94A.505, county eliminates its partial confinement programs, court modifies sentences to low end of range so that they are released, state appeals; held: after sentencing, the court's power to modify the sentence, CrR 7.8(b)(5), is limited to "extraordinary circumstances [that] relate to fundamental, substantial irregularities in the court's proceedings or to irregularities extraneous to the court's action," State v. Olivera-Avila, 89 Wn.App. 313, 319 (1997), Postsentence Review of Wandell, 175 Wn.App. 447 (2013), see: State v. Shove, 113 Wn.2d 83 (1989), State v. Dana, 59 Wn.App. 667 (1990), State v. Murray, 118 Wn.App. 518 (2003); here, defunding partial confinement programs was unforeseeable and unanticipated when defendants were sentenced, thus court properly exercised discretion; III.

State v. Davis, 160 Wn.App. 471 (2011)

Defendant is sentenced to prison-based DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660 (2002), encompassing 55 months confinement and 55 months community custody, serves the 55 months in prison, during community custody DOC administratively revokes, defendant demands credit for community custody time served against the remainder of his prison sentence; held: defendant is entitled to credit for time served while on DOSA community custody, see also: Postsentence Review of Bercier, 178 Wn.App. 148 (2013); II.

State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 85-86 (2011)

An out-of-state conviction that has comparable elements to a Washington crime counts in offender score even if the other state classifies it as a misdemeanor, RCW 9.94A.525(3); 2-1, II.

State v. King, 162 Wn.App. 234 (2011)

Adding a point where a defendant is on community custody when new felony is committed, RCW 9.94A.525(19) (2011), only applies to Washington community custody, RCW 9.94B.020(2) (2008), and not to out-of-state post-custodial supervision; where defendant pleads guilty to two counts with identical standard ranges which must run concurrently, is sentenced within standard range, appeals correctly claiming that offender score was in error which only impacts standard range on one count, thus standard range remains the same even though it is less on one count, he may withdraw plea to both counts, State v. Mendoza, 157 Wn.2d 582, 589-91 (2006), State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 518-20 (2006), State v. Turley, 149 Wn.2d 395, 400-01 (2003), harmless error analysis is "eschewed;" III.

State v. Calhoun, 163 Wn.App. 153 (2011)

Prior to resentencing after remand, legislature amends RCW 9.94A.525(21) and .530 (2008) to allow the state to introduce additional evidence regarding criminal history not previously presented, state offers additional prior convictions and additional evidence to support comparability of out-of-state convictions; held: savings statute, RCW 10.01.040 (1901), requires that defendants be prosecuted under the law in effect at the time, State v. Kane, 101 Wn.App. 607, 610 (2000), which applies only to substantive law changes, State v. Pillatos, 159 Wn.2d 459, 472 (2007); legislature had authority to amend SRA to require trial courts to impose sentences based on defendant's actual history even if not fully known at original sentencing; II.

State v. Bribiesca Guerrero, 163 Wn.App. 773 (2011)

Trial court is not obliged to order a chemical dependency screening for a defendant convicted of a drug offense who is eligible for a drug offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.500(1), 9.94A.660; III.

State v. Mahone, 164 Wn.App. 146 (2011)

Defendant is sentenced to community custody on two cases, violates terms, is sentenced to consecutive terms; held: community custody on multiple sentences must run consecutively, RCW 9.94A.589(2)(a), violations are limited to sixty days for each violation, RCW 9.94A.200 (1994), 9.94B.040(1), -(3)(c) (2002), thus court may only impose terms for violation on the current community custody, see also: State v. Hughes, 70 Wn.App. 142 (1993); II.

State v. Irish, 173 Wn.2d 787 (2012)

At sentencing, defendant claims that state did not prove validity of a guilty plea of a prior conviction, trial court disregards defendant's claim, Court of Appeals reverses in unpublished opinion; held: state need not prove constitutional validity of a prior conviction used to calculate a defendant's offender score on a current conviction, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 187-88 (1986); to challenge validity of prior, defendant must file PRP; per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012)

Defendant may challenge the inclusion of a prior conviction considered by the sentencing court beyond the one year collateral attack period, RCW 10.73.090(1), as the invalidity of a judgment and sentence "on its face" is not limited to the four corners of the judgment and sentence, Pers. Restraint of Coats, 173 Wn.2d 123, 138 (2011), see: Pers. Restraint of Toledo-Sotelo, 176 Wn.2d 759 (2013); in determining whether a judgment and sentence is valid on its face, the court may consider documents that bear on the trial court's authority to impose a valid judgment and sentence, including, but not limited to, charging documents, verdicts, plea statements and, here, an order of dismissal following completion of probation, former RCW 9.95.240; a vacated conviction cannot be used as criminal history, distinguishing State v. Braithwaite, 92 Wn.2d 624 (1979), disavowing State v. Moore, 75 Wn.App. 166 (1994), State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154 (1986), but see: State v. Haggard, 195 Wn.2d 544 (2020), State v. Fletcher, 19 Wn.App. 566 (2021), State v. Conaway, 199 Wn.2d 742 (2022); 6-3.

State v. Boyd, 174 Wn.2d 470 (2012)

Where confinement and community custody exceed maximum sentence, court must reduce the term of community custody so that the total does not exceed the maximum, RCW 9.94A.701(9) (2010), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664 (2009), State v. Franklin, 172 Wn.2d 831, 839 (2011); per curiam.

State v. Hunley, 175 Wn.2d 901 (2012)

State offers list of prior convictions, defense neither acknowledges nor objects, court determines offender score based upon state's list; held: due process clause places burden on state to prove prior convictions by a preponderance, state's "bare assertions, unsupported by evidence" are insufficient, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 479-82 (1999), State v. Cate, 194 Wn.2d 909 (2019); 2008 amendments to RCW 9.94A.500 and .530 which state that a criminal history summary is prima facie evidence of prior convictions and defendant's failure to object constitutes acknowledgement is unconstitutional as applied where criminal history is an unsworn list of crimes; remedy where there is no objection is remand allowing state to present evidence of priors, State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913, 930 (2009), State v. Hayes, 165 Wn.App. 507, 522-24 (2011); affirms State v. Hunley, 161 Wn.App. 919 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 70-78 (2012)

California robbery statute which defines the crime, in part, as a "felonious taking" is the equivalent of "intent to commit a crime" in Washington, State v. Nieblas-Duarte, 55 Wn.App. 376, 381 (1989), State v. Smith, 31 Wash. 245, 248 (1903); 9-0.

State v. Cooper, 164 Wn.App. 407 (2011), 176 Wn.2d 678 (2013)

A guilty plea counts as a conviction even if the out-of-state jurisdiction (Texas) defers adjudication, as a guilty plea is defined as a conviction, RCW 9.94A.030(9) (2011); II, 9-0.

State v. Crawford, 164 Wn.App. 617 (2011)

Sentencing court cannot add a point to offender score for committing a crime while "under community custody," RCW 9.94A.525(19) (2008) where the crime is committed while defendant is in jail as community custody is tolled during confinement, RCW 9.94A.625(3) (2008); I.

State v. Duncalf, 164 Wn.App. 900 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 177 Wn.2d 289 (2013)

For purposes of the aggravating factor that the injury substantially exceeded the level of bodily harm necessary to satisfy substantial bodily harm, failure to define "substantially exceed" is "merely definitional," State v. Gordon, 172 Wn.2d 671, 677-80 (2011), and not an element, but see: Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013), State v. Allen 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018), and thus cannot be challenged for the first time on appeal; I.

State v. Griffin, 173 Wn.2d 467 (2012)

At a fact finding hearing to determine the existence of an aggravating factor, evidence rules apply, ER 1101(c)(3) only applies to the sentencing itself; 9-0.

State v. Reyes-Brooks, 165 Wn.App. 193, 202-06, remanded, 175 Wn.2d 1020, affirmed, by unpublished decision, 171 Wn.App. 1028) (2012),

Where appellate court reverses for failure of trial court to properly instruct as to unanimity regarding a firearm enhancement, State v. Bashaw, 169 Wn.2d 133, 147 (2010), , overruled, State v. Guzman Nuñez, 174 Wn.2d 707 (2012), remedy is to remand to allow empanelment of a jury "to consider the aggravating factor with proper instructions," at 202 [Division I appears to equate an enhancement with an aggravating factor]; 2-1.

State v. Breaux, 167 Wn.App. 166 (2012)

Where defendant is convicted of two or more serious violent offenses, RCW 9.94A.030(44) (2012), with the same seriousness level but different standard ranges, the offender score for the offense carrying the lesser range is calculated at zero, as RCW 9.94A.589(1)(b) (2002) is ambiguous thus rule of lenity necessitates an interpretation in favor of defendant, State v. Weatherwax, 188 Wn.2d 139 (2017); I.

State v. Winborne, 167 Wn.App. 320 (2012)

To ensure that a sentence of confinement plus community custody does not exceed the maximum sentence, sentencing court must impose the term of confinement, the term of community custody, then reduce the term of community custody if necessary, RCW 9.94A.701(9) (2010), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664, 675 (2009), State v. Franklin, 172 Wn.2d 831 (2011), State v. Winkle, 158 Wn.App. 323 (2011); III.

State v. Heath, 168 Wn.App. 894 (2012)

Florida nolo contendere plea followed by withheld adjudication meets Washington's statutory definition of a conviction, State v. Horton, 195 Wn.App. 202, 217-22 (2016); I.

Pers. Restraint of Toledo-Sotelo, 176 Wn.2d 759 (2013)

Seriousness level in plea is incorrect but court finds correct standard range, defendant files untimely PRP; held: while a judgment and sentence containing incorrect range or seriousness level may make the judgment facially invalid, Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861 (2002), where defendant cannot show both facial invalidity and prejudice, Pers.

Restraint of Coats, 173 Wn.2d 123, 13 (2011), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 77-80 (2015), an untimely PRP shall be dismissed; because standard range was correct, judgment and sentence was valid on its face; 9-0.

State v. Duncalf*,* 177 Wn.2d 289 (2013)

For the same incident defendant is charged with assault 1° (great bodily harm) and alternatively assault 2° (substantial bodily harm) and, with respect to the latter, an aggravating factor that the injury substantially exceeded the level of bodily harm necessary to satisfy substantial bodily harm, defense does not ask for a definition of "substantially exceed," jury acquits of assault 1°, convicts of assault 2° and finds the aggravator; held: while the "substantially exceeds" aggravator cannot apply to assault 1°, State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117 (2010), these verdicts can be reconciled because the mens rea elements differ (assault 1°: intent to inflict great bodily harm; assault 2°: the assault itself must be intended but not the resulting bodily harm); failure to define "substantially exceed" is "merely definitional," State v. Gordon, 172 Wn.2d 671, 677-80 (2011) and not an element and thus cannot be challenged for the first time on appeal, but see: Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013), State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018); affirms State v. Duncalf, 164 Wn.App. 900 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Lowe*,* 173 Wn.App. 390 (2013)

Sentencing court includes in offender score a juvenile conviction where juvenile court had dismissed a deferred disposition because prosecutor neglected to seek revocation prior to the end the deferral period but juvenile court did not vacate the disposition as respondent had not fully complied; held: juvenile court is not required to vacate a conviction at the conclusion of a deferred disposition where motion to revoke has been untimely; juvenile court lacks authority to vacate a conviction unless it affirmatively finds full compliance with the conditions, RCW 13.40.127 (2009), State v. D.P.G., 169 Wn.App. 396, 400-01 (2012); I.

State v. Warnock*,* 174 Wn.App. 608 (2013)

Evidence at assault 2° trial establishes defendant had been drinking alcohol, court orders as condition of community custody that defendant obtain a chemical dependency evaluation; held: absent evidence and a finding that chemical dependency contributed to the crime, court lacks authority to impose the condition, RCW 9.94A.607(1), State v. Jones, 118 Wn.App. 199, 207 (2003), see: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 786 (2014); Division I concludes that there is a distinction between chemical dependency and alcohol abuse.

State v. Williams*,* 176 Wn.App. 138 (2013), 181 Wn.2d 795 (2014)

To determine whether or not two prior offenses are the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.525(5)(a)(i) (2013), sentencing court must apply the same criminal conduct test, State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556, 563 (2008), and cannot apply the burglary anti-merger statute, RCW 9A.52.050 (1975), which only applies to current offenses, see: State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 779-82 (1992); 2-1, III.

State v. Alejandro Medina*,* 180 Wn.2d 282 (2014)

A pretrial condition of release that a murder defendant report to a non-residential day reporting program (King County CCAP enhanced) does not entitle defendant to credit for time served in that program, former RCW 9.94A.030(26) (1991), nor does equal protection clause mandate credit, cf. RCW 9.94A.680 (2009) authorizing courts to grant credit for nonviolent offenders, see also: State v. Speaks, 119 Wn.2d 204 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Jordan, 180 Wn.2d 456 (2014)

Texas manslaughter prior counts in offender score regardless of the fact that here are differences between self-defense in Texas and Washington, neither SRA nor due process require comparability of defenses; affirms State v. Jordan, 158 Wn.App. 297 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Olsen, 180 Wn.2d 468 (2014)

Where the elements of a foreign offense are broader than a Washington offense precluding legal comparability, the court may determine if the offense is factually comparable, i.e., whether the conduct underlying the foreign offense would have violated the "comparable Washington statute," State v. Thiefault, 160 Wn.2d 409, 415 (2007), State v. Arndt, 179 Wn.App. 373, 380-82 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Canha, 189 Wn.2d 359 (2017), State v. Howard, 15 Wn.App.2d 725 (2020); here, defendant pleaded no contest to a California crime that is not legally comparable to a Washington felony, no contest in California means defendant admits guilt to all elements, conduct to which defendant admitted in his no contest plea would have satisfied the conduct necessary to be convicted in Washington distinguishing Descamps v. United States, 570 U.S. 254, 186 L.Ed.2d 438 (2013); affirms State v. Olsen, 175 Wn.App. 269 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Soto, 177 Wn.App. 706 (2013)

Firearm enhancement, RCW 9.94A.533(3) (2013), does not apply to an unranked felony, RCW 9.94A.505(2)(b) (2010), State v. Vazquez, 200 Wn.App. 220, 225-30 (2017); III.

Postsentence Review of Bercier, 178 Wn.App. 148 (2013)

Defendant is statutorily entitled to credit for community custody time following revoked residential DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660(7)(d) (2009), see also: State v. Davis, , 160 Wn.App. 471 (2011); III.

State v. Miller, 178 Wn.App. 381 (2013)

Defendant, convicted of child molestation, is sentenced to SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670 (2009), ordered to enter sexual deviancy treatment within 90 days, fails to comply because he cannot afford treatment, is homeless and unemployable, court revokes; held: revocation of probation for inability to pay money, as opposed to a willful refusal to pay or make bona fide efforts to find the resources, may violate due process, Bearden v. Georgia, 461 U.S. 660, 662, 78 L.Ed.2d 221 (1983), where public safety is at risk and the court determines that there are no adequate alternative measures, court can revoke SSOSA, State v. McCormick, 166 Wn.2d 689 (2009); I.

State v . Cobos, 178 Wn.App. 692 (2013), 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014)

Defendant moves to represent himself at sentencing, before court approves defense counsel agrees to offender score of 9, at sentencing defendant objections to offender score, court offers continuance for state to prove priors, defendant declines, court accepts counsel's agreement; held: counsel's agreement while defendant's motion to represent himself was improper, Haller v. Wallis, 89 Wn.2d 539, 547 (1978), as an attorney can waive substantive rights only with specific authorization, State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919, 922 (1995), Graves v. P.J. Taggares Co., 94 Wn.2d 298, 303 (1980), State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 553, 556-57 (1983); sentencing judge was obliged to conduct an evidentiary hearing where defendant objects to offender score even if counsel agreed, State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007), state may offer evidence at remanded sentencing, RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008), legislative overruling State v. Lopez, 147 Wn.2d 515 (2002); Supreme Court's invalidating other sections of 2008 statute do not impact this on, Monge v. California, 524 U.S. 721, 141 L.Ed.2d 615 (1998); III.

State v. Arndt, 179 Wn.App. 373 (2014)

For purposes of offender score, Oregon attempt statute which is defined as "intentionally engages in conduct which constitutes a substantial step toward commission of the crime," ORS § 161.404(1), is not legally comparable to Washington's attempt statute which requires "intent to commit a specific crime," RCW 9A.28.020(1), but where defendant admitted in Oregon plea that he attempted to cause serious physical injury meets the factual requirement of specifically intending to commit the crime of assault, at 382-83; Oregon assault 2° defines "serious physical injury" to include "serious … impairment of health," ORS § 163.175(1)(a), which is broader than Washington's definition of "substantial bodily harm, RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b), which does not include impairment of health, at 383-85; Oregon's DUI statute, former ORS § 813.010(1)(b) (1994), prohibits driving when one has consumed enough to adversely affect mental or physical faculties to some noticeable or perceptible degree while Washington's DUI statute focuses on a person's ability to drive, RCW 46/61/502(1), thus the two are not legally comparable, at 385-87; Oregon's rape 3°, ORS § 163.355, is not legally comparable to Washington's rape 3°, RCW 9A.44.079, because Washington includes the element that the victim and defendant are not married and that the defendant is at least 48 months older than victim, at 388-89; II.

State v. Hender, 180 Wn.App. 895 (2014)

Trial court's refusal to grant a DOSA sentence, RCW 9.94A.660 (2009), because defendant denied accountability is a proper exercise of discretion, State v. Jones, 171 Wn.App. 52, 55-56 (2012), State v. Barton, 121 Wn.App. 792 (2004), distinguishing State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333 (2005); III.

Postsentence Review of Cage, 181 Wn.App. 588 (2014)

After sentencing for a felony judge loses jurisdiction and cannot grant a furlough, State v. Hale, 94 Wn.App. 46 (1999), January v. Porter, 75 Wn.2d 768, 773-74 (1969), see: State v. Law, 110 Wn.App. 36, 40 (2002); III.

State v. Webb, 183 Wn.App. 242, 247-52 (2014)

1982 assault 2º conviction is not a valid point: prior to 1986 injury element was "substantial bodily harm," current version, RCW 9A.36.020(1)(b), requires grievous bodily harm which is broader, thus not legally comparable, only facts in the record from 1982 conviction were in the information which is insufficient, State v. Failey, 165 Wn.2d 673, 677 (2009), State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588, 605-06 (1998); 1992 assault 2º conviction is invalid on its face as statute charged was repealed at the time of the offense, court may look at statutory history, Pers. Restraint of Thompson, 141 Wn.2d 712, 719 (2000); II.

State v. Jones, 182 Wn.2d 1 (2014)

RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008), which permits both parties to present additional relevant evidence of criminal history at resentencing following remand from appeal or collateral attack, regardless of whether or not the state offered sufficient evidence at the initial sentencing meets due process requirements, State v. Cobos, 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014), thus State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999) is, in part, legislatively overruled; 9-0.

State v. Bruch, 182 Wn.2d 854 (2015)

To avoid a sentence that exceeds the maximum, court may impose a standard range sentence plus community custody of at least x months plus all accrued earned early release time, which does not create an indeterminate sentence, Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664, 668 (2009), State v. Winkle, 159 Wn.App. 323 (2001), State v. LaBounty, 17 Wn.App.2d 576 (2021), distinguishing State v. Boyd, 174 Wn.2d 470 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Jones, 183 Wn.2d 327, 345-47 (2015)

Availability of diminished capacity defense in Washington but not in a foreign jurisdiction does not prevent the two crimes from being comparable, State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 88-89 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Conover, 183 Wn.2d 706 (2015)

School bus route stop enhancements, RCW 69.50.435(1)(c) (2015), must run consecutively to the substantive VUCSA charge but may run concurrently to each other, Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Hernandez, 185 Wn.App. 680 (2015)

In determining offender score for felony DUI, former RCW 9.94A.525(2)(e) (2011), all prior convictions, traffic and other felonies, count, State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 736-39 (2015), see: Matter of Raymundo, 6 Wn.App.2d 75 (2018); III.

State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 775-79 (2015)

Utah statute, UC § 58-37-8(1)(a)(ii) which prohibits agreeing, consenting, offering or arranging to distribute a drug is comparable to Washington delivery of drug statutes and Washington attempting to distribute a drug, RCW 69.50.407; I.

State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 204-08 (2015)

Statutory rape as it was defined in 1976 is not legally comparable to rape of a child 2°, because in 1976 a person of 16 years commits the crime if the victim was 11-14 years old but now state must prove defendant is at least 36 months older than victim, RCW 9A.44.076(1)

(1990), sentencing judge now cannot determine defendant's age previously as it depends on judicial fact-finding, Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000); I.

State v. Mohamed, 187 Wn.App. 630 (2015)

Even with school zone enhancement court can impose DOSA or parenting sentencing alternative, RCW 9.9A.655, as enhancements are still part of standard range, Postsentencing Review of Gutierrez, 146 Wn.App. 151 (2008), cf.: State v. Yancey, 193 Wn.2d 26 (2019); I.

State v. Inocencio, 187 Wn.App. 765 (2015)

Offender score includes convictions incurred when defendant was 16 years old, defense maintains that absent a decline hearing or evidence that defendant expressly waived decline hearing and juvenile court found that decline was in respondent's best interests priors could not be included in offender score; held: while a waiver of any right under the Juvenile Justice Act of 1977, ch. 13.40 RCW, must be an express waiver which state must show from the record, or show a decline order, State v. Knippling, 166 Wn.2d 93 (2009), cf.: State v. Saenz, 156 Wn.App. 866, 876-79 (2010), for purposes of POAA, and defense has no burden to collaterally attack a prior conviction as it is the present use of a prior conviction for purposes of POAA, defendant cannot raise invalidity of prior conviction for purposes of offender score alone, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175 (1986), unless it is invalid on its face, but see: State v. Bailey, 179 Wn.App. 433 (2014); III.

State v. Dyson, 189 Wn.App. 215 (2015)

Defendant is convicted of assault 1°, sentencing judge finds defendant's conduct qualified for mandatory five-year minimum because force could likely have resulted in death, RCW 9.94A.540 (2014); held: fact-finding triggering a mandatory minimum must be submitted to the jury, Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013), but see: State v. McChristian, 158 Wn.App. 392 (2010); 2-1, III.

State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 736-39 (2015)

In determining offender score for felony DUI all prior convictions that have not washed count, State v. Hernandez, 185 Wn.App. 680 (2015), State v. McAninch, 189 Wn.App. 619 (2015), overruling State v. Martinez-Morales, 168 Wn.App. 489 (2012) and State v. Jacob, 176 Wn.App. 351 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Miller, 185 Wn.2d 111 (2016)

Defendant is sentenced to consecutive sentences for two counts of murder, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(b) (2002), defendant files untimely collateral attack seeking resentencing because Pers. Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007) authorized court to impose concurrent exceptional sentences, trial court agrees it was unaware it had the authority and imposes concurrent sentences, state appeals; held: Mulholland did not qualify as a significant change in the law, Pers. Restraint of Gentry, 179 Wn.2d 614, 625 (2014), RCW 10.73.100(6) (1989), could have argued at original sentencing for concurrent sentences thus concurrent sentences vacated; 8-1.

State v. Baker, 194 Wn.App. 678 (2016)

Offender score for escape is limited to prior escape convictions, RCW 9.94A.525(14) (2013); III.

State v. Haggin, 195 Wn.App. 315 (2016)

Multiple current convictions for unlawful possession of firearms run concurrently unless there also is a current conviction for theft of a firearm or possession of a stolen firearm, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(c) (2015); III.

State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 297-300 (2016)

For a violent offense court lacks authority to grant credit for time served in a non-residential day reporting program, RCW 9.94A.680(3) (2009), State v. Medina, 180 Wn.2d 282, 288 (2014); deadly weapon enhancement time must be served in total confinement; I.

State v. Weatherwax, 188 Wn.2d 139 (2017)

"For purposes of RCW 9.94A.589(1)(b), (1) (2015), anticipatory offenses have the same seriousness level as their target crimes and (2) when the seriousness levels of two or more serious violent offenses are identical, the trial court must choose the offense whose standard range is lower as the starting point for calculating the consecutive sentences.," State v. Breaux, 167 Wn.App. 166 (2012), reversing, in part, State v. Weatherwax, 193 Wn.App. 667 (2016); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Canha, 189 Wn.2d 359 (2017)

California voluntary manslaughter is not legally comparable to Washington murder, here it is factually comparable as defendant could have been convicted if he had committed the same acts in Washington; Oregon felon in possession of a firearm is not legally comparable to Washington felon in possession 1° as Washington requires a prior serious offense rather than any felony, but here it is factually comparable, the court may rely only on facts that were admitted, stipulated, or proved to the fact finder beyond a reasonable doubt. Pers. Restraint of Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249, 255 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017)

At sentencing defense requests Drug Offender Sentencing Alternative, court imposes standard range sentence, stating that there was no evidence of drug use; held: while a sentencing court may order a drug evaluation for a DOSA it is not obliged to do so, RCW 9.94A.660(4) (2016), thus properly exercised discretion in declining to impose DOSA, State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333 (2005); 2-1, III.

State v. Sleater, 200 Wn.App, 638 (2017)

Defendant pleads guilty to VUCSA in 2006, certificate of discharge, RCW 9.94A.637 (2009), is issued in 2008, two weeks prior to discharge defendant is arrested for new VUCSA, pleads guilty, seeks vacation of 2006 VUCSA arguing that the 2008 VUCSA doesn't preclude vacation because it occurred before the certificate of discharge; held: the fact of conviction of the new crime, not the date it occurred, precludes vacation, RCW 9.94A.640 (2011); dicta: "[o]nce she has received her certificate of discharge for the 2008 offense and is eligible to vacate it, she can first vacate that conviction and then seek vacation of the 2006 offense," see State v. Smith, 158 Wn.App. 501 (2010); III.

State v. Blair, 191 Wn.2d 155 (2018)

At sentencing defense maintains that a prior conviction of theft of a motor vehicle should not be included in offender score as defendant stole snowmobiles which are not motor vehicles; held: defense has burden of showing a prior conviction is constitutionally invalid on its face, statutory interpretation is not a constitutional issue so question of whether a snowmobile is a motor vehicle may not be decided by the sentencing court to include the prior in the offender score; 9-0.

State v. Joseph, 3 Wn.App.2d 365, 374-75 (2018)

Jury instruction for aggravating circumstance must instruct that aggravator is proved beyond a reasonable doubt and must be unanimous; I.

State v. Davis, 3 Wn.App.2d 763 (2018)

California burglary statute which does not require proof of unlawful entry is not comparable to Washington burglary 2° and thus does not count in offender score, see: State v. Howard, 15 Wn.App.2d 7257 (2020); I.

State v. Van Noy, 3 Wn.App.2d 494 (2018)

In determining eligibility for a DOSA the issue is when the offender committed the current offense, not when he was sentenced for it, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(g) ;I.

State v. Church, 5 Wn.App.2d 577 (2018)

Defendant is sentenced to a residential DOSA, RCW 9.94A.664 (2011), receives treatment and community custody per the statute, never reports for treatment, argues that court only has authority to impose the mid-point of the standard range, RCW 9.94A.664(4)(c), court revokes and imposes standard range sentence; held: the limitation of the court to impose the mid-point of the standard range does not apply to a defendant who never reports to treatment, see: State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333 (2005); I.

Matter of Thompson, 6 Wn.App.2d 64 (2018)

Defendants plead guilty to attempted failure to register, are sentenced, inter alia, to community custody, DOC appeals; held: attempted failure to register as a sex offender is not a sex offense, court lacked authority to impose community custody; II.

Matter of Raymundo, 6 Wn.App.2d 75 (2018)

RCW 9.94A.525(11) (2017) provides that when an individual is convicted of a felony traffic offense, each prior serious traffic offense will count as one point., but RCW 9.94.525(11) also carves out an exception to this general rule: it instructs the court not to count prior serious traffic offenses that were used as enhancements for vehicular homicide, RCW 46.61.520(2)

(1998), which provides that an additional two years "shall" be added to a vehicular homicide sentence for each prior DUI, RCW 46.61.5055 (2018); sentencing court could not use the same prior serious traffic offenses in calculating petitioner's offender score for vehicular homicide that it used as enhancements under RCW 46.61.520(2), but court can use the priors in calculating petitioner's score for felony hit and run since they were not used as enhancements for hit and run, the exclusion of prior offenses used to enhance vehicular homicide applies only to the calculation of the offender score for vehicular homicide, not to the separate calculation of the offender score for other current offenses; I.

State v. Thibodeaux, 6 Wn.App.2d 223 (2018)

Where a defendant has maxed out on a class C felony court must impose 60 months and may not reduce incarceration period in order to impose community custody, absent an exceptional sentence, RCW 9.94A.701(9) (2010); I.

State v. Yancey, 193 Wn.2d 26 (2019)

Defendant pleads guilty to two counts of delivering a drug plus two school bus zone enhancements, total sentence range is 36-44 months, mid-range 40 months, sentencing court imposes residential DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660 (2016); held: residential DOSA can only be imposed if mid-point of range is 24 months or less, court cannot waive enhancements, thus defendant was only eligible for a prison-based DOSA, reversing State v. Yancey, 3 Wn.App.2d 735 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Cate, 194 Wn.2d 909 (2019)

At sentencing court accepts prosecutor's summary of criminal history, defendant does not object; held: absent an affirmative acknowledgment of criminal history the state must prove criminal history beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Hunley, 175 Wn.2d 901 (2012), failure to object does not relieve state of that burden; defendant's testimony at trial might substitute as proof of criminal history [dicta]; per curiam.

Postsentence Review of Hardy, 9 Wn.App.2d 44 (2019)

Standard ranges for defendant's three convictions include one count of less than a year, one count of more than a year, trial court imposes residential DOSA, DOC appeals; held: if an offender has at least one sentence, greater than a year, that is eligible for a DOSA then defendant is eligible for DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(f) (2016), distinguishing State v. Smith, 142 Wn.App. 122 (2007); III.

State v. Cyr, 195 Wn.2d 492 (2020)

Defendant pleads guilty to three counts of selling a drug for profit, RCW 69.50.410(1), a class C felony, admits a prior VUCSA triggering doubling statute, RCW 69.50.408, trial court determines maximum sentence is 60 months, sentence range of 68-100 months exceeds maximum, court exercises discretion and sentences to 60 months, not doubling; held: doubling maximum sentence is mandatory, Personal Restraint of Hopkins, 89 Wn.App. 198, 201, 201-03 (1997), rev'd on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 897, 976 P.2d 616 (1999), thus sentence range is not limited by 60 months, but court is not obliged to impose maximum; remanded for trial court to determine if priors qualify as VUCSAs for purposes of doubling; affirms State v. Cyr, 8 Wn.App.2d 834 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Peterson, 12 Wn.App.2d 195 (2020), aff'd, on other grounds, State v. Peterson, 198 Wn.2d 643 (2021)

RCW 69.50.410(3)(a) (2003), sets penalty for selling heroin for a profit at two years, SRA standard range sentence for this defendant is 68-100 months; held: "RCW 9.94A.505(2)(a)(i) [2019] states that the trial court must apply the sentencing grids "[u]nless another term of confinement applies,'" thus legislative intent and rule of lenity dictate that specific statute applies and sentence of two years is affirmed; II.

State v. Salazar*,* 13 Wn.App.2d 880 (2020)

Defendant's standard range is 22-29 months, is sentenced to prison-based DOSA of 25.5 months with 12.25 months in prison and 12.25 months community custody, defendant violates conditions of community custody, court revokes, RCW 9.94A.660(7)(c) (2020), and imposes 29 months, defendant argues that court could not "modify" sentence to impose high end; held: if DOC revokes while a defendant is in prison it can only reimpose the remainder of the original sentence, but if court revokes it may impose any sentence within standard range, with credit; III.

Pers. Restraint of Crenshaw*,* 196 Wn.2d 325 (2020)

Defendant is sentenced on multiple counts, appeals, Court of Appeals reverses some counts, remanding for a new trial, and remands the remaining counts for resentencing due to the changed offender score caused by the reversals, court resentences, defendant is retried and convicted, court then sentences on those charges, increasing offender score because of previous resentencing; held: defendant did not knowingly and voluntarily agree to be sentenced separately, higher sentence effectively punished him for prevailing on direct appeal; per curiam.

State v. Kopp*,* 15 Wn.App.2d 281 (2020), overruled, State v. Hawkins, 200 Wn.2d 477 (2022)

Trial court has discretion whether or not to vacate a conviction regardless of whether or not defendant satisfies the statutory criteria, RCW 9.94A.640 (2019); I.

State v. Howard*,* 15 Wn.App.2d 725 (2020)

Oregon attempt statute, O.R.S. § 161.405, required the intentional taking of a substantial step, but with no specific intent requirement, while Washington requires attempt to commit a specific crime, RCW 9A.28.020(1), thus is not legally comparable for purposes of offender score; where the defendant pleaded guilty in the foreign state, Washington court can compare the elements admitted in the plea statement to the Washington statute, State v. Olsen, 180 Wn.2d 468, 473 (2014), distinguishing State v. Davis, 3 Wn.App.2d 763 (2018), although here, there being no admission in the Oregon plea statement that defendant intended to commit the specific crime, it is not factually comparable; Oregon's robbery 3°, O.R.S. § 164.395(1), is not legally comparable to robbery 2° as Oregon's statute encompasses both theft and attempted theft whereas in Washington the state must prove a successful theft, distinguishing State v. McIntyre, 112 Wn.App. 478 (2002), although factually defendant in his Oregon plea statement admitted all of the elements of Washington's robbery 2° and thus the offenses are comparable; II.

State v. Anderson*,* 198 Wn.2d 672 (2021)

School bus route stop enhancement jury instruction, RCW 69.50.435(1)(c), need not define the words "school bus;" 9-0.

State v. LaBounty, 17 Wn.App.2d 576 (2021)

Defendant is sentenced to maximum, judgment and sentence order community custody for any earned release time without a specific term; held: trial court can include a provision that community custody will consist of earned release time only if defendant is subject to DOC supervision depending upon result of risk assessment, RCW 9.94A.501(3) (2021) and court sentences defendant to a fixed term of community custody, see: State v. Winborne, 167 Wn.App. 320 (2012), State v. Franklin, 172 Wn.2d 831 (2011), State v. Winkle, 158 Wn.App. 323 (2011); II.

State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021)

Uncertified copy of judgment and sentence that bears the stamp of the court clerk, lists identifying information of defendant and from same county as defendant is being sentenced exhibit minimal indicia of reliability, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Adolph, 170 Wn.2d 556 (2010), State v. Priest, 147 Wn.App. 662 (2008), State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 91-96 (2005); I.

State v. Wright, 19 Wn.App.2d 37 (2021)

Firearm enhancements must run consecutive to each other for adults, distinguishing State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47 (2017) which permits mitigated concurrent sentences for unlawful possession of a firearm; III.

State v. Markovich, 19 Wn.App.2d 157 (2021)

Even though a Montana drug possession conviction includes a mens rea element it cannot be comparable to Washington's drug possession statute since the Washington statute is void, State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021); I.

State v. Ehlert, 19 Wn.App.2d 381 (2021)

DOSA statute, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(g) (2021), prohibits a DOSA sentence if defendant has had more than one prior DOSA in ten years, defendant had two concurrent DOSAs within ten years; held: because defendant had only one opportunity for treatment and rehabilitation even though there were two DOSAs he is eligible for another DOSA, but see: State v. Van Noy, 3 Wn.App.2d 494, 497 n.2 (2018); III.

State v. Fletcher, 19 Wn.App. 566 (2021)

When court imposes an exceptional sentence where the standard range is incorrectly calculated then the judgment and sentence is invalid on its face and thus a motion to modify, CrR 7.8(b), is timely even if filed more than a year after finality, Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861, 872 (2002), State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182 (1997); III.

State v. Conaway, 199 Wn.2d 742 (2022)

A misdemeanor deferred sentence that was dismissed after successfully completion is a conviction for purposes of the SRA, State v. Haggard, 195 Wn.2d 544, 551 (2020), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Hawkins*,* ___ Wn.2d ___, 519 P.3d 182 (2022)

Defendant, having met the mandatory statutory prerequisites moves to vacate the conviction, RCW 9.94A.640 (2021), trial court denies it based upon severity of the crime; held: court must exercise discretion based upon evidence of rehabilitation and may not deny vacation solely because of the facts of the crime, overruling State v. Kopp, 15 Wn.App.2d 281 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Barnett, 21 Wn.App.2d 469 (2022)

Firearm enhancement, RCW 9.94A.533(3), must run consecutive to all offenses, including unlawful possession of a firearm; I.

Matter of Rodriguez*,* 21 Wn.App.2d 585 (2022)

Court cannot impose 12 months community custody for first time offender waiver if no treatment is ordered, RCW 9.94A.650; III.

State v. French*,* 21 Wn.App.2d 891 (2022)

Defendant's offender score includes one point for being on community custody, RCW 9.94A.525(19), for possession of a drug, following State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021) court strikes the point, state appeals; held: because the statute under which defendant was previously sentenced was void, so was the order placing him on community custody, State v. Rahnert, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 1054 (2022), cf.: State v. Paniuaga, 22 Wn.App.2d 350 (2022); I.

State v. Putman*,* 21 Wn.App. 36, 51-55 (2022)

Where defendant is charged with multiple acts over many years and jury does not identify which act is the basis of conviction then the version of the SRA with the lesser sentence must be imposed, State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182, 185-188 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Hartzell, 108 Wn.App. 934, 945 (2001); I.

State v. Buck*,* ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 23WL140074 (2023)

Court may order that community custody be consecutive to another community custody; III.

State v. Gonzalez*,* ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL365507 (2023)

DUI and vehicular assault from the same incident merge; in a subsequent DUI sentencing court must merge the two in determining offender score even though original trial court did not; III.

SENTENCING REFORM ACT
Same Criminal Conduct

State v. Edwards, 45 Wn.App. 378 (1986)

Defendant was convicted of kidnapping for abducting victim in her car and assault for waving gun at another person who approached victim's car during the kidnapping; held: the offenses encompassed the same criminal conduct as they were intimately related and there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective, thus they count as one crime in computing criminal history, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a); overruled, in part, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987); analysis applies to crimes committed before 26 July 1987, State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991); cf.: State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174, 186 (1991); see: State v. Taylor, 90 Wn.App. 312, 320-2 (1998), State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 824-25 (2004); I.

State v. Rienks, 46 Wn.App. 537 (1987)

Crimes may encompass same criminal conduct if committed as part of recognizable plan and were committed with no substantial change in nature of criminal objective, even if committed against different victims, State v. Edwards, 45 Wn.App. 378 (1986), overruled, in part, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987), State v. Taylor, 90 Wn.App. 312, 320-2 (1998); I.

State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987)

Convictions of crimes involving multiple victims do not constitute the same criminal conduct, and are to be treated separately, overruling, in part, State v. Edwards, 45 Wn.App. 378 (1986), see: State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 457 (2003), and reversing, in part, State v. Franklin, 46 Wn.App. 84 (1986), reversing State v. Green, 46 Wn.Ap. 92 (1986); test to determine if there is different criminal conduct is objective, i.e., if criminal intent changed from one crime to the next, considering whether one crime furthered the other, State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 732-35 (2014), and whether the time and place were the same, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a) [1987 amendments], State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314 (1990), State v. Dunbar, 59 Wn.App. 447 (1990), State v. Baldwin, 63 Wn.App. 303 (1991), State v. Taylor, 90 Wn.App. 312, 320-2 (1998), State v. Morris, 123 Wn.App. 467, 475-77 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Cromwell, 157 Wn.2d 529 (2006), cf.: State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); thus, kidnapping to commit a robbery is one crime for sentencing purposes, robbery and then attempted murder of the victim are two crimes, State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 959-63 (2013).

State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988)

Burglary followed by assault and rape on residents encompass the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), as they were committed in an effort to accomplish a single criminal objective; III.

State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44 (1989)

Rape and robbery of the same victim are separate offenses and thus do not constitute the same criminal conduct, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987); accord: State v. Stearns, 61 Wn.App. 224 (1991); I.

State v. Thompson, 55 Wn.App. 888 (1989)

Felon in possession of firearm and assault do not encompass same criminal conduct, as they involve different mental states, and time and place of crimes, while overlapping, were not same; joinder of offenses is not relevant factor in determining whether offenses constitute same criminal conduct; accord: State v. Becker, 59 Wn.App. 848 (1990); I.

State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314 (1990)

Defendant sells drugs to undercover officer, is found with more drugs in his possession, is convicted of delivery and possession with intent to deliver, which trial court finds did not encompass same criminal conduct, and thus counted them as separate crimes in computing criminal history; held: the criminal objective of each crime was realized independently of the other; criminal intent, as objectively viewed, changed from one crime to the other, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987), affirming, in part, State v. Burns, 53 Wn.App. 849 (1989); see: State v. Rodriguez, 61 Wn.App. 812 (1991), State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 508 (1997); accord: State v. Baldwin, 63 Wn.App. 303 (1991), State v. Knutson, 64 Wn.App. 76 (1991), State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 818-20 (1994), State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 401-4 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), State v. Soper, 135 Wn.App. 89, 103-05 (2006), State v. Walker, 143 Wn.App. 880, 890-93 (2008), State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 959-63 (2013), State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380, 395-97 (2015), cf.: State v. Casarez, 123 Wn.2d 42 (1993), State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997), State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 706-9 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Elliott, 114 Wn.2d 6 (1990)

Two counts of promoting prostitution 2° of two women over two separate time periods at two different locations are separate offenses, and was thus not the same criminal conduct, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987); trial court has some discretion in determining whether offenses are the same criminal conduct for purposes of the offender score, State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 764-65 (2012), State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013), State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 356-58 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Davison, 56 Wn.App. 554 (1990)

Defendant enters residence without permission, assaults resident and guest, pleads guilty to assault 2° and burglary 1°, receives exceptional sentence; held: not abuse of discretion for trial court to find that the crimes did not arise from same criminal conduct, as there were multiple victims, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207, 215 (1987), State v. Davis, 90 Wn.App. 777, 782-5 (1998), and both victims were the focus of the prosecutor's charging scheme, distinguishing State v. Collicott, 112 Wn.2d 399 (1989); I.

State v. Lewis, 115 Wn.2d 294 (1990)

Three drug deliveries to same informant on three different dates in same place do not encompass same criminal conduct and are thus part of criminal history, State v. Boze, 47 Wn.App. 477 (1987), State v. Henderson, 64 Wn.App. 339, 343-4 (1992) (drug sales separated by less than one hour not same criminal conduct), see also: State v. Rodriguez, 61 Wn.App. 812 (1991), cf.: State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997), State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 706-9 (1998); prosecutor's discretion to file multiple counts and thereby effectively set sentence range does not usurp legislative and judicial powers; see: State v. Hortman, 76 Wn.App. 454, 459-60 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Dunbar, 59 Wn.App. 447 (1990)

Defendant breaks into former girlfriend's home and kidnaps her, trial court sentences defendant on both, finding the crimes were not the same course of conduct; held: because the burglary furthered the kidnapping, the two crimes encompassed the same criminal conduct, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987), cf.: State v. Latham, 3 Wn.App.2d 468 , (2018), as abduction occurred at the same time and place as the burglary, State v. Taylor, 90 Wn.App. 312, 320-2 (1998); burglary anti-merger statute, RCW 9A.52.050 does not impact SRA; 2-1, I.

State v. Longuskie, 59 Wn.App. 838 (1990)

Kidnapping 1° and child molestation 3° constitute same course of criminal conduct where the molestation was the objective intent and the kidnap furthered the criminal objective and crimes were committed at the same time and place, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 546-48 (2013); III.

State v. Becker, 59 Wn.App. 848 (1990)

Prior attempted robbery 2° counts as two points since attempts are treated the same as a completed crime, former RCW 9.94A.360(5) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], State v. Ashley, 187 Wn.App. 908 (2015), aff'd, on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), and is subject to the violent offense doubling provisions of former RCW 9.94A.360(9), see: State v. Knight, 134 Wn.App. 103, 106-09 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 162 Wn.2d 806 (2008); manslaughter and unlawful possession of firearm by a felon do not encompass the same criminal conduct, as objective intent of each crime is different, see : State v. Thompson, 55 Wn.App. 888 (1989); I.

State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174 (1991)

In vehicular homicide case, deaths of two people in the same vehicle is the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), State v. Edwards, 45 Wn.App. 378 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991)

Statutory definition of "same criminal conduct", RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), applies only to crimes committed after 26 July 1987, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207, 216 (1987); cf.: State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174, 186 (1991); applying State v. Edwards, 45 Wn.App. 378 (1986) analysis, patronizing juvenile prostitute and photographing him do not constitute same criminal conduct where crimes occurred before 26 July 1987; 9-0.

State v. Rodriguez, 61 Wn.App. 812 (1991)

Defendant is convicted of possession with intent to deliver cocaine and heroin for having both drugs on his person simultaneously; held: absent evidence defendant intended to deliver one or more controlled substances in two different transactions, then two counts constitute the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94.400(1)(a); accord: State v. Casarez, 123 Wn.2d 42 (1993)(delivery of 2 drugs in same transaction is same criminal conduct), State v. Williams, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998), State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 706-9 (1998), State v. Haddock, 141 Wn.App. 103 (2000); state may appeal miscalculation of standard range, RAP 2.2(b), even if sentence imposed falls within standard range under both state and defense theories, State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62, 78 (2008); III.

State v. Baldwin, 63 Wn.App. 303 (1991)

Defendant aids undercover officer in buying drugs, officer gives defendant drugs, defendant is convicted of delivery and possession, court determines offenses are not the same criminal conduct for purposes of calculating offender score; held: delivery and possession have separate criminal intents, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207, 215 (1987), RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314 (1990), State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380, 395-97 (2015), thus not same criminal conduct; I.

State v. Knutson, 64 Wn.App. 76 (1991)

Taking sexually explicit photographs of minors on different occasions, resulting in separate counts of sexual exploitation of minor, RCW 9.68A.040 and possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68.050, for each minor and each occasion is not multiplicitous, State v. Root, 141 Wn.2d 701 (2000), and is not the same criminal conduct, State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314 (1990); I.

State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992)

Burglary 1°, rape 1° and kidnap 1° need not encompass same criminal conduct even though they may share elements; Supreme Court withdraws opinion in State v. Collicott, 112 Wn.2d 399 (1989), holding that State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987) analysis will be applied; burglary antimerger statute, RCW 9A.52.050, does not conflict with SRA; 9-0 [remainder of opinion is joined by only 4 justices].

State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773 (1992)

Defendant breaks into former girlfriend's home with weapon, kidnaps her and her mother, pleads guilty to burglary 1° and kidnap 2°, trial court finds crimes were not same course of conduct; held: objective intent of burglary was complete when defendant broke in with weapon, objective intent changed when he moved to kidnapping, and thus, under State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207, 215 (1987) test, burglary and kidnapping were not same criminal conduct, State v. Latham, 3 Wn.App.2d 468 (2018); further, same time and place element is unmet and there were multiple victims, State v. Canter, 17 Wn.App.2d 728 (2021), see: State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649, 667-8 (1992); burglary antimerger statute, RCW 9A.52.050, gives sentencing judge discretion to punish for burglary, even where it and an additional crime encompass same criminal conduct [dictum], State v. Kisor, 68 Wn.App. 610 (1993), State v. Larry, 108 Wn.App. 894, 916-17 (2001), State v. Williams, 176 Wn.App. 138 (2013), 181 Wn.2d 795 (2014), State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 962-63 (2013), see: State v. Roose, 90 Wn.App.

513 (1998), State v. Davis, 90 Wn.App. 777, 783-5 (1998); affirms State v. Lessley, 59 Wn.App. 461 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Danis, 64 Wn.App. 814 (1992)

In vehicular assault or vehicular homicide, statute which provides that multiple victims who occupy the same vehicle result in the offense encompassing the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), does not violate equal protection of a defendant who kills or injures two pedestrians; I.

State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42 (1993)

Delivery of cocaine and heroin to same person at same time constitutes same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.400(1), State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1993), State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314, 318-20 (1990); cf.: State v. Lewis, 115 Wn.2d 294 (1990), State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 401-4 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), State v. Bickle, 153 Wn.App. 222 (2009); affirms State v. Casarez, 64 Wn.App. 910 (1992); cf.: State v. Vike, 125 Wn.2d 407 (1995), State v. Vanoli, 86 Wn.App. 643, 648-52 (1997), State v. Soper, 135 Wn.App. 89, 103-05 (2006), see: State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 508 (1997); 8-0.

State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183 (1993)

Defendant forces victim to masturbate and perform fellatio (count 1: rape 2°) and then attempts anal intercourse (count 2: attempted rape 2°), trial court finds separate criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a); held: abuse of discretion, since, when viewed objectively, criminal intent was the same, same victim, same place, nearly at the same time, State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 463-6 (1994), State v. Dolen, 83 Wn.App. 361 (1996), State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997), State v. Vanoli, 86 Wn.App. 643, 649-52 (1997), State v. Palmer, 95 Wn.App. 187 (1999), State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 119-25 (1999), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 546-48 (2013), cf.: State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2014), but see: State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997), State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 351-53 (2007), cf.: State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845 (2000), State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 767 (2001), State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 612-14 (2006), State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 653-56 (2011), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 708-11 (2013), State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 356-58 (2014); I.

Pers. Restraint of Holmes, 69 Wn.App. 282 (1993)

Defendant is sentenced in two counties for a crime spree, first sentencing court fails to determine whether offenses encompassed same criminal conduct; held: absent an express finding regarding whether offenses encompassed same criminal conduct in first sentencing court, second sentencing court must so determine; court cannot impose two exceptional sentences (below the standard range, but to run consecutively) for one aggravating factor, at 293, see: State v. Quigg, 72 Wn.App. 828, 845 (1994); III.

State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 463-6 (1994)

Assaulting guard while attempting to escape encompasses same criminal conduct, since defendant's intent was the same from one offense to the other: a desire to escape, State v. Taylor, 90 Wn.App. 312, 320-2 (1998), State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 706-9 (1998), see: State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183, 187-8 (1993); consecutive sentences for two or more current offenses is an exceptional sentence, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), 9.94A.120(15); I.

State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 401-4 (1994), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997)

Manufacturing marijuana and possession with intent to deliver involve different objectives and intent, thus trial court did not abuse discretion in refusing to treat the two crimes as the same criminal conduct, State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314 (1990), distinguishing State v. Garza-Villareal, 123 Wn.2d 42, 46 (1993), State v. Porter, 130 Wn.2d 177 (1997), accord: State v. Vanoli, 86 Wn.App. 643, 648-52 (1997), State v. Freeman, 118 Wn.App. 365, 377-79 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), State v. Soper, 135 Wn.App. 89, 103-05 (2006), State v. Walker, 143 Wn.App. 880, 890-93 (2008); cf.: State v. Bickle, 153 Wn.App. 222 (2009); 6-3.

State v. Vike, 125 Wn.2d 407 (1994)

Simultaneous possession of two different controlled substances encompasses the same criminal conduct for sentencing purposes, State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42 (1993), State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997), State v. Williams, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998), see: State v. Haddock, 141 Wn.2d 103 (2000), State v. Bickle, 153 Wn.App. 222 (2009), reversing State v. Vike, 66 Wn.App. 631 (1992), 9-0.

State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174 (1994)

Vehicular assault and hit and run are not the same criminal conduct, as objective purpose of running from accident scene has no relation to the vehicular assault, did not further the vehicular assault, were not part of a scheme or plan, and did not occur simultaneously, at 179-81, State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 778 (1992); I.

State v. McCraw, 127 Wn.2d 281 (1995)

Trial court has discretion to treat prior convictions served concurrently as one offense even if prior sentencing court treated prior offenses as separate offenses not encompassing same criminal conduct, former RCW 9.94A.360(6)(a) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], State v. Lara, 66 Wn.App. 927 (1992), State v. Wright, 76 Wn.App. 811 (1995), State v. Reinhart, 77 Wn.App. 454 (1995), see: State v. Mehaffey, 125 Wn.App. 595, 599-601 (2005); effectively overrules State v. Blakey, 61 Wn.App. 595 (1991); 6-3.

State v. Calvert, 79 Wn.App. 569 (1995)

Trial court's determination that presentation of two forged checks on the same day as part of the same scheme encompasses the same criminal conduct to determine offender score, State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42, 46 (1993), is not an abuse of discretion, State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 402 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997), cf.: State v. Young, 92 Wn.App. 235, 239-43 (1999); III.

State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997)

Defendant anally rapes victim, later after argument orally rapes victim, trial court finds two acts of rape did not constitute the same criminal conduct; held: while the distinct methods used to accomplish each rape does not alone prove different intents, trial court's finding that time, threats and new force between the two rapes established a new objective intent, thus trial court did not abuse discretion, State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 351-53 (2007), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 708-11 (2013), State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 356-58 (2014), distinguishing State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183, 188 (1993), see also: State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997), State v. Palmer, 95 Wn.App. 187 (1999), State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 119-25 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Rangel, 99 Wn.App. 596, 598-600 (2000), State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845 (2000), State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 767 (2001), State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 612-14 (2006), State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 653-56 (2011); II.

State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997)

Defendant sells amphetamines to undercover detective who immediately asks for and receives marijuana, trial court treats deliveries as separate criminal conduct; held: back-to-back uninterrupted drug sales, while not "simultaneous," occur in a continuing, uninterrupted sequence of conduct as part of a recognizable scheme to sell drugs, thus defendant's intent, objectively viewed, remains the same, thus the counts must be sentenced as the same criminal conduct, State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42, 49 (1993), State v. Williams, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998), State v. Deharo, 136 Wn.2d 856 (1998), see: State v. Haddock, 141 Wn.2d 103 (2000), distinguishing State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314 (1990), State v. Lewis, 115 Wn.2d 294 (1990), State v. Vike, 125 Wn.2d 407, 411 n.3 (1994), State v. Bickle, 153 Wn.App. 222 (2009), but see: State v. Vanoli, 86 Wn.App. 643, 648-52 (1997), cf.: State v. Fisher, 139 Wn.App. 578, 582-85 (2007), State v. Soper, 135 Wn.App. 89, 100-05 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Taylor, 90 Wn.App. 312, 320-2 (1998)

Assault and kidnapping of same victim, where the objective intent of both was to abduct by the use of a gun and to persuade victim not to resist the abduction, constitutes the same criminal conduct, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987), State v. Rienks, 46 Wn.App. 537 (1987), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 546-48 (2013), cf.: State v. Latham, 3 Wn.App.2d 468 (2018), thus defendant is entitled to have the two offenses counted as one crime, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a); II.

State v. Roose, 90 Wn.App. 513 (1998)

Theft of firearms statute, RCW 9A.56.300(3), which states that each firearm taken is a separate offense does not mandate that sentencing court treat each firearm as a separate current offense even if the encompass the same criminal conduct, distinguishing dictum in State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 778 (1992), see: State v. Smith, 99 Wn.App. 510 (1999); II.

State v. Davis, 90 Wn.App. 777, 782-5 (1998)

Defendant enters apartment, is ordered to leave, points gun at tenant, visitor threatens to call police, defendant points gun at visitor, is convicted of burglary 1° and two counts of assault, trial court finds assaults furthered the burglary and thus were the same criminal conduct, state appeals; held: trial court reasonably concluded that assault on tenant was the same conduct as the burglary, however the assault on the visitor could not have been the same criminal conduct, as "two crimes cannot be the same criminal conduct if one involves two victims and the other only involves one," State v. Davison, 56 Wn.App. 554 (1990), see: State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 777 (1992); trial court has discretion whether or not to apply burglary anti-merger statute, RCW 9A.52.050, see: Lessley, supra., at 780-1, State v. Kisor, 68 Wn.App. 610, 618 (1993), State v. Larry, 108 Wn.App. 894, 915-17 (2001), State v. Williams, 176 Wn.App. 138 (2013), 181 Wn.2d 795 (2015); I.

State v. Deharo, 136 Wn.2d 856 (1998)

Defendant is observed selling drugs, is arrested and found with six bindles, is convicted of conspiracy to deliver and possession with intent to deliver, trial court sentences as separate conduct; held: objective intent of defendant being the same, i.e., possessing drugs was the substantial step used to prove the conspiracy and both crimes involved the same drugs, the two crimes encompassed the same criminal conduct, State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177, 181 (1997); per curiam.

State v. Worl, 91 Wn.App. 88 (1998)

Additional evidence may be taken at a resentencing hearing following reversal and remand, State v. Stewart, 72 Wn.App. 885, 891 (1994), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 893 (1995); where crimes are determined to be within the same criminal conduct, and the court determines that there are aggravating factors which apply to both offenses, then the sentencing judge may depart from the sentence range and run the sentences consecutive, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), cf.: State v. McClure, 64 Wn.App. 528, 534 (1992), Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009); III.

State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 706-9 (1998)

Defendant wrestles with officer, attempts to take gun, is convicted of assault and attempted theft of firearm, trial court finds separate conduct; held: offenses involved same victim, were committed at same time and place, sole issue was whether they required same criminal intent, State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42, 46 (1993); here, the assault and attempted theft were "intimately related," defendant could not have taken the gun without assaulting officer, thus offenses encompassed same criminal conduct, State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 464 (1994), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 546-48 (2013), see also: State v. Morris, 123 Wn.App. 467, 475-77 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Cromwell, 157 Wn.2d 529 (2006), cf.: State v. Walker, 143 Wn.App. 880, 890-93 (2008); II.

State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 119-25 (1999)

Three acts of rape charged separately for digital penetration of two orifices and penile penetration within two minutes is the same criminal conduct, State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183 (1993), State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 767 (2001), distinguishing State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997), cf.: State v. Soonalole, 99 Wn.App. 207 (2000), State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845 (2000), State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 612-14 (2006), State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 351-53 (2007), State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 653-56 (2011), State v.

Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 708-11 (2013); apply same criminal conduct analysis to serious violent offenses "arising from separate and distinct criminal conduct," RCW 9.94A.400(1)(b), Pers. Restraint of Rangel, 99 Wn.App. 596 (2000); a separately charged assault arising from the same evidence as the rapes merges and may not be counted in offender score for the rapes, but may be counted in offender score for a burglary with which the assault does not merge; 9-0.

State v. Hollis, 93 Wn.App. 804, 816-19 (1999)

Involving a minor in a drug transaction, RCW 69.50.401(f), [recodified RCW 69.50.4015 (2003)], and delivery of drugs at the same time do not constitute same criminal conduct, as victim of delivery is the public, State v. Garza-Villarreal, 123 Wn.2d 42, 47 (1993), and victim of involving a minor is the juvenile, State v. Vanoli, 86 Wn.App. 643, 651-52 (1997); I.

State v. Palmer, 95 Wn.App. 187 (1999)

Defendant rapes victim twice in same place, one immediately after the other, court finds it was not same criminal conduct; held: trial court abused discretion, as objective criminal intent did not change between rapes, State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183, 188 (1993), State v. Garnica, 105 Wn.App. 762, 767 (2001), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 546-48 (2013), distinguishing State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997), see: State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 612-14 (2006), State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 351-53 (2007), State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 653-56 (2011), cf.: State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 708-11 (2013), State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 356-58 (2014) ; I.

State v. Hernandez, 95 Wn.App. 480 (1999)

Where defendant is convicted of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver and simple possession of methamphetamine, the offenses cannot involve the same criminal conduct, as one crime has a statutory intent element and the other does not; II.

Pers. Restraint of Rangel, 99 Wn.App. 596, 598-600 (2000)

Defendant fires into another vehicle which crashes, defendant's vehicle turns back, approaches again, defendant opens fire again at same victims, trial court sentences to consecutive terms; held: because defendant formed new criminal intent before his second act, his crimes were sequential, not simultaneous or continuous, thus his conduct was separate and distinct, justifying consecutive sentences, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(b), State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107 (1999), State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997), State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845 (2000), State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 351-53 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009); consecutive sentences for serious violent offenses do not require court to enter findings and conclusions; III.

State v. Channon, 105 Wn.App. 869 (2001)

During chase, defendant fires at police officer, drives on, fires again, drives and fires again, is convicted of three counts of assault, court imposes consecutive sentences, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(b), does not make record as to whether or not offenses were same criminal conduct; held: while a finding of same criminal conduct does not require simultaneity of crimes, State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177, 182-83 (1997), here the successive assaults at three locations with three time breaks establish separate criminal conduct, State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845 (2000), see: Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009); trial court's calculation of offender score may be treated on appeal as an implicit determination that offenses did not constitute same criminal conduct even without findings on the record, State v. Anderson, 92 Wn.App. 54, 62 (1998); II.

Pers. Restraint of Connick, 144 Wn.2d 442 (2001)

At sentencing, DOC report reflects offender score of 9, state's report reflects 6, defense counsel agrees with DOC report, court adopts score of 9; defendant files PRP, claiming out-of-state priors were same criminal conduct; held: because petitioner failed to present sufficient evidence that priors were committed at same time and place and involved same victims, he is not entitled to relief, in light of the fact that counsel at sentencing agreed with the calculation, but see: State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472 (1999), cf.: State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 287 (2007); 8-1.

State v. Borg, 145 Wn.2d 329, 336-40 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of six counts of unlawful possession of a firearm, trial court finds same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), concludes that multiple incidents are "more egregious than possessing only one firearm," imposes consecutive sentences; held: where defendant is sentenced for multiple current convictions which are same criminal conduct, an exceptional sentence is not justified solely because those convictions number more than one, must be some extraordinarily serious harm or culpability which would not otherwise be accounted for in determining the presumptive sentencing range, see: State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419, 427-29 (1987), but see: State v. Tili, 148 Wn.2d 350 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Webb, 112 Wn.App. 618 (2002)

When defendant was sentenced on 1995 priors, court had discretion to count priors as one offense regardless of whether they were the same criminal conduct, upon conviction of 1999 offense defendant argues that he is entitled to have priors counted as a single offense; held: defendant has no "vested right" to application of the former statute, State v. Sell, 110 Wn.App. 741 (2002), State v. McRae, 96 Wn.App. 298 (1999), distinguishing State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665 (2001), State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), State v. T.K., 139 Wn.2d 320 (1999); I.

State v. Ehli, 115 Wn.App. 556 (2003)

In multiple count child pornography case, possession of photographs of different minors is not the same criminal conduct, as each child is a separate victim even if they are not identified; III.

State v. Freeman, 118 Wn.App. 365, 377-79 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005)

Defendant is convicted of robbery 1º and assault 1º for robbing and shooting victim, claims he only shot victim because he did not respond promptly to demand for money, trial court finds separate conduct; held: trial court was not legally bound to accept defendant's self-serving depiction of subjective intent, thus no abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 824-25 (2004)

Where rape, robbery, kidnap and murder of same victim at same place may have involved same criminal intent, State v. Vike, 125 Wn.2d 407, 410 (1994), State v. Edwards, 45 Wn.App. 378, 382 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987), RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), failure to argue same criminal conduct is ineffective assistance, State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 546-48 (2013); 2-1, II.

State v. Morris, 123 Wn.App. 467, 475-77 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Cromwell, 157 Wn.2d 529 (2006)

Possession of drugs and unlawful possession of a firearm is not the same criminal conduct even if possessing a gun conveniently facilitates or furthers possession of the drugs, State v. Adame, 56 Wn.App. 803 (1990), see: State v. Baldwin, 63 Wn.App. 303 (1991); "furtherance test" is a factor in determining whether convictions comprised same criminal conduct, but it is not the linchpin, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207, 215 (1987), State v. Vike, 125 Wn.2d 407, 412 (1994); II.

State v. Mehaffey, 125 Wn.App. 595, 599-601 (2005)

Where prior offenses were sentenced on the same day, sentencing court is obliged to exercise discretion and determine independently whether the priors are the same criminal conduct even if they were not previously determined to be same criminal conduct, State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556 (2008), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013), see: State v. Lara, 66 Wn.App. 927, 931-32 (1992); III.

Pers. Restraint of Markel, 154 Wn.2d 262, 273-75 (2005)

Determination by trial court that offenses did not constitute same criminal conduct need not be submitted to a jury, distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), RCW 9.94A.525(5)(a), because a finding of same criminal conduct can only reduce the sentence range, State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 102-03 (2013); 7-2.

State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 612-14 (2006)

Molestation and rape of same victim on several occasions throughout a five-year span are not the same criminal conduct, State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854, (1997), distinguishing State v. Palmer, 95 Wn.App. 187, 191-92 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Stockmyer, 136 Wn.App. 212 (2006)

Guns found in different rooms in the same house are found in different "places" for purposes of the same criminal conduct test, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), see: State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 885-86 (1998), State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623, 641-44 (2013); II.

State v. Wilson, 136 Wn.App. 596, 612-16 (2007)

Defendant enters house, assaults victim, leaves, re-enters and harasses victim, sentencing judge finds same criminal conduct; held: defendant had separate criminal intents for the two acts, State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015), trial court erred; II.

State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007)

In a single conversation with undercover officer, defendant solicits murder of four people, is convicted of four counts of solicitation to commit murder; held: unit of prosecution for solicitation, like conspiracy, criminalizes the act of engaging another to commit a crime, centered on each solicitation regardless of the number of crimes of objects of solicitation, State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000), State v. Jensen, 164 Wn.2d 943 (2008), reversing State v. Varnell, 132 Wn.App. 441, 452-53 (2006); 7-2.

State v. Fisher*, 131 Wn.App. 125, 133-34 (2006)

Two failures to appear four months apart is not the same criminal conduct for two counts of bail jumping, distinguishing State v. Porter, 133 Wn.2d 177 (1997); I.

State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 351-53 (2007)

Defendant chokes and hits victim, she gets away, he again beats her, she tries to escape, he holds knife to her throat, is convicted of two counts of assault 2º, trial court finds separate criminal conduct; held: trial court properly exercised discretion in finding separate conduct, having found that defendant's intent changed between incidents, crimes were not the same course of conduct as one ended before knife attack occurred in a different room, State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Rangel, 99 Wn.App. 596, 598-600 (2000) , State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 356-58 (2014)but see: State v. Tili, 138 Wn.2d 107, 119-25 (1999), State v. Palmer, 95 Wn.App. 187 (1999), State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183 (1993); I.

State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 329-30 (2008), 166 Wn.2d 881, 896 (2009)

Error in determining whether current offenses constitute same criminal conduct is harmless where offender score exceeds the maximum and reduction would not impact range; III.

State v. Walker, 143 Wn.App. 880, 890-93 (2008)

Theft of trees and trafficking in stolen property of the same trees have different intents and different victims (stealing wood from public and selling it to a party knowing that the thief doesn't have the right to sell it; objective purpose of theft is to deprive, objective criminal purpose of trafficking is to sell or dispose), thus offenses did not constitute same criminal conduct, State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 403 (1994); II.

State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556 (2008)

Sentencing court must determine if priors are same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.525(5)(a)(i), State v. Reinhart, 77 Wn.App. 454, 459 (1995), State v. Lara, 66 Wn.App. 927, 931-32 (1992), State v. Mehaffey, 125 Wn.App. 595, 599-601 (2005); III.

State v. Victoria, 150 Wn.App. 63 (2009)

Two counts of witness tampering regarding two different witnesses is not the same criminal conduct; I.

State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.App. 877, 892 (2009)

Defense must raise issue of prior convictions being same criminal conduct or it's waived, Pers. Restraint of Shale, 160 Wn.2d 489, 496 (2007), State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 642 (2010); II.

State v. Bickle, 153 Wn.App. 222 (2009)

Trial court finds that manufacturing methamphetamine, possession of methamphetamine, manufacturing marijuana and possession of marijuana are not the same criminal conduct; held: meth charges were separate conduct and not an abuse of discretion because possession of manufacture of meth require separate objective intents: a present intent and a future intent, one need not complete manufacturing process of meth to be convicted, see: State v. Poling, 128 Wn.App. 659, 668 (2005), RCW 69.50.101(p); when one manufactures marijuana one must have intent to manufacture and present intent to possess it because possessing marijuana is necessary for its manufacture, thus trial court abused its discretion because marijuana was all at the same address, but see: State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 401-04 (1994), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997); II.

State v. McGrew, 156 Wn.App. 546 (2010)

VUCSA with a firearm sentence enhancement and unlawful possession of a firearm are not the same criminal conduct, as an enhancement is not a crime; II.

State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 653-56 (2011)

Defendant rapes victim five times over the course of a night and next morning, sleeps in between, gaps in between each rape support conclusion that defendant objectively formed new criminal intent, thus not same criminal conduct, State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854 (1997), distinguishing State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 119-25 (1999); trial court is obliged to analyze whether crimes are same criminal conduct where raised, failure to do so is error, but where record is sufficient, appellate court may sustain trial court's decision, see: State v. Lee, 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 224-25 (2012)

Court should make a finding on same criminal conduct at sentencing, if requested, even if defendant is sentenced as a persistent offender; I.

State v. Aldana Graciano, 176 Wn.2d 531 (2013)

Test for appeal of sentencing court's findings regarding same criminal conduct is abuse of discretion, not de novo, overruling, in part, State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556 (2008); burden of establishing same criminal conduct is on defense, overruling, in part, State v. Dolen, 83 Wn.App. 361 (1996); 6-3.

State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623, 641-44 (2013)

Defendant uses pistol to shoot victim, later shoots at victim's last known position with a shotgun, is convicted of attempted murder and assault 2°, court finds same criminal conduct, state cross-appeals; held: appellant bears the burden to prove an abuse of discretion, both offenses occurred within 50 feet of each other, trial court did not abuse discretion in finding that they occurred at the same place; II.

State v. Williams, 176 Wn.App. 138 (2013), 181 Wn.2d 795 (2014)

To determine whether or not two prior offenses are the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.525(5)(a)(i) (2013), sentencing court must apply the same criminal conduct test, State v. Torngren, 147 Wn.App. 556, 563 (2008), and cannot apply the burglary anti-merger statute, RCW 9A.52.050 (1975), which only applies to current offenses, see: State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 779-82 (1992); 2-1, III.

State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 959-63 (2013)

Robbery and murder do not share the same criminal intent for offender score purposes, State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207, 216 (1988); burglary anti-merger statute, RCW 9A.62.050, gives trial court authority to impose separate sentence for burglary and other crimes committed during the burglary regardless of whether the burglary constituted same criminal conduct, State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 781-82 (1992); II.

State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 356-58 (2014)

Defendant strikes victim with a metal bar then rapes her, is convicted of assault and rape, trial court finds different intent and imposes consecutive sentences, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(b) (2002); held: while time, place and victim elements of the same criminal conduct test were met, trial court did not abuse discretion by finding that striking victim evinces an intent to injure rather than rape, cf.: State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183 (1993); 2-1, III.

State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.App. 92, 99-105 (2014)

In 2001 King County Superior Court sentences defendant for murder, counting three 1996 drug convictions as same criminal conduct although the sentencing court in 1996 treated the drug convictions as separate criminal conduct, at current attempted robbery sentencing court counts the 1996 drug convictions as separate criminal conduct, on appeal defense maintains sentencing court was estopped from counting prior drug convictions separately; held: a court considering whether multiple prior convictions constitute the same criminal conduct is bound by a same criminal conduct decision of the trial court that convicted the defendant of the prior offenses only where the trial court finding is for current offenses, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), but the current sentencing court is not bound by prior sentencing judge's decision that prior offenses were the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.525(5)(a)(i), thus judge sentencing defendant on attempted robbery properly analyzed the drug convictions using same criminal conduct analysis; I.

State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380, 395-97 (2015)

Convictions of possession of depictions of a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct 2°, RCW 9.68A.070, and dealing in depictions 2°, both involving same victims, is not the same criminal conduct because one addresses intent to possess and the other addresses propagation, thus intent of each is different; III.

State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870, 887-90 (2015)

While failure to challenge offender score by arguing that two offenses are the same criminal conduct may be ineffective assistance, here the state had requested an exceptional sentence, the court imposed a standard range sentence, it was strategic for counsel not to challenge the score in fear that the court would agree and then impose a sentence above the range; III.

State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016)

Rape of a child and incest based upon the same act is not the same criminal conduct, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013), see: State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); per State v. Westwood, 12 Wn. App. 2d 1065 (2020) (unpublished), only applies to child rape and incest, State v. Bobenhouse, 166 Wn.2d 881, 896 (2009), but see: State v. Johnson, 12 Wn.App.2d 201, 211 (2020), rev. granted on different issue, 196 Wn.2d 1001; 5-4.

State v. Johnson, 12 Wn.App.2d 201 (2020), rev. granted on different issue, 196 Wn.2d 1001

Police post Craigslist advertisement purporting to be a juvenile seeking sex with an adult, defendant responds with explicit desires, agrees to pay, drives to meet poster, is arrested, convicted of attempted rape of a child, attempted commercial sexual abuse of a minor and communication with a minor for immoral purposes, on appeal argues that counsel neglected to argue at sentencing that the offenses are same criminal conduct; held: test: objectively viewed do the crimes involve separate intent, State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218, 220 (2016); here, rape requires intent to have intercourse, commercial sexual abuse requires intent to engage in sexual conduct in exchange for something of value, communicating requires intent to communicate with a predatory purpose, thus the three have separate mens rea, thus not the same criminal conduct, but see: State v. Westwood, 20 Wn.App.2d 582, 591 ¶ 16 (2021), counsel was not ineffective; II.

State v. Canter, 17 Wn.App.2d 728 (2021)

Detective poses on-line as the mother of two children seeking sex, defendant responds, is arrested at the place he was to meet the mother and children, is convicted of two counts of attempted child molestation, argues same criminal conduct; held: crimes affecting more than one victim cannot encompass the same criminal conduct, State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 777 (1992); I.

Wooden v. United States, ___ U.S. ___, 142 S.Ct. 1063, 2121 L.Ed.2d 187 (2022)

Defendant enters a storage facility, steals items from ten different storage units, is convicted of ten counts of burglary, federal court enhances sentence for each burglary; held: ten burglary offenses arising from a single criminal episode did not occur on different occasions and thus count as only one prior conviction for purposes of Armed Career Criminal Act, 18 U.S.C. § 922(g); 9-0.

SENTENCING REFORM ACT
Wash*

State v. Hall, 45 Wn.App. 766 (1986)

Under former RCW 9.94A.360(12) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], a class C felony is washed out if defendant has five consecutive crime-free years anytime following the class C felony in question; I.

State v. Johnson, 51 Wn.App. 836 (1988)

A 1964 taking a motor vehicle conviction, which carried a ten year maximum, washes out after five felony free years since it is currently a class C felony, see also: State v. Wiley, 124 Wn.2d 679 (1994), State v. Failey, 165 Wn.2d 673 (2009); I.

In re Williams, 111 Wn.2d 353 (1988)

Where washed out priors are improperly considered by trial court, proper remedy is remand for resentencing, not withdrawal of guilty plea; SRA does not violate ex post facto clause; state has no burden to establish constitutional validity of prior convictions at sentencing, overruling State v. Marsh, 47 Wn.App. 219 (1987); state may thus use Department of Licensing abstracts to prove priors in vehicular homicide case; 8-1.

State v. Thomas, 57 Wn.App. 403 (1990)

Prior will wash out if more than five years old at time of guilty plea, not sentencing; presentence report stating that Department of Motor Vehicles shows a prior DUI conviction is not proof by a preponderance of the DUI, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 186 (1986); III.

State v. Weiand, 66 Wn.App. 29 (1992)

In determining whether out-of-state felony is comparable to class B or C felony for purposes of washout, former RCW 9.94A.360(3) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], Washington courts must use Washington elements in effect on date that out-of-state crime was committed; see also: State v. Cabrera, 73 Wn.App. 165, 168-9 (1994), State v. Cameron, 80 Wn.App. 374 (1996), State v. McCorkle, 88 Wn.App. 485 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Canha, 189 Wn.2d 359 (2017); II.

State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993)

Where jurisdiction is declined by juvenile court, prior conviction is adult felony for all purposes, including washout after age 23, see: State v. Sharon, 100 Wn.2d 230 (1983); I.

State v. Cameron, 80 Wn.App. 374 (1996)

A prior federal conspiracy to distribute marijuana conviction is equivalent of Washington class B felony for purposes of washout, former RCW 9.94A.360(2) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], even with prior drug conviction, since Washington's second-offense doubling statute,

---

* See also: PERSISTENT OFFENDER

RCW 69.50.408, would require filing of a criminal information alleging a previous drug conviction, and the feds, in this case, did not treat the conviction as a second offense; II.

State v. Watkins, 86 Wn.App. 852 (1997)

Defendant's 1971 class B felony had washed out as he had been "felony-free" for ten years; legislature amended former RCW 9.94A.360(2) in 1995 [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)] to require that a class B felony wash out only if defendant is "crime-free," trial court counts prior offense in determining offender score; held: amendment to SRA can revive a prior washed out felony, State v. Wood, 94 Wn.App. 636, 644-45 (1999), but see: State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 670-75 (2001), State v. Perry, 110 Wn.App. 554 (2002), State v. Dean, 113 Wn.App. 691 (2002); I.

State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999)

Washout provisions to SRA apply prospectively only and 1990 amendments do not revive a previously washed out conviction; reverses State v. Cruz, 91 Wn.App. 389 (1998); see also: State v. Aronhalt, 99 Wn.App. 302 (2000), accord: State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 670-75 (2001), State v. Deon, 113 Wn.App. 691 (2002), but see: State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004), cf.: State v. Swecker, 154 Wn.2d 660 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Hendricks, 103 Wn.App. 728 (2000)

Prior juvenile offenses that would not have been counted in adult offender score under the law that existed when the juvenile offenses were committed must be counted when the law in effect when the current offense was committed directs that they be counted, RCW 9.94A.345, distinguishing State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), see: State v. Swecker, 154 Wn.2d 660 (2005), State v. McDougall, 132 Wn.App. 609, 613-14 (2006); SRA amendment which "revives" a juvenile prior does not violate substantive due process or ex post facto clauses, see: Pers. Restraint of LaChapelle, 153 Wn.2d 1 (2004), State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004); II.

Pers. Restraint of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001)

At guilty plea, defendant agrees to offender score containing washed out-of-state convictions, sentence is within range without the out-of-state priors, files PRP; held: because there is no evidence that defendant knowingly agreed to an incorrect offender score or sentence range, he did not invite the error, cf.: State v. Hahn, 100 Wn.App. 391, 394-97 (2000) and may raise issue for first time in PRP; 9-0.

State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665 (2001)

Previously washed juvenile offenses were not revived by 1997 amendments to RCW 9.94A.030(12)(b), , see: State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), State v. Webb, 112 Wn.App. 618 (2002), State v. Dean, 113 Wn.App. 691 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Jones, 121 Wn.App. 859 (2004), but see: State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004), Pers. Restraint of LaChapelle, 153 Wn.2d 1 (2004), State v. McDougall, 132 Wn.App. 609, 613-14 (2006), cf.: State v. Swecker, 154 Wn.2d 660 (2005); reverses State v. Hendricks, 103 Wn.App. 728 (2000); 6-3.

State v. Deman, 107 Wn.App. 98 (2001)

In vehicular homicide case where prior DUIs had washed, they are still available to enhance, RCW 46.61.520(2), distinguishing State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999); I.

State v. Perry, 110 Wn.App. 554 (2002)

Where a juvenile conviction had not yet washed because defendant had not attained 23 years of age, then change in statute before convictions washed is applicable, defendant has no vested or due process right to assume that the convictions would wash, State v. Cunningham, 116 Wn.App. 219, 224-26 (2003), see: Pers. Restraint of Jones, 121 Wn.App. 859 (2004), but see: State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004), distinguishing State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665 (2001), State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), cf.: State v. Swecker, 154 Wn.2d 660 (2005); III.

State v. Hern, 111 Wn.App. 649, 653-56 (2002)

Defendant's priors include attempted robbery 2˚, a class C felony, committed in 1980, paroled in 1983, robbery 2˚ committed 1989, paroled 1990, plus current offense; trial court counts attempted robbery in offender score; held: because defendant was "crime free" between parole in 1990 and current offense, attempted robbery washed, State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665 (2001), but see: State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004); III.

State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004)

Washout provisions to SRA apply retroactively, 2002 amendments to RCW 9.94A.525 and 9.94A.030 may require courts to revive a previously washed out conviction, State v. McDougall, 132 Wn.App. 609, 613-14 (2006), but see: Pers. Restraint of LaChapelle, 153 Wn.2d 1 (2004), distinguishing State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 655 (2001); 8-0.

Pers. Restraint of Higgins, 120 Wn.App. 159 (2004)

Misdemeanor convictions and confinement on community supervision violations interrupt washout period, former RCW 9.94A.360(2) [now RCW 9.94A.525(2)], State v. Blair, 57 Wn.App. 512 (1990), State v. Smith, 65 Wn.App. 887 (1992), State v. Morris, 150 Wn.App. 927 (2009), but see: State v. Schwartz, 194 Wn.2d 432 (2019), Pers. Restraint of Nichols, 120 Wn.App. 425 (2004), State v. Ervin, 169 Wn.2d 815 (2010), ; III.

Pers. Restraint of LaChapelle, 153 Wn.2d 1 (2004)

Washed out juvenile offenses, per State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186, 199 (1999), State v. Smith, 133 Wn.2d 665 (2001), may not be counted in calculating offender scores for offenses which occurred before RCW 9.94A.525 (2002) became effective, and are not revived by the 2002 amendment, , State v. Dean, 113 Wn.App. 691 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Jones, 121 Wn.App. 859 (2004), see: State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004), State v. McDougall, 132 Wn.App. 609, 613-14 (2006); 5-4.

State v. Failey, 165 Wn.2d 673 (2009)

1974 Washington robbery is not equivalent to a class A felony and thus can and does wash, RCW 9.94A.030(32)(u) (2008); reverses State v. Failey, 144 Wn.App. 132 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Ervin, 169 Wn.2d 815 (2010)

Less than five years after release from a class C felony conviction, defendant is convicted of a misdemeanor, receives a suspended sentence part of which is later revoked, six years after the misdemeanor conviction defendant is convicted of a class C felony, trial court finds that incarceration on probation violation interrupts wash so prior felony counts in offender score; held: because defendant did not commit a new crime for five years and was not confined pursuant to a felony conviction during that period, his prior class C felony washed, interpreting RCW 9.94A.525(2)(c), but see: State v. Gauthier, 189 Wn.App. 30 (2015); reverses State v. Ervin, 149 Wn.App. 561 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Moeurn, 170 Wn.2d 169 (2010)

Attempted assault 2° is a class C felony subject to the five-year washout rule, RCW 9.94A.525(2) (2006), and is not treated as a completed offense, RCW 9.94A.525(4); 9-0.

State v. Cross, 156 Wn.App. 568, 586-90 (2010)

An uncertified DISCIS printout is sufficiently reliable to prove misdemeanor convictions defeating a claim that a prior felony washed out, State v. Labarbera, 128 Wn.App. 343 (2005), State v. Jones, 159 2231 (2007); 2-1, II.

State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 708-11 (2013)

Defendant is convicted of theft 1° in 1992, has no convictions until current crime but in 2003 is incarcerated for willful failure to pay legal financial obligations, trial court at sentencing concludes that prior theft washed, RCW 9.94A.525(2)(b) (2011), because he spent ten crime-free years; held: incarceration for a probation violation constitutes confinement pursuant to a felony precluding washout, State v. Blair, 57 Wn.App. 512, 515-17 (1990), State v. Perencevic, 54 Wn.App. 585, 589 (1989), see: State v. Gauthier, 189 Wn.App. 30 (2015), but see: State v. Schwartz, 194 Wn.2d 432 (2019); I.

State v. Gauthier, 189 Wn.App. 30, 40-42 (2015)

Defendant is arrested and charged with rape within five years of release of his last class C felony conviction, is convicted after more than five years, claims that under washout statute, RCW 9.94A.525(2)(c) (2013), he was "in the community" while incarcerated pending trial on the new offense; held: an offender score does not go down while in custody pending trial on a new felony, distinguishing State v. Ervin, 169 Wn.2d 815, 826 (2010); I.

State v. Crocker, 196 Wn.App. 730 (2016)

To determine if a prior conviction prevents an earlier conviction from washing out, RCW 9.94A.525(2)(c) (2013), sentencing court must determine comparability, State v. Marquette, 6 Wn.App.2d 700 (2018); a civil infraction in Washington is not a crime for purposes of washout even if defendant was convicted of the comparable matter in another state where it is a crime; II.

State v. Schmitt, 196 Wn.App. 739 (2016)

While federal bank robbery is not comparable to a Washington offense, Pers. Restraint of Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249 (2005), it remains "any crime" for purposes of preventing a prior from washing out, RCW. 9.94A.525(2)(c); the fact that federal bank robbery is not comparable does not mean that defendant, while in federal prison, was "in the community; II.

State v. Marquette, 6 Wn.App.2d 700 (2018)

An out-of-state conviction that is not comparable to a Washington felony or misdemeanor does not interrupt a wash period, State v. Crocker, 196 Wn.App. 730 (2016), 9.94A.525(2)(c) (2017); I.

State v. Schwartz, 194 Wn.2d 432 (2019)

Serving jail time for failure to pay a financial obligation imposed at sentencing does not constitute "confinement…pursuant to a felony conviction" under RCW 9.94A.525(c) and thus does not interrupt the wash period; affirms State v. Schwartz, 6 Wn.App.2d 151, 160 (2018); 5-4.

State v. Haggard, 195 Wn.2d 544 (2020)

A misdemeanor that is dismissed after completion of a deferred sentence, RCW 3.50.320, RCW 3.66.067, is not the equivalent of vacation, RCW 9.96.060(1)–(2), and thus will interrupt the five-year wash period, RCW 9.94A.525(2)(c) (2017), for purposes of calculating offender score, see: In re Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012), State v. Moore, 75 Wn.App. 166, 170-1 (1994); if defendant had moved to vacate the dismissed misdemeanor conviction, RCW 9.96.060 (2020), then it would have washed, cf.: State v. Conaway, 199 Wn.2d 742 (2022); affirms State v. Haggard, 9 Wn.App.2d 98 (2019); 5-4

SEX OFFENSES*

State v. Kalamarski, 27 Wn.App. 787 (1980)

Consent defense, court properly excluded prior consensual intercourse 18 months prior to alleged rape as within court's discretion; remoteness is within court's discretion, State v. Gregory,158 Wn.2d 759, 781-801 (2006); victim's psychotherapy four years earlier was collateral and thus within court's discretion to exclude; see: dissent re: application of rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020; III.

State v. Fleming, 27 Wn.App. 952 (1980)

"Hue and cry" of the victim, i.e., fact of complaint, is admissible as long as it does not go into particulars, including identity of defendant, State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020); I.

State v. Demos, 94 Wn.2d 733 (1980)

Trial court's exclusion of victim's prior 13 month old rape complaints upheld as irrelevant, since there was no evidence that the complaints were false; victim's failing polygraph inadmissible; court properly denied motions for psychiatric evaluation of victim in absence of a compelling reason, State v. Israel, 91 Wn.App. 846, 849-53 (1998); one who attempts to commit rape after felonious entry is guilty of attempted rape 1° even if defendant did not intend to commit rape prior to entering the building.

State v. Cain, 28 Wn.App. 462 (1981)

A finger is an "object" for purposes of the definition of penetration.

State v. Mendez, 29 Wn.App. 610 (1981)

In rape case, defense offered to prove that complainant had previously falsely accused her uncle of rape; held: within trial court's discretion to exclude.

State v. Miller, 30 Wn.App. 443 (1981)

Indecent liberties is a lesser of statutory rape 2°; accord; State v. Jolls, 38 Wn.App. 469 (1984).

State v. Cecotti, 31 Wn.App. 179 (1982)

Evidence that rape victim had consensual intercourse with two men other than defendant shortly after meeting them is irrelevant to issue of consent, and properly excluded by rape shield law, RCW 9A.44.020, State v. Gregory,158 Wn.2d 759, 781-801 (2006), see: State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1 (1983).

State v. Mounsey, 31 Wn.App. 511 (1982)

Rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020(3) does not deprive defendant of Sixth Amendment right of confrontation; III.

---

* See also: EVIDENCE/Child Hearsay

State v. Wilmoth, 31 Wn.App. 820 (1982)

Rape shield law, RCW 9A.44.020, properly precluded evidence that rape victim had sexual relations over a period of time with two men, State v. Gregory,158 Wn.2d 759, 781-801 (2006), no evidence of "random, careless sex following transient encounters"; III.

State v. Birgen, 33 Wn.App. 1 (1982)

Where defendant received concurrent sentences on convictions of rape 3° and statutory rape 3° arising out of a single act of intercourse, defendant was not subjected to "multiple punishment" for double jeopardy purposes, but one conviction must be struck and he must be resentenced because the rape and statutory rape statutes define a single crime of rape; I.

State v. Schuck, 34 Wn.App. 456 (1983)

Proof that victim and defendant were not married may be met by circumstantial evidence, e.g., victim was 14 years old, never spent the night with defendant; I.

State v. Kaiser, 34 Wn.App. 559 (1983)

Victim testified on direct that penetration occurred, but was equivocal on cross; defendant's confession to penetration plus third party's testimony as to "fact of complaint" corroborated and bolstered victim's credibility to make prima facie case; "fact of complaint" rule, while not substantive, may bolster credibility, State v. Hunter, 18 Wn. 670 (1898). State v. Bray, 23 Wn.App. 117 (1979), State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020); III.

State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287 (1983)

In statutory rape case, state called a worker from sex assault clinic to testify that sex abuse is more likely than not committed by a biological parent, defendant being natural father; held: inadequate foundation to admit this expert testimony; extensive discussion of foundation requirements per ER 702 and 703; character witness may not give opinion as to whether s/he would believe another witness, ER 608(a); cf.: State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990); see: State v. Braham, 67 Wn.App. 930 (1992); I.

State v. Peterson, 35 Wn.App. 481 (1983)

Prior incidents of sexual abuse against minor victim excluded where logical nexus between the incidents and victim's credibility is not established, ER 402; rape shield law and ER 403 do not apply; I.

State v. Bennett, 36 Wn.App. 176 (1983)

In statutory rape 3° case, state called two juvenile witnesses, not victims, who testified they had sex with defendant, having met him in a manner similar to victims, held admissible under ER 404(b); defense to statutory rape that defendant must prove by a preponderance that defendant reasonably believed victim was older based upon declarations of age, RCW 9A.44.030(2), is not met by behavior, appearance and general demeanor; must be explicit assertion from victim to entitle defendant to instruction, at 181, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 687-88 (2015); II.

State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1 (1983)

Rape shield statute does not violate confrontation clause; in applying rape shield statute, trial court may not consider prejudice to victim, but must consider probative value vs. "prejudice to fact-finding process;" complete discussion by majority of application of rape shield law; reverses State v. Hudlow, 30 Wn.App. 503 (1981), see: State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 781-801 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Wiatt, 151 Wn.App. 22, 43-44 (2009); accord: State v. Camara, 113 Wn.2d 631 (1989), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., supra.; 7-2.

State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131 (1983)

In indecent liberties case, trial court permits teacher to testify as to fact of complaint and to identify defendant as the offender identified by victim; held: error to permit hearsay testimony as to details of complaint or identity of offender and nature of the act, State v. Murley, 35 Wn.2d 233, 237 (1949), State v. Osborn, 59 Wn.App. 1, n. 2 (1990), State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58 (1991), see: State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020); harmless here.

State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122 (1984)

Defense seeks to introduce evidence of prior sexual abuse of minor victim to show that she had an independent familiarity with sexual acts and an ability to describe them; trial court excludes per rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020; held: rape shield statute does not apply as evidence went to prior sexual abuse, not misconduct, State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 177-82 (2001), and was admissible to rebut the inference that victim would not know about sexual acts unless she experienced them with defendant; refusal to permit defense to impeach victim with her prior inconsistent statement that only another person had abused her was error, see: State v. Bailey, 52 Wn.App. 42 (1988), aff'd, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990), State v. Kilgore, supra., State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003); II.

State v. Huxoll, 38 Wn.App. 360 (1984)

Hospital obtains and tests vaginal fluid sample from rape victim; defense moved for production for further testing; hospital reported it used entire sample or lost it; held: destruction of evidence by a third party does not require dismissal where state did not know of or authorize the destruction and no reasonable possibility exists that the missing evidence will be exculpatory, distinguishing State v. Vaster, 99 Wn.2d 44 (1983), overruled, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 303-04 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); here, court determines that evidence of guilt was overwhelming, and thus destroyed evidence could not have helped; III.

State v. Jollo, 38 Wn.App. 469 (1984)

Pursuant to plea negotiations, statutory rape defendant obtains psychological evaluation, a copy of which is provided the state; when no plea is entered, state uses defendant's admissions to psychologist in its case-in-chief; held: statements to psychologist made at state's request during plea negotiations are inadmissible even if defendant "breaches" plea bargain, ER 410; I.

State v. Kester, 38 Wn.App. 590 (1984)

Trial court need not define "consent," since failure to prove the element of forcible compulsion is consent; see: State v. VanVlack, 53 Wn.App. 86 (1989); III.

State v. Claflin, 38 Wn.App. 847 (1984)

Expert testimony, in statutory rape case, that late reporting is not unusual and that length of delay correlated with the relationship between the abuser and child is proper, see: State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727 (2009); opinion that defendant is statistically more likely to have committed the crime because of membership in a group (here, father figure) is improper; II.

State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984)

Defendant charged with one count each statutory rape and indecent liberties; victim-granddaughter testifies to numerous incidents; defense moves to require state to elect counts and to elect which incident is to be relied upon to convict; held: mere fact that victim is the same is not enough to call the offense a continuing offense or transaction; state must elect or jury must be instructed that they must be unanimous as to which incident has been proved, modifying State v. Workman, 66 Wash. 292 (1911); where complainant testifies she did not report incident for months, state may call expert to testify about delayed reporting patterns of sexually abused children, see: State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727 (2009); expert may not testify that defendant is a member of a group having a higher incidence of child abuse, State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287 (1983), State v. Braham, 67 Wn.App. 930 (1992); accord: State v. Gitchel, 41 Wn.App. 820 (1985), State v. Lochner, 42 Wn.App. 408 (1985), State v. Handyside, 42 Wn.App. 412 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984)

Child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, is constitutional; extensive discussion of interrelationship of tests of availability, reliability, competency; accord: State v. Jackson, 42 Wn.App. 393 (1985), State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986); see: State v. Anderson, 48 Wn.App. 543, 549-50 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985)

In absence of physical evidence, pediatrician cannot testify she believed child had been molested based upon interview of victim, see also: State v. Perez-Valdez, 172 Wn.2d 808, 817-19 (2011); state must lay foundation per Frye test to admit expert testimony that child molesters have outward manifestations of good character; while a continuing course of conduct may form the basis of one charge in an information, the mere fact that the rape victim is the same is not enough to find that the offenses contained in a single count constitute a single transaction, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984); I.

State v. Gitchel, 41 Wn.App. 820 (1985)

A child may be incompetent to testify in court even though child can receive impressions and relate them truly in other circumstances, within discretion of trial court; for purposes of child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, incompetency may not be equivalent of unavailability, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984); in determining admissibility of hearsay statement pursuant to statute, court must consider motive to lie, character of child, whether more than one person heard statement, spontaneity of statement and timing as well as advantage, if any, of cross-examining the child, Ryan, id.; I.

State v. Whitney, 108 Wn.2d 506 (1987)

Alternative means of committing rape 1° (kidnap and deadly weapon) do not constitute separate and distinct offenses requiring jury unanimity, distinguishing State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980); 7-2.

State v. Hodgson, 44 Wn.App. 592 (1986)

Defendant may be charged with statutory rape or indecent liberties even though his conduct also constitutes incest; indecent liberties is not a lesser of statutory rape 1°; accord: State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543 (1987), State v. Saiz, 63 Wn.App. 1 (1991), but see: State v. Bailey, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990); I.

State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

Where both parties stipulate that child victim is incompetent to testify, defense counsel fails to challenge victim's ability to relate just impression of facts at time she made hearsay statements, then prosecutor has met burden of producing declarant, distinguishing State v. Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986), State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984); III.

State v. Abbott, 45 Wn.App. 330 (1986)

The crime of statutory rape does not have a mens rea element, as it is a strict liability offense; II.

State v. Brune, 45 Wn.App. 354 (1986)

Incest, RCW 9A.64.020, is not a special crime which must be charged in all cases involving sexual contact with family members to the exclusion of statutory rape or indecent liberties; I.

State v. Brooks, 45 Wn.App. 824 (1986)

Semen found on an infant is sufficient to establish sexual contact for purposes of indecent liberties statute, State v. Jackson, 145 Wn.App. 814 (2008); III.

State v. Morely, 46 Wn.App. 156 (1986)

Trial court prohibits defense from introducing evidence at defendant's rape trial that victim had committed acts of prostitution; defense was that victim consented to sex with defendant in exchange for money; held: because court admitted some evidence of victim's prostitution and determined that the proffered evidence was dissimilar, no abuse of discretion; III.

State v. Tuitasi, 46 Wn.App. 206 (1986)

A parent's threat to abduct his child by force if wife-victim does not have sexual intercourse is sufficient to establish kidnapping for purposes of proving rape 2°; II.

State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986)

In indecent liberties case, where an adult unrelated male, without caretaking function, touches the sexual or intimate parts of a young girl, the jury may infer that the touching was for the purpose of sexual gratification, State v. Whisenhunt, 96 Wn.App. 18, 22-24 (1999), State v. Price, 127 Wn.App. 193, 201-02 (2005), cf.: State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991); accord: State v. Wilson, 56 Wn.App. 63, 68 (1989); II.

State v. Espinosa, 47 Wn.App. 85 (1987)

Denial of discovery of rape crisis center's interview notes with victim following in camera review will only be reversed for abuse of discretion, RCW 70.125.065; presence of a police officer during interview does not waive the privilege, State v. Gibson, 3 Wn.App. 596 (1970), RCW 70.125.060, distinguishing State v. Wilder, 12 Wn.App. 296 (1974); I.

State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987)

Expert testimony on "rape trauma syndrome" to prove that the victim did not consent is not sufficiently accepted in the scientific community to be admissible, and constitutes an opinion as to the guilt of the defendant, thereby invading the exclusive province of the jury, see: State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009), but see: State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990), State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990), State v. Graham, 59 Wn.App. 418 (1990).

State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543 (1987)

Under child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, a statement may still be spontaneous even if it is the product of police questioning if the victim volunteers the information; police officer who interrogates victim is more objective than a parent, distinguishing State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 176 (1984); I.

State v. Coe, 109 Wn.2d 832 (1988)

Mere threat to use a deadly weapon, without actually displaying same, is sufficient to charge rape 1°, State v. Hentz, 99 Wn.2d 538 (1983), see: State v. Majors, 82 Wn.App. 843, 846-7 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263 (1988)

In rape case, battered woman syndrome evidence is admissible in state's case-in-chief to show why victim remained in violent relationship and why she did not report violent acts to police, distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987); where defense to rape charge is consent, knowledge is not implicit element of crime, State v. Walden, 67 Wn.App. 891, 894-6 (1992); 8-1.

State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988)

In rape 1°, state need not allege or prove the crime defendant intended to commit, State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1 (1985), State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 196-99 (2014); Division II holds that Bergeron impliedly overrules State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982).

State v. Camara, 113 Wn.2d 631 (1989)

Consent is a defense to rape; burden of proof of consent is on the defense, overruled: State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Ortiz-Triana, 193 Wn.App. 769 (2016), State v. Knapp, 197 Wn.2d 579 (2021), see: State v. Buzzell, 148 Wn.App. 592 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Colbert, 186 Wn.2d 614 (2016), where victim testifies on direct that he does not enjoy the type of sex alleged to have been forced upon him, the door has not been opened to cross-examination on his past sexual conduct, State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1 (1983), as the direct testimony did not present victim's past sexual behavior in a "favorable light," RCW 9A.44.020(4), see: State v. Sheets, 128 Wn.App. 149 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Dodd, 53 Wn.App. 178 (1989)

Defendant, charged with statutory rape 2°, who reasonably believes that victim was between 14 and 16 years of age based upon declarations of age by the victim, may be convicted of the lesser included offense of statutory rape 3°, cf.: State v. Smith, 122 Wn.App. 294 (2004); I.

State v. Chiles, 53 Wn.App. 452 (1989)

Public indecency statute, former RCW 9A.88.010, is violated where defendant exposes himself in his home to persons on public sidewalk, distinguishing State v. Sayler, 36 Wn.App. 230 (1983).

State v. Tobias, 53 Wn.App. 635 (1989)

Lack of corroboration is not a compelling reason to order statutory rape complaining witness to undergo a psychiatric evaluation, State v. Demos, 94 Wn.2d 733, 738 (1980) State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991), State v. Israel, 91 Wn.App. 846 (1998); II.

State v. Warren, 55 Wn.App. 645 (1989)

In rape 1° case with 11 year old victim, failure of information to allege nonmarriage as element is not grounds for dismissal where raised for first time on appeal, see: State v. Stockwell, 159 Wn.2d 394 (2007); I.

State v. McKnight, 54 Wn.App. 521 (1989)

In rape 2° case, forcible compulsion does not require proof of physical resistance, any force that is more than normally required for penetration is sufficient, State v. Soderquist, 63 Wn.App. 144 (1991), but see: State v. Ritola, 63 Wn.App. 252 (1991), cf.: State v. Buzzell, 148 Wn.App. 592, 599 n. 2 (2009), State v. Gene, 20 Wn.App.2d 211 (2021), see also: State v. Gower, 172 Wn.App. 31 (2012), reversed, on other grounds, 179 Wn.2d 851 (2014); I, 2-1.

State v. Puapuaga, 54 Wn.App. 857 (1989)

A sleeping victim is physically helpless for purposes of proving indecent liberties, RCW 9A.44.100(1)(b); I.

State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989)

Indecent liberties may be committed without direct physical contact through the use of a "penis enlarger," In re Adams, 23 Wn.App. 517 (1979); II.

State v. Wilson, 56 Wn.App. 63 (1989)

In indecent liberties case, where defendant touched his daughter out-doors in a place where he would not be easily observed and defendant was only partially clothed and victim was disrobed, circumstantial evidence is sufficient to submit issue of sexual gratification, former RCW 9A.44.100(2)(a), to trier of fact, State v. Whisenhunt, 96 Wn.App. 18, 22-24 (1999), State v. Price, 127 Wn.App. 193, 201-02 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Harstad, 153 Wn.App. 10, 21-23 (2009), cf.: State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986), State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991); III.

State v. Danforth, 56 Wn.App. 133 (1989), overruled, in part, State v. McNallie, 120 Wn.2d 925 (1993)

In communicating with a minor for immoral purposes case, former RCW 9.68A.090, it is not unlawful for an adult to invite a 16-year old to engage in consensual sex because it is not unlawful for the adult to engage in sex with a 16-year old; statute is thus vague as applied; see: State v. Luther, 65 Wn.App. 424 (1992), State v. Wissing, 66 Wn.App. 745 (1992), but see: State v. Pietrzak, 100 Wn.App. 291 (2000); I.

State v. Goss, 56 Wn.App. 541 (1990)

Under Sentencing Reform Act Special Sexual Offender Sentencing Alternative (SSOSA), RCW 9.94A.120(7)(a), court cannot run terms concurrently and conditions consecutively; exceptional sentences are not permitted for SSOSA; I.

State v. Bailey, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990)

Defendant, charged with statutory rape 1°, is convicted of indecent liberties as lesser, to which defense does not except; held: failure to except waives issue, State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 748-9 (1986); even if instructing on lesser involved constitutional issue of notice of charge, harmless beyond a reasonable doubt; affirms State v. Bailey, 52 Wn.App. 42 (1988); but see: State v. Hodgson, 44 Wn.App. 592 (1986), State v. Saiz, 63 Wn.App. 1 (1991), State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Steele, 58 Wn.App. 169 (1990)

In multiple count statutory rape 1° trial, victim testifies regarding last count in time that defendant did "things similar to what [was] described earlier"; held: because most recent incident "described earlier" indisputably did not involve sexual intercourse, former RCW 9A.44.070(1) (now RCW 9A.44.073), then the evidence is sufficiently equivocal such that conviction on last count was pure conjecture, thus reversed and dismissed; I.

State v. Dubois, 58 Wn.App. 299 (1990)

Indecent exposure, RCW 9A.99.010, amending former public indecency statute, need not be committed in a public place, legislatively reversing State v. Sayler, 36 Wn.App. 230 (1983); I.

State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990)

Child victim's "sleep statements" telling defendant to stop are not hearsay, as not intended to be assertions, In re Penelope B., 104 Wn.2d 643, 652-3 (1985), and are relevant where expert testifies that nightmares are a common experience of sexual abuse; where sleep statements do not contain direct allegations of sexual abuse, then probative value outweighs prejudicial impact; expert's testimony as to behaviors consistent in sexually abused children that she had observed in working with such children in the field is admissible where expert does not testify that victims in this case fit a profile, State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263, 279-80 (1988), State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754, 764-65 (1989), State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009), distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987); I.

State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990)

In statutory rape case, therapist, acknowledging inconsistencies in victim's testimony, states it is not unusual for victims to be reluctant to testify, common for victims not to tell whole story or to add or subtract facts; held: therapist did not espouse a theory proving guilt, State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263 (1988), distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987), State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009),; because therapist's testimony was based upon her personal observations and was not an explanatory theory, then state need not meet test of Frye v. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923) or ER 702; I.

State v. Medcalf, 58 Wn.App. 817 (1990)

In statutory rape case, court admits officer's testimony that he observed X-rated videotapes in defendant's home; held: evidence showing lustful disposition should be admitted in sex offense case only when it tends to show such lustful inclination toward the victim, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 (2009), distinguishing State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131, 134 (1983), State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 729, 737-38 (1985), see: State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022); II.

State v. Falco, 59 Wn.App. 354 (1990)

Communicating with a minor for immoral purposes, former RCW 9.68A.090, is not a lesser of statutory rape 1°, former RCW 9A.44.070; I.

State v. Graham, 59 Wn.App. 418 (1990)

In statutory rape case, expert testifies that a delay in reporting abuse by young women is common, to rebut defense inference that delay demonstrated that victim was lying; held: testimony not offered to prove abuse, but merely that delay is not inconsistent with abuse, State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754 (1989), see: State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727 (2009), distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987); I.

State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58 (1991)

Report of sexual abuse to third party is admissible under "hue and cry" doctrine to prove that rape victim made a timely complaint, State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147 (1992), as long as details and identity of offender are not admitted, State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 481-2 (1998); I.

State v. Jackson, 62 Wn.App. 53 (1991)

Defendant orders 14-year old to lift up her skirt or he would kill her, backs her up but never touches her, is convicted of attempted rape 2°; held: evidence was sufficient, as it is doubtful that, under the substantial step requirement, an overt act toward penetration is necessary to prove attempted rape, State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017), distinguishing State v. Meyer, 37 Wn.2d 759, 771 (1951); substantial step can be proved by (1) lying in wait, searching for or following the contemplated victim, (2) enticing or seeking to entice victim to go to the place contemplated for the commission of the crime, and (3) unlawful entry of place where it is contemplated the the crime will be committed, Model Penal Code 9' 5.01(2), State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 451 n. 2 (1978); I.

State v. Bohannon, 62 Wn.App. 462 (1991)

Sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68.040(1)(b), and definition of sexually explicit conduct, RCW 9.68A.011(3)(e), are not vague, State v. Stellman, 106 Wn.App. 283 (2001); possession of depictions of a minor, former RCW 9.68A.070, and communication with a minor for immoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090, are not lessers of sexual exploitation; II.

State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991)

Evidence that family friend hugged juvenile around chest while she was on his lap, placed hand on her "front" and bottom on her underwear and touched her thighs outside clothing is insufficient to prove child molestation 1°, distinguishing State v. Wilson, 56 Wn.App. 63 (1989), State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986), State v. Camarillo, 115 Wn.2d 60 (1990), State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.2d 926 (1982), State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989), State v. Brooks, 45 Wn.App. 824 (1986), In re Adams, 24 Wn.App. 517 (1979), cf.: State v. Veliz, 76 Wn.App. 775 (1995), State v. Whisenhunt, 96 Wn.App. 18, 22-24 (1999), State v. Price, 127 Wn.App. 193, 201-02 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006) , State v. Harstad, 153 Wn.App. 10, 21-23 (2009); I.

State v. Saiz, 63 Wn.App. 1 (1991)

Child molestation 1°, RCW 9A.44.083, is not a lesser of rape of a child 1°, RCW 9A.44.073, as sexual gratification is not a element of rape of a child, State v. French, 153

Wn.2d 593, 610-11 (2006), see: State v. Hodgson, 44 Wn.App. 592 (1986), State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543 (1987), but see: State v. Bailey, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990), cf.: State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22 (2004); II.

State v. Ritola, 63 Wn.App. 252 (1991)

Respondent grabs victim's breast, squeezes, removes hand and comments on breast, convicted of indecent liberties by forcible compulsion, RCW 9A.44.100(1)(a); held: forcible compulsion is not force inherent in any act of sexual touching but rather is that used or threatened to overcome or prevent resistance; here, respondent caught victim by surprise, no time to resist, thus evidence insufficient, State v. Gene, 20 Wn.App.2d 211 (2021), distinguishing State v. McKnight, 54 Wn.App. 521 (1989); accord: State v. Weisberg, 65 Wn.App. 721 (1992), but see: State v. Buzzell, 148 Wn.App. 592, 599 n. 2 (2009), cf.: State v. Gower, 172 Wn.App. 31 (2012), reversed, on other grounds, 179 Wn.2d 851 (2014); II.

State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424 (1992)

Indecent liberties is not a lesser of statutory rape 1° and 2°, distinguishing State v. Bailey, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990); rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020, does not apply to evidence of prior sexual abuse; trial court's exclusion of evidence that defendant's son abused complainant in order to establish an anger motive for child to fabricate allegations against defendant was not an abuse of discretion; 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 167 (1992)

In permitting prostitution case, RCW 9A.88.090, defendant-desk clerk is convicted when two police officers, posing as hooker and john, lead her to believe they will engage in prostitution even though none would occur; held: "knowledge" includes subjective belief and need not accord with objective reality, as long as subjective knowledge instruction is couched in terms of a permissive inference; affirms State v. Johnson, 61 Wn.App. 235 (1991); 6-3.

State v. Maupin, 63 Wn.App. 887 (1992)

In felony murder (rape) case, evidence of sexual interest in child-victim's mother, comment that child was pretty and needed a father, panties missing from body of victim is insufficient to establish sexual intercourse or attempted rape; III.

State v. McNallie, 64 Wn.App. 101 (1992), aff'd, on other grounds, 120 Wn.2d 925 (1993)

To enhance communication with minor for immoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090, to felony, state need not prove prior felony sex offense was valid beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 187 (1986); facially valid conviction is sufficient; guilty plea form need not include waiver of right to remain silent, In re Harris, 111 Wn.2d 691, 697 (1988); I.

State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147 (1992)

Fact of complaint is admissible even if defense does not raise timeliness of complaint as an issue, State v. Murley, 35 Wn.2d 233, 236-67 (1949), State v. Chenoweth, 188 Wn.App. 521, 531-35 (2015), State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020); I.

State v. Hermanson, 65 Wn.App. 450 (1992)

Sex deviancy expert must be appointed for indigent defendant where state agrees to plea bargain a charge so that defendant is eligible for sex offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.120(7), if amenable to treatment; not an abuse of discretion to deny public funds for expert solely for sentencing purposes, absent state's agreement to reduce the charge if defendant is amenable to treatment; see: State v. Melos, 42 Wn.App. 638 (1986), State v. Tuffree, 35 Wn.App. 243 (1983), State v. Aamold, 60 Wn.App. 175, 177 (1991), State v. Young, 125 Wn.2d 688 (1995); I.

State v. Weisberg, 65 Wn.App. 721 (1992)

Defendant removes victim's clothing, tells her to lie on bed, she responds she doesn't want to, he tells her to do it anyway, defendant has intercourse, stops when she says it hurts, is convicted of rape 2° by forcible compulsion, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(a); held: victim's subjective reaction of fear is insufficient to establish, by itself, forcible compulsion, "lay down anyway" is not an implied threat of physical injury, thus evidence insufficient, accord: State v. Ritola, 63 Wn.App. 252 (1991), but see: State v. Buzzell, 148 Wn.App. 592, 599 n. 2 (2009); remanded for judgment and sentence on lesser rape 3°, but see: State v. Ieremia, 78 Wn.App. 746, 752-4 (1995), cf.: State v. Gower, 172 Wn.App. 31 (2012), reversed, on other grounds, 179 Wn.2d 851 (2014); III.

State v. Stark, 66 Wn.App. 423 (1992)

Evidence that defendant knew he was HIV-positive, had been counselled on safe sex, and that he engaged in unsafe sex is sufficient to prove that he intentionally exposed sex partner to HIV, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(e); existence of noncriminal explanation does not preclude finding that defendant intended to harm his sexual partners, State v. Whitfield, 132 Wn.App. 878 (2006); II.

State v. Wissing, 66 Wn.App. 745 (1992)

Adult asks minor to look at nude photographs, if he knows how to masturbate, asks to see pubic hair, which is declined, is charged with communicating with a minor for immoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090; held: while defendant's conduct was for sexual gratification, RCW 9.68A.011(3)(e), it was not in the context of a live performance, RCW 9.68.040(1)(b), and thus does not fall within the constitutional core of the charged statute, State v. Danforth, 56 Wn.App. 133 (1989), see: State v. McNallie, 64 Wn.App. 101 (1992), aff'd 120 Wn.2d 925 (1993), State v. Luther, 65 Wn.App. 424 (1992), and was thus vague as applied, but see: State v. Pietrzak, 100 Wn.App. 291 (2000), State v. Stellman, 106 Wn.App. 283 (2001); I.

State v. Walden, 67 Wn.App. 891 (1992)

Assault 4°, RCW 9A.36.041, is not a lesser of rape 2° by forcible compulsion, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(a), State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96, 101 n. 1 (2013), affirmed, on different grounds, 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015); I.

State v. Braham, 67 Wn.App. 930 (1992)

In child molestation case, expert testimony about "grooming," i.e., the dynamics of victim-offender relationships prior to initiation of sexual abuse, is inadmissible "profile" testimony which impermissibly places defendant in group more likely to commit crime, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287, 293 (1983), State v. Claflin, 38 Wn.App. 847 (1985), but see: Pers. Restraint of Phelps, 190 Wn.2d 155 (2018); I.

State v. McNallie, 120 Wn.2d 925 (1993)

In communicating with a minor for immoral purposes case, RCW 9.68A.090, instruction requiring communication to have been for "immoral purposes of a sexual nature" is adequate, court need not detail misconduct proscribed by RCW 9.68A, State v. Gladden, 116 Wn.App. 561, 566 (2003), but see: State v. Pietrzak, 100 Wn.App. 291 (2000); defendant need not make an express offer of payment in exchange for the minor engaging in sexual misconduct; affirms State v. McNallie, 64 Wn.App. 101 (1992); overrules, in part, State v. Danforth, 56 Wn.App. 133 (1989); 8-0.

In re A, B, C, D, E, 121 Wn.2d 80 (1993)

Mandatory HIV testing for convicted sex offenders, RCW 70.24.340(1)(a), does not violate privacy rights, even where there is no evidence of exchange of blood, semen or other bodily fluids; 5-2.

State v. Gurrola, 69 Wn.App. 152 (1993)

Sexual gratification is not an element of rape of a child, RCW 9A.44.073; III.

State v. Summers, 70 Wn.App. 424 (1993)

State need not call expert witness to prove mental incapacity in rape 2°/mental incapacity case, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(b); victim's testimony establishing ignorance of "the nature or consequences" of sexual intercourse may be sufficient; see: State v. Ortega-Martinez, 124 Wn.2d 702, 708-17 (1994); victim's past sexual behavior was properly excluded, RCW 9A.44.020, as prior acts of intercourse cannot demonstrate an understanding of nature or consequences of sexual intercourse, risk of undue prejudice to victim is high, benefit to defense is insubstantial; rape shield statute does not violate Sixth Amendment or CONST. Art. 1, § 22, Michigan v. Lucas, 114 L.Ed.2d 205 (1991); I.

State v. Morrison, 70 Wn.App. 593 (1993)

Where trial court revokes after suspending sentence under SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.120(a)(ii), court may then impose a year of community supervision even if not included in original suspended sentence; accord: State v. Daniels, 73 Wn.App. 734 (1994); I.

State v. Cozza, 71 Wn.App. 252 (1993)

Information charges indecent liberties of child between 1984 and 1987; held: defendant does not have a due process right to a reasonable opportunity to raise alibi defense, thus information alleging crime that occurred over three-year period is valid; see also: State v. Jordan, 6 Wn.2d 719, 721 (1940), State v. Warren, 55 Wn.App. 645 (1989), State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122, 126 (1984), State v. Bailey, 52 Wn.App. 42, 51 (1988), aff'd, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990), State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 429-31 (1996), State v. Yallup, 3 Wn.App.2d 546 (2018); III.

State v. R.P., 122 Wn.2d 735 (1993)

Forcibly kissing victim on neck, leaving hickey, is insufficient to establish sexual contact to sustain indecent liberties conviction, State v. Howe, 151 Wn.App. 338 (2009), reversing, in part, State v. R.P., 67 Wn.App. 663 (1992); 6-3.

State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993)

Victim invites defendant to spend night in guest bedroom, locks her own room, defendant breaks in and rapes her, is convicted of rape 1° for felonious entry of building, RCW 9A.44.040(1)(d); held: a bedroom within a single-family dwelling is not a separate building, RCW 9A.04.110(5), for purposes of burglary, cf.: State v. Dunleavy, 2 Wn.App.2d 420, 427-31 (2018), thus defendant committed rape 2°, not rape 1°, distinguishing State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988); II.

State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 813-21 (1993)

In child sex abuse case, expert testimony that behavior of victim is common to sexually abused children, specifically sexual acting out and nightmares, no Frye standard applied; held: when personal experience is used as a basis for generalized statements regarding the behavior of sexually abused children as a class, the testimony crosses over to scientific testimony regarding a profile or syndrome, whether or not the term is used, and should be subject to the Frye standard, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, , State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287 (1983); when the testimony is limited to the witness's observations of a specific group, Frye is not applicable, State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634, 646 (1990); because the use of testimony on general behavioral characteristics of sexually abused children is still in dispute among experts, its use as a general profile to be used to prove existence of abuse is inappropriate, State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987), see: State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009), although it is admissible to rebut allegations by defendant that victim's behavior is inconsistent with abuse; I.

State v. Dawkins, 71 Wn.App. 902, 908-10 (1993)

In child sex abuse case, where identity is not issue, evidence of uncharged incidents of abuse to establish "lustful disposition" of defendant toward victim, while relevant, State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 547 (1991), State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131, 133-4 (1983), can properly be excluded by trial court due to great prejudicial effect, ER 404(b), State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772, 781 (1984), State v. Bacotgarcia, 59 Wn.App. 815, 819 (1990), see: State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176 (2003), State v. Crossguns, 20 Wn.2d 211 (2022); II.

State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368 (1994)

In child molestation 1°, RCW 9A.44.083, bench trial, where court fails to enter finding that acts were done for sexual gratification, remedy is dismissal, see: State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22 (2004); III.

State v. Biles, 73 Wn.App. 281, 284-5 (1994)

Child rape victim's admissible hearsay that penetration hurt her is sufficient corroboration to admit defendant's confession, State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 485 (1998); III.

State v. Ortega-Martinez, 124 Wn.2d 702 (1994)

To determine whether victim is incapable of consent by reason of being mentally incapacitated for rape 2°, RCW 9A.44.050, mental incapacity is defined as condition which "prevents a person from understanding the nature or consequences of the act of sexual intercourse...," RCW 9A.44.010(4); trier of fact must determine whether victim had condition which prevented him or her from meaningfully understanding nature or consequences at time of offense, which includes physical mechanics, development of emotional intimacy, pregnancy, disease, State v. Summers, 70 Wn.App. 424, 432 (1993), State v. Al-Hadmani, 109 Wn.App. 599 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Young, 125 Wn.2d 688 (1995)

Decision to order a special sexual offender sentencing alternative sex deviancy expert at public expense is within trial court's discretion, see: State v. Melos, 42 Wn.App. 638 (1986), State v. Tuffree, 35 Wn.App. 243 (1983), State v. Hermanson, 65 Wn.App. 450 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995)

Incest and rape, from a single act, are intended by legislature to be separate crimes, and do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013), State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Arseneau, 75 Wn.App. 747 (1994)

In incest 1°, RCW 9A.64.020(1), age of step-children and adopted children, RCW 9A.64.020(3), is a defense, not an element of the crime; use of "step-daughter" rather than "descendant" in information is sufficient when challenged for first time on appeal; I.

State v. Veliz, 76 Wn.App. 775 (1995)

In child molestation 1° case where evidence establishes touching through clothing, trial court need not instruct that there must be additional evidence of sexual gratification, distinguishing State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914, 917 (1991), see: State v. Whisenhunt, 96 Wn.App. 18, 22-24 (1999), State v. Price, 127 Wn.App. 193, 201-02 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006); I.

State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d 353 (1995)

In rape 2° trial, victim claims force, defendant claims consent, court refuses rape 3° as a lesser; held: because there was no affirmative evidence that the intercourse was unforced but still nonconsensual, defense is not entitled to instruction on lesser, State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59, 67 (1990), State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360, 363 (1990), State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), State v. Buzzell, 148 Wn.App. 592, 603-05 (2009), see: State v. Bright, 129 Wn.2d 257, 273 (1996), State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64 (2009), State v. Hampton, 182 Wn.App. 805, 828-31 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015), cf.: State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014); per curiam.

State v. Aumick, 126 Wn.2d 422, 426-8 (1995)

Assault 4° is not a lesser of attempted rape 1°, as the greater can be committed without force or physical contact, overruling, in part, State v. Aumick, 73 Wn.App. 379, 381-4 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 754-7 (1995)

In rape 1° trial, victim testifies rape occurred with gun, defendant testifies to consent, trial court instructs on rape 2° as lesser, defendant is acquitted of rape 1°, convicted of lesser; held: while rape 2° meets elements test, State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 447-8 (1978), there was no affirmative evidence defendant committed only rape 2°, impeachment evidence that serves only to discredit the state's witness but does not itself establish that only the lesser crime was committed cannot satisfy the factual prong of Workman, supra, State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59, 67 (1990), cf.: State v. Ieremia, 78 Wn.App. 746 (1995), State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014), State v. Hampton, 182 Wn.App. 805, 828-31 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015), State v. Parks, 190 Wn.App. 859, 867-69 (2015)see: State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64 (2009); reversed and remanded for retrial on rape 2°; 9-0.

State v. Ieremia, 78 Wn.App. 746 (1995)

Rape 3° is an inferior degree crime of rape 2°, RCW 10.61.003, distinguishing between inferior degree crimes and lesser included offenses; a lesser degree offense instruction is improper unless there is evidence that defendant committed only the lesser degree offense, State v. Daniels, 56 Wn.App. 646, 651 (1990); where a crime is a lesser degree offense, there is no need to analyze the legal prong of State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 447-8 (1978); here, defendants either committed rape 2° or no crime, thus trial court properly excluded rape 3°, State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64 (2009), cf.: State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014); rape 3° is not a lesser included offense of rape 2°, distinguishing State v. Weisberg, 65 Wn.App. 721 (1992), State v. Bright, 77 Wn.App. 304 (1995); I.

State v. Brown, 78 Wn.App. 891 (1995)

Intent is not an element of rape, State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263 (1988), State v. Walden, 67 Wn.App. 891, 89406 (1992), State v. Elmore, 54 Wn.App. 54 (1989); voluntary intoxication is not a defense to rape, State v. Swagerty, 60 Wn.App. 830, 833-4 (1991); II.

State v. Chhom, 128 Wn.2d 739 (1996)

Rape of a child, RCW 9A.44.073, can support attempted rape of a child irrespective of the lack of a mens rea element in the greater offense, State v. Patel, 170 Wn.2d 476 (2010), distinguishing State v. Dunbar, 117 Wn.2d 587, 590 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Bright, 129 Wn.2d 257 (1996)

Where rape 1° complainant testifies that defendant-police officer remained armed with his handgun in holster but did not threaten to use it, there is sufficient evidence to support the deadly weapon element, RCW 9A.44.040(1)(a), at 265-73; rape 2° is a lesser of rape 1°; here, rape 3° is not a lesser; reverses State v. Bright, 77 Wn.App. 304 (1995); see: State v. Lubers, 81 Wn.App. 614, 619-21 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 429-31 (1996)

Defendant is charged with four counts of rape of a child over a two year period, victim testifies defendant committed offense at least four times up to two-three times per week, allegations of each count are identical; held: in sexual abuse cases where multiple counts are alleged to have occurred within the same charging period, state need not elect particular acts associated with each count as long as evidence clearly delineates specific and distinct incidents of sexual abuse, and jury is instructed they must be unanimous as to which act constitutes the count charged and that they are to find separate and distinct acts for each count, at 431, State v. Newman, 63 Wn.App. 841, 851, State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 842-3 (1991), State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357 (2007), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923 (2008), State v. Carter, 156 Wn.App. 561 (2010), State v. Corbett, 158 Wn.App. 576 (2010), State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 400-03 (2012); "generic" child testimony can support a conviction, State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738, 749 (1989), see: State v. Jensen, 125 Wn.App. 319 (2005); I.

State v. Maganai, 83 Wn.App. 735 (1996)

Victim is pulled from her car and sexually assaulted, defendant convicted of attempted rape 1°; held: entering a car that is not a motor home is not felonious entry, RCW 9A.44.040(1)(d), as vehicle prowling 2° is a gross misdemeanor, RCW 9A.52.100, thus defendant committed attempted rape 2°, State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993); II.

State v. Chester, 133 Wn.2d 15 (1997)

Concealing video camera beneath step-daughter's bed and secretly filming her while she dresses is insufficient to establish sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68A.040; affirms State v. Chester, 82 Wn.App. 422 (1992), see: State v. Grannis, 84 Wn.App. 546 (1997), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378 (2005) , but see: State v. Powell, 181 Wn.App. 716, 725-29 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Myers, 133 Wn.2d 26 (1997)

In sexual exploitation of a minor case, RCW 9.68A.040 (1989), defendant's videotaping seven-year old daughter's vaginal area in bathtub, coaxing her to exhibit her private parts and videotaping clothed genital regions of adults and children on same day is sufficient to establish that tape was made for sexual stimulation, State v. Bohannon, 62 Wn.App. 462, 472 (1991), see:

State v. Powell, 181 Wn.App. 716, 725-29 (2014), cf.: State v. Whipple, 144 Wn.App. 654 (2008); affirms State v. Myers, 82 Wn.App. 435 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Grannis, 84 Wn.App. 546 (1997)

Video of minor girls in a park that focuses on their clothed genitalia, buttocks and breast area, and another video of a minor girl bathing, taken through a crack in the wall, are insufficient to establish possessing visual or printed matter depicting a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct, RCW 9.68A.070 (2002), as the behavior was not "sexually explicit conduct," RCW 9.68A.011(3) (1989), State v. Whipple, 144 Wn.App. 654 (2008), see: State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378 (2005), but see: State v. Powell, 181 Wn.App. 716, 725-29 (2014); 2-1, II.

State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998) , abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010)

Requiring polygraph testing to monitor compliance with other conditions of community placement is valid, State v. Combs, 102 Wn.App. 949 (2000), State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 603 (2008); plethysmograph testing may be imposed by sentencing court as part of a treatment program, RCW 9.94A.120(9)(c)(iii), but may not order it unless it also requires crime-related treatment for sexual deviancy, State v. Castro, 141 Wn.App. 485, 493-94 (2007), State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 605-06 (2013), State v. Johnson, 184 Wn.App. 777 (2014), State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018); ordering a defendant convicted of a sex offense with a minor from having no contact with minors or frequenting places where they congregate is valid, State v. McCormick, 166 Wn.2d 689 (2009); ordering a sex offender who raped an adult from having no contact with minors is overbroad, cf.: State v. Williams, 157 Wn.App. 689 (2010); affirms, in part, State v. Riles, 86 Wn.App. 10 (1997), overruling State v. Holland, 80 Wn.App. 1 (1995), State v. Flores-Moreno, 72 Wn.App. 733, 742-5 (1994); 7-2.

State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998)

Six-year old child molestation complainant is permitted to testify via one-way closed-circuit television, RCW 9A.44.150(1); held: confrontation clauses are not violated where, following a hearing, substantial evidence establishes that child complainant under the age of ten would suffer serious emotional distress that would prevent her from reasonably communicating at trial if required to testify in presence of defendant, Maryland v. Craig, 111 L.Ed.2d 666 (1990), affirming State v. Foster, 81 Wn.App. 444 (1996); CONST. Art. I, §22 provides greater protection to defendants than 6th Amendment to United States Constitution, but live video is the functional equivalent of "face-to-face," cf.: State v. Ulestad, 127 Wn.App. 209 (2005), State v. Sweidan, 13 Wn.App.2d 53 (2020), State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022); 5-4.

State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 481-82 (1998)

Unavailable victim's hearsay statements that she had been sexually abused are admissible under the "hue and cry" doctrine, a caselaw exception to the hearsay rule allowing evidence that the victim made a timely complaint to someone after the assault, State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58, 63 (1991), even if defense does not raise timeliness of complaint as an issue, State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 151 (1992), State v. Murley, 35 Wn.2d 233, 236-7 (1949), as long as trial court finds particular guarantees of trustworthiness from totality of circumstances, State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994); details and identify of offender are not permitted; I.

State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999)

Felony murder/rape is not a sex offense, RCW 9.94A.030(33)(a), thus sexual motivation is a proper aggravating factor, State v. Halgren, 137 Wn.2d 340, 349-50 (1999), overruling, in part, State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Rosul, 95 Wn.App. 175 (1999)

For possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68A.070, knowledge of the age of the child depicted is not a defense, RCW 9.68A.110; construing statute to require proof of knowledge that defendant was aware of nature and content of the material plus an affirmative defense that defendant can prove that he was "not in possession of any facts on the basis of which he should reasonably have known that the person depicted was a minor" saves statute from overbreadth challenge, State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 731-42 (2009), see also: State v. Chambers, 23 Wn.App.2d 917 (2022); II.

State v. Montgomery, 95 Wn.App. 192, 199-201 (1999)

For purposes of defining penetration of vagina, labia minora are part of the vagina, RCW 9A.44.010(1), State v. Delgado, 109 Wn.App. 61, 64-66 (2001), rev'd, on other grounds, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003), trial court properly prohibited defense from arguing that labia are not the vagina; I.

State v. Harris, 97 Wn.App. 865 (1999)

In rape 3° trial, victim is visibly pregnant, defendant is not the father which defense offers to prove, excluded by court, defense offers to prove that victim had previously accused another of a different rape, which victim now denies, denied by court; held: evidence on nonpaternity, offered by defense so that the jury would not think defendant was the father, was refused within trial court's discretion as within the spirit of the rape shield law; prior rape allegation was properly refused as victim would deny it and it could only thus be proved by extrinsic evidence, which is not permitted, ER 608(b); III.

State v. Thomas, 98 Wn.App. 422 (1999)

Assault 4° is not a lesser of indecent liberties as intent is not an element of indecent liberties, but see: State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 909, 913-14 (1990), State v. Bluford, 195 Wn.App. 570 (2016), State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304, 310-11 (2006); III.

State v. Fiser, 99 Wn.App. 714 (2000)

Evidence is sufficient to convict school teacher charged with sexual misconduct with a minor 1°, RCW 9A.44.093(1), where the minor gains actual benefits in school during a sexual relationship establishes an indirect promise for these benefits; II.

State v. Pietrzak, 100 Wn.App. 291 (2000)

Taking nude photographs of a 16-year old is communicating with a minor for immoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090, which is not vague, see: State v. Luther, 65 Wn.App. 424 (1992), State v. McNallie, 120 Wn.2d 925 (1993), State v. Schimmelpfennig, 92 Wn.2d 95 (1979), State v. Falco, 59 Wn.App. 354, 358 (1990); III.

State v. Root, 141 Wn.2d 701 (2000)

Unit of prosecution for sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68A.040, is each photo session per minor, not each photograph, reversing, in part, State v. Root, 95 Wn.App. 333 (1999), see: State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 878-83 (2009), but see: State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Kistner, 105 Wn.App. 967 (2001)

Department of Corrections administratively sanctions, RCW 9.94A.205(2)(a), sex offender on SSOSA suspended sentence, RCW 9.93A.120(8)(a)(ii), for violating condition, later trial court revokes sentence based upon same violation, RCW 9.94A.120(8)(a)(vi); held: trial court has statutory authority to revoke even after administrative sanction is imposed, see also: State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997); I.

State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 177-82 (2001)

Where there is physical evidence of penetration in rape of a child case, evidence of prior sexual abuse of the child by another person is relevant, State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003), see: State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122 (1984); absent physical evidence, prior sexual abuse of a child may be relevant to prove the child's precocious sexual knowledge (detailed standards regarding admissibility, at 180-82); II.

State v. Al-Hamdani, 109 Wn.App. 599 (2001)

Rape 2˚ "when the victim is incapable of consent by reason of being physically helpless or mentally incapacitated," RCW 9A.44.050(1)(b), states a single means of committing the offense, not alternative means, distinguishing State v. Ortega-Martinez, 124 Wn.2d 702, 707-09 (1994); I.

State v. Glas, 147 Wn.2d 410 (2002)

Defendant surreptitiously photographs under skirts of women at a mall, confesses that photos were destined for a web site, is convicted of voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115(2); held: statute prohibits viewing or photographing "in a place where he or she would have a reasonable expectation of privacy," does not apply to a public place such as a mall, see: State v. Lawson, 185 Wn.App. 349 (2014), State v. Yusuf, 21 Wn.App.2d 960 (2022); statute is not overbroad or vague; reverses State v. Glas, 106 Wn.App. 895 (2001); legislatively overruled, RCW 9A.44.115 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Hall, 112 Wn.App. 164 (2002)

Adoption is not a defense to incest between a biological parent and the child he knows to be his offspring; II.

State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002)

Defendant pleads guilty to sex offenses, on defense motion court orders sex deviancy evaluation, at sentencing defense declines to provide report to court, court orders defense to disclose it, court then uses substance of report to impose exceptional aggravated sentence, finding future dangerousness; held: where court orders evaluation for SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670(3) implicitly authorizes the court to receive a copy; using defendant's unwarned admissions for purposes of a SSOSA evaluation violated his Fifth Amendment right, State v. Tinkham, 74 Wn.App. 102, 106-07 (1994), State v. Chance, 105 Wn.App. 291, 299 (2001), Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), distinguishing State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992), State v. Diaz-Cardona, 123 Wn.App. 477 (2004), but see: State v. N.B., 127 Wn.App. 776, 780-82 (2005), even though defense requested the evaluation; III.

State v. Allen, 116 Wn.App. 454, 463-64 (2003)

Assault 2º is not a lesser of rape 1º, State v. Walden, 67 Wn.App. 891 (1992); III.

State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003)

In rape of a child trial, state offers evidence of penetrating trauma to hymen, complainant denies on direct that she had previously engaged in sexual intercourse, defense does not ask on cross to explain or deny her pretrial statement to the contrary, defense allows witness to be excused, ER 612(b), offers extrinsic evidence of inconsistency which is refused because witness was not given opportunity to explain or deny, ER 613(b); held: because foundation for impeachment may be laid during cross or after extrinsic evidence is admitted by recalling the witness, State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63-72 (1998), counsel's performance was deficient; evidence of prior sexual conduct was not offered to show complainant's propensity for sexual conduct but rather to rebut state's implication that he had caused the trauma to hymen, thus rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020(2), does not bar the evidence, State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 177-82 (2001), State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122 (1984), see: State v. Posey, 130 Wn.App. 262, 275-77 (2005), 161 Wn.2d 638, 647-49 (2007); II.

State v. Woods, 117 Wn.App. 278 (2003)

In rape of a trial case, results of psychosexual evaluation opining that defendant has no predisposition to sexual attraction to children or sexual impulsivity is relevant, as sexual morality is a pertinent character trait in sex offenses, State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 823 (2000), but was properly excluded as opinion evidence is not admissible as proof of character, State v. Kelly, 102 Wn.2d 188, 195 (1984), ER 405(a); III.

State v. Oliva, 117 Wn.App. 773 (2003)

State agrees to recommend special sex offender sentencing alternative if defendant is amenable, court orders presentence investigation and evaluation at Eastern State Hospital, PSI reflects that defendant is not amenable, defense requests evaluation by certified sex offender treatment provider, state opposes, court sentences to prison; held: trial court properly exercised discretion in denying SSOSA evaluation, State v. Koivu, 68 Wn.App. 869 (1993), state did not breach plea agreement even though RCW 18.155.030(2)(a) provides that question of amenability is necessarily determined by certified provider; 2-1, I.

State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176 (2003)

In rape 3° case, trial court admits evidence that five years earlier defendant had touched breast of victim to establish lustful disposition toward victim; held: remoteness is a factor, but here trial court did not abuse discretion, at 182-84, State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 547 (1991), see: State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022); victim expressing lack of consent by actual words or conduct is a necessary element which must be pled, at 184-86; III.

Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004)

In child rape case, prosecutor tells 5-year old witness that, if she wants, she can say "I don't know" if she doesn't remember or "I don't want to talk about it" if she doesn't want to answer, witness answers most questions on direct but says she does not remember to some questions and declines to answer others; on cross, witness says she doesn't remember to some questions but never says she doesn't want to talk about it; held: while it is improper for prosecutor to give a witness permission to refuse to testify, "I don't remember" is a constitutionally acceptable response, United States v. Owens, 98 L.Ed.2d 951 (1988); because witness did not refuse to answer any defense questions, no confrontation clause violation occurred, State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152, 158 (1999), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 387-89 (2005), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 744-45 (2007), State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), see: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774 (2014); fractured opinion.

State v. Cannon, 120 Wn.App. 86 (2004)

Digital child porn image is "visual or printed material," RCW 9.68A.011(1), State v. Rosul, 95 Wn.App. 175 (1999), see: State v. Ritter, 149 Wn.App. 105 (2009), even before legislature added "digital images" to definition in 2002; II.

State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 24-36 (2004)

"Sexual gratification" is not an element of child molestation 1° and need not be in to convict instruction as long as "sexual contact" is in to convict instruction and jury is separately instructed about sexual gratification, overruling, in part, State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Castilla, 121 Wn.App. 198 (2004), op. withdrawn and superseded, 131 Wn.App. 7 (2004)

Defendant-nurse engages in intercourse with a rehabilitation center patient after he responds to her call for help, is convicted of rape 2°, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(d); held: health care provider who has sexual intercourse with a patient during a treatment session is guilty of rape, evidence is sufficient for jury to find defendant guilty when he is on duty and responds to call for help even if he is not assigned specifically to victim's care; I.

State v. Heming, 121 Wn.App. 609 (2004)

In RCW 9A.44.079(1), rape of a child 3°, age distinction does not violate equal protection clause, State v. T.J.M., 139 Wn.App. 845, 849-53 (2007); III.

State v. Smith, 122 Wn.App. 294 (2004)

A defendant may be convicted of rape of a child 3°, RCW 9A.44.079(1), even though the evidence establishes that the victim was younger than 14 years, see: State v. Dodd, 53 Wn.App. 178 (1989), as rape of a child 3° is an inferior degree crime of rape of a child 2°, RCW 10.61.003, proof of a greater charge necessarily establishes proof of all lesser included offenses; II.

State v. Jensen, 125 Wn.App. 319, 325-28 (2005)

Information alleges charging period of "on or about August 1, 2001 through February 19, 2002," victim testifies defendant came to her room and touched her private spot, on two other occasions he came to her room, but does not testify to sexual contact, hearsay is admitted in which victim said defendant touched her more than once, a few times; held: generic testimony can be used to support multiple counts if (1) the kind of act is described with sufficient specificity, (2) the number of acts committed is described with sufficient certainty to support each count alleged, and (3) there is testimony about the general time period, State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 438 (1996); here victim's testimony does not describe acts with sufficient specificity for jury to determine which offenses, if any, defendant committed on which occasions, so one count reversed and dismissed, State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 400-03 (2012); II.

State v. Bader, 125 Wn.App. 501 (2005)

Community custody for sex offense begins after the incarceration portion of sentence as reduced by earned early release time, and does not reduce the incarceration portion by the amount of the community custody, former RCW 9.94A.120(10(a), now RCW 9.94A.710(1)[2000]; III.

State v. McInally, 125 Wn.App. 854 (2005)

A sex offense in another state precludes eligibility for a SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670(2)(b), whether or not the prior offense would be a sex offense in Washington; I.

State v. Price, 127 Wn.App. 193 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006)

Evidence that defendant did not simply touch victim's vagina but rubbed it, even over her clothing, causing redness and swelling is sufficient for jury to infer sexual gratification, State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986), State v. Wilson, 56 Wn.App. 63 (1989), State v. Harstad, 153 Wn.App. 10, 21-23 (2009), see: State v. Veliz, 76 Wn.App. 775 (1995), distinguishing State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914, 917-18 (1991); 2-1, II.

State v. Ulestad, 127 Wn.App. 209 (2005)

Trial court finds that child molestation complainant may testify via closed circuit television, places complainant and attorneys in separate chambers, defendant, judge and jury remain in courtroom, court directs that if counsel wishes to object, judge will "lean through the door" to the room where attorneys are, hear objection and rule from bench; held: RCW 9A.44.150(h) requires that defendant must "communicate constantly" with defense counsel, here communication was delayed, not constant, to talk to jury defendant had to signal in front of jury and interrupt the trial; because court did not strictly follow the constant communication requirement, error is reversible without a showing of prejudice, distinguishing State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998); 2-1, II.

State v. Stevens, 127 Wn.App. 269 (2005)

Voluntary intoxication is a defense to child molestation, as "for the purpose of gratifying sexual desire," RCW 9A.44.010(2), is a specific intent requirement, whether or not it is an element of the crime, at 273-75, see: State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 34-35 (2004); assault 4° is a lesser of child molestation 2°, at 276-78; II.

State v. Sheets, 128 Wn.App. 149 (2005)

In rape case with consent defense, a witness' testimony that victim was drunk and flirtatious immediately prior to the sexual intercourse is not barred by rape shield statute, State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713 (2010), State v. Cox, 17 Wn.App.2d 178 (2021), as complainant's intoxication was the state's theory as to a lack of consent; 2-1, III.

State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 383-87 (2005)

Evidence is sufficient to prove possession of depictions of children engaged in sexually explicit conduct where pictures are on hard disk even though they had been deleted and were not accessible to an everyday user, detective was able to retrieve them and testified that whoever put them on hard disk downloaded or saved them, a witness testifies defendant showed them to a minor; III.

State v. Griffith, 129 Wn.App. 482, 490-92 (2005)

After both parties rest, court allows state to amend information from dealing in child pornography, RCW 9.68A.050(1) to possession with intent to deal in child pornography, RCW 9.68A.050(2); held: possession with intent is not a lesser included offense of dealing in child porn, as "there are a myriad of situations in which one could publish, disseminate or finance child pornography without ever possessing it," at 491, thus amendment was improper; II.

State v. Posey, 130 Wn.App. 262, 275-77 (2005), 161 Wn.2d 638, 647-49 (2007)

In rape case, trial court refuses offer of an e-mail written by victim stating that she would enjoy being raped and beaten; held: court's discretionary exclusion under the rape shield statute, RCW 9.44.020(4), was proper as the e-mail described events in which victim described potential prior sexual misconduct, thus had little probative value and violated rape shield statute, distinguishing State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122 (1984); III.

State v. Jackman, 156 Wn.2d 736 (2006)

Where age is an element of an offense, a jury instruction which provides the date of birth of the complainant is a comment on the evidence, State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54, 65 (1997), State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709 (2006), and cannot be harmless, Neder v. United States, 144 L.Ed.2d 35 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Luther, 157 Wn.2d 63 (2006)

State proves defendant possessed photos of what appear to be minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, but state does not prove age of minors, court convicts defendant of attempted possessing depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, RCW 9.68A.070; held: while one cannot be found guilty of possession of child pornography unless it is proved to actually be child pornography, Ashcroft v. Free Speech Coalition, 152 L.Ed.2d 403 (2002), First Amendment does not preclude conviction of attempted possession without proof of age of the minors, nor is attempted possession overbroad, United States v. Williams, 170 L.Ed.2d 650 (2008), see also: State v. Aljutily, 149 Wn.App. 286 (2009); affirms State v. Luther, 125 Wn.App. 176 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Clinkenbeard, 130 Wn.App. 552, 559-68 (2005)

Sexual misconduct with a minor 1º, RCW 9A.44.093(1)(b), which criminalizes "a school employee who has…sexual intercourse with a registered student of the school who is at least sixteen years old and not married to the employee, if the employee is at least sixty months older than the student" does not violate due process, equal protection or right to privacy, distinguishing Lawrence v. Texas, 156 L.Ed.2d 508 (2003), see also: State v. Hirschfelder, 170 Wn.2d 536 (2010); III.

State v. Clarke, 156 Wn.2d 880 (2006)

Following rape convictions subject to "determinate sentence plus," RCW 9.94A.712, trial court imposes exceptional minimum terms based upon unscored misdemeanors; held: sex assault convictions that are subject to RCW 9.94A.712 [recodified as 9.94A.507 (2008)] are indeterminate sentences, thus Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004) does not apply, as trial court is not enhancing the maximum sentence the judge can impose solely based upon facts reflected in the jury verdict or admitted by defendant, ISRB sets actual release date, State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 323-27 (2007), State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 686-89 (2009), State v. Bobenhouse, 166 Wn.2d 881, 895-97 (2009), overruling State v. Borboa, 124 Wn.App. 779 (2004), overruling, in part, State v. Monroe, 126 Wn.App. 435, 441-52 (2005), see: State v. Woodruff, 137 Wn.App. 127 (2007); affirms State v. Clarke, 124 Wn.App. 893 (2004); 7-2.

State v. Hosier, 157 Wn.2d 1 (2006)

Defendant leaves sexually explicit notes directed at children at places where children are likely to find them, father of one finds note, describes it to daughter as a warning, defendant is convicted of communicating with a minor for immoral purposes [CMIP], RCW 9.68A.090; defendant leaves another note at a cosmetology school expressing desire to kidnap and sexually abuse "young girls"; held: state need not prove that child victim must understand prurient nature of a communication, exposure to sexually explicit message was sufficient; where an adult finds the note and does not communicate its substance to a child, evidence is sufficient to prove attempted CMIP; affirms State v. Hosier, 124 Wn.App. 696 (2004); 8-1.

State v. Osman, 157 Wn.2d 474 (2006)

Denial of SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670, because defendant may be deported and thus will not be treated does not violate SRA or equal protection clause, cf.: State v. Adamy, 151 Wn.App. 583 (2009); affirms State v. Osman, 126 Wn.App. 575 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006)

Child molestation victim is asked on direct examination about touching, says "me forgot" to all questions, does remember talking to police but not what she said, trial court admits her hearsay statements; held: because the witness took the stand, testified, was asked about the sexual contact and about her hearsay statements, defense had opportunity to cross-examine, no confrontation clause violation occurred, Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774 (2014); affirms State v. Price, 127 Wn.App. 193 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Gregory,158 Wn.2d 759, 781-801 (2006)

In rape case with consent defense, trial court denies offer of victim's prior prostitution convictions as remote, refuses in camera review of victim's dependency files; held: rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020, may properly bar prior remote prostitution convictions, within discretion of trial court, see: State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1 (1983), State v. Cecotti, 31 Wn.App. 179 (1982), State v. Kalamarski, 27 Wn.App. 787 (1980), State v. Wilmoth, 31 Wn.App. 820 (1982); defense claim that victim was engaging in prostitution, had previously engaged in prostitution and if victim was currently engaged in prostitution would be reflected in dependency files was sufficient to require an in camera inspection of those files, Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 94 L.Ed.2d 40 (1987), cf.: State v. Diemel, 81 Wn.App. 464 (1996); 8-1.

State v. Autrey, 136 Wn.App. 460 (2006)

Following sex offense convictions, trial court imposes condition that defendant have no sexual contact with anyone "without his or her explicit consent;" held: condition is reasonably related to the crime, State v. Simpson, 136 Wn.App. 812 (2007); "explicit" is not vague; III.

State v. Stockwell, 159 Wn.2d 394 (2007)

Rape of a child 1° and statutory rape 1° are legally comparable crimes, RCW 9.94A.030(33)(b), but see: State v. Delgado, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003); nonmarriage was an implied element of statutory rape; affirms State v. Stockwell, 129 Wn.App. 230 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Woodruff, 137 Wn.App. 127 (2007)

Following child rape convictions subject to "determinate sentence plus," RCW 9.94A.712 [recodified as 9.94A.507 (2008)], trial court imposes consecutive sentences without finding aggravating factors; held: while exceptional sentences for indeterminate sentences need not be submitted to a jury, State v. Clarke, 156 Wn.2d 880 (2006), State v. Bobenhouse, 166 Wn.2d 881, 895-97 (2009), trial court must still specify aggravating circumstances and enter findings of fact consistent with RCW 9.94A.535; II.

State v. Fleming, 137 Wn.App. 645 (2007)

Defendant looks over stall of public restroom, sees victim disrobed, sticks out tongue, he runs, is convicted of voyeurism; held: jury reasonably found that defendant viewed victim "for more than a brief period of time, in other than a casual or cursory manner," RCW 9A.44.115(1)(e), State v. Stutzke, 2 Wn.App.2d 927, 934-37 (2018), see also: State v. Diaz-Flores, 148 Wn.App. 922 (2009), State v. Yusuf, 21 Wn.App.2d 960 (2022); 2-1, III.

State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736 (2007)

Rape and assault victim provides details of offense, including name of perpetrator, to forensic nurse at hospital using a history questionnaire, stating that she went to the hospital to "gather evidence" and to identify injuries, nurse testifies at trial; held: a party demonstrates a statement to be reasonably pertinent to medical treatment when (1) the declarant's motive in making the statement is to promote treatment and (2) the medical professional reasonably relied on the statement for purposes of treatment, at 746, State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214, 220 (1989); here, victim did not go to hospital for purely forensic reasons; in sexual abuse situation, a declarant's statement disclosing identity of a closely-related perpetrator is admissible, ER 803(a)(4), to prevent recurrence and future injury, at 746 ¶ 20, see: State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 482 (1998), State v. Sims, 77 Wn.App. 236, 239 (1995) (dicta here); II.

State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910, 916-22 (2007)

"Intimate areas" in voyeurism statute, RCW 9A.44.115(20(b), is neither vague nor overbroad; II.

State v. Sivins, 138 Wn.App. 52, 62-65 (2007)

Defendant engages in sexually graphic internet chat with officer whom he believes is a 13-year old girl, tells her he would have sex with her if she wants, entices her with pizza and vodka, drives to motel room, sufficient to establish attempted rape of a child, State v. White, 150 Wn.App. 337 (2009), State v. Wilson, 158 Wn.App. 305, 316-20 (2010), see: State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666, 679 (2002); III.

State v. Sutherby, 138 Wn.App. 609, 613-16 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 870, 878-83 (2009)

Simultaneously possessing multiple materials of child pornography, RCW 9.68.070, 9.68A.011(2), in the same location is one unit of prosecution, but see: State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015); I.

State v. Gartrell, 138 Wn.App. 787 (2007)

Where court revokes a SSOSA suspended sentence, RCW 9.94A.670(4), time served in total or partial confinement must be credited against the standard range, but community custody time served prior to revocation is not to be credited against community custody imposed upon release after serving the standard range; I.

State v. T.J.M., 139 Wn.App. 845 (2007)

Precluding consent as a defense to rape of a child 1º does not violate equal protection nor due process clauses, State v. Heming, 121 Wn.App. 609, 612 (2004); II.

State v. Ramirez, 140 Wn.App. 278, 290-93 (2007)

Unlike at sentencing, at a SSOSA revocation hearing trial court need not consider victim's opinion, distinguishing RCW 9.94A.670(4); II.

State v. Partee, 141 Wn.App. 355 (2007)

Where sentence is conditionally suspended under sex offender sentencing alternative (SSOSA), RCW 9.94A.670, upon proof of violation trial court has discretion to impose consecutive 60-day sanctions for each violation, RCW 9.94A.634, or revoke and execute original sentence, State v. Badger, 64 Wn.App. 904 (1992); 2-1, II.

State v. Hughes, 142 Wn.App. 213 (2007)

As a result of one act of intercourse, defendant pleads guilty to rape of a child 2º, RCW 9A.44.076(1), and rape 2º, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(b); held: because legislature intended multiple punishment, see: Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 815 (2004), double jeopardy clause is not offended by the two convictions for the same act, State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013); 2-1, III.

State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 324-28 (2008), 166 Wn.2d 891 (2009)

In child rape and incest case, victim testifies defendant committed oral sex and anal sex, no unanimity instruction is offered, state does not elect; held: each of the methods of sexual intercourse constitutes a distinct criminal act, not alternative means, see: State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 498 (2007), failure to give unanimity instruction is error; absent contravening evidence, plus general denial, similar acts, error is harmless, State v. Camarillo, 115 Wn.2d 60, 62-63 (1990); III.

State v. Bucknell, 144 Wn.App. 524 (2008)

Defendant rapes victim who is paralyzed but can speak and understand and perceive information, in convicted of rape 2º, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(b); held: a victim who is able to communicate is not "physically helpless," RCW 9A.44.010(5), court of appeals remands for entry of judgment for rape 3º; III.

State v. Whipple, 144 Wn.App. 654 (2008)

Defendant photographs teenager nude unbeknownst to her, is convicted of possessing depictions of a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct, RCW 9.68A.070 (2002); held: absent evidence defendant aided, invited, employed, authorized or caused victim to engage in sexually explicit conduct, evidence is insufficient, State v. Chester, 133 Wn.2d 15 (1997), State v. Grannis, 84 Wn.App. 546 (1997), but see: State v. Powell, 181 Wn.App. 716, 725-29 (2014), cf.: State v. Myers, 133 Wn.2d 26 (1997); 2-1, II.

State v. O'Cain, 144 Wn.App. 772 (2008)

Community custody provision following rape conviction prohibited internet access; held: absent evidence that defendant accessed the internet before the rape or that the internet contributed to the crime, prohibiting internet access is not crime-related, RCW 9.94B.050(5)(e), internet access is not affirmative conduct reasonably related to the circumstances of the offense, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.App. 318, 330-31 (2014), thus RCW 9.94A.712(6)(a) (2006) [recodified as 9.94A.507 (2008)] is inapplicable, see: Packingham v. North Carolina, 137 S. Ct. 1730, 1731, 198 L. Ed. 2d 273 (2017); I.

State v. Jackson, 145 Wn.App. 814 (2008)

Ejaculating semen on a juvenile is sufficient to establish sexual contact and touching for purposes of child molestation, RCW 9A.44.010(2) (2007), 9A.44.086 (1994), State v. Brooks, 45 Wn.App. 824 (1986); I.

State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923, 937-40 (2008)

At child molestation trial, defense counsel asks detective if other members of the family corroborated complainant's allegations, detective says none, on redirect prosecutor asks if this is unusual, detective testifies about other cases in which family members did not support the complainant, defense claims on appeal that counsel was ineffective for not objecting; held: defense opened the door to detective's testimony about his experience in past cases; I.

State v. Buzzell, 148 Wn.App. 592 (2009)

Consent negates forcible compulsion and is thus a defense to indecent liberties, RCW 9A.44.100(1)(a), State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Ortiz-Triana, 193 Wn.App. 769 (2016), but failure to instruct here was harmless error, see: State v. Teas, 10 Wn.App.2d 111 (2019); rape 3º is not a lesser of indecent liberties; I.

State v. Diaz-Flores, 148 Wn.App. 911 (2009)

Defendant is seen masturbating while looking through a window at a man and woman having sexual intercourse in their home, is convicted of two counts of voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115; held: unit of prosecution, State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629, 634 (1998), for voyeurism is each victim whose privacy right is violated; state need not prove that each victim aroused defendant where there is evidence that defendant viewed both with the purpose of arousing his sexual desires; I.

State v. Ritter, 149 Wn.App. 105 (2009)

Webcam image is a "photograph" for purposes of sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.96A.040, even if it is not downloaded and saved, RCW 9.68A.011(1); III.

State v. Aljutily, 149 Wn.App. 286 (2009)

Defendant is convicted of communicating with a minor for immmoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090(2), for sexual e-mailing a police officer posing as a child; held: statute which prohibits electronic communication with a person defendant believes is a minor is not overbroad and does not burden protected speech; III.

State v. Jagger, 149 Wn.App. 525 (2009)

Escape of a sexually violent predator, RCW 9A.76.115, does not unconstitutionally criminalize escape from a civil facility nor violate double jeopardy and equal protection clauses; II.

State v. McCormick, 166 Wn.2d 689 (2009)

Trial court revokes SSOSA sentence for defendant's frequenting areas where minors are known to congregate, fails to find willfulness; held: in a SSOSA revocation, trial court need not find willfulness, State v. Miller, 180 Wn.App. 413 (2014); affirms State v. McCormick, 141 Wn.App. 256 (2007); 8-1.

State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009)

In rape case with consent defense, sexual assault nurse examiner testifies that victim's injuries were caused by nonconsensual sex; held: explicit, overt and unambiguous opinion that victim was raped, as opposed to an opinion that injuries were consistent with nonconsensual sex, at 653 n. 2, is an improper opinion of guilt, State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336, 348 (1987), State v. Carlson, 80 Wn.App. 116 (1995); 2-1, I.

State v. Torres, 151 Wn.App. 378 (2009)

In custodial sexual misconduct 1º case, "being detained" means "restraint on freedom of movement to such a degree that a reasonable person would not have felt free to leave," see: State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997), and does not mean under arrest or in custody; I.

State v. Adamy, 151 Wn.App. 583 (2009)

Sentencing court refuses to consider SSOSA because defendant has an immigration hold; held: while immigration status is a factor the court may consider in deciding whether or not to impose a SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670, impact of deportation hold does not bar a SSOSA, thus court abused discretion, cf.: State v. Osman, 157 Wn.2d 474 (2006); III.

State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 731-42 (2009)

Child porn to convict instruction that puts burden on state to prove that defendant knowingly possessed child porn and that he knew the person depicted was a minor is adequate, State v. Rosul, 95 Wn.App. 175 (1999); trial court need not sua sponte instruct that jury can consider duration of defendant's control in evaluating whether state carried its burden on the element of possession, see: State v. Staley, 123 Wn.2d 794, 803 (1994); court should not give unwitting possession instruction as possession of child pornography has a scienter element; I.

State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64 (2009)

In rape 2º case, trial court may not give rape 3º inferior degree instruction when defendant contends that the intercourse was consensual and victim testifies that it was forced, see: State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d 353, 355-56 (1995), State v. Ieremia, 78 Wn.App. 746, 756 (1995), State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448, 455-56 (2000), State v. Hampton, 182 Wn.App. 805, 828-31 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015), cf.: State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014); 2-1, II.

State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713 (2010)

In rape case, trial court, applying rape shield statute, prohibits defendant from testifying that defendant, complainant and others were engaged in a "sex party" and that the sex was consensual; held: no state interest can be compelling enough to preclude introduction of evidence that, if believed, would provide a complete defense, cf.: State v. Lizarraga, 191 Wn.App. 530 (2015), State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017), see: State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017), State v. Cox, 17 Wn.App.2d 178 (2021); Sixth Amendment right to present a defense was violated, cf.: State v. Horn, 3 Wn.App.2d 302 (2018), State v. Blair, 3 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018); rape shield statute is designed to exclude evidence of complainant's past sexual behavior, RCW 9A.44.020(2), which has little or no probative value in predicting a victim's consent on the occasion in question, but evidence of actual consent must be admitted; 9-0.

State v. Meacham, 154 Wn.App. 467 (2010)

Trial court is precluded by RCW 9.94A.835(c) from granting a pretrial motion to dismiss a sexual motivation special allegation for lack of sufficient evidence, CrR 8.3(c), State v. Knapstad, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986), absent a prosecutor's motion; II.

State v. Furseth, 156 Wn.App. 516 (2010)

Multiple images of child porn are found on defendant's computer, defendant is charged with one count of possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68A.070 (1990), trial court does not give unanimity instruction, state does not elect a single picture; held: unit of prosecution is one count per possession without regard to the number of images, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870 (2009), but see: State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015), thus it is not a multiple act case, State v. Bobenhouse, 166 Wn.2d 881, 892 (2009), thus a unanimity instruction is not required; I.

State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50 (2010)

Federal Adam Walsh Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3509(m), does not preempt CrR 4.7, state is obliged to provide child pornography discovery to defense counsel, State v. Boyd, 160 Wn.2d 424 (2007); II.

State v. Vars, 157 Wn.App. 482 (2010)

Wandering naked through the streets is sufficient to prove indecent exposure, RCW 9A.88.010 (2003), even if state fails to prove that someone saw defendant's genitalia; trial court properly admitted prior convictions to prove sexual motivation, RCW 9.94A.835 (2009), after

ER 404(b) findings and balancing; a single undressing, observed by more than one person in different spots in the neighborhood establishes a single unit of prosecution permitting conviction of one count, see: State v. Hall, 168 Wn.2d 726 (2010); I.

State v. Patel, 170 Wn.2d 476 (2010)

Where a victim is a fictitious character created by police, state may prove attempted rape of a child by establishing that defendant specifically intended to have sex with an underage person and took substantial steps toward that objective, State v. Johnson, 173 Wn.2d 895 (2012), see: State v. Chhom, 128 Wn.2d 739 (1996), State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Hirschfelder, 170 Wn.2d 536 (2010)

Sexual misconduct with a minor, RCW 9A.44 093(1)(b) (2005), criminalized sex between a school employee and any registered student age 16 or older, reversing State v. Hirschfelder, 148 Wn.App. 328 (2009); statute is neither vague nor violative of equal protection clause; 5-4.

State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-66 (2011)

Defendant is charged with multiple counts of rape over the same charging period, instructions require unanimity but do not require that jury must find a "separate and distinct act" for each count; held: it is error not to instruct that jury must find a separate and distinct act for each count where multiple counts are identically charged, State v. Carter, 151 Wn.App. 561 (2010), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923 (2008), State v. Wallmuller, 164 Wn.App. 890 (2011), State v. Sanford, 15 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020); despite deficient instructions, where it is manifestly apparent that the jury found separate acts, then appellate court may be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the instructions did not actually effect a double jeopardy violation, State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 599-603 (2013), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 823-26 (2014), State v. Daniels, 183 Wn.App. 109 (2014), State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Corbett, 158 Wn.App. 576 (2010)

Child's testimony that when blindfolded defendant put a "soft thing" in her mouth that felt like skin, had no fingernail and on another occasion defendant put his penis in her mouth and it felt the same is sufficient to prove child rape, at 587-88; failure of trial court to instruct jury that it must find separate and distinct acts to convict of identically charged offenses is harmless where defense does not object and proposes same flawed instructions and closing arguments made it clear that jury must find separate and distinct acts for each verdict, at 591-93, State v. Carson, 179 Wn.App. 961, 972-80 (2014), but see: State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 431 (1996), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 846 (1991), State v. Ellis, 71 Wn.App. 400, 404-06 (1993), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923 (2008), State v. Carter, 156 Wn.App. 561 (2010), State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357, 364-71 (2007), State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 400-03 (2012), State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 599-603 (2013), cf.: State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-66 (2011); II.

State v. Deer, 158 Wn.App. 854, 861-65 (2010)

Defendant, charged with rape of a child, testifies she was asleep when complainant had sexual intercourse with her, trial court instructs that defense has the burden of proving that complainant had intercourse with defendant without her knowledge or consent; held: while rape of a child lacks a mens rea element, due process requires that state prove a minimal mental element of volition where there is evidence of a lack of volition, State v. Eaton, 168 Wn.2d 476, 481-83 (2010), see: State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 387-92 (2012), error to place burden on defendant; I.

State v. Weaville, 162 Wn.App. 801 (2011)

In rape trial, court responds to jury inquiry as to whether "touching" is "slight penetration" by defining, over objection, penetration as any contact between sex organs, pursuant to RCW 7.90.010(5) (2006) applicable to Sexual Assault Protection Order Act; held: sexual intercourse requires some penetration, RCW 9A.44.010 (2007); while penetration is not defined, it must be more than contact, touching can occur without penetration, thus court's definition was in error, at 812-17; victim testifies that defendant raped her and that defendant assisted another in attempting to rape her, both while she was incapable of consent because she was helpless, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(b) (2007), defendant testifies to consent, trial court categorically rejects defendant's evidence that he had had consensual sex with victim in past, holding that prior consensual sexual activity could never be relevant to a charge of rape/incapable of consent; held: trial court should have considered evidence of defendant's prior alleged consensual sex in determining relevancy to the charge of rape, but because defense did not present evidence that prior sexual encounter involved a third party, prior consent was not error with respect to the charge of attempted rape, at 817-21; evidence that victim's underwear contained semen of a person other than defendant and defendant's friend was inadmissible as improper to show promiscuity and irrelevant to show that victim presented false evidence by presenting her underwear to police knowing it contained someone else's semen, at 821-22; I.

State v. A.M., 163 Wn.App. 414 (2011)

Penetration of the buttocks but not the anus does not meet the ordinary meaning of "sexual intercourse," RCW 9A.44.010(1)(a) (2007), and thus is not rape; because attempted rape requires proof of intent and rape does not, remand for trial court to enter a conviction of attempted rape is not permitted where trial court did not expressly make a finding as to intent; while state charged child molestation in the alternative, failure of trial court to enter findings of fact as to alternate crime precludes remand for entry of those findings, see: State v. Hescock, 98 Wn.App 600 (1999); I.

State v. Pannell, 173 Wn.2d 222 (2011)

Defendant whose SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670, is revoked is not entitled to credit against his maximum prison sentence for non-custodial time spent while sentence was suspended; 9-0.

State v. Gresham, 173 Wn.2d 405 (2012)

RCW 10.58.090 directing that prior sex offenses are admissible irrespective of ER 404(b) analysis violates separation of powers doctrine, State v. Gower, 179 Wn.2d 851 (2014), reversing

State v. Gresham, 153 Wn.App. 659 (2009); defendant, while on a trip with his granddaughter and her parents, fondles victim while parents are asleep, trial court admits evidence of molestation against other girls which occurred while their parents were asleep, both while defendant was on a trip with the other girls and at defendant's home; held: trial court did not abuse discretion in finding that the similarities established a common scheme or plan and that the differences are explained as "individual manifestations" of the same plan, State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 860 (1995), commonality need not be a "unique method of committing the crime," State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11, 20-21 (2003), cf.: State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014), State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017); defendant's proposed limiting instruction telling jury that the evidence admitted to show a common scheme or plan but could not be considered as evidence that defendant's conduct conformed with the conduct in the prior allegations is incorrect since conformity is the point of the relevance of the evidence and thus properly refused, but trial court erred in not correctly instructing the jury notwithstanding defendant's failure to propose a correct instruction, State v. Goebel, 36 Wn.2d 367, 379 (1950), court is obliged to give a correct instruction sua sponte, at least where defense proposes a flawed instruction, harmless here; 7-2.

State v. Rice, 174 Wn.2d 884 (2012)

RCW 9.94A.836, -.836 and -.837 (2006) which require a prosecutor to file special allegations are directory, not mandatory ("shall" means "may"), do not violate separation of powers doctrine as state still maintains discretion; affirms State v. Rice,159 Wn.App. 545 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Landsiedel, 165 Wn.App. 886 (2012)

Defendant is convicted of attempted rape of a child for soliciting a police officer posing as a juvenile on the internet, seeks a SSOSA claiming that his wife satisfies the statutory definition of victim when she suffered emotional harm as a result of his crime; held: to be eligible for a SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670(2)(e) (2009) requires that "offender had an established relationship with…the victim," who must be the direct victim of the crime, State v. Willholte, 165 Wn.App. 911 (2012); I.

State v. Higgins, 168 Wn.App. 845, 853-59 (2012)

In rape 3°, RCW 9A.44.060(1)(a) (1999), "clearly expressed" lack of consent applies to the victim's protestations not defendant's subject perception of victim's response as expressed by her words and conduct, State v. Elmore, 54 Wn.App. 54, 57 (1989); III.

State v. Deer, 175 Wn.2d 725 (2012)

In rape of a child case, defendant claims she was asleep, trial court instructs that defendant bears the burden of proof; held: in a strict liability crime with no mens rea, where defendant produces evidence of a lack of voluntary action, defense has the burden of proving the defense by a preponderance, State v. Bradshaw, 175 Wn.2d 725 (2012), State v. Dailey, 174 Wn.App. 810 (2013), State v. Pratt, 11 Wn.App.2d 450 (2019), affirmed, on different grounds, 196 Wn.2d 849 (2021), see: State v. Utter, 4 Wn.App. 137, 141-42 (1971); reverses, in part, State v. Deer, 158 Wn.App. 854, 861-65 (2010); 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Morris, 176 Wn.2d 157, 168-71 (2012)

In child abuse case, expert testimony about the suggestibility of young children as it relates to specific interview techniques is helpful to the jury, distinguishing State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 656 (1990), see: State v. Willis, 151 Wn.2d 255, 261 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Smith*,* 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013)

Rape 1° and rape of a child 2° based upon same facts and same victim do not violate double jeopardy as they are not legally equivalent and legislature did not intend to prohibit multiple convictions arising from a single sexual act, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016), distinguishing State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 681-86 (2009); overrules State v. Birgin, 33 Wn.App. 1 (1982); 8-1.

State v. Lynch*,* 178 Wn.2d 487 (2013)

In rape 1° case where defendant denies forcible compulsion, trial court may not, over defendant's objection, instruct jury on the defense of consent with burden to prove consent on defendant, State v. Coristine, 177 Wn.2d 370 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Land*,* 172 Wn.App. 593 (2013)

Defendant is convicted of child molestation and child rape over the same charging period of same victim, no unanimity instruction is given; held: where the only evidence of child rape is penetration, then rape is not the same crime as molestation as the latter requires proof of sexual gratification, rape does not; where the only evidence of intercourse supporting child rape is sexual contact involving sex organs and mouth of anus, that act of intercourse, if done for sexual gratification, is both molestation and rape and thus are not separately punishable, so jury instruction requiring separate and distinct acts is required, but where state's argument, victim's testimony and to convict instructions make it clear state is not seeking to punish twice for same act, defendant's right to be free from double jeopardy is not violated, at 598-603, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-65 (2011), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 849 (1991), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 822-26 (2014), State v. Daniels, 183 Wn.App. 109 (2014), State v. Wilkins, 200 Wn.App. 794-802-14 (2017), State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809 (2017), State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-66 (2011), State v. Sanford, 15 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020); I.

State v. Mohamed*,* 175 Wn.App. 45 (2013)

Information charging indecent liberties/incapable of consent as physically helpless, RCW 9A.44.100(1)(b) (2007), need not allege that defendant knew victim is incapable of consent, defendant has burden to prove by preponderance that defendant reasonably believed victim was not helpless, RCW 9A.44.030(1)9 (1988), disapproving dicta in State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302, 325 n. 14 (1993), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995); I.

State v. Benitez*,* 175 Wn.App. 116, 122-23 (2013)

A juvenile adjudication of a sex offense is a prior conviction for purposes of enhancing indecent exposure, RCW 9A.88.010(2)(c) (2003), from a misdemeanor to a felony; II.

Nevada v. Jackson, 569 U.S. 505, 186 L.Ed.2d 62 (2013)

Rape defendant cross-examines complainant regarding prior uncharged claims that defendant raped her, trial court prohibits defense from offering extrinsic evidence of police findings that the prior incidents were unfounded, in federal habeas action Ninth Circuit reverses, holding that defendant was deprived of his right to present a defense, Crane v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 683, 690, 90 L.Ed.2d 636 (1986), California v. Trombetta, 467 U.S. 479, 485, 81 L.Ed.2d 413 (1984); held: state evidence rule precluding extrinsic evidence of impeachment, see: ER 608, does not deprive defendant of right to present a defense nor does it violate confrontation clause; per curiam.

State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014)

Consent negates forcible compulsion, thus placing burden of proving consent on defense unconstitutionally shifts the burden, State v. Ortiz-Triana, 193 Wn.App. 769 (2016), overruling, in part, State v. Camara, 113 Wn.2d 631 (1989) and State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759 (2006), State v. Knapp, 197 Wn.2d 579 (2021), cf.: State v. Lozano, 189 Wn.App. 117 (2015),; not retroactive, Pers. Restraint of Colbert, 186 Wn.2d 614 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Brown, 178 Wn.App. 70, 79-89 (2013)

Defendant is convicted of a sex offense, trial court sentences, over objection, without a presentence report; held: former RCW 9.94A.110, now RCW 9.94A.500(1) (2014), mandates a presentence report following conviction of a felony sex offense, remedy is remand for resentencing; 2-1, II.

State v. Miller, 180 Wn.App. 413 (2014)

Revocation of a Special Sex Offender Sentencing Alternative for inability to pay for treatment does not require a finding of willfulness, State v. McCormick, 166 Wn.2d 689, (2009), where court finds that there is a risk of reoffending in the absence of sexual deviancy treatment; I.

State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014)

In rape 2° case victim testifies defendant digitally penetrated her in a hot tub in spite of her persistently pushing him away, defendant apparently presents no evidence, defendant is acquitted of rape 2°, convicted of lesser degree offense of rape 3° having objected to the instruction; held: evidence supported a jury finding that defendant did not engage in forcible compulsion to achieve his nonconsensual sexual intercourse with the victim as victim's testimony about force was "vague," thus jury could have believed victim's testimony but still have found that defendant's conduct did not amount to forcible compulsion, thus rape 3° instruction was not error, distinguishing State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64, 72 (2009), State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d. 353, 356 (1995), but see: State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990), disapproved on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 487 (1991), State v. Rodriguez, 48 Wn.App. 815, 820 (1987), State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993), State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 754-57 (1995), State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), State v. Prado, 144 Wn.App. 227, 242-44 (2008), see: State v. Hampton, 182 Wn.App. 805, 828-31 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015), cf.: State v. Parks, 190 Wn.App. 859, 867-69 (2015); II.

State v. Powell, 181 Wn.App. 716, 725-29 (2014)

Police seize photographs of unclothed minor neighbors filmed from defendant's bedroom along with photos of defendant nude, masturbating, trial court dismisses at Knapstad motion; held: 2010 amendments to RCW 9.68A.011 criminalizes possession of depictions made by secretly recording minors without their knowledge, distinguishing State v. Grannis, 84 Wn.App. 546 (1997), State v. Whipple, 144 Wn.App. 654, 659-60 (2008)

State v. Hampton, 182 Wn.App. 805, 828-31 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015)

In rape 2°/incapable of consent case victim testifies she told defendant "no," defendant testified that no intercourse occurred, trial court gives lesser degree rape 3° instructions, defendant is convicted of lesser; held: jury could find that the evidence affirmatively established that victim expressed her lack of consent, not that she was incapable of consent, thus lesser instruction was proper, see: State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014), cf.: State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d 353 (1995), State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64 (2009); I.

Grady v. North Carolina, 575 U.S. 306, 135 S.Ct. 1368, 191 L.Ed.2d 459 (2015)

Requiring a sex offender to be subjected to satellite-based monitoring implicates the Fourth Amendment, court must first determine if it is a reasonable search, see: United States v. Jones, 565 U.S. 400, 132 S.Ct. 945, 181 L.Ed.2d 911 (2012), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 259-69 (2003); per curiam.

State v. Shale, 182 Wn.2d 882 (2015)

State has power to prosecute a member of the Yakama Nation living on the Quinault Indian Nation reservation for failure to register as a sex offender; 9-0.

State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680, 687-88 (2015)

In rape of a child case defendant's testimony that he said to victim she looked too young to drink and victim replied "I get that a lot" did not entitle defendant to instruction on affirmative defense that defendant reasonably believed victim was older "based upon declarations as to age by the alleged victim," RCW 9A..44.030(2) (1988), State v. Bennett, 36 Wn.App. 176, 181 (1983); 5-4.

State v. Johnson, 184 Wn.App. 777 (2014)

Sentencing court may order CCO to order plethysmograph testing for the purpose of sexual deviance treatment and not for monitoring purposes, State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010), State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018); II.

State v. Lawson, 185 Wn.App. 349 (2014)

For purposes of voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115(1) (2003), a public restroom stall is a place where a reasonable person would believe she could disrobe in privacy, cf.: State v. Glas, 147 Wn.2d 410, 415 (2002); voyeurism is a crime against a person or property for purposes of proving burglary, see: State v. Snedden, 149 Wn.2d 914, 919-22 (2003), distinguishing state v. Devitt, 152 Wn.App. 907, 912-13 (2009); II.

State v. Haviland, 186 Wn.App. 214 (2015)

Rape of a child 2°, RCW 9A.44.076 (1990), does not violate single subject and subject in title rules, CONST. Art. 2, § 19; II.

State v. Peppin, 186 Wn.App. 901 (2015)

Police remotely access, without a warrant, child pornography that defendant shared via peer to peer software, obtain warrant to search defendant's computer; held: images files shared with the public do not create a constitutionally protected privacy right; III.

State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 204-08 (2015)

Statutory rape as it was defined in 1976 is not legally comparable to rape of a child 2°, because in 1976 a person of 16 years commits the crime if the victim was 11-14 years old but now state must prove defendant is at least 36 months older than victim, RCW 9A.44.076(1) (1990), sentencing judge now cannot determine defendant's age previously as it depends on judicial fact-finding, Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000); I.

State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015)

Each unit of possession of depictions of a minor in sexually explicit conduct 2°, RCW 9.68.070(2)(c) (2010), is one unit of prosecution even if possession includes more than one depiction or image, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d. 870 (2009), distinguishing RCW 9.68A.001 (2010); III.

State v. Breidt, 187 Wn.App. 534 (2015)

Terms "change," "residence," and "residence address" in failure to register as a sex offender statute, RCW 9A.44.130(4)(a), are not vague, see: State v. Frederick, 20 Wn.App. 1081, 506 P.3d 690 (2022); II.

State v. Chenoweth, 188 Wn.App. 521, 531-35 (2015)

Court admits evidence that victim disclosed rape to his sister a year after it occurred; held: while fact of complaint exception to hearsay rule is inapplicable where the complaint was not timely made, State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131, 135-36 (1983), it is admissible to show "only how the allegations came to the attention of law enforcement," State v. Iverson, 126 Wn.App. 329, 333 (2005), State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020), thus is not hearsay, cf. State v. Edwards, 131 Wn.App. 611 (2006); instructing jury that testimony of a sex offense complainant need not be corroborated is not error, but see: WPIC § 45.02 cmt. at 833 (3rd ed. 2008), State v. Clayton, 32 Wn.2d 571 (1949); II.

State v. Castillo-Murcia, 188 Wn.App. 539 (2015)

Luring, RCW 9A.40.090 (2012), requiring that perpetrator is "unknown" to the child is satisfied if the evidence shows "lacking an established or normal status," need not be a complete stranger; II.

State v. Pablo Navarro, 188 Wn.App. 550, 553-56 (2015)

A sexual assault protection order (SAPO), ch. 7.90 RCW, expires two years following the expiration of the longest sentence served; a no-contact order issued as part of a sentence, RCW 9.94A.030(10), may be issued for maximum term of the crime, and is not limited to the victims of the crime, State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 32-34 (2009), State v. Duran, 16 Wn.App.2d 583 (2021); I.

State v. Lozano, 189 Wn.App. 117 (2015)

In rape 2°/incapable of consent due to being physically helpless or mentally incapacitated, RCW 9A.44.050(1)(b) (2007), placing burden on defendant to prove he reasonably believed victim was not incapacitated or helpless, RCW 9A.44.030(1) (1988), does not violate due process as it does not negate an element of the crime, distinguishing State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757, 765-66 (2014); consent is not a defense to rape 2°/incapable of consent; II.

State v. Duarte Mares, 190 Wn.App. 343 (2015)

Victim, having rebuffed defendant's sexual advances days earlier awakens to find defendant engaged in intercourse, grabs a rifle and kicks him out; held: rape 3° statute, RCW 9A.44.060(1)(a) (2013), that requires that "lack of consent was clearly expressed by the victim's words or conduct" does not require that the lack of consent be expressed contemporaneously, statute is not vague as applied; III.

State v. Parks, 190 Wn.App. 859, 867-69 (2015)

In rape 1° trial victim testifies defendant raped her with a knife, medical evidence shows genital bruising, defendant testifies sex was consensual, no knife is recovered, over objection court instructs on lesser rape 2°, defendant is convicted of lesser; held: because affirmative medical evidence supports an inference that only rape 2° was committed trial court did not err in instructing on the lesser, distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749 (1995); III.

State v. Irwin, 191 Wn.App. 644 (2015)

Community custody conditions that require further definition from CCOs are unconstitutionally vague, State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630, 638 (2005), see: State v. Norris, 1 Wn.App.2d 87 (2017), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018); here, "do not frequent areas where minor children are known to congregate, as defined by" CCO is vague, State v. Magana, 197

Wn.App. 189, 200-01 (2016), see: State v. Johnson, 4 Wn.App.2d 352 (2018), State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018), following child pornography conviction where defendant possessed depictions on a digital camera, condition that defendant not access a computer unless authorized by CCO is related to the offense and is thus valid, cf.: State v. Charlton, 23 Wn.App.2d 150 (2022); I.

State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016)

Rape of a child and incest based upon the same act is not the same criminal conduct, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013); 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Colbert, 186 Wn.2d 614 (2016)

While instructing jury that defense has burden to disprove consent is unconstitutional, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), it is not retroactive; 7-2.

State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016)

In child rape case court admits recorded victim interview, when victim testifies state inquires about sex assault but does not inquire about whether victim made the previously admitted hearsay statement, defense counsel cross-examines about the incident and about the hearsay statement, defense argues for the first time on appeal that confrontation clause was violated because court admitted recorded statement but questioning on direct was not broad enough to subject her to cross-examination; held: cross-examination about the interview was within the scope of direct, ER 611(B), State v. Montgomery, 95 Wn.App. 192, 198-99 (1999), State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 173-75 (2001), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 780-84 (2014), both the hearsay statement and victim's testimony were inculpatory; III.

Packingham v. North Carolina, 137 S. Ct. 1730, 1733, 198 L. Ed. 2d 273 (2017)

Statute prohibiting a registered sex offender "to access a commercial social networking Web site where the sex offender knows that the site permits minor children to become members" violates First Amendment, but see: State v. Johnson, 12 Wn.App.2d 201 (2020); 8-0.

State v. Gray, 189 Wn.2d 334 (2017)

Seventeen-year old respondent texts photograph of his own erect penis, is convicted of dealing in depictions of a minor engaged in sexually explicit activity 2°, RCW 9.68A.050(2)(a) (2010); held: depictions statute does not violate First Amendment and is not vague when applied to a minor distributing sexually explicit photos of themselves, statute applies, as written, to respondent's behavior; affirms State v. E.G., 194 Wn.App. 457 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Martell, 200 Wn.App. 293 (2017)

Where defendant has a prior rape conviction, a conviction for possession of depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct 2° requires an indeterminate life sentence, RCW 9.94A.507(1)(b) (2008), code revisers note is inaccurate; II.

State v. Wilkins, 200 Wn.App. 794, 802-14 (2017)

Child molestation and rape of a child for same act do not violate double jeopardy, State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 600 (2013), but see: State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-66 (2011), State v. Sanford, 16 Wn.App.2d 583 (2020); 2-1, II.

Pers. Restraint of Arnold, 190 Wn.2d 136, 410 P.3d 1133 (2018)

Defendant convicted of statutory rape in 1988 is required to register as a sex offender even though the statute was amended to change the name of the crime to rape of a child as statutory rape is a comparable sex offense to rape of a child, RCW 9.94A.030(46)(b) (2012); reverses Pers Restraint of Arnold, 198 Wn.App. 842 (2017), overruling State v. Taylor, 162 Wn.App. 791` (2011) and State v. Wheeler, 188 Wn.App. 613 (2013); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Phelps, 190 Wn.2d 155 (2018)

In cases involving child molestation "grooming" may be argued without expert testimony, and it is not misconduct for prosecutor to argue in closing about grooming absent expert testimony as the concept is within the common knowledge of jurors, reversing Pers. Restraint of Phelps, 197 Wn.App. 653 (2017), see: State v. Braham, 67 Wn.App. 930 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Buckman, 190 Wn.2d 51 (2018)

Defendant commits rape of a child 2° at age 17, is charged after he turns 18, pleads guilty with a SSOSA recommendation after being told that the maximum sentence is life in prison which, pursuant to RCW 9.94A.507(b)(2) (2008), does not apply to a person who commits the crime under age 18, moves to withdraw plea after SSOSA is revoked, stating he would not have pleaded guilty had he been properly informed; held: defendant was misinformed as to maximum, thus plea was involuntary, however a motion to withdraw a plea is a collateral attack on the judgment and sentence requiring a showing, by a preponderance, of actual and substantial prejudice, Personal Restraint of Riley, 122 Wn.2d 772 (1993), Personal Restraint of Stockwell, 179 Wn.2d 588 (2014); defendant here made a bare claim that he would not have pleaded guilty but for the erroneous information but an objection, rational person test, rather than a subjective test, establishes, in light of the strength of the state's evidence, that he would not have risked a trial, Pers. Restraint of Yates, 180 Wn.2d 33, 41 (2014) and thus his motion to withdraw his plea is denied; 7-2.

State v. James-Buhl, 190 Wn.2d 470 (2018)

Schoolteacher-parent is not subject to mandatory reporting, RCW 26.44.030 (2015), of child abuse to her own children by their stepfather where the children were not her students; there must be "some connection" to professional identity; reverses State v. James-Buhl, 198 Wn.App. 288 (2017); 6-2.

State v. Petterson, 190 Wn.2d 92 (2018)

During the life of a special sex offender sentencing alternative (SSOSA) the trial court may not remove the mandatory condition of community custody that defendant comply with conditions imposed by the Department of Corrections, RCW 9.94A.670(5)(b) (2008), RCW 9.94A.703 (2015), but the court has the jurisdiction to modify department-imposed community custody provisions; 9-0.

State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018)

Following child molestation conviction, community custody provisions that defendant not possess sexually explicit material is not vague and is crime related as defendant had sent complainant a scantily-clad photo; provision that defendant inform CCO of any "dating relationship" is not unconstitutionally vague; order that defendant not enter sex-related businesses is reasonably related to the offense, State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189, 201 (2016); reverses, in part, State v. Norris, 1 Wash. App. 2d 87, 404 P.3d 83 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Norris, 1 Wn.App.2d 87 (2017), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018)

Following child molestation conviction, community custody provisions that defendant "not enter any parks/playgrounds/schools and or any places where minors congregate," is vague, State v. Irwin, 191 Wn.App. 644 (2015), but see: State v. Wallmuller, 194 Wn.2d 234 (2019), but is cured by striking "and or any places," State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809, 820 (2017); ordering a curfew is not crime related and is stricken; order that defendant not consume alcohol is valid, RCW 9.94A.703(3)(e) (2015), but order that defendant not "use" alcohol is not valid; I.

State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018)

Sentencing court may restrict access to sexually explicit materials for those convicted of a sex offense regardless of whether or not sexually explicit materials were involved in the offense, State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189, 201 (2016); III.

State v. Tash, 3 Wn.App.2d 74 (2018)

Sex offender must register within three days of release from custody regardless of whether or not s/he was in custody for a sex offense, RCW 9A.44.130(4)(a)(i) (2015); II.

State v. Blair, 3 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018)

In rape case trial court permits defense to cross-examine victim about her knowledge that respondent was on probation and that she knew what he was on probation for but excludes cross as to her knowledge that respondent's probation was due to his history of sex offenses; held: trial court did not abuse discretion in limiting cross-examination, did not violate right to present a defense; II.

State v. Murray, 190 Wn.2d 727 (2018)

Sexual motivation aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(f), can enhance a conviction of indecent exposure, RCW 9A.88.010 (2003), State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630, 636 (1999), as indecent exposure lacks an inherent sexual motive; 7-2.

State v. Yallup, 3 Wn.App.2d 546 (2018)

Information alleges two counts of rape of a child within three year charging period, child victim testifies that separate incidents occurred within a 16 month period but does not narrow incidents more specifically; held: when charging "on or about" proof is not limited to the delineated time period, where time is not a material element "on or about" is sufficient to admit proof of the act at any time within the statute of limitations unless alibi is the defense, State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 432 (1996), State v. Osborne, 39 Wash. 548 (1905); where defendant is a "resident child molester" alibi or misidentification are not genuine defenses, State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738, 748-49 (1989), Hayes, supra. at 433; III.

State v. Johnson, 4 Wn.App.2d 352 (2018)

Following child molestation conviction, conditions of community custody that defendant not possess or view material that includes images of nude adults and children and not posess images of children wearing underwear or swimsuits and not possess material that shows adults or children engaging in sex with each other, themselves or objects or animals and not attend x-rated movies or adult book stores are invalid, overbroad and not crime-related, State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018); condition that defendant avoid places where children congregate including libraries, playgrounds, schools, daycare centers, skating rinks and video arcades is not vague, see: Pers. Restraint of Sickels, 14 Wn.App.2d 51 (2020), but see: State v. Norris, 1 Wn.App.2d 87 (2017), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018), State v. Wallmuller, 194Wn.2d 234 (2019), but must be limited to children under age 16; 2-1, III.

Matter of Thompson, 6 Wn.App.2d 64 (2018)

Defendants plead guilty to attempted failure to register, are sentenced, inter alia, to community custody, DOC appeals; held: attempted failure to register as a sex offender is not a sex offense, court lacked authority to impose community custody; II.

Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018)

Peittioner is convicted of sex offenses with minors to whom he gave alcohol and drugs; condition of community custody that petitioner not possess or consume controlled substances is a "waivable" condition, RCW 9.94A.703(2)(c) (2018), thus court has authority to impose it even if it is not crime related; condition that he not associate with known users of drugs is crime related, State v. Houck, 9 Wn.App.2d 636 (2019); I.

State v. Wallmuller, 194 Wn.2d 234 (2019)

Community custody provision that defendant not frequent places where children congregate is not vague, Pers. Restraint of Sickels, 14 Wn.App.2d 51 (2020), reversing State v. Wallmuller, 4 Wn.App.2d 698 (2018); 5-4.

State v. Teas, 10 Wn.App.2d 111 (2019)

In rape 1°/forcible compulsion case defendant denies intercourse but testifies that he asked for sexual intercourse, trial court declines consent instruction; held: because consent negates the element of forcible compulsion the state must prove lack of consent as part of its burden of proof on the element of forcible compulsion, thus it is not necessary to add a new instruction simply because evidence of consent is produced, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757, 767 n.3 (2014), see: State v. Knapp, 16 Wn.2d 583 (2021); life without parole for a second sex offense is constitutional when the predicate offense was committed by defendant as a juvenile, State v. Moretti, 193 Wn.2d 809 (2019); II.

State v. Pratt, 11 Wn.App.2d 450 (2019), affirmed, on different grounds, 196 Wn.2d 849 (2020)

Trial court prohibits testimony of psychologist to testify that defendant may have had "sexsomnia," which involves people engaging in sex during sleep to support defendant's claim of lack of volition; held: while sleepwalking may constitute a defense, State v. Utter, 4 Wn.App. 137, 141-42 (1971), it is not akin to diminished capacity and must be proved by the defense by a preponderance, State v. Deer, 175 Wn.2d 725, 734 (2012), court properly excluded the testimony as expert could not testify that defendant had the disorder; 2-1, II.

State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020)

In child rape case trial court admits four witness' testimony that victim reported the rape under "fact of complaint" doctrine contemporaneous with the abuse but long after the reporting period; held: fact of complaint or fresh complaint rule in sexual assault cases is an established judicially-created exception to the hearsay rules, not admissible for truth of the matter asserted but to demonstrate that victim reported it to someone, may include sufficient details to identify the nature of the offense but not to include identity of the perpetrator, State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131 (1983); 8-1.

State v. DeLeon, 11 Wn.App.2d 837 (2020)

At sentencing for rape of a child other than his own child court orders no contact with all minors, including his own children; held: sentencing court did not consider on the record defendant's constitutional right to parent, State v. McGuire, 12 Wn.App.2d 88 (2020), State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000), State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650 (2001), State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021), or how the order was reasonably necessary to protect his own children from harm, thus remanded for court to conduct analysis on the record; II.

State v. Stewart, 12 Wn.App.2d 236 (2020)

Witness testifies that she observed defendant kneeling on the ground, noticed that his arm was moving back and forth, observed his hands by his genitals, and one of his hands moving rapidly back and forth, believed he was masturbating, defendant is convicted of indecent exposure, RCW 9.88.010 (2003); held: substantial evidence supports trial court's finding that defendant's penis was intentionally exposed; I.

State v. Johnson, 12 Wn.App.2d 201 (2020), rev. granted, 196 Wn.2d 1001 (2020)

Police post internet advertisement purporting to be a juvenile seeking sex with an adult, defendant responds with explicit desires, is convicted of attempted rape of a child, court orders as condition of community custody, that defendant not use web unless authorized by CCO with approved filters; held: condition does not violate First Amendment, distinguishing Packingham

v. North Carolina, 137 S. Ct. 1730, 1731, 198 L. Ed. 2d 273 (2017), is sufficiently tailored to defendant's crime as he committed the crime partially via the internet, cf.: State v. O'Cain, 144 Wn.App. 772 (2008), but see: State v. Forler, 9 Wn.App.2d 1020 (unpublished, 2019); II.

Pers. Restraint of Sickels, 14 Wn.App.2d 51 (2020)

Defendant is convicted of attempted rape of a child following sting operation, challenges several conditions of community custody; held: (1) inform CCO and treatment provider of dating relationship and disclose sex offender status prior to sexual contact are reasonably related to the circumstances of the offense; (2) sexual contact is prohibited until approved by treatment provider is properly crime related; (3) do not possess sexually explicit material is properly crime related, State v. Hai Minh Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671, 686 (2018); I.

State v. Mansour, 14 Wn.App.2d 323 (2020)

In child molestation case use of victim's initials in information and to convict instruction does not deprive defendant of due process, is not a comment on the evidence, and does not amount to a court closure; I.

State v. Majeed, 14 Wn.App.2d 868 (2020)

Police officer poses as a minor on-line, defendant agrees to engage in sex, is convicted of commercial sexual abuse of a minor, RCW 9.68A.100(1)(b) (2013); held: to prove commercial sexual abuse of a minor state must offer evidence that defendant offered money for sex with a corporeal minor, thus evidence is insufficient, dismissed with prejudice; III.

State v. Wheeler, 14 Wn.App.2d 571 (2020)

Defendant is granted a SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670, is reinstated following two violation hearings, at third violation hearing prosecutor refers to prior violations and sanctions, defense objects claiming double jeopardy violation, trial court overrules and considers prior actions and revokes; held: revocation is not a second punishment, court can consider prior criminal history so court can consider prior violations and sanctions, nor is it prohibited by statute; I.

State v. Spaulding, 15 Wn.App.2d 526 (2020)

Defendant meets victim on Facebook, message each other a few times, a week later they meet, defendant is convicted of indecent liberties by forcible compulsion, trial court denies SSOSA because he lacked an "established relationship" with her, RCW 9.94A.670(2)(e) (2009); held: statute authorizes a SSOSA if "offender had an established relationship…or connection to the victim" that was not the commission of the crime," defendant here did have a connection to the victim so on that basis was eligible, but see: State v. Pratt, 196 Wn.2d 849 (2021); harmless as court also found defendant was not amenable to treatment, RCW 9.94A.670(4); II.

State v. Sanford, 15 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020)

Defendant is charged with child rape and child molestation for oral/genital contact, no evidence of vaginal penetration, trial court does not give separate and distinct acts instruction; held: absent evidence of vaginal penetration convictions for child rape and child molestation violate double jeopardy where no separate and distinct acts instruction is given, State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 600 (2013), State v. Wilkins, 200 Wn.App. 794, 804-08 (2017); here, it was not manifestly apparent from prosecutor's argument that the state was not attempting to impose separate penalties for the same conduct, distinguishing State v. Land, supra, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-65 (2011), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 849 (1991), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 823-26 (2014); 2-1, II.

State v. Pervez, 15 Wn.App.2d 265 (2020)

Defendant pleads guilty to child molestation which occurred when his daughter-victim was 10-13 years old but reported the crime when she was 26, argues, in support of SSOSA, that although victim opposed the SSOSA his wife and mother of victim supported it and thus court must give "great weight" to victim's opinion, RCW 9.94A.670(4) (2009) and one definition of victim is a parent of a minor child, RCW 9.94A.670(1)(c) (2009); held: because actual victim was not a child when she reported the offense her mother is not a victim; I.

State v. Pratt, 196 Wn.2d 849 (2021)

Defendant meets victim, a distant relative, at a party, molests her that night, is granted a SSOSA, state appeals; held: eligibility for a SSOSA RCW 9.94A.670 (2009) requires that offender had an "established relationship with, or connection to, the victim" which cannot be the commission of the crime; here relationship was too brief to meet that statutory requirement, cf.: State v. Spaulding, 15 Wn.App.2d 526 (2020); affirms State v. Pratt, 11 Wn.App.2d 450 (2019); 8-1

State v. Knapp, 197 Wn.2d 579 (2021)

In rape case while consent must be disproved by the state beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), trial court's instruction that "evidence of consent may be taken into consideration in determining whether defendant used forcible compulsion," WPIC 18.25 (4th ed. 2016) adequately conveys the state's burden, court need not specifically instruct that state has burden of proving an absence of consent; a specific instruction that state bears the burden of proving the absence of a negating defense, failure to provide one is not reversible error per se as long as the instructions as a whole make it clear that state has the burden, State v. Imokawa, 194 Wn.2d 391 (2019); affirms State v. Knapp, 11 Wn.App.2d 375 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 197 Wn.2d 740 (2021)

Following internet sting operation involving fictitious juveniles defendant is convicted of attempted rape of a child, court orders defendant not to access the internet without a filter; held: condition that defendant only use the internet with a filter is narrowly drawn, is not vague or overbroad, cf.: State v. Geyer, 19 Wn.App.2d 321 (2021) see: State v. Fredeerick, 20 Wn.App.2d 1081 (2022); 6-3.

State v. Cox, 17 Wn.App.2d 178 (2021)

Complainant testifies that she was intoxicated, went to bed, defendant digitally raped her, state proves that his DNA is on her underwear; defendant testifies that he did not touch complainant, trial court excludes defense offer that complainant was drunk and flirtatious with others at the party, sat on defendant's lap, that this explains how his DNA was on her underwear and that complainant's intoxication was such that she could not recall what happened; held: rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020(2), cannot be used to conflate past with present behavior that is contemporaneous with the alleged rape, State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713, 720-23 (2010), lap-sitting was probative to explain the DNA evidence, excluding the evidence violated defendant's right to present a defense; defense attempt to cross-examine state's DNA expert to establish the possibility of another male DNA on complainant's underwear was not offered to show that she had sexual contact with someone else, rather that it might explain that defendant's DNA could have been transferred through non-sexual contact, thus trial court's refusal to allow the questions based on rape shield statute was error; trial court's exclusion of defendant's reputation evidence for sexual morality, ER 404(a)(1), -405(a), was error as reputation evidence of good sexual morality is pertinent to a sex crime charge, State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 827-30 (2000), but see: State v. Jackson, 46 Wn.App. 360 (1986); III.

State v. Canter, 17 Wn.App.2d 728 (2021)

Detective poses on-line as the mother of two children seeking sex, defendant responds, is arrested at the place he was to meet the mother and children, is convicted of two counts of attempted child molestation, argues double jeopardy violation; held: while unit of prosecution for an attempt charge is the substantial step toward commission of the underlying crime, State v. Boswell, 185 Wn.App. 321, 329-30 (2014), attempted child molestation aims to punish a substantial step toward molesting each child, double jeopardy clause does not bar convictions for two counts, distinguishing State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007), State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000); I.

State v. Geyer, 19 Wn.App.2d 321 (2021)

Defendant is convicted for attempted rape of a child for seeking sexual contact with a fictitious juvenile via a sting operation, court orders no contact with minors not be in a romantic relationship with a partner who has minors, not use the internet and not use photo equipment including cell phones, all without permission of CCO; held: broad restrictions on defendant's right to interact with children and intimate partners was not shown to be reasonably necessary as it includes his own children and wife, State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000); internet restriction is overbroad, a filter will meet the need, State v. Johnson, 197 Wn.2d 740 (2021), State v. Fredeerick, 20 Wn.App.2d 1081 (2022); since the instant crime did not involve defendant taking photographs the restriction on photo equipment and cell phones is overbroad; III.

State v. Gene, 20 Wn.App.2d 211 (2021)

Complainant testifies that she was intoxicated, unable to respond when defendant engaged in sexual contact, defendant is charged with rape by forcible compulsion or while incapable of consent, no unanimity instruction is given, jury convicts; held: evidence was insufficient to establish forcible compulsion; to prove forcible compulsion there must have been force directed at overcoming resistance physically or by a threat, complainant did not resist the penetration thus there was no resistance to overcome, State v. McKnight, 54 Wn.App. 521 (1989), State v. Ritola, 63 Wn.App. 252 (1991); I.

State v. Westwood, 20 Wn.App.2d 582 (2021)

Defendant is convicted of rape, burglary, assault, argues same criminal conduct, trial court applies State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016) and rejects argument, Division III remands, holding that Chenoweth, supra., only applies to child rape and incest, trial court on remand again denies same criminal conduct; held: except in cases of child rape and incest same criminal conduct must be analyzed pursuant to State v. Dunaway, 109 Wn.2d 207 (1987): whether one crime furthers the other or whether the offenses were part of a plan or scheme, State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 357 (2014), with discretion left to the trial court; Division III agrees with Division I, State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App. 2d 113, 143 (2019), declines to follow Division II's applying Chenoweth to other crimes, State v. Johnson, 12 Wn.App. 2d 201 (2020), aff'd on other grounds, 197 Wn.2d 740, 487 (2021).

State v. Braun, 20 Wn.App.2d 756 (2022)

Human trafficking, RCW 9A.40.100, can be proved even when defendant did not personally use force, fraud or coercion as long as he knew someone would do so; methods of subjugating people's wills includes subtle forms of coercion; III.

State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022)

While evidence of collateral misconduct relating to a specific victim, including prior uncharged acts of sexual conduct, remains admissible under ER 404(b), "lustful disposition" is not a separate purpose for admitting evidence; the phrase "lustful disposition" is "incorrect and harmful" even though the evidence that has come in under the doctrine remains admissible; overrules or modifies State v. Medcalf, 58 Wn.App. 817 (1990), State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176 (2003), State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131 (1983), State v. Dawkins, 71 Wn.App. 902, 908-10 (1993); 8-1.

State v. Braun, 20 Wn.App.2d 756 (2022)

For purposes of human trafficking, RCW 9A.40.100 (2017), physical assaults constitute "force;" even if defendant didn't personally use "force, fraud or coercion" evidence is sufficient as long as he knew someone would use such means; defendant may be both perpetrator of the force, fraud or coercion and the beneficiary of the sexual act; withholding drugs from an addict to get her to commit prostitution is coercion; promises of marriage if victim commits prostitution constitutes fraud; III.

State v. Frederick, 20 Wn.App. 1081, 506 P.3d 690 (2022)

Condition that defendant not engage in "sexual communication" with minors is not vague; condition that defendant obtain CCO's permission before entering a "romantic relationship" is vague; Indeterminate Sentencing Review Board can impose conditions that are reasonably related to the offender's risk of reoffending, condition that defendant submit to drug monitoring in sex offense is proper where defendant was under the influence of marijuana at time of sex offense; condition that defendant not access the internet without a monitoring device at defendant's expense is proper where defendant used the internet to contact victim, State v. Johnson, 197 Wn.2d 740 (2021), cf.: Packingham v. North Carolina, —— U.S. ——, 137 S. Ct. 1730, 198 L. Ed. 2d 273 (2017); condition that defendant not possess "sexually explicit material" is not vague, State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018); condition that defendant not engage in a romantic or dating or sexual relationship with anyone with minor children without CCO permission is not vague, but see: State v. Geyer, 19 Wn.App.2d 321 (2021); condition that defendant inform potential partners of his sexual offense history does not violate his Fifth Amendment rights; condition that defendant not remain overnight in a residence (as opposed to "premises") without CCO approval is not vague, State v. Breidt, 187 Wn.App. 534 (2015); III.

State v. Zwede, 21 Wn.App.2d 843 (2022)

Defendant was 19-years old when he pleaded guilty to a sex offense, court imposed a SSOSA, as agreed to by the parties, when defendant was 24 court revoked the SSOSA and imposed ten years to life, which had been previously suspended; held: when court revokes a SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670(11), it must impose the entire sentence that had been suspended, RCW 9.94A.670(4); at sentencing defendant did not seek an exceptional sentence, was not a youthful offender when he violated the conditions, court did not violate his rights when it declined to consider his youthfulness at the time of the crime at his revocation hearing; 2-1, I.

State v. Yusuf, 21 Wn.App.2d 960 (2022)

To prove voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115(2)(a)(i), the state must show either that the person being viewed lacked the full knowledge to consent before they were viewed or that the person never consented; I.

State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022)

In child molestation case with pro se defendant trial court requires that defendant write out questions and that his standby counsel read them to the complainant; held: in order to modify courtroom procedures to prevent a face-to-face confrontation between witness and defendant court must analyze why such changes are necessary and what impact they will have on defendant's rights, State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998), Maryland v. Craig, 497 U.S. 836, 845-46, 110 S. Ct. 3157, 111 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1990), State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022), Coy v. Iowa, 101 L.Ed.2d 857 (1988), State v. Estabrook, 68 Wn.App. 309 (1993), State v. Ulestad, 127 Wn.App. 209 (2005), thus reversed; II.

State v. Chambers, 23 Wn.App.2d 917 (2022)

Information charging dissemination and possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68A.050(1) –(2) (2019) and RCW 9.68A.070(1) (2019), is sufficient, where challenged for the first time on appeal, although it does not allege that defendant was aware of the general nature of the material he possessed as it is implied; III.

SPEEDY TRIAL

State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980)

If state inexcusably fails to provide discovery until shortly before trial, forcing defendant to either waive or go to trial unprepared, prejudice may result and case shall be dismissed if defendant can prove by preponderance that interjection of new facts into the case when state has not acted with due diligence will compel defendant to choose between prejudicing either right to speedy trial or effective assistance of counsel, State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997), State v. Teems, 89 Wn.App. 385 (1997), State v. Ralph G., 90 Wn.App. 16 (1998), State v. Earl, 97 Wn.App. 408 (1999), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50, 78-81 (2010), but see: State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992), State v. Woods, 142 Wn.2d 561, 578-85 (2001), State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017*), cf.: State v. Kessler*, 75 Wn.App. 634, 641-2 (1994); 8-0.

State v. Wilke, 28 Wn.App. 590 (1981)

Defendants charged in district court with two felonies which are bound over; when information is filed in superior court, state adds third felony arising from same transaction; defendants' motion to dismiss third felony as not filed until 103 days following arrest granted; on interlocutory appeal, Division I reverses, holding that there is only one "triggering date" for a single transaction, that date of bindover was applicable event triggering clock for all offenses arising out of the same transaction, see also: State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35 (1996), State v. Earl, 97 Wn.App. 408 (1999),

State v. Sayers, 29 Wn.App. 128 (1981)

CrR 3.3 does not apply to juveniles, but see: State v. Detrick, 90 Wn.App. 939, 944-7 (1998).

State v. Kubitz, 29 Wn.App. 767 (1981)

Information filed 1/17/80, whereabouts of defendant unknown; defendant discovered to be in custody in Oregon 1/23/80; paperwork sent to Oregon 1/30/80; defendant waives extradition 2/1/80; defendant returned to Washington 2/27/80; trial set 4/8/80; motion to dismiss denied; held: delay in returning defendant to Washington excusable as long as state acts in good faith and diligently; time for trial rule commences when defendant is back in jurisdiction, State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 766-74 (2012), cf.: State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852 (1993); I.

State v. Mitchell, 30 Wn.App. 49 (1981)

Defendant charged with six burglaries several months after being arrested but not charged in a seventh burglary; speedy trial rule does not commence for six counts at arrest for a seventh permissibly joined offense, CrR 4.3(a), unless the offenses are related arising from the same criminal conduct and thus required to be joined, CrR 4.3(c), State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997), State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003); I.

State v. Parris, 30 Wn.App. 268 (1981)

Failure to object to trial date within ten days of setting same constitutes a waiver of right to object, State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App.315, 321-23 (2008), State v. MacNeven, 173

Wn.App. 265 (2013); failure of trial court to set a trial date within ten days of arraignment, former CrR 3.3(d)(1) [now CrR 3.3(d)(1)], is directory, not mandatory, in spite of use of word "shall" in the rule, State v. Sanchez, 172 Wn.App. 678, 682-83 (2012); II.

State v. Lawley, 32 Wn.App. 337 (1982)

Where court commissioner issues a ruling, and state seeks revision, RCW 2.24.050, speedy trial rule is stayed pending decision by superior court judge; III.

State v. Woodall, 32 Wn.App. 407 (1982)

Erupting volcano is good cause to grant prosecutor's motion for continuance beyond 90-day rule; extension beyond five-day rule, CrR 3.3(g) and new CrR 3.3(d)(8) is proper as Supreme Court did not consider volcanic eruptions when it adopted rules; III.

United States v. MacDonald, 71 L.Ed.2d 696 (1982)

Time between dismissal of military charges and subsequent indictment on civilian charges (four years) held not to be considered in determining whether defendant's Sixth Amendment right to speedy trial has been violated; 6-3.

Harkins v. Justice Court, 34 Wn.App. 508 (1983)

Where a defendant who has been given a trial date within former JCrR 3.08 requests a continuance and the trial court sets a date on the next available date consistent with established calendar scheduling, the delay is attributable to the defendant and defendant is not denied a speedy trial; I.

State v. Powell, 34 Wn.App. 791 (1983)

Defendant is charged with felony murder 1°, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c)(5), pleads guilty, on appeal plea is reversed; upon remand state amends to charge premeditated murder 1°, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(a); defendant seeks dismissal for speedy trial violation because of failure to join a related offense, CrR 4.3(c); held: information may be amended to include an alternate means for committing a crime formerly charged without violating joinder or speedy trial rules; I.

State v. Hovland, 34 Wn.App. 830 (1983)

Start counting day after juvenile court enters order retaining jurisdiction, State v. Royster, 43 Wn.App. 613, 618-9 (1986); III.

State v. Hunter, 35 Wn.App. 708 (1983)

Defendant, charged with burglary 1°, gets hung jury, state amends and adds assault 2°, same incident as burglary, trial is beyond 90 days from original arraignment; held: where multiple offenses arise from same transaction, there is only one triggering date for speedy trial purposes; since burglary was brought to trial in a timely fashion so was assault, State v. Wilke, 28 Wn.App. 590 (1981); I.

State v. Thompson, 36 Wn.App. 249 (1983)

Where offenses are not subject to mandatory joinder, CrR 4.3(c), then CrR 3.3 begins to run at filing of information, not at filing of a prior information charging offenses of a same or similar character, CrR 4.3(a), State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 182-83 (2010); I.

State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984)

A continuance beyond the speedy trial rule over defendant's objection is permissible where defense counsel so moves because s/he is unprepared, former CrR 3.3(f)(2); 9-0.

State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1 (1984)

Court may continue trial beyond CrR 3.3 limits over defendant's objection to ensure effective representation and a fair trial, State v. Lavene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 699 (1995), State v. Thomas, 95 Wn.App. 730 (1999), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 578-82 (2001), State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 400, 413 (2006), State v. Ollivier, 178 Wn.2d 813 (2013), but see: State v. Saunders, 153 Wn.App. 209 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Ansell, 36 Wn.App. 492 (1984)

Pre-charge delay (here 32 years) does not violate due process unless defendant can demonstrate actual prejudice; nonspecific allegations regarding stale evidence, absent witnesses and dimmed memories, are insufficient, United States v. Marion, 30 L.Ed.2d 468 (1971); see: State v. Howard, 52 Wn.App. 12 (1988), State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357 (1988); III.

State v. Bailey, 37 Wn.App. 733 (1984)

Two counts of forgery are dismissed by trial court for speedy trial violations, third count is not dismissed since it was filed at a later date; held: the time within which trial must commence should begin on all crimes based on same conduct or arising from the same criminal episode, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423 (1978), see: State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003); here, the criminal acts did not occur in close enough proximity to be part of same episode; I.

State v. Palmer, 38 Wn.App. 160 (1984)

Because prosecutor was in trial on another case, court grants five day extension beyond 60 days, former CrR 3.3(d)(8); held: while general court congestion is insufficient to extend trial beyond expiration date, State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788, 793 (1978), State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009), nor is "self-created hardship" such as burdensome jury selection procedures, here the problems were specific, unpredictable and certainly not self-created, thus no abuse of discretion, State v. Kelley, 64 Wn.App. 755 (1992), Detention of Kirby, 65 Wn.App. 862 (1992), State v. Silva, 72 Wn.App. 80 (1993), see: State v. Smith, 104 Wn.App. 244 (2001), State v. Williams, 104 Wn.App. 516 (2001); I.

State v. Mathews, 38 Wn.App. 180 (1984)

Defendant is brought to court on late afternoon of expiration date, court hears some preliminary motions, recesses, defendant argues CrR 3.3 is violated if jury is not empaneled by expiration date; held: a case is brought to trial when case is assigned to a trial judge who hears and decides preliminary motions, not when jury is empaneled, State v. Andrews, 66 Wn.App. 804 (1992), State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805, 819-20 (1996), disavowed, on other grounds, State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022), State v. Carlyle, 84 Wn.App. 33 (1996), see also: State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202 (1992); I.

State v. Freeman, 38 Wn.App. 665 (1984)

A conflict in defense counsel's trial schedule is good cause for continuance, JuCR7.8(d); I.

State v. Eaves, 39 Wn.App. 16 (1984)

Because co-defendant's counsel was in trial in another case which he had expected to plead, court continued defendant's case beyond 60-day rule, former CrR 3.3(d)(8) and refused to sever, former CrR 3.3(c)(2)(i); held: while CrR 3.3 says a court "should" sever to protect a defendant's right to a speedy trial, it need not where co-defendant's counsel is unavailable in trial, see: State v. Torres, 111 Wn.App. 323 (2002), see also: Detention of Kirby, 65 Wn.App. 862 (1992); I.1

State v. Kingen, 39 Wn.App. 124 (1984)

Where jail improperly and erroneously holds defendant after felony charges were dismissed in district court, there is no effect on the speedy trial rule as it was beyond the court's control; I.

State v. George, 39 Wn.App. 145 (1984)

Counsel's waiver of speedy trial on behalf of juvenile without express consent is valid where record establishes that juvenile knew of the expiration date, the juvenile had implicitly authorized counsel to decide procedural matters by signing a blank waiver, the waiver was for good cause (counsel's trial schedule) and there was no prejudice; I.

State v. Brown, 40 Wn.App. 91 (1985)

Prosecutor's unavailability due to scheduling conflict is grounds for a five day extension, former CrR 3.3(d)(8), State v. Williams, 104 Wn.App. 516 (2001), distinguishing State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788 (1978) (docket congestion not good cause); accord: State v. Kelley, 64 Wn.App. 755 (1992), Detention of Kirby, 65 Wn.App. 862 (1992); III.

State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 719 (1985)

Eight month preaccusation delay; test: actual prejudice, State v. Ansell, 36 Wn.App. 492 (1984), United States v. McDonald, 71 L.Ed.2d 696 (1982); no prejudice where police fail to investigate defendant's alibi; possibility that memories will fade is not in itself sufficient to demonstrate prejudice, State v. Ansell, supra; III.

State v. Ramsay, 41 Wn.App. 380 (1985)

Where defendant files a speedy trial waiver which contains no expiration date, speedy trial period is tolled between the date of the waiver and the date of the trial as first set by the court, State v. Helms, 72 Wn.App. 273, 275-6 (1993); if trial date first set is postponed through no fault of defendant, speedy trial period remaining at the time of the waiver commences running again on the first trial date; insufficient venire is not good cause for delaying trial beyond expiration date per former JCrR 3.08; II.

State v. Stimson, 41 Wn.App. 385 (1985)

Trial date set five days after expiration date; held: where defense counsel knew or should have known that the trial date was beyond the expiration date, counsel is obliged to notify the court prior to the expiration date, Barker v. Wingo, 33 L.Ed.2d 101 (1972), State v. White, 94 Wn.2d 498 (1980), State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022); III.

State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985)

Thirteen days prior to trial state provides names of additional witnesses; one co-defendant moves for a continuance beyond 60th day, court grants it; held: court may continue a trial beyond the expiration date if required for the proper administration of justice and will not prejudice defendant, former CrR 3.3(h)(2) [now CrR 3.3(f)(2) (2023)], State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63 (1991), State v. McKinzy, 72 Wn.App. 85, 87-9 (1993); 8-1.

State v. Kokot, 42 Wn.App. 733 (1986)

Granting a continuance beyond the expiration date because no courtrooms were available is an abuse of discretion, mandating dismissal, State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788 (1978), State v. Warren, 96 Wn.App. 306 (1999), State v. Smith, 104 Wn.App. 244 (2001), State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009), cf.: State v. Andrews, 66 Wn.App. 804 (1992), State v. Denton23 Wn.App.2d 437 (2022), but see: State v. Silva, 72 Wn.App. 80 (1993); a scheduled hunting trip of a state's witness should not be considered in determining whether or not to grant a continuance, but see: State v. Grilley, 67 Wn.App. 795 (1992), State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91 (2003); 2-1, III.

Bremerton v. Hoyt, 44 Wn.App. 135 (1986)

Lack of available jury trial dates is not grounds for setting trial beyond 60th day after appearance under former JCrR 3.08; II.

State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986)

Unforeseen difficulty in the prosecutor's trial schedule is sufficient cause to grant a five-day extension beyond the expiration date, former CrR 3.3(d)(8), see: State v. Raper, 43 Wn.App. 530 (1987), State v. Wsilliams, 104 Wn.App. 516 (2001); I.

State v. Bebb, 44 Wn.App. 803 (1986)

In competency proceedings, court is not limited to the appointment of a sanity commission, RCW 10.77.010, et seq., but also retains the inherent authority to determine competency, State v. Wicklund, 96 Wn.2d 798 (1982) to order additional evaluations, during which speedy trial rule is tolled, former CrR 3.3(g)(1) [now CrR 3.3(e)(1)], State v. Harris, 122 Wn.App. 498 (2004); III.

State v. Bernhard, 45 Wn.App. 590 (1986)

An objection to arraignment or trial date, former CrR 3.3(e) and (f) [now CrR 3.3(d)(3)], must be sufficiently specific to inform trial court of precise grounds for objection, or it is waived, State v. Greenwood, 120 Wn.2d 585, 605 (1993), State v. Parker, 99 Wn.App. 639 (2000), State v. Frankenfield, 112 Wn.App. 472 (2002); where defendant is detained in one county jail pending trial and is also detained on another county's charge, then the 90 day rule applies to the latter case, since defendant would have remained in custody even if he had posted bail on latter case, State v. Royster, 43 Wn.App. 613, 617 (1986); cf.: State v. Hall, 55 Wn.App. 834, 837-8 (1989), State v. Hardesty, 149 Wn.2d 230 (2003); former CrR 3.3(g)(2) [now CrR 3.3(e)(2)] excludes from speedy trial calculations the entire period that a defendant is detained on another matter, at least from arrest through plea of guilty, State v. Huffmeyer, 145 Wn.2d 523 (2001); accord: State v. Knauff, 46 Wn.App. 877 (1987); I.

United States v. Loud Hawk, 88 L.Ed.2d 640 (1986)

Delays attributed to government's interlocutory appeal, during which indictment was dismissed, do not violate defendants' right to speedy trial under Sixth Amendment where issues appealed by government were "strong," and defendants were not prejudiced, Barker v. Wingo, 33 L.Ed.2d 101 (1972); cf.: Doggett v. United States, 120 L.Ed.2d 520 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986)

Continuance beyond expiration date granted because state's witness would be unavailable; held: trial court may grant continuance when the administration of justice requires it and when defendant will not be substantially prejudiced in the presentation of his defense, former CrR 3.3(h)(2) [now CrR 3.3(f)], State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 15 (1984), State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 428 (1985), State v. Brown, 40 Wn.App. 91,94 (1985) 9-0.

State v. Pacheco, 107 Wn.2d 59 (1986)

Defendant is arrested in King County on a King County probation warrant and a Snohomish County arrest warrant for a new felony charge, King County Jail authorities confirm Snohomish County warrant with Snohomish County Jail, but no notice is given to Snohomish County Prosecutor; 52 days later, defendant is sent to Snohomish County Jail, Snohomish County Prosecutor first gets notice of defendant's detention, defendant is tried 47 days later; held: where prosecutor does not have actual notice that defendant is in jail in another Washington county, there is no speedy trial violation for failure to bring defendant to trial within time for trial period, distinguishing State v. Alexus, 91 Wn.2d 492 (1979); but see concurring opinion; accord: State v. Miffitt, 56 Wn.App. 786 (1990); see: State v. Greenwood, 120 Wn.2d 585 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Day, 46 Wn.App. 882 (1987)

An available juvenile respondent must be arraigned within 14 days after information is filed; if the 14 day arraignment time plus the 60 day speedy trial time, JuCrR 7.8(b) is exceeded, charge must be dismissed, see: State v. Chandler, 143 Wn.2d 485 (2001); where juvenile keeps police, prosecutor and court advised of his address, but notice of arraignment is sent to wrong address, then speedy arraignment requirements may be violated, but see: State v. Hanson, 52 Wn.App. 368 (1988), State v. Johnson, 56 Wn.App. 333 (1989), see: State v. Hackett, 122 Wn.2d 165, 174 (1993), State v. Hildebrandt, 109 Wn.App. 46 (2001); III.

State v. Green, 49 Wn.App. 49 (1987)

Illness of counsel is grounds for an extension, former CrR 3.3(d)(8), or a continuance, former CrR 3.3(h)(2); dilatory presentation of discovery does not justify dismissal unless defense establishes by a preponderance that delay has forced him to choose between waiving time for trial rights or proceeding unprepared, State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980); see: State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); I.

State v. Guajardo, 50 Wn.App. 16 (1987)

Where defense counsel was suspended from practice for 30 days and defendant declines to waive, a continuance, former CrR 3.3(h)(2), "required in the administration of justice" is appropriate; III.

State v. Jones, 111 Wn.2d 239 (1988)

To calculate time for trial where there is a competency determination period, former CrR 3.3(g)(1) [now CrR 3.3(e)(1)], and speedy trial waivers, add the period for determining competency in full at the end of a period for which defendant has waived, even if these periods overlap, see also: State v. Cox, 106 Wn.App. 487 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Day, 51 Wn.App. 544 (1988)

Continuing trial, apparently beyond expiration date, so that defendant's wife may procure a dissolution and thereby have the capacity to testify against defendant, approved, as unavailability of a witness is grounds for a continuance where there is a valid reason for the unavailability, there is reasonable grounds to believe the witness will become available in a reasonable time, and where there is no substantial unfair or unjust prejudice, see: State v. Torres, 111 Wn.App. 323 (2002), State v. Iniguez, 167 Wn.2d 273, 294 (2009); III.

State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357 (1988)

Pre-accusation delay does not violate constitutional right to speedy trial, State v. Platz, 33 Wn.App. 345 (1982), but may violate due process clause, United States v. Lovasco, 52 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977); here, delay due to state's interest in protecting informant outweighs prejudice, see: State v. Watson, 63 Wn.App. 854, 861 (1992), State v. Allen, 67 Wn.App. 824 (1992), State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 877-8 (1995), State v. Stearns, 23 Wn.App.2d 580 (2022); I.

State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574 (1988)

A mailed subpoena is a nullity in a juvenile court case, as it does not conform with JuCR 1.4, CR 45(c), but see: CrR 4.8(a)(3), and thus is not due diligence; a continuance beyond the expiration date, JuCR 7.8(b), to obtain a witness who was not properly served is an abuse of discretion, State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998), reversing State v. Adamski, 49 Wn.App. 371 (1987); but see: State v. McPherson, 64 Wn.App. 705 (1992), State v. Bible, 77 Wn.App. 470, 473 (1995); 5-3.

State v. Fladebo, 53 Wn.App. 116 (1988), aff'd on different grounds, 113 Wn.2d 388 (1989)

At DUI arrest, police find drugs on defendant, defendant is charged with DUI immediately in municipal court, VUCSA charge filed in superior court four months later, seeks dismissal of VUCSA arguing both offenses arose from same conduct, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423 (1978); held: because municipal court had exclusive jurisdiction over DUI as violation of municipal ordinance and had no jurisdiction over felony charge, and because the conduct proscribed by each offense was unrelated, the offenses were not within the jurisdiction and venue of the same court and were not based upon the same conduct, CrR 4.3(c), see: State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997), State v. Silva, 127 Wn.App. 148, 155 (2005), but see: State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35 (1996); further, it was reasonable for prosecutor to wait for crime lab tests on drugs before filing charges, distinguishing State v. Erickson, 22 Wn.App. 38 (1978), cf.: State v. Austin, 59 Wn.App. 186 (1990); I.

State v. Carmichael, 53 Wn.App. 894 (1989)

A prisoner serving a Washington sentence in another state's prison is "detained outside the state of Washington" for purposes of former CrR 3.3(g)(6) [now CrR 3.3(e)(6)], and thus that time is excluded from the time for trial calculations for a pending offense; but see: State v. Anderson, 65 Wn.App. 493 (1992); I.

State v. Freeman, 54 Wn.App. 734 (1989)

Following the lifting of a stay granted by an appellate court, 90 day period does not begin anew, former CrR 3.3(d)(4), rather the period of the stay is excluded, former CrR 3.3(g)(5), see: CrR 3.3(c)(2)(iv); while a defense motion for a continuance which is granted impliedly waives the rule, State v. Colbert, 17 Wn.App. 658 (1977), where the motion is made and granted after denial of the motion to dismiss for speedy trial violation, no waiver occurs; cf.: State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993); I.

State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421 (1989)

Preliminary proceedings, trial and post-trial motions on another charge is an excluded period, former CrR 3.3(g)(2) [now CrR 3.3(e)(2)], but see: State v. Huffmeyer, 145 Wn.2d 52 (2001); where defendant is being detained in another jurisdiction, CrR 3.3(g)(6), state must show good faith and due diligence in seeking extradition, see: State v. Anderson, 65 Wn.App. 493 (1992); here, state deferred to Idaho prosecution which involved multiple defendants and death penalty, deemed sound and appropriate reasons; see also: State v. Syrotchen, 61 Wn.App. 261 (1991), State v. Simon, 84 Wn.App. 460 (1996); I.

State v. Hall, 55 Wn.App. 834 (1989)

Where defendant is in custody for an unrelated charge throughout part, but not all, of the relevant period on the charge in question, then the 60 day rule applies, distinguishing State v. Bernhard, 45 Wn.App. 590, 593-95 (1986); where a bench warrant is issued (and, apparently, served) on an un-related case, then the period of time between issuance of the warrant and a guilty plea on that case is excluded, former CrR 3.3(g)(2) [now CrR 3.3(e)(2)], State v. Bernhard, supra, at 598; where trial court grants continuance to allow co-defendant time to prepare arguments on a severance motion, and defendant is not prejudiced in presentation of a defense and continuance is deemed necessary in the administration of justice, former CrR 3.3(h)(2), then period of continuance is excluded from time for trial calculation, former CrR 3.3(g)(3); III.

State v. Bartlett, 56 Wn.App. 77 (1989)

During time for trial period, defense counsel gives prosecutor a signed, undated, blanket speedy trial waiver, which prosecutor files after expiration date, following which defendant moves for a trial within the rule and for dismissal; held: when the duration of a waiver under the rule is not specified, the waiver is effective until the date of the trial contemporaneously or subsequently set by the court, State v. Pomeroy, 18 Wn.App. 837, 842 (1977); II.

State v. Johnson, 56 Wn.App. 333 (1989)

Defendant fails to appear for omnibus hearing, warrant is issued, defendant is arrested on warrant, bails out, warrant is filed with court clerk, defendant fails to appear again for omnibus hearing, although there is no evidence that defendant was advised of new date; five months later, warrant is served, defendant appears in court six weeks later, moves to dismiss, claiming that arrest and filing of warrant made his presence "known to the court on the record," former CrR 3.3(d)(2) [now CrR 3.3(a)(3)(iii) and (c)(2)(ii)]; held: "known to the court" means known to the judge, not to the court file or police, distinguishing State v. Day, 46 Wn.App. 882 (1987), see: State v. Hackett, 122 Wn.2d 165 (1993), State v. Hildebrandt, 109 Wn.App. 46 (2001); post-arraignment absences do not generate a fresh duty of "due diligence and good faith" to locate defendant and bring him back before the court, State v. Allen, 36 Wn.App. 582 (1983), distinguishing State v. Striker, 87 Wn.2d 870 (1976); I.

State v. Wake, 56 Wn.App. 472 (1989)

One day before trial, court grants, beyond expiration date, state's motion for continuance because unsubpoenaed crime lab expert would be out of town, no reason given for his unavailability; held: because prosecutor knew of problem two weeks before trial and thus could have sought to advance the trial date, and because witness had not been subpoenaed, State v. Alford, 25 Wn.App. 661, 665 (1980), State v. Yuen, 23 Wn.App. 377, 379 (1979), State v. Smith, 56 Wn.2d 368, 370 (1960), State v. Toliver, 6 Wn.App. 531, 533 (1972), continuance beyond expiration date was abuse of discretion, but see: State v. McPherson, 64 Wn.App. 705 (1992), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 578-85 (2001), State v. Howell, 119 Wn.App. 644, 648-49 (2003), State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017), State v. Denton, 23 Wn.App.2d 437 (2022); III.

State v. Wilton, 57 Wn.App. 606 (1990)

Defendant, charged with murder 2°, waives his right to speedy trial, after expiration of 60 days, state is granted leave to amend to murder 1°; held: if defendant waives, state may continue its investigation and may amend the charge to reflect the results of its inquiry, as long as amendment conforms to CrR 2.1(e); I.

State v. Austin, 59 Wn.App. 186 (1990)

In calculating "time elapsed in district court," former CrR 3.3(c)(2)(ii), the filing date of the district court complaint is included, State v. Brown, 40 Wn.App. 91, 94 (1985), unlike cases filed directly in superior court, wherein the day of arraignment is excluded, former CrR 3.3(c)(1), State v. Rohatsch, 23 Wn.App. 734, 738 (1979); defense counsel files notice of objection at 4:15 p.m. on expiration date; held: CrR 3.3 (d)(3), 3.3(f)(2) which allows ten days to move for a new trial date, does not apply to a trial setting procedure which occurs fewer than ten days before expiration date, as defense must notify state and court of objection in sufficient time for the trial to commence within the rule, State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202 (1992), State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 433-7 (1994), State v. Rose, 110 Wn.App. 878 (2002), State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022), but see: State v. Jenkins, 76 Wn.App. 378, 382-4 (1994); drug charge arising out of assault incident is filed and joined beyond 60th day from arraignment on assault charge (although state had lab report before 60th day), held: because later charge was filed within a relatively short period of time after lab report arrived (three weeks), and no prejudice was shown, denial of motion to dismiss affirmed, State v. Fladebo, 113 Wn.2d 388 (1989); I.

State v. Kelly, 60 Wn.App. 921 (1991)

Trial court releases defendant on personal recognizance in order to extend time for trial to 90 days; held: release any time within 60 day period extends time for trial period to 90 days, former CrR 3.3(c)(1), see: CrR 3.3(b)(3), State v. Hyatt, 78 Wn.App. 679, 682 (1995), no abuse of discretion to release defendant in order to extend period, State v. Maling, 6 Wn.App.2d 838 (2018); I.

State v. Muños, 60 Wn.App. 921, 928 (1991) (companion case to Kelly, supra)

Detained defendant executes waiver of 60-day rule to point beyond 60-day limit but within 90-day limit, is then released and tried beyond the 90-day period but within the time of 90-days plus the waiver; held: an in-custody defendant waives only the 60-day rule unless he waives to a date beyond the 90-day limit or otherwise makes clear that he is also waiving the 90-day period; I.

State v. Syrotchen, 61 Wn.App. 261 (1991)

Defendant is arraigned, then transported by feds to Colorado; a month later, state moves for a continuance and seeks return under Interstate Agreement on Detainers, RCW 9.100.010; held: state is not responsible for tracking federal prisoner's process; state exhibited due diligence, State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421, 431-2 (1989), by moving for a continuance, thus time defendant was a federal prisoner is excluded, CrR 3.3(g)(6); cf.: State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852 (1993) State v. Simon, 84 Wn.App. 460 (1996); I.

State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63 (1991)

Consolidated juvenile co-respondent's motion to continue is granted, trial court continues respondent's case beyond expiration date over objection, held: no prejudice, court entitled to rely on prosecutor's policy favoring joint trials, continuance not motivated by inappropriate considerations, State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788 (1978), no abuse of discretion, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985), State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 484-5 (1994), State v. Torres, 111 Wn.App. 323 (2002); I.

State v. McPherson, 64 Wn.App. 705 (1992)

Officer acknowledges to prosecutor that he was served with subpoena through interagency mail procedure normally used by prosecutor's office, officer states he is going on vacation, prosecutor sends note to defense counsel advising he would seek continuance, defense denies receiving message until two days before trial, on trial date, court grants continuance beyond expiration date, later denies motion to dismiss; held: where subpoena was received by police witness, then there was due diligence, distinguishing State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574 (1988); interagency mail procedure is reasonable where officer in fact receives the subpoena in spite of JuCR 7.8 and CR 45(c); while sending a note to opposing counsel and assuming lack of response constitutes acquiescence is insufficient notice, here officer failed to notify prosecutor of vacation until day he left, foreclosing opportunity to preserve his testimony to keep trial date within time for trial period, State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998), but see: State v. Wake, 56 Wn.App. 472 (1989), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 578-85 (2001); I.

State v. Lemley, 64 Wn.App. 724 (1992)

At omnibus hearing, court sets trial date within 60 day rule but erroneously sets expiration date beyond correct expiration date; defendant questions expiration date in open court, but no action is taken; trial commences beyond expiration date; held: failure of defense to object to trial date within ten days of setting, former CrR 3.3(f) [now CrR 3.3(d)(3)], is excused because trial date was originally set within 60 day period; failure to object goes to trial date, not erroneously calculated expiration date; defendant's inquiry at omnibus hearing was sufficient notice to court and state to warrant dismissal, distinguishing State v. Raper, 47 Wn.App. 530 (1987), but see: State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805, 825 (Pekelis, J., concurring)(1996), see: State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022); I.

State v. Kelley, 64 Wn.App. 755 (1992)

"Responsibly scheduled vacation" of prosecutor is grounds for five-day extension, former CrR 3.3(d)(8), where state has responsibly managed its resources in terms of available deputy prosecutors, courtrooms and judges, but due to unforeseen or unavoidable circumstances beyond the control of the parties or the court, the case cannot be tried on its set date or before expiration date, and state has reassigned case to the next most available deputy prosecutor; if that prosecutor is already in trial, court may grant a 5-day extension, absent prejudice, see: State v. Grilley, 67 Wn.App. 795 (1992), State v. Williams, 104 Wn.App. 516 (2001), State v. Heredia-Juarez, 119 Wn.App. 150 (2003), cf.: State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007); I.

State v. Anderson, 65 Wn.App. 493 (1992)

Defendant, facing charges in Washington while in federal prison, demands a speedy trial from prosecutor, state claims that it would not act as no detainer had been lodged; more than a year later, state obtains writ of habeas corpus, brings defendant to Washington for trial; held: although former CrR 3.3(g)(6) [now CrR 3.3(e)(6)] tolls time for trial rule when defendant is detained out of state, prosecutor must still exercise due diligence in seeking extradition, State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421, 432 (1989), Smith v. Hooey, 21 L.Ed.2d 607 (1969), 2 American Bar Ass'n, Standards for Criminal Justice, Std. 12-3.1, at 12.34 (2d ed. 1980), State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852 (1993); but see: State v. Carmichael, 53 Wn.App. 894, 896 (1989), cf.: State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 766-74 (2012); here, failure to lodge detainer establishes a lack of good faith and due diligence, denying defendant's right to speedy trial, former CrR 3.3(d)(4), State v. Roman, 94 Wn.App. 211 (1999); I.

State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202 (1992)

Jury selected within 60-day period, jury sworn and motions heard after 60th day; held: jury selection is a necessary part of trial, which commonly starts proceeding, jury need not be sworn within 60-days, preliminary motions need not be heard, see: State v. Mathews, 38 Wn.App. 180, 183 (1984), State v. Redd, 51 Wn.App. 597, 608 (1988), State v. Estabrook, 68 Wn.App. 309 (1993); by not objecting within time for trial period, defense waives objection as it is defense responsibility to raise issue when action could still be taken to avoid violation of the rule, State v. Austin, 59 Wn.App. 186, 200 (1990), State v. Raper, 47 Wn.App. 530, 538 (1987), State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 433-7 (1994), State v. Donahue, 76 Wn.App. 695, 698-9 (1995), State v. Rose, 110 Wn.App. 878 (2002), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 12-13 (2006), State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 321-22 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009), State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013), State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022); III.

Doggett v. United States, 120 L.Ed.2d 520 (1992)

Eight-year delay between indictment and arrest, attributable solely to government's negligence, where defendant was ignorant of indictment, is sufficient to warrant dismissal even absent proof of particularized trial prejudice, Barker v. Wingo, 33 L.Ed.2d 101 (1972), as excessive delay presumptively compromises the reliability of a trial in ways that neither party can prove or identify, cf.: United States v. Loud Hawk, 88 L.Ed.2d 640 (1986); 5-4.

State v. Andrews, 66 Wn.App. 804 (1992)

A motion to exclude witnesses, ER 615, is a commencement of a trial, which tolls the time for trial period, State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805, 819-20 (1996), disavowed, on other grounds, State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022), see: State v. Mathews, 38 Wn.App. 180, 183 (1984), State v. Redd, 51 Wn.App. 597, 608 (1988), State v. Carlyle, 84 Wn.App. 33 (1996); presence of a court reporter is not a prerequisite to starting trial; a judge's dental emergency is grounds for a retroactive 1-day extension, former CrR 3.3(d)(8); while docket congestion alone is not grounds for delaying a criminal trial beyond expiration date, State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788, 794 (1978), State v. Kokot, 42 Wn.App. 733, 737 (1986), State v. Warren, 96 Wn.App. 306 (1999), State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009), double setting of calendars, causing counsel to be unavailable, is good cause for delay, State v. Mack, supra, at 791; I.

State v. Grilley, 67 Wn.App. 795 (1992)

Continuance beyond expiration date to accommodate previously scheduled vacations of officers is not abuse of discretion where supported by findings showing a need for a continuance in the due administration of justice, where the motion is made promptly when conflict is discovered, where rescheduled date did not cause an unreasonable delay and no actual prejudice results, State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91, 108 (2003), see: State v. Kelley, 64 Wn.App. 755, 767 (1992), State ex rel. Rushmore v. Bellevue Dist. Justice Court, 15 Wn.App. 675, 677 (1977), State v. Heredia-Juarez, 119 Wn.App. 150 (2003), cf.: State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007), but see: State v. Kokot, 42 Wn.App. 733, 735 (1986), State v. Warren, 96 Wn.App. 306 (1999); I.

State v. Allen, 67 Wn.App. 824 (1992)

Pre-accusation delay of 95 days before arraignment is not error absent prejudice, see: State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357 (1989); III.

State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992)

Where state provides discovery late, forcing defense to move to continue beyond expiration date or go to trial unprepared, trial court has discretion whether to dismiss, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 428 (1985), State v. Greene, 49 Wn.App. 49 (1987), State v. Woods, 142 Wn.2d 561, 578-85 (2001), see: State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009), see: State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017), distinguishing State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980), State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 763 (1990); defense must prove that it was "impermissibly prejudiced" by interjection of new facts to prevail, cf.: State v. Kessler, 75 Wn.App. 634, 631-2 (1994); 2-1, I.

State v. Potter, 68 Wn.App. 134 (1992)

Defendant is charged with murder 12½ years after homicide; held: test for precharging delay: (1) defendant must show prejudice, (2) court must consider reason for delay, (3) if state justifies delay, court must balance state's interest with prejudice, State v. Chavez, 111 Wn.2d 548 (1988); mere allegation of evidence or witness unavailability or dimmed memories is insufficient, State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357, 367 (1988), State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 877-8 (1995); II.

State v. Duggins, 121 Wn.2d 524 (1993)

Juvenile Court grants two-day continuance within time for trial period, JuCR 7.8, as officer had not responded to subpoena that was not personally served; held: because defendant was tried within speedy trial period, there is no basis for dismissal under speedy trial rule, Seattle v. Clewis, 159 Wn.App. 842 (2011); affirms, in part, State v. Duggins, 68 Wn.App. 396 (1993).

State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852 (1993)

Defendant, facing charges in Washington while in federal prison, demands a speedy trial from prosecutor, state claims that it would not act as no detainer had been lodged; more than a year later, state obtains writ of habeas corpus, brings defendant to Washington for trial; held: although former CrR 3.3(g)(6) [now CrR 3.3(e)(6)] tolls time for trial rule when defendant is detained out of state, prosecutor must still exercise due diligence in seeking extradition, State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421, 432 (1989), Smith v. Hooey, 21 L.Ed.2d 607 (1969), 2 American Bar Ass'n, Standards for Criminal Justice, Std. 12-3.1, at 12.34 (2d ed. 1980); here, failure to lodge detainer establishes a lack of good faith and due diligence, denying defendant's right to speedy trial, former CrR 3.3(d)(4) [now CrR 3.3(e)(6)]; affirms State v. Anderson, 65 Wn.App. 493 (1992); see: State v. Mireles, 73 Wn.App. 605, 615-17 (1994), State v. Stewart, 78 Wn.App. 931 (1995), State v. Swenson, 150 Wn.2d 181 (2003), accord: State v. Simon, 84 Wn.App. 460 (1996), State v. Huffmeyer, 145 Wn.2d 252 (2001), cf.: State v. Ponder, 24 Wn.App. 105 (1979), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 766-74 (2012); 5-3.

State v. Hackett, 122 Wn.2d 165 (1993)

Filing and service of a notice of appearance by defense counsel for an absconded defendant does not commence the running of a new speedy trial period, former CrR 3.3(d)(2), see: CrR 3.3(a)(iii) and (c)(2)(ii); defendant must be present in county, known to the judge on the record; document in court file is insufficient, State v. Johnson, 56 Wn.App. 333, 338 (1989); reverses State v. Hackett, 64 Wn.App. 205 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Newkirk, 122 Wn.2d 174 (1993)

Defendant fails to appear for trial, one day later counsel's motion to quash is granted, 99 days later defense moves to dismiss; held: once accused is arraigned and fails to appear, defendant must appear in court or defendant's presence in county must be explicitly established and recorded by court reporter or by clerk in minutes, former CrR 3.3(d)(2), [now CrR 3.3(a)(iii) and (c)(2)(ii)] ; mere request for order quashing warrant does not demonstrate defendant's presence, State v. Johnson, 56 Wn.App. 333, 338 (1989); an absence following a failure to appear does not create a fresh duty of diligence to locate defendant at the risk of dismissal (dicta); reverses State v. Newkirk, 64 Wn.App. 585 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Norby, 122 Wn.2d 258 (1993)

Trial court consolidates numerous charged and uncharged defendants in order to hear preaccusatorial delay issues, orders state to answer interrogatories about state's investigations and charging policies and the number of cases involved in prosecutor's backlog, state appeals; held: test for preaccusatorial delay: (1) actual prejudice to defendant, (2) court must consider reasons for delay, (3) if state is able to justify delay, court must balance state's interest vs. prejudice, United States v. Lovasco, 52 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977), State v. Lidge, 111 Wn.2d 845 (1989), State v. Oppelt, 172 Wn.2d 285 (2011); actual prejudice must be established before court considers reasons for delay; mere possibility of prejudice is insufficient to meet the burden of showing actual prejudice, State v. Ansell, 36 Wn.App. 492, 498-9 (1984); mere allegation that witnesses are unavailable or that memories have dimmed is insufficient, defense must specifically demonstrate that the delay caused actual prejudice, State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357, 367 (1988), State v. McConnell, 178 Wn.App. 592, 605-08 (2013), cf.: State v. Stearns, 23 Wn.App.2d 580 (2022); 8-0.

State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993)

Defense counsel moves to continue trial and promises to file a time for trial waiver which is not filed, new counsel denies that the promised waiver was valid; held: assurance that a waiver in support of a motion to continue is, effectively, a waiver, as a waiver may be implied from defendant's request for a continuance, see: State v. Freeman, 54 Wn.App. 734, 737 (1989), State v. Colbert, 17 Wn.App. 658 (1977); 8-0.

State v. Nguyen, 68 Wn.App. 906 (1993)

Subpoenaed witness called to active military duty is grounds for a continuance, former CrR 3.3(h)(2), beyond expiration date absent prejudice; I.

Butts v. Heller, 69 Wn.App. 263 (1993)

Writ of prohibition, RCW 7.16.300, is appropriate to review denial of a speedy trial motion where (1) reversal would be unquestioned if the case were on appeal and (2) litigation will terminate once error is corrected by interlocutory review, Seattle v. Williams, 101 Wn.2d 445 (1984), State v. Harris, 2 Wn.App. 272 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 78 Wn.2d 894, rev'd, 30 L.Ed.2d 212 (1971); II.

State v. Angulo, 69 Wn.App. 337 (1993)

In continuing a case beyond expiration date to accommodate prosecutor's trial of an unrelated case, trial court may consider respective aging factors of the two cases, specifically that other defendant was arraigned first, had been incarcerated longer, that his trial had been continued more often and anticipated length of the two trials, all within contemplation of a continuance for the "administration of justice," former CrR 3.3(h)(2) [now CrR 3.3(f)(2)], State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 325-7 (1996); while expiration dates should normally control the decision as to which goes first, the current expiration date is less significant once there have been waivers and continuances beyond the initial expiration date, see: Seattle v. Clewis, 159 Wn.App. 842 (2011), particularly where, as here, the expiration dates were only one day apart; I.

State v. Davis, 69 Wn.App. 634 (1993)

Defendant is incarcerated out of state in 1987, files a detainer demand in 1991, Washington acts timely to bring him back; held: to determine if constitutional speedy trial right is violated, apply balancing test of Barker v. Wingo, 33 L.Ed.2d 101 (1972): (1) length of delay (here, substantial), (2) reason for delay (here, lack of diligence by state due to negligence, a "neutral" reason as opposed to deliberate delay), (3) defendant's assertion of speedy trial right (here, weighs against defendant), (4) prejudice, not limited to trial prejudice, Moore v. Arizona, 38 L.Ed.2d 183 (1973), State v. Iniguez, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009), as it may impact right to parole, Smith v. Hooey, 21 L.Ed.2d 607 (1969), State v. Angelone, 67 Wn.App. 555, 562 (1992)(here, no prejudice), see: State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852 (1993), State v. Stein, 140 Wn.App. 43

(2007), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 766-74 (2012), State v. Shemesh, 187 Wn.App. 136 (2015), State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 496-501 (2017); I.

State v. Ekstedt, 70 Wn.App. 785 (1993)

Where felony is filed in district court, defendant files time for trial waiver, after which charge is dismissed and refiled in superior court, time for trial waiver applies prospectively, such that time elapsed in district court, former CrR 3.3(c)(2)(ii), begins with first appearance there and runs up to date of the waiver, see: State v. Garnier, 52 Wn.App. 657 (1988), overruled on other grounds, State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238 (1991); I.

State v. Watkins, 71 Wn.App. 164 (1993)

Absence of standby counsel is justification for continuance of trial beyond expiration date; continuance in the absence of pro se defendant does not infringe right of self-representation; I.

State v. Wachter, 71 Wn.App. 80 (1993)

Defense counsel receives written notice of trial date to commence at 9 a.m., defendant fails to appear, court does not issue warrant, defendant appears at 11 a.m., another trial had commenced, court resets trial date and sets expiration date 90-days hence, former CrRLJ 3.3(d)(2), see: CrRLJ 3.3(a)(iii) and (c)(2)(ii); held: defendant's failure to appear at the time the case was set starts 90-day period anew, but see: State v. Raschka, 124 Wn.App. 103 (2004); II.

State v. Silva, 72 Wn.App. 80 (1993)

Former CrR 3.3(d)(8) five-day extension is granted, trial court makes record listing each courtroom and case therein, offers defense a judge pro tempore, which defense rejects; held: absent prejudice, State v. Brown, 40 Wn.App. 91, 94-5 (1985), where court substantiates its assertion that court congestion is unavoidable and makes every effort to responsibly manage its resources and try defendant within time for trial limits, then extension was not an abuse of discretion, State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 325-7 (1996), State v. Warren, 96 Wn.App. 306 (1999), State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009), distinguishing State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788, 794 (1978), State v. Kokot, 42 Wn.App. 733, 736-7 (1986), see: State v. Smith, 104 Wn.App. 244 (2001), State v. Denton23 Wn.App.2d 437 (2022); I.

State v. McKinzy, 72 Wn.App. 85, 87-89 (1993)

Co-defendant's motion for continuance beyond expiration date is granted, trial court denies defendant's motion to sever to protect her right to speedy trial, CrR 4.4(c)(2)(i); held: brief delay beyond time for trial limits is permissible, severance is not mandatory, preference for severance under court rule "may be tempered by considerations of judicial economy and potential prejudice to others," at 89, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 428 (1985), absent prejudice to defendant; I.

State v. Helms, 72 Wn.App. 273 (1993)

A waiver for an unspecified period is effective only until date of trial contemporaneously or subsequently set by court, State v. Garnier, 52 Wn.App. 657, 660 (1988), overruled on other grounds in State v. Stephens, 116 Wn.2d 238, 246 (1991), State v. Bjelland, 22 Wn.App. 696 (1979), State v. Burroughs, 23 Wn.App. 190 (1979), State v. Ramsay, 41 Wn.App. 380 (1985); a continuance covered by waiver is an excluded period, former CrR 3.3(g)(3) and (h)(1), thus 90-day period includes time elapsed prior to waiver period plus remainder of 90 days following waiver period; III.

State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 484-5 (1994)

Two-month continuance granted to co-defendant, beyond expiration date for defendant, severance denied to defendant, held: absent prejudice, interests of judicial efficiency supports denial of severance and dismissal for speedy trial violation, State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63, 67 (1991), State v. Torres, 111 Wn.App. 323 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429 (1994)

At omnibus hearing, within time for trial, defense notes motion to dismiss, but does not raise motion until after expiration date, claiming defense counsel was unaware of time elapsed in district court; held: defense counsel's failure to object to trial date within ten days of receiving notice waives the issue, State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202, 206 (1992), State v. Austin, 59 Wn.App. 186, 200 (1990), State v. Rose, 110 Wn.App. 878 (2002), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 12-13 (2006), State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 321-22 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds,166 Wn.2d 881 (2009), State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013), State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022); defense counsel has an affirmative duty to investigate "easily ascertainable facts that are relevant to setting the trial date within the speedy trial period," untimely objection because of failure to discover them waives issue, at 433-37, State v. Chenoweth, 115 Wn.App. 726, 736-39 (2003), distinguishing dicta in State v. Raper, 47 Wn.App. 530, 539 (1987), see: State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805 (1996), disavowed, on other grounds, State v. Walker, supra, at 806; failure to investigate the issue was not ineffective assistance, because had defense objected in a timely fashion, trial court would have reset trial date within time for trial period, thus no prejudice, at 437-38, State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013); I.

State v. Mireles, 73 Wn.App. 605, 615-7 (1994)

Where defendant is in federal custody, time for trial period is excluded unless state acts in bad faith or fails to exercise due diligence in attempting to obtain defendant for trial, former CrR 3.3(c)(1), State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852 (1993), see: State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 766-74 (2012); due diligence is shown where state seeks writ of habeas corpus ad prosequendum; court need not try defendant in absentia at his own request; III.

State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 209, 210-11 (1994)

Where prosecution mails notice of arraignment to an address given by defendant, and notice is not returned, reasonable inference is that defendant received notice and prosecutor has thus acted with due diligence, State v. Greenwood, 120 Wn.2d 585, 600 (1993), State v. Anderson, 102 Wn.App. 405 (2000); I.

State v. Lopez, 74 Wn.App. 264, 268-9 (1994)

Defendant seeks continuance of trial and signs time for trial waiver, no interpreter present but counsel represents defendant is sufficiently fluent to understand, defendant later claims waiver was involuntary; held: where defendant requests continuance, defense has the burden of showing an abuse of discretion in granting the continuance, State v. Denison, 78 Wn.App. 566, 573 (1995), see: State v. Dowell, 16 Wn.App. 583, 588 (1976), State v. Livengood, 14 Wn.App.

203, 209 (1975); trial court reasonably relied upon representations of counsel that defendant understood proceedings; I.

State v. Miller, 74 Wn.App. 334 (1994)

Valid order for a handwriting exemplar and civil contempt confinement for failure to comply authorize continuances beyond time for trial expiration date as "required in the administration of justice," former CrR 3.3(h)(2) [now CrR 3.3(f)(2)]; continuance allowing state to do further investigation and add counts, and service of time in a county jail for contempt is not prejudice "in the presentation of the defense," CrR 3.3(h)(2); I.

State v. Kitchen, 75 Wn.App. 295 (1994)

Arraignment notice is mailed to defendant's correct address, defendant fails to appear for two years, claims it was never received, trial court denies motion to dismiss; held: notice sent to correct address creates a rebuttable presumption that notice was received, at 298; where defendant convinces court he was without fault in failing to appear, then court must determine whether state exercised due diligence in attempting to notify defendant of the charge, at 298; a finding that notice was received where sent to correct address and not returned will normally be sustained even when record contains simple denial of receipt by defendant, at 299, but here no finding of fault was made by court, remanded for determination of whether defendant received notice; see: State v. Marler, 80 Wn.App. 775 (1996); I.

State v. Donahue, 76 Wn.App. 695, 698-9 (1995)

Extending trial date beyond expiration date to accommodate ongoing plea negotiations, absent objection, is not an abuse of discretion; III.

State v. Morris, 126 Wn.2d 306 (1995)

Defendant, in prison in Washington, serves warden with demand for speedy disposition of pending felony, warden transmits it to superior court and prosecutor, RCW 9.98.010, trial is set within 120 days of receipt by prosecutor, but beyond 120 days of receipt by warden, motion to dismiss is denied, but, at defendant's request, trial court stays pending discretionary review, which is denied, with five days remaining in 120 days, stay is lifted, but trial is set more than five days later, trial court dismisses; held: receipt by prosecutor, rather than warden, triggers statutory 120 day period, Fex v. Michigan, 122 L.Ed.2d 406 (1993), reversing State v. Morris, 74 Wn.App. 293 (1994), upon lifting of the stay, state failed to comply with the continuance procedure, RCW 9.98.010(1), thus 120 day period lapsed, see also: State v. Peeler, 183 Wn.2d 169 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Shilling, 77 Wn.App. 166, 169-71 (1995)

Medical emergency in the jail which prevents transportation of defendant to court on expiration date is grounds for a retroactive one-day extension due to unavoidable or unforeseen circumstances beyond the control of the court or parties, former CrR 3.3(d)(8); I.

State v. Bible, 77 Wn.App. 470 (1995)

Prior to expiration date, state informs court that principal witnesses had not been located and were not notified of the charges, court dismisses without prejudice, defense objects and appeals, State v.Taylor, 150 Wn.2d 599 (2003); held: a sufficient reason must exist apart from the running of the time for trial period, former CrR 3.3(g)(4), to justify dismissal without prejudice under CrR 8.3(a); here, unavailability of witness is a legitimate reason, thus trial court properly exercised discretion; state is not required to exercise due diligence to subpoena witnesses in an adult criminal proceeding, former CrR 3.3(h)(2), in order to obtain a continuance, distinguishing State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574, 580 (1988), see: State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998); I.

Seattle v. Bonifacio, 127 Wn.2d 482 (1995)

The issuance of a citation to a defendant by police, former CrRLJ 2.1, starts the running of the time for trial clock, former CrRLJ 3.3(c)(1), upon filing with the court or 48 hours after issuance, former CrRLJ. 2.1(d), if it is not filed, State v. Dolman, 22 Wn.App. 917 (1979), distinguishing State v. Getty, 55 Wn.App. 152 (1989), cf.: State v. Johnson, 100 Wn.App. 917 (2000), but see: State v. Miller, 188 Wn.app. 103 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Higley, 78 Wn.App. 172, 181-4 (1995)

Where a deferred prosecution is granted, "delay...caused by a petitioner requesting deferred prosecution," RCW 10.05.110, means delay from the date a petition is filed to the date on which deferred prosecution is revoked or otherwise terminated; II.

State v. Hyatt, 78 Wn.App. 679 (1995)

Delay in arraignment beyond 14-day requirement of former CrR 3.3(c)(1), see: CrR 4.1, is not grounds for dismissal where court sets proper constructive arraignment date, former CrR 3.3(c)(4), see: CrR 4.1(b), and trial date is still within 90-day period; where defendant is released, state is entitled to 90 days irrespective of when defendant is released, State v. Kelly, 60 Wn.App. 921, 926 (1991), see: State v. Maling, 6 Wn.App.2d 838 (2018) III.

State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805 (1996), disavowed,in part,, State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796, 806 (2022)

Court and prosecutor mistakenly believe expiration date is later than it is, defense counsel remains silent, on expiration date assigned prosecutor starts another trial, after which, over objection, court grants retroactive multiple five-day extensions, former CrR 3.3(d)(8); held: mistaken belief about the expiration date, unavailability of counsel due to other trial and defense counsel's failure to advise the court or prosecutor of "his intent to rely on the speedy trial rule before the speedy trial period expired" are unavoidable circumstances beyond the control of the court or parties to justify extension, at 816, see: State v. Williams, 104 Wn.App. 516 (2001); defense bears some responsibility for asserting CrR 3.3 rights and assuring compliance before expiration date, defense effectively waives speedy trial rights if they do not raise an objection when action could still be taken to avoid a speedy trial violation, at 822-23, State v. White, 94 Wn.2d 498, 502-03 (1980), disavowed, in part,, State v. Walker, supra, at 806, State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 433 (1994), State v. Raper, 47 Wn.App. 530, 538 (1987), State v. Rose, 110 Wn.App. 878 (2002), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 12-13 (2006), State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 321-22 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009), State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013), cf.: State v. Duffy, 86 Wn.App. 334, 341-4 (1997), State v. Ledenko, 87 Wn.App. 39 (1997), State v. Sanchez, 172 Wn.App. 678 (2012); following mistrial, first day counted against 60-day period is the day after the oral order of mistrial, CrR 3.3(d)(3); when, on assigned trial date (same as expiration date), only action is denial of defense motion to continue trial, the trial has begun on that date, State v. Andrews, 66 Wn.App. 804, 806-8 (1992), State v. Redd, 51 Wn.App. 597, 599-

600 (1988), State v. Mathews, 38 Wn.App. 180, 181 (1984), State v. Carlyle, 84 Wn.App. 33 (1996), State v. Torres, 111 Wn.App. 323, 334 (2002). , State v. Sanchez, 172 Wn.App. 678 (2012)

State v. Marler, 80 Wn.App. 775 (1996)

In welfare fraud cases, DSHS sends notice to defendants informing them that charges were filed and that they should contact the sheriff, substantial delay occurs before arraignment; held: notice from DSHS did not contain established court dates, distinguishing State v. Bryant, 74 Wn.App. 301 (1994), notices were not sent by court or prosecutor, distinguishing State v. Kitchen, 75 Wn.App. 295 (1994), prosecutor did not exercise due diligence or good faith by relying on or delegating authority to DSHS to bring defendants before court, thus dismissal affirmed; III.

State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35 (1996)

Defendant is arrested in stolen car, cited in district court for driving without a license, pleads guilty, 139 days later is charged with taking and riding in juvenile court, motion to dismiss is denied; held: offenses arose from same criminal conduct, thus under 2 American Bar Ass'n, Standards for Criminal Justice Std. 12-2.2 (2d ed. 1980), which is applicable in juvenile court, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423, 431 (1978), when multiple charges stem from the same criminal conduct or criminal episode, state must prosecute all related charges within the speedy trial time limits, even when the charges were split between district and juvenile or superior courts, Peterson, supra., State v. Earl, 97 Wn.App. 408 (1999), see: State v. Bradley, 38 Wn.App. 597, 599 (1984), State v. Wilke, 28 Wn.App. 590, 594 (1981), cf.: State v. Pettus, 89 Wn.App. 688, 701-2 (1998), abrogated, on different grounds, State v. Henderson, 182 Wn.2d 734 (2015), State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997), distinguishing State v. Fladebo, 53 Wn.App. 116 (1988), aff'd on different grounds, 113 Wn.2d 388 (1989), where charges were prosecuted by different prosecutorial authorities in different courts with exclusive jurisdictions, see also: State v. Keltner, 102 Wn.App. 396 (2000) re: infractions; 9-0.

State v. Hudson, 130 Wn.2d 48 (1996)

Defendant who is out of state and not incarcerated is not amenable to process and state need not exercise diligence to obtain his presence, State v. Carpenter, 94 Wn.2d 690, 693 (1980), State v. Stewart, 78 Wn.App. 931 (1995), State v. Hessler, 155 Wn.2d 604 (2005), even if state is aware of his out-of-state address, State v. Stewart, 130 Wn.2d 351 (1996); affirms State v. Hudson, 79 Wn.App. 193 (1995), State v. Cintron-Cartegena, 79 Wn.App. 600 (1995); accord: State v. Monson, 84 Wn.App. 703 (1997), State v. Roman, 94 Wn.App. 211 (1999), State v. Treat, 109 Wn.App. 419, 423-25 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Carlyle, 84 Wn.App. 33 (1996)

On expiration date, court erroneously excuses all jurors, hears preliminary prosecution motion and continues case five days, then dismisses; held: case was called and preliminary motion was heard on expiration date, thus defendant was brought to trial within the rule, former CrRLJ 3.3(c)(1), court erred in dismissing, State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805, 820 (1996), disavowed on other grounds, State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022), State v. Redd, 51 Wn.App. 597, 608 (1988), State v. Mathews, 38 Wn.App. 180, 183 (1984); standard on appeal is de novo, not abuse of discretion; II.

State v. Simon, 84 Wn.App. 460 (1996)

Defendant is charged with Washington offense while in jail in Oregon, Washington files detainer, defers to a California detainer, as charges there are more serious, defendant is returned to Oregon, Washington fails to communicate with Oregon for more than a year; held: while state may properly defer to another state's detainer while still complying with good faith and due diligence, State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421, 425 (1989), and while state is not responsible for tracking a prisoner's progress through the federal system, State v. Syrotchen, 61 Wn.App. 261, 266 (1991), here state did nothing for more than a year, state had a duty to inquire into defendant's availability to stand trial in Washington, state failed to exercise due diligence, thus dismissed, State v. Huffmeyer, 145 Wn.2d 52 (2001); I.

State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997)

Defendant is accused of stealing items and pawning them, is charged with theft, three days before trial state adds charges of trafficking in stolen property, trial court dismisses; held: state's delay in adding new charges when it had all the evidence necessary to file those charges months earlier, forcing defendant to waive speedy trial to answer the new charges, justifies dismissal in the interests of justice, CrR 8.3(b), State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980), State v. Teems, 89 Wn.App. 385 (1997), State v. Ralph G., 90 Wn.App. 16 (1998) State v. Earl, 97 Wn.App. 408 (1999), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); 5-4.

State v. Branstetter, 85 Wn.App. 123 (1997)

At arraignment, defendant is ordered to appear for omnibus hearing 23 November, prosecutor notes motion for 18 November, defense counsel appears, defendant does not, court issues warrant, 23 November omnibus hearing is apparently never held, when defendant ultimately appears, court quashes warrant and restarts 90-day time for trial period, former CrR 3.3(d)(2), defendant seeks dismissal after original expiration date; held: "CrR 3.3(d)(2) and CrR 3.4 restart the speedy trial period when an arraigned defendant is absent from a hearing he was ordered to attend. Here, [defendant] signed an order requiring him to attend his pretrial omnibus hearing on November 23, but he failed to appear… Under these circumstances, the trial court properly restarted the speedy trial period," at 129, cf.: State v. Raschka, 124 Wn.App. 103 (2004), State v. Moore, 178 Wn.App. 489 (2013), but see: State v. Gelinas, 15 Wn.App.2d 484 (2020); per curiam.

State v. Wilks, 85 Wn.App. 303 (1997)

Following suppression hearing, defense files and serves notice of discretionary review, apparently court and state believe that time for trial rule is thus stayed, trial date passes without calling case for trial, following denial of discretionary review defense seeks dismissal; held: absent a stay granted by a court, CrR 3.3 does not stay time for trial period while a defendant seeks discretionary review, see: RAP 7.1, 8.3, cf.: State v. Blum, 121 Wn.App. 1, 6-7 (2004), failure of court and prosecutor to request stay or extensions or continuance does not shift burden to defense to seek speedy trial, thus dismissed; III.

State v. Perrett, 86 Wn.App. 312, 317-9 (1997)

Pretrial electronic home detention is not jail for speedy trial purposes, thus 90-day rule applies; II.

State v. Duffy, 86 Wn.App. 334, 341-6 (1997)

Police book defendant and file citation charging DUI, city declines to prosecute but does not seek order of dismissal, defendant is charged with DUI and hit-and-run in superior court four months later; held: dismissal of DUI was necessary to toll speedy trial period, former CrRLJ 3.3(g)(4) [now CrRLJ 3.3(e)(4)], defendant had no obligation to assert right to speedy trial when city has indicated it will not prosecute and state has not filed charge, distinguishing State v. Rock, 65 Wn.App. 654 (1992), State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805 (1996), disavowed, on other grounds, State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022), hit-and-run charge arose from same criminal episode and transaction, State v. Erickson, 22 Wn.App. 38, 44 (1978), thus speedy trial period must begin from time defendant was held to answer any charge with respect to that conduct or episode, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423, 431 (1978), see: State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003), where all evidence was available to the prosecutor at the time the first charge was filed; III.

State v. Ledenko, 87 Wn.App. 39 (1997)

Due to clerical error, case did not appear on court's trial calendar and case was not called on the trial date, prosecutor was at a conference, defendant was present in courthouse and left after calendar call, after expiration date state seeks extension which is denied; held: defendant's failure to present himself to the courtroom does not "rectify" the superior court's clerical error, defendant had no obligation to make his presence known to the court on the record, as former CrR 3.3(d)(2) applies only to the time when the time for trial period begins to run again after a failure to appear, see: State v. Newkirk, 122 Wn.2d 174, 178-80 (1993), but see: State v. Sanchez, 172 Wn.App. 678 (2012); where trial is not called on scheduled date, defendant's presence is not required, State v. Wilks, 85 Wn.App. 303 (1997), State v. Helms, 72 Wn.App. 273, 274-6 (1994); prosecutors unavailability was not unforeseen or unavoidable, nor was court's error, distinguishing State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805 (1996), disavowed, on other grounds, State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022); III.

State v. Berrysmith, 87 Wn.App. 268, 280 (1997)

On the day of trial, counsel is allowed to withdraw because he reasonably believed defendant would commit perjury, defendant maintains he was forced to represent himself, court continues case three weeks to allow new counsel to prepare for trial; held: continuance was for an unforeseen or unavoidable circumstance, former CrR 3.3(h)(2), [now CrR 3.3(c)(2)(vii)] and thus appropriate; I.

State v. Detrick, 90 Wn.App. 939 (1998)

Where juvenile court judge is disqualified, time for trial period may be extended, applying CrR 3.3(d)(6) to juvenile court, distinguishing State v. Sayers, 29 Wn.App. 128, 130 (1981), State v. Jacks, 25 Wn.App. 141, 145 (1980); I.

State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998)

Prosecutor arranges for defense counsel to interview complainant, does not subpoena complainant who moves out of state, prosecutor obtains continuance beyond expiration date; held: a continuance may be granted if state's evidence is unavailable, prosecutor has exercised due diligence, and there are reasonable grounds to believe evidence will be available within reasonable time, JuCR 7.8(e)(2)(ii), due diligence in juvenile case requires proper issuance of subpoenas, State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574, 578 (1988), State v. Duggins, 121 Wn.2d 524, 525

(1993), cf.: State v. Bible, 77 Wn.App. 470 (1995), thus continuance was improperly granted; per curiam.

State v. Roman, 94 Wn.App. 211 (1999)

Defendant, in custody in California, declines to waive extradition to Washington, completes California sentence and is erroneously released, two months later is arrested in Idaho and waives extradition, trial court dismisses; held: state must exercise due diligence to extradite a defendant who is amenable to process, State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852, 865 (1993), where defendant does not waive extradition, he is not amenable to process until he finished his California sentence, or when he was at large in another state, State v. Hudson, 130 Wn.2d 48 (1996), State v. Stewart, 130 Wn.2d 351 (1996), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 766-74 (2012), cf.: State v. Hessler, 155 Wn.2d 604 (2005); II.

State v. Corrado, 94 Wn.App. 228 (1999)

Following conviction, appeal and reversal, trial court dismisses attempted murder charge on double jeopardy grounds, state appeals again, trial court detains defendant pending appeal for 11 months before Court of Appeals reverses, seeks dismissal for violation of Sixth Amendment right to speedy trial; held: 11 months is "presumptively prejudicial," Doggett v. United States, 120 L.Ed.2d 520 (1992), but see: State v. Iniguez, 167 Wn.2d 273, 291 (2009); factors: (1) reason for delay, (2) assertion of right to speedy trial, (3) prejudice; here, a state's successful appeal is not "purposeful or oppressive," United States v. Ewell, 15 L.Ed.2d 627 (1966), defendant did not assert his constitutional right to a speedy trial, no prejudice as all testimony was preserved at first trial, thus defendant's constitutional right to speedy trial was not denied, State v. Ollivier, 178 Wn.2d 813 (2013), State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 496-501 (2017); II.

State v. King, 94 Wn.App. 811 (1999)

"Time elapsed in district court," former CrR 3.3(c)(2)(i), commences running when an attorney files an appearance, CrRLJ 4.1(d)(4), not when the defendant later personally appears; I.

State v. Dassow, 95 Wn.App. 454 (1999)

Juvenile respondent files an "objection" to trial date and serves prosecutor, no action is taken until after expiration date, whereupon trial court dismisses; held: filing objection with court and serving prosecutor is effectively a "motion" to reset trial date, respondent has no obligation to note the motion for a hearing or to bring it to court's attention, JuCR 7.8(c), former CrR 3.3(f), distinguishing State v. Vandergriff, 109 Wn.2d 99 (1987), cf.: CrRLJ 3.3(d)(3), but see: State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 122, 129-31 (2002), State v. Freeman, 38 Wn.App. 665 (1984), State v. Frankenfield, 112 Wn.App. 472 (2002); III.

State v. Thomas, 95 Wn.App. 730 (1999)

Defense counsel, knowing she has a conflict of interest, waits until expiration date to advise court, defendant waives to allow new counsel's appointment, after conviction seeks dismissal as he was forced to waive due to defense counsel's ineffective assistance; held: speedy trial waiver forced solely by defense counsel's conduct, and not in any way attributable to the state or the court, is not a violation of CrR 3.3; where defendant moves to continue, and "good cause" is shown, and no prejudice to presentation of defendant's case is shown, then the waiver is valid even if caused by inadequacy of counsel, State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013), accord: State v. Silva, 107 Wn.App. 605, 611-13 (2001), State v. Vicuna, 119 Wn.App. 26 (2003); I.

State v. Warren, 96 Wn.App. 306 (1999)

Trial is continued two days beyond expiration date because of "courtroom unavailability," but court was aware that defense counsel would be in a homicide trial forcing another 16 day continuance; held: continuance or extension beyond expiration date for court congestion is not good cause, State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788, 794 (1978), , and where court fails to make a detailed explanation of why each court was unavailable or offer a judge pro tempore, dismissal is mandated, State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009), State v. Kokot, 42 Wn.App. 733, 737 (1986), State v. Silva, 72 Wn.App. 80 (1993), State v. Smith, 104 Wn.App. 244 (2001), State v. Denton, 23 Wn.App.2d 437 (2022); II.

State v. Selam, 97 Wn.App. 140 (1999)

Defense counsel's one-day vacation is grounds to continue trial one day past expiration date, absent prejudice; III.

State v. Earl, 97 Wn.App. 408 (1999)

State is granted leave to amend to add a count on day of trial, state had all evidence before it earlier, defense objection is overruled, six days left until expiration date, defendant waives three weeks to prepare; held: when state, without excuse, amends so late to compel defendant to seek a continuance, resulting period of delay is not excluded in calculating time for trial, thus dismissal is required, State v. Ralph Vernon G., 90 Wn.App. 16, 21-22 (1998), State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810, 814-15 (1980); since both counts occurred as part of the same criminal episode, they should both have been charged and tried within the speedy trial period dictated by the first count, thus both must be dismissed, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423 (1978), State v. Fladebo, 113 Wn.2d 388, 392 (1989), State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35, 40 (1996), see: State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003); II.

State v. Whelchel, 97 Wn.App. 813 (1999)

Federal habeas corpus is granted by district court, parties appeal to Ninth Circuit but no stay is sought, defendant is brought back to superior court for trial, seeks dismissal; held: former CrR 3.3(d)(4) is inapplicable here because, although a federal habeas is akin to an appeal, no mandate or order was served upon the superior court, thus CrR 3.3 does not control, and constitutional speedy trial analysis must be applied; III.

State v. Ross, 98 Wn.App. 1 (1999)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, police find drugs, charge defendant with DUI, defendant pleads guilty, following lab analysis defendant is charged with VUCSA beyond 90 days from arraignment on DUI; held: state did not establish below its reasons for delaying the filing of the drug charge, thus remanded for trial court to determine if delay in filing was "understandable and justified" due to the unavailability of physical evidence to bring the charge, i.e., lab report, State v. Fladebo, 113 Wn.2d 388, 394 (1989), but see: State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003); II.

State v. Parker, 99 Wn.App. 639 (2000)

Failure to object to arraignment date, former CrR 3.3(e), see: CrR 4.1(b), waives time for trial objection even if but one day remains for trial, State v. Bernhard, 45 Wn.App. 590, 600

(1987), State v. Greenwood, 120 Wn.2d 585, 613 (1993), State v. Rookhuyzen, 148 Wn.App. 394 (2009); I.

State v. Johnson, 100 Wn.App. 917 (2000)

Police arrest defendants for misdemeanors, fill out and sign citations but do not give defendants a copy nor file with court, book defendants who are released on PR or bail, charges filed by prosecutor some months later; held: by not giving defendants copies of the citations, police did not "issue" citations, distinguishing State v. Bonifacio, 127 Wn.2d 482 (1995), overruled, CrRLJ 3.3 (2003), State v. Miller, 188 Wn.App. 103 (2015); release or bail agreements are not the functional equivalent to issued citations for purposes of triggering the time for trial clock; I.

State v. Fulps, 141 Wn.2d 663 (2000)

Defendant is arrested for drug offense, posts bail without a court appearance, six months later is charged, seeks dismissal; held: defendant who gains release from jail with no means of exonerating bail is held to answer, time for trial starts running "from the date the charge is filed, except that if the defendant has been continuously held in custody or on bail or recognizance…, then the time for trial should commence running from the date the defendant was held to answer," 2 ABA, Standards for Criminal Justice Std. 12-2.2(a), at 12-17 (2nd ed. 1980), distinguishing State v. Parmele, 87 Wn.2d 139, 140-42 (1976), State v. Elizondo, 85 Wn.2d 935 (1975), but see: State v. Thomas, 146 Wn.App. 568 (2008), State v. Rookhuyzen, 148 Wn.App. 394, 399 ¶ 11 (2009); reverses State v. Fulps, 97 Wn.App. 935 (1999); per curiam.

State v. Logan, 102 Wn.App. 907 (2000)

Defendant is charged in municipal court with assault, case is dismissed without prejudice 48 days later, same case is filed as felony in superior court, defendant is detained pending trial, 15 days later trial court dismissed; held: defendant was detained by superior court, thus trial should have been held within 60 days of arraignment less 48 days elapsed in municipal court, former CrR 3.3(c)(2); state's theory that so long as a defendant spends less than 60 days in custody, he may be tried within 90 days of arraignment is without merit; because defendant's release was not revoked, the revocation of release provisions, CrR 3.3(d)(1), are inapplicable; I.

State v. Chandler, 143 Wn.2d 485 (2001)

Respondent requests trial date within 60 days of proper date of arraignment, court sets trial outside 60 days, finding that because no judge sits in the county within the time period, a date outside the 60 days is permitted "in the due administration of justice," and because no prejudice was shown, JuCR 7.8(e)(3); held: JuCR 7.8(e)(3) permits a continuance in the due administration of justice, but not an original case setting beyond the 60 day rule, court could have obtained a visiting judge, judge pro tempore, court commissioner or, possibly, continued the case if all of those avenues were unavailable, but original setting outside the rule violates the rule, thus dismissed, see: State v. Day, 46 Wn.App. 882 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 578-85 (2001)

State informs defense that it would have DNA results as of a certain date, fails to comply due to lab vacations and errors, defense seeks dismissal and, when denied, continuance beyond expiration date; held: lack of diligence by crime lab constitutes action on part of state, State v.

Wake, 56 Wn.App. 472, 475 (1989), but lack of due diligence alone is not grounds for dismissal, see: State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810, 814 (1980), State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 244 (1997), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 12-13 (2006), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009), State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017); here, defense knew state would use forensic testing, thus delayed production of results of tests did not inject new facts into the case, thus trial court's denial of motion to dismiss was proper exercise of discretion, State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992), State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 329 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 103 Wn.App. 244 (2001)

Routine court congestion is not grounds to continue or extend beyond expiration date, State v. Mack,89 Wn.2d 788 (1978), State v. Warren, 99 Wn.App. 306 (1999), State v. Kokot, 42 Wn.App. 733, 737 (1986); here, prosecutor claimed that court staff had found all courtrooms unavailable, but no evidence was produced for court staff conclusion, defense asked for a judge pro tempore, which was denied, see: State v. Silva, 72 Wn.App. 80 (1993), defense asked for trial the next day which court denied and then continued for five days for "good cause," thus court abused discretion; II.

State v. Williams, 104 Wn.App. 516 (2001)

Prosecutor in another trial which he knew would be for an extended time is grounds for a continuance "required in the administration of justice," former CrR 3.3(h)(2) [now CrR 3.3(f)(2)], rather than an extension for "unavoidable or unforeseen circumstances beyond the control of the court or the parties," former CrR 3.3(d)(8); five continuances beyond expiration date because prosecutor is in trial, State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467, 472-73 (1986), State v. Kelley, 64 Wn.App. 755 (1992) and, for four of them because defense counsel is unprepared, State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 15 (1984), cf.: State v. Saunders, 153 Wn.App. 209 (2009), is not an abuse of discretion absent prejudice; II.

State v. Cox, 106 Wn.App. 487 (2001)

Stay of time for trial rule for competency determination, former CrR 3.3(g)(1) [now CrR 3.3(e)(1), begins when a party or the court makes an oral or written motion for a competency evaluation and ends when the court enters a written order finding defendant competent, State v. Harris, 122 Wn.App. 498 (2004), which may be presented by defense counsel; II.

State v. Moen, 110 Wn.App. 125, 129-31 (2002)

Where defendant is released without charge or conditions, former CrR 3.2(1)(f) [now CrR 3.2.1], police retaining defendant's property for civil forfeiture does not trigger time for trial period; III.

State v. Rose, 110 Wn.App. 878 (2002)

Defense counsel, unaware that time has elapsed in district court, moves to dismiss after 60-day period, claiming prosecutor had superior knowledge and was obliged to disclose it (defendant was detained on district court warrant and complaint for 14 days before counsel is appointed), trial court dismisses; held: while prosecutor should disclose to the court its knowledge concerning district court proceedings, regardless of whether the prosecutor's knowledge is superior or inferior to defense, failure to do so does not affect application of former CrR 3.3(f), which requires that both parties aid the court; when either party fails to object for any reason within the prescribed 10 days, the objection is waived, State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 436-37 (1994), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 12-13 (2006), State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 321-22 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009), State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013); II.

State v. Torres, 111 Wn.App. 323 (2002)

Defense counsel supports consolidation, which necessarily extends trial beyond expiration date to join with co-defendant, defendant demands speedy trial pro se; held: when speedy trial and consolidation considerations collide, court must balance competing interests, State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 484-85 (1994); while court should sever to protect speedy trial rights, State v. Eaves, 39 Wn.App. 16, 19-20 (1984), where there is no prejudice, consolidating and extending is not an abuse of discretion, State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63, 66-67 (1991), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 417-18 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007); all parties appear for anticipated stipulated facts trial on expiration date, defendant withdraws consent and demands jury, court recesses one day; held: trial commenced on expiration date, State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805, 820 (1996), disavowed, on other grounds, State v. Walker, 23 Wn.2d 437 (2022); III.

State v. Frankenfield, 112 Wn.App. 472 (2002)

Defendant files 9-page notice of appearance which includes an objection to arraignment date and motion for speedy trial; ten days after trial setting, defendant files a motion objecting to trial date and moving for a speedy trial; at subsequent motions hearing, defense does not address time for trial, later moves to dismiss; held: mere reference to CrR 3.3 and request for speedy trial does not adequately apprise court of the type of error involved or what was required to correct the error, thus the objection was insufficiently specific, State v. Bernhard, 45 Wn.App. 590, 600 (1986), State v. Greenwood, 120 Wn.2d 585, 606 (1993), see: Kennewick v. Vandergriff, 109 Wn.2d 99, 100 (1987), but see: State v. Dassow, 95 Wn.App. 454 (1999); I.

State v. Frank, 112 Wn.App. 515 (2002)

Warrant is issued when defendant fails to check in with arraignment clerk pursuant to local district court procedures, defendant maintains he "could" have gone to court without having checked in, seeks dismissal for untimely arraignment; held: local procedures meet due process requirements, defendant failed to establish prejudice by not asserting that he did in fact appear for arraignment, State v. Bryant, 74 Wn.App. 301, 304 (1994); I.

State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 122, 129-31 (2002)

A timely objection to arraignment date does not excuse a failure to note a motion to reset trial date or to dismiss, former CrR 3.3(f), see: CrR 4.1(b), but see: State v. Dassow, 95 Wn.App. 454 (1999); III.

State v. Chenoweth, 115 Wn.App. 726 (2003)

Defendant need not actually enter a plea for a first appearance to constitute an arraignment; a defendant who appears at arraignment pro se, and fails to object to arraignment date at that time or (apparently) shortly thereafter waives the objection, State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 435 (1994), former CrR 3.3(f)(1) [now CrR 4.1(b)]; where defendant requests a continuance, he waives any error where trial court, in sex case, fails to find "substantial and compelling reasons for a continuance," RCW 10.46.085; III.

State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003)

Wife reports domestic violence and marijuana grow operation, defendant is charged with assault, pleads guilty, months later is charged with marijuana, moves to dismiss; held: because assault and possession of marijuana do not involve the same physical acts, have different purposes, they do not constitute a single criminal episode, thus time for trial clock does not commence at the same time, reversing State v. Kindsvogel, 110 Wn.App. 750 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Rohrich, 149 Wn.2d 647 (2003)

A long delay in filing a charge is not grounds for dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), absent proof of actual prejudice to defendant, State v. Stein, 140 Wn.App. 43, 56-60 (2007); speculation that witnesses' memories could have faded is insufficient, reversing State v. Rohrich, 110 Wn.App. 832 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721, 728-30 (2003)

Continuance beyond expiration date to accommodate officer's mandatory training is not an abuse of discretion, cf.: State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007); I.

Seattle v. Guay, 150 Wn.2d 288 (2003)

Because courts of limited jurisdiction lack the ability to compel transport of misdemeanants held in another county within Washington, there is no good faith and due diligence requirement to do so, former CrRLJ 3.3(g)(5), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852 (1993); 6-3.

State v. Hoffman, 150 Wn.2d 536 (2003)

Juvenile court commissioner dismisses charge without prejudice five days before expiration date, state seeks revision, superior court reverses, defendant is convicted, Court of Appeals reverses, State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91 (2003); held: all dismissals, including by a comissioner, toll the speedy trial clock, State v. Bible, 77 Wn.App. 470, 471 (1995); per curiam.

State v. Vicuna, 119 Wn.App. 26 (2003)

Trial court, on inadequate record, allows defense counsel to withdraw due to alleged conflict of interest, leading to a continuance and a new expiration date, over defendant's objection; held: a defendant cannot contest his attorney's waiver of speedy trial right even if made without his consent, State v. Franulovich, 18 Wn.App. 290, 293 (1977), State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1 (1984), State v. Thomas, 95 Wn.App. 730 (1999), but see: State v. Saunders, 153 Wn.App. 209 (2009); I.

State v. Heredia-Juarez, 119 Wn.App. 150 (2003)

Prosecutor is not obliged to reassign a case to accommodate a prosecutor's previously-scheduled vacation, see: State v. Kelley, 64 Wn.App. 755, 767 (1992), cf.: State v. Selam, 97 Wn.App. 140 (1999), where the state's requested continuance was necessitated by defendant's earlier continuance, complexity of the case makes reassignment more difficult, prosecutor has been assigned to the case from the beginning and has developed rapport with complainant and defendant was not prejudiced, cf.: State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007); I.

State v. Howell, 119 Wn.App. 644, 648-49 (2003)

Four-day extension beyond expiration date for crime lab to do tests is not error as lab's backup was due to Green River murders investigation, state made motion as soon as it became aware of the problem, distinguishing State v. Wake, 56 Wn.App. 472, 475-76 (1989), see: State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017), State v. Denton, 23 Wn.App.2d 437 (2022); I.

State v. Hamilton, 121 Wn.App. 633 (2004)

Defendant is charged in Chelan County, files a time for trial waiver, 23 days prior to expiration pursuant to the waiver Chelan Count dismisses, case is refiled in Douglas County which restarts the waiver period; held: a waiver is specific to a case where it is entered and does not transfer to another county when case is refiled; III.

State v. Harris, 122 Wn.App. 498 (2004)

Time for trial rule is tolled for competency evaluation, CrR 3.3(e)(1), even where hospital congestion and backlogs delay evaluation; where a private evaluator is appointed and defendant refuses to see him, defendant has failed to appear at a "pretrial proceeding," former CrR 3.3(d)(2) [now CrR 3.3(c)(2)(ii)], thus new trial period starts with his next appearance; III.

State v. Barrows, 122 Wn.App. 902 (2004)

Where trial court grants a motion for insanity acquittal, RCW 10.77.080, trial has occurred for purposes of CrR 3.3, and court's failure to enter findings does not entitle defendant to a dismissal; III.

State v. Raschka, 124 Wn.App. 103 (2004)

Defendant fails to appear at a required hearing, trial court and prosecutor accept defense counsel's explanation that defendant is hospitalized, no warrant is issued, trial date is stricken, prosecutor loses track and re-notes, per local procedures, case for trial beyond expiration date, trial court finds defendant's failure to appear, former CrR 3.3(d)(2), re-starts clock at defendant's next appearance; held: an excused absence from a hearing keeps the speedy trial clock running, see: State v. Branstetter, 85 Wn.App. 123 (1997), cf.: CrR 3.3(a)(3)(iii), State v. Wachter, 71 Wn.App. 80 (1993) , State v. Moore, 178 Wn.App. 489 (2013), State v. Gelinas, 15 Wn.App.2d 484 (2020); III.

State v. Flinn, 154 Wn.2d 193 (2005)

Defense provides state with diminished capacity report two weeks before trial, on scheduled trial date, court grants state five week continuance, including a week for judicial conference, over objection, to further prepare to respond to defendant's expert; held: while a judicial conference alone is equivalent to court congestion which would require specific inquiry and findings by the trial court if the matter was continued, State v. Kokot, 42 Wn.App. 733, 736-37 (1986), State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009), continuance to prepare is good cause, State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 15 (1984), State v. Williams, 104 Wn.App. 516, 523 (2001), State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013), five weeks was reasonable in light of prior defense continuances, trial court's offer to accelerate trial if state was prepared earlier, trial court can consider known competing conflicts on the calendar after finding good cause; affirms State v. Flinn, 119 Wn.App. 232 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Hessler, 155 Wn.2d 604 (2005)

Where defendant is out of state when charges are filed, it is defendant's threshold burden of demonstrating amenability to process before state's duty of good faith and due diligence is triggered, affirming State v. Hessler, 123 Wn.App. 200 (2004); per curiam.

State v. Carney, 129 Wn.App. 742 (2005)

Defendant appears at a pretrial hearing without his retained counsel, prosecutor notes that he has been in touch with defense counsel who has been ill, court continues case and directs defendant to notify his lawyer who appears at trial date whose motion to dismiss for failure of the court to give notice is denied, trial is then continued again; held: even if notice was given by the state or defendant, CrR 3.3(d)(2) requires the court to "notify each counsel or party of the date set," defendant is not responsible to notify his counsel when to appear, thus dismissal was required; III.

State v. Olmos, 129 Wn.App. 750 (2005)

Striker/Greenwood speedy arraignment cases are abrogated by the 2003 rules amendments, CrR 4.1(a)(2), thus delay in arraignment, for any reason, is not grounds for dismissal as commencement date is the arraignment date, CrR 3.3(c)(1), State v. Castillo, 129 Wn.App. 828 (2005), State v. Rookhuyzen, 148 Wn.App. 394 (2009); even if Interstate Agreement on Detainers, ch. 9.100, RCW, provides speedy trial guarantees beyond CrR 3.3, here defendant's use of deceptive aliases to conceal his identity and location excuses any claim of lack of due diligence, distinguishing State v. Simon, 84 Wn.App. 460, 465-66 (1996); II.

State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 113-14 (2006)

Where time for trial waiver does not specify a commencement date earlier than the date of filing of the waiver, then that day is the commencement date, CrR 3.3(c)(2)(i); III.

State v. Wright, 131 Wn.App. 474, 488 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009)

Defendant is charged with intentional murder and felony murder/assault, neither party submits instructions for intentional murder, jury convicts of felony murder which is reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), trial court dismisses intentional murder on remand; held: time for trial calculation begins anew when appellate court issues a mandate, CrR 3.3(c)(2)(iv) and (v), computation of time on a pending charge "shall apply equally to all related charges, CrR 3.3(a)(5);" I.

State v. Nguyen, 131 Wn.App. 815 (2006)

Trial court, over objection, grants state's motion to continue robbery case beyond expiration date to see if evidence develops that will cause this defendant to be joined with other robbery cases that are pending against others, ultimately defendant is not charged with others; held: while continuances beyond expiration date to join with other defendants is permitted within court's discretion, State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63, 66-67 (1991), State v. Eaves, 39 Wn.App. 16, 19 (1984), judicial economy is not a tenable basis to continue for a mere potentiality that a link will be discovered between the case scheduled for trial and other crimes not charged; "if

'administration of justice' can be invoked at any time to grant a continuance, then 'there is little point in having the speedy trial rule at all,'" at 821, State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574, 580 (1988); I.

State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 400, 411-14 (2006)

Where defendant is detained on bail on the current case and is serving a sentence on another case, the 90-day rule applies, CrR 3.3(a)(3)(v); a motion to continue by defense counsel over defendant's objection is made "on behalf of any party" and waives that party's objection to the requested delay, CrR 3.3(f)(2), State v. Ollivier, 178 Wn.2d 813 (2013); a continuance in order to schedule a pretrial motion is in the administration of justice and, absent prejudice, is not an abuse of discretion; II.

State v. Welker, 157 Wn.2d 557 (2006)

Defendant, charged in Washington but in custody in Oregon, sends discovery request to Washington prosecutor, makes demands of Oregon officials to be brought to Washington, Washington prosecutor takes no action until defendant is released from Oregon; held: state's knowledge that defendant is in custody in Oregon establishes a lack of due diligence but not bad faith, see: State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852, 858 (1993); unlike CrR 3.3 violations, a technical violation of the time limit in the IAD, ch. 9.100, RCW, does not result in automatic dismissal, and are reviewed on a case-by-case basis, State v. Barefield, 110 Wn.2d 728, 734-35 (1988); here, because there is no evidence of prejudice, including denial of the chance to participate in rehabilitation programs in Oregon or ability to obtain a concurrent sentence, State v. Anderson, supra. at 862, State v. Olmos, 129 Wn.App. 750, 758 (2005), dismissal is denied; affirms State v. Welker, 127 Wn.App. 222 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Bishop, 134 Wn.App. 133 (2006)

Washington filed detainer against California prisoner serving indeterminate sentence in a prison drug treatment program, detainer results in her ineligibility for drug treatment so, while awaiting resentencing, defendant files IAD article III demands for trial, Washington does not seek transfer until after 180 day period expires, RCW 9.100.010, art. IV(c); held: defendant was serving time under the detainer act even though she was awaiting resentencing, thus dismissed; defendant need not prove prejudice, but see: State v. Barefield, 110 Wn.2d 728, 735 (1988); III.

Zedner v. United States, 164 L.Ed.2d 749 (2006)

A defendant's waiver of the federal Speedy Trial Act of 1974, 18 U.S.C. §§ 3161-3174, "for all time" is ineffective; 9-0.

State v. George, 160 Wn.2d 727 (2007)

Where defendant fails to appear because he is in custody for another charge within the same county, state is not obliged to exercise due diligence and good faith to bring defendant before the court, former CrRLJ 3.3(c)(2)(ii), distinguishing State v. Pacheco, 107 Wn.2d 59, 64-65 (1986), State v. Greenwood, 120 Wn.2d 585 (1993), State v. Anderson, 121 Wn.2d 852, 864 (1993), Seattle v. Guay, 150 Wn.2d 288 (2003), however where state elects not to transport defendant to a proceeding, the period of time is excludable, CrRLJ 3.3(e)(2), 3.3(b)(5), but time for trial rule does not begin anew, State v. Chavez-Romero, 170 Wn.App. 568 (2012); where charge is refiled in superior court, time elapsed in district court is no longer deducted, and time for trial does begin anew, CrR 3.3(c)(1); affirms result in State v. George, 131 Wn.App. 239 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007)

At a readiness hearing the week before the scheduled trial date well within expiration date, state announces that it is ready then advises that it only has one prosecutor and two cases are set for the same day, trial court states that state will need to find some alternative, on trial date state moves to continue for same reason, trial court identifies another prosecutor who is not in trial, state refuses to reassign, trial court dismisses; held: while prosecutor is not obliged to reassign a case when the originally assigned lawyer becomes unavailable, State v. Heredia-Juarez, 119 Wn.App. 150, 154-55 (2003), where trial court determines whether reassignment is feasible and necessary in a particular situation and considers the complexity of the case and seriousness of the charge, and state has made no showing of a diligent attempt to solve the problem, denial of a continuance is within court's discretion, cf.: State v. Raper, 47 Wn.App. 530, 535 (1987), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721, 728-29 (2003), State v. Downing, 151 Wn.2d 265, 272-73 (2004); dismissal is a proper remedy where there is no last-minute emergency beyond the control of the state, see: State v. Koerber, 85 Wn.App. 1 (1996), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); court need not apply CrRLJ 8.3(b) arbitrary action or government misconduct analysis; trial court may dismiss even though time is left before time for trial expiration date; 2-1, I.

State v. Chhom, 162 Wn.2d 451 (2007)

Defendant is sentenced in a King County court of limited jurisdiction, sent to Yakima under contract to serve time, other pending charges in King County are held in abeyance while defendant completes sentence; held: CrRLJ 3.3(e)(6) which excludes "[t]he time during which a defendant is detained … outside the county" does not apply when defendant is serving a sentence imposed by a court in a jail facility located outside the county under an interlocal agreement, thus district court's dismissal is affirmed; reverses State v. Steever, 131 Wn.App. 334 (2006); 7-2.

State v. Thomas, 146 Wn.App. 568 (2008)

Defendant is arrested, posts bail, months later is arraigned, trial court dismisses, State v. Fulps, 141 Wn.2d 663 (2000); held: 2003 amendment to CrR 3.3 preclude dismissal except as required by the rule or the constitution, thus court-created conditions "beyond the rule" such as Fulps, supra., are no longer valid, State v. Rookhuyzen, 148 Wn.App. 394 (2009); I.

Vermont v. Brillon, 173 L.Ed.2d 231 (2009)

Sixth Amendment speedy trial right is not violated where delays are attributable to assigned counsel, although delay resulting from a systemic breakdown in the public defender system could be charged to the state; 7-2.

State v. Rookhuyzen, 148 Wn.App. 394 (2009)

Defendant, out-of-custody, is arraigned 30 days after information is filed, objects, court overrules and sets trial within 90 days of arraignment; held: "[t]he 2003 amendments to CrR 3.3 and 4.1 eliminated the judicially created doctrine of constructive arraignment – the Striker rule," at 395 ¶ 1, State v. George, 160 Wn.2d 727, 738 (2007), State v. Castillo, 129 Wn.App. 828, 830-32 (2005), State v. Thomas, 146 Wn.App. 568 (2008); I.

State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009)

Unavailability of a judge to try a case is the same as court congestion, not a reason to continue and extend expiration date, is not an "unavoidable or unforeseen circumstance," and absent trial court stating on the record or in writing the reasons for the continuance documenting the availability of judges pro tempore and unoccupied courtrooms, dismissal is mandated; 9-0.

State v. Saunders, 153 Wn.App. 209 (2009)

Trial court continues case numerous times with agreement of defense counsel but over defendant's objection, based upon claims of continued negotiations, contested by defendant, and where neither standby defense counsel nor prosecutor knew why continuances were necessary; held: absent convincing and valid reasons for continuances, the trial court's granting continuances may be manifestly unreasonable and based upon untenable reasons, and thus a continuance over defendant's objection is an abuse of discretion, State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009); a continuance over defendant's objection for defense counsel to prepare is not an abuse of discretion to ensure effective representation where trial court makes a proper record, delay is through no fault of counsel due to "complexity and length of the case," at 217 n. 8, State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 14-15 (1984); II.

State v. Lackey, 153 Wn.App. 791 (2009)

Withdrawal of counsel starts speedy trial clock anew, at 798; if no commencement date is specified in a waiver, then the commencement date is the trial date set by the court, CrR 3.3(c)(2)(i); "court congestion and unavailability of the government" does not qualify as an excluded period, at 799 ¶ 20; where court continues a case because a witness is ill, the period of the continuance is an excluded period, CrR 3.3(e)(3), and expiration date is 30 days after the end of the excluded period, CrR 3.3(b)(5); III.

State v. Oppelt, 172 Wn.2d 285 (2011)

Police negligently delay filing sex offense against a child for six years, in motion to dismiss for preaccusatorial delay defense shows that a witness who gave victim lotion for her genitals could not remember type of lotion, thus defense was precluded from proving that the lotion caused the observed redness, trial court finds actual prejudice due to memory loss by a witness but denies dismissal; held: negligent delay is grounds to dismiss for preaccusatorial delay, but if mere negligence is asserted, prejudice suffered will have to be greater than where intentional or deliberate conduct is alleged, State v. Schifferl, 51 Wn.App. 268, 273 (1988); prejudice does not trigger automatic dismissal; balancing test: (1) actual prejudice, (2) reasons for delay, (3) weigh reasons and prejudice to determine whether fundamental conceptions of justice would be violated by allowing prosecution, United States v. Lovasco, 431 U.S. 783, 52 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977), State v. McConnell, 178 Wn.App. 592, 605-08 (2013); here prejudice was "very slight" as defense still could argue that lotion might have caused redness, negligent delay does not justify dismissal, cf.: State v. Stearns, 23 Wn.App.2d 580 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Kone, 165 Wn.App. 420 (2011)

State loses touch with victim, motion to dismiss without prejudice is granted, victim is located and case is re-filed, defendant seeks dismissal pursuant to CrR 8.3(b), arguing mismanagement resulted in violation of defendant's speedy trial rights; held: CrR 3.3(e)(4) excludes period between dismissal and refiling, CrR 3.3(h) prohibits dismissal for time to trial reasons unless specifically required by the rule, thus exclusive means to challenge a violation of the rule is pursuant to CrR 3.3, not CrR 8.3(b), see: State v. Bible, 77 Wn.App. 470 (1995), cf.: State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997); I.

State v. Chavez-Romero, 170 Wn.App. 568 (2012)

Defendant is detained pending trial, shortly before trial date state moves for release in order to extend time for trial period, defense objects as defendant would be transferred to federal ICE custody, court releases, defense files a formal objection to new date, at next trial date court issues a warrant, defendant is later released from federal custody, appears in court, is booked on warrant, commencement date and expiration date is reset; held: while release to extend speedy trial period from 60 to 90 days is proper, State v. Kelly, 60 Wn.App. 921 (1991), State v. Maling, 6 Wn.App.2d 838 (2018), and state does not have a duty of due diligence to bring defendant to court, State v. George, 160 Wn.2d 727 (2007), remedy is not to reset the commencement date upon defendant's appearance, CrR 3.3(c)(2)(ii), rather time in federal custody tolls, CrR 3.3(e)(6), thus defendant's trial, set beyond the 90th day from initial arraignment plus the excluded period, was outside the rule and dismissal is only remedy, but see: CrR 3.3(b)(5) and Korsmo, C.J., dissenting; 2-1, III.

State v. Ollivier, 178 Wn.2d 813 (2013)

Trial court grants 22 continuances, all on motion of defense counsel, all over objection of defendant, for 23 months; held: because each order provided a reason for the continuance, all of which for defense counsel to prepare and thus were in the administration of justice, there was no violation of CrR 3.3, distinguishing State v. Saunders, 153 Wn.App. 209 (2009), State v. Kenyon, 167 Wn.2d 130 (2009); under Sixth Amendment speedy trial rule, length of delay was presumptively prejudicial triggering Barker v. Wingo, 407 U.S. 514, 33 L.Ed.2d 101 (1972) analysis: (1) length of delay was not highly disproportionate to the complexity of the case, here child pornography with forensic computer analysis; (2) reason for delay was defense counsel's need to prepare which is chargeable to defendant, Vermont v. Brillon, 556 U.S. 81, 89-91, 173 L.Ed.2d 231 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868 (1998), State v. Shemesh, 187 Wn.App. 136 (2015); (3) assertion of right by defendant, where defense counsel moved for continuances, is still chargeable against defense, Vermont v. Brillon, 556 U.S. 81, 129 S.Ct. 1283, 173 L.Ed.2d 231 (2009), if trial court had denied continuances defendant might claim ineffective assistance of counsel; (4) prejudice is not presumed, which is distinguished from the prejudice which triggers a constitutional speedy trial analysis, distinguishing State v. Iniguez, 167 Wn.2d 273 (2009) as defendant must establish actual prejudice, length here is not enough to constitute extreme delay, pretrial incarceration here is not oppressively long, defense has not established unusual anxiety and concern, defense was not impaired, balancing all factors establish no violation of constitutional right to speedy trial; affirms State v. Ollivier, 161 Wn.App. 307 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Sanchez, 172 Wn.App. 678 (2012)

Juvenile's trial date is not set within fifteen days of arraignment, JuCR 7.8(d)(1), at a pretrial hearing the case is not called, prosecutor is not present, respondent and counsel leave court without notifying the judge, respondent is tried months later; held: dismissal is only a remedy for failure to try a case within the time limits, thus failure to set a date within fifteen days of arraignment, while a violation of the rule, does not require dismissal, see: State v. Parris, 30 Wn.App. 268 (1981); an appearance requires respondent's physical presence plus notification to the prosecutor of presence and presence must be contemporaneously noted on the record, JuCR 7.8(2)(iii), thus amended rule overrules definition of appearance in State v. Ledenko, 87 Wn.App. 39 (1997); III.

State v. MacNeven, 173 Wn.App. 265 (2013)

Failure to object to a continuance within ten days of trial setting forecloses the issue on appeal, CrR 3.3(d)(3) (2003), State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 322 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009); moving for a continuance by or on behalf of a party waives that party's objection, CrR 3.3(f)(2) (2003); II.

State v. Tolles, 174 Wn.App. 819 (2013)

Defendant is charged with child rape in 2003, spends 37 days in jail, charge dismissed when complainant refused to cooperate, refiled in 2010, is arrested in Oregon where he was on probation, brought before the Washington court, is tried 27 days after appearing in Washington, claims that time for trial began to run at time of arrest in Oregon; held: time for trial cannot expire less than 30 days after the end of any excluded period, CrR 3.3(b)(5), dismissal and refiling is an excluded period, CrR 3.3(e)(4), thus state had 30 days to try defendant irrespective of the 37 days spent in jail earlier; because defendant was on "conditions of release imposed by an Oregon court," another excluded period applied, CrR 3.3(c)(6); II.

State v. Moore, 178 Wn.App. 489 (2013)

Failure to appear at a status conference which is not a hearing at which defendant's presence is required by CrRLJ 3.4(a) or by court order does not reset the commencement date, CrRLJ 3.3(c)(2)(ii) (2003), State v. Raschka, 124 Wn.App. 103, 109 (2004), State v. Branstetter, 85 Wn.App. 123, 127-28 (1997), see: State v. Gelinas, 15 Wn.App.2d 484 (2020); setting a trial date beyond the expiration date because of a motion to suppress with other defendants is not an excusable delay "by circumstances not addressed" in the rule, CrRLJ 3.3(a)(4); II.

State v. McConnell, 178 Wn.App. 592, 605-08 (2013)

To establish prejudice due to pre-accusatorial delay, State v. Oppelt, 172 Wn.2d 285 (2011), defense must show actual prejudice from the delay; claim that a potential alibi or fact witness died without identifying what the testimony would have been or why others could not provide the same testimony is insufficient; destruction of physical evidence without identifying "exactly how the destroyed evidence resulted in actual prejudice" is insufficient; I.

State v. Hawkins, 181 Wn.2d 170, 182-85 (2014)

While case is on appeal trial court enters a written "Decision on Motion for New Trial" granting same but stating that it did not intend for that document to constitute a written order, state presents a written order, court concurs with defense argument that court did not have the power to enter the order while case is on appeal, after mandate trial court enters formal order granting new trial, defense argues violation of CrR 3.3; held: "Decision" more closely resembled an informal memorandum decision rather than a formal order, see: Nicacio v. Yakima Chief Rances, Inc., 63 Wn.2d 945, 948 (1964), formal order is the proper commencement date, defendant did not move in Court of Appeals for permission to enter formal order, RAP 7.2(e), CrR 3.3 requires defendant be brought to trial within 60 or 90 days of a formal order granting a new trial; 9-0.

State v. Peeler, 183 Wn.2d 169 (2015)

Defendant, serving a prison sentence, requests a final disposition of untried charge in Skagit County but, by the time Skagit County prosecutor receives request defendant is transported to King County jail and not returned to Skagit County with 120 days, RCW 9.98.010; held: where defendant makes a valid intrastate detainer disposition request state must honor that request, there is no physical location requirement, DOC still had custody regardless of defendant's physical location, detainer act requires dismissal; 5-4.

State v. Miller, 188 Wn.App. 103 (2015)

Issuance of a misdemeanor citation does not commence a criminal proceeding for purpose of the time for trial rule per CrRLJ 3.3 (2003), overruling Seattle v. Bonifacio, 127 Wn.2d 482 (1995); III.

State v. Williams, 193 Wn.App. 906 (2016)

Charges involving a high speed chase in two counties are filed in one county, defendant gets appointed counsel, prosecutors decide to change venue because events began in first county where charges were refiled, which results in defendant obtain a different appointed counsel who could not prepare within 60-day time for trial, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(b), concluding arbitrary action forcing defendant to choose between speedy trial and competently prepared counsel; held: prosecutor's explanation was reasoned and thus not arbitrary, thus dismissal is reversed; III.

State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017)

In DUI case defense demands name of toxicologist state will call, state provides eight names, state contacts crime lab which does not respond, day before trial state narrows list to three, at trial defense moves to exclude testimony of toxicologist whom state intended to call, defense declines to move to continue as defendant chooses not to waive right to speedy trial, trial court denies motion to exclude, on RALJ appeal superior court reverses; held: while state's disclosures establish mismanagement, CrRLJ 8.3(b), trial court considered all of the circumstances including nature of witness' testimony, fact that defense had five months to prepare following the initial disclosure, thus trial court's decision was not manifestly unreasonable and denial of suppression was not an abuse of discretion, see also: State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980), State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 763 (1990), State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997), cf.: State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992); reverses State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 194 Wn.App. 234 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Maling, 6 Wn.App.2d 838 (2018)

Defendant is in custody pending trial, on 60th day prosecutor notices that time for trial was expiring, appears before the court that day and moves for release, defense objects, court releases defendant extending the rule to 90 days, CrR 3.3(b) (2003), on appeal defense argues that motion for PR was not properly noted with five days notice; held: the court has the obligation to enforce the speedy trial rule, CrR 3.3(a)(1), thus court properly exercised discretion by releasing defendant, State v. Kelly, 60 Wn.App. 921 (1991), see: State v. Hyatt, 78 Wn.App. 679 (1995), State v. Chavez-Romero, 170 Wn.App. 568 (2012), defense did not object to notice before the trial court, n.1; 2-1, III.

State v. Ross, 8 Wn.App.2d 928 (2019)

Defendant is charged with murder in Clallam County in 1978 and murder in British Columbia, Clallam County agrees that Canada may prosecute, does not seek extradition after conviction, defendant serves him time in Canada and is deported to be tried in Washington 38 years later, trial court dismisses; held: applying constitutional speedy trial balancing test, Barker v. Wingo, 33 L.Ed.2d 101 (1972), defendant was prejudiced in his defense, state was primarily responsible for the delay, thus dismissal affirmed; II.

State v. Nov, 14 Wn.App.2d 114 (2020)

Defendant fails to appear for district court arraignment, is booked on a warrant, is arraigned and released, fails to appear again and is arrested on bench warrant but due to paperwork error is not brought to court for two months, trial court sets commencement date as first appearance, on RALJ appeal superior court dismisses based upon a district court policy of bringing newly booked defendants to court within 48 hours, state appeals; held: the letter of CrRLJ 3.3 controls, the commencement date is the first appearance where defendant physically appears in court, CrRLJ 3.3(a)(3)(iii) (2003), thus rule was not violated; under constitutional analysis, while length of delay establishes a presumption of prejudice, Doggett v. United States, 505 U.S. 647, 651-52, 112 S. Ct. 2686, 120 L. Ed. 2d 520 (1992), here it is rebutted by the lack of fading of memories; I.

State v. Gelinas, 15 Wn.App.2d 484 (2021)

Defendant fails to appear at a district court "readiness hearing," counsel is present, release order requires defendant's appearance at all pretrial hearings, court issues bench warrant; held: a court only has authority to issue a warrant for failure to appear at a necessary hearing, CrRLJ 3.4(a), -(c), readiness hearing is not a necessary hearing thus warrant was improperly issued, see: State v. Branstetter, 85 Wn.App. 123, 127 (1997), State v. Moore, 178 Wn.App. 489, 500-501 (2013); I.

State v. Brownlee, 18 Wn.App.2d 1 (2021)

Prosecutor in another trial is an "unavoidable or unforeseen circumstance," CrR 3.3(e)(8) (2003), justifying a continuance beyond expiration date, in trial court's discretion, cf.: State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007); II.

State v. Walker, 199 Wn.2d 796 (2022)

Trial date is set within speedy trial period, defense objects and moves to dismiss within ten days but after expiration date; held: a defendant loses the right to object to an untimely trial date, CrR 3.3(d)(3), where the trial date is set before expiration date but defense fails to object until after expiration date, regardless of whether or not counsel knows of an untimely trial date, overruling State v. Walker, 17 Wn.App.2d 275 (2021), disavowing, in part, State v. White, 94 Wn.2d 498 (1980), State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805, 825 (1996); 8-1.

State v. Mora-Lopez, 22 Wn.App.2d 922 (2022)

Trial court finds government mismanagement for filing witness list four days before trial and concludes defendant was prejudiced and dismisses finding prejudice to defendant's right to a speedy trial, relying upon State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229 (1997), erroneously calculating expiration date two weeks after witness list was disclosed; held: trial court properly exercised discretion finding mismanagement, CrR 8.3(b), but because expiration date was more than a month after the list was filed due to prior continuance, CrR 3.3(b)(5), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 11-12 (2006), the court's conclusion that the mismanagement resulted in actual prejudice due to speedy trial violation was error, Michielli, supra, was decided under prior CrR 3.3; I.

State v. Denton, 23 Wn.App.2d 437 (2022)

Prosecutor informs court that he had a telephone conversation with crime lab and was told there would be a several month delay in testing needed evidence, over objection trial court grants state's motion to continue for 4½ months due to expected delays in the crime lab, later case is continued with defendant's agreement; held: prosecutor did not provide the court with a thorough explanation of the problems in the crime lab, State v. Wake, 56 Wn.App. 472, 473 (1989), State v. Mack, 89 Wn.2d 788, 793 (1978), routine congestion in the crime lab is not a proper basis to continue a case beyond expiration date, State v. Osborne, 18 Wn.App. 318, 320 (1977), State v. Warren, 96 Wn.App. 306, 309 (1999), State v. Howell, 119 Wn.App. 644, 648 (2003), defendant does not lose right to complain of a time for trial violation by agreeing to a later continuance, State v. Saunders, 153 Wn.App. 209, 221 (2009); II.

State v. Stearns, 23 Wn.App.2d 580 (2022)

In 1998 victim is murdered, in 2004 DNA evidence links defendant to the incident, prosecutor states he could have charged defendant in 2005 but waited until 2017 as defendant was already in custody, multiple eyewitnesses died including last person to see victim alive with a man who did not resemble defendant, detectives contacted prosecutor to get him to file, trial court denies dismissal for pre-accusation delay; held: defendant was prejudiced by the death of witnesses, reasons for the filing delay established prosecutorial negligence and a violation of the fundamental conceptions of justice, cf.: State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357 (1988), State v. Norby, 122 Wn.2d 258 (1993), United States v. Lovasco, 52 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977), State v. Oppelt, 172 Wn.2d 285 (2011), thus dismissed; I.

STATEMENTS – CONFESSIONS

State v. Miner, 22 Wn.App. 480 (1979)

Defendant asks for attorney, police proceed to fill out PIR, defendant confesses, held: not interrogation but spontaneous, unsolicited, not coerced within Miranda rule.

State v. Marcum, 24 Wn.App. 441 (1979)

Request for attorney must stop questioning; no implied waiver by answering question later, even if there is delay between request for attorney at requestioning, but see: Maryland v. Shatzer, 559 U.S., 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010); III.

State v. Green, 91 Wn.2d 431 (1979)

Questioning of defendant who voluntarily accompanied police to station house is not custodial where there is no probable cause to arrest, see also: State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 36-38 (2004).

State v. Hawkins, 27 Wn.App. 78 (1980)

Where defendant surrenders voluntarily to out-of-state police, advising that he is wanted in Washington, and is questioned and confesses in absence of Miranda warnings, this is custodial, in spite of defendant's voluntary surrender, and confession must be suppressed.

State v. Sergent, 27 Wn.App. 947 (1980)

Defendant, while at Western for competency determination, calls prosecutor and confesses while on drugs; totality of circumstances test considering defendant's incompetency, mental illness, drugs, attempts at plea bargaining and waiver in absence of counsel leads to conclusion that statement was involuntary.

Dutil v. State, 93 Wn.2d 84 (1980)

In juvenile court, test is totality of circumstances, State v. Harrell, 83 Wn.App. 393, 401-4 (1996).

State v. Cunningham, 93 Wn.2d 823 (1980)

Taped statement is inadmissible unless RCW 9.73.040 is complied with, harmless here; reverses State v. Cunningham, 23 Wn.App. 826 (1979).

Rhode Island v. Innis, 64 L.Ed.2d 297 (1980)

Defendant, after advice of rights, states he wishes attorney; in defendant's presence, police "converse" about whereabouts of gun, whereupon defendant directs police to gun held not interrogation as no express questioning or the "functional equivalent" to questioning, State v. Birnel, 89 Wn.App. 459 (1998), Pers. Restraint of Cross, 180 Wn.2d 664, 682-90 (2014), see also: State v. Webb, 64 Wn.App. 480 (1992); 8-3.

United States v. Henry, 65 L.Ed.2d 115 (1980)

Post-indictment confession to government informant while in jail held inadmissible as violative of Sixth Amendment right to counsel, Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004), see also: Kansas v. Ventris, 173 L.Ed.2d 801 (2009); 8-3.

Rawlines v. Kentucky, 65 L.Ed.2d 633 (1980)

Statement following illegal arrest is not automatically suppressed; factors to be considered are Miranda warnings, temporal proximity of the arrest and confession, presence of intervening circumstances, purpose and flagrancy of the official misconduct; voluntariness is threshold requirement; burden remains on state; 5-4.

State v. Renfro, 28 Wn.App. 248 (1981)

Failure to hold 3.5 hearing not error where evidence establishes adequate advisement of rights and voluntariness, and defense did not request hearing.

State v. Coles, 28 Wn.App. 563 (1981)

Statements obtained after assertion of right to remain silent where police continue or resume interrogation are inadmissible absent a valid waiver proved by a preponderance, State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015); police must "scrupulously honor" assertion of rights.

State v. Gardner, 28 Wn.App. 721 (1981)

Whether intoxication renders a confession involuntary will be reviewed by substantial evidence test, per State v. Young, 28 Wn.App. 412 (1981); intoxication is a factor in determining voluntariness and waiver, but is not determinative, State v. Cuzzetto, 76 Wn.2d 378 (1969).

State v. Bradfield, 29 Wn.App. 679 (1981)

Defendant, in response to question "Do you want to talk about this murder?" responds "Not now," but talks about other things to police; held: refusal was ambiguous and "selective waiver" thus properly admitted.

State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701 (1981)

Civilian witness unresponsively testified one co-defendant said robbing bank was easy as "they had done it before"; held: did not taint entire trial, thus did not deprive defendant of fair trial; standards set forth in State v. Johnson, 60 Wn.2d 21 (1962).

State v. Duhaime, 29 Wn.App. 842 (1981)

Suspect gives statement, after advice of rights, to police, two hours later confesses to a social worker; held: where defendant is adequately advised, it is unnecessary to re-advise prior to the taking of each separate in-custody statement, State v. Vidal, 82 Wn.2d 74, 78 (1973) , State v. Fedorov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 191-93 (2014), State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015); I.

State v. Collins, 30 Wn.App. 1 (1981)

Suspect, arrested at home, advised of rights, told police he did not wish to make statement, police tell suspect it would be helpful if they had the gun, suspect gives police gun, held: police did not scrupulously honor defendant's request to remain silent, see: State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49, 58-62 (2010), turning over gun was in response to police statement, thus equivalent to confession, thus suppressed, Rhode Island v. Innis, 64 L.Ed.2d 297 (1980), Michigan v. Mosely, 46 L.Ed.2d 313 (1975), State v. Dennis, 16 Wn.App. 417 (1976), State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 128-35 (2016); subsequent statement of defendant, after re-advice of rights, is admissible in spite of defendant's claim of intoxication, as intoxication does not automatically prevent a waiver, State v. Cuzzetto, 76 Wn.2d 378 (1969), State v. Smith, 15 Wn.App. 103 (1976), State v. Elkins, 4 Wn.App. 273 (1971); II.

State v. Holland, 30 Wn.App. 366 (1981)

Statements made to a psychiatrist for a juvenile decline hearing should not be used against defendant at trial, but waived by defense here; "governmental information privilege," RCW 5.60.060(5), applies to defendants in criminal cases; I.

State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981)

Although tape recorded statement does not specifically start with statement that recording is being made, extrinsic evidence may satisfy RCW 9.73.090(1)(b)(i) if it shows suspect was aware of recording; distinguishes State v. Cunningham, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981).

Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981)

In capital case, court appointed psychiatrist, sua sponte, to evaluate defendant's competency; psychiatrist reported defendant was competent; defendant convicted of murder; in penalty phase, state calls psychiatrist who testified that defendant was dangerous; jury imposed death penalty; court holds that testimony of psychiatrist violated defendant's Fifth Amendment privilege, as defendant was not advised of Miranda rights by psychiatrist and did not waive Sixth Amendment right to counsel, although defendant did not have right to counsel present during evaluation, see: State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2003), cf.: State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992); 9-0.

Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981)

When suspect has invoked his right to counsel during custodial interrogation, a valid waiver cannot be established by showing that he responded to further interrogation even if he has been re-advised of his rights, but see: Maryland v. Shatzer, 539 U.S.98, 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010); suspect who has expressed desire to deal with police only through counsel shall not be subject to further interrogation until counsel has been provided unless the suspect initiates further communication with the police, State v. Allen, 130 Wn.2d 640, 665-6 (1996), State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560 (2000), see: McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158 (1991), but see: State v. Warness, 77 Wn.App. 636 (1995), State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 95-97 (2000), Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S. 50, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010); 9-0.

California v. Prysock, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981)

Juvenile suspect is advised by police "you have the right to have a lawyer appointed to represent you at no cost to yourself," but is not told of right to free lawyer prior to questioning, held: substantially complies with Miranda, State v. Teller, 72 Wn.App. 49 (1993), Duckworth v. Eagan, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989), Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S. 50, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010), but see: State v. Mayer, 184 Wn.2d 548 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 41 (1982)

Where defendant invokes right to counsel, but then initiates further communications with police, confession is admissible, State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015); II.

State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982), overruling recognized, State v. Calo, 6 Wn.App.2d 1046 (unpublished, 2018)

Where there is probable cause to arrest, but police delay arrest to question suspect to obtain additional incriminating information from suspect, then interview is a subterfuge, and is deemed custodial for purposes of Miranda even though suspect is free to go, but see: State v. Hamilton, 47 Wn.App. 15 (1987), State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992), State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992), State v. Reed, 116 Wn.App. 421-22 (2003), State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 36-38 (2004), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007); where suspect equivocally asserts right to counsel by indicating desire to continue interview, further questioning must be limited to clarifying suspect's request for counsel until a clear waiver is elicited, see: State v. Copeland, 89 Wn.App. 492, 499-502 (1997), but see: State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258, 273-76 (2005), State v. Radcliffe, 164 Wn.2d 900 (2008), State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96 (2014), affirmed, on different grounds, 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015); effectively overruled, State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35 (1989); II.

State v. Nogeuira, 32 Wn.App. 954 (1982)

CrR 3.5 was not implicitly waived by defense counsel's failure to note CrR 3.5 hearing pursuant to LJuCR 7.14(a); remanded for a CrR 3.5 hearing; I.

State v. Grisby, 97 Wn.2d 493 (1982)

Defendant is arrested, advised of rights and declines to make a statement, police ask defendant if he wants to hear co-defendant's statement, which is then read to defendant; defendant says nothing, defendant is then escorted from interview room, sees some evidence on a table, asks where evidence came from, is given answer by police, whereupon defendant confesses; held: confession was spontaneous and was not the product of interrogation or actions on the part of police that police knew or should have known were reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response, Rhode Island v. Innis, 64 L.Ed.2d 297 (1980); State v. Braun, 82 Wn.2d 157 (1973); 6-2.

State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982)

Juvenile defendant retains court-appointed psychiatrist for decline hearing, JuCR9.3(a); after decline, defendant raises insanity defense; held: where defendant raises insanity defense, statements uttered by defendant in the context of a psychiatric examination are removed from the reach of the Fifth Amendment and the attorney-client privilege; see concurring opinion at 29.

State v. Robtoy, 98 Wn.2d 30 (1982)

Following equivocal request for counsel ("Maybe I should call my attorney"), further questioning must be limited to clarifying that request, State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 95-97 (2000), see: State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640 (1996), State v. Quillin, 49 Wn.App. 155 (1987), but see: Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994), State v. Radcliffe, 139 Wn.App. 214 (2007); 9-0.

Taylor v. Alabama, 73 L.Ed.2d 314 (1982)

Unlawful arrest requires suppression of confession, but see: Rawlines v. Kentucky, 65 L.Ed.2d 633 (1980); intervening events here are insufficient to break connection between arrest and confession; 5-4.

Wyrick v. Fields, 74 L.Ed.2d 214 (1982)

Rape suspect, after consultation with counsel, agrees to take police polygraph in the absence of counsel; police polygrapher advises suspect of rights, administers test, then interviews suspect, who makes admissions; held: Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981) does not require readvising suspect at conclusion of polygraph where it's clear that suspect knew and understood his right to terminate questioning, , State v. Fedorov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 191-93 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Bledsoe, 33 Wn.App. 720 (1983)

Police advise suspect of rights, following which suspect states that his attorney had told him not to talk to police; police continue questioning suspect, who makes a statement; held: defendant's statement that his attorney told him not to talk did not invoke his right to counsel, thus statement is admissible; accord: State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662 (1991); I.

State v. Mark, 34 Wn.App. 349 (1983)

Where a single police officer testifies that defendant was advised of rights, and defense calls a witness to contradict this, and where corroborating evidence is available but not presented by state, "heavy burden" required by Miranda has not been met, State v. Davis, 73 Wn.2d 271 (1968), overruled, State v. Abdulle, 174 Wn.2d 411 (2012), see: State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423, 431-6 (1997); here, defendant did not testify at CrR 3.5 hearing, thus Davis does not apply; II.

State v. Smith, 34 Wn.App. 405 (1983)

Suspect asks police if they think he needs attorney whereupon police present waiver form without comment, held: equivocal request followed by presentation of waiver is not coercive; I.

State v. Davis, 34 Wn.App. 546 (1983)

Mental illness of defendant is but one factor for court to consider in determining whether state has established voluntariness of a confession by a preponderance; I.

State v. Kaiser, 34 Wn.App. 559 (1983)

Promise by police that a statement by suspect will be kept "confidential" is voluntary where Miranda warnings were administered; III.

State v. Fanger, 34 Wn.App. 635 (1983)

Defense counsel stipulates to admissibility of statement in state's case-in-chief, waiving CrR 3.5 hearing; held: counsel has authority to waive hearing on defendant's behalf and defendant need not sign waiver, see: State v. Varnell, 137 Wn.App.925, 931-33 (2007); a voluntariness hearing is not required absent some contemporaneous challenge to the use of the confession; I.

State v. Ortiz, 34 Wn.App. 694 (1983)

Where court suppresses confession because defendant's developmental disability rendered him incapable of validly waiving Miranda rights, confession is admissible "to attack a defendant's credibility" if defendant testifies inconsistently, Harris v. N.Y., 28 L.Ed.2d 1 (1971); I.

State v. Ruelas, 35 Wn.App. 595 (1983)

Police question suspect, trial court suppresses statements as violative of Miranda but rules that statements were voluntary, at trial, police testify that a conversation took place and describe demeanor of defendant; held: a police officer is not prohibited by Miranda from testifying to his observations of the demeanor and physical actions of a defendant; I.

State v. Smith, 36 Wn.App. 133 (1983)

Defendant confesses to cellmate, who testifies at trial; defense requests voluntariness instruction, WPIC 6.41, which is refused; held: instruction need not be given when defendant confesses to a private citizen; I.

State v. Holland, 98 Wn.2d 507 (1983)

Statements made by a juvenile to a mental health professional prior to a decline hearing are privileged but privilege is waived if defendant takes the stand at trial; 9-0.

State v. Frazier, 99 Wn.2d 180 (1983)

Tape recording of a statement of defendant, if properly authenticated, can go to jury and jury may play statement on tape player; see: State v. Oughton, 26 Wn.App. 76 (1980); 9-0.

State v. Lavaris, 99 Wn.2d 851 (1983)

Murder defendant, while in custody with police, confesses prior to advice of rights and then confesses again subsequent to advice of rights; held: confession made after advisement of Miranda rights is inadmissible if similar but tainted statement was made prior to advice absent insulating factors such as advice that earlier statement is not admissible in court; burden is on state to overcome "presumption of inadmissibility," Missouri v. Seibert, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004), State v. Hickman, 157 Wn.App. 767 (2010), but see: Oregon v. Elstad, 84 L.Ed.2d 222 (1985), State v. Allenby, 68 Wn.App. 657 (1992), State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 609-12 (1993), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007) , but see: Bobby v. Dixon, 565 U.S. 23, 132 S.Ct. 25, 181 L.Ed.2d 328 (2011); 9-0.

Oregon v. Bradshaw, 77 L.Ed.2d 405 (1983)

After advice of rights, suspect invokes right to counsel, whereupon police terminate interrogation; later, when suspect is being transported to jail, he inquires "What is going to happen to me now?"; police readvise suspect, who agrees to take a polygraph, which he flunks, following which he confesses; held, by plurality of four: suspect's inquiry amounted to a willingness to discuss the investigation and "not merely an inquiry arising out of the incidents of the custodial relationship"; since inquiry was initiated by suspect, there is a valid waiver under Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), Wyrick v. Fields, 74 L.Ed.2d 214 (1982); majority of five approves two-step analysis: (1) initiation by suspect, and (2) totality re: waiver, Johnson v. Zerbst, 82 L.Ed. 1461 (1938); 5-4.

California v. Beheler, 77 L.Ed.2d 1275 (1983)

Defendant calls police to talk about a homicide he "witnessed," voluntarily accompanies police to station, is not advised of Miranda rights, is interviewed for 30 minutes and is permitted to return home; five days later, defendant is arrested, advised, and makes statement; held: at first interview, defendant was not in custody under totality test, State v. Grogan, 147 Wn.App. 511, 516-19 (2008), thus Miranda is inapplicable; 6-3.

State v. Cornethan, 38 Wn.App. 231 (1984)

Defendant is shot and arrested for assault, counsel visits defendant in hospital, calls police and tells them defendant does not wish to talk without counsel, police officer visits defendant, does not advise him, defendant refuses to make a statement on advice of counsel, homicide detectives visit defendant, advise him, defendant agrees to talk, confesses to murder; held: defendant invoked only right to remain silent, did not invoke right to counsel, thus Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981) does not apply; police may re-interrogate a suspect who has invoked only his right to remain silent if a significant period of time has elapsed and he is re-advised, Michigan v. Mosley, 46 L.Ed.2d 313 (1975), State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49, 58-62 (2010), State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 128-35 (2016); dicta: once accused has invoked right to counsel, police may interrogate if it involves an independent investigation of an unrelated offense by an officer who speaks to the accused without knowing of his previous request for counsel; I.

State v. Brooks, 38 Wn.App. 256 (1984)

Defendant's cellmate hears confession, is contacted by police, declines to speak, hears another confession, then advises police and testifies; held: where police deliberately elicit a confession using cellmate as agent, right to counsel is denied and confession must be suppressed, United States v. Henry, 65 L.Ed.2d 115 (1980), see also: Kansas v. Ventris, 173 L.Ed.2d 801 (2009); here police did not intentionally create a situation likely to induce a confession, State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 218-21 (2006); I.

State v. Wolfer, 39 Wn.App. 287 (1984)

School security officer is not obliged to give Miranda warnings prior to taking a statement as officer is not employed by an entity whose primary responsibility is law enforcement, but see: State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210, 214-17 (2004); I.

State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984)

Statement admissible where police advise suspect that statement "can be used" against him, advice need not state that statement "can and will be used," Calif. v. Prysock, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981), Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S.50, 130 S.Ct. 1195, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010); written waiver is not required to admit statements; 9-0.

Minnesota v. Murphy, 79 L.Ed.2d 409 (1984)

Probation officer learns that defendant has admitted to a therapist that he committed an uncharged murder, one of defendant's conditions of probation is to be truthful with P.O., P.O. questions defendant about murder; defendant is not in custody, defendant states he "felt like calling a lawyer," to which P.O. responds that he would have to deal with that "outside," continues to question defendant, who confesses; held: (1) P.O. need not advise probationer of Miranda warnings prior to interrogation if probationer is not in custody, (2) probationer has Fifth Amendment rights and may refuse to answer questions; general obligation to appear and answer P.O.'s questions truthfully does not convert otherwise voluntary statements into compelled answers, see: State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 524-9 (1996), (3) mere fact that an investigation has focused on a suspect does not trigger the need for Miranda warnings in noncustodial setting, Stansbury v. California, 128 L.Ed.2d 293 (1994), cf.: State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982), (4) dicta that state cannot carry out a threat to revoke probation for exercise of Fifth Amendment privilege where the questions may lead to criminal prosecution, but may revoke if the questions merely deal with conditions of probation and probationer refuses to answer them, see: State v. Richmond, 65 Wn.App. 541 (1992), State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876 (1995), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967 (1999), McKune v. Lile, 153 L.Ed.2d 47 (2002), State v. Powell, 193 Wn.App. 112 (2016); 6-3.

United States v. Doe, 79 L.Ed.2d 552 (1984)

Grand jury subpoenas business records of sole proprietorship; held; while contents of voluntarily-prepared records are not privileged under Fifth Amendment, act of producing documents may be privileged and can only be compelled pursuant to a grant of use immunity; 6-3.

New York v. Quarles, 81 L.Ed.2d 550 (1984)

Custodial statement not preceded by Miranda warnings is admissible under a public safety exception where, as here, police asked suspect where weapon was, and suspect pointed it out, see: State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 825-30 (1999); 7-2.

Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984)

Roadside questioning of a motorist detained pursuant to a routine traffic stop does not constitute a custodial interrogation for the purposes of the Miranda rule, see: State v. Ferguson, 76 Wn.App. 560, 565-8 (1995); statements made during custodial interrogation for a misdemeanor traffic offense are inadmissible where the suspect was not advised of rights when he was formally placed under arrest; see: Pennsylvania v. Bruder, 101 L.Ed.2d 172 (1988), State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1990); 9-0.

Smith v. Illinois, 83 L.Ed.2d 488 (1984)

Suspect advised of right to counsel, invokes same, police continue to advise and, when suspect is advised of further rights, waives same; held: an accused's post-request responses to further interrogation may not be used to show that the initial request was ambiguous, State v. Piatnitsky, 170 Wn.App. 195, 218-19 (2012), aff'd, 180 Wn.2d 407 (2014), see: Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994); 6-3.

Oregon v. Elstad, 84 L.Ed.2d 222 (1985)

Suspect, in custody, confesses in the absence of Miranda warnings, is later advised of rights and confesses again; held: Fifth Amendment does not require suppression of confession made after proper Miranda warnings solely because police had earlier obtained a voluntary but unwarned admission, but see: Missouri v. Seibert, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004), State v. Hickman, 157 Wn.App. 767 (2010); accord: State v. Allenby, 68 Wn.App. 657 (1992), State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 609-12 (1993), State v. Dods, 87 Wn.App. 312, 317-9 (1997), State v. King, 89 Wn.App. 612, 624-6 (1998), State v. Reed, 116 Wn.App. 418, 421-22 (2003), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 116 ¶13 (2007), Bobby v. Dixon, 565 U.S. 23, 132 S.Ct. 26, 181 L.Ed.2d 328 (2011), but see: State v. Lavaris, 99 Wn.2d 851 (1983), see also: Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Manthie, 39 Wn.App. 815 (1985)

While in jail awaiting trial defendant confessed to cellmate who makes a deal with state and testifies to what he was told before and after he made contact with police; held: state did not intentionally create a situation likely to induce confession, State v. Brooks, 38 Wn.App. 256 (1984), nor was cellmate "under government instruction," United States v. Calder, 641 F.2d 76 (2d Cir. 1981), United States v. Henry, 65 L.Ed.2d 115 (1980), State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 218-22 (2006); state is not required to segregate every cellmate who informs prosecutor he has information as long as there is no attempt to direct or control interrogation; II.

State v. Bryan, 40 Wn.App. 366 (1985)

Defendant is taken into "protective custody" for intoxication during which police notice he has a wallet containing photos and identification; after defendant is released police receive report that a vehicle is stolen near station, is recovered ten miles away, defendant's wallet found nearby; police go to defendant's home, ask him if he lost wallet, defendant says yes, show him wallet, defendant denies it's his, later admits it is his, is advised of rights, confesses to car theft; held: police had probable cause to arrest defendant as soon as he denied wallet was his, thus statements after that point are suppressed, but see: State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 36-38 (2004); trial court's finding that confession after advice of rights was tainted by prior statement affirmed, State v. Lavaris, 99 Wn.2d 851 (1983); II.

State v. Tim S., 41 Wn.App. 60 (1985)

Respondent confesses in absence of Miranda warnings, having been told by police that the problem was whether he could be placed in counseling; no CrR 3.5 hearing was requested or held; at trial, defendant denies offense but is impeached with confession; trial court, in findings, relied on confession as substantive evidence; held: CrR 3.5 hearing is mandatory, whether requested or not, State v. S.A.W., 147 Wn.App. 832 (2008), distinguishing In re Moble, 15 Wn.App. 51 (1976), but see: State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366, 372-74 (2006); a custodial confession, in the absence of Miranda warnings, is not admissible as substantive evidence, but for impeachment only, Harris v. N.Y., 28 L.Ed.2d 1 (1971), State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 180 (1980); remanded for CrR 3.5 hearing to determine voluntariness and new trial; III.

State v. Harvey, 41 Wn.App. 870 (1985)

Statements made pursuant to interrogation during a Terry stop, before Miranda warnings are given, are admissible, State v. Cameron, 47 Wn.App. 878 (1987); I.

State v. Hubbard, 103 Wn.2d 570 (1985)

A defendant's incriminating statement obtained without Miranda warnings is not admissible as substantive evidence to rebut the testimony of a defense witness other than the defendant, and then for impeachment evidence only, reversing State v. Hubbard, 37 Wn.App. 137 (1984); cf.: State v. Hayes, 73 Wn.2d 568 (1968), State v. Greve, 67 Wn.App. 166 (1992); 6-3.

State v. Ortiz, 104 Wn.2d 479 (1985)

After arrest, developmentally disabled suspect makes an unsolicited statement to police; held: develop[mental disability of a suspect is irrelevant to the question as to whether a statement was volunteered; only issues are whether the statement was made spontaneously, was not solicited and not the product of custodial interrogation, State v. Miner, 22 Wn.App. 480 (1979); 9-0.

Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986)

Failure of police to inform defendant of counsel's telephone call during interrogation did not affect validity of defendant's waiver of Fifth Amendment right to remain silent and right to have counsel present, accord: State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364 (1991), State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779, 788 (1991), State v. Bradford, 95 Wn.App. 935 (1999); Sixth Amendment right to counsel does not attach until charges are filed, thus interference by police of counsel's attempts to contact her client is not unlawful; police lying to counsel that defendant would not be interrogated does not violate due process clause; 6-3.

Kuhlmann v. Wilson, 91 L.Ed.2d 364 (1986)

Police place informant in defendant's cell with instructions to listen to defendant but not ask any questions; defendant confesses, informant testifies; held: Sixth Amendment right to counsel not violated where informant listens and reports defendant's confession, but did not question him; see also: Pers. Restraint of Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 911-2 (1998); 6-3.

Allen v. Illinois, 92 L.Ed.2d 296 (1986)

State proceedings permitting involuntary commitment of "sexually dangerous persons" are not criminal in nature such that the privilege against self-incrimination applies; 5-4.

Colorado v. Connelly, 93 L.Ed.2d 473 (1986)

Suspect approaches police officer, states he wishes to confess to murder, is advised of Miranda warnings, apparently waives and confesses; state court rules that, because defendant was mentally ill, he did not exercise free will in confessing; held: coercive police activity is a necessary predicate to finding that a confession is not voluntary, 7-2; state need prove waiver of Miranda rights by preponderance only, 6-3.

State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986)

An implied waiver of the right to remain silent may be found where defendant understood his rights and volunteered information after reaching such an understanding, Berghuis v. Thompkins, 560 U.S. 370, 130 S.Ct. 2250, 176 L.Ed.2d 1098 (2010), State v. Gross, 23 Wn.App. 319, 324 (1979), State v. Adams, 76 Wn.2d 650, 670 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 29 L.Ed.2d 855 (1971), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 897-98 (1999), cf.: State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423, 435 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.2d 898 (1986)

Suspect invokes right to counsel, police ask personal history questions, suspect makes nonresponsive incriminating statement; held: general questions about background do not constitute interrogation, Pennsylvania v. Muniz, 110 L.Ed.2d 528 (1990), State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244, 255-57 (2009), and officers can ask such questions even after defendant invokes right to counsel, see: Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 486 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012)

Suspect is advised, requests counsel, then tells police officer he wants to talk to him, is readvised, waives, confesses; held: suspect initiated conversation, thus statement admissible, but see: State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407 (1997), cf.: State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 364-70 (2010); III.

State v. Bergman, 44 Wn.App. 271 (1986)

Cross-examination of defendant regarding his failure to ask an alibi witness to contact the police about his alibi does not violate defendant's right to remain silent, distinguishing Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976); I.

State v. Murphy, 44 Wn.App. 290 (1986)

Prior to arrest, defendant's attorney writes to police advising them of his representation and requests that they not interrogate defendant; after arrest, defendant is advised of Miranda rights and police inform defendant that an attorney had been retained and had instructed police not to question her, defendant informs police there is no need for counsel, and waives rights, makes statement; held: arrestee may waive right to counsel and right to remain silent during interrogation where she knows counsel has been retained and has advised her not to so waive, State v. Haynes, 602 P.2d 272, 278-9 (Or., 1979), State v. Vidal, 82 Wn.2d 74 (1973), Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed. 410 (1986); dicta that statement must be suppressed if police fail to inform arrestee of attorney's attempts to contact him, at 294; II.

State v. Thamert, 45 Wn.App. 143 (1986)

The fact that a statement is deemed admissible following a CrR 3.5 hearing does not address the admissability of contents of a confession pursuant to rules of evidence regarding relevance, prejudice, etc.; accord: State v. Viney, 52 Wn.App. 507 (1988); I.

State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388 (1986)

Following illegal arrest, police confront defendant with unlawfully seized drugs, advise him they would see if they could get suspect's wife released from jail, defendant confesses; held: implied promise to release wife plus exploitation of the illegally seized drugs taints the confession, although implied promise here would not be enough by itself to find involuntariness; see: State v. Putman, 65 Wn.App. 606 (1992); III.

State v. Hamilton, 47 Wn.App. 15 (1987)

Police, having probable cause to arrest, speak to suspect on telephone, obtain incriminating statements but without interrogation; held: no need to advise defendant of Miranda warnings because police could not have arrested suspect as they did not know where he was, State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 428-29 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982); I.

State v. Marshall, 47 Wn.App. 322 (1987)

Suspect, meeting description of a person who knocked on a residential door and said to be a suspect in a rape, is stopped by police three blocks from door a few minutes later, states to police that he was at the door, provides identification, is arrested when the identification meets that of the rape suspect; held: temporary seizure for questioning does not require Miranda warnings, Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984), State v. Kolesnik, 146 Wn.App. 790, 809-810 (2008); I.

State v. Brown, 47 Wn.App. 565 (1987)

Defendant initiates conversation with parole officer, telling P.O. that what he says would probably be used against him; P.O. states that nobody cared about his modus operandi; held: statement was voluntary as P.O.'s words did not overcome defendant's will; I.

State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987)

Defendant asserts right to remain silent, detective asks routine questions for Personal Investigation Report (PIR) which defendant answers, detective asks defendant if he knew co-suspect which defendant denies, state offers this denial at trial; held: while PIR questions are permitted even after defendant declines to waive Fifth Amendment rights, question asked by detective was not routine question, thus defendant's right to silence was not scrupulously honored, State v. Denney, 152 Wn.App. 665 (2009), see: State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 576 (2000), reversing State v. Wheeler, 43 Wn.App. 191 (1986), but see: State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015), harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Franklin, 48 Wn.App. 61 (1987)

While a charged defendant has right to counsel which does not depend upon an explicit request for same, police asking such a person if he knows what he is charged with is not designed to deliberately elicit an incriminating statement, Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 486 (1999), distinguishing United States v. Henry, 65 L.Ed.2d 115 (1980), see: Franklin v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004); I.

Cruz v. New York, 95 L.Ed.2d 162 (1987)

Where a nontestifying co-defendant's confession is not directly admissible against the defendant, the confrontation clause bars its admission at their joint trial, even if the jury is instructed not to consider it against the defendant, and even if the defendant's own confession interlocks with the co-defendant's, and is admitted against the defendant, overruling plurality in Parker v. Randolph, 60 L.Ed.2d 713 (1979); accord: State v. St. Pierre, 111 Wn.2d 105 (1988); but see: State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779 (1991); 5-4.

Arizona v. Mauro, 95 L.Ed.2d 458 (1987)

Suspect, arrested for killing his son, tells police he does not wish to make statement, after suspect's wife asked to see defendant, police agreed, set up meeting with suspect, wife, officer, put tape recorder in plain sight, record confession; held: suspect was not subjected to compelling influence, psychological ploys, direct questioning or the functional equivalent of interrogation; 5-4.

Connecticut v. Barrett, 93 L.Ed.2d 920 (1987)

After Miranda warnings, suspect states he would not give a written statement without an attorney but would talk about the incident; held: oral confession is admissible, as suspect stated his intentions, waived his Fifth Amendment privilege as to oral statements, and police honored his intentions, State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591 (1989), State v. Hutchinson, 85 Wn.App. 726, 741 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 863 (1998), State v. Piatnitsky, 170 Wn.App. 195 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 407 (2014); 7-2. ,

Colorado v. Spring, 93 L.Ed.2d 954 (1987)

Suspect under arrest for a weapons offense, is advised and waives. after making statements about the subject of the arrest suspect is questioned about an unrelated homicide, makes incriminating statements; held: suspect's awareness of all the possible subjects of interrogation is not relevant to determining whether s/he waived Fifth Amendment privilege; 7-2.

State v. Petty, 48 Wn.App. 615 (1987)

Police, serving warrant, enter residence with guns drawn, inquire of occupants if they live there, defendant replies affirmatively; held: reasonable person would believe he was formally arrested, thus Miranda warnings should have preceded question; I.

State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 681 (1987)

Police advise defendant of Miranda warnings, defendant asks to speak with counsel, speaks with attorney on telephone, defendant is advised not to talk, police then re-advise defendant and tell him he would not be prosecuted, defendant confesses, is charged in another jurisdiction; held: by invoking right to counsel, interrogation must cease until counsel is present or suspect initiates communication, Minnick v. Mississippi, 112 L.Ed.2d 489 (1990); telling suspect he would not be prosecuted is reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response, thus suppressed; 2-1, I.

State v. West, 49 Wn.App. 166 (1987)

Defendant confesses in absence of Miranda warnings, gives name of a witness, police interview witness, advise of rights, witness implicates defendant, testifies at defendant's trial; held: testimony of the witness is admissible as it was untainted by the unlawfully seized confession in that witness was advised, testified voluntarily, State v. Childres, 35 Wn.App. 314, 316 (1983), United States v. Ceccolini, 55 L.Ed.2d 268 (1978), the illegally seized evidence had no role in gaining the witness's cooperation, United States v. Hooten, 662 F.2d 628, 632 (9th Cir. 1981); see also: State v. Stone, 56 Wn.App. 153 (1989); II.

State v. Huynh, 49 Wn.App. 192 (1987)

Police testify as to defendant's statements made to police through a police interpreter; held: as interpreter was not defendant's agent, it was inadmissible hearsay, State v. Lopez, 29 Wn.App. 836 (1981); I.

State v. Hensler, 109 Wn.2d 357 (1987)

Unnamed citizen informs police he saw defendant in vehicle using drugs; police stop vehicle, ask suspect if he was using drugs, suspect says yes; held: interrogation was brief, noncoercive and nondeceptive, thus no advice of rights necessary at that stage, Heinemann v. Whitman Cy., 105 Wn.2d 796 (1986), State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992); 9-0.

Arizona v. Roberson, 100 L.Ed.2d 704 (1988)

Where suspect in custody invokes right to counsel cutting off interrogation, police may not initiate interrogation as to an unrelated offense even if re-interrogating officer is ignorant of suspect's initial request for counsel, see: McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158 (1991), but see: Maryland v. Shatzer, 539 U.S.98, 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010), State v. Trochez-Jimenez, 180 Wn.2d 445 (2014); 6-2.

State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466 (1988)

In absence of Miranda warnings, police ask arrestee for drugs, which defendant hands to police; held: while act of handing over the drugs is testimonial and must be suppressed, State v.

Dennis, 16 Wn.App. 417 (1976), State v. Moreno, 21 Wn.App. 430 (1978), Fifth Amendment does not require the suppression of the evidence itself as long as it was voluntarily produced, United States v. Patane, 159 L.Ed.2d 667 (2004), State v. Putman, 65 Wn.App. 606 (1992), see: State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 55-62 (1994), State v. Birnel, 89 Wn.App. 459, 468 (1998), State v. Spotted Elk, 109 Wn.App. 253 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Grieb, 52 Wn.App. 573 (1988)

After advice of rights, suspect states that he does not want to waive his rights but will talk to police, who question defendant, who confesses; held: statements must be suppressed as police did not scrupulously honor suspect's assertion that he would not waive, irrespective of the equivocation, but see: Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994), State v. Copeland, 89 Wn.App. 492, 499-502 (1998), cf.: State v. Parra, 96 Wn.App. 95 (1999); III.

Patterson v. Illinois, 101 L.Ed.2d 261 (1988)

After indictment, defendant is interviewed by police, advised of Miranda warnings, waives, confesses; held: accused may waive Sixth Amendment right to counsel if properly advised by police, who are not barred from initiating interrogation, State v. Medlock, 86 Wn.App. 89, 99-100 (1997), see: Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Sargent, 111 Wn.2d 641 (1988)

Following murder conviction, defendant is interviewed by P.O. for presentence report, not advised of Miranda rights, confesses; conviction is reversed on appeal, used at retrial; held: P.O. was a state official, defendant was in custody, failure to advise violated defendant's Fifth Amendment rights, thus reversed; reverses State v. Sargent, 49 Wn.App. 64 (1987), cf.: State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992), State v. Jacobson, 95 Wn.App. 967 (1999), accord: State v. Willis, 64 Wn.App. 634 (1992), State v. D.R., 84 Wn.App. 832 (1997), State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002), State v. Everybodytalksabout, 161 Wn.2d 702 (2007); 6-2.

Duckworth v. Eagan, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989)

Miranda warnings which advise suspect s/he has right to an attorney before and during questioning and that "one will be appointed for you if and when you go to court" are sufficient, California v. Prysock, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981), Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S. 50, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010), State v. Teller, 72 Wn.App. 49 (1993), Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 434-35 (2005), but see: State v. Mayer, 184 Wn.2d 548 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Petticlerc, 53 Wn.App. 419 (1989)

Counsel files notice of appearance which requests that police not contact defendant in absence of counsel; at arraignment, defendant states he has an attorney; police advise defendant, who waives and confesses; held: where defendant consults with counsel and later confesses after waiving right to counsel's presence, confession is admissible, distinguishing Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), see: Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009), Maryland v. Shatzer, 539 U.S. 98, 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010); I.

State v. Alexander, 55 Wn.App. 102 (1989)

At a CrR 3.5 hearing, trial judge must give defendant opportunity to testify and present evidence, CrR 3.5(b), and may not rely only upon the officer's version of facts, see: State v. Williams, 137 Wn.2d 746 (1999); II.

State v. Visitacion, 55 Wn.App. 166 (1989)

Post-indictment confessions in the absence of counsel are admissible upon proof of a knowing, voluntary and intelligent waiver of counsel; Miranda warnings will suffice, Patterson v. Illinois, 101 L.Ed.2d 261 (1988), see: Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004); I.

State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421 (1989)

Confession to a police officer is not excludable as plea negotiations, ER 410, unless officer has express plea bargaining authority, see: State v. Nowinski, 124 Wn.App. 617 (2004); I.

State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35 (1989)

Undercover police officer need not give Miranda warnings once there is probable cause for arrest, effectively overruling State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982); Miranda safeguards apply only when suspect's freedom of action is curtailed to degree associated with formal arrest, State v. Harris, 106 Wn.2d 784, 789 (1986), State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992), State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992), State v. Ferguson, 76 Wn.App. 560, 565-8 (1995), State v. Mahoney, 80 Wn.App. 495 (1996), College Place v. Staudenmaier, 110 Wn.App. 841, 848-50 (2002), State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210, 217-20 (2004), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007), see also: State v. D.R., 84 Wn.App. 832 (1997) State v. Solomon, 114 Wn.App. 781 (2002), State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 36-38 (2004), State v. Rosas-Miranda , 176 Wn.App. 773 (2013), see: State v. Daniels, 124 Wn.App. 830, 845-46 (2004), 160 Wn.2d 256, 266-67 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462 (1989)

At arraignment on robbery charge, defendant requests appointment of counsel, following which he is questioned by police, advised, and confesses to six burglaries; held: at arraignment, defendant invoked his Sixth Amendment right to counsel, which does not automatically invoke a Fifth Amendment right to counsel relative to subsequent interrogations on other matters, State v. Stackhouse, 90 Wn.App. 344, 353-4 (1998), reversing State v. Stewart, 53 Wn.App. 150 (1989); cf.: Minnick v. Mississippi, 112 L.Ed.2d 489 (1990); see: State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779, 787-8 (1991), but see: State v. Valdez, 82 Wn.App. 294 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Sweeney, 56 Wn.App. 42 (1989)

Job Corps student leader informs dormitory supervisor that defendant sells drugs; supervisor previously suspected defendant due to other students entering defendant's room at unusual hours, pats down defendant, finds unidentified leaf, strip searches, finds drugs in underwear, questions defendant for 13 hours, informs defendant that things would “go easier” if he confesses to Job Corps officials rather than police, defendant confesses; held: confession to quasi-school officials in absence of Miranda warnings infringed on suspect's Fifth Amendment rights and Job Corps rules, and was involuntary due to the length of questioning and the promise that it would be to suspect's advantage to confess, State v. Gonzalez, 46 Wn.App. 338 (1986); III.

State v. Stone, 56 Wn.App. 153 (1989)

In absence of Miranda warnings, police ask jailed defendant if he knows a certain woman and where she lives, defendant answers questions, police find woman who confesses she and defendant committed burglaries, she testifies against defendant at trial; held: because defendant's statement was not incriminating, failure to give Miranda warnings was harmless; if Miranda warnings were required, woman's testimony was so attenuated from unlawful police conduct as to dissipate taint, State v. West, 49 Wn.App. 166 (1987); factors to determine taint are (1) length of "road" between unlawful police conduct and witness's testimony, (2) degree of free will of witness, (3) fact that exclusion would permanently disable witness from testifying about relevant and material facts, regardless of how unrelated such testimony might be to the purpose of the original illegal" conduct; III.

State v. Blair, 56 Wn.App. 209 (1989)

Juvenile respondents are advised of Miranda warnings, make statements without express waiver; held: RCW 13.40.140(9) does not require express waiver of Miranda rights for juveniles; I.

New York v. Harris, 109 L.Ed.2d 13 (1990)

Police, with probable cause but without a warrant, unlawfully arrest suspect in his home; at station, suspect confesses; held: exclusionary rule does not bar use of statement made outside of the home even though the statement is made in the home in violation of Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980), cf.: State v. Eserjose, 171 Wn.2d 907 (2011), as long as police have probable cause to arrest; 5-4.

Illinois v. Perkins, 109 L.Ed.2d 243 (1990)

Undercover agent, placed in cell of defendant who was incarcerated on charges unrelated to the agent's investigation, elicits confession; held: Miranda warnings are not required when suspect is unaware that he is speaking to a law enforcement officer; 8-1.

State v. McCullough, 56 Wn.App. 655 (1990)

A confession purportedly made involuntary by the acts of a private citizen does not violate state or federal due process clauses, distinguishing State v. Frederick, 100 Wn.2d 550 (1983); I.

State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812 (1990)

Police, knowing driver lacked license, follow vehicle, which does not immediately pull over, with emergency lights on, observe defendant-passenger move around considerably as though trying to hide something, begins patdown of defendant-passenger, asks if he has anything sharp, defendant surrenders syringe with drugs; held: frisk did not convert traffic stop to custodial arrest, thus no Miranda warnings were required, Pennsylvania v. Bruder, 102 L.Ed.2d 172 (1988); Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984); "very brief, noncoercive, nondeceptive, single question" during the course of an investigative stop does not amount to custodial interrogation, State v. Hensler, 109 Wn.2d 357, 363 (1987); I.

State v. Hutton, 57 Wn.App. 537 (1990)

Miranda warnings are sufficient for purposes of CrR 3.1 where suspect is advised, "if you cannot afford an attorney, you are entitled to have one appointed by a court and to have him present before and during questioning;" police need not expressly advise that suspect would be provided a lawyer "without charge"; I.

State v. Manchester, 57 Wn.App. 765 (1990)

Defendant is advised of Miranda rights at arrest, signs rights form with false name and states he does not wish to make statement; later, officer who knew defendant re-advised him using correct name, defendant states he does not wish to make written statement [order unclear from opinion, cf. pp. 767 and 771], defendant responds to questions; held: defendant did not invoke Fifth Amendment right to counsel, State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462, 472 (1990), Connecticut v. Barrett, 93 L.Ed.2d 920 (1987), but see: State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987), see:State v. Piatnitsky, 170 Wn.App. 195 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 407 (2014); I.

State v. Denton, 58 Wn.App. 251 (1990)

Defendant, in jail for robbery and having previously requested counsel, telephones detective with whom defendant was working as a victim on another unrelated matter; detective asks questions about why defendant is in jail, which defendant answers; held: because defendant could have hung up phone, he was not in custody for purposes of Miranda warnings, State v. Mahoney, 80 Wn.App. 495 (1996); although defendant was interrogated, without a subsequent waiver, after having requested counsel, defendant initiated the conversation, and therefore validly waived Fifth Amendment right to counsel, Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), Wyrick v. Fields, 74 L.Ed.2d 214 (1982), Oregon v. Bradshaw, 77 L.Ed.2d 405 (1983); I.

State v. Royer, 58 Wn.App. 778 (1990)

At arraignment, defendant requests and is given counsel, following which defendant is advised by police, signs a waiver, makes incriminating statements; held: after defendant's assertion, at arraignment, of Sixth Amendment right to counsel, any waiver of the defendant's right to counsel for subsequent police-initiated interrogation as to the charge pending is invalid, Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), but see: Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009), State v. Valdez, 82 Wn.App. 294 (1996), cf.: State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462 (1989), Texas v. Cobb, 149 L.Ed.2d 34 (2001), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 818-20 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), see: State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 897-900 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012); II.

Pennsylvania v. Muniz, 110 L.Ed.2d 528 (1990)

Prior to Miranda warnings, arrested DUI suspect is asked date of his sixth birthday; held: whenever a suspect is asked for a response requiring him to communicate an express or implied assertion of fact or belief, the response contains a testimonial component, as suspect is confronted with the "trilemma" of truth, falsity or silence; questions about name, address, height, weight, eye color, birthdate, age, while testimonial, fall within "routine booking question" exception; suspect's statements made during "carefully scripted instructions" as to how to perform physical sobriety tests and breath test were not the product of interrogation, and are thus admissible; 5-4.

Minnick v. Mississippi, 112 L.Ed.2d 489 (1990)

Once an arrestee has requested counsel, s/he may not be reinterrogated in the absence of counsel even if suspect has consulted with counsel, unless accused initiates the conversation, see: State v. Warness, 77 Wn.App. 636 (1995); 6-2.

Arizona v. Fulminante, 113 L.Ed.2d 302 (1991)

Federal informant in prison offers to protect defendant from other prisoners in exchange for confession; held: credible threat of physical violence motivated confession, thus involuntary, Blackburn v. Alabama, 4 L.Ed.2d 242 (1960), Payne v. Arkansas, 2 L.Ed.2d 975 (1958), cf.: State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 755-66 (2012); coerced confession may be harmless error.

McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158 (1991)

Defendant is arrested for robbery, advised of Miranda warnings, does not request counsel but refuses to answer questions, is later arraigned with counsel, police later re-advise and question defendant about unrelated murder, defendant confesses; held: request for counsel at arraignment is offense specific under the Sixth Amendment, Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), and does not preclude police initiated interrogation regarding other matters absent a Fifth Amendment demand for counsel, Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), Texas v. Cobb, 149 L.Ed.2d 34 (2001), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 818-20 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 897-900 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364 (1991)

CONST. Art. 1, § 9 is coextensive with, not broader than, protection of the Fifth Amendment, State v. Moore, 79 Wn.2d 51 (1971), State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 55-62 (1994); State v. Horton, 195 Wn.App. 202 (2016), where an unretained attorney telephoned police station during interrogation and asked to leave a message for defendant to call him, Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986), and where defendant, after Miranda rights, agreed to confess to murder in exchange for a promise not to charge aggravated murder, then statement is voluntary and admissible, State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779 (1991), State v. Corn, 95 Wn.App. 41, 56-64 (1999); 8-1.

State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662 (1991)

Statement to police that defendant "should not talk" or that the next time he told his story would be in front of a judge after counsel had cut him a deal was not a request for counsel, State v. Bledsoe, 33 Wn.App. 720 (1983); II.

State v. Reuben, 62 Wn.App. 620 (1991)

Defendant is advised of rights, expresses expletive to trooper and turns head away, shortly thereafter, defendant is questioned by detective, makes statement; held: expletive plus turning head is assertion of right to remain silent; while there is no per se proscription on further questioning, resumption after a very short respite, about the same incident and without new warnings, violates the Miranda guidelines, Michigan v. Mosley, 46 L.Ed.2d 313 (1975), cf.: State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49, 58-62 (2010), State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 128-35 (2016), harmless, Arizona v. Fulminante, 113 L.Ed.2d 302 (1991); III.

State v. Cervantes, 62 Wn.App. 695 (1991)

Police use of potential co-defendant as interpreter to translate Miranda warnings, waiver and interrogation violates due process; III.

State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779 (1991)

Request for counsel to a public defense indigency screener is insufficient to require termination of interrogation, Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), as it was not expressed to law enforcement personnel, McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158, 169 (1991), State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462 (1989); jail personnel and police conspire to keep suspect and counsel apart, police refuse counsel's request to see suspect or advise him she was present, suspect confesses after Miranda waiver; held: Miranda advice and waiver is dispositive of Fifth Amendment and CONST. Art. 1, § 3 claims, Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986), State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364 (1991), State v. Stackhouse, 90 Wn.App. 344, 353-4 (1998); while police deliberately thwarted CrR 3.1 right to counsel, harmless here; I.

State v. Spurgeon, 63 Wn.App. 503 (1991)

Failure to tape-record a custodial interrogation does not violate state due process clause, State v. Turner, 145 Wn.App. 899 (2008); I.

State v. Allen, 63 Wn.App. 623 (1991)

Juvenile is advised of Miranda rights, is told she is not a suspect in anything and is considered only a victim, she confesses to a crime and is charged; held: respondent's waiver was involuntary as she was led to believe sole purpose of questioning was as a victim, and this belief was material to her decision to talk to police; III.

State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992)

Work release inmate being interviewed by prison psychologist to determine whether inmate should stay in work release is not in custody for purposes of Miranda warnings when those statements are to be used at a sentencing on a subsequent offense ten years later; an inmate is in custody for Miranda analysis where state officials place further limitations on the prisoner's already limited freedom of movement, reversing State v. Post, 59 Wn.App. 389 (1990), see: State v. Everybodytalksabout, 161 Wn.2d 702 (2007) cf.: State v. LaRue, 19 Wn.App. 841 (1978), ; because no criminal prosecution or appeal was pending during interview, distinguishing State v. Sargent, 111 Wn.2d 641 (1988), and no court ordered the interview, distinguishing Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), no interrogation occurred; see: State v. Willis, 64 Wn.App. 634 (1992), cf.: State v. Nason, 96 Wn.App. 686, 692-95 (1999), State v. Bankes,114 Wn.App. 280 (2003); because questioning by psychologist was confined to criminal conduct for which defendant had been sentenced, statements were not incriminating; no evidence or law suggests that defendant would lose work release privilege if he refused to answer, thus no penalty would be imposed, see: Minnesota v. Murphy, 79 L.Ed.2d 409 (1984), McKune v. Lile, 153 L.Ed.2d 47 (2002); where psychologist advised defendant that interview was not confidential, and only one interview occurred, then the psychologist-patient privilege, RCW 18.83.110, is inapplicable, as defendant's subjective belief that he might receive treatment from psychologist was unrealistic, distinguishing State v. Sullivan, 60 Wn.2d 214, 222-26 (1962); see: State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876 (1995), State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 531-3 (1996); 9-0.

State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992)

Absent custodial arrest and interrogation, Miranda warnings need not be given, State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004), State v. Tien Thuy Ho, 8 Wn.App.2d 132 (2019); whether officer had probable cause to arrest is not circumstance to be considered in determining whether defendant was in custody, State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35 (1989), State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992), State v. Fergusen, 76 Wn.App. 560, 565-8 (1995), Stansbury v. California, 128 L.Ed.2d 1293 (1994), State v. Warness, 77 Wn.App. 636, 641-2 (1995), State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 36-38 (2004), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007), cf.: State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982), State v. Solomon, 114 Wn.App. 781 (2002), State v. Daniels, 124 Wn.App. 830, 845-46 (2004), 160 Wn.2d 256, 266-67 (2007); III.

State v. Walton, 64 Wn.App. 410 (1992)

Asking address during booking process is not interrogation for purposes of Miranda, even if answer is used to establish constructive possession at trial, State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987), only if agent should have reasonably known information sought was directly relevant to offense will inquiry be subject to scrutiny, Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 486 (1999), see: State v. Denney, 152 Wn.App. 665 (2009); III.

State v. Webb, 64 Wn.App. 480 (1992)

After defendant invokes right to counsel, he asks police if "all this is necessary," officer responds, "you're damn right this is necessary, you vandalized [an] apartment," defendant responds, "but the stuff I damaged was mine too;" held: officer could not have known that statement would elicit incriminating response, thus not functional equivalent of interrogation, Rhode Island v. Innis, 64 L.Ed.2d 297 (1980), State v. Breedlove, 79 Wn.App. 101, 112-13 (1995), see: Pers. Restraint of Cross, 180 Wn.2d 664, 682-90 (2014); I.

State v. Willis, 64 Wn.App. 634 (1992)

Probation officer's post-arrest, pre-trial interview of jailed defendant must be preceded by Miranda warnings, State v. Sargent, 111 Wn.2d 641 (1988), Fare v. Michael C., 61 L.Ed.2d 197 (1979), State v. Everybodytalksabout, 161 Wn.2d 702 (2007), distinguishing State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992); III.

State v. Richmond, 65 Wn.App. 541 (1992)

Police, responding to report of stabbing, arrive at address, hear woman scream, knock, force door open and enter, observe defendant strike a woman, pull gun and order defendant to freeze, ask defendant and woman who called police, defendant points down hall, police find stabbing victim; held: defendant was in custody when weapon was drawn, questions were addressed to both persons in apartment, officer would not have known questions were reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response, nor do questions reflect a measure of compulsion beyond that inherent in custody, thus Miranda warnings were not required, see: State v. Lane, 77 Wn.2d 860 (1970), New York v. Quarles, 81 L.Ed.2d 550 (1984), State v. Birnel, 89 Wn.App. 459 (1998), State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 825-30 (1999), State v. Spotted Elk, 109 Wn.App. 253 (2001); I.

State v. Putman, 65 Wn.App. 606 (1992)

Physical evidence derived from a voluntary confession given without Miranda warnings need not be suppressed absent a direct Fifth Amendment violation or actual coercion, State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466, 475 (1988), State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 55-62 (1994), United States v. Patane, 159 L.Ed.2d 667 (2004); police promise to talk to prosecutor for defendant does not amount to implied promise, see: State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388, 401 (1986), State v. Riley, 19 Wn.App. 289, 297 (1978); modifies State v. Putman, 61 Wn.App. 450 (1991); III.

State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992)

Police, investigating a report of a juvenile party, approach suspect, detect odor of alcohol, ask for identification which shows he was 17, ask if he had anything to drink, to which suspect answers "beer," cite for minor in possession; at suppression hearing, officer testifies that if respondent had attempted to leave, he probably would have been arrested; held: the initial detention was a Terry stop, not a custodial arrest; the fact that a suspect is not "free to leave" does not make the stop a formal arrest for purposes of Miranda, State v. Cunningham, 116 Wn.App. 219, 226-30 (2003), State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004), State v. Adams, 138 Wn.App. 36, 45 (2007), see: Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984); uncommunicated plan of officer to arrest did not lead respondent to believe he was under arrest and in custody, Berkemer, supra, State v. Hensler, 109 Wn.2d 357, 362-3 (1987), State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35 (1989), State v. Hamilton, 47 Wn.App. 15 (1987), State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992), State v. Warness, 77 Wn.App. 636, 641-2 (1995), State v. Solomon, 114 Wn.App. 781 (2002), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007), State v. Tien Thuy Ho, 8 Wn.App.2d 132 (2019), but see: State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982), State v. Ferguson, 76 Wn.App. 560, 565-8 (1995); fact that questions were designed to elicit incriminating response does not require

Miranda warnings, where questioning was noncoercive, routine, not deceptive, cf.: State v. Daniels, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992); I.

State v. Greve, 67 Wn.App. 166 (1992)

Evidence suppressed for Miranda violations may be admitted to impeach a defendant's testimony where the police misconduct is not of such a degree that the previously suppressed statement is inherently unreliable, Riddell v. Rhay, 79 Wn.2d 248, 253 (1971), State v. Hubbard, 103 Wn.2d 570 (1985), Walder v. United States, 98 L.Ed. 503 (1954), Harris v. New York, 28 L.Ed.2d 1 (1971), Kansas v. Ventris, 173 L.Ed.2d 801 (2009); II.

State v. Allenby, 68 Wn.App. 657 (1992)

Where defendant confesses prior to advice of Miranda rights, then confesses again after advice, subsequent statement is admissible as long as both statements were voluntary, State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 609-12 (1993), see also: Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016, 1023 (2004), but see: Missouri v. Seibert, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004), State v. Hickman, 157 Wn.App. 767 (2010); I.

State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440 (1993)

Police lying to defendant about strength of state's evidence does not render an otherwise valid confession involuntary, Frazier v. Cupp, 22 L.Ed.2d 684 (1969), State v. Braun, 82 Wn.2d 157, 162 (1973), State v. Burkins, 94 Wn.App. 677, 694-96 (1999); while withholding food and water or offering food or water as an inducement to confess may make a confession involuntary, Brooks v. Florida, 19 L.Ed.2d 643 (1967), here offering food as an act of courtesy does not invalidate confession; 8-0.

State v. Teller, 72 Wn.App. 49 (1993)

DUI suspect is advised, inter alia, "if you cannot afford an attorney you are entitled to have one appointed by the court," argues she should have been told she had right to public defender before she took breath test; held: warnings were adequate under constitution, Duckworth v. Eagan, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989), California v. Prysock, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981), Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S. 50, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010), distinguishing State v. Creach, 77 Wn.2d 194, 198 (1969) and State v. Tetzlaff, 75 Wn.2d 649 (1969), and CrRLJ 3.1, State v. Wurm, 32 Wn.App. 258 (1982), aff'd sub nom. State ex rel. Juckett v. Evergreen Dist. Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984), State v. Halbakken, 30 Wn.App. 834, 836 (1981), see: State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 434-35 (2005); III.

Stansbury v. California, 128 L.Ed.2d 293 (1994)

Police ask witness to come to station and question him absent Miranda, during questioning police determine he is a suspect, continue questioning; held: police belief that interrogation is custodial or that person being questioned is a suspect are factors in determining whether the interrogation is custodial only if communicated to the suspect and only if a reasonable person would perceive that he or she was not free to leave; even a clear statement that the person is a prime suspect is not, in itself, dispositive of the custody issue if the suspect is free to leave; accord: State v. Warness, 77 Wn.App. 636, 641-2 (1995), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007), see: State v. D.R., 84 Wn.App. 832 (1997), State v. Grogan, 147 Wn.App. 511, 514-19 (2008), see: State v. Rosas-Miranda , 176 Wn.App. 773 (2013), State v. Tien Thuy Ho, 8 Wn.App.2d 132 (2019), cf.: State v. Daniels, 124 Wn.App. 830, 845-46 (2004), 160 Wn.2d 256, 266-67 (2007); 9-0.

Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994)

Following Miranda warnings, defendant states, "maybe I should talk to a lawyer," police continue interrogation, defendant confesses; held: an ambiguous or equivocal reference to counsel is not a request for counsel and thus there are not grounds for suppression, State v. Gasteazoro-Paniagua, 173 Wn.App. 751 (2013), (9-0), State v. Copeland, 89 Wn.App. 492, 499-502 (1998), State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258, 273-76 (2005), State v. Radcliffe, 164 Wn.2d 900 (2008), State v. Piatnitsky, 170 Wn.App. 195 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 407 (2014), State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96, 102-03 (2014), , affirmed, on different grounds, 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015); police may but need not clarify whether suspect wanted a lawyer (5-4), distinguishing Smith v. Illinois, 83 L.Ed.2d 488 (1984), see: State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 663-6 (1996).

State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 55-62 (1994)

Arrested suspect is questioned absent Miranda warnings, makes a statement giving names of witnesses from whom police obtain inculpatory information; held: while defendant's statement itself is not admissible, the fruit of that statement is admissible where the statement was not coerced, State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466, 473-5 (1988), State v. Putman, 61 Wn.App. 450, 456 (1991), adhered to on reconsideration, 65 Wn.App. 606 (1992), see: United States v. Patane, 159 L.Ed.2d 667 (2004); in this context, CONST. art. 1 § 9 is coextensive with United States Constitution, see: State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Schatmeier, 72 Wn.App. 711 (1994)

Following DUI arrest, police advise 16 and 17 year old suspects, inter alia, that any statement they make may be used against them in juvenile court unless declined; district court has exclusive jurisdiction in criminal traffic cases, RCW 13.04.030(5); held: while advice was inaccurate, warnings were sufficient to apprise suspects of the right to remain silent and anything they say could be used in court, thus suppression reversed, Dutil v. State, 93 Wn.2d 84, 90 (1980); III.

State v. Thompson, 73 Wn.App. 122 (1994)

At omnibus hearing, prosecutor asserts that state will not offer any statements, so no CrR 3.5 hearing is necessary; immediately prior to trial, prosecutor states that if defendant testifies, that may change; at trial, defendant testifies, prosecutor cross-examines with voluntary statement inconsistent with his testimony, court holds CrR 3.5 hearing, admits statement; held: while a party may waive an issue by failing to give notice of an issue, CrR 4.5(d), state's ambiguous statement at omnibus hearing was clarified later, defense failed to move, in limine, to preclude cross-examination, thus there was no waiver by stipulation, at 126-7, 129 n. 6; CrR 3.5

hearing may be held during trial, particularly where state is only offering statements to impeach, State v. Taylor, 30 Wn.App. 89, 92-3 (1981); II.

State v. Lopez, 74 Wn.App. 264, 269-71 (1994)

Spanish-speaking defendant makes a statement in response to an English question, which is suppressed in state's case-in-chief for Miranda violation, but is admitted at trial, defendant claims it is involuntary as he didn't understand question; held: where the impeachment value of a prior inconsistent statement depends upon the disputed factual issue of whether a defendant understood English, that factual issue is properly submitted to the jury; language difficulty is just one factor to be considered in determining voluntariness of a statement; I.

State v. Pejsa, 75 Wn.App. 139, 146-9 (1994)

Police questioning of a barricaded person does not constitute custodial interrogation requiring Miranda warnings, see: State v. Mahoney, 80 Wn.App. 495 (1996), State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 825-30 (1999); II.

United States v. Mezzanatto, 130 L.Ed.2d 697 (1995)

Defendant and counsel meet with prosecutor in attempt to cooperate, prosecutor states that defendant must agree that any statements made during meeting could be used to impeach, defendant agrees, no deal is reached, defendant testifies and is impeached; held: Fed. R. Evid. 410 excluding statements made during plea negotiations may be waived; 7-2.

State v. Lozano, 76 Wn.App. 116 (1994)

Community Corrections Officer (CCO) arrests defendant, asks if she has anything, she produces heroin, trial court suppresses defendant's act of placing the heroin on desk, but admits heroin itself, defendant is convicted on circumstantial evidence of CCO testifying that no heroin was on desk before defendant came in, finding heroin after defendant occupied room; held: the act of pulling the heroin from pocket preceded Miranda warnings, defendant was under arrest, it was testimonial, thus was properly suppressed, State v. Dennis, 16 Wn.App. 417, 423-4 (1976), however Miranda exclusionary rule does not require exclusion of the fruits of a Miranda violation absent actual coercion, United States v. Patane, 159 L.Ed.2d 667 (2004), State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466, 473 (1988), Oregon v. Elstad, 84 L.Ed.2d 222 (1985), State v. Spotted Elk, 109 Wn.App. 253 (2001); 2-1, III.

State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876 (1995)

Juvenile sex offender, in state institution, while undergoing sex offender treatment, confesses to therapists to several offenses, is charged as an adult after he turns 18; held: admissions in therapy because defendant felt cooperation would lead to more lenient treatment or avoid reprisals is not the type of compulsion contemplated by Miranda, see: State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2003), State v. Everybodytalksabout, 161 Wn.2d 702 (2007); psychological compulsion is not enough to establish custody for Miranda purposes, State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596, 605-7 (1992); where counselors make express or implied assertions that exercise of Fifth Amendment privilege will result in imposition of a penalty, then statements must be suppressed,

Minnesota v. Murphy, 79 L.Ed.2d 409 (1984), State v. Post, supra, at 605, cf.: McKune v. Lile, 153 L.Ed.2d 47 (2002), remanded for trial court to determine if disclosures were compelled by threat of penalty and, if so, was taint attenuated, Nardone v. United States, 84 L.Ed. 307 (1939), Silverthorne Lumber Co. v. United States, 64 L.Ed.2d 319 (1920), or would evidence have been inevitably discovered, Nix v. Williams, 81 L.Ed.2d 377 (1984), see: State v. Richman, 85 Wn.App. 568 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Warness, 77 Wn.App. 636 (1995)

Police advise suspect, in suspect's home, that he is not under arrest and does not have to speak, suspect states he wants counsel, a month later, suspect is arrested, advised of Miranda rights, confesses; held: Fifth Amendment right to counsel cannot be invoked by a person who is not in custody, thus police need not honor defendant's pre-arrest assertion, and may interrogate, after re-advice, following arrest, distinguishing Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), Minnick v. Mississippi, 112 L.Ed.2d 489 (1990), cf.: State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 95-97 (2000), see: Maryland v. Shatzer, 539 U.S. 98, 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010); I.

State v. Sengxay, 80 Wn.App. 11, 14-15 (1995)

At CrR 3.5 hearing, trial court finds that defendant made a statement about getting an attorney, then reinitiated contact with police, thus statements are admissible; on appeal, Division II holds that because a suspect's right to consult with counsel is not a constitutional right required by the Fifth Amendment, Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362, 371 (1994), and since defendant "did not object on the record to the admission of his incriminatory statements, this issue was not preserved for appeal." State v. Scott, 110 Wn.2d 682, 688 (1988), but see: State v. Williams, 91 Wn.App. 344 (1998); III.

State v. Valdez, 82 Wn.App. 294 (1996)

At rape defendant's "preliminary hearing," (apparently before charges filed), defendant is asked by judge if he wants a lawyer, defendant nods, court appoints counsel, later defendant is advised of Miranda warnings by police, defendant waives, agrees to provide bodily fluid samples, police return, defendant provides a statement that he wrote containing admission of intercourse; held: once a defendant asserts the right to counsel in court prior to police initiating "communication," at 297, the Sixth Amendment requires that the request for counsel is imputed to all state actors and establishes a request to have counsel present during interrogation on the pending charge, Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), overruled by Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d. 955 (2009), State v. Royer, 58 Wn.App. 778 (1990), but see: State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462 (1989), Texas v. Cobb, 149 L.Ed.2d 321 (2001), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 818-20 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), Maryland v. Shatzer, 559 U.S. 98, 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010), see: State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 897-900 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012); III.

State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 523-29 (1996)

Following guilty plea, defendant is sentenced to sex offender treatment program, RCW 71.06, admits to numerous rapes in group therapy, upon revocation ISRB uses admissions to set minimum term; held: Fifth Amendment is inapplicable to probation proceedings where required answers are not used in a separate criminal proceeding, Minnesota v. Murphy, 79 L.Ed.2d 409 (1984), setting of minimum term is not part of a criminal prosecution, full panoply of rights do not apply, In re Whitesel, 111 Wn.2d 621, 630-1 (1988), In re Sinka, 92 Wn.2d 555, 566 (1979), see: Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 139 Wn.2d 16 (1999), McKune v. Lile, 153 L.Ed.2d 47 (2002), State v. Powell, 193 Wn.App. 112 (2016); affirms State v. King, 78 Wn.App. 391 (1995); 7-2.

State v. D.R., 84 Wn.App. 832 (1997)

14-year old is summoned to principal's office, told by plainclothed detective that he did not have to answer questions, but not advised of Miranda rights, questioned and makes inculpatory statement; held: considering respondent's youth, naturally coercive nature of school and principal's office environment, accusatory nature of the interrogation, State v. Everybodytalksabout, 161 Wn.2d 702 (2007), and fact that respondent was not told he was free to go, he was in custody, thus trial court erred in admitting statements absent Miranda warnings, as a 14-year old in respondent's position would have reasonably supposed his freedom of action was curtailed to a degree associated with formal arrest, Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984), State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35, 41 (1989), State v. Sargent, 111 Wn.2d 641, 649 (1988), State v. Daniels, 124 Wn.App. 830, 845-46 (2004), 160 Wn.2d 256, 266-67 (2007), see also: State v. Rosas-Miranda , 176 Wn.App. 773 (2013), but see: State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004), State v. Solomon, 114 Wn.App. 781 (2002), State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912, 927-29 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010); III.

State v. Medlock, 86 Wn.App. 89 (1997)

Defendant confesses to Washington murder to Canadian police, after advice of Charter Rights, detaining him for mental health evaluation, is charged in United States with murder, later confesses to Washington police, following Miranda warnings but before being informed he had been charged; held: foreign police are not required to comply with United States laws unless acting as agents of United States police as long as foreign police comply with foreign law, State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 692, 700 (1994), State v. Vickers, 24 Wn.App. 843 (1979), evidence seized by one law enforcement agency can be used by another, In re Pers. Restraint of Teddington, 116 Wn.2d 761, 774-5 (1991); under United States and Washington constitutions, police are not obliged to advise a defendant that formal charges have been filed as long as defendant is aware of his rights and waives them, Patterson v. Illinois, 101 L.Ed.2d 641 (1988); III.

State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529 (1997)

Advice that suspect has right to counsel and right to have that attorney present during questioning is sufficient to advise of right to counsel before and during questioning, at 579-83, State v. Koopman, 68 Wn.App. 514, 520 (1992), Duckworth v. Egan, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989), see: State v. Mayer, 184 Wn.2d 548 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Broadaway, 133 Wn.2d 118 (1997)

Review of findings of fact following CrR 3.5 hearings will be based upon substantial evidence (facts will be verities if unchallenged) rather than by independent review, State v. Hill, 123 Wn.2d 641 (1994), at , 129-31; test for voluntariness is whether, under totality of circumstances, the confession is coerced, Arizona v. Fulminante, 113 L.Ed.2d 302 (1991); if a promise is made, court must determine whether there is a causal relationship between the promise and the confession, at 131-33, State v. Hughes, 118 Wn.App. 713, 721-24 (2003), State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 403, 414-16 (2005), State v. L.U., 165 Wn.2d 95 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Dods, 87 Wn.App. 312 (1997)

Pursuant to a court order of community supervision, defendant takes polygraph without Miranda warnings, admits to sex offense and identifies victim, later confesses after Miranda warnings; held: initial confession, while inadmissible, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), was not coerced, thus second confession is admissible, Oregon v. Elstad, 84 L.Ed.2d 222 (1985), but see: Missouri v. Seibert, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004), State v. Hickman, 157 Wn.App. 767 (2010), fruits doctrine does not extend to suppress the testimony of a witness whose identity was discovered as the result of a statement taken without benefit of Miranda warnings, Michigan v. Tucker, 41 L.Ed.2d 182 (1974); II.

State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407 (1997)

After Miranda warnings, defendant requests counsel, police cease interrogation but do not contact a lawyer, defendant later waives Fifth Amendment right to counsel and confesses; held: pursuant to CrR 3.1(c)(2), police are obliged to make reasonable efforts to contact an attorney "at the earliest opportunity," or state must show why such efforts could not have been made, State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018), or that defendant knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily waived right to counsel, Bellevue v. Ohlson, 60 Wn.App. 485, 487 (1991), Seattle v. Wakenight, 24 Wn.App. 48, 49-50 (1979), State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012), distinguishing State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012), harmless here; II.

State v. Copeland, 89 Wn.App. 492, 499-502 (1998)

Defendant, arrested in Virginia, is advised of Miranda rights, states he will need an appointed lawyer as he can't afford one, police advise that when they return to Washington he will get a court-appointed lawyer, inquire if he wants one now or is willing to speak without one, defendant says he will speak, makes inconsistent statements; held: absent unambiguous invocation of right to counsel, police may further question to clarify equivocation, Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994), State v. Quillin, 49 Wn.App. 155, 159 (1987), State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982), State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258, 273-76 (2005), State v. Radcliffe, 164 Wn.2d 900 (2008), State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96 (2014), affirmed, on different grounds, 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015), see: State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 95-97 (2000), distinguishing State v. Chapman, 84 Wn.2d 373 (1974), State v. Grieb, 52 Wn.App. 573 (1988); II.

State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63-7 (1998)

Omnibus application states general nature of defense is "general denial and/or self-defense," four days before trial defense declares alibi with witnesses, court permits, as discovery sanction, state to impeach alibi witnesses with defense omnibus declaration; held: court may compel pretrial disclosure of general nature of defense because it must ultimately come to light, State v. Nelson, 14 Wn.App. 658, 664-7 (1975), CrR 4.7(b)(1), but because it does compel testimonial information, its use as substantive evidence violates Fifth Amendment, State v. Johnson, 27 Wn.App. 73- 75-6 (1980), but see: State v. Acosta, 34 Wn.App. 387, 391-2 (1983, rev'd on other grounds, 101 Wn.2d 612 (1984), State v. Dault, 19 Wn.App. 709, 716-18 (1978); witnesses cannot be impeached by statements of others for which they are not responsible and which have not been approved by them, State v. Williams, 79 Wn.App. 21, 27 (1995), thus substantive use of the omnibus order was improper; further, pleadings of an alternative nature are directed primarily to giving notice and lack the essential character of an admission, Williams, supra., at 29; fact that defendant signed the order does not make it admissible; II.

State v. O'Neill, 91 Wn.App. 978, 991-92 (1998)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, is not advised of Miranda rights, is solicited to and agrees to pay a bribe to the officer; held: in seeking bribe, officer was not acting in official capacity, exclusionary rule is inapplicable where officer is a participant in the crime; cf.: State v. Miller, 35 Wn.App. 567 (1983), State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35 (1989); I.

State v. Williams, 137 Wn.2d 746 (1999)

Failure of court to advise defendant of right to testify or not, CrR 3.5(b), is not a constitutional error, thus should not be considered for the first time on appeal, reversing State v. Williams, 91 Wn.App. 344 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792 (1999)

A statement of defendant to a third party that is self-serving and offered by the defense is inadmissible hearsay unless it meets some exception to the hearsay rule, at 824-25, State v. Bennett, 20 Wn.App. 783, 787 (1978), State v. Stubsjoen, 48 Wn.App. 139 (1987), State v. Johnson, 60 Wn.2d 21, 31 (1962); police have house surrounded, negotiating for defendant's surrender, question defendant without Miranda warnings, held: public safety exception: where an objectively reasonable need to protect police or public from immediate danger exists, Miranda requirement is inapplicable, at 825-30, New York v. Quarles, 81 L.Ed.2d 550 (1984), see also: State v. Pejsa, 75 Wn.App. 139, 146-49 (1994); 7-2.

State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 897-98 (1999)

Where defendant is read and understands his Miranda rights, is not read the waiver but volunteers information, trial court may find a knowing and intelligent waiver, State v. Gross, 23 Wn.App. 319, 324 (1979), State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986), Berghuis v. Thompkins, 560 U.S. 370, 176 L.Ed.2d 1098 (2010); I.

State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967, 972-77 (1999)

Court orders out-of-custody juvenile to obtain psychosexual evaluation with polygraph testing prior to disposition; held: although respondent was ordered to attend the evaluation, he was free to go, was not interrogated by a state agent, see: State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876, 885-86 (1995), thus need not have been advised of Miranda rights, respondent waived Fifth Amendment rights by failing to assert them, State v. N.B., 127 Wn.App. 776, 780-82 (2005), see: State v. Escoto, 108 Wn.2d 1, 6 (1987), Oregon v. Mathiasen, 50 L.Ed.2d 714 (1977), Minnesota v. Murphy, 79 L.Ed.2d 409 (1984), State v. Sargent, 111 Wn.2d 641 (1988); II.

State v. Parra, 96 Wn.App. 95, 99-100 (1999)

Defendant is advised of Miranda rights, refuses to sign waiver but states he's willing to talk to police and that he had once asked police for an attorney but police refused, detective tells him if he wants a lawyer, all he has to do is ask, defendant does not ask, confesses; held: refusal to sign waiver by itself is not dispositive, from totality of circumstances, trial court's finding that defendant waived was not clearly erroneous, State v. Athan, 160 Wn.2d 354, 379-81 (2007), distinguishing State v. Grieb, 52 Wn.App. 573 (1988); I.

State v. Nason, 96 Wn.App. 686, 692-95 (1999)

Defendant, in jail on property crimes, is interviewed by CPS investigator without Miranda warnings; held: CPS worker is a state agent for purposes of Miranda, harmless here; III.

Dickerson v. United States, 147 L.Ed.2d 405 (2000)

Miranda v. Arizona is a constitutional decision which cannot be overruled by Congress; 7-2.

State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 95-97 (2000)

Following initial arrest, suspect is advised and says he "might want to talk to a lawyer now," police do not clarify equivocal request, release suspect, re-arrest for same crime three weeks later, re-advise of Miranda warnings, defendant makes statement; held: when an accused requests counsel equivocally, police questioning must be strictly confined to clarifying the suspect's request, State v. Robtoy, 98 Wn.2d 30, 39 (1982), State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 665-66 (1996), but see: Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1984), State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258, 273-76 (2005), State v. Radcliffe, 164 Wn.2d 900 (2008), State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96 (2014), affirmed, on different grounds, 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015), State v. Horton, 195 Wn.App. 202 (2016), distinguishing Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981); however, where suspect has been out of custody for a substantial period of time and re-advised and questioned following waiver, statements are admissible, since accused is no longer under the inherently compelling pressures of continuous custody, Maryland v. Shatzer, 559 U.S. 98, 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010), except, perhaps, where a release is contrived, pretextual or in bad faith; II.

State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 573-76 (2000)

Arrestee is advised, invokes right to remain silent but not right to counsel, speaks to a friend, then indicates she would talk to police; held: "[a] person may be found to have waived the right if she 'freely and selectively responds to police questioning after initially asserting Miranda rights,'" State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230, 238 (1987), State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015), see: State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49, 58-61 (2010), cf.: State v. Reuben, 62 Wn.App. 620 (1991); II.

Texas v. Cobb, 149 L.Ed.2d 321 (2001)

Defendant is charged with burglary of a home, is assigned counsel, after arraignment defendant is advised of Miranda warnings in the absence of counsel, waives and confesses to murdering the residents of the house he had burglarized; held: Sixth Amendment right to counsel is offense-specific, McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158 (1991), police may interrogate regarding other offenses even if factually related unless the offenses have the same elements per Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed 36 (1932), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 818-20 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 897-900 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Erickson, 108 Wn.App. 732 (2001)

Defendant, represented by counsel, initiates discussion with police and makes statements; held: non-coerced, custodial, defendant-initiated statements made without police interrogation fall outside the general rule prohibiting custodial interrogation following invocation of Sixth Amendment right to counsel, distinguishing State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462 (1989), Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), overruled, Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009); III.

State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.App. 918 (2001)

Defendant testifies in co-defendant's severed trial as part of a plea bargain, after which the plea agreement is rescinded due to mutual misunderstanding, state offers defendant's prior testimony at defendant's trial; held: when plea negotiations lead to a plea agreement rescinded by mutual agreement, testimony provided pursuant to the failed agreement is inadmissible, ER 410, see: Hutto v. Ross, 50 L.Ed.2d 194 (1976); III.

State v. Spotted Elk, 109 Wn.App. 253 (2001)

Defendant is arrested on warrant, arresting officer asks "do you have anything on your person I need to be concerned about?," defendant produces heroin; held: because officer's question was not solely for purpose of officer or public safety, State v. Lane, 77 Wn.2d 860, 861-63 (1970), nor are circumstances sufficiently urgent to warrant an immediate question, State v. Richmond, 65 Wn.App. 541, 545-46 (1992), statement was inadmissible and testimonial act of handing over heroin is suppressed, State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466, 471-73 (1988), but see: United States v. Patane, 159 L.Ed.2d 667 (2004); III.

State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002)

Police advise DUI suspects that they have a right to talk to an attorney before answering questions, trial courts suppress breath tests; held: CrRLJ 3.1, which requires that police advise arrestees of right to counsel as soon as practicable, was violated because advice here provided that the right to a lawyer accrues not when suspect is arrested but rather when arrestee is questioned, State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436 (1980), affirmed on remand, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980), Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991), State ex rel. Juckett v. Evergreen District Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984); because no defendant here alleged that, but for the improper advice he or she would have requested counsel before submitting to breath test, error was harmless, reversing State v. Templeton, 107 Wn.App. 141 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Cunningham, 116 Wn.App. 219, 226-30 (2003)

Suspect runs from stolen car, defendant is stopped, gives false name, claims he's visiting someone which is proved false, cuffed, held 45 minutes until identified by the officer who stopped the stolen vehicle, court admits false name and explanation for being in area; held: police lacked probable cause but detention was not a custodial arrest, "unfortunate" 45 minute detention was reasonable due to suspect's lack of cooperation in not identifying himself, thus Miranda warnings were not required, State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992), Oregon v. Mathiason, 50 L.Ed.2d 714 (1977); III.

State v. Rehn, 117 Wn.App. 142 (2003)

Vehicle stopped for infraction, driver arrested for suspended license, search of driver discloses bullet, officer has passengers leave vehicle to search it, asks if they have weapons or anything else they shouldn't have, defendant-passenger says mushrooms under dash; held: initial stop of car was not a seizure of defendant-passenger, Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653, 658 (2000), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208, 222 (1999), rather it constituted an incidental citizen encounter; asking defendant to leave car was not a seizure but a step taken to facilitate the vehicle search incident to driver's arrest; even if he was seized, the discovery of the bullet was an articulable concern justifying a legitimate purpose in exerting some control over the passengers; while a reasonable person would have felt detained, it was not to a degree associated with formal arrest, State v. Solomon, 114 Wn.App. 781 (2002), thus Miranda warnings were not required prior to inquiring of passenger whether he had something he shouldn't have, but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); 2-1, III.

State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668 (2003)

Suspect, after receiving Miranda warnings, answers some questions then does not respond to a question, officer stops questioning, turns suspect over to another officer who questions, defendant confesses; held: while silence in the face of repeated questioning over a period of time may constitute an invocation of the right to remain silent, here failure to respond to a single question was not a clear and unequivocal invocation, trial court did not abuse discretion in admitting suspect's statement, State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 750-51 (2012), cf.: State v. I.B., 187 Wn.App. 315 (2015); I.

Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004)

After indictment, police go to defendant's home to arrest, question him absent Miranda warnings, arrest defendant, at jail defendant is advised and reiterates prior confession; held: after charging, police may not deliberately elicit statements from a defendant in the absence or waiver of Sixth Amendment right to counsel, Massiah v. United States, 12 L.Ed.2d 246 (1964), Patterson v. Illinois, 101 L.Ed.2d 261 (1988), State v. Visitacion, 55 Wn.App. 166 (1989); remanded for 8th Circuit to consider whether Sixth Amendment requires suppression of jailhouse statements on the ground that they were the fruits of previous questioning conducted in violation of the "Sixth Amendment deliberate elicitation standard," at 1023, see: Oregon v. Elstad, 105 L.Ed.2d 1285 (1985); 9-0.

Hiibel v. Sixth Judicial Dist. Ct., 159 L.Ed.2d 292 (2004)

State statute which requires one who has been lawfully detained on reasonable suspicion to identify himself does not violate Fifth Amendment, see also: State v. Stratton, 139 Wn.App. 511, 515-16 (2007); 5-4.

Missouri v. Seibert, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004)

Police strategically question arrestee without Miranda warnings and, when a confession is obtained, then advise and obtain same confession; held: deliberately "draining the substance out of Miranda," at 658, by a two-step process to obtain an unwarned confession prior to warnings is impermissible, thus both statements must be suppressed, State v. Hickman, 157 Wn.App. 767 (2010), see: State v. Lavaris, 99 Wn.2d 851 (1983), cf.: State v. Allenby, 68 Wn.App. 657 (1992), State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 609-12 (1993), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007), distinguishing Oregon v. Elstad, 84 L.Ed.2d 222 (1985); 5-4.

United States v. Patane, 159 L.Ed.2d 667 (2004)

Police begin to advise arrestee who states that he knows his rights, police do not complete warning, ask about illegal gun which defendant surrenders, trial court suppresses; held: failure to advise of Miranda rights does not preclude admissibility into evidence of the fruits of an arrestee's unwarned but voluntary statements, State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466 (1988), State v. Putman, 65 Wn.App. 606 (1992), State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 55-62 (1994), State v. Lozano, 76 Wn.App. 116 (1994), State v. Spotted Elk, 109 Wn.App. 253 (2001), but see: State v. Moreno, 21 Wn.App. 430 (1978); 5-4.

State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004)

Park security guards, in uniform carrying radio, handcuffs, baton, observe juveniles smoking marijuana, ask whose pipe it is, respondent says it's her pipe, officers call police who arrest; held: guards are state agents for purposes of Miranda, overruling sub silentio, in part, State v. Wolfer, 39 Wn.App. 287 (1984), see: State v. Valpredo, 75 Wn.2d 368 (1969), Mathis v. United States, 20 L.Ed.2d 381 (1968); guard's question was brief, no physical detention occurred, reasonable person, even a 16 year old, would not reasonably believed she was detained to a degree analogous to arrest, Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984), State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007), see: State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35 (1989), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 909-12 (2009); reverses State v. Heritage, 114 Wn.App. 591 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Nowinski, 124 Wn.App. 617 (2004)

During interrogation, defendant tells police he wants to make a deal, police bring in a prosecutor who informs defendant that he would be making filing decision, no deals would be made that night but that he would consider information and talk to his boss, defendant confesses; held: presence of prosecutor invokes possibility of ER 410 applicability, excluding plea negotiations from evidence; trial court must determine whether accused exhibits an actual subjective expectation to negotiate a plea and whether accused's expectation was reasonable under totality of circumstances, United States v. Robertson, 582 F.2d 1356 (5th Cir. 1978), State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421, 434 (1989); defendant's expressed desire to make a deal, police calling in prosecutor who did not disabuse him of his expectation that a deal would be offered makes it objectively reasonable for defendant to believe he was engaged in plea negotiations, thus statements should have been suppressed, State v. Hatch, 165 Wn.App. 212 (2011); I.

State v. Daniels, 124 Wn.App. 830, 845-46 (2004), 160 Wn.2d 256, 266-67 (2007) 17-year old goes to precinct with father, police question her for 1½ hours, ask questions knowing they could provoke an incriminating response, decline to allow father to remain present, all prior to Miranda warnings, defendant confesses; held: "[t]hese circumstances sufficiently demonstrate that Miranda applied," but see: State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35 (1989), State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992), Stansbury v. California, 128 L.Ed.2d 293 (1994), State v. D.R., 84 Wn.App. 832 (1997), State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912, 927-28 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010), cf.: State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992); II.

State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 403, 414-16 (2005)

Police tell defendant that "whoever talks first will get the best deal," defendant is advised, consults with counsel, confesses, court admits statement as voluntary; held: trial court's conclusion that there was no causal relationship between the promise and the confession, State v. Broadaway, 133 Wn.2d 118, 131-33 (1997), State v. L.U., 165 Wn.2d 95 (2008), is supported by the record; 2-1, III.

Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 434-35 (2005)

Police need not specifically advise suspect that he had a "constitutional right to stop answering questions at any time until he talked to a lawyer," where he is advised of the four Miranda rights, distinguishing Duckworth v. Eagan, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989), see: State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 582 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258, 273-76 (2005)

After advice of rights, defendant states that he does not want to say anything that would make him look guilty or incriminate him, but continues to speak with police for several hours and signs a confession; held: defendant's statements were an equivocal discussion of his right to remain silent; the invocation of the right to remain silent must be clear and unequivocal, whether through silence or articulation, in order to be effectual and, if equivocal, police are under no obligation to stop and ask clarifying questions, Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1984), see: State v. Radcliffe, 164 Wn.2d 900 (2008), State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96 (2014), affirmed, on different grounds, 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015); I.

State v. France, 129 Wn.App. 907 (2005)

Police, knowing defendant, knowing there was a court order prohibiting him from contacting complainant and knowing that complainant had been assaulted by defendant a short while before, stop defendant, tell him he could not leave until the matter was cleared up, question absent Miranda warnings, defendant acknowledges violating order; held: police had probable cause to arrest but delayed doing so to avoid a Miranda warning, see: State v. Creach, 77 Wn.2d 194, 198 (1969), State v. Lewis, 32 Wn.App. 13 (1982), but see: State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35

(1989), State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992), detention was open ended, no reasonable person in defendant's position would have felt that he was free to leave until he satisfactorily explained the situation, but see: State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127 (1992), State v. Cunningham, 116 Wn.App. 219, 226-30 (2003), State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004), Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984), cf.: State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 114-16 (2007), State v. Rosas-Miranda , 176 Wn.App. 773 (2013), thus statements should have been suppressed, harmless here; II.

State v. Godsey, 131 Wn.App. 278, 284-86 (2006)

Following arrest, defendant tells officer "[y]ou are going to pay for this," deputy asks if that's a threat, defendant responds "I know where you…live;" defendant is taken to hospital where medical personnel ask about drug use, defendant acknowledges using drugs; held: statement to officer was not interrogation, not designed to solicit an incriminating response, but merely a response to a request to explain or clarify, thus is a continuation of defendant's previously volunteered statement; response to medical personnel was within physician-patient privilege, law officers present "were effectively hospital agents," admission of those statements to support possession of drug paraphernalia charge was error, State v. Gibson, 3 Wn.App. 596, 598-600 (1970); III.

State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 218-22 (2006)

Inmate reports defendant's confession to police, offers to get more information, is told not to try although detective agrees to present information already provided to prosecutor for possible leniency, inmate obtains more information from defendant which is used at trial; held: while proof that government "must have known" that agent was likely to obtain incriminating statements from accused in absence of counsel may suffice to show a Sixth Amendment violation, United States v. Henry, 65 L.Ed.2d 115, 122 (1980), where witness is told not to seek out information and is promised nothing, the statements are admissible, even where the witness did eventually receive a plea deal, State v. Manthie, 39 Wn.App. 815 (1985), State v. Brooks, 38 Wn.App. 256 (1984); I.

State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 428-29 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008)

Police call defendant on cell phone, defendant says he would not make any other statements without a lawyer, police continue to question defendant who makes statements; held: Fifth Amendment right to counsel exists solely to guard against coercive, and therefore unreliable, confessions obtained during in-custody interrogation, State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462, 478 (1989), see: State v. Erickson, 108 Wn.App. 732 (2001), thus police can continue questioning after invocation of right to counsel if suspect is not in-custody, see: State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 95-97 (2000); III.

Sanchez-Llamas v. Oregon, 165 L.Ed.2d 557 (2006)

Suppression is not a remedy for failure to advise an alien arrestee of his right to contact consular officials, Vienna Convention on Consular Relations art. 36(1)(b), State v. Martinez-Lazo, 100 Wn.App. 869, 872-76 (2000), State v. Jamison, 105 Wn.App. 572, 577-84 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 784-87 (2006)

Military police advise defendant that she can have a military lawyer at no expense; held: because a military lawyer is a suited to the goal of negating the coercive atmosphere of interrogation as a civilian lawyer, the advice is adequate, see: State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 582 (1997); II.

State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366, 372-74 (2006)

While a CrR 3.5 hearing is required for a jury trial, State v. Lopez, 67 Wn.2d 185, 188-89 (1965), Jackson v. Denno, 12 L.Ed.2d 108 (1964), where respondent is tried by the court the 3.5 hearing may be incorporated into the fact-finding hearing, distinguishing State v. Tim S., 41 Wn.App. 60 (1985); III.

State v. Sanchez-Guillen, 135 Wn.App. 636, 645-46 (2006)

Defense offers defendant's out-of-court statement at trial to show that the shooting was an accident as statement against interest and state of mind exception to hearsay rule, see: State v. King, 71 Wn.2d 573, 577 (1967); held: statement against interest exception, ER 804(b)(3), cannot apply to a criminal defendant's statement, as the defendant is not unavailable by mere assertion of a privilege, ER 804(a)(6), cf.: State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 287 (1984); state of mind exception applies to state of mind at the time the statement was made, not the earlier time the statement describes, State v. Ammlung, 31 Wn.App. 696, 703 (1982); III.

State v. Everybodytalksabout, 161 Wn.2d 702 (2007)

Following conviction, probation officer interviews defendant in jail for presentence report, asks for defendant's version of the events, defendant admits he assisted in a robbery but would not comment further, convicted reversed, probation officer testifies at retrial; held: because statements made during a presentence interview were used for the adversarial purpose of convicting defendant in a subsequent trial, the presentence interview was a critical stage of the proceedings, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359, 371-72 (1981), probation officer stimulating conversations about the crime is a deliberate eliciting of incriminating statements, violating defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel; reverses State v. Everybodytalksabout, 131 Wn.App. 227 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Radcliffe, 164 Wn.2d 900 (2008)

An equivocal reference to counsel following Miranda warnings does not oblige the police to stop questioning or to clarify the reference to counsel under Fifth Amendment, Davis v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994), State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258, 275 (2005), State v. Copeland, 89 Wn.App. 492 (1998), State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96 (2014), affirmed, on different grounds, 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015); affirms State v. Radcliffe, 139 Wn.App. 214 (2007), State v. Gasteazora-Paniagua, 173 Wn.App. 751 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357, 371 n.5 (2007)

Where trial court rules that a defendant's statement is admissible as impeachment evidence and defendant does not testify, defense may still challenge the ruling on appeal even though the statement was not offered for any purpose, see: State v. Greve, 67 Wn.App. 166, 169 (1992); I.

State v. Wilson, 144 Wn.App. 166, 182-85 (2008)

Defendant is arrested for assault, is advised, makes some statements, mentions a lawyer, police terminate interview, later victim dies, police hand defendant a "death notification, defendant states that she didn't mean to kill him, trial court admits statement; held: handing defendant a "death notification" after invocation of the right to counsel was reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response, Rhode Island v. Innis, 64 L.Ed.2d 297 (1980), police lack of intent to elicit an incriminating statement is not the test, thus statement should have been suppressed; III.

State v. Unga, 165 Wn.2d 95 (2008)

Detective promises juvenile that if he confesses to writing graffiti in a car, he won't be charged with the graffiti, respondent confesses, is convicted of stealing the car; held: the fact that a promise is made (and police keep the promise) does not render a confession to another crime involuntary, totality of circumstances establishes the the statement was voluntary and thus admissible; affirms State v. L.U., 137 Wn.App. 410 (2007); 9-0.

State v. S.A.W., 147 Wn.App. 832 (2008)

In bench trial, where an issue of voluntariness is raised, court must hold a CrR 3.5 hearing; defendant does not waive a challenge to the voluntariness of a statement by not demanding a hearing; III.

Kansas v. Ventris, 173 L.Ed.2d 801 (2009)

Police place informant in represented, charged defendant's cell who elicits a confession, trial court allows cellmate to impeach defendant's testimony; held: statement obtained in violation of Sixth Amendment is admissible to impeach, Harris v. N.Y., 28 L.Ed.2d 1 (1971), State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 180 (1980); 7-2.

Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009)

Where defendant is arraigned and requests or is supplied counsel automatically, courts must not presume that a subsequent waiver of counsel preceeding interrogation is invalid, overruling Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986); 5-4.

State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912, 927-29 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010)

Police interview 14-year old respondent in victim's residence with respondent's mother present, respondent declines to answer some questions, is not told he may leave, is not given Miranda warnings, trial court admits statements; held: where an interview is not "obviously accusatory" in nature, respondent is in a private residence, reasonable person would not believe he is in custody, State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004), cf.: State v. D.R., 84 Wn.App. 832 (1997), State v. Daniels, 124 Wn.App. 830, 845-46 (2004), 160 Wn.2d 256, 266-67 (2007); I.

State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244, 255-57 (2009)

Police arrest driver for suspended license, learn that she is protected party, ask her the name of her passenger who is the respondent for no contact order, arrest passenger, trial court suppresses; held: a person does not have standing to raise a violation of another's Fifth Amendment rights; even if passenger had standing, question to driver, while custodial, was not "reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response from the suspect," State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.2d 898, 903-04 (1986), questions focused on identity of passenger, not related to suspected criminal activity by driver; I.

State v. Denney, 152 Wn.App. 665 (2009)

Defendant is arrested for drug offense, invokes right to remain silent, during booking jail personnel ask about recent drug use which defendant acknowledges, trial court admits defendant's admission; held: while routine booking questions may not be interrogation for Miranda analysis, Pennsylvania v. Muniz, 110 L.Ed.2d 528 (1990), State v. Walton, 64 Wn.App. 410 (1992), if the evidence establishes that the questioning party should have known that the question was reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response, the response is not admissible, State v. Willis, 64 Wn.App. 634, 637 (1992), State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987), but see: State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015); subjective intent of the questioning agent is relevant but not conclusive, relationship between the question and the crime suspected is highly relevant; II.

Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S. 50, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010)

Advice prior to questioning that suspect has the right to consult with a lawyer before answering questions and that he can invoke this right at any time during interview is adequate to advise suspect that he had the right to the presence of a lawyer during questioning, California v. Prysock, 453 U.S. 355, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981); 7-2.

Maryland v. Shatzer, 559 U.S. 98, 175 L.Ed.2d 1045 (2010)

Defendant, in prison, is advised by police investigating a separate crime, invokes the right to counsel, two years later police, still investigating the crime, readvise defendant in prison, he waives right to counsel and confesses; held: a break in "Miranda custody" lasting more than two weeks between readvice and waiver does not oblige suppression, distinguishing Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), see: State v. Valdez, 82 Wn.App. 294 (1996), State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407 (1997), State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 95-97 (2000); when a prisoner is interrogated and then released into general population and then reinterrogated, the release is a break in custody; 9-0.

Berghuis v. Thompkins, 560 U.S. 370, 176 L.Ed.2d 1098 (2010)

Defendant is advised, apparently understands the Miranda warnings, is not asked if he waives, does not invoke right to remain silent or right to counsel, is questioned for three hours, is largely silent, answering a few limited verbal responses, finally confesses; held: a suspect who has received and understood Miranda warnings and has not invoked his rights waives his rights by making an uncoerced statement; police are not obliged to obtain an express waiver, State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 897-98 (1999), but see: State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423, 431-36 (1997); 5-4.

State v. Dow, 168 Wn.2d 243 (2010)

RCW 10.58.035, which directs that where a victim is dead or incompetent a defendant's statement is admissible "if there is substantial independent evidence that would tend to establish the trustworthiness of the confession" is constitutional, but deals only with admissibility and not sufficiency, thus there still must be sufficient evidence independent of a confession to support a conviction; 9-0.

State v. Campos-Cerna, 154 Wn.App. 702 (2010)

17-year old murder defendant challenges inclusion of juvenile warning in Miranda rights ("anything you say … can also be used against you in an adult court…if the juvenile court decides that you are to be tried as an adult") because juvenile court statutorily lacks authority to try defendant for murder; held: juvenile warning does not rule out the possibility that juvenile court's jurisdiction would automatically be declined, advisement was adequate, see also: State v. Spearman, 59 Wn.App. 323, 325 (1990); II.

State v. Hickman, 157 Wn.App. 767 (2010)

Sex offender is called into sheriff's office to register, detective informs him that there would be a two-part interview consisting of an "administrative interview to register him" followed by Miranda warnings and a criminal investigation for suspected failure to register, defendant makes statements at both interviews, which trial court admits; held: where there is objective evidence to support an inference that a two-step interrogation procedure is used to undermine the Miranda warning, then the post-Miranda statements may not be admitted regardless of interrogator's subjective intent, Missouri v. Seibert, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004); II.

State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49, 58-61 (2010)

Police arrest juvenile, advise, says he does not wish to talk, two hours later police readvise, respondent confesses to a different crime; held: when a defendant invokes his right to remain silent, police must "scrupulously honor" defendant's request by ceasing interrogation, but may resume interrogation after a significant time has passed, State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015), and by readvising, Michigan v. Mosley, 423 U.S. 96, 104-06, 46 L.Ed.2d 313 (1975), even if the scope of second interrogation is the original crime, State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 128-35 (2016), see: State v. Reuben, 62 Wn.App. 620, 626 (1991), State v. Robbins, 15 Wn.App. 108, 110 (1976); III.

Bobby v. Dixon, 565 U.S. 565, 132 S.Ct. 26, 181 L.Ed.2d 328 (2011)

Defendant, in chance encounter with police, is advised, invokes right to counsel, leaves, five days later police speak to him again, do not advise in hopes he won't invoke, police tell him he better talk before co-defendant does, he makes inculpatory statements, is arrested, advised, waives, confesses; held: questioning at second encounter was proper as defendant was not under arrest even though he had invoked right to counsel previously, telling him co-defendant may confess and make a deal does not make confession involuntary as it is a police tactic, and, at least on habeas review, "[b]ecause no holding of this Court suggests, much less clearly establishes, that police may not urge a suspect to confess before another suspect does so, the Sixth Circuit had no authority to issue the writ on this ground;" "[i]n this case, no two-step interrogation technique of the type that concerned the Court in [Missouri v.] Seibert, [542 U.S. 600, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004)] undermined the Miranda warnings Dixon received. In Seibert, the suspect's first, unwarned interrogation left "little, if anything, of incriminating potential left unsaid," making it "unnatural" not to "repeat at the second stage what had been said before." 542 U.S., at 616–617, 124 S.Ct. 2601 (plurality opinion). But in this case Dixon steadfastly maintained during his first, unwarned interrogation that he had "[n]othing whatsoever" to do with Hammer's disappearance. App. to Pet. for Cert. 186a. Thus, unlike in Seibert, there is no concern here that police gave Dixon Miranda warnings and then led him to repeat an earlier murder confession, because there was no earlier confession to repeat," per curiam.

State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App. 654 (2011)

Detective testifies that during interrogation he told defendant he didn't believe his initial statements following which defendant confessed; held: police statement made during an interview regarding officer's belief is an interrogation tactic, not opinion testimony, State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753 (2000), State v. Smiley, 195 Wn.App. 185 (2016), see: State v. Putman, 21 Wn.App.2d 36 (2022); II.

State v. Curtiss, 161 Wn.App. 673, 690-91 (2011)

Police, investigating a homicide, inform defendant that statute of limitations for rendering criminal assistance has run, defendant makes inculpatory statement, seeks suppression for deception; held: accurate statement that does not override independent decision-making process or coerce defendant into giving a statement does not change voluntary character of statement, State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591, 598-99 (1989); II.

State v. Abdulle, 174 Wn.2d 411 (2012)

Two police officers are present when defendant is advised of Miranda warnings, at CrR 3.5 hearing only one is called to testify, says defendant asked for a lawyer but then agreed to speak after being given water, defendant then confesses, defendant testifies that he asked for a lawyer and did not agree to speak, state does not call second officer, Court of Appeals holds, in unpublished decision, that state failed to present sufficient evidence of waiver; held: state is not obliged to call a second officer to corroborate a waiver when both were present, overruling State v. Davis, 73 Wn.2d 271, 287-88 (1968), although a trial court may draw a negative inference from second officer's absence; 5-4.

State v. Hatch, 165 Wn.App. 212 (2011)

Defense sends psychological evaluation to prosecutor to negotiate a plea which isn't entered, at trial state calls evaluator who testifies to defendant's confession during the evaluation; held: it was objectively reasonable for defendant to expect that his statements made to the psychologist would be treated as made in connection with plea negotiations and thus are not admissible, ER 410, State v. Nowinski, 124 Wn.App. 617 (2004), State v. Jollo, 38 Wn.App. 469 (1984), harmless here; I.

State v. Miller, 165 Wn.App. 385 (2011)

Failure of police to advise a juvenile of the juvenile-specific language is not grounds for suppression, State v. Prater, 77 Wn.2d 526 (1970), State v. Luoma, 88 Wn.2d 28 (1977); III.

State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820 (2012)

Defendant, suspected of violent crimes, is advised and questioned in hospital while on pain medications, makes statement, is arrested weeks later, statement is admitted; held: defendant's presence in the hospital was not custodial, State v. Kelter, 71 Wn.2d 52, 54 (1967); trial court's determination that drugs did not impair defendant's ability to waive is affirmed; III.

State v. Nysta, 168 Wn.App. 30, 37-43 (2012)

Arrested defendant is advised, waives, answers questions, police then offer polygraph, defendant states "I gotta talk to my lawyer," police stop discussing polygraph but continue questioning, trial court finds defendant's request for counsel applied only to polygraph and not to interrogation; held: absent conditional or obfuscuting language such as "maybe," "perhaps," "if," and "or," request for counsel is unambiguous, no authority supports trial court's "elaborate contextual interpretation," thus statement should have been suppressed, State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012), cf.: State v. Gasteazoro-Paniagua, 173 Wn.App. 751 (2013), but harmless as it repeated what defendant said before invocation; I.

State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 781-97 (2012)

Trial court excludes testimony from defense experts regarding false confessions and coercive police interrogation methods and undercover police practices; held: absent evidence of a meaningful correlation between the specific interrogation methods and false confessions, trial court did not abuse its discretion; absent testimony that an undercover operation that failed to meet professional standards resulted in a "high likelihood" that the confessions were false or unreliable, trial court did not abuse discretion; excluding evidence while still permitting defense to present evidence of the circumstances surrounding the confessions does not deprive defendants of right to present a defense, distinguishing Crave v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 683, 90 L.Ed.2d 636 (1986); I.

State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012)

Police arrest defendant, question him about one crime then accuse him of murder, defendant states, "[i]f you're…trying to say I'm doing it I need a lawyer. I'm gonna need a lawyer because it wasn't me," defendant is booked, jail policy is to call public defender home number after hours if a lawyer is demanded, five hours later defendant asks to speak with detectives again, makes statements that are used at murder trial, trial court finds that statement was equivocal and posted business number for public defender plus use of phone was adequate; held: "gonna need a lawyer" is an unequivocal request for counsel, State v. Nysta, 168 Wn.App. 30, 40-42 (2012), conditional language did not render request for counsel equivocal, police were obliged to make reasonable efforts to put defendant in touch with a lawyer, CrR 3.1(c)(2), mere access to a phone is not reasonable, Tacoma v. Myhre, 32 Wn.App. 661, 664 (1982), cf.: Seattle v. Wakenight, 24 Wn.App. 48, 51 (1979), Seattle v. Carpenito, 32 Wn.App. 80-9, 813 (1982), State v. Gasteazoro-Paniagua, 173 Wn.App. 751 (2013); II.

State v. Piatnitsky*,* 170 Wn.App. 195 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 407 (2014)

Following arrest, defendant is advised, agrees to give a taped statement, is re-advised on tape, defendant states, "I'm not ready to do this, man," police remind him that he said he wanted to talk on tape, defendant replies, "I just write it down… I can't do this… I don't want to talk right now," police continue to advise, ask defendant if he would rather give a written statement, turn off tape recorder and take statement; held: standard for determining invocation of Fifth Amendment right to counsel and Fifth Amendment right to remain silent is the same, Berghuis v. Thompkins, 560 U.S. 370, 176 L.Ed.2d 1098 (2010); an assertion of the right is unequivocal where a reasonable police officer in the circumstance would understand it to be such an assertion, Davis v. United States, 512 U.S. 452, 459, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994), see: State v. I.B., 187 Wn.App. 315 (2015); invocation for limited purposes only does not require suppression where police honor defendant's limited invocation, Connecticut v. Barrett, 479 U.S. 523, 529, 93 L.Ed.2d 920 (1987); when a defendant appears to invoke, court may not consider subsequent responses to continued police questioning in determining if the invocation was equivocal, Smith v. Illinois, 469 U.S. 91, 97-98, 83 L.Ed.2d 488 (1984); here, trial court's determination that defendant's invocation of right to remain silent was equivocal is supported by the record; 2-1, I; 5-4.

State v. Trochez-Jimenez*,* 173 Wn.App. 423 (2013), 180 Wn.2d 445 (2014)

Defendant is arrested in Canada for illegal entry, Canadian police advise him of his right under the Canadian Charter to counsel, defendant requests counsel, is not questioned, is not provided counsel, after booking U.S. police advise him of his Miranda rights, defendant confesses to shooting and killing victim in the U.S.; held: advise of right to counsel by foreign officials in a foreign country regarding a foreign offense and invocation of the right to counsel does not invoke the Fifth Amendment right to counsel, distinguishing Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477, 484-85, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), Arizona v. Roberson, 486 U.S. 675, 677, 100 L.Ed.2d 704 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Gasteazoro-Paniagua*,* 173 Wn.App. 751 (2013)

"I mean I guess I'll just have to talk to a lawyer about it" is not an unequivocal request for a lawyer, distinguishing State v. Nysta, 168 Wn.App. 30, 40-41 (2012), State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533 (2012), as it is not in the present tense and did not refer to "his lawyer or any lawyer in particular," "guess" indicates doubt; II.

State v. Gauthier, 174 Wn.App. 257 (2013)

Comment on defendant's refusal to consent to a DNA swab as evidence of guilt or impeachment violates defendant's right to refuse to consent to a warrantless search, manifest constitutional error; I.

State v. Rosas-Miranda , 176 Wn.App. 773 (2013)

Uniformed officers knock on door, ask for permission to search, inform defendant she may refuse, revoke or limit consent, defendant agrees, one officer sits with defendant in living room, other officers search for 90 minutes, defendant is not told the stay in living room, after police find drugs defendant confesses, on appeal argues she was under arrest and thus should have been advised; held: factors relevant to whether interrogation creates a "police-dominated atmosphere: (1) number of armed officers, (2) whether suspect was restrained by force or threats, (3) whether suspect was isolated from others, (4) whether suspect was informed she was free to leave or terminate the interview, and context in which such statements were made, see: State v. Dennis, 16 Wn.App. 417 (1976); here, while there were numerous officers, only 3 approached the door and requested permission to search, only one questioned defendant, guns were not drawn, no force or restraint, defendant was present with her children and brother, defendant was not informed she was free to leave or terminate interview but was informed she could revoke consent to search, thus reasonable person would not believe that her freedom was curtailed to a degree associated with formal arrest; II.

Pers. Restraint of Cross, 180 Wn.2d 664, 682-90 (2014)

After advice of rights defendant states "I don't want to talk about it," detective says "[s]ometimes we do things we normally wouldn't do, and we feel bad about it later," defendant makes incriminating statements in direct response; held: police did not scrupulously honor unequivocal invocation, engaging in the functional equivalent of interrogation, Davis v. United States, 512 U.S. 452, 459–62, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994), State v. Gutierrez, 50 Wash.App. 583, 589 (1988), defendant's response was foreseeable, Rhode Island v. Innis, 446 U.S. 291, 301–02, 164 L.Ed.2d 297 (1980), and responsive to the officer's statement, defendant's response was not a waiver, harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 191-93 (2014)

Defendant is arrested, gives a false name, is advised and says he understands and is willing to talk, 3 ½ hours later at jail corrections officer asks him about his name and defendant admits he lied, argues he should have been re-advised because Miranda warnings were "stale" and change of personnel required fresh warnings; held: generally, where defendant has been advised it is unnecessary to repeat prior to the taking of each separate in-custody statement, State v. Duhaime, 29 Wn.App. 842, 852 (1981), Wyrick v. Fields, 74 L.Ed.2d 214 (1982); I.

State v. Mayer, 184 Wn.2d 548 (2015)

Defendant is advised, when asked if he understands he asks what would happen if he asked for a lawyer, sheriff states that if he were arrested and charged the court would appoint one, defendant states he understands and confesses; held: attempt to clarify was confusing and conflicted with prior advice that defendant could have a lawyer prior to questioning and only if charged and jailed, inconsistent with defendant's right to an attorney at any time; conditioning the right to a lawyer on future events is inadequate, distinguishing California v. Prysock, 453 U.S. 355, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981), Duckworth v. Eagan, 492 U.S. 195, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989), harmless here; 9-0.

State v. I.B., 187 Wn.App. 315 (2015)

Respondent is advised of Miranda rights, asked if he wants to make a statement, shakes his head side to side, police continue interrogating, trial court suppresses; held: non-verbal conduct can be unequivocal, police understood shaking head side to side means no, respondent's invocation was not honored by police thus trial court is affirmed, cf.: State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668, 672 (2003); III.

State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386 (2015)

Defendant is arrested in Yakima for Grays Harbor County homicide, is advised, states he does not wish to speak, five hours later Grays Harbor County officers ask defendant if he was advised and remembered the rights, defendant confirms he did understand, is questioned and makes statements, during drive defendant and officers converse and defendant makes other statements, at arrive next day he is readvised and gives a written statement; held: once a defendant invokes his right to remain silent interrogation must cease, but police may resume questioning where subsequent waiver was knowing and voluntary, State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230, 238 (1987), State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 41, 44-45 (1982), see: State v. Reuben, 62 Wn.App. 620 (1991), State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 573-76 (2000), State v. Denney, 152 Wn.App. 665 (2009), State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49, 58-61 (2010), but see: Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), Pers. Restraint of Cross, 180 Wn.2d 664, 682-90 (2014), if there was a "significant passage of time" before police reinitiate interrogation, if defendant has not requested counsel, State v. Cornethan, 38 Wn.App. 231 (1984); police need not fully readvise of Miranda warnings, but see: State v. Boggs, 16 Wn.App. 682 (1977); II.

State v. Rhoden, 189 Wn.App. 193 (2015)

Police serve search warrant, handcuff all occupants, without advising ask if there are drugs present, defendant says in his bedroom, is then advised and says the same thing; held: 2-step analysis, United States v. Williams, 435 F.3d 1148 (9th Cir. 2006), Missouri v. Seibert, 542 U.S. 600, 159 L.Ed.2d 643 (2004), State v. Hickman, 157 Wn.App. 767 (2010), (1) objective evidence demonstrated a deliberate use of two-step interrogation procedure to undermine Miranda warnings based upon timing, setting and completeness of the pre-warning interrogation, continuity of police personnel, overlapping content of pre- and post-warning statements, (2) no curative measures such as a significant break in time and place or an additional warning that the pre-Miranda statements could not be used at a trial, thus statement must be suppressed; II.

State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016)

Where jail booking procedures require that an arrestee be asked about gang membership to avoid housing with rivals the admissions are not routine booking questions, Pennsylvania v. Muniz, 110 L.Ed.2d 528 (1990), but are involuntary, State v. Mancilla, 197 Wn,.App. 631 (2017), State v. A.M., 194 Wn.2d 33 (2019); reverses, in part, State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Goss, 186 Wn.2d 372, 382-84 (2016)

State does not offer defendant's recorded statement to police, defense elicits from detective that defendant did make a recorded statement, trial court order in limine that defense may not, in closing, argue that state did not present evidence from the interview because it was not helpful to state's case; held: the substance of the interview was inadmissible hearsay, no evidence was presented to support the inference that defense sought to argue, thus trial court did not abuse discretion; affirms State v. Goss, 189 Wn.App. 571, 581-83 (2015); 9-0

State v. Cherry, 191 Wn.App. 456, 469-71 (2015)

Defendant is arrested, advised of Miranda warnings, invokes, is later asked for consent to search his car which defendant grants stating that there were no drugs in the car; held: because Miranda warnings are not required before asking for consent to search, State v. Silvernail, 25 Wn.App. 185, 191 (1980), but see: State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466 (2009), request for consent to search after defendant invokes right to remain silent does not violate defendant's Fifth Amendment rights; statement about drugs was not made in response to questioning likely to elicit an incriminating response; III.

State v. Smiley, 195 Wn.App. 185, 188-90 (2016)

Detective testifies that during interview of defendant he told defendant that his explanation "didn't make sense to me;" held: a tactical interrogation statement designed to challenge defendant's initial story and elicit responses is not a comment on defendant's veracity, State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App., 654, 662-65 (2011); 2-1, I.

State v. Horton, 195 Wn.App. 202, 214-17 (2016)

During interrogation defendant's contradictory statements "I do have a lawyer," "I don't have a lawyer," "why would I have a lawyer," and "I do have lawyers" is not an invocation of the right to counsel, CONST. art. I, § 9 and Fifth Amendment are co-extensive, State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364, 374-75 (1991), an equivocal request for counsel does not forbid further questioning, Davis v. United States, 512 U.S. 452, 459, 129 L.Ed.2d 362 (1994); State v. Robtoy, 98 Wn.2d 30, 39 (1982), has been abrogated; II.

State v. Chamber*s*, 197 Wn.App. 96, 128-35 (2016)

Arrest for homicide at 10:49 p.m., advised, defendant says he doesn't want to speak, placed in interview room at 12:28 a.m. where he sits alone for 2½ hours, at 3:07 a.m. is taken to hospital for blood draw, says he doesn't want to talk, returning to jail is asked if he remembers what happened, defendant asks if police have a picture of the victim, detective says yes and asks if he wants to talk, defendant says yes, readvised and makes statement; held: police scrupulously honored defendant's invoking right to remain silent, where a significant period of time passes police may readvise and ask suspect if he wishes to waive, Michigan v. Mosley, 423 U.S. 96, 104-06, 46 L.Ed.2d 313 (1975), even if it's about the same crime, State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49, 58-61 (2010), but see: Michigan v. Mosley, supra. at 423 U.S. 96, 102-06, State v. Reuben, 62 Wn.App. 620 (1991); I

State v. Scherf*,* 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018), 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018)

Failure to bring an arrestee before a judge "as soon as practicable," CrR 3.2.1(d)(1), does not require suppression of a voluntary confession, State v. Hoffman, 64 Wn.2d 445 (1964), Washington does not adhere to federal McNabb/Mallory rule; delay and conditions of confinement are non-dispositive factors in determining volunatriness; 9-0.

State v. Salas, 1 Wn.App.2d 931, 947-52 (2018)

Defendant is arrested for murder, invokes right to counsel, taken to hospital by police, cuffed to bed, doctor asks about injury, officer testifies at trial that defendant "chuckled" and said "I killed someone;" held: there being no evidence that the doctor was a state agent, there was no Miranda violation, however statement to medical personnel was privileged, officer's presence was for security and thus was an agent of the doctor, State v. Gibson, 3 Wn.App. 590 (1970), State v. Godsey, 131 Wn.App. 278, 284-86 (2006), and thus third person's presence did not vitiate the medical privilege; I.

State v. A.M., 194 Wn.2d 33 (2019)

Respondent invokes Miranda rights, at booking she is required to sign property inventory, confirms that backpack where drugs were found is hers, at trial court admits inventory; held: signing intake form was involuntary and thus inadmissible, State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Escalante, 195 Wn.2d 526 (2020)

Defendant is detained at Canada border by border control agents for five hours in locked room, then questioned without Miranda warnings, admits to possession of drugs; held: totality of circumstances establish that a reasonable person would believe s/he was under custodial arrest, thus Miranda warnings are mandatory regardless of the fact that it occurred at a border where Fourth Amendment protections are relaxed, distinguishing United States v. Ramsey, 431 U.S. 606, 616-21, 97 S. Ct. 1972, 52 L. Ed. 2d 617 (1977); 9-0.

State v. Putman, 21 Wn.App.2d 36, 41-48 (2022)

Detective testifies that he interrogated defendant, asked if he says that victim is lying; held: an officer is allowed to give direct testimony repeating statements accusing a witness of lying if it "provides context for the interrogation," Pers. Restraint of Lui, 188 Wn.2d 525, 555, (2016), State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753, 763-64 (2001), the questions were not opinion testimony, see: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918, 931 (2007); court should give a limiting instruction but where context is clear it is not error not to do so, Demery, supra., at 762; I.

STATEMENTS AND CONFESSIONS
Police/Prosecutor's Comment on Silence

State v. Upton, 16 Wn.App. 195 (1976)

Use of defendant's post-arrest silence to impeach plea of self-defense violates due process, Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976), State v. Modica, 18 Wn.App. 467 (1977), State v. Fricks, 91 Wn.2d 391 (1979), State v. Cook, 17 Wn.App.2d 96 (2021), cf.: Greer v. Miller, 97 L.Ed.2d 618 (1987), State v. Gutierrez, 50 Wn.App. 583 (1988), Brecht v. Abrahamson, 123 L.Ed.2d 353 (1993), State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6 (2002); II.

Jenkins v. Anderson, 65 L.Ed.2d 86 (1980)

State can impeach a testifying defendant with his prior pre-arrest silence, Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013); seems to be limited to situation where defendant, claiming self-defense at trial did not "speak out" prior to his arrest; accord: State v. Hamilton, 47 Wn.App. 15 (1987), see: State v.Burke, 163 Wn.2d 204 (2008) ; 7-2.

Anderson v. Charles, 65 L.Ed.2d 222 (1980)

Prosecutor can ask defendant on cross why he didn't tell his story when he was arrested; not comment on silence as long as defendant did make a statement at arrest, State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 836-40 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), cf.: State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Evans, 96 Wn.2d 1 (1981)

Police twice testify that defendant declined to make a statement after advice of rights, held to be harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); 9-0.

Fletcher v. Weir, 71 L.Ed.2d 490 (1982)

State may cross-examine and impeach a defendant's trial testimony re: post-arrest but pre-Miranda warning silence; distinguishes Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976) and Jenkins v. Anderson, 65 L.Ed.2d 86 (1980), see: State v.Burke, 163 Wn.2d 204 (2008), but see: State v. Davis, 38 Wn.App. 600 (1984); 7-2.

State v. Hatley, 41 Wn.App. 789 (1985)

Where defendant, after advice of rights, makes a statement to police and has not exercised his right to remain silent, then defendant may be cross-examined at trial as to what he failed to tell police, Anderson v. Charles, 65 L.Ed.2d 222 (1980), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 836-40 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), distinguishing Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976); I.

Wainwright v. Greenfield, 88 L.Ed.2d 623 (1986)

Prosecutor's comment that defendant's post-arrest exercise of his right to remain silent, after receiving Miranda warnings, was evidence of his sanity violates due process clause and 5th Amendment; 9-0.

State v. Seeley, 43 Wn.App. 711 (1986)

Defendant, after advice of rights, makes exculpatory statement to police; at trial, defendant testifies consistently with prior statement, but adds facts which he claims he told police; in rebuttal police testify defendant did not tell them what he testified he told them; held: comment on defendant's failure to tell police what he testified he told them is proper as the inferences from the facts given at trial and those told to the police differ, United States v. Leonardi, 623 F.2d 746, 756-57 (2d Cir. 1980), distinguishing Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976); see also: Anderson v. Charles, 65 L.Ed.2d 222 (1980), State v. Cosden, 18 Wn.App. 213 (1977), see: State v. Belgarde, 120 Wn.2d 504, 511-12 (1988); II.

State v. Kendrick, 47 Wn.App. 620 (1987)

Where defense elicits evidence that defendant cooperated with police as evidence of his innocence, then state may rebut that impression to impeach defendant's version of his post-arrest conduct by using defendant's post-arrest silence, State v. Vargas, 25 Wn.App. 809 (1980), cf.: State v. Holmes, 122 Wn.App. 438 (2004); I.

State v. Belgarde, 110 Wn.2d 504 (1988)

Comment in closing that defendant didn't say anything to police at arrest violates due process, State v. Silva, 119 Wn.2d 922 (2003), reversing State v. Belgarde, 46 Wn.App. 441 (1986), see: State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 614-17 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 111 Wn.2d 239 (1988)

Where defense psychiatrist, testifying in support of defendant's insanity plea, comments on direct that defendant had "pled the Fifth" at Western State Hospital, then door is open to state's psychologist testifying to the fact in rebuttal, United States v. Robinson, 99 L.Ed.2d 23 (1988); 9-0.

United States v. Robinson, 99 L.Ed.2d 23 (1988)

During closing, defense counsel argues that government has not allowed nontestifying defendant to explain his side of the story, United States Attorney argues that defendant could have taken the stand; held: fair response to claim made by defense counsel; 5-3.

State v. Watkins, 53 Wn.App. 264 (1989)

Police have probable cause to arrest defendant for robbery, approach defendant on the street, show her photograph of herself robbing store, ask her if she recognizes it, which she denies, arrest defendant; at trial, prosecutor cross-examines defendant to inquire why she did not tell police about her duress defense rather than deny recognizing photograph, motion for mistrial denied; held: defendant may be impeached by pre-arrest silence, Jenkins v. Anderson, 65 L.Ed.2d 86 (1980), Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), because defendant would not have reasonably believed that she was under arrest, she was not entitled to Miranda warnings,

Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984), and thus prosecutor's question did not violate her right to remain silent; I.

State v. Scott, 58 Wn.App. 50 (1990)

Defendant tells police that no knife was used and thus no robbery occurred; at trial, defense theory is mistaken identity, pursued in closing argument; held: prosecutor may comment in closing upon inconsistencies between a nontestifying defendant's "partial silence" and the defense theory pursued at trial; prosecutor's argument at closing that defense would have presented an exculpatory explanation for any evidence that the state would have presented was clearly conjecture which would not lead jury to infer guilt from defendant's silence at trial, distinguishing State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340, 346 (1985); I.

State v. Heller, 58 Wn.App. 414 (1990)

Defendant is arrested for robbery, tells police she doesn't know what they are talking about when questioned following Miranda warnings; at trial, defendant raises self-defense, prosecutor cross-examines her regarding her failure to tell police about self-defense and questions her as to why she or her attorney did not subsequently tell police or prosecutor about her defense; held: defendant's statement to police was not silence nor was it "insolubly ambiguous" and was inconsistent with trial testimony, so prosecutor could raise unfavorable inferences from her failure to tell police at the time of arrest the exculpatory information, State v. Belgarde, 110 Wn.2d 504, 511 (1988), State v. Gutierrez, 50 Wn.App. 583, 589 (1988), State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 614-17 (2005); prosecutor's implying in cross that defendant had some obligation to come forward violates her right to remain silent, not harmless, thus reversed; I.

State v. Crane, 116 Wn.2d 315 (1991)

Absent manifest intent of prosecutor to comment on right of accused to remain silent, State v. Scott, 93 Wn.2d 7, 13 (1980), a "subtle and brief" statement that "did not 'naturally and necessarily' emphasize defendant's testimonial silence," State v. Crawford, 21 Wn.App. 146, 152 (1978) is not error, State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 840-41 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); test to determine whether trial court abused discretion in denying motion for mistrial: (1) seriousness of irregularity, (2) whether comment was cumulative to other evidence properly admitted, (3) can irregularity be cured by instruction to jury to disregard, State v. Weber, 99 Wn.2d 158, 164-65 (1983).

Brecht v. Abrahamson, 123 L.Ed.2d 353 (1993)

Defendant's silence prior to arrest, or after arrest if no Miranda warnings are given, may be used to impeach defendant's testimony at trial, cf.: State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6 (2002).

State v. Dickerson, 69 Wn.App. 744 (1993)

Counsel for co-defendant's comment on defendant's failure to testify may deprive a nontestifying defendant of a fair trial, harmless here due to failure to object; I.

State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993)

In vehicular homicide case, defendant's response to question as to how much he drank, to wit: "I would just as soon leave that," admitted at trial without objection, is harmless error, State v. Johnson, 42 Wn.App. 425, 431 (1985), State v. Wilmoth, 31 Wn.App. 820 (1982), State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); II.

State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57, 62-66 (1994)

After waiving Miranda rights and agreeing to take primer residue test, defendant then declines to take the test, prosecutor so argues to jury; held: prosecutor did not improperly comment on silence, Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976), as defendant waived his Fifth Amendment rights and did not subsequently invoke his right to remain silent; II.

State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717, 728-9 (1995)

Prosecutor's closing argument that there was "absolutely" no evidence to explain why defendant was present at drug deal and that there was no attempt by defendant to rebut are impermissible comments on defendant's decision not to testify, State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 332, 336 (1987), State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797 (2012), harmless here; I.

State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228 (1996)

A defendant's pre-arrest silence offered as substantive evidence is inadmissible in state's case-in-chief, State v. Keene, 86 Wn.App. 589 (1997), State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002), State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797 (2012), cf.: State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 480-81 (1999), State v.Burke, 163 Wn.2d 204 (2008). State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022), but see: Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700 (1996)

Detective testifies that he telephoned defendant and told him if he was innocent he should come in and talk about it, mistrial motion denied; held: as detective did not testify that defendant did not come in to talk, there was no comment on silence, testimony was ambiguous, thus denial of mistrial motion was within court's discretion, State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 480-81 (1999), State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 836-40 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); 7-2.

State v. Keene, 86 Wn.App. 589 (1997)

Detective testifies, without objection, that defendant failed to make appointments to discuss case, she warned defendant if he did not return calls she would turn matter over to prosecutor, she did not hear from defendant again, in closing, prosecutor argues that these are not innocent acts; held: pre-arrest silence offered as substantive evidence is inadmissible in state's case-in-chief, State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 241 (1996), State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228 (1996), but see: : Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189 (2016), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700 (1986); manifest constitutional error; III.

Mitchell v. United States, 143 L.Ed.2d 424 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty, at sentencing co-defendant testifies for government, defendant does not testify, court notes defendant's failure to testify as a factor persuading court to rely upon testimony of co-defendant; held: guilty plea is not a waiver of the right not to testify at sentencing, as under the Fifth Amendment, incrimination is not complete until sentence is imposed and judgment is final, thus court may not draw adverse inference from defendant's silence at sentencing; 5-4.

State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 480-81 (1999)

Without objection, detective testifies at trial that he asked defendant if he would take a polygraph and make a statement, defendant said he would after he discussed it with his attorney; held: testimony was a "mere reference to silence which is not a 'comment' on the silence," State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700, 706-07 (1996), State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 241 (1996), State v. Henderson, 100 Wn.App. 794, 797-99 (2000),State v. Shore, 133 Wn.App. 120, 126-29 (2006), see: State v. Pottorff, 138 Wn.App. 343 (2007), State v. Hager, 171 Wn.2d 151 (2011), State v. Terry, 181 Wn.App. 880 (2014), but see: State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6 (2002), State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Henderson, 100 Wn.App. 794, 797-99 (2000)

At trial, officer responds affirmatively to prosecutor asking if officer asked defendant if defendant would agree to be tape recorded; held: while not a comment, the question was an improper reference which could be interpreted as a refusal of defendant to talk, see: State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 481 (1999); II.

State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 764-65 (2001)

Where defendant does not remain silent and talks to police, state may comment on what defendant did not say, State v. Young, 89 Wn.2d 613, 621 (1978), State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 614-17 (2005), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 836-40 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), cf.: State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797 (2012); false information given to police is admissible as evidence relevant to consciousness of guilt, State v. Allen, 57 Wn.App. 134, 143 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Nemitz, 105 Wn.App. 205, 212-15 (2001)

Following DUI arrest, defendant hands officer his attorney's business card containing Miranda warnings, court admits evidence of contents; held: there was no probative value to the information contained on the lawyer's card, only value was its inference that a person disposed to drink and drive would take steps to avoid self-incrimination, thus admission of evidence was reversible error, State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228 (1996), State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6 (2002), State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002), cf.: State v. Slone, 133 Wn.App. 120, 126-29 (2006), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700 (1996); III.

State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6 (2002)

Prosecutor elicits that police advised defendant of Miranda rights and defendant refused to speak and requested an attorney; held: evidence of post-Miranda silence is manifest constitutional error, Division III doubts curative value of an instruction, State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002), State v. Pottorff, 138 Wn.App. 343 (2007), State v. Cook, 17 Wn.App.2d 96 (2021).

State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002)

Officer testifies that defendant was "uncooperative," objection is sustained, later that defendant was advised of Miranda warnings, chose not to waive and would not talk, no objection taken; held: direct comment on defendant's right to silence is constitutional error, State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 241-42 (1996), State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6, 11-13 (2002), State v. Nemetz, 105 Wn.App. 205, 212-15 (2001), State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797 (2012), State v. Terry, 181 Wn.App. 880 (2014), but see: : Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189 (2016), State v. Cook, 17 Wn.App.2d 96 (2021); where the comment on silence is indirect, i.e., not used as substantive evidence or as an admission of guilt, then it is not constitutional error unless (1) the comment is purposeful, responsive to state's questioning, (2) the comment is unresponsive, volunteered but could be considered that it was offered for the purpose of prejudicing defense or resulting in unintended prejudice, and (3) indirect comment is exploited by state during trial or argument; here, comment was direct and prejudicial, State v. Holmes, 122 Wn.App. 438 (2004), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700, 705-07 (1996), State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.App. 466, 480-81 (1999), State v. Hager, 171 Wn.2d 151 (2011), see also: State v. Slone, 133 Wn.App. 120, 126-29 (2006), State v. Pottorff, 138 Wn.App. 343 (2007); II.

State v. Holmes, 122 Wn.App. 438 (2004)

In child sex case, after defense elicits from detective that defendant was cooperative when arrested, detective testifies on redirect that defendant did not appear surprised and did not deny when advised of the charge, no objection taken although on re-cross defense educes that reaction "did not mean one thing or another;" held: post-arrest silence is inadmissible, Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976), defendant did not open the door as defendant's comments did not contradict defendant's portrayal of himself as cooperative, distinguishing State v. Kendrick, 47 Wn.App. 620 (1987), defendant's "unsurprised" reaction was an improper observation on his failure to proclaim his innocence, testimony was more than a fleeting reference, distinguishing State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700, 706 (1996), State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 480-91 (1999); direct comment on silence excuses failure to object, State v. Romero,113 Wn.App. 779, 790-91 (2002), State v. Knapp, 148 Wn.App. 414 (2009); I.

State v. MacDonald, 122 Wn.App. 804, 810-12 (2004)

Defendant, charged with two counts of rape, testifies as to one count only, prosecutor comments in closing that defendant did not explain his side; held: defendant only waived his right to remain silent as to one count, prosecutor's comment was improper; remedy, apparently, is to reverse one count; II.

State v. Saavedra, 128 Wn.App. 708 (2005)

Police officer's testimony that he searched for suspect, left word at his home for him to call and never received a call back is not a comment on defendant's exercise of the right to remain silent; III.

State v. Evans, 129 Wn.App. 211, 225-26 (2005), reversed, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 402 (2007)

Officer testifies that, in response to a post-Miranda question, defendant "didn't answer specifically...other than to say we're going to do what we're going to do;" held: police may testify that a defendant is "recalcitrant" where it is not used as substantive evidence of guilt; II.

State v. Carnahan, 130 Wn.App. 159, 167-69 (2005)

Defendant is arrested, drugs seized from car, state does not offer evidence of any statements of defendant, witnesses testify that defendant loaned his car, defendant testifies that he was unaware of drugs, in rebuttal state calls officer to testify that defendant did not mention at arrest that he had loaned his car; held: use of post-arrest post-Miranda silence to impeach violates due process where defendant has apparently made no statements to police at all, Doyle v. Ohio, 49 L.Ed.2d 91 (1976), State v. Upton, 16 Wn.App. 195 (1976), State v. Fricks, 91 Wn.2d 1979); II.

State v. Slone, 133 Wn.App. 120 (2006)

Police officer's testimony that he read defendant his Miranda warnings, by itself, does not amount to an impermissible comment on silence, see: State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466, 480-81 (1999), State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002), but see: State v. Nemitz, 105 Wn.App. 205, 212-15 (2001), State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6, 9 (2002); II.

State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 836-40 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014)

After arrest, police ask to tape record statement, defendant refuses but makes statement, state offers evidence that defendant declined recording; held: testimony that defendant did not consent to recording, where not mentioned in closing argument nor used to imply guilt, does not amount to a comment on a statutory right, cf.: RCW 9.73.090(b); where prosecutor makes a motion in limine to exclude argument and then violates the order "strongly suggests that the argument was flagrant and ill-intentioned," at 866; 8-1.

State v. Pottorff, 138 Wn.App. 343, 346-48 (2007)

Officer's direct comment on silence ("he didn't reply. He said…he wanted to invoke his right to remain silent") is harmless here where state did not exploit the nonresponsive answer for substantive evidence of guilt, "nothing suggests the jury relied upon Mr. Pottorff's silence as an admission of guilt," ¶ 11, comment did not directly follow Miranda warnings, State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 790-91 (2002); III.

State v. Stratton, 139 Wn.App. 511, 515-16 (2007)

Trial court admits video of police asking defendant his name and defendant not responding; held: because criminalizing refusal to identify oneself in the course of a valid Terry stop is consistent with Fourth Amendment prohibitions against unreasonable searches, Hiibel v. Sixth Judicial Dist. Ct., 159 L.Ed.2d 292 (2004), defendant has no Fifth Amendment right to suppress his refusal to identify himself; III.

State v. Evans, 163 Wn.2d 204 (2008)

Police visit defendant at home, do not arrest or advise of Miranda rights, defendant states he had consensual sex with a girl who was younger than he thought she was, defendant then requests counsel, as police are leaving defendant volunteers a comment about girls always trying to get guys in trouble; at rape of a child trial, officer is asked about last comment, testifies that he asked for a lawyer so we stopped questioning him; defense at trial was that defendant reasonably believed victim to be 16 years old based upon declarations of age, RCW 9A.44.030(2); state argues that if victim told defendant she was 16, he would have told the police, and cross-examines defendant asking why he failed to say he thought she was 16 at the police interview; held: use by state of pre-arrest silence as substantive evidence of guilt implicates the Fifth Amendment, State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228 (1996); "[a]n accused's failure to disclose every detail of an event when first contacted by law enforcement officials is not per se an inconsistency," at 219 ¶27; here, state "advanced the link between guilt and the termination of the interview," at 222 ¶33, implying that suspects who invoke do so because they know they have done wrong, repeated references to silence had the effect of both impeaching and improperly presenting substantive evidence of guilt, buit see: : Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Thomas, 142 Wn.App. 589 (2008)

Officer testifies that while she was investigating offense at complainant's home, defendant called complainant's cell phone, officer answered and identified herself, defendant said that he did not want to talk to her, prosecutor argues in closing that although defendant was accused of a crime he wouldn't talk to the police to explain what happened; held: while officer's testimony was no more than a passing reference to silence, State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 786-95 (2002), State v. Lewis, 130 Wn.2d 700, 707 (1996), cf.: State v. Terry, 181 Wn.App. 880 (2014), prosecutor's argument invited jury to infer guilt from refusal to talk with police, constitutional error, State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 242 (1996), but see: : Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189 (2016); II.

State v. Hager, 171 Wn.2d 151 (2011)

Defendant answers questions by police, trial court orders in limine that police not testify about defendant's deceptive or evasive behavior, officer violates order, trial court denies mistrial, instructs jury to disregard officer's remark; held: where witness comments on defendant's untruthfulness, there is no Fifth Amendment violation as it is not a comment on silence, see: State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 765 (2001), distinguishing State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 242-43 (1996); where witness expresses an opinion about credibility, there is a Sixth Amendment and CONST. art. I, §§ 21 & 22 issue, invading province of jury, State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918, 927 (2007), but does not always require a new trial, see: State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 679 (2001), State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008), here the error was cured by the cautionary instruction; reverses State v. Hager, 152 Wn.App. 134 (2009); 8-1.

State v. Curtiss, 161 Wn.App. 673, 691-92 (2011)

Where defendant speaks to police and court rules statement is admissible, officer's testimony regarding defendant's lack of response to certain interview questions is not improper, cf.: State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797 (2012); II.

State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 814-20 (2012)

After advice of rights, defendant makes an exculpatory statement and does not respond to some questions, at trial does not testify, in opening and closing prosecutor argues that defendant didn't deny the offense; held: "[e]liciting testimony about and commenting on a suspect's postarrest silence or partial silence is constitutional error," at 813 ¶ 33, when offered as substantive evidence of guilt, distinguishing State v. Young, 89 Wn.2d 613 (1978); II.

State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 750-51 (2012)

After advice of rights and making some statements and after being shown crime video, defendant states "that is what it is…can't do anything but go to trial with that," detective testifies that defendant made it clear that the code would not allow him to cooperate or testify against others, prosecutor argues to jury "code of the street: don't cooperate with the police…don't talk to the police…;" held: defendant never clearly and unequivocally invoked his right to remain silent, see: State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668 (2003); failure to object to prosecutor's argument waived error as statement was not flagrant and ill intentioned, distinguishing State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011); 2-1, II.

State v. Terry, 181 Wn.App. 880 (2014)

Judge invites jurors to propose questions, juror asks and court poses to officer whether defendant was questioned or expressed surprise at being arrested, officer says no, prosecutor in closing argues defendant didn't ask why he was arrested because he knew he was guilty; held: while a comment on pre-arrest silence may be permissible, Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), the question posed could only have applied to post-arrest silence and thus was a comment, more than a passing reference, State v. Burke, 163 Wn.2d 204, 213 (2008), thus was manifest constitutional error; III.

State v. Pinson, 183 Wn.App. 411 (2014)

Defendant is arrested, speaks to police who ask if fight was verbal or physical, defendant does not respond, trial court rules in limine state cannot ask about defendant not answering question, defense counsel elicits it on cross examination of officer, state argues, without objection, that defendant's silence was evidence of guilt; held: while pre-arrest silence may be used to impeach a defendant who testifies at trial, State v. Burke, 163 Wn.2d 204, 217 (2008), and may be used as substantive evidence even if defendant doesn't testify if defendant remained silent and did not invoke the privilege, Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), post-arrest silence, even in the absence of invoking the privilege, cannot be used, it is flagrant and ill-intentioned misconduct for prosecutor to argue that silence is evidence of guilt even where defense brought out the evidence and did not object; II.

State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189 (2016)

Detective testifies that defendant failed to appear for an interview; held: pre-arrest silence is admissible as substantive evidence, Salinas v. Texas, 570 U.S. 178, 186 L.Ed.2d 376 (2013), which has effectively overruled State v. Keene, 86 Wn.App. 589 (1997), State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 241 (1996), State v. Evans, 163 Wn.2d 204 (2008), State v. Thomas, 142 Wn.App. 589 (2008); state constitution is co-extensive with Fifth Amendment; III.

State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022)

Prosecutor elicits from detective that he went to jail to talk to defendant, asked if defendant wanted to do the right thing and talk, defendant said no; held: prosecutor and witness may not comment on defendant's silence, detective's offer of a chance to "do the right thing" suggests that silence equals guilt, State v. Keene, 86 Wn.App. 589 (1997). State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228 (1996), comment "may warrant reversal and a new trial," although case reversed on other grounds; II.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

State v. Eppens, 30 Wn.App. 119 (1981)

Defendant is charged within the statute of limitations, state later amends to add counts for which the statute had run; held: where amendment broadens the original charge, it does not relate back to the filing date of the original information, thus additional counts must be dismissed, see: State v. Novotny, 76 Wn.App. 343 (1994), State v. Sutherland, 104 Wn.App. 122, 133-35 (2001), cf.: State v. Mehaffey, 125 Wn.App. 595 (2005), State v. Warren, 127 Wn.App. 893 (2005).

State v. Carrier, 36 Wn.App. 755 (1984)

A series of transactions that occur outside statute of limitations may be charged when acts comprise one continuous crime in which the completion of the acts occurs within the statute, see: State v. Mermis, 105 Wn.App. 738 (2001), State v. Koch, 38 Wn.App. 457 (1984) State v. Dash, 163 Wn.App. 63, 67-71 (2011), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013), State v. Reeder, 181 Wn.App. 897, 923-25 (2014), affirmed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 805 (2015); II.

State v. Brisebois, 39 Wn.App. 156 (1984)

Where a crime is continuous (welfare fraud), the crime is not completed until the continuing criminal conduct is completed, at which time the statute of limitations begins to run; I.

State v. Fischer, 40 Wn.App. 506 (1985)

Date of offense in information is outside statute of limitations, date in affidavit of probable cause is within statute, state's motion to amend information to change date of offense is denied, information dismissed; held: where charge is filed within statute of limitations but error is made in date crime is alleged to have occurred, state may amend information after the expiration of the limitations period if defendant had notice, amendment does not change the offense or alter a material element, and no prejudice is shown, but see: State v. Bryce, 41 Wn.App. 802 (1985), State v. Glover, 25 Wn.App. 58 (1979); I.

State v. Bryce, 41 Wn.App. 802 (1985)

Where original information charged a crime beyond the statute of limitations, trial court may not grant motion to amend information to bring case within the limitation period, State v. Glover, 25 Wn.App. 58 (1979), but see: State v. Fischer, 40 Wn.App. 508 (1985); II.

State v. Hodgson, 108 Wn.2d 662 (1987)

Expanding statute of limitation applies retroactively and does not violate ex post facto clause as long as statute of limitations was extended before the prosecution was barred, State v. Foster, 81 Wn.App. 508, 510-14 (1996), see: Stogner v. California, 156 L.Ed.2d 544 (2003); affirms State v. Hodgson, 44 Wn.App. 592 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 577 (1990)

Statute of limitations for felony murder is the same as for murder, i.e., none; statute of limitations on underlying felony is irrelevant; 9-0.

State v. Horn, 59 Wn.App. 664 (1990)

When legislature changes statute of limitations, the change applies to crimes committed after the change, not to charges filed after the change, see also: State v. Foster, 81 Wn.App. 508, 510-14 (1996); II.

State v. Klump, 61 Wn.App. 911 (1991)

Failure to appear or respond to a traffic infraction, RCW 46.63.060(2)(k), 46.64.020(2), is a misdemeanor which occurs when violator fails to respond within 15 days of citation or fails to appear; it is not a continuing offense, thus statute of limitations is one year; III.

State v. Foster, 81 Wn.App. 508, 510-14 (1996)

Seven year statute of limitations for indecent liberties, RCW 9A.44.100(1)(b), 9A.04.080(1)(c), applies to indecent liberties as it read before its amendment in 1988, at 513; I.

State v. Argo, 81 Wn.App. 552, 566-8 (1996)

In Ponzi scheme securities fraud, ch. 21.20, RCW, where defendant lulls victims into a state of passive inactivity ("lulling doctrine"), statute of limitations is tolled and begins running again when defendant's lulling activities are completed, State v. Anthone, 184 Wn.App. 92, 101-04 (2014); I.

State v. N.S., 98 Wn.App. 910 (2000)

Respondent is acquitted of rape 3°, convicted of lesser attempted rape 3° over objection that statute of limitations has run on the lesser gross misdemeanor, trial court holds that statute for the greater controls; held: defendant cannot be convicted of a lesser on a prosecution for a greater crime commenced after the statute of limitations has run on the lesser; I.

Pers. Restraint of Stoudmire, 141 Wn.2d 342 (2000)

Guilty plea does not waive challenge to a conviction that is beyond statute of limitations, although court still has subject matter jurisdiction, see: State v. Peltier, 181 Wn.2d 290 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Swagerty, 186 Wash. 2d 801 (2016), State v. Loos, 14 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Sutherland, 104 Wn.App. 122, 133-35 (2001)

Where a defective information is filed and dismissed without prejudice for failure to allege an essential element of the crime, state may not use the "relation-back doctrine" where case is re-filed after statute of limitations period has lapsed, Bothell v. Kaiser, 152 Wn.App. 466, 474-79 (2009), but see: State v. Warren, 127 Wn.App. 893, 899 (2005); II.

State v. Mermis, 105 Wn.App. 738 (2001)

Beyond three year statute of limitations, defendant agrees to buy a car and takes possession of it, knowing he cannot pay for it; three weeks later, within the statute of limitations, title is transferred to defendant; held: because the trier of fact could find that there was a continuing criminal impulse, then the prosecution is not barred, State v. Carrier, 36 Wn.App.

755 (1984), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013), see: State v. Javier Contreras, 162 Wn.App. 540 (2011), State v. Dash, 163 Wn.App. 63, 67-71 (2011), however jury should have been instructed as to statute of limitations, thus reversed and remanded; I.

Stogner v. California, 156 L.Ed.2d 544 (2003)

Where statute of limitations has expired, new statute which expands limitations period violates ex post facto clause; 6-3.

State v. Mehaffey, 125 Wn.App. 595, 598-99 (2005)

Defendant is charged with possession of cocaine, after statute runs state amends to possession of methamphetamine in order to reduce defendant's range; held: an amended information relates back to the filing date of the original information as long as the charge, as amended, arose out of the conduct set forth in the original pleading, State v. Eppens, 30 Wn.App. 119, 123 (1981), see: State v. Warren, 127 Wn.App. 893 (2005), absent prejudice, State v. Aleshire, 89 Wn.2d 67, 71 (1977); III.

State v. Cook, 125 Wn.App. 709 (2005)

Police officer who commits a felony is subject to a ten-year statute of limitation, RCW 9A.04.080(1)(b)(i); 2-1, II.

State v. Warren, 127 Wn.App. 893 (2005)

Defendant is charged with DUI, after statute of limitations runs state adds negligent driving 1° on same facts; held: because negligent driving is a less serious offense, based on same evidence and did not create a potential for "a greater stigma or penalty," it relates back to the original charge, does not violate statute of limitations, see: State v. Eppens, 30 Wn.App. 119 (1981), but see: State v. Sutherland, 104 Wn.App. 122 (2001); I.

Bellevue v. Benyaminov, 144 Wn.App. 755 (2008)

Statute of limitations may be equitably tolled where there is evidence of bad faith, deception or false assurances by the defendant and the exercise of diligence by plaintiff; I.

State v. Willingham, 169 Wn.2d 192 (2010)

Defendant leaves state for two weeks for job training, state claims statute of limitations is tolled, trial court dismisses; held: mere absence from state does not toll statute of limitations, overruling language in State v. Ansell, 36 Wn.App. 492, 496 (1984), State v. McDonald, 100 Wn.App. 828 (2000); to toll for absence defendant must change residence; per curiam.

State v. Walker, 153 Wn.App. 701 (2009)

When a statute of limitations challenge is raised, the state bears the burden of establishing that sufficient time is tolled to permit the matter to proceed; tolling occurs when accused lives outside Washington, voluntarily or involuntarily; statute of limitations challenge is jurisdictional, abrogated by State v. Peltier, 181 Wn.2d 290 (2014), State v. Loos, 14 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020).
thus can be raised for the first time on appeal; III.

State v. Javier Contreras, 162 Wn.App. 540 (2011)

Defendant receives stolen car beyond three year limitation period but retains it within the statute of limitations; held: while legislature did not declare possessing stolen property to be a continuing offense, it is continuing because the nature of the offense leads to a reasonable conclusion that the legislature so intended, State v. Green, 150 Wn.2d 740, 742-43 (2004), distinguishing State v. Ladely, 82 Wn.2d 172 (1973); III.

State v. Dash, 163 Wn.App. 63, 67-71 (2011)

Defendant is convicted of one count of theft 1° for a series of transactions over a five year period, jury is instructed that, to convict, it must find he committed the crime "during a period of time intervening" over the five year period and that the acts were part of a common scheme or plan, a continuing course of conduct and a continuing criminal impulse, raises statute of limitations issue for first time on appeal, State v. Novotny, 76 Wn.App. 343, 345 n.1 (1994); held: because jury did not make a finding regarding when the continuing criminal impulse terminated, it cannot be determined whether the jury convicted defendant based solely upon acts committed outside the limitation period, State v. Mermis, 105 Wn.App. 738 (2001), see: State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013); I.

State v. McConnell, 178 Wn.App. 592, 602-05 (2013)

Rape occurs in 1998, DNA matches unknown male, in 2011 lab concludes DNA matches defendant, court denied motion to dismiss; held: statute of limitations for rape 1° is ten years from the date of commission or one year from date identity is conclusively established by DNA testing, RCW 9A.04.080(3) (2013), identity is not conclusively established until DNA testing matches profile of a known suspect; I.

State v. Peltier, 181 Wn.2d 290 (2014)

At the time of a guilty plea a defendant may expressly waive a statute of limitations that has not yet run on the underlying charge; statute of limitations is not jurisdictional, Pers. Restraint of Stoudmire, 141 Wn.2d 342, 353 (2000), overruling, in part, State v. Glover, 25 Wn.App. 58, 61 (1979), State v. Eppens, 30 Wn.App. 119, 124 (1981), State v. Ansell, 36 Wn.App. 492, 496 (1984), State v. Fischer, 40 Wn.App. 506, 510 (1985), State v. Bryce, 41 Wn.App. 802, 807 (1985), State v. Novotny, 76 Wn.App. 343, 345 n.1 (1994), State v. N.S., 98 Wn.App. 910, 914-15 (2000), State v. Walker, 153 Wn.App. 701, 705 (2009), State v. Loos, 14 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020), rather it affects the authority of a court to sentence a defendant for a crime, see: Pers. Restraint of Swagerty, 186 Wn.2d 801 (2016); reverses State v. Peltier, 176 Wn.App. 732 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Reeder, 181 Wn.App. 897, 921-925 (2014), affirmed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 805 (2015)

Statute of limitations for securities fraud, ch. 21.20, RCW, is 5 years after violation or 3 years after discovery, RCW 21.20.400(3) (2003), rather than pursuant to the general statute of limitations section, RCW 9A.04.080(1)(h), as general statute conflicts with special act and thus special act is an exception; I.

Pers. Restraint of Swagerty, 186 Wn.2d 801 (2016)

"As long as the statute of limitations has not yet run at the time of charging on … original, more serious charges, the defendant may knowingly and expressly waive an expired statute of limitations on lesser charges to take advantage of a beneficial plea offer," at 809-10, see: State v. Peltier, 181 Wn.2d 290 (2014), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Stoudemire, 141 Wn.2d/ 342, (2000); 5-4.

State v. Merritt, 200 Wn.App. 398 (2017), affirmed, 193 Wn.2d 70 (2019)

Mortgage fraud, ch. 19.144 RCW, must be filed within five years of the crime or within three years of the state's actual discovery of the specific violation, RCW 19.144.090 (2015), at 406-07; statute of limitations is not an element of a crime that must be included in an information, at 405-06; I.

State v. Merritt, 193 Wn.2d 70 (2019)

Statute of limitations is not an element of a crime that must be included in an information; while RCW 10.37.050(5) (2010) does state that an information should include language that the crime was committed within the statute of limitations, it provides no remedy thus, at least absent an objection, an information that lacks that statement is still sufficient; affirms State v. Merritt, 200 Wn.App. 398, 405-06 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Loos, 14 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020)

Defendant is charged with assault of a child 3°, is convicted of assault 4° as an inferior degree offense, on appeal argues, for the first time, that statute of limitations for assault 4° had passed; held: failure to raise a statute of limitations issue in the trial court precludes review, State v. Peltier, 181 Wn.2d 290 (2014), State v. Davis, 17 Wn.App.2d 264 (2021); I.

State v. Davis, 17 Wn.App.2d 264 (2021)

Affirmatively requesting a jury instruction on a lesser included offense necessarily results in a waiver or forfeiture of a statute of limitations defense to the lesser, see: State v. Loos, 14 Wn.App. 2d 748 (2020); I.

STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION

State v. Jones, 84 Wn.2d 823 (1974)

Words used in a statute must be given their usual, ordinary, commonly accepted and full meaning, State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445 (1991).

State v. Cain, 28 Wn.App. 462 (1981)

In a rape case, a finger is an "object", former RCW 9.79.170(1); words in statutes are to be understood in their ordinary and popular sense, and must be given the usual and ordinary meaning unless a contrary intent appears; while criminal statutes must be construed strictly in favor of the accused, they should not be so overstrictly construed as to defeat their purpose; I.

State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982)

Where there is a general statute (escape) and a specific statute (willful failure to return to work release), and defendant's conduct is proscribed by both, then defendant may only be charged with the specific statute; accord: State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576 (1984), State v. Smeltzer, 88 Wn.App. 818 (1997), but see: State v. Pestrin, 43 Wn.App. 705 (1986), State v. Heffner, 126 Wn.App. 803 (2005), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 730-32 (2014), see: State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47 (2005), cf.: State v. Conte, 159 Wn.2d 797 (2007), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); 8-0.

In Re R., 97 Wn.2d 182 (1982)

In resolving a question of statutory construction, the spirit and intent of the law should prevail over the letter of the law; if an act is subject to two interpretations, that which best advances the legislative purpose should be adopted; 9-0.

State v. Pestrin, 43 Wn.App. 705 (1986)

Defendant, charged with theft, is alleged to have sold a vehicle knowing that the odometer was turned back, challenges conviction claiming he should have been charged with special odometer statute, RCW 46.37.550; held: general theft requires proof of intent to deprive and value; determining factor is that the general statute will be violated in each instance where the special statute has been violated, State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576, 580 (1984), State v. Heffner, 126 Wn.App. 803 (2005); here, additional elements must be proved for the general statute, thus the general/specific rule is inapplicable, State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47 (2005), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 730-32 (2014), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); no equal protection violation, as elements differ, State v. Chase, 134 Wn.App. 792, 800-03 (2006); III.

State v. White, 47 Wn.App. 373 (1987)

A cash machine card could be construed as a written instrument, RCW 9A.60.010(1)(b), however the contrary construction is also possible; where two possible constructions are permissible, the rule of lenity requires construction strictly against the state, State v. Gore, 101 Wn.2d 481 (1984), State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443 (1978), see: State v. RJ., 121 Wn.App. 215, 217 n.2 (2004); III.

State v. Plank, 47 Wn.App. 461 (1987)

Bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170, repeals by implication failure to appear, RCW 10.19.130, as they are so clearly inconsistent and repugnant to each other that they cannot be reconciled and given effect with reasonable construction; see also: State v. Kenney, 52 Wn.App. 193 (1988); I.

State v. Heher, 52 Wn.App. 298 (1988)

A grammatically literal reading of a statute will be rejected where it results in strained or absurd consequences, United States v. X-Citement Video, 130 L.Ed.2d 372, 378-80 (1994), see: State v. Yokley, 91 Wn.App. 733 (1999), aff'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581 (1999); I.

State v. Cooley, 53 Wn.App. 163 (1989)

Unless enacted by legislature, titles and captions to legislative enactments are not part of the enactment; II.

Clyde Hill v. Roisen, 111 Wn.2d 912 (1989)

Intent is not an element of a mala prohibita crime unless the ordinance so declares, Seattle v. Koh, 26 Wn.App. 708, 713-14 (1980), Seattle v. Gordon, 54 Wn.2d 516, 519 (1959), see: Salinas v.United States, 139 L.Ed.2d 352, 362 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Hernandez, 53 Wn.App. 702 (1989)

Courts will not add a mens rea element to a crime unless the absence will create a potential for punishing innocent conduct, see: State v. Elwell. 17 Wn.App.2d 367 (2021); knowledge of age is not an element of RCW 69.50.406, distributing drugs to a minor; III.

State v. Elmore, 54 Wn.App. 54 (1989)

Criminal intent will not be inferred where the legislature defines a crime as punishable by conduct alone, State v. Stroh, 91 Wn.2d 580, 8 A.L.R. 4th 760 (1979); I.

State v. Dodd, 56 Wn.App. 257 (1989)

Where appellate court interprets statute, and administrative agency subsequently promul-gates rule interpreting statute otherwise, court's interpretation remains final authority; 2-1, I.

State v. Elliott, 114 Wn.2d 6 (1990)

Promoting prostitution 2° is special statute as opposed to general law of aiding and abetting prostitution, and thus there is no equal protection violation for charging former rather than latter; I.

State v. Dubois, 58 Wn.App. 299 (1990)

Statute entitled "public indecency," RCW 9A.88.010, prohibited, inter alia, "open and obscene exposure," which is interpreted to require an exposure in public, State v. Sayler, 36 Wn.App. 230 (1983); legislature amends, changing title to "indecent exposure," but also prohibiting "open and obscene exposure"; trial court dismisses post-amendment case where offense occurred in private home; held: statute is ambiguous because legislature changed title to remove "public" but left "open" as an element; title change and legislative history establish that legislature intended to eliminate "public" as an element; I.

State v. Horton, 59 Wn.App. 412 (1990)

A legislative enactment may be a clarification rather than an amendment, and thus may apply retroactively, where surrounding circumstances indicate that the legislature intended merely to interpret an original act, RCW 1.12.020, Johnson v. Morris, 87 Wn.2d 922, 926 (1976); I.

State v. Aamold, 60 Wn.App. 175 (1991)

Vehicular homicide and felony murder 2° (felony flight) are not concurrent for purposes of general/special statute analysis, see: State v. Barstad, 83 Wn.App. 553 (1999); I.

State v. Jackson, 61 Wn.App. 86 (1991)

Subsequent amendments of statutes may be considered by court in determining precise intent of legislature if intent is questionable, Rozner v. Bellevue, 116 Wn.2d 342, 347-48 (1991), State v. Bunker, 169 Wn.2d 571, 581 (2010); I.

State v. Kepiro, 61 Wn.App. 116 (1991)

Intent to harm or reasonably cause alarm is not an element of intimidating a judge, RCW 9A.72.160, see also: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015); I.

State v. Shelby, 61 Wn.App. 214 (1991)

Criminal trespass 2°, RCW 9A.52.080, and disobeying a valid order to leave school property, RCW 28A.87.055, are not concurrent, as the latter deals with disruptive or intoxicated persons only; see: Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189 (1991); I.

State v. Cascade District Court, 62 Wn.App. 587 (1991)

Rule of lenity applies to punitive statutes, not evidentiary rules; cf.: State v. Roberts, 117 Wn.2d 576, 586 (1991); I.

State v. Liewer, 65 Wn.App. 641 (1992)

Bribery, RCW 9A.68.010(1)(b), official misconduct, RCW 9A.80.010(1), misconduct of a public officer, RCW 42.20.010, and failure of duty of a public officer, RCW 42.20.100 are not concurrent under general/specific statute analysis, State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576 (1984), State v. Greco, 57 Wn.App. 196 (1990); I.

State v. McDougal, 120 Wn.2d 334 (1992)

Where the result achieved by an unambiguous statute is "harsh, unjust and absurd," departure from literal construction of statute is justified, see: State v. Yokley, 91 Wn.App. 773 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581 (1999).

State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993)

Assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.021(1) and unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), are not concurrent, as the latter lacks a mens rea element, State v. Murphy, 7 Wn.App. 505 (1972),

State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994); II.

Ratzlaf v. United States, 126 L.Ed.2d 615 (1994)

Federal statute prohibits "willfully violating" a currency reporting law, 31 USC § 5322(a), trial court instructs jury that government had to prove defendant's knowledge of the reporting obligation and attempt to evade it, but did not have to prove that he knew the behavior was unlawful; held: the acts prohibited by this statute were not obviously evil or inherently bad, Congress has not specifically dispensed with the reporting requirement irrespective of defendant's knowledge of illegality, thus the term "willful" as used in this statute includes a requirement that government prove defendant knew his act was illegal; where statutory text is clear, court need not look to legislative history, but if there were an ambiguity, it must be resolved in favor of defendant, Hughey v. United States, 109 L.Ed.2d 408 (1990), Crandon v. United States, 108 L.Ed.2d 132 (1990), United States v. Bass, 30 L.Ed.2d 488 (1971), State v. Elwell,17 Wn.App.2d 367 (2021), see also: Bates v. United States, 139 L.Ed.2d 215 (1997); 5-4.

State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994)

Two criminal statutes with identical elements but disparate penalties do not violate equal protection clause, United States v. Batchelder, 60 L.Ed.2d 755 (1979), Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189, 192 (1991), overruling State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9 (1970); thus, assault 2° and unlawful display of weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), even if they have same elements, do not violate equal protection, see: State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993); II.

State v. McCann, 74 Wn.App. 650 (1994)

Taking a motor vehicle without permission is not concurrent with possessing stolen property 1°, as it is possible to commit taking and riding without violating PSP 1° if the vehicle is valued at less than $1500; here, trial court convicted of the lesser offense of PSP 2°, thus the general/specific statute analysis is inapplicable, see: State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576 (1984); accord: State v. Walker, 75 Wn.App. 101 (1994) (T&R and theft 1° are not concurrent); III.

State v. Bernard, 78 Wn.App. 764 (1995)

The crime of receipt of a precursor drug, RCW 69.43.070(2), is not proved by mere possession of the drug; here, defendant purchased drug in Canada, arrested at border, once purchased act of receiving ended; criminal statute must be given a literal and strict interpretation, plain language does not require construction, State v. Wilson, 125 Wn.2d 212, 216-7 (1994); I.

State v. Bolar, 129 Wn.2d 361, 366 (1996)

Where statute is plain and unambiguous, court may not engage in statutory construction, Snohomish v. Joslin, 9 Wn.App. 495, 498 (1973), nor may court consider nontextual considerations such as equity or the rule of lenity, In re A, B, C, D, E, 121 Wn.2d 80, 87 (1993), State v. McCollum, 89 Wn.App. 977, 988-9 (1997), but see: State v. Yokley, 91 Wn.App. 773 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Bash, 130 Wn.2d 594 (1996)

To prove offense of owning a dog which aggressively attacks and causes severe injury, RCW 16.08.100(3), state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant knew or should have known that the dog was dangerous; courts should not interpret an ambiguous statute to be a strict liability offense absent clear intent of the legislature, Staples v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 608 (1994), State v. Semakula, 88 Wn.App. 719 (1997), see: Spokane County v. Bates, 96 Wn.App. 893, 896-99 (1999); 4-3-2.

State v. Russell, 84 Wn.App. 1 (1996)

Defendant is charged with two counts of VUFA, former RCW 9.41.040(1), for possessing two guns found in his car, statute prohibits possession by a felon of "any firearm"; held: "any" is ambiguous, thus statute must be construed in favor of defendant, State v. Wissing, 66 Wn.App. 745, 753 (1992), State v. Barnes, 189 Wn.2d 492 (2017), "any" means all embracing, equivalent to "all" or "every," State ex rel. Evans v. Brotherhood of Friends, 41 Wn.2d 133, 145 (1952), thus only one count will lie; statute subsequently amended, RCW 9.41.040(7); II.

State v. Blilie, 132 Wn.2d 484, 492 (1997)

Statutes and court rules referencing other statutes include any subsequent amendments to the referenced statute, absent a clear expression of contrary intent, RCW 1.12.020, State v. Horton, 59 Wn.App. 412, 416 (1990); 6-3.

State v. Yokley, 91 Wn.App. 773 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581 (1999)

Undefined statutory term is accorded its plain and ordinary meaning, State v. Bolar, 129 Wn.2d 361, 366 (1996), but court can look to statutes that relate to the same class of things to determine if something other than the plain meaning was intended by the legislature, State ex rel. Zbinden v. Superior Court, 135 Wash. 458, 462-63 (1925), or when the plain meaning of a term would lead to unlikely, absurd, or strained consequences, at 779, State v. McDougal, 120 Wn.2d 334, 350, 351 (1992), State v. Heher, 52 Wn.App. 298 (1988), State v. Barnes, 196 Wn.App. 261 (2016), 189 Wn.2d 492 (2017); I.

Spokane County v. Bates, 96 Wn.App. 893, 896-99 (1999)

Where vicious animal ordinance expressly provides that owner is strictly liable for a dog bite, there is no mens rea element, distinguishing State v. Bash, 130 Wn.2d 594 (1996); III.

State v. Long, 98 Wn.App. 669 (2000)

Unlawful killing of a pet, RCW 9.08.070(1)(c), is not concurrent with malicious mischief 1°; II.

State v. D.H., 102 Wn.App. 620, 626-27 (2000)

A statement of legislative intent in a statute cannot be used to override unambiguous elements of a penal statute or to add an element of the crime, State v. Alvarez, 74 Wn.App. 250, 258 (1994), aff'd, 128 Wn.2d 1 (1995), State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47, 56 (2005); I.

State v. R.J., 121 Wn.App. 215, 217 (2004)

Where a statute is ambiguous, court is to determine intent of legislature if possible, State v. Barnes, 189 Wn.2d 492 (2017), and, if it can, rule of lenity does not apply, State v. Oakley, 117 Wn.App. 730, 734 (2003); I.

State v. Harris, 123 Wn.App. 906, 918 (2004), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006),

Where a statute is partially invalid, the invalid portions may be severed if the remaining provisions will still accomplish the statute's purpose and further the legislature's intent, State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 212-13 (2001); there is a presumption of severability; I.

State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47 (2005)

Obstructing an officer, RCW 9A.76.020(1), and refusal to cooperate, RCW 46.61.020(1), are not concurrent with identity theft, former RCW 9.35.020(1)(2001) where defendant uses false identification to avoid arrest at a traffic stop, see: State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576 (1984); I.

State v. Ou, 156 Wn.App. 899 (2010)

Following traffic stop, defendant gives a false name, is charged and convicted of making a false or misleading material statement, RCW 9A.76.175, argues that he should have been charged with the more specific offense of giving a false name, RCW 46.61.020; held: statutes are concurrent only when the general statute will be violated in each instance where the special statute has been violated, State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576, 580 (1984), State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47 (2005), State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 748 (1991), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 730-32 (2014), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); here, giving a false name does not necessarily constitute a false or misleading material statement, thus statutes are not concurrent; I.

State v. Wilson, 158 Wn.App. 305, 313-16 (2010)

Commercial sexual abuse of a minor, RCW 9.68A.100(1), is not concurrent with attempted rape of a child 2°, RCW 9A.44.076(1); I.

State v. Albarran, 187 Wn.2d 15 (2016)

Defendant is convicted of rape of a child 2° and rape 2°/incapable of consent, for a single act, trial court vacates rape of a child as the lesser offense under double jeopardy analysis, State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 684–86 (2009), defense argues that rape 2° should be vacated as it is a more specific offense under equal protection/general-specific analysis, State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576, 580 (1984); held: because the legislature specifically authorized prosecution of rape°/incapable of consent for children under 15 years, RCW 9.94A.837 (2006), the general-specific analysis is inapplicable; 9-0.

State v. Barnes, 189 Wn.2d 492 (2017)

Theft of a motor vehicle statute, RCW 9A.56.065 (2007), does not define "motor vehicle," defendant was charged for theft of a riding lawn motor, statute is ambiguous, legislative intent establishes that the statute applies to "cars," thus dismissed, Corners Family

Farmers v. State, 173 Wn.2d 296, 305-06, 268 P.3d 892 (2011); affirms State v. Barnes, 196 Wn.App. 261 (2016); 6-3.

State v. LaPointe, 1 Wn.App.2d 261 (2017)

Defendant pleads guilty to two counts of vehicle prowling 2° on same day but charged in separate informations, subsequent charge of vehicle prowling 2° is elevated to a felony based upon RCW 9A.52.100(3) (2013) which states "[a] third or subsequent conviction means that a person has been previously convicted at least two separate occasions of the crime of vehicle prowling in the second degree;" held: statute is ambiguous, legislative intent is unclear so rule of leniency requires interpretation that "when a defendant pleads guilty on the same day in a single proceeding to multiple counts of misdemeanor vehicle prowling as charged by amended information in two different cause numbers, the crime of vehicle prowling in the second degree is not elevated to a felony;" I.

State v. Joseph, 3 Wn.App.2d 365, 370-74 (2018)

Harassment statute, RCW 9A.46.060 (2006), states harassment may include, but is not limited to, a list of 38 crimes, defendant's prior conviction is for a crime that is not listed; held: where a general term, here harassment, is modified by a nonexclusive list, the general term will be deemed to "incorporate those things similar in nature or 'comparable to' the specific terms," State v. Larson, 184 Wn.2d 843, 854 (2015), look to legislative intent to determine if the unlisted crime counts; I.

State v. Yishmael, 195 Wn.2d 155 (2020)

Unlawful practice of law, RCW 2.48.180(3) (2003), is a strict liability crime; 7-2.

State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021)

Defendant-employer is accused of being responsible for victim's death, is charged with manslaughter in the second degree, RCW 9A.32.070, and violation of labor safety regulation with death resulting, RCW 49.17.190(3), defense argues that he can only be charged with the labor safety offense (a gross misdemeanor) as it is the specific offense and manslaughter is a general offense, State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982), State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576 (1984); held: because there are mental state differences in the two statutes the general-specific rule does not apply; 6-3.

State v. Elwell, 17 Wn.App.2d 367 (2021)

RCW 46.16A.520 (2011) which reads that it is unlawful for a registered owner of a vehicle to knowingly permit another to drive when the other is not licensed requires the state to prove that knowingly modifies all of the elements including knowing that the other person is unlicensed; where "knowing" is placed at the beginning of a phrase defining criminal conduct it applies to all of the elements, Flores-Figueroa v. United States, 556 U.S. 646, 129 S.Ct. 1886, 173 L.Ed.2d 853 (2009), State v. Felipe Zeferino-Lopez, 179 Wn.App. 592, 599 (2014); III.

State v. Zheng, 18 Wn.App.2d 316 (2021)

Unlawful practice of a profession without a license, RCW 18.130.190(7), is not concurrent with permitting an unlicensed employee to practice massage, RCW 18.108.035; II.

State v. Moose, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 511 (2022)

Arson is not a concurrent statute with malicious mischief under the general-specific rule, see: State v. Ou, 156 Wn.App. 899-902-03 (2010), State v. Zheng, 18 Wn.App. 2d 316, 319 (2021), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); I.

State v. Richter, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 303 (2022)

"[W]e construe statutes to avoid absurd results, and Richter's reading of former RCW 69.50.435(1) would be grammatically nonsensical. Therefore, it is not a reasonable alternative interpretation that creates ambiguity. Under the plain language of the statute, the trial court had discretion to apply the doubling language;" defendant's argument that placement of various commas and semicolons in amended statute makes the statute ambiguous is rejected; II.

SUSPENDED LICENSE/HABITUAL TRAFFIC OFFENDER

Bellevue v. Montgomery, 49 Wn.App. 479 (1987)

Habitual traffic offender defendant, RCW 46.67.090, cannot collaterally attack underlying convictions in trial court, distinguishing State v. Ponce, 93 Wn.2d 533 (1980), Upward v. Department of Licensing, 38 Wn.App. 747 (1984), State v. Smith, 122 Wn.App. 699, 702-03 (2004), rev'd, on other grounds, 155 Wn.2d 496 (2005); I.

State v. Baker, 49 Wn.App. 778 (1987), legislatively overruled, see: State v. Rogers, 127 Wn.2d 270 (1995)

In order for a driver's license suspension to be effective, Department of Licensing must send notice to the most recent address listed on any of the papers in its possession, including citations forwarded by courts, as well as to the original address provided by the driver; failure of driver to notify DOL of new address, RCW 46.20.205, does not excuse DOL's obligation, but see: State v. Whitney, 78 Wn.App. 506 (1995); proof of actual notice is not required, State v. Thomas, 25 Wn.App. 770 (1980); here, no proof that notice sent to address last obtained by DOL, thus suspended license charge dismissed; III.

Seattle v. Foley, 56 Wn.App. 485 (1990)

In suspended license case, "inquiry notice" will satisfy due process; here, license was suspended after defendant refused a breath test, thus officer's advising defendant that license would be suspended if he refused, confiscating his license and issuing a temporary one and DOL mailing notice of revocation to defendant's last known address, even though it was returned unclaimed, was sufficient notice, distinguishing State v. Baker, 49 Wn.App. 778 (1987); see: State v. Rogers, 127 Wn.2d 270 (1995); I.

State v. Vahl, 56 Wn.App. 603 (1990)

DOL sends HTO notice certified which is unclaimed by defendant; held: defendant had constructive notice of HTO status when she was convicted of three criminal traffic offenses within five years, RCW 46.65.020(1), .060, cf.: State v. Dolson, 138 Wn.2d 773 (1999); certified mail to defendant's last known address satisfies state's burden; I.

State v. Quintero-Quintero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991)

Police knowledge that defendant had revoked license 2 ½ weeks earlier plus weaving is grounds for stop and search of vehicle, State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 342-3 (1997), State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 531-33 (2003), distinguishing State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989); III.

State v. Smith, 66 Wn.App. 825 (1992)

Faxed CCDR which contains an exact copy of an original seal, intended by the Department of Licensing to be a certified copy of the driving record, ER 902, is an original document, ER 1001(c), and an admissible duplicate, ER 1001(d), 1003; I.

Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992)

Statute authorizing stop of a vehicle which has tab on license plate indicating that owner had been cited for driving without a license, RCW 46.16.710(3), does not violate Fourth Amendment or CONST. Art. 1, § 7, where sole purpose of stop is to ascertain if driver has a valid license, Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020), State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268, 270 (1997), State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), distinguishing Seattle v. Mesiani, 110 Wn.2d 454 (1988), Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), United States v. Brignoni-Ponce, 45 L.Ed.2d 607 (1975), see also: State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001); I.

State v. Danner, 79 Wn.App. 144 (1995)

Habitual traffic offender status continues beyond the five year period until DOL reinstates license, thus defendant can be convicted of DWLS 1° beyond the fifth year, RCW 46.20.342(1)(a), Artis v. Rowland, 64 Wn.2d 576, 579-80 (1964); II.

State v. Rogers, 127 Wn.2d 270 (1995)

Where Department of Licensing sends notice of license suspension to the last address provided by the driver to the Department pursuant to statutory change of address procedure, RCW 46.20.205, then driver's due process rights have been satisfied; Department need not send notice to last known address; 1989 amendments to RCW 46.20.205 legislatively overrule State v. Baker, 49 Wn.App. 778 (1987); accord, State v. Whitney, 78 Wn.App. 506, 512-3 (1995); 8-0.

State v. Whitney, 78 Wn.App. 506 (1995)

Actual notice of suspension or revocation of license is not an element, state need not prove knowledge, State v. Darnell, 8 Wn.App. 627, 631 (1973), State v. Thomas, 25 Wn.App. 770, 774 (1980); III.

State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997)

Police maintain list of persons who have been cited for driving with suspended license, observe defendant driving, knows she is on list, ran DOL check day before and confirmed license was suspended, arrests for DWLS; held: under United States and Washington constitutions, there is no right to privacy in DOL records, State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 641-45 (2011), at least where police were not on a fishing expedition, thus stop was valid, State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 342-3 (1997), State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268, 270 (1997), Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Quintero-Quintero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991), State v. McKinney, 148 Wn.2d 20 (2002); III.

State v. Storhoff, 133 Wn.2d 523 (1997)

Department of Licensing sends notice to drivers revoking driving privilege as habitual traffic offenders 30 days hence unless driver demands a hearing within ten days, RCW 46.65.065(1) permits hearings within 15 days, trial court dismisses; held: minor procedural errors do not rise to level of due process violations absent prejudice; notice cited statute (RCW 46.65) which contains the hearing request time limit, providing sufficient notification of the deadline,

Payne v. Mount, 41 Wn.App. 627, 635 (1985), State v. Nelson, 158 Wn.2d 699 (2006); DOL's derogation from the statutory language does not require dismissal absent actual prejudice, overruling Spokane v. Holmberg, 50 Wn.App. 317 (1987), distinguishing Gonzales v. Department of Licensing, 112 Wn.2d 890 (1989), State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989); affirms State v. Storhoff, 84 Wn.App. 80 (1996); 9-0.

Davis v. Department of Licensing, 137 Wn.2d 957 (1999)

Statutes which require driver's license suspensions of persons between the ages of 18 and 21 who are convicted of drug offenses, RCW 69.50.420(1), 46.20.265(1), are not vague and do not violate equal protection; 5-4.

State v. Dolson, 138 Wn.2d 773 (1999)

Following numerous convictions for DWLS, defendant is charged with DWLS 1°, challenges original notice from Department of Licensing, which was mailed to an address which defendant had given to an officer rather than to the "address of record," RCW 46.65.065; held: because legislature had set forth the exclusive means for notification to the "address of record," DOL's repudiation of the procedure in favor of another was not reasonably calculated to provide notice, see: RCW 46.20.205, Redmond v. Arroyo-Murillo, 149 Wn.2d 607 (2003), reversing State v. Dolson, 91 Wn.App. 187 (1998); DOL's defective procedure deprived defendant of due process because he could not have demanded a hearing to challenge revocation without proper notice, thus subsequent convictions putting him on notice that his license was revoked does not cure the due process violation, State v. Perry, 96 Wn.App. 1 (1999), see also: Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004), Redmond v. Bagby, 155 Wn.2d 59 (2005), State v. Nelson, 158 Wn.2d 699 (2006), Bellevue v. Lee, 166 Wn.2d 581 (2009), distinguishing State v. Vahl, 56 Wn.App. 603 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Chapman, 98 Wn.App. 888 (2000)

Certified copy of driving record and certified copy of order of license revocation are admissible without testimony by the official custodian, as foundation is evident on the face of the documents, State v. Monson, 53 Wn.App. 854, 858, aff'd, 113 Wn.2d 833 (1989), but see: Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), State v. Rainey, 180 Wn.App. 830, 843-45 (2014); III.

State v. Batten, 140 Wn.2d 362 (2000)

Drugs and firearm in felon's car requires revocation of license, RCW 46.20.285(4), affirming State v. Batten, 95 Wn.App. 127 (1999), see: State v. Griffin, 126 Wn.App. 700 (2005), State v. Dykstra, 127 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2005), but see: State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 609-11 (2006), State v. Wayne, 134 Wn.App. 873 (2006), State v. B.E.K., 141 Wn.App. 742 (2007), cf.: State v. Alcantar-Maldonado, 184 Wn.App. 215, 227-30 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001)

Officer runs license check, finds female owner's license is suspended, stops vehicle, discovers driver is male, asks for license, driver states his license is suspended, is arrested, searched, drugs found; held: while police may stop a vehicle when they learn owner's privilege to drive is suspended, RCW 46.20.349, Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020), cf.: State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81, 85 (2008), once police determine that driver is not the owner, they may not, absent more, continue to detain, State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); III.

State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 675-78 (2001)

While state must prove revocation of license complies with due process, defendant must first at least allege DOL failed to comply with statute and that this failure deprived defendant of notice or the opportunity to be heard, State v. Storhoff, 133 Wn.2d 523, 528 (1997); here, defense merely argued that state had not met its burden, did not adequately articulate a due process challenge by alleging that DOL failed to send notice to an address other than defendant's address of record.

State v. McKinney, 148 Wn.2d 20 (2002)

Police run license plate number in DOL database, discover that driver's license is suspended; held: drivers have no protected privacy interest in DOL driver's record pursuant to Fourth Amendment reasonable expectation of privacy analysis nor art. I, § 7 expectation of privacy which a citized should be entitled to hold, State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506, State v. McCready, 123 Wn.2d 260, 270 (1994), State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 641-45 (2011), distinguishing State v. Maxfield; affirms State v. Martin, 106 Wn.App. 850 (2001); 9-0.

Redmond v. Arroyo-Murillo, 149 Wn.2d 607 (2003)

Mailing license revocation notice to address obtained from a traffic ticket rather than the address provided to DOL by the driver, RCW 46.20.205(1), meets due process, State v. Dolson, 138 Wn.2d 773 (1999); 9-0.

Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004)

Statutes which authorize DOL to suspend licenses without hearings, RCW 46.20.289, -324(1), violated procedural due process, precluding conviction, but see: Redmond v. Bagby, 155 Wn.2d 59 (2005), Bremerton v. Hawkins, 155 Wn.2d 107 (2005), State v. Olinger, 130 Wn.App. 22 (2005), Bellevue v. Lee, 166 Wn.2d 581 (2009), see also: State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517, 527-30 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005)

Defendant is stopped for infraction, officer arrests for suspended license 3°, searches incident to arrests, finds drugs; officer testifies he always arrests and searches on suspended license cases, irrespective of CrRLJ 2.1(b)(2); held: police may arrest and search incident to arrest and then exercise discretion to cite and release or book; driving while suspended is a "nonminor offense" for which police may arrest, distinguishing State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978), State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989), State v. WS, 40 Wn.App. 835 (1985), State v. Pettitt, 93 Wn.2d 288 (1980), see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992); search incident to arrest for suspended license is valid absent evidence from defense that defendant's license was suspended under the unconstitutional portions of RCW 46.20.289 and -.321(1), State v. Olinger, 130 Wn.App. 22 (2005), State v. Carnahan, 130 Wn.App. 159, 164-67 (2005), State v. Materre, 131 Wn.App. 734 (2006), State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 606-07 (2006), State v. Potter, 156 Wn.2d 835 (2006), distinguishing Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004); affirms State v. Pulfrey, 120 Wn.App. 270 (2004); 9-0.

Redmond v. Bagby, 155 Wn.2d 59 (2005)

Statutes which mandate suspension of drivers' licenses following convictions for reckless driving, RCW 46.61.500, driving while license invalidated, RCW 46.20.342, vehicular homicide, RCW 46.61.520 and minor in possession of alcohol, RCW 66.44.270(2), do not violate due process, distinguishing Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004), due to a heightened government interest in highway safety and a decreased likelihood of erroneous deprivation; 7-2.

Bremerton v. Hawkins, 155 Wn.2d 107 (2005)

Statutes which mandate suspension of drivers' licenses following juvenile adjudications for alcohol, drug or firearm offenses, RCW 46.20.265, do not violate due process, distinguishing Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004); 8-1.

State v. Smith, 155 Wn.2d 496 (2005)

To prove DWLS 1°, RCW 46.20.342(1)(a), evidence must establish that defendant's privilege to drive was revoked as an habitual traffic offender pursuant to ch. 46.65, RCW; here, DOL documents admitted at trial stated that defendant's privilege was "revoked in the first degree," did not establish that license was revoked as habitual traffic offender, thus evidence was insufficient; reverses State v. Smith, 122 Wn.App. 699 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005)

Police randomly run defendant's plate, find that owner's license was suspended, stop vehicle, arrest driver-owner; held: police may stop a vehicle when they learn owner's privilege to drive is suspended, RCW 46.20.349, Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81, 85 (2008), need not compare a description of the registered owner to the driver before proceeding, Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020), distinguishing State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001); III.

State v. Griffin, 126 Wn.App. 700 (2005)

Defendant is convicted of possessing drugs in his hat and sock in a car, trial court finds defendant used a motor vehicle in commission of offense, notifies Department of Licensing, which revokes defendant's license, RCW 46.20.285(4); held: because evidence indicated that defendant had obtained the drugs in exchange for giving someone a ride in the car, trial court's finding was sufficient, see: State v. Batten, 140 Wn.2d 362 (2000), State v. Dykstra, 127 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2005), State v. B.E.K., 141 Wn.App. 742 (2007), but see: State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 609-11 (2006), cf. State v. Alcantar-Maldonado, 184 Wn.App. 215, 227-30 (2014), need not be submitted to a jury as it is not punitive, State v. Scheffel, 82 Wn.2d 872, 879 (1973), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2003); I.

State v. Dykstra, 127 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2005)

Stealing cars is both an instrumentality and an object of a crime, requiring license suspension, RCW 46.20.285(4), State v. Dupuis, 168 Wn.App. 672 (2012); III.

State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 609-11 (2006)

Drugs found in defendant's clothes within a basket and in defendant's purse within vehicle do not have a reasonable relation to the operation and use of the vehicle and vehicle did not contribute in some reasonable degree to the commission of the VUCSA offense, thus license suspension, RCW 46.20.285(4), is not valid, State v. Wayne, 134 Wn.App. 873 (2006), State v. B.E.K., 141 Wn.App. 742 (2007), State v. Alcantar-Maldonado, 184 Wn.App. 215, 227-30 (2014), distinguishing State v. Batten, 95 Wn.App. 127, 129 (1999), aff'd, 140 Wn.2d 362 (2000), State v. Griffin, 126 Wn.App. 700 (2005); III.

State v. Potter, 156 Wn.2d 835 (2006)

Police arrest for driving while license suspended 3º, search, find drugs; held: while the method by which a license is suspended may violate due process, Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004), DOL records are presumed reliable, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004), subsequent invalidation of license suspension procedures do not void the probable cause that existed to arrest, distinguishing State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92 (1982); affirms State v. Potter, 129 Wn.App. 494 (2005), State v. Holmes, 129 Wn.App. 24 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Nelson, 158 Wn.2d 699 (2006)

Defendant writes to DOL from jail to inquire how to get his license back, DOL subsequently sends notice of revocation to defendant's address of record at a residence, revocation takes effect three days after defendant's release, but letter is returned to DOL as "unclaimed," later defendant is arrested for driving while license suspended; held: while an as-applied due process challenge is permitted, Jones v. Flowers, 164 L.Ed.2d 415 (2006), because the state did not know that the notice sent to defendant's address of record was ineffective until after the revocation became operative, and because a jail is only a temporary detainment facility, the inquiry that defendant sent to DOL did not put DOL on notice that defendant would still be in jail when it sent the order, "'[a]n open-ended search for a new address' imposes too great a burden on DOL," at 705, distinguishing Robinson v. Hanrahan, 34 L.Ed.2d 47 (1972), Covey v. Town of Somers, 100 L.Ed. 1021 (1956); 6-3.

State v. Wayne, 134 Wn.App. 873 (2006)

Drugs in defendant's pocket while driving are not related to the operation of the car, thus license suspension is invalid, State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 609-10 (2006), distinguishing State v. Batten, 140 Wn.2d 362 (2000); III.

State v. B.E.K., 141 Wn.App. 742 (2007)

In malicious mischief case, respondent spray-paints graffiti on a police car, trial court reports adjudication to Department of Licensing for driver's license revocation, RCW 46.20.285(4); held: test for DOL revocation is whether vehicle operation or use contributed in some reasonable degree to the commission of a felony, i.e., the vehicle must be an instrumentality of the crime such that the offender uses it in some fashion to carry out the crime, State v. Wayne, 134 Wn.App. 873, 875-76 (2006); here, although commission of the crime was related to the vehicle, the nexus was based not on a manner of use but on a relationship between an offender and his victim, thus reversed; II.

State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81, 84-85 (2008)

Police run license check, discover owner's license is suspended, driver parks car and walks toward apartment, officer asks driver for license, discover's driver is not owner but driver's license is suspended; held: while police may stop a vehicle when they learn owner's privilege to drive is suspended, RCW 46.20.349 (1999), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020), where driver parks and walks away before officer's contact, statute authorizing stop is irrelevant; III.

Bellevue v. Lee, 166 Wn.2d 581 (2009)

DOL procedure providing 45 days written notice before suspension for failure to respond, appear or pay, driver may demand administrative review to which driver may submit evidence, RCW 46.20.245, satisfies due process, distinguishing Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004); 9-1.

State v. Anderson, 151 Wn.App. 396 (2009)

Electronic home monitoring is an alternative available to jail for DWLS 1º; prior convictions occurring more than seven years ago count towards a mandatory minimum; I.

State v. Javier Contreras, 162 Wn.App. 540, 546-47 (2011)

Possessing a stolen vehicle requires license suspension, RCW 46.20.285(4); III.

State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012)

Affidavits that state that Department of Licensing mailed notice that license would be suspended and that after diligent search defendant's license was suspended on day of offense are testimonial, Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 557 U.S. 305, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), overruling State v. Kirkpatrick, 160 Wn.2d 873 (2007) and State v. Kronich, 160 Wn.2d 893 (2007), see: , State v. Rainey, 180 Wn.App. 830, 843-45 (2014), cf.: State v. Lee, 159 Wn.App. 795, 813-19 (2011), cf.: State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932, 948-51 (2014), rev., on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016); affirms State v. Jasper, 158 Wn.App. 518 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 178 Wn.2d 534 (2014)

The law contemplates a DWLS 3° charge where the underlying suspension occurs for failure to pay a traffic fine, RCW 46.20.342(1)(c)(iv) (2004); here, requiring payment of the underlying fine was proper as defendant was not "constitutionally indigent;" 5-4.

State v. Alcantar-Maldonado, 184 Wn.App. 215, 227-30 (2014)

Driving to the scene of a felony assault is not sufficient to justify license suspension, RCW 46.20.285(4) (2005), see: State v. Batten, 140 Wn.2d 362, 365 (2000), State v. Wayne, 134 Wn.App. 873, 875-76 (2006); III.

Watkins v. Dep't of Licensing, 187 Wn.App. 591 (2015)

Officer arrests driver for DUI, turns him over to trooper to process, at license revocation hearing arresting officer's report is not certified but trooper's report which references officer's report is certified, superior court reverses revocation; held: "any other evidence accompanying" a sworn or certified report is admissible at a license revocation hearing, Cannon v. Dep't of Licensing, 147 Wn.2d 41, 51 (2002), admitting uncertified report does not violate due process clause; II.

State v. Hancock, 190 Wn.App. 847 (2015)

Driving while license suspended, RCW 46.20.342(1)(a) (1990), can be committed in a private parking lot even though the lesser included offense of driving without a license, RCW 46.20.005 (1997), must occur on a highway; II.

Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018)

At administrative hearing regarding driver's license suspension following a DUI arrest the state must offer prima facie evidence that the blood collection test tubes were chemically clean and and contained enzyme poison and anticoagulants as required by WAC 448–14–020(3)(a), (b), State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 467-68 (2001), State v. Clark, 62 Wn.App. 263, 270 (1991). State v. Brown, 145 WnApp. 62, 69–70 (2008), State v. Garrett, 80 WnApp. 651, 653 (1996); I.

Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020)

Sheriff runs license plate check, discovers owner of vehicle's license is suspended, stops car, determines that driver is owner who is convicted of driving while an habitual traffic offender; held: police may pull over a car when the officer has learned that the owner's license is suspended, absent other evidence that negates the inference that the owner is driving, State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268 (1997), Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), see: State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); 8-1.

THEFT

State v. Rogers, 30 Wn.App. 653 (1981)

State, in PSP 2° of motor vehicle, presents no evidence as to value; held: "no proof of value is required for conviction of [PSP 2°] of a motor vehicle having a value less than $1500," State v. Rhinehart, 92 Wn.2d 923 (1979); I.

State v. Clark, 96 Wn.2d 686 (1982)

One who takes a motor vehicle with permission of the owner, then exceeds the scope of that permission, cannot be convicted of taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070; 8-1.

State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788 (1983)

Defendant, charged with taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070, admits he did not know who owned the car, which was stolen either that day or the day prior; held: court could infer defendant had knowledge that car was taken unlawfully, see: State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996), State v. Phimmachak, 93 Wn.App. 11 (1998), cf.: State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999); I.

State v. Wellington, 34 Wn.App. 607 (1983)

Attempted theft by deception, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(b), RCW 9A.56.010(4), may be committed without an express misrepresentation as long as a false impression is intentionally created; fact that an undercover officer is the victim and that he was not actually deceived is not a defense; I.

State v. Woll, 35 Wn.App. 560 (1983)

In order to prove theft by appropriation of misdelivered property, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(c), intent to deprive need not be coincidental with the wrongful receipt but may be at any time the property is appropriated; II.

State v. Hicks, 36 Wn.App. 244 (1983), 102 Wn.2d 182 (1984)

Defense of good faith claim of title, RCW 9A.56.020(2) is only available where defendant is seeking to recover the specific property in question, not to collect a debt out of another's money with no pretense of rights to the specific coins and bills, cf.: State v. Cuthbert, 154 Wn.App. 318, 341-44 (2010); retaking specific property by force is a defense, State v. Larson, 23 Wn.App. 218 (1979); good faith claim of title must be disproved by the prosecutor beyond a reasonable doubt; 9-0.

State v. Birch, 36 Wn.App. 405 (1984)

Partnership funds are not the "property of another", RCW 9A.56.020(1)(2), RCW 25.04.250, and thus a partner cannot be convicted of embezzling partnership funds, State v. Eberhart, 106 Wash. 222 (1919), see: State v. Coria, 146 Wn.2d 631 (2002), State v. Wooten, 178 Wn.2d 890 (2013); legislatively overruled, RCW 9A.56.010(7)(c); III.

State v. McGary, 37 Wn.App. 856 (1984)

A temporarily inoperable motorcycle is a motor vehicle for purposes of taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070, State v. Acevedo, 159 Wn.App. 221, 227-29 (2010); I.

State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576 (1984)

Defendant rents car, fails to return it, is charged with theft 1° RCW 9A.56.010-.030; defendant alleges he should have been charged with criminal possession of a rented motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.095; held: where there is a specific statute and a general statute, accused must be charged under specific statute even if it contains additional elements, reversing State v. Shriner, 38 Wn.App. 800 (1983) see: State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 730-32 (2014), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Boyanovsky, 41 Wn.App. 166 (1985)

Unlawful issuance of a check, RCW 9A.56.060, does not require proof of receipt of property as an element of the offense; evidence is sufficient to convict where defendant issues bad checks, lies about funds to support checks, and merely hopes she will obtain funds to cover checks; III.

State v. Gillespie, 41 Wn.App. 640 (1985)

Where a loan is made on a promissory note, the proceeds are owned by the borrower and, absent a loan document conditioning title, borrower cannot be convicted of embezzlement as he did not wrongfully obtain the proceeds; accord: State v. Berman, 50 Wn.App. 125 (1987), State v. Joy, 65 Wn.App. 33 (1992), State v. Morris, 105 Wn.App. 738 (2001); I.

In re Taylor, 105 Wn.2d 67 (1985), superseded, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of St. Pierre, 118 Wn.2d 321 (1992)

RCW 50.36.010, knowingly giving false information to obtain unemployment compensation, does not have the same elements as RCW 9A.56.030, theft, thus there is no equal protection violation; because RCW 50.36.010 expressly provides that the penalty under that section is not exclusive, then the general/special rule of State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982) is inapplicable, and defendant who commits unemployment compensation fraud may be charged under the general theft statute; 9-0.

State v. Pestrin, 43 Wn.App. 705 (1986)

Defendant, charged with theft, is alleged to have sold a vehicle knowing that the odometer was turned back, challenges conviction claiming he should have been charged with special odometer statute, RCW 46.37.550; held: general theft requires proof of intent to deprive and value; determining factor is that general statute will be violated in each instance where the special statute has been violated, State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576, 580 (1984), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 730-32 (2014); here, additional elements must be proved for the general statute, thus the general/specific rule is inapplicable, see: State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); no equal protection violation, as elements differ, State v. Chase, 134 Wn.App. 792, 800-03 (2006); good faith claim of title defense is not available where theft is brought about by patently deceptive means, State v. Wellington, 34 Wn.App. 607. 612 (1983), State v. Chase, supra., at 803-06, State v. Cuthbert, 154 Wn.App. 318, 341-44 (2010); III.

State v. Hancock, 44 Wn.App. 297 (1986)

Defendant may not be charged with theft and possessing stolen property that was res of theft as long as he maintained at least constructive possession of the property, State v. Melick, 131 Wn.App. 835 (2006); II.

State v. Ellard, 46 Wn.App. 242 (1986)

Good faith claim of title is not available as a defense to theft by deception, RCW 9A.56.010(4), State v. Pestrin, 43 Wn.App. 705 (1986) or to obtaining money by false pretenses, State v. Mercy, 55 Wn.2d 530 (1960); II.

State v. Jendrey, 46 Wn.App. 379 (1986)

Theft 2° and criminal possession of leased or rented equipment, RCW 9A.56.095, are not concurrent, distinguishing State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576 (1984); one may "exert unauthorized control," RCW 9A.56.020(10)(a), over property where one obtains the property by agreement and later secretes, withholds or appropriates the property; I.

State v. Britten, 46 Wn.App. 571 (1986)

Respondent is caught in dressing room wearing five pairs of pants belonging to merchant, price tags removed; held: respondent's acts were inconsistent with store's ownership of the pants, thus there was sufficient evidence to convict of theft; accord: State v. Jones, 63 Wn.App. 703 (1992), see: State v. Roose, 90 Wn.App. 513, 518-9 (1998); I.

State v. Southard, 49 Wn.App. 59 (1987)

Alternative means of committing theft, RCW 9A.46.020, do not construe separate and distinct offenses requiring jury unanimity; I.

State v. Douglas, 50 Wn.App. 776 (1988)

A person who unlawfully possesses several stolen credit cards issued to the same person is guilty of a separate criminal act for each individual card; II.

State v. Standifer, 110 Wn.2d 90 (1988)

A bank cash machine card is not a credit card, former RCW 9A.56.010(3), for purposes of theft statute, former RCW 9A.56.040(1)(c), reversing State v. Standifer, 48 Wn.App. 119 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Bryant, 51 Wn.App. 258 (1988)

Where one takes a motor vehicle without permission of the owner, the fact that the owner later says she did not object to his taking the car is not a defense, State v. Brown, 74 Wn.2d 799 (1968); III.

State v. Thorpe, 51 Wn.App. 582 (1988)

Defendants who delivered meat to the state, submitted invoices billing for more meat than was delivered, and were paid the greater amount have committed theft of money by deception, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(b), not theft of money by taking, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a), but see: State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 434, 441 (1990), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719 (2014).

State v. Komok, 113 Wn.2d 810 (1989)

Intent to permanently deprive is not an element of theft, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a) affirming State v. Komok, 54 Wn.App. 110 (1989), overruling State v. Burnham, 19 Wn.App. 442 (1978), but see: State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 85-86 ¶ 33 (2011); 9-0.

State v. McKelvey, 54 Wn.App. 140 (1989)

To prove criminal possession of a leased motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.095, state must prove that demand to return the item was sent to defendant's last known home or business, not a post office box, but see: State v. Fleming, 155 Wn.App. 489, 503-06 (2010); II.

State v. Martin, 55 Wn.App. 275 (1989)

Taking and riding a motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.070, applies to land-based transportation only and not to motor boats; I.

State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490 (1990)

To prove taking a motor vehicle without permission, RCW 9A.56.070, state must prove that the vehicle belonged to another and that defendant intentionally used it without permission, distinguishing State v. Nelson, 63 Wn.2d 188, 191 (1963); it is not necessary to prove that the vehicle was taken from the owner by defendant, State v. Gonzales, 133 Wn.App. 236, 239-43 (2006); absence of defendant's explanation for use of what appears to have been a recently stolen automobile and flight provide sufficient evidence to infer guilty knowledge, State v. Gonzales, supra., at 243 ¶ 12, cf.: State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996), State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999); I.

State v. Skorpen, 57 Wn.App. 144 (1990)

Stealing forged check is not theft, as the owner of the forged check lost nothing of value; II.

State v. Farrer, 57 Wn.App. 207 (1990)

Where security officer testifies that the price on price tag is the market value and lays a foundation for the pricing system, then value of stolen groceries are admissible from the price tags, distinguishing State v. Coleman, 19 Wn.App. 549 (1978); accord: State v. Rainwater, 75 Wn.App. 256 (1994), State v. Kleist, 126 Wn.2d 432 (1995), State v. Quincy, 122 Wn.App. 395 (2004), cf. State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017); III.

State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 434 (1990)

Defendant ordered copyrighted software, copied it, returned it, stopped payment on check, was charged with theft 1°; held: theft is not preempted by federal copyright law; theft by taking, RCW 9A.56.020(1), does not require evidence of trespass, State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App.

719 (2014), overruling State v. Vargas, 37 Wn.App. 780, 785 (1984), State v. Smith, 2 Wn.2d 118 (1939), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Alexander, 59 Wn.App. 900 (1990)

Defendant rents videotapes, asks another to return them, he agrees, fails to do so, defendant is convicted of failure to deliver leased property, RCW 9.45.062; held: because defendant made reasonable arrangements for a third party to return the property, evidence was insufficient to convict as statute requires proof that defendant "willfully and without reasonable cause fail[ed] to deliver leased property"; I.

State v. Pike, 118 Wn.2d 585 (1992)

Defendant delivers vehicle to auto repair shop, agrees to service, including parts, after which he takes vehicle without paying; held: if a person from whom property is taken had a right of possession superior to that of defendant, that person is deemed the owner as against the defendant even if defendant had an ownership interest in the property, State v. Latham, 35 Wn.App. 862, 865 (1983), State v. Nelson, 36 Wash. 126, 128 (1904), State v. Pollnow, 69 Wn.App. 160, 164-5 (1993), State v. Grimes, 110 Wn.App. 272 (2002), State v. Mora, 110 Wn.App. 850, 856-58 (2002), State v. Grimes, 111 Wn.App. 544, 552-53 (2002), see: State v. Coria, 146 Wn.2d 631 (2002), State v. Tvedt, 116 Wn.App. 316 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 705 (2004); here, because repair shop had not complied with automobile repair act, RCW 46.71.040(1), no possessory or chattel lien right existed, thus defendant's right of possession was superior to victim's, and defendant could not then be convicted of theft of parts or services; affirms State v. Pike, 60 Wn.App. 738 (1991); see: State v. Joy, 121 Wn.2d 333 (1993), State v. Lee, 128 Wn.2d 151, 160-4 (1995), State v. Mermis, 105 Wn.App. 738 (2001), State v. Lau, 174 Wn.App. 857 (2013); 8-0.

State v. Korba, 66 Wn.App. 666 (1992)

A "public officer" for purposes of injury and misappropriation of record, RCW 40.16.020, includes deputies and employees, RCW 9A.04.110(13), WPIC 2.14; II.

State v. Stanton, 68 Wn.App. 855 (1993)

In theft by deception case, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(b), court need not instruct jury with good faith claim of title defense, RCW 9A.56.020(2), WPIC 19.08, since a finding of guilty necessarily includes an implied finding that defendant did not obtain control over the property "openly and avowedly under a good faith claim of title," State v. Emerson, 43 Wn.2d 5, 12 (1953), State v. Casey, 81 Wn.App. 524, 526-7 (1996), State v. Cuthbert, 154 Wn.App. 318, 341-44 (2010); II.

State v. Joy, 121 Wn.2d 333 (1993)

Contractor accepts advance payments to purchase materials for the contract work, fails to perform or return money; held: owners had an interest in the money given to defendant to hold for purchase of materials, when defendant used the money for other purposes, he appropriated funds to his own use, State v. Grimes, 111 Wn.App. 544, 552-53 (2002), thus committed theft by embezzlement; where there is no evidence that the parties agreed that the advance payments were to be restricted, then title passed to payee, and no embezzlement occurred, State v. Mermis, 105 Wn.App. 738 (2001), see: State v. Oglesbee, 24 Wn.App. 769 (1979), State v. Lee, 128 Wn.2d 151, 160-4 (1995); reverses, in part, State v. Joy, 65 Wn.App. 33 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Trepanier, 71 Wn.App. 372 (1993)

Where defendant admits being in a stolen car which crashes near another vehicle which defendant is observed opening and prowling, evidence is sufficient to convict for attempted theft of the prowled vehicle; similar prowling of another nearby vehicle is sufficient circumstantial evidence to convict; I.

State v. Reid, 74 Wn.App. 281, 284-9 (1994)

Complainant gives defendant money to pay expenses, defendant pays some back, is charged with theft after four years; at trial, court instructs, "fraudulent intent may be inferred from the retention for a long period of time of property to which one has no right"; held: because the instruction allowed the jury to infer, as the sole source of evidence, that defendant had a fraudulent intent, state was relieved of its burden of proving an element, thus inference, under these facts, was improper, distinguishing State v. Bryant, 73 Wn.2d 168 (1968), State v. Sullivan, 129 Wash. 42, 51 (1924); obtaining funds by deception is not imprisonment for debt, CONST. Art. 1 § 17, State v. Pike, 118 Wn.2d 585 (1992), State v. Curry, 118 Wn.2d 911, 918 (1992); III.

State v. Jacobson, 74 Wn.App. 715, 719-21 (1994)

Legal title holder of real property held in trust who sells the property without the required authority of the beneficiaries, in violation of a TRO prohibiting sale, commits theft by taking; real property can be the subject of theft by taking, as "property" means "anything of value,...real or personal,' RCW 9A.04.110(21); I.

State v. Toms, 75 Wn.App. 55 (1994)

In taking and riding a motor vehicle case, "to convict" instruction need not include element that "defendant knew that the vehicle was wrongfully taken" as long as it instructs that defendant intentionally took vehicle without permission, WPIC 74.02, State v. Robinson, 78 Wn.2d 479, 481 (1970); I.

State v. Rainwater, 75 Wn.App. 256 (1994)

Price tags constitute substantial evidence of market value only so long as the case involves a retail store that is commonly known to sell goods at the fixed price on the tag, about which court may take judicial notice, rejecting majority opinion in State v. Coleman, 19 Wn.App. 549 (1978), State v. Quincy, 122 Wn.App. 395 (2004), cf.: State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017), see also: State v. Kleist, 126 Wn.2d 432 (1995); I.

State v. Kleist, 126 Wn.2d 432 (1995)

At theft 2° trial, defense offers evidence that another nearby retail store offers same items as those stolen on sale at less than $250, excluded by trial court; held: evidence of sale prices at other retailers in the same market is relevant as to market value, reversing State v. Kleist, 74 Wn.App. 429 (1994), see also: State v. Rainwater, 75 Wn.App. 256, 262 (1994); 5-4.

State v. Brooks, 77 Wn.App. 516 (1995)

Thefts may be aggregated to increase the degree where (1) thefts are from several people at the same time and place, or (2) several articles are stolen from the same owner on different occasions if the takings are actuated by a single and continuing impulse or intent, or are carried out pursuant to a larcenous scheme or plan and constitute a continuous transaction, see: State v. Atterton, 81 Wn.App. 470 (1996), State v. Meyer, 26 Wn.App. 119 (1980), State v. Perkerewicz, 4 Wn.App. 937 (1971), State v. Vining, 2 Wn.App. 802 (1970), RCW 9A.56.010(12)(c); issue is a question of fact, State v. Eppens, 30 Wn.App. 119 (1981); here, there was no evidence that defendant stole the items at the same time and, in light of the fact that defendant sold items on two different occasions, the reasonable inference is that they occurred at different times, thus conviction for theft 2° is reversed; III.

State v. Ager, 128 Wn.2d 85 (1995)

Instructions on good faith claim of title defense in embezzlement case, RCW 9A.56.020(2), should be given only where defense presents evidence (1) that the taking of property was open and avowed and (2) showing circumstances which arguably support an inference that the defendant has some legal or factual basis for a good faith belief that s/he has title, State v. Moreau, 35 Wn.App. 688 (1983), State v. Chase, 134 Wn.App. 792, 803-06 (2006), State v. Cuthbert, 154 Wn.App. 318, 341-44 (2010), reversing, in part, State v. Ager, 75 Wn.App. 843 (1994); 8-0.

State v. Lee, 128 Wn.2d 151 (1995)

Defendant agrees to buy a house, before closing makes repairs and rents it out, never closes, renters remain in residence and ultimately buy the house, defendant charged with theft; held: since renters received what they bargained for, i.e., housing for rent money, and owner was not alleged as victim, evidence of theft 2° is insufficient, cf.: State v. George, 161 Wn.2d 203 (2007); even if owner were victim, no proof that loss exceeded $250; reverses, in part, State v. Lee, 77 Wn.App. 119 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Hoyt, 79 Wn.App. 494 (1995)

Multiple theft 3°s as part of a common scheme or plan may be aggregated into a single count of felony theft, and may not be broken up into several felony theft counts, RCW 9A.56.010(12)(c), see: State v. Carosa, 83 Wn.App. 380 (1996), cf.: State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327 (2003), State v. Farnworth, 192 Wn.2d 468 (2018); II.

State v. Sloan, 79 Wn.App. 553 (1995)

Defendant arranges for boat to be repossessed, then lies to enter repossession lot and removes boat without payment, is charged with theft of services by deception on the date boat was removed; held: since repossession services had been obtained before the deception occurred and could not have been the result of the deception, then the information was insufficient to charge theft by deception; III.

State v. Atterton, 81 Wn.App. 470 (1996)

Defendant commits eight thefts from different victims at different times, aggregated into one count of theft 1°; held: thefts involving different victims in different places cannot be statutorily aggregated, State v. Meyer, 26 Wn.App. 119, 124 (1980), but see: State v. Bonefield, 37 Wn.App. 878, 881 (1984); I.

State v. Casey, 81 Wn.App. 524 (1996)

Reliance remains essential element of theft by deception, RCW 9A.56.010(2), 9A.56.020(1)(b), State v. Zorich, 72 Wn.2d 31 (1967), see: State v. Knutz, 161 Wn.App. 395 (2011), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 699-708 (2013); where asphalt paver represents that he would pave part of driveway but paves entire driveway, that he is charging a discounted price but does not do so, that buyer is paying only for the price of asphalt but pays for labor, there is sufficient evidence of reliance; money laundering, RCW 9A.83.020(1)(a), is established by knowingly conducting a financial transaction involving the proceeds of theft by deception, using part of the proceeds to make truck payments is sufficient, State v. McCarty, 90 Wn.App. 195 (1998); I.

State v. Argo, 81 Wn.App. 552, 558-66 (1996)

Under Securities Act of Washington, RCW 21.20, defines "securities"; I.

State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996)

14-year old driving a stolen car with broken rear wing window is insufficient to find that respondent knew vehicle was taken unlawfully, see: State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490, 495 (1990), State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788, 790 (1983), State v. Couet, 71 Wn.2d 773, 776 (1967), cf.: State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999); I.

State v. Carosa, 83 Wn.App. 380 (1996)

On each of three separate days, defendant removed more than $250 from employer's cash register by taking smaller amounts from time to time during work shift, state charges three counts of theft 2°; held: each day's activity was sufficient to establish a single felony theft, since they were effectively the same time and place, State v. Brooks, 77 Wn.App. 516, 520 (1995); because state did not prosecute defendant under aggregation of misdemeanor theory, RCW 9A.56.010(15)(c), she was properly charged with three felony counts, State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327 (2003), defense is not entitled to an instruction that state had to prove a single transaction for each count, see: State v. Hoyt, 79 Wn.App. 494 (1995); II.

State v. Hull, 83 Wn.App. 786 (1996)

Theft and L&I fraud, RCW 51.48.020(2), are the same offenses for double jeopardy purposes, as the legislature intended L&I fraud to be a more specific species of theft, at 792-94, see: State v. Potter, 31 Wn.App. 883, 888 (1982), State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 778-80 (1995); value is an essential element of L&I fraud, and must be included in information and to convict instruction, at 794-98, State v. Campbell, 125 Wn.2d 797 (1995); where defendant believed he was entitled to benefits but provided false information knowing the truth would have made him ineligible for benefits, he is not entitled to a good faith claim of title instruction, State v. Pestrin, 43 Wn.App. 705, 710 (1986), at 798-800, see: State v. Chase, 134 Wn.App. 792, 803-06 (2006), State v. Cuthbert, 154 Wn.App. 318, 341-44 (2010); III.

State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229 (1997)

One who knowingly sells stolen property can be charged with trafficking, regardless of whether that person is the one who stole the property, and regardless of whether the person sells the property to a fence or an unsuspecting purchaser, see: State v. Strohm, 75 Wn.App. 301 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Owens, 180 Wn.2d 90 (2014); affirms State v. Michielli, 81 Wn.App. 773 (1996); 5-4.

State v. Ralph, 85 Wn.App. 82 (1997)

Information which charges that defendant "did steal" is insufficient to allege theft, as theft necessarily involves property of another, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a), but "steal" fails to include the ownership element, State v. Morgan, 31 Wash. 226, 228 (1903), State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701 (1995), but see: State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936, 944-45 (2000); III.

State v. Hudson, 85 Wn.App. 401, 405 (1997)

Attempting to return a stolen vehicle to the owner is a defense to taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070, as state must prove "guilty intent to deprive"; I.

State v. Moavenzadeh, 135 Wn.2d 359 (1998)

While information alleging "theft" may be adequate to convey intentional, wrongful taking, State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936, 945-47 (2000), State v. Tresenriter, 101 Wn.App. 486, 494 (2000), value element must be set forth in information, c..f: State v. Tinker, 155 Wn.2d 219 (2005), State v. Leyda, 157 Wn.2d 335, 340-42 (2006); per curiam.

State v. Roose, 90 Wn.App. 513, 518-9 (1998)

Carrying concealed stolen property through the door and being arrested just outside the store is a completed theft, not a mere attempt, see: State v. Britten, 46 Wn.App. 571 (1986); III.

State v. Collinsworth, 90 Wn.App. 546 (1997)

Defendant tells bank teller to "give me your hundreds, no dye packs," does not display a weapon, argues at trial that crime was theft, not robbery; held: an unequivocal demand for the immediate surrender of money, unsupported by a pretext of entitlement, is fraught with the implicit threat to use force, any force, no matter how slight, which induces owner to part with property is sufficient to sustain a robbery conviction, State v. Redmond, 122 Wash. 392, 393 (1922), State v. Parra, 96 Wn.App. 95, 100-102 (1999), State v. Shcherenkov, 146 Wn.App. 619 (2008), State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 298-99 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 875, 883-85 (2014), State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768 (2016); I.

State v. Phimmachak, 93 Wn.App. 11 (1998)

State need not prove joyriding passenger knew vehicle was stolen before riding in it, RCW 9A.56.070(1); I.

State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999)

Moving motor vehicle 5-40 feet within owner's driveway is sufficient to prove taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070(1); passenger who flees scene, testifies he did not know where he had been earlier, that driver said she had parked "her" car half a mile from where he met her was sufficient to prove knowledge, as flight and absence of a plausible explanation are corroborative of guilty knowledge, State v. Couet, 71 Wn.2d 773, 776 (1967), cf.: State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996), State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788 (1983); I.

State v. Garman, 100 Wn.App. 307 (1999)

In a theft case, a unanimity instruction is not required where (1) defendant is charged with a single count of theft based on a common scheme or plan, (2) evidence indicates multiple incidents of theft from same victim, (3) multiple transactions are aggregated for charging purposes, (4) jury is instructed on the law of aggregation, (5) to-convict instruction requires the jury to find that the multiple incidents are part of a "common scheme or plan, a continuing course of conduct and a continuing criminal impulse," State v. Knutz, 161 Wn.App. 395 (2011); I.

State v. Longshore, 141 Wn.2d 414 (2000)

Evidence of retail price alone may be sufficient to establish value; naturally occurring claims on private property constitute property of another; 9-0.

State v. Tresenriter, 101 Wn.App. 486, 494-95 (2000)

The word "theft" in information is sufficient to convey "wrongfully obtain or exert unauthorized control over property of another with intent to deprive, State v. Moavenzadeh, 135 Wn.2d 359, 364 (1998), under liberal construction; II.

State v. Mora, 110 Wn.App. 850 (2002)

Defendant's mother puts defendant's name on her bank account, defendant empties the account; held: funds on deposit in a joint account belong to each depositor in proportion to their ownership of the funds, RCW 30.22.090(2), adding names to the account does not make those authorized to withdraw money the owners of the money, In re Estate of Tosh, 83 Wn.App. 158, 166 (1996); mother had superior possessory interest, thus taking money from the account is theft, State v. Pike, 118 Wn.2d 585, 590 (1992); III.

State v. Grimes, 111 Wn.App. 544, 555-56 (2002)

Evidence that defendant repaid money or arranged to repay it after it was appropriated is not admissible, as repayment is not a defense to theft by embezzlement or deception, State v. Dorman, 30 Wn.App. 351 (1981); I.

State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638 (2002)

Theft by embezzlement is not an alternative mean of committing the crime of theft, rather it is a way to define the alternative mean of theft by "wrongfully obtaining or exerting unauthorized control," RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a); definitions provided in RCW 9A.56.010 do not create additional alternative means of theft, State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 89-90 (2005), State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007); unanimity is not required as to whether a defendant embezzled money , former RCW 9A.56.010(7) or took the property or services of another, RCW 9A.56.010(7)(a), State v. Perez, 130 Wn.App. 505 (2005); 9-0.

State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 331-41 (2003)

Where defendant is charged with continuous possession of stolen property during a period of time, the unit of prosecution is a single possession precluding multiple charges based upon different owners of the stolen property, see: State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2001); III.

State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327 (2003)

State may properly charge a lawyer with a separate count of theft for each discrete unauthorized withdrawal he made from his trust account, distinguishing State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2000); state is not obliged to prove that separate thefts are the result of independent criminal impulses if it chooses not to aggregate counts, distinguishing State v. Vining, 2 Wn.App. 802 (1970), State v. Barton, 28 Wn.App. 690 (1981); I.

State v. Morley, 119 Wn.App. 939 (2004)

Defendant steals a generator from an equipment rental store, owner testifies that market value of new generator is $2000, defendant is convicted of attempted theft 1°; held: market value of a new generator is not appropriate value for theft of a used generator, State v. Ehrhardt, 167 Wn.App. 934, 944-47 (2012), see: State v. Herman, 138 Wn.App. 596 (2007), State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017); III.

State v. Shaw, 120 Wn.App. 847 (2004)

Value of a car may be proved by Kelley Blue Book web site under market report exception, ER 803(a)(17); I.

State v. Pedersen, 122 Wn.App. 759 (2004)

In securities fraud case a note may or may not be a security, Reves v. Ernst & Young, 108 L.Ed.2d 47 (1990); I.

State v. Quincy, 122 Wn.App. 395 (2004)

Following shoplift arrest, loss prevention manager scans each item stolen, generates a list with prices which is admitted in evidence as business record; held: "custodian" or "other qualified witness," RCW 5.45.020, is interpreted broadly, need not be person who actually made the record, State v. Ben-Neth, 34 Wn.App. 600, 603-05 (1983), as long as s/he has custody of records or supervises its creation, Cantrill v. Am. Mail Line, Ltd., 42 Wn.2d 590 (1953); where witness demonstrates he understands the methody for retrieving the price and how the records are created, business records exception is met even though witnes cannot testify to accuracy of prices in the computer; difference between actual price tags, State v. Rainwater, 75 Wn.App. 256 (1994) and scanned records is immaterial; mere fact that record is likely to be used for litigation does not preclude its admissibility as long as they are created in the regular course of business; I.

State v. Tinker, 155 Wn.2d 219 (2005)

Information charging theft 3° need not specify value, State v. Rogers, 30 Wn.App. 653 (1981), State v. Leyda, 157 Wn.2d 335, 340-42 (2006), distinguishing State v. Moavenzadeh, 135 Wn.2d 359 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Heffner, 126 Wn.App. 803 (2005)

Gambling cheating statute, RCW 9.46.196, is not concurrent with theft 1°, thus state is not required to charge the more specific statute, State v. Datin, 45 Wn.App. 844, 845-46 (1986); III.

State v. Berry, 129 Wn.App. 59 (2005)

Defendant passes a check using identification of a fictitious person, is convicted of identity theft, former RCW 9.35.020; held: to commit identify theft, the defendant must possess or use the means of identification of a real person with intent to commit any crime, thus evidence is insufficient to convict, cf.: State v. Sells, 166 Wn.App. 918 (2012), State v. Fedorov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 193-96 (2014), State v. Christian, 200 Wn.App. 861 (2017); I.

State v. Melick, 131 Wn.App. 835 (2006)

Conviction of taking a motor vehicle without permission and possessing stolen property of the same vehicle is not a double jeopardy violation, as there is no express or implied legislative intent, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 771-72 (2005), offenses do not meet same evidence test, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 (1995), State v. Hite, 3 Wn.App. 9, 12 (1970), nor do offenses merge, State v. Parmelee, 108 Wn.App. 702, 710 (2001), however one cannot be both a principal thief and the receiver of stolen goods, State v. Hancock, 44 Wn.App. 297, 301 (1986), Milanovich v. United States, 5 L.Ed.2d 773 (1961); remedy is that only TMV conviction may stand, United States v. Gaddis, 47 L.Ed.2d 222 (1976), State v. Hancock, supra., even though punishment for PSP is greater; I.

State v. Leyda, 157 Wn.2d 335, 340-42 (2006)

State need not allege a dollar value in information, nor must jury be so instructed, for theft 3° or identity theft 2°, as value is not an essential element unless there is a minimum threshold value, State v. Tinker, 155 Wn.2d 219, 222 (2005); affirms, in part, State v. Leyda, 122 Wn.App. 633, 639-40 (2004); 7-2.

State v. George, 132 Wn.App. 654 (2006), 161 Wn.2d 204 (2007)

Statutory definitions of value, RCW 9A.56.010(18), and theft, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(b), are not vague; I.

State v. Gonzales, 133 Wn.App. 236, 239-43 (2006)

To prove taking a motor vehicle 1º, RCW 9A.56.070(1) (2002), state need only prove that vehicle belonged to another, that defendant intentionally used it without permission plus one of the five additional factors set forth in statute, need not prove defendant took it directly from the owner, State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490, 493-94 (1990); I.

State v. Chase, 134 Wn.App. 792 (2006)

Defendant leases equipment, stops paying on lease, later sells it, is convicted of theft 1º; held: theft of leased property, RCW 9A.56.096, is not concurrent with theft 1º as one can commit one without committing the other, since theft of leased property requires proof of replacement value, theft 1º requires proof of market value, State v. Pestrin, 43 Wn.App. 705 (1996); absent

"at least some objective corroborating evidence," ¶ 23, defendant's testimony that he acted in good faith on erroneous advice that owner had abandoned the equipment, defense is not entitled to good faith claim of title instruction, see: State v. Ager, 128 Wn.2d 85 (1995); I.

State v. Lampley, 136 Wn.App. 836, 840-43 (2006)

Defendant is found with a check made out to another with a forged endorsement, trial court instructs jury that the check is worth the face value, RCW 9A.56.010(18)(v)(i), even though the payor had written a replacement check to the payee; held: because the drawer actually signed the check, the check is genuine and the value is its face amount, State v. Easton, 69 Wn.2d 965 (1966), State v. Love, 176 Wn.App. 911, 922-24 (2013), affirmed, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 598 (2015); II.

State v. George, 161 Wn.2d 203 (2007)

Defendants buy inoperable truck with 185,000 miles for $1800, repair it and render it operable, sell it to undercover officers claiming falsely that defendant was original owner and it has 70,000 miles for $5500, are convicted of attempted theft 1º; held: falsely describing mileage is sufficient to establish deprivation necessary to prove unlawful taking; in a theft by deception case, the value of the property obtained, here the $5500, establishes the value element to prove attempted theft 1º, not the net result of the exchange, State v. Sargent, 2 Wn.2d 190 (1940); affirms State v. George, 132 Wn.App. 654 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Hermann, 138 Wn.App. 596 (2007)

Defendant takes rings from his mother, pawns them, court admits evidence of purchase price 20 years earlier, court instructs jury "evidence of retail price may be sufficient to establish value," defendant is convicted of theft 1º and trafficking in stolen property, RCW 9A.82.050(1); held: evidence of price paid is entitled to great weight, State v. Melrose, 2 Wn.App. 824, 831 (1970), State v. Sweeny, 162 Wn.App. 223, 232-34 (2011), State v. Ehrhardt, 167 Wn.App. 934, 944-47 (2012), distinguishing State v. Morley, 119 Wn.App. 939 (2004); pawning is sufficient to prove trafficking, as transfer of possession, not merely transfer of ownership, is encompassed in statute; by instructing jury that evidence of retail price could be sufficient to establish value, trial court improperly directed jury to give greater weight to that evidence than evidence of wholesale value, Det. Of R.W., 98 Wn.App. 140, 144 (1999); II.

State v. Walker, 143Wn.App. 880 (2008)

Defendant steals old growth cedar, states he intended to sell it, is convicted of theft and trafficking in stolen property; held: double jeopardy clause permits a person to be convicted of theft and trafficking of the same property, State v. Strohm, 75 Wn.App. 301, 310-11 (1994), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Owens, 180 Wn.2d 90 (2014), State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 237 (1997), under both different elements, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed.2d 306 (1932), and, here, different evidence tests, Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 815-20 (2004), State v. Reiff, 14 Wash. 664 (1896), as the evidence to prove one crime would not also completely prove a second crime; II.

State v. Clay, 144 Wn.App. 894 (2008)

A credit card that has not been activated is an "access device," RCW 9A.56.010(1) (2006), State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019), but see: State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10 (2012), see: State v. Schloredt, 97 Wn.App. 789 (1999); I.

State v. Crittenden, 146 Wn.App. 361 (2008)

Taking a motor vehicle without permission of the owner is not a lesser of theft, see: State v. Ritchey, 1 Wn.App.2d 387 (2017); I.

State v. Cuthbert, 154 Wn.App. 318, 341-44 (2010)

Defendant, as guardian for disabled son, deposited checks payable to his son into his own accounts without evidence that he properly accounted for them, submitted false guardianship accountings and then chose not to file court ordered accountings, testifies he did so in order to keep the court from looking into his family's affairs, seeks good faith claim of title instruction, RCW 9A.56.020(2)(a); held: absent evidence that property was appropriated openly and avowedly, court need not instruct with WPIC 19.08, State v. Pestrin, 43 Wn.App. 705 (1986), State v. Ager, 128 Wn.App. 85 (1995), State v. Hull, 83 Wn.App. 786, 798-800 (1996); 2-1, II.

State v. Fleming, 155 Wn.App. 489, 503-07 (2010)

Theft of rental property presumption of intent to deprive statute, RCW 9A.56.096(2)(a), requires evidence that defendant received notice, not merely that it was delivered, but see: State v. McKelvey, 54 Wn.App. 140 (1989); II.

State v. McPhee, 156 Wn.App. 44, 65-66 (2010)

"[A] property owner may testify as to the property's market value without being qualified as an expert," at 65 ¶ 50, State v. Hammond, 6 Wn.App. 459, 461 (1972); but see: State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017); III.

State v. Hawkins, 157 Wn.App. 739 (2010)

Good faith claim of title is not a defense to possessing stolen property, but see: State v. Smyth, 7 Wn.App. 50 (1972); III.

State v. Acevedo, 159 Wn.App. 221, 227-29 (2010)

A vehicle designed for self propulsion is a motor vehicle for purposes of possession of a stolen vehicle, RCW 9A.56.068(1), even if it is currently incapable of self propulsion, State v. McGary, 37 Wn.App. 856, 859 (1984); III.

State v. Rose, 160 Wn.App. 29 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 10 (2012)

Defendant takes an inactivated credit card from victim's trash can in her home, is convicted of possessing stolen property; held: taking a card from garbage is theft, see: State v. Askham, 120 Wn.App. 872 (2004); III.

State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 85-86 ¶ 33 (2011)

Intent to permanently deprive is an element of theft [dicta], RCW 9A.56.020, but see: State v. Komok, 113 Wn.2d 810 (1989), but not an element of taking a motor vehicle 2°; 2-1, III.

State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10 (2012)

Defendant takes a credit card from trash, owner testifies she received it in the mail as an offer, she did not activate it or sign it and threw it away, defendant is convicted of possession of a stolen access device, RCW 9A.56.010(1), -.56.160(1); held: while an unactivated or cancelled credit card may be an access device if it could be used, State v. Clay, 144 Wn.App. 894, 896-98 (2008), State v. Schloredt, 97 Wn.App. 789 (1999), State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490 (2008), State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019), here state did not prove that the card was linked to an existing, active account, card was not signed, thus speculative that the card could have been used, thus evidence was insufficient to convict of possessing stolen property; reverses State v. Rose, 160 Wn.App. 29 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Killingsworth, 166 Wn.App. 283, 288-90 (2012)

Instruction that reads "defendant knowingly trafficked in stolen property" adequately requires state to prove that defendant knew the property was stolen, court suggests a preferable instruction is "defendant knowingly sold, transferred, distributed, dispensed, or disposed of property to another person, knowing that the property was stolen," State v. Zeferino-Lopez, 179 Wn.App. 592 (2014); I.

State v. Sells, 166 Wn.App. 918 (2012)

Use of a stolen credit card in the name of an individual and a school district is sufficient to prove identity theft, RCW 9.35.020 (2008), at 923-25, distinguishing State v. Berry, 129 Wn.App. 59, 67 (2005); theft 3° is not a legal lesser of identity theft 2°, at 925-26; I.

State v. Ehrhardt, 167 Wn.App. 934, 944-47 (2012)

Theft victim testifies to cost and age of used tools that were stolen but does not establish "how fast the price…drops" or condition of the tools; held: while retail price paid for an item is entitled to great weight, State v. Hermann, 138 Wn.App. 596, 602 (2007), such evidence must not be remote, State v. Melrose, 2 Wn.App. 824, 831 (1970), thus evidence was insufficient to establish threshold value for theft 2°, State v. Morley, 119 Wn.App. 939 (2004); 2-1, II.

State v. Evans, 177 Wn.2d 186 (2013)

A corporate victim is a person for purposes of identity theft, RCW 9.35.020(3) (2008), 9.35.005(4) (2001); affirms State v. Evans, 164 Wn.App. 629 (2011); 8-1.

State v. Mau, 178 Wn.2d 308 (2013)

Defendant makes a false claim for damages to U-Haul which is self-insured but contracts with an insurer to manage the claims, is convicted of making a false insurance claim, RCW 48.30.230 (2003); held: state failed to prove that a claims administration contract is a contract of insurance; 7-2.

State v. Lau, 174 Wn.App. 857 (2013)

Defendant is convicted of theft from the government for underreporting gambling receipts and thus not paying taxes on the gambling income; held: no evidence established that the government had an ownership interest in the gross gambling receipts or that the receipts constituted an account receivable, thus evidence was insufficient to prove that defendant wrongfully obtained the property of another; I.

State v. Love, 176 Wn.App. 911, 922-24 (2013)

A post-dated check that is cancelled before it is presented is worth the face value, State v. Easton, 69 Wn.2d 965 (1966), State v. Young, 97 Wn.App. 235, 239-40 (1999); III.

State v. Owens, 180 Wn.2d 90 (2014)

Alternative means of committing trafficking stolen property 1°, RCW 9A.82.050 (2003), are facilitating theft of property so that it can be sold and facilitating the sale of property known to be stolen, State v. Lindsey, 177 Wn.App. 233, 239-48 (2013), overruling dicta in State v. Strohm, 75 Wn.App. 301, 307 (1994), State v. Hayes, 164 Wn.App. 459, 476 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Zeferino-Lopez, 179 Wn.App. 592 (2014)

Defendant opens bank account with a Social Security card which belonged to another, testifies he bought the card with his name on it and didn't know it belonged to someone else, state argues that identity theft, RCW 9.35.020(1) (2008), only requires proof that defendant knowingly possessed someone else's Social Security card, not that he knew the card belonged to another person; held: identity theft requires state to prove defendant knew the card actually belonged to someone else, Flores-Figueroa v. United States, 556 U.S. 646, 173 L.Ed.2d 853 (2009), State v. Killingsworth, 166 Wn.App. 283 (2012), cf.: State v. Christian, 200 Wn.App. 861 (2017), State v. Elwell, 17 Wn.App.2d 367 (2021), insufficient here, ; I.

State v. Graham, 182 Wn.App. 180 (2014)

Defendant takes two items from shelf in retail store, asks to return one claiming she lost receipt, store issues gift card for value of the item, she then uses gift card to purchase the other item, next day returns to store and "returns" item for cash, is charged with trafficking in stolen property, RCW 9A.82.055 (2003), -010(19) (2012), trial court grants Knapstad motion, CrR 8.3(c); held: trafficking requires proof that defendant transferred stolen property which means property obtained by theft, RCW 9A.82.010(16), no evidence here that defendant intended to deprive store of the items, rather intent was to obtain their value, thus dismissed; III.

State v. Hassan, 184 Wn.App. 140 (2014)

In UIBC case, where defendant deposits a bad check in his own bank account the value of the transaction for purposes of the threshold for theft 2º is based on the amount immediately available for withdrawal or the amount actually withdrawn; here, defendant deposited a bad check for more than $750, bank would have allowed him to withdraw up to $1000 but defendant withdrew less than $750, state was not obliged to charge aggregation, State v. Rivas, 168 Wn.App. 882, 884-90 (2012), in order to reach the statutory felony threshold; II.

State v. Reeves, 184 Wn.App. 154 (2014)

A pliers is not "an item…designed to overcome security systems" for purposes of proving retail theft with extenuating (now "special") circumstances, RCW 9A.56.360 (2006),

State v. Larson, 184 Wn.2d 843 (2015), cf.: State v. Wade, 196 Wn.App. 142 (2016); II.

State v. Reeder, 184 Wn.2d 805, 825-31 (2015)

Unit of prosecution for securities fraud, RCW 21.20.010, is every separate sale of a security, cf.: State v. Mahmood, 45 Wn.App. 200, 206 (1986); unit of prosecution for theft 1° by deception, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(b), is each separate transaction occurring at a separate time; 7-2.

State v. Larson, 184 Wn.2d 843 (2015)

A wire cutter is not "an item…designed to overcome security systems" for purposes of proving retail theft with extenuation or special circumstance, RCW 9A.56.360 (2006), State v. Reeves, 184 Wn.App. 154 (2014), as the statute is limited to implements created for the specialized purpose of overcoming security systems, cf.: State v. Wade, 196 Wn.App. 142 (2016),reversing State v. Larson, 185 Wn.App. 903 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Nelson, 195 Wn.App. 261 (2016)

Gift card can be an access device, RCW 9A.56.010(1), at least when used to purchase items; II.

State v. Wade, 196 Wn.App. 142 (2016)

A set of magnets, thin key and tumbler key may be items "designed to overcome security systems" to prove retail theft with special circumstances, RCW 9A.56.360 (2006), cf.: State v. Larson, 184 Wn.2d 843 (2015), State v. Reeves, 184 Wn.App. 154 (2014); III.

State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017)

Defendant is charged with theft 2° of access device, to convict instruction includes an element that requires proof that defendant intended to deprive victim of an access device, statute only requires proof that defendant intended to deprive of property, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a) (2004); held: law of the case doctrine obliges the state to prove all elements contained in to convict instruction, even surplusage, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1988), State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017), overruling, see: State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); law of the case doctrine is grounded in state common law, thus Washington will not follow Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Barnes, 189 Wn.2d 492 (2017)

A riding lawn mower is not a motor vehicle for purposes of theft of a motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.065, cf.: State v. Van Wolvelaere, 195 Wn.2d 597 (2020); affirms State v. Barnes, 196 Wn.App. 261 (2016); III.

State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017)

Chattel owner testifies to a "rough estimate" of value of $800, defendant is convicted of theft 2°, RCW 9A.56.160 (2009); held: while a property owner may testify to market value, McCurdy v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 68 Wn.2d 457, 468 (1966); State v. Hammond, 6 Wn.App. 459, 461 (1972), a "rough estimate" is insufficient to establish value "beyond a reasonable doubt;" 2-1, III.

State v. Christian, 200 Wn.App. 861 (2017)

Defendant hands stolen debit card to store clerk, bank declines to honor the card, is convicted of identity theft, RCW 9.35.020 (2017); held: a transaction need not be completed to establish "use" for purposes of identity theft; I.

State v. Ritchey, 1 Wn.App.2d 387 (2017)

Taking a motor vehicle 2°, RCW 9A.56.075 (2003), is not a lesser of theft of a motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.065 (2007); III.

State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018)

Possessing a stolen vehicle, RCW 9A.56.068(1). is not an alternative means crime, State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App 407, 414 (2016), regardless of the fact that the statute prohibits a list of disjunctive terms; where the to convict instruction does not include the disjunctive (or), the law of the case doctrine does not require the state to prove all means; affirms State v. Tyler, 195 Wn.App. 385 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Farnworth, 192 Wn.2d 468 (2018)

Defendant obtains workers' compensation benefits by falsely claiming he was unemployed on numerous occasions, state aggregates many numerous thefts that individually would be thefts 2° into three counts of theft 1° maintaining that there was a common scheme or plan and between each count defendant had the opportunity to reconsider; held: RCW 9A.56.010(21)(c) (2017) allows state to aggregate theft 3°s if each count differs as to its plan and scheme, which conflicts with common law aggregation which allows an endless variety of thefts as long as each is distinct in time, but because statute only refers to aggregation of theft 3°s common law still applies, see: State v. Linden, 171 Wn. 92, 102-03 (1932), State v. Vining, 2 Wn.App. 802, 808 (1970); because there is a factual basis for prosecutor to justify the separate charges there is no double jeopardy violation, State v. Perkerewicz, 4 Wn.App. 937, 941-42 (1970); reverses, in part, State v. Farnworth, 199 Wn.App. 195, 202-05 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Barboza-Cortez, 194 Wn.2d 639 (2019)

Unlawful possession of a firearm 2°, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a), and identity theft 2°, RCW 9.35.020(1), are not alternative means crimes, overruling, in part, State v. Barboza-Cortez, 5 Wn.App. 86, 88-89 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Van Wolvelaere, 195 Wn.2d 597 (2020)

A snowmobile is a motor vehicle for purposes of theft of a motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.065 (2007), cf.: State v. Barnes, 189 Wn.2d 492 (2017); reverses, in part, State v. Van Wolvelaere, 8 Wn.App.2d 705 (2019); 5-4.

State v. Lake, 13 Wn.App.2d 773 (2020)

Defendant orders items on-line using another's credit card fraudulently, is convicted of organized retail theft 2°, RCW 9A.56.350, -.360 (2017); held: statute requires proof that defendant stole from a "mercantile establishment" which is undefined and ambiguous, legislative intent from history indicates it requires a physical retail store, thus conviction is reversed; II.

State v. Level, 19 Wn.App.2d 56 (2021)

A moped is a motor vehicle for purposes of possession of a stolen vehicle, State v. Van Wolvelaere, 195 Wn.2d 597 (2020), cf.: State v. Barnes, 189 Wn.2d 492 (2017); III.

VAGUENESS/OVERBREADTH

State v. Lalonde, 35 Wn.App. 54 (1983)

Obstructing statute, RCW 9A.76.020(3) is not vague and overbroad; I.

State v. Sayler, 36 Wn.App. 230 (1983)

Defendant exposes himself to two juveniles in defendant's garage, is charged with public indecency, RCW 9A.88.010(2) prohibiting "open and obscene exposure"; held: statute is ambiguous.

Bellevue v. Acrey, 37 Wn.App. 57 (1984)

Ordinance prohibiting making any "willfully untrue, misleading or exaggerated" statement to an officer is not vague or overbroad; I.

State v. Kirvin, 37 Wn.App. 452 (1984)

Seattle false reporting ordinance, SMC § 12A.16.040(D), is not vague; I.

State v. MacRae, 101 Wn.2d 63 (1984)

Failure to use due care and caution, RCW 46.61.445, does not define a separate traffic offense for which a citation may be issued; 9-0.

State v. Maciolek, 101 Wn.2d 259 (1984)

Intimidation with a weapon, RCW 9.41.270, and CCW, SMC § 12A.14.075, are not vague; 9-0.

Seattle v. Hill, 40 Wn.App. 159 (1985)

Seattle lewd conduct ordinance, SMC § 12A.10.070, exempting "artistic or dramatic performances" is unconstitutionally vague; I.

State v. O'Neill, 103 Wn.2d 853 (1985)

Bribery statute, RCW 9A.68.010(1)(a) is not vague or overbroad; criminal intent is an implied element of bribery, State v. Stroh, 91 Wn.2d 580, 585, 8 A.L.R. 4th 760 (1979); 8-0.

State v. Reyes, 104 Wn.2d 35 (1985)

Insulting or abusing a teacher on school grounds, RCW 28A.87.010, is vague and overbroad; 9-0.

Seattle v. Eze, 45 Wn.App. 744 (1986)

Seattle's disorderly conduct on buses ordinance, SMC § 12A.12.040, prohibiting conduct which is loud or raucous and unreasonably disturbs others, is not vague or overbroad; I.

State v. Smith, 48 Wn.App. 33 (1987)

Harassment statute, RCW 9A.46.020, prohibiting threatening, without lawful authority, to cause bodily injury, is not vague, State v. E.J.Y., 113 Wn.App. 940 (2002), distinguishing Seattle v. Rice, 93 Wn.2d 728 (1980); II.

State v. Hill, 48 Wn.App. 344 (1987)

Reckless manner, as provided in vehicular assault statute, RCW 46.61.522, is not vague; III.

State v. Aver, 109 Wn.2d 303 (1987)

Obstructing a lawfully operated train, RCW 81.48.020, is not vague; see: State v. Ankroy, 53 Wn.App. 393 (1989); 7-2.

Houston v. Hill, 96 L.Ed.2d 398 (1987)

Ordinance which prohibits "interrupt[ing] any policeman in the execution of his duty" is overbroad; 8-1.

State v. Brown, 50 Wn.App. 405 (1988)

Threats to bomb, RCW 9.61.160, is not vague or overbroad, State v. Smith, 93 Wn.App. 45 (1998); I.

Spokane v. Fischer, 110 Wn.2d 541 (1988)

Ordinance prohibiting allowing "frequent or habitual" barking which "disturbs or annoys" others is unconstitutionally vague; 9-0.

Sunnyside v. Wendt, 51 Wn.App. 846 (1988)

Ordinance prohibiting "willfully hinder[ing], delay[ing] or obstruct[ing] any . . . officer in the discharge of his . . . duties" is not vague; refusing to produce a drivers' license to an officer investigating an accident violates the ordinance; III.

State v. Worrell, 111 Wn.2d 537 (1988)

Kidnapping 1° is not vague; 8-0.

Seattle v. Huff, 111 Wn.2d 923 (1989)

Seattle telephone harassment ordinance, SMC § 12A.06.100(3), is not vague or overbroad, see: State v. Alphonse, 142 Wn.App. 417 (2008), 147 Wn.App. 891 (2008); affirms Seattle v. Huff, 51 Wn.App. 12 (1988); accord: State v. Alexander, 76 Wn.App. 830 (1995), but see: Bellevue v. Lorang, 140 Wn.2d 19 (2000).

Seattle v. Cadigan, 55 Wn.App. 30 (1989)

"Lawfully arresting" in resisting arrest ordinance, SMC § 12A.16.050, is not void for vagueness; I.

State v. Carver, 113 Wn.2d 591 (1989)

Custodial interference, RCW 9A.40.060, is not vague; 9-0.

Seattle v. Slack, 113 Wn.2d 850 (1989)

Seattle prostitution loitering ordinance, SMC § 12A.10.010(B), is not vague or overbroad, cf.: Spokane v. Neff, 152 Wn.2d 85 (2004), does not shift burden, does not violate equal protection; circumstances set forth in ordinance which trier of fact may consider (beckoning, waving, circling area in motor vehicle, is known prostitute) do not create mandatory presumption, as nothing required defendant to explain conduct, Seattle v. Jones, 79 Wn.2d 626 (1971), State v. VJW, 37 Wn.App. 428 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490 (1990)

Obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020(3), is not vague; I.

State v. Greco, 57 Wn.App. 196 (1990)

Bribery, RCW 9A.68.010(1)(b) is not vague or overbroad, as "corrupt intent" is an implied element, State v. O'Neill, 103 Wn.2d 853 (1985); II.

Spokane v. Douglass, 115 Wn.2d 171 (1990)

Vagueness challenges which do not involve First Amendment rights are to be evaluated in light of the particular facts of each case and not for facial vagueness, Maynard v. Cartwright, 100 L.Ed.2d 372 (1988); 9-0.

Seattle v. Johnson, 58 Wn.App. 64 (1990)

Seattle lewd conduct ordinance, SMC § 12A.10.070, is overbroad; I.

Seattle v. Webster, 115 Wn.2d 635 (1990)

Pedestrian interference ordinance prohibiting "intentionally obstruct[ing] pedestrian or vehicular traffic," SMC § 12A.12.015(B), is neither overbroad nor vague, see Spokane v. Marr, 129 Wn.App. 890 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991)

RCW 9.68A.011(3)(e), defining sexually explicit conduct, is not overbroad, State v. Myers, 133 Wn.2d 26, 30-34 (1997), State v. Stellman, 106 Wn.App. 283 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Bohannon, 62 Wn.App. 462 (1991)

Sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68.040(1)(b), and definition of sexually explicit conduct, RCW 9.68A.011(3)(e), are not vague, State v. Stellman, 106 Wn.App. 283 (2001); II.

State v. Washington, 64 Wn.App. 118 (1992)

Statutory inference in reckless endangerment 1° statute, RCW 9A.36.045(2), that person who "unlawfully discharges" firearm from moving vehicle is inferred to have engaged in reckless conduct, is not vague, State v. Smith, 111 Wn.2d 1, 6 (1988); I.

Tacoma v. Luvene, 118 Wn.2d 826 (1992)

Tacoma drug loitering ordinance, TMC 8.72.010, is not overbroad or vague; 8-0.

State v. Stark, 66 Wn.App. 423 (1992)

Assault 2° by intentionally exposing sexual partners to HIV, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(e), is not vague; II.

State v. Wissing, 66 Wn.App. 745 (1992)

Adult asks minor to look at nude photographs, if he knows how to masturbate, asks to see pubic hair, which is declined, is charged with communicating with a minor for immoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090; held: while defendant's conduct was for sexual gratification, RCW 9.68A.011(3)(e), it was not in the context of a live performance, RCW 9.68.040(1)(b), and thus does not fall within the constitutional core of the charged statute, State v. Danforth, 56 Wn.App. 133 (1989), see: State v. McNallie, 64 Wn.App. 101, review granted, 119 Wn.2d 1001 (1992), State v. Luther, 65 Wn.App. 424 (1992), and was thus vague as applied; I.

State v. Coria, 120 Wn.2d 156 (1992)

Enhanced penalty statute for delivery of drugs within 1000 feet of school bus stop, RCW 9.94A.310(5), former RCW 69.50.435(a), is not vague, reversing State v. Coria, 62 Wn.App. 44 (1991), accord: State v. Davis, 93 Wn.App. 648 (1999), State v. Johnson, 116 Wn.App. 851, 861-63 (2003), State v. Richter, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 303 (2022); 6-3.

State v. Halstien, 122 Wn.2d 109, 116-121 (1993)

Sexual motivation statute, RCW 13.40.135, is not vague or overbroad; affirms State v. Halstien, 65 Wn.App. 845 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Talley, 122 Wn.2d 192 (1993)

That portion of malicious harassment statute, RCW 9A.36.080(2) (1993), that prohibits cross burning and defacement of property with hate words or symbols is overbroad, but see: Virginia v. Black, 155 L.Ed.2d 535 (2003); the remainder of the statute is neither overbroad nor vague; 8-0.

State v. Russell, 69 Wn.App. 237 (1993)

"Pattern or practice of assault or torture" in homicide by abuse statute, RCW 9A.32.055, is not vague; II.

Yakima v. Irwin, 70 Wn.App. 1 (1993)

False reporting ordinance is neither vague nor overbroad; III.

Seattle v. Ivan, 71 Wn.App. 145 (1993)

Ordinance prohibiting coercion, SMC § 12A.06.090, is overbroad because the city's definition of "threat," SMC § 12A.08.050(L), encompasses constitutionally protected speech, State v. Pierre, 108 Wn.App. 378 (2001), but see: State v. Knowles, 91 Wn.App. 367 (1998), State v. Pauling, 149 Wn.2d 381 (2003); I.

Everett v. Heim, 71 Wn.App. 392 (1993)

Ordinance prohibiting adult entertainer from sitting on lap or separating a patron's legs is not overbroad or vague, prohibits pure conduct, not speech, O'Day v. King Cy., 109 Wn.2d 796 (1988), does not violate equal protection by distinguishing entertainers who perform in adult entertainment places as opposed to other entertainers; I.

State v. Dyson, 74 Wn.App. 237, 241-48 (1994)

Telephone harassment statute, RCW 9.61.230(1) and (2) is not overbroad; RCW 9.61.230(2) ["extremely inconvenient hour"] is not vague, Seattle v. Huff, 111 Wn.2d 923 (1989), State v. Alexander, 76 Wn.App. 830 (1995), State v. Alphonse, 142 Wn.App. 417 (2008), 147 Wn.App. 891 (2008)but see: Bellevue v. Lorang, 140 Wn.2d 19 (2000); I.

State v. McBride, 74 Wn.App. 460, 464-7 (1994)

Statute authorizing court to prohibit persons on community supervision from entering high drug trafficking areas, RCW 10.66, is not overbroad, is rationally related to the crime, does not violate due process by creating irrebuttable presumption that person who once delivered drugs will do so again, and does not deprive defendant of his right to travel, as long as breadth of order is limited in accordance with RCW 10.66.050; III.

State v. Maxwell, 74 Wn.App. 688 (1994)

Motorcycle helmet law, RCW 46.37.530, authorizes state patrol to adopt rules for approved helmet, WSP adopts a federal standard cited in CF.R.; held: ordinary citizen would not know where to look to determine whether helmets were lawful, thus statute and regulation failed to provide fair notice and ascertainable standards, see: State v. Schimmelpfennig, 92 Wn.2d 95, 102 (1979), In re Powell, 92 Wn.2d 882, 888-9 (1979), State v. Dougall, 89 Wn.2d 118 (1977), but see: State v. Davis, 131 Wn.App. 246 (2006), State v. Eckblad, 152 Wn.2d 515 (2004); III.

State v. Spencer, 75 Wn.App. 118, 124-8 (1994)

Unlawful display of a weapon, former RCW 9.41.270(1), is neither vague nor overbroad, see: State v. Maciolek, 101 Wn.2d 259 (1984); I.

State v. Hunt, 75 Wn.App. 795 (1994)

Unlawful practice of law, RCW 2.48.180, is not vague, State v. Yishmael, 6 Wn.App.2d 203 (2018), rev. granted, 193 Wn.2d 1002 (2019); II.

State v. Alexander, 76 Wn.App. 830 (1995)

Telephone harassment statute, RCW 9.61.230, and Seattle ordinance, SMC § 12A.06.100, are not vague or overbroad, Seattle v. Huff, 111 Wn.2d 923 (1989), State v. Dyson, 74 Wn.App. 237, 241-8 (1994), State v. Alphonse, 142 Wn.App. 417 (2008), 147 Wn.App. 891 (2008), see: Redmond v. Burkhart, 99 Wn.App. 21 (2000), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Lilyblad, 163 Wn.2d 1 (2008), but see: Bellevue v. Lorang, 140 Wn.2d 19 (2000); I.

State v. Myles, 127 Wn.2d 807 (1995)

Concealed weapons statute, RCW 9.41.250, which prohibits "furtively carry[ing] with intent to conceal" a weapon does not require an overt movement to conceal and is not vague, reversing State v. Myles, 75 Wn.App. 643 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Olsson, 78 Wn.App. 202, 205-7 (1995)

Statute which requires vehicle mufflers "to prevent excessive or unusual noise," RCW 46.37.390(1), is not vague, what is loud and excessive noise for a vehicle is a matter of common knowledge, persons of reasonable understanding are not required to guess its meaning; III.

State v. Pollard, 80 Wn.App. 60 (1995)

Malicious harassment, former RCW 9A.36.080(1), is not vague; I.

Seattle v. Montana, 129 Wn.2d 583, 596-99 (1996)

City ordinance prohibiting carrying, concealed or unconcealed, a fixed blade knife, SMC § 12A.14, is neither vague nor overbroad; 9-0.

State v. Edwards, 84 Wn.App. 5, 16-20 (1996)

Threatening a building, RCW 9.61.160, is not overbroad, State v. Smith, 93 Wn.App. 45 (1998); II.

State v. Dana, 84 Wn.App. 166 (1996)

Luring, RCW 9A.40.090, is neither vague nor overbroad, but see: State v. Homan, 191 Wn.App. 759 (2015), nor does it violate police power doctrine; I.

State v. Shelley, 85 Wn.App. 24 (1997)

Assault statute, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a), is not vague as applied to sports altercations; I.

Seattle v. Abercrombie, 85 Wn.App. 393 (1997)

Obstructing a public officer ordinance, SMC § 12A.16.010(A)(5), prohibiting "intentionally refus[ing] to leave the scene of a crime…while an investigation is in progress after being requested to leave by a public officer" is not overbroad nor vague on its face or as applied, see: Seattle v. Patu, 108 Wn.App. 364 (2001), aff'd, on other grounds, 147 Wn.2d 717 (2002); I.

State v. J.D., 86 Wn.App. 501 (1997)
Bellingham curfew ordinance, BMC § 10.62.030, is vague; I.

State v. Lightle, 88 Wn.App. 470 (1997)
Removing archeological objects, RCW 27.53.060(1), is not vague; III.

State v. Lee, 135 Wn.2d 369 (1998)
Stalking, former RCW 9A.46.110, is neither vague nor overbroad, State v. Ainslie, 103 Wn.App. 1 (2000), State v. Haines, 151 Wn.App. 428, 437-39 (2009), does not violate due process; 7-2.

State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 794 (1998)
Intimidating a public servant, RCW 9A.76.180, is not overbroad, see: State v. Knowles, 91 Wn.App. 367 (1998), but see: State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019); II.

Holland v. Tacoma, 90 Wn.App. 533 (1998)
Noise ordinance prohibiting playing car radio audible at a distance of greater than fifty feet is not overbroad or vague; II.

State v. Andree, 90 Wn.App. 917 (1998)
Animal cruelty, RCW 16.52.205, as applied where defendant stabbed a kitten nine times, is not vague, State v. Paulson, 131 Wn.App. 579 (2006), State v. Peterson, 174 Wn.App. 828, 845-49 (2013); I.

State v. Knowles, 91 Wn.App. 367 (1998)
Intimidating a judge, RCW 9A.72.160, 9A.04.110(25)(j), is not overbroad, see: State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 794 (1998), distinguishing Seattle v. Ivan, 71 Wn.App. 145 (1993); II.

State v. Hollis, 93 Wn.App. 804, 810-12 (1999)
Involving minor in a drug transaction, RCW 69.50.401(f) [recodified RCW 69.50.4015 (2003)], is not vague; I.

Chicago v. Morales, 144 L.Ed.2d 67 (1999)
Ordinance which requires a police officer, on observing a person whom he reasonably believes to be a criminal street gang member loitering in any public place with one or more other persons, to order all such persons to disperse, and makes failure to obey such an order a violation, is vague; 5-4.

State v. Pastrana, 94 Wn.App. 463 (1999)
Shooting a gun at an occupied vehicle moving on a crowded freeway creates a grave risk of death and manifests an extreme indifference to human life, thus murder 1° by extreme indifference to life, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), is not vague as applied, but see: State v. Henderson, 182 Wn.2d 734 (2015); II.

State v. Rosul, 95 Wn.App. 175 (1999)

For possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68A.070, RCW 9.68A.110, construing statute to require proof of knowledge that defendant was aware of nature and content of the material plus an affirmative defense that defendant can prove that he was "not in possession of any facts on the basis of which he should reasonably have known that the person depicted was a minor" saves statute from overbreadth challenge; I.

State v. Owens, 95 Wn.App. 619, 628-33 (1999)

Sentencing Reform Act sections which permit exceptional sentences when a crime is more egregious than typical, RCW 9.94A.120(2), 9.94A.390(2)(e), are not susceptible to vagueness challenges, State v. Jacobson, 92 Wn.App. 958 (1998), but see: State v. Wilson, 96 Wn.App. 382, 393-96 (1999); I.

Bellevue v. Lorang, 140 Wn.2d 19 (2000)

Telephone harassment ordinance prohibiting "profane" language is overbroad; ordinance prohibiting telephone calls "without purpose of legitimate communication" is vague, reversing Bellevue v. Lorang, 92 Wn.App. 186 (1998), cf.: Seattle v. Huff, 111 Wn.2d 293 (1989), State v. Dyson, 74 Wn.App. 237 (1994), State v. Alexander, 76 Wn.App. 830 (1995), State v. Alphonse, 142 Wn.App. 417 (2008), 147 Wn.App. 891 (2008); 7-2.

State v. Pietrzak, 100 Wn.App. 291 (2000)

Taking nude photographs of a 16-year old is communicating with a minor for immoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090, which is not vague, see: State v. Luther, 65 Wn.App. 424 (1992), State v. McNallie, 120 Wn.2d 925 (1993), State v. Schimmelpfennig, 92 Wn.2d 95 (1979), State v. Falco, 59 Wn.App. 354, 358 (1990); III.

State v. D.H., 102 Wn.App. 620 (2000)

Sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68A.040(1), is neither vague nor overbroad on its face or as applied to a minor videotaping another minor; I.

State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 172 (2001)

That portion of harassment statute, RCW 9A.46.020(1)(a)(iv), which prohibits threatening a person's "mental health" is vague and overbroad, reversing State v. Williams, 98 Wn.App. 765 (2000), see: State v. E.J.Y., 113 Wn.App. 940 (2002); 6-3.

State v. Glas, 106 Wn.App. 895 (2001)

Voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115(1), -(2), is neither vague nor overbroad, State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910 (2007), State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910 (2007), State v. Stevenson, 128 Wn.App. 179 (2005); III.

State v. Glas, 147 Wn.2d 410 (2002)

Voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115(2) is not overbroad or vague; reverses, on other grounds, State v. Glas, 106 Wn.App. 895 (2001); 5 justices would not reach constitutional issue due to reversal on other grounds.

Sumner v. Walsh, 148 Wn.2d 490 (2003)

Ordinance prohibiting juveniles from remaining in a public place during curfew hours unless, inter alia, on an "errand as directed by his or her parent" is vague and overbroad; 5-4.

State v. Pauling, 149 Wn.2d 381 (2003)

Extortion statute, RCW 9A,56.110, is not overbroad where construed to require that the evidence shows a lack of nexus between the threat made and a claim of right, reversing State v. Pauling, 108 Wn.App. 445 (2001); here, defendant had a valid judgment against victim, threatened to disseminate nude photos of victim if she did not pay, evidence at bench trial was sufficient to convict with the limiting construction; 8-1.

State v. Johnson, 115 Wn.App. 890 (2003)

Malicious harassment, RCW 9A.36.080(1), is not overbroad as applied where defendant threatens victim using female genital invective; III.

Virginia v. Hicks, 156 L.Ed.2d 148 (2003)

Public housing authority regulations and policy that permits police to serve notice on anyone found on housing authority property who "cannot demonstrate a legitimate business or social purpose for being on the premises" prohibiting returning to the property and authorizing arrest for one who does are not facially overbroad; 9-0.

State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 457-61 (2003)

Sentencing guidelines statutes are not subject to vagueness analysis, State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021), see: State v. DeVore, 2 Wn.App.2d 651 (2018); affirms, on other grounds, State v. Baldwin, 111 Wn.App. 631 (2002); 9-0.

Spokane v. Neff, 152 Wn.2d 85 (2004)

Prostitution loitering ordinance which lists as a "circumstance ... which may be considered" whether a person is a "known prostitute" is vague where "known prostitute" is not defined, distinguishing Seattle v. Slack, 113 Wn.2d 850 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630 (2005)

Community custody condition that defendant may not possess pornography as defined by CCO is both vague and an improper delegation, State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), see: State v. Williams, 97 Wn.App. 257, 262-63 (1999), State v. Wilkerson, 107 Wn.App. 748 (2001), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 604 (2013), State v. Johnson, 4 Wn.App.2d 352 (2018), but see: State v. Smith, 130 Wn.App. 721 (2005), State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018); I.

State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006)

Threat to bomb, RCW 9.61.160, is not overbroad where trial court defines "true threat" as a statement "in a context or under such circumstances wherein a reasonable person would foresee that the statement would be interpreted…as a serious expression of an intention to inflict bodily harm," State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 207-08 (2001), Watts v. United States, 22 L.Ed.2d 664

(1969); whether a true threat is made is determined under an objective standard that focuses on the speaker, State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36, 44 (2004) , State v. Boyle, 183 Wn.App. 1 (2014), State v. Trey M., 186 Wn.2d 884 (2016); 8-1.

State v. Smith, 130 Wn.App. 721, 724-28 (2005)

Following sex offense conviction, defendant is ordered by DOC not to "possess…any pornography, catalogs or material which can be read or viewed for sexual gratification" and which "involved children," defendant is sanctioned for possessing Brooke Shield film Blue Lagoon; held: because an ordinary person would know, without having to consult a specialist, that the film was prohibited, then the restriction was not vague, distinguishing State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630 (2005), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), but see: State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), State v. Johnson, 4 Wn.App.2d 352 (2018), State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018); I.

State v. Davis, 131 Wn.App. 246 (2006)

Unlawful storage of ammonia, RCW 69.55.020, is not vague; the fact that a statute refers to another agency to approve something without providing a specific citation does not unconstitutionally fail to provide citizens with adequate notice, State v. Eckblad, 152 Wn.2d 515 (2004), cf.: State v. Olmedo, 112 Wn.App. 525 (2002), but see: State v. Maxwell, 74 Wn.App. 688 (1994); I.

State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592, 598-600 (2006)

Assault 3º by criminal negligence, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(f) (2005), is not vague, State v. Bauer, 174 Wn.App. 59, 77-81 (2013), rev'd, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 929 (2014); I.

State v. Allenbach, 136 Wn.App. 95 (2006)

Definition of "financial information," RCW 9.35.005, for purposes of identity theft, is not vague; II.

State v. Watson, 160 Wn.2d 1 (2007)

Failure to register as a sex offender, RCW 9A.44.130(4)(a)(i), which requires that, when a defendant is released from jail following a probation violation and returns to the same home he was living in he must re-register regardless if he previously registered, is not vague, State v. Smith, 185 Wn.App. 945 (2015); affirms State v. Watson, 130 Wn.App. 376 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910, 916-22 (2007)

"Intimate areas" in voyeurism statute, RCW 9A.44.115(20(b), is neither vague nor overbroad; II.

State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008)

As condition of community custody, defendant is ordered not to possess pornography, appeals; held: vagueness challenges to conditions of community custody may be raised for the first time on appeal, at 745; restriction on accessing or possessing pornographic materials is unconstitutionally vague, State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), see: State v. Johnson, 4 Wn.App.2d 352 (2018); condition that defendant not enter a place whose primary business pertains to sexually explicit material is not vague; condition that defendant "not possess or control sexual stimulus material for your particular deviancy as defined" by CCO is vague, see: State v. Norris, 1 Wn.App.2d 87 (2017), 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 132-37 (2008)

Statutory defense to sexual exploitation of a minor that defendant must prove that he made a reasonable attempt to discover victim's age by "requiring production" of identification, RCW 9.68A.110(3), is not vague; 2-1, II.

State v. Aljutily, 149 Wn.App. 286 (2009)

Defendant is convicted of communicating with a minor for immmoral purposes, RCW 9.68A.090(2), for sexual e-mailing a police officer posing as a child; held: statute which prohibits electronic communication with a person defendant believes is a minor is not overbroad and does not burden protected speech; III.

State v. Harstad, 153 Wn.App. 10, 23-24 (2009)

"Sexual contact," RCW 9A.44.010(2), is not vague; I.

United States v. Stevens, 559 U.S. 460, 176 L.Ed.2d 435 (2010)

Statute prohibiting creation, sale or possession of depictions of animal cruelty is overbroad and violates First Amendment; 8-1.

State v. Jarvis, 160 Wn.App. 111, 116-18 (2011)

Assault 4°, RCW 9A.36.041, is not vague; II.

State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 900-01 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012)

Criminal solicitation, RCW 9A.28.030(1), is not overbroad; II.

State v. Bauer, 174 Wn.App. 59, 77-81 (2013), reversed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 929 (2014)

Assault 3° by criminal negligence, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(d) (2011), is not vague, State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592, 598-600 (2006); 2-1, II.

State v. Bradford, 175 Wn.App. 912, 921-27 (2013)

Harassment provision of stalking, RCW 9A.46.110(1)(a) (2007), is not overbroad or vague, State v. Nguyen, 10 Wn.App.2d 797 (2019); I.

State v. Clapper, 178 Wn.App. 2230 (2013)

Custodial sexual assault 1°, RCW 9A.44.160 (1999), is not vague; II.

State v. Harrington, 181 Wn.App. 805 (2014)

"Extreme mental distress," in kidnapping 1º, RCW 9A.40.020(1)(d) (2011), is not vague; III.

Johnson v. United States, 576 U.S. 591, 135 S.Ct. 2551, 192 L.Ed.2d 569 (2015)

Federal statute calling for an enhanced penalty for any crime that "involves conduct that presents a serious potential risk of physical injury to another," 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(2)(B) (2006), is vague, but see: State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021); 8-1.

State v. Breidt, 187 Wn.App. 534 (2015)

Terms "change," "residence," and "residence address" in failure to register as a sex offender statute, RCW 9A.44.130(4)(a), are not vague, see: State v. Breidt, 187 Wn.App. 534 (2015); II.

State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386, 408-11 (2015)

Felony murder/assault, RCW 9A.32.050(1)(b) (2003), is not vague; II.

Lakewood v. Willis, 186 Wn.2d 210 (2016)

Ordinance which prohibits begging at on- and off-ramps and at intersections is content-based, as it specifically does not prohibit solicitation of votes, restricting speech in a substantial number of traditional public forums, and thus violates the First Amendment, Reed v. Town of Gilbert, 576 U.S. 155, 135 S.Ct. 2218, 2227, 192 L.Ed.2d 236 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Homan, 191 Wn.App. 759 (2016)

Luring, RCW 9A.40.090 (2012), is overbroad, but see: State v. Dana, 84 Wn.App. 166 (1996), Division II adds an implied criminal intent element that the state must prove, remands for a new trial with the additional element, see: 2016 amendment, SSB 6463.

State v. Petterson, 196 Wn.App. 451 (2016)

Disorderly conduct, RCW 9A.84.030 (2007), prohibiting intentionally disruption of any lawful assembly or meeting of persons without lawful authority, is not overbroad; III.

State v. Brush, 5 Wn.App.2d 40 (2018)

Domestic violence/ongoing pattern of psychological abuse aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(h), is not overbroad; sentence aggravators are not subject to vagueness challenges, State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 461 (2003), State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021); II.

United States v. Davis, 588 U.S. ___ , 139 S.Ct. 2319, 204 L.Ed.2d 757 (2019)

Federal statute that enhances a penalty for using a firearm during a "crime of violence" defined as "a felony 'that by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense,'" 18 U.S.C. § 924©(3)(B), is vague; 7-2.

State v. Wallmuller, 194 Wn.2d 234 (2019)

Community custody provision that defendant not frequent places where children congregate is not vague, reversing State v. Wallmuller, 4 Wn.App.2d 698 (2018), see: Pers. Restraint of Sickels, 14 Wn.App.2d 51 (2020); 5-4.

State v. Schilling, 442 Wn.App.2d 262 (2019)

"Reckless" in eluding statute, RCW 46.61.024(1), is not vague; vagueness challenges must be "as applied" unless a statute says otherwise, Johnson v. United States, 576 U.S. ——, 135 S. Ct. 2551, 192 L.Ed.2d 569 (2015); III.

State v. Houck, 9 Wn.App.2d 636 (2019)

Community custody condition that prohibits defendant from associating with known drug users/sellers except in treatment settings is not vague, Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018); II.

State v. Nguyen, 10 Wn.App.2d 797 (2019)

Stalking statute, RCW 9A.46.110(1) (2013), prohibits conduct with speech incidentally regulated, does not violate First Amendment, is not overbroad, State v. Bradford, 175 Wn.App. 912, 921-27 (2013); I.

State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019)

Defendant telling police officer that he would use "Green Beret tactics," "what happens if I came to your house and I put you into killing range with a firearm," is convicted of intimidating a public servant, RCW 9A.76.180; held: statute implicates First Amendment but is not unconstitutionally overbroad if limited to a true threat, see: State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 794 (1998); here, defendant made no serious expression of intent to inflict bodily harm thus evidence is insufficient; I.

Seattle v. Rordiguez, 15 Wn.App.2d 765 (2020)

Seattle sexual exploitation ordinance, SMC 12A.10.040(A)(2), is neither vague nor overbroad; I.

State v. Birge, 16 Wn.App.2d 16 (2021)

Official misconduct, RCW 9A.80.010(1), is not vague or overbroad; II.

State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021)

"Advances prostitution," RCW 9A.88.060, and "promoting prostitution," RCW 9A.88.080, are not vague, State v. Cann, 92 Wn.2d 193, 195-96 (1979); I.

State v, Mireles, 16 Wn.App.2d 641 (2021)

Because internet communication is a public forum, that portion of cyberstalking statute, RCW 9.61.260, that criminalizes electronic communications "with intent to…embarrass" is overbroad, distinguishing State v. Dyson, 74 Wn.App. 237, 241-48 (1994), although the remainder of the statute is saved due to intent element; I.

State v. Frederick, 20 Wn.App. 1081, 506 P.3d 690 (2022)

Condition that defendant not engage in "sexual communication" with minors is not vague; condition that defendant obtain CCO's permission before entering a "romantic relationship" is vague; Indeterminate Sentencing Review Board can impose conditions that are reasonably related to the offender's risk of reoffending, condition that defendant submit to drug monitoring in sex offense is proper where defendant was under the influence of marijuana at time of sex offense; condition that defendant not access the internet without a monitoring device at defendant's expense is proper where defendant used the internet to contact victim, State v. Johnson, 197 Wn.2d 740 (2021), cf.: Packingham v. North Carolina, —— U.S. ——, 137 S. Ct. 1730, 198 L. Ed. 2d 273 (2017); condition that defendant not possess "sexually explicit material" is not vague, State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018); condition that defendant not engage in a romantic or dating or sexual relationship with anyone with minor children without CCO permission is not vague, but see: State v. Geyer, 19 Wn.App.2d 321 (2021); condition that defendant inform potential partners of his sexual offense history does not violate his Fifth Amendment rights; condition that defendant not remain overnight in a residence (as opposed to "premises") without CCO approval is not vague, State v. Breidt, 187 Wn.App. 534 (2015); III.

VEHICULAR HOMICIDE/VEHICULAR ASSAULT

State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820 (1980)

In negligent homicide where police take blood or breath sample for alcohol analysis and fail to advise defendant of right to independent testing, blood test results must be suppressed, State v. Anderson, 80 Wn.App. 384 (1996), see: State v. Rivard, 131 Wn.2d 63 (1997), State v. Morales, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012), *cf.: State v. Goggin,*185 Wn.App. 59, 66-70 (2014), but see: State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 196 (2017); 8-0.

State v. Escobar, 30 Wn.App. 131 (1981)

Defendant, convicted of DUI, is later charged and convicted of negligent homicide relating to same incident; state had not completed investigation at time of DUI trial, held: double jeopardy does not prevent prosecution for a greater offense subsequent to a prosecution for a lesser offense which constitutes an element of the greater offense if evidence sufficient to prove the greater offense was previously not available to the state despite its exercise of due diligence; driver of a vehicle, racing with another vehicle, may be convicted of negligent homicide of driver of other vehicle upon proof that death was proximately caused by the racing; III..

State v. Holcomb, 31 Wn.App. 398 (1982)

Blood test results must be suppressed in negligent homicide prosecution where police fail to advise defendant of right to independent tests, State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820 (1980), State v. Morales, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012), irrespective of whether or not defendant consented to the tests, but see: State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 66-70 (2014), State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 196 (2017); II.

State v. Beel, 32 Wn.App. 437 (1982)

Negligent homicide is a lesser of murder 2°.

State v. Barr, 99 Wn.2d 75 (1983)

A person convicted of negligent homicide can, as a condition of probation, be ordered to pay restitution to the victim's spouse and minor child.

In re Arambul, 37 Wn.App. 805 (1984)

In vehicular homicide case, a passenger who grabs the steering wheel, causing the vehicle to collide with an oncoming vehicle resulting in the death of another passenger, is an operator of the vehicle, RCW 46.61.520, 46.04.370; III.

State v. Gantt, 38 Wn.App. 357 (1984)

Defendant rear-ends moving truck, truck continues on, defendant's car is disabled, is struck by another vehicle, killing driver, defendant's alcohol level is .14; held: proximate cause is question of fact for jury “unless the facts are undisputed and the inferences therefrom are plain and not susceptible of reasonable doubt or difference of opinion”; II.

State v. Haley, 39 Wn.App. 164 (1984)

Where facts support either manslaughter or negligent homicide charge, state must charge negligent homicide where an automobile is involved; III.

State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984)

Following negligent homicide arrest, suspect must take a blood test, but see: Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 133 S.Ct. 1552, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), and is not entitled to choose a breath test in lieu of blood test, RCW 46.20.308(1); suspect does not have right to counsel when blood sample was taken, as she had not been formally charged with a crime, Kirby v. Illinois, 32 L.Ed.2d 411 (1972), Schmerber v. California, 16 L.Ed.2d 908 (1966), see: State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991); 9-0; .

State v. McMurray, 40 Wn.App. 872 (1985)

Defendant is convicted of DUI, after which victim of collision dies, whereupon defendant is charged and convicted of negligent homicide, RCW 46.61.520; held: because an element of crime (death) had not occurred at time of earlier trial, the subsequent trial is not barred by the double jeopardy clause, Brown v. Ohio, 53 L.Ed.2d 187 (1977), State v. Escobar, 30 Wn.App. 131 (1981); I.

State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985)

Following arrest for negligent homicide, blood sample is drawn at 3:43 a.m.; at 5:52 a.m., police first inform defendant of right to independent test, RCW 46.20.308(1) [now 46.20.308(2)]; held: blood test was admissible because notice of independent test gave defendant reasonable opportunity to develop evidence of alcohol content even though advice was not given contemporaneously with the seizure of the blood sample; II.

State v. Giedd, 43 Wn.App. 787 (1986)

Defendant charged with negligent homicide/reckless and not DUI, RCW 46.61.520(1)(2); at trial, state proves defendant's blood alcohol level was .06; held: use of intoxicants was part of same transaction, proper for jury to decide what effect, if any, his drinking had on his driving, State v. Birch, 183 Wash. 670 (1935), State v. Travis, 1 Wn.App. 971 (1970); I.

State v. Barefield, 47 Wn.App. 444 (1987)

Failure to advise an unconscious vehicular homicide suspect of right to additional tests is not error; while WAC 448-14-020 requires that a blood test shall employ a clean dry container, that samples be preserved with anticoagulant, and that a blank test be run, where state toxicologist testifies that while vial was in his possession it was not adulterated, that vial manufacturer always puts anticoagulants in this vial, and that he ran a test that was the equivalent of a blank test, a prima facie case was established; jury need not be instructed regarding unanimity of mode; I.

State v. Brobak, 47 Wn.App. 488 (1987)

In vehicular homicide trial, defendant is entitled to "rules of the road" instructions as long as they state that contributory negligence is not a defense, and that in order to avoid conviction, defendant must show that the victim's contributory negligence was a supervening cause; emergency doctrine is not an issue; II.

State v. Neher, 52 Wn.App. 298 (1988)

In vehicular assault case, RCW 46.61.522, proximate causation may be proved if defendant's acts are a proximate cause, thought statute reads "the proximate cause"; I.

State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991)

Vehicular homicide suspect does not have right to counsel before blood sample is taken under CONST. Art. 1, § 22 or CrR 3.1, as suspect does not have the right to refuse the blood sample, see: State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984); statutory scheme authorizes nonconsensual blood test for drugs; WAC 448-14 is sufficient to meet requirements of RCW 46.61.506(3) for blood alcohol testing, as a "cookbook" detailing every step is not necessary, State v. Ford, 110 Wn.2d 827, 832 (1988), State v. Mee Hui Kim, 134 Wn.App. 27, 35-40 (2006); 7-2.

State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174 (1991)

1986 amendments to RCW 46.61.502 and .506 do not render blood alcohol evidence irrelevant and inadmissible to prove vehicular homicide; prima facie proof that a blood sample is free from adulteration is met if state establishes that sample is pure, State v. Erdman, 64 Wn.2d 286, 287 (1964); reckless driving is not a lesser of vehicular homicide, but see: State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541 (1997), State v. Gostol, 92 Wn.App. 832 (1998), accord: State v. Thompson, 90 Wn.App. 41 (1998), see: State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 464-67 (2001); taking blood over objection from vehicular homicide suspect does not violate CONST. Art. 1, § 7 where there is a clear indication it would reveal evidence of intoxication and it was a reasonable test performed in a reasonable manner, State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706, 711-12 (1984); 9-0.

State v. McAllister, 60 Wn.App. 654 (1991)

Defendant, having been drinking (blows .09, .10), turns van, passenger falls out of doors which had been secured (perhaps negligently) by another earlier, passenger dies; held: while evidence of intoxication was sufficient under RCW 46.61.520, insufficient evidence was offered to establish ordinary negligence, State v. Fateley, 18 Wn.App. 99 (1973), as evidence showed intoxication did not affect driving which was not negligent; even if turn was negligent, proximate cause of death was superseded by negligence of improper securing of doors which was not incumbent upon defendant to have anticipated as reasonably likely to happen, breaking causal connection between defendant's negligence and injury; but see: State v. Rivas, 126 Wn.2d 443 (1995), State v. Burch, 197 Wn.App. 382 (2016); III.

State v. Parker, 60 Wn.App. 719 (1991)

To prove accomplice liability to vehicular homicide, state must establish that the defendant, with knowledge that it will promote a crime, (1) encouraged another to perform an act of reckless driving and (2) which proximately caused death; defendant's racing another vehicle which is involved in a collision killing another is sufficient, distinguishing State v. Cordero, 36 Wn.2d 846 (1950); accident reconstruction expert evidence is not required, distinguishing State v. Escobar, 30 Wn.App. 131 (1981); I.

State v. Clark, 62 Wn.App. 263 (1991)

Gas chromatography is an approved testing method for blood alcohol, even absent WACs, State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991), see: State v. Mee Hui Kim, 134 Wn.App. 27, 35-40 (2006); a letter from vacutainer manufacturer detailing amount of anticoagulants and enzyme poison contained in vacutainers plus consistency in results of two tests 12 years apart meets prima facie test that sample was preserved, State v. Barefield, 47 Wn.App. 444 (1987), see: Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018); I.

State v. Danis, 64 Wn.App. 814 (1992)

Statute which provides that multiple victims who occupy the same vehicle result in the offense encompassing the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(a), does not violate equal protection of a defendant who kills or injures two pedestrians; I.

State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 501 (1992)

Police misadvising vehicular homicide suspect that s/he has the right to additional testing "only at his own expense," State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989), is error even though suspect does not have the right to refuse blood test, RCW 46.20.308(3); smell of alcohol plus statement that defendant was afraid he was drunk plus fleeing from scene plus alcohol in car plus accident resulting in death is sufficient to establish probable cause; II.

State v. May, 68 Wn.App. 491 (1993)

Vehicular homicide by operating in a reckless manner and vehicular homicide by operating with disregard for safety of others are distinct methods of committing the offense, with different SRA implications, and must be defined differently for the jury, see: State v. Eike, 72 Wn.2d 760 (1967), State v. Jacobsen, 78 Wn.2d 491 (1970), State v. Salas, 74 Wn.App. 400 (1994); I.

State v. Hettich, 70 Wn.App. 586 (1993)

Toxicologist's opinion testimony that person with .14 blood alcohol level would lose at least a third of their normal driving ability, while without scientific foundation, was harmless, if it was error at all, in light of witness's s proper testimony that person's ability to drive "would be significantly impaired," and in light of strong evidence of intoxication; testimony was probably not subject to Frye analysis since testimony was not based on novel scientific experimental procedures, but rather upon witness's own practical experience and acquired knowledge, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 311 (1992) , disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); I.

State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993)

Where no evidence suggests that victim died from any cause other than defendant's reckless or negligent driving, then defendant is not entitled to those offenses as lessers, as "[i]t is not enough that the jury might simply disbelieve that state's evidence. Instead, some evidence must be presented which affirmatively establishes the defendant's theory on the lesser included offense before an instruction will be given," State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59, 67 (1990), disapproved on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 487 (1991), State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 754-7 (1995), State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), but see: State v. Gostol, 92 Wn.App. 832 (1998), State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014), see: State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 464-67 (2001); II.

State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 709-13 (1994)

Inference that speeding equals reckless driving does not violate due process where state's evidence established speed of 80-100 m.p.h., tailgating, racing, but see: State v. Delmarter, 68 Wn.App. 770 (1993), Schwendeman v. Wallenstein, 971 F.2d 313 (9th Cir. 1992), cf.: State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997), see: State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016); where an inference is not sole and sufficient basis for finding of guilt, test is whether presumed fact flows from proven fact by preponderance, whether inference meets this standard must be determined on case-by-case basis, see: County Court of Ulster Cy. v. Allen, 60 L.Ed.2d 777 (1979), State v. Delmarter, supra, at 784-5 (1993); 6-3.

State v. Kenyon, 123 Wn.2d 720 (1994)

Inference that speeding equals reckless driving does not violate due process where state's evidence established speed of 43-60 m.p.h. in 30 m.p.h. zone on wet road with flat tire and two over-inflated tires plus loss of control, swaying, State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 709-13 (1994), State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997), see: State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Tang, 75 Wn.App. 473, 475-8 (1994)

Information that alleges that defendant drove while under influence and with disregard for safety and defendant caused a death as a proximate result of an injury proximately caused by such driving is sufficient where challenged after state rests, distinguishing State v. MacMaster, 113 Wn.2d 226 (1989), State v. Sanchez, 62 Wn.App. 329, 332 (1991), see: State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644 (1995); I.

State v. Flake, 76 Wn.App. 174 (1994)

Vehicular assault and hit and run are not the same criminal conduct for sentencing, as objective purpose of running from accident scene has no relation to the vehicular assault, did not further the vehicular assault, were not part of a scheme or plan, and did not occur simultaneously, at 179-81, State v. Lessley, 118 Wn.2d 773, 778 (1992); more than one victim of vehicular assault may support the multiple victim aggravating factor, State v. Quiros, 78 Wn.App. 134 (1995), even if only one is charged in information where the fact that there were multiple victims was both acknowledged and proved at sentencing, does not violate real facts doctrine; driving without insurance is an aggravating factor for vehicular assault; I.

State v. Rivas, 126 Wn.2d 443 (1995)

Causal connection between intoxication and death is not an element of vehicular homicide, State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67, 78 (1997), State v. Salas, 127 Wn.2d 173 (1995), State v. Lopez, 93 Wn.App. 619, 623-24 (1999), State v. Morgan, 123 Wn.App. 810 (2003), State v. Burch, 197 Wn.App. 382 (2016); RCW 46.61.520, as amended in 1991, legislatively overrules State v. MacMaster, 113 Wn.2d 154 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Hursh, 77 Wn.App. 242, 244-5 (1995)

Failure of victim to wear a seat belt may properly be excluded as that act did not cause the accident and was not the sole cause of victim's injuries, since any proximate cause is sufficient, State v. Neher, 52 Wn.App. 298, 302, aff'd, 112 Wn.2d 347 (1989), see: State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390, 401 ¶ 24 (2005); negligent conduct is not an element of vehicular assault, RCW 46.61.522; DUI is not a lesser of vehicular assault where defendant is charged alternatively with intoxication and reckless prongs, State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1, 6 (1993), but see: State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541 (1997); I.

State v. Lovelace, 77 Wn.App. 916 (1995)

Intoxicated defendant's vehicle crosses into oncoming traffic, hits victim's vehicle, defendant claims insufficient proof of negligence; held: to establish proximate cause in a vehicular assault case, state must prove ordinary negligence and intoxication while driving, State v. McAllister, 60 Wn.App. 654, 658-60 (1991), but see: State v. Rivas, 126 Wn.2d 443 (1995), State v. Burch, 197 Wn.App. 382 (2016) ; here, there was sufficient evidence from which negligence could be inferred; state need not disprove defendant's unsubstantiated theories of possible superseding causes; I.

State v. Maurice, 79 Wn.App. 544, 549-50 (1995)

Vehicular homicide statute provides three alternative means of committing the same crime, does not define separate crimes, does not require jury unanimity on the mode as long as state has presented substantial evidence supporting each charged alternative, State v. Orsborn, 28 Wn.App. 111, 116-17 (1980), State v. Miller, 60 Wn.App. 767, 772 (1991), except for SRA consequences, State v. May, 68 Wn.App. 491, 496-8 (1993), State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62, 77-81 (2008); III.

State v. Anderson, 80 Wn.App. 384 (1996)

Hospital advises police that vehicular homicide suspect cannot be contacted while being treated for injuries, police request that nurse draw three vials of blood, which nurse does and gives to trooper; trooper gives one vial to suspect's father for independent testing at a specific laboratory, advises suspect that he had drawn blood but did not advise suspect of right to additional testing by independent lab of his choice, trooper also requests and obtains urine sample from suspect; held: because suspect himself was not given the required warning, trooper did not substantially comply with the statutory obligation to advise of right to independent testing, RCW 46.61.506(5), thus blood test results must be suppressed, State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820, 824-25 (1980), see: State v. Morales, 154 Wn.App. 26, 37-45 (2010), rev'd on other grnds, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012), but see: State v. Rivard, 131 Wn.2d 63 (1997), State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 66-70 (2014), State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 196 (2017); urine-alcohol tests are not admissible, WAC 448-14-010, RCW 46.61.506(3); I.

State v. Garrett, 80 Wn.App. 651 (1996)

Blood sample must be preserved with an anticoagulant, WAC 448-14-020(3)(b), or results must be suppressed irrespective of expert witness's testimony that lack of anticoagulant did not change the results because of another procedure, as RCW 46.61.506(3) requires blood analysis to be performed according to methods approved by state toxicologist, and anticoagulant language in WAC is mandatory, Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018); III.

State v. Rivard, 131 Wn.2d 63 (1997)

Absent formal arrest, implied consent warnings and rights are inapplicable, State v. Wetherell, 82 Wn.2d 865 (1973), and failure to so advise is not grounds for suppression of a blood test where the test was consensual; reverses State v. Rivard, 80 Wn.App. 633 (1996); see: State v. Anderson, 80 Wn.App. 384 (1996), State v. Avery, 103 Wn.App. 527 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 84 Wn.App. 813 (1997)

Following injury collision, defendant goes to hospital on his own for medical treatment where blood is drawn, prosecutor seeks to compel production of blood sample and medical records; held: implied consent statute neither authorizes admission of blood sample, as defendant was not arrested, nor does it prevent its seizure or admission; physician-patient privilege, RCW 5.60.060(4), applies in civil actions and, here, public's interest outweighs benefits of the privilege, thus privilege does not apply to blood sample nor report of its alcohol content, State v. Stark, 66 Wn.App. 423, 438 (1992), In re Juveniles A, B, C, D, E, 121 Wn.2d 80, 92 (1993); because defendant testified about how much he drank, injuries received and denied impairment at first trial (hung jury), he waived his privilege to conceal the records that could disprove his claims that he was not intoxicated; I.

State v. Hinds, 85 Wn.App. 474 (1997)

In vehicular homicide case, where deceased provided defendant-minor with alcohol and permitted him to drive her car, then victim was a willing participant if on remand trial court finds that there was a causal connection between defendant's reckless driving and victim's conduct; I.

State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997)

Inference that speeding equals reckless driving is improper where evidence establishes that defendant traveling 10-20 mph over speed limit of 50 mph, distinguishing State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 709-13 (1994), State v. Kenyon, 123 Wn.2d 720 (1994); "it will . . . be the rare case where speed alone will justify the giving of the permissive inference instruction," see also: State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016); odor of alcohol plus speeding plus veering just prior to accident where defendant failed to negotiate a curve is sufficient to establish DUI and reckless prongs; 9-0.

State v. Thompson, 90 Wn.App. 41, 47-48 (1998)

Reckless driving is not a lesser included offense of vehicular assault, as "reckless" is defined differently for the two crimes, see: State v. Bowman, 57 Wn.2d 266, 271 (1960); here, evidence does not support only reckless driving, as defendant not only drove with disregard for safety of others but also caused serious injury, thus negligent driving is also not a lesser under the factual prong, State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993), State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 464-67 (2001), cf.: State v. Culp, 30 Wn.App. 879 (1982), State v. Escobar, 30 Wn.App. 131 (1981), but see: State v. Gostol, 92 Wn.App. 832 (1998); III.

State v. Gostol, 92 Wn.App. 832 (1998)

The crime of negligent driving, former RCW 46.61.525 [since amended to traffic infraction], is a lesser of reckless vehicular assault, RCW 46.61.522, but see: State v. Thompson, 90 Wn.App. 41, 47-48 (1998), State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626, 635 (1993), State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 464-67 (2001); I.

State v. Barstad, 93 Wn.App. 553 (1999)

Intoxicated defendant kills two women speeding through red light at busy intersection, is convicted of murder 1° by extreme indifference to human life, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), contends vehicular homicide supersedes murder statute when homicide occurs through reckless or impaired driving; held: because prosecutor chose to increase his proof requirement, general/specific analysis is inapplicable, distinguishing State v. Collins, 55 Wn.2d 469 (1960), which precludes prosecutor from charging manslaughter under these circumstances; III.

State v. Lopez, 93 Wn.App. 619 (1999)

Insufficient to prove vehicular homicide where evidence establishes unlicensed minor rolls car, not enough to show that an unlicensed minor without formal driver's education is likely to endanger persons, as some evidence of respondent's conscious disregard of danger is necessary; negligence per se is abolished, with exceptions, RCW 5.40.050; 2-1, III.

State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 592-93 (1999), aff'd, on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002)

Evidence that defendant had .31 ml. blood concentration of methamphetamine and expert testimony that methamphetamine use could produce symptoms that impair ability to drive, which could include lethargy plus defendant's driving indicating impairment is sufficient for trier of fact to find defendant under influence; II.

State v. Vreen, 99 Wn.App. 662, 671-73 (2000), 143 Wn.2d 923, 933 (2001)

Defendant's offer of evidence of his close personal relationship to the victim is relevant to the mens rea elements of "carelessness" and "conscious disregard," as a person can choose to be careless and is less likely to be careless with a loved one in the car; III.

State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701 (2000)

Where victim's driving is a concurring cause to a collision which contributes to victim's death, defense is not entitled to a superseding cause instruction, WPIC 25.03, see: State v. Roggenkamp, 115 Wn.App. 927, 942-49 (2003), 153 Wn.2d 614, 630-31 (2005), as contributory negligence is not a defense, State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706, 718 (1984), but see: State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390 (2005); under facts of this case, "deception doctrine" instruction, WPI 70.02.01, was properly refused; I.

State v. Avery, 103 Wn.App. 527 (2000)

Police arrest suspect for hit and run/death, smell intoxicants but do not see other signs of intoxication, note "slight impairment, faint odor," suspect dozes but his father advises police he is extremely tired, police ask defendant if he would submit to voluntary blood test, defendant consents, is not advised of implied consent warnings, blood alcohol level is .17, defendant charged with vehicular homicide; held: where police lack probable cause to believe that an arrestee is under the influence, implied consent statute does not apply, State v. Rivard, 131

Wn.2d 63, 76-77 (1997), thus suspect may voluntarily consent to a blood test, State v. Wetherell, 82 Wn.2d 865, 869 (1973); II.

State v. Donahue, 105 Wn.App. 67 (2001)

Blood tested by a method other than that provided in RCW 46.61.506 is admissible, where it meets ER 702 and 703, in cases other than the per se offense of DUI, at 72-77, State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174, 182 (1991), State v. Charley, 136 Wn.App. 58 (2006), but see: Seattle v. Clark-Munoz, 152 Wn.2d 39 (2004); failure of police to preserve blood sample after testing by out-of-state hospital, where the result was more than twice the per se limit, did not deny due process as the exculpatory value of the evidence was not apparent, at 77-78, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994); II.

State v. Holgren, 106 Wn.App. 477 (2001)

Prior DUIs more than seven years old may be used to enhance sentence for vehicular homicide, RCW 9.94A.310(7), even though they may not be used to enhance for DUI, RCW 46.61.5055; I.

State v. Deman, 107 Wn.App. 98 (2001)

Where prior DUIs had washed, they are still available to enhance, RCW 46.61.520(2), distinguishing State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999); I.

State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462 (2001)

Negligent driving 1°, RCW 46.61.5249(1)(a), is not a lesser of either prong of vehicular assault, at 464-67, distinguishing State v. Gostol, 92 Wn.App. 832, 836 (1998), see: State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174 (1991), State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993), State v. Thompson, 90 Wn.App. 41, 47-48 (1998); WAC 448-14-020(3) unambiguously requires that an enzyme poison be added to blood sample and, where no evidence is offered to support that, blood test results must be suppressed, at 467-68, State v. Hultenschmidt, 125 Wn.App. 259, 263-67 (2004), see: State v. Wilbur-Bobb, 134 Wn.App. 627 (2006), State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62 (2008); III.

State v. Teitzel, 109 Wn.App. 791 (2002)

A prior DUI acts as a two-year sentence enhancement and doesn't count in offender score, RCW 46.61.520(2); II.

State v. Preuett, 116 Wn.App. 746 (2003)

Sentence enhancement for prior deferred prosecution, RCW 46.61.520, does not violate due process notice requirement, Richland v. Michel, 89 Wn.App. 764, 770 (1998), State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54, 61 (1997), distinguishing INS v. St. Cyr, 150 L.Ed.2d 347 (2001), or ex post facto clause; I.

State v. Clark, 117 Wn.App. 281, 285-86 (2003), affirmed, 153 Wn.2d 614 (2005)

Unit of prosecution for vehicular assault is each victim, State v. Bourne, 90 Wn.App. 963, 973 (1998); II.

Pers. Restraint of Percer, 150 Wn.2d 41 (2003)

Vehicular homicide and felony murder 2°, stemming from the same death, do not violate double jeopardy clause, distinguishing State v. Schwab, 98 Wn.App. 179 (1999); reverses Pers. Restraint of Percer, 111 Wn.App. 843 (2002); 8-1.

State v. Phillips, 123 Wn.App. 761 (2004)

In vehicular homicide case, trial court admits accident reconstruction expert's use of PC-Crash computer-assisted reconstruction calculations following Frye hearing; held: because accident reconstruction software and computer simulations are based on the application of long-standing scientific principles, the evidence is admissible, but see: State v. Sipin, 130 Wn.App. 403(2005), even though the particular application has not been admitted in other courts; II.

State v. Morgan, 123 Wn.App. 810 (2004)

State proves that defendant's BAC was 0.13 at collision, defendant testifies he was blinded by sunlight right before collision, claims that where there is a superseding, intervening event, state must prove a causal connection between defendant's intoxication and death; held: causal connection is between driving and the collision, not intoxication and death, State v. bjork123, 126 Wn.2d 443 (1995), State v. Salas, 127 Wn.2d 173 (1995), whether or not there is evidence of a superseding event; where information charges that driving was the proximate cause, jury instruction requiring state to prove that driving was "a proximate cause" is likely error, harmless here; I.

State v. Roggenkamp, 153 Wn.2d (2005)

"Reckless," for purposes of vehicular homicide and assault, means "driving in a rash or heedless manner, indifferent to the consequences," State v. Bowman, 57 Wn.2d 266, 271 (1960), not the definition from reckless driving statute, RCW 46.61.500 ("willful or wanton disregard for safety"), State v. Clark, 117 Wn.App. 281 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 614 (2005), State v. Ratliff, 140 Wn.App. 12 (2007), see: State v. Ridgley, 141 Wn.App. 771 (2007)(harmless error analysis), but see: State v. McAllister, 60 Wn.App. 654, 659 (1991), State v. Miller, 60 Wn.App. 767 (1991), State v. Hursh, 77 Wn.App. 242, 248 (1995); where defendant is driving recklessly and hits intoxicated victim's car which pulls into intersection, at most victim's actions were a concurring cause as opposed to an intervening cause, thus defendant is not entitled to the defense; to be a superseding cause, the intervening act must have occurred after the defendant's act or omission, State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701, 710 (2000), State v. Frahm, 193 Wn.2d 590 (2019), but see: State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390 (2005); affirms State v. Roggenkamp, 115 Wn.App. 927 (2003); 7-2.

State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390 (2005)

Defendant, at .11 BAC, collides with motorcyclist whose headlight may or may not have been illuminated, trial court instructs jury that contributory negligence is not a defense, State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984), State v. Brobak, 47 Wn.App. 488 (1987), and that, if jury found that the headlight was not illuminated and that this was a cause without which the collision would not have occurred, it must acquit; held: while failure to display headlight cannot have been a superseding cause, jury could have found that it was the sole cause, cf.: State v. Souther, 100 Wn.App. 701 (2000), State v. Mee Hui Kim, 134 Wn.App. 27, 40-43 (2006), see: State v. Frahm, 193 Wn.2d 590 (2019), thus instructions conflicted and defendant is entitled to new trial; fact that deceased was not wearing a helmet and would not have died had he been wearing one could not have been a proximate cause, thus trial court's exclusion of that evidence was proper, see: State v. Hursh, 77 Wn.App. 242, 244-45 (1995); II.

State v. Sipin, 130 Wn.App. 403 (2005)

PC-CRASH v. 6.2 computer-generated simulation program does not meet Frye standard where offered for simulation and prediction of multiple-occupant movement within a vehicle during a multiple-collision accident, see also: State v. Phillips, 123 Wn.App. 761 (2004); remanded for a new Frye hearing to allow state to try again to establish the reliability of the evidence; decision and opinion in State v. Sipin, 125 Wn.App. 733 (2005) is withdrawn; I.

State v. Mee Hui Kim, 134 Wn.App. 27 (2006)

An arrest for vehicular assault is in and of itself a proper basis to obtain a blood draw for testing, at 33-35, RCW 46.20.308(3), State v. Avery, 103 Wn. App. 527, 534 n.6 (2000); trial court's exclusion of defendant's testimony that she may have been given a date rape drug was proper as speculative absent evidence that she had ingested such a drug, at 40-43, distinguishing State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390 (2005); I.

State v. David, 134 Wn.App. 470 (2006)

Legislature's failure to define "proximate cause," and trial court's defining it according to common law principles does not violate separation of powers doctrine; II.

State v. Wilbur-Bobb, 134 Wn.App. 627, 630-32 (2006)

Where blood vial contains the words "sodium fluoride" on it and toxicologist testifies that sodium fluoride is an enzyme poison, requirement that a blood sample be preseved with an enzyme poison, WAC 448-14-020(3)(b), is met, State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62 (2008), see: Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), distinguishing State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 467-68 (2001), State v. Hultenschmidt, 125 Wn.App. 259, 267 (2004); I.

State v. Morales, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012)

Interpreter advises vehicular assault arrestee of implied consent warnings, interpreter is not called to testify, trial court admits blood test; held: state must demonstrate at trial the warnings were meaningfully read, State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820, 824-25 (1980), State v. Stannard, 109 Wn.2d 29, 41 (1987) (Utter, J., concurring), RCW 46.20.308 (2008); here, only evidence that the warnings were read was trooper's testimony that an interpreter read the warnings in Spanish which he could not understand, thus "his testimony was hearsay and inadmissible," at 576, but see: ER 104(a), 1101(c)(1), thus court erred in admitting blood test results, depriving defendant of knowing that he had the right to additional tests; reverses State v. Morales, 154 Wn.App. 26 (2010); 8-1.

State v. Pappas, 164 Wn.App. 917 (2011)

In vehicular assault case, an aggravating factor that the injuries "substantially exceeded" the level of bodily harm beyond substantial bodily harm is proper, see: State v. Stubbs, 170 Wn.2d 117, 128 (2010); I.

State v. Burch, 197 Wn.App. 382 (2016)

Vehicular assault and vehicular homicide are strict liability offenses; state need not prove ordinary negligence, just needs to prove that defendant drove under the influence and caused a collision, State v. Rivas, 126 Wn.2d 443 (1995); detailed analysis of how a court determines if an offense has a mens rea element; II.

State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 176 (2017)

Defendant is arrested for vehicular assault, police obtain search warrant for blood which shows .12 BAC, defendant moves to suppress because he was not advised of his right to additional tests; held: after a blood test pursuant to a search warrant police need not advise defendant he has a right to additional independent tests, RCW 46.20.308 (2013), distinguishing State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820 (1980), State v. Holcomb, 31 Wn.App. 398 (1982); refusal to take a PBT is admissible as evidence of guilt, no Frye hearing is required, State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), but see: Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019); III.

Matter of Raymundo, 6 Wn.App.2d 75 (2018)

RCW 9.94A.525(11) (2017) provides that when an individual is convicted of a felony traffic offense, each prior serious traffic offense will count as one point., but RCW 9.94.525(11) also carves out an exception to this general rule: it instructs the court not to count prior serious traffic offenses that were used as enhancements for vehicular homicide, RCW 46.61.520(2) (1998), which provides that an additional two years "shall" be added to a vehicular homicide sentence for each prior Dui, RCW 46.61.5055 (2018); sentencing court could not use the same prior serious traffic offenses in calculating petitioner's offender score for vehicular homicide that it used as enhancements under RCW 46.61.520(2), but court can use the priors in calculating petitioner's score for felony hit and run since they were not used as enhancements for hit and run, the exclusion of prior offenses used to enhance vehicular homicide applies only to the calculation of the offender score for vehicular homicide, not to the separate calculation of the offender score for other current offenses; I.

State v. Frahm, 193 Wn.2d 590 (2019)

Defendant rear-ends another vehicle which is disabled, citizen seeks to aid injured driver of disabled vehicle, a third vehicle hits the disabled vehicle, propels it into the citizen who dies, defendant is convicted of vehicular homicide; held: intervening act of second collision resulting in death of Good Samaritan was reasonably foreseeable and was not a superseding cause; in determining whether an intervening act is a superseding cause, we consider whether the intervening act (1) created a different type of harm, (2) constituted an extraordinary act, and (3) operated independently of the defendant's actions," State v. Roggenkamp, 115 Wn.App. 927, 945 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 614 (2005); whether an act is a proximate cause and whether there is a superseding, intervening cause are questions of fact for the jury, State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390, 397 (2005); affirms State v. Frahm, 3 Wn.App.2d 812 (2018); 7-2.

State v. Imokawa, 194 Wn.2d 391 (2019)

Trial court declines a defense proposed instruction that state has the burden of proving that defendant's conduct did not constitute a superseding cause; held: while instructing a jury that state has the burden to disprove a defense is preferable, here court did instruct that state has the burden of proving proximate cause beyond a reasonable doubt, proximate cause and the presence of a superseding intervening cause are mutually exclusive, State v. Morgan, 123 Wn.App. 810, 818 (2004), thus instructions as a whole were adequate; reverses State v. Imokawa, 4 Wn.App.2d 545 (2018); 7-1.

State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019)

Following collision with multiple deaths and injuries defendant is transported to hospital for his own injuries, blood test taken without a warrant; held: state proved by clear and convincing evidence that exigent circumstances existed for warrantless blood draw because of defendant's need for medical treatment which "could impair the integrity of the blood sample, officer testified that it would take 40 to 90 minutes to obtain a warrant for blood, delay caused by obtaining a warrant would result in destruction of evidence or postponing defendant's receipt of necessary medical care, State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281, 290-95 (2018), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), distinguishing Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App.802 (2016), but see: Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016); to enhance with a prior reckless driving jury must find that drugs or alcohol were involved, the fact that it was reduced from DUI is insufficient, Walla Walla v. Greene, 154 Wn.2d 722 (2005) (per "dissent" on this issue, which is actually a majority); impaired driving enhancements must run consecutively, RCW 9.94A.533(7) (2016); I.

VENUE, CHANGE OF

State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701 (1981)

Within trial court's discretion to deny change of venue; applies factors from State v. Crudup, 11 Wn.App. 583 (1974); accord: State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991), State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662 (1991), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 269-73 (2003), Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S.358, 177 L.Ed.2d 619 (2010); II.

State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981)

Issue on motion for change of venue is nature of publicity, not nature of crimes charged; defense must show an apparent probability of prejudice; an appellate court will independently review the record to determine if pretrial publicity gave rise to a probability of prejudice; prosecutor should not read the probable cause affidavit to the press; II.

State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984)

No abuse of discretion in denial of change of venue where trial court applies State v. Crudup, 11 Wn.App. 583 (1974) factors, see: State v. Worl, 58 Wn.App. 443 (1990), State v. Rice, 120 Wn.2d 549 (1993), State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 756-61 (2001), Skilling v. United States, 561 U.S.358, 177 L.Ed.2d 619 (2010), State v. Munzanreder, 199 Wn.App. 162, 180-84 (2017); 9-0.

Patton v. Yount, 81 L.Ed.2d 847 (1984)

Passage of time between two trials, where publicity was great at time of first trial, rebuts any presumption of partiality or prejudice that existed at first trial, see also: State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780, 786-7 (1998); court appears to adopt "wave of public passion" test for change of venue motion; 6-2.

State v. Allyn, 40 Wn.App. 27 (1985)

Jurors' knowledge via the press that defendant has a record is not sufficient by itself to disqualify juror or to change venue; III.

State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 209-14 (2006)

Relevant question is not whether the community remembered the case, but whether the jurors had such fixed opinions that they could not judge impartially the guilt of defendant, State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.2d 251, 269 (2003), State v. Young, 158 Wn.App. 707, 714-16 (2010), State v. Munzanreder, 199 Wn.App. 162, 180-84 (2017); it is sufficient if the juror can lay aside his impression or opinion and render a verdict based on the evidence presented in court, although statements of impartiality may be given little weight "where so many, so many times, admitted prejudice," Irvin v. Dowd, 6 L.Ed.2d 751 (1961); here, prospective jurors had little awareness of publicity and details, thus no reason to distrust their declarations of impartiality; I.

State v. Young, 158 Wn.App. 707, 714-16 (2010)

Motion for change of venue may be reserved by trial court until jury selection is attempted; fact that defense has to voir dire on publicity is not error since the issue of knowledge of publicity does not demonstrate bias or prejudice; III.

State v. Stearman, 187 Wn.App. 257 (2015)

Defendant has the right to change venue when a case is filed in one county but there is a reasonable doubt as to whether the crime actually occurred there, CrR 5.1(b), State v. Rockl, 130 Wn.App. 293 (2005); at a pretrial hearing on defendant's motion to change venue court may consider a state's offer of proof, State v. Kilgore, 147 Wn.2d 288, 295 (2002); when state rests trial court must consider a defendant's renewed motion to change venue based upon the evidence, State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 479-82 (1994); where defendant has raised a genuine issue of fact about venue at the close of evidence the trial court must submit the venue issue to the jury for resolution by a preponderance, defense need not submit a proposed instruction as venue in the proper county is a constitutional right, State v. Dent, supra., at 480; II.

State v. Clark, 17 Wn.App.2d 794 (2021)

Failure to move to change venue to a county with more Black people when representing a Black person is not ineffective assistance; II.

VENUE & JURISDICTION

State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980)

A defendant's failure to object to venue as soon as he has knowledge upon which to make the objection as required by CrR 5.1(c) acts as a waiver of the objection; 8-0.

State v. Brown, 29 Wn.App. 11 (1981)

State need not prove venue beyond a reasonable doubt; defense must object to venue or issue is waived; I.

State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788 (1983)

State fails to elicit testimony as to location of crime; held: state must prove subject-matter jurisdiction, i.e., that crime occurred in Washington, thus dismissed; I.

State v. Howell, 40 Wn.App. 49 (1985)

CrR 5.1(a)(2), permitting a prosecution to be commenced in a county where any element of the crime was committed is to be liberally construed to allow venue in any county in which any of the series of events comprising the crime took place; III.

State v. Johnson, 45 Wn.App. 794 (1986)

Venue may be proved by reference to streets, buildings and other landmarks that the jury probably knows of, State v. Kincaid, 69 Wash. 273 (1912); II

State v. Harris, 48 Wn.App. 279 (1987)

At pretrial hearing, defendant, charged in one county, learns the offense may have occurred in another county, does not object to venue; "to convict" instruction requires proof offense occurred in Washington, does not refer to county; held: defendant waived objection to venue by failing to object as soon as he had knowledge; waiting until end of state's case is too late, CrR 5.1(c); I.

State v. Lane, 112 Wn.2d 464 (1989)

State has ceded criminal jurisdiction to federal government for crimes committed at Ft. Lewis; where premeditation occurs on state land yet killing occurs at Ft. Lewis, state has jurisdiction to try defendant, RCW 9A.04.030(1); 9-0.

State v. Fowler, 54 Wn.App. 450 (1989)

Territorial jurisdiction need not be submitted to the jury absent a factual dispute as to jurisdiction, see: State v. L.J.M., 79 Wn.App. 133, 140-3 (1995); I.

State v. McCorkell, 63 Wn.App. 798 (1992)

Defense waives challenge to venue by failing to present it by the time jeopardy attaches, State v. Pejsa, 75 Wn.App. 139, 145-6 (1994), cf.: State v. Harris, 48 Wn.App. 279, 282 (1987), but see: State v. Hardamon, 29 Wn.2d 182, 188 (1947); court may take judicial notice that an intersection is within the city, State v. Dennison, 72 Wn.2d 842, 844 (1967); I.

State v. Schmuck, 121 Wn.2d 373 (1993)

Indian tribal police officer is authorized to stop and detain a non-Indian who allegedly violates state and tribal law while traveling on a public road within a reservation until suspect can be turned over to state authorities for charging and prosecution, United States v. Cooley, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 1638, 210 L.Ed.2d 1 (2021), cf.: State v. Eriksen, 172 Wn.2d 506 (2011); 7-0.

State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 479-82 (1994)

Venue is not an element of the crime which must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, overruling State v. Marino, 100 Wn.2d 719, 727 (1984), see: State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998); where prosecutor has a reasonable doubt as to venue and files case pursuant to CrR 5.1(b), defense must object as soon as defendant has knowledge upon which to make objection; absent CrR 5.1 facts, defense must object to venue at omnibus hearing, CrR 4.5(d), unless defense makes a showing of good cause later; where evidence introduced during trial raises question of venue for first time, defendant must raise issue at end of state's case, see: State v. Stearman, 187 Wn.App. 257 (2015), court should permit reopening absent actual prejudice, whereupon venue becomes an issue for the trier of fact, to be resolved by a preponderance, not beyond a reasonable doubt; 9-0.

State v. Jacobson, 74 Wn.App. 715, 721-2 (1994)

California real property is properly the res of a Washington theft where all the beneficiaries and trustor live in Washington, sale occurred in violation of a Washington TRO prohibiting same, State v. Brown, 29 Wn.App. 11, 13 (1981), RCW 9A.04.030(5), Donaldson v. Greenwood, 40 Wn.2d 238, 250 (1952); I.

State v. Corrado, 78 Wn.App. 612 (1995)

Due to missing witness, state seeks and obtains dismissal without prejudice; when witness is found, defendant is "rearraigned," but no new information is filed; held: superior court lacks subject matter jurisdiction without an information or indictment, but see: State v. Franks, 105 Wn.App. 950 (2001), conviction is void due to prosecutor's failure to refile, State ex rel. Superior Court of Snohomish County v. Sperry, 79 Wn.2d 69, 74 (1971), see: State v. Barnes, 146 Wn.2d 74 (2002); II.

State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998)

While venue is not an element, where state fails to object to venue in "to convict" instruction, then venue becomes an element of the crime and defendant may challenge sufficiency of the added element on appeal under law of the case doctrine, State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), reversing State v. Hickman, 84 Wn.App. 646 (1997); 5-4.

State v. Waters, 93 Wn.App. 969, 976-77 (1999)

Illegal arrest does not deprive a court of jurisdiction and does not require dismissal, Pasco v. Titus, 26 Wn.App. 412, 417 (1980), Ker v. Illinois, 119 U.S. 436, 7 S.Ct. 225, 30 L.Ed. 421 (1886), Frisbie v. Collins, 96 L.Ed. 541 (1952); III.

State v. Leffingwell, 106 Wn.App. 835 (2001)

Defendant, ineligible for worker's compensation while incarcerated in Alaska, falsely informs government he resides in Washington, compensation is sent to Washington address and forwarded to him in prison, trial court dismisses theft by deception charge for lack of jurisdiction; held: because defendant obtained control over the money in Washington, an essential part of the crime was committed here, State v. Lane, 112 Wn.2d 464, 470 (1989), RCW 9A.04.030(1), (5), thus Washington had jurisdiction; II.

Seattle v. Briggs, 109 Wn.App. 484 (2001)

Municipal courts have jurisdiction to try misdemeanor violations of state law where a statute grants concurrent jurisdiction, RCW 35.20.250; I.

State v. Barnes, 146 Wn.2d 74 (2002)

Defendant is charged by information with assault 3˚, later court grants leave to amend to add resisting arrest, defendant is arraigned, convicted, state neglects to file amended information; held: filing of original information conferred subject matter jurisdiction, distinguishing State v. Corrado, 78 Wn.App. 612 (1995); failure to file amended information has no impact upon jurisdiction, defendant was not prejudiced, conviction of resisting arrest affirmed, see: State v. Eaton, 164 Wn.2d 461 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Rockl, 130 Wn.App. 294, 296-99 (2005)

Defendant possesses stolen car in King County, eludes police in both King and Pierce Counties, is charged with PSP and eluding in King County, demands change of venue; held: where there is no reasonable doubt that a crime occurred in more than one county, defendant does not have a right to change venue, CrR 5.1(b) and –(c), see: State v. Howell, 40 Wn.App. 49 (1985); I.

State v. Dodson, 143 Wn.App. 872 (2008)

Defendant drives wrong way on I-5 entrance ramp onto Fort Lewis, is arrested by military police officer who calls state patrol who processes defendant for DUI; held: where an essential element of a crime is committed within an area of state jurisdiction, district court has jurisdiction to hear the case; Secretary of the Army's retroceding to the state jurisdiction, 40 U.S.C. § 1314, 10 U.S.C. § 2683, over that portion of I-5 as it crosses Fort Lewis creates concurrent jurisdiction; II.

State v. Pink, 144 Wn.App. 945 (2008)

Enrolled member of Quinault Tribe is arrested by county sheriff on a road within the Quinault Indian Reservation for unlawful possession of a firearm; held: tribe's grant of a highway easement to the state does not terminate tribe's interest in the land, thus state did not have jurisdiction to prosecute, cf.: State v. Abrahamson, 157 Wn.App. 672 (2010), State v. Clark, 178 Wn.2d 19 (2013); II.

State v. Eriksen, 172 Wn.2d 506 (2011)

Tribal officer may not stop and detain outside the reservation for a traffic infraction, at least absent cross-deputization or mutual aid pact, see: United States v. Cooley, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 1638, 210 L.Ed.2d 1 (2021); supersedes State v. Eriksen, 166 Wn.2d 953 (2009), 170 Wn.2d 209 (2010); 5-4.

Auburn v. Gauntt, 174 Wn.2d 321 (2012)

Where a municipality smaller than 400,000 people seeks to prosecute for a state statute, it must either adopt the statute in the city code or incorporate the state statue by reference, cf.: RCW 35.20.250 (1987); affirms Auburn v. Gauntt, 160 Wn.App. 567 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Williams, 193 Wn.App. 906 (2016)

Charges involving a high speed chase in two counties are filed in one county, defendant gets appointed counsel, prosecutors decide to change venue because events began in first county where charges were refiled, which results in defendant obtaining a different appointed counsel who could not prepare within 60-day time for trial, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(b), concluding arbitrary action forcing defendant to choose between speedy trial and competently prepared counsel; held: prosecutor's explanation was reasoned and thus not arbitrary, thus dismissal is reversed; III.

State v. Zack, 2 Wn.App.2d 667 (2018)

State has jurisdiction to prosecute an Indian for assaulting a non-Indian occurring on fee or deeded land, as opposed to tribal or trust land; III.

State v. Taylor, 5 Wn.App.2d 530 (2018)

A defendant may be prosecuted for DUI committed within a city in district court under state statutre even though the city has adopted a DUI ordinance, as district courts have concurrent jurisdiction with municipal courts, RCW 3.66.060; III.

State v. Kassner, 5 Wn.App.2d 536 (2018)

18 year-old defendant pleads guilty in adult court to an offense that occurred when he was 10, 21 years later seeks to vacate claiming that court lacks jurisdiction absent a finding that a 10-year old offender had the capacity to commit the crime, RCW 9A.04.050; held: court had "jurisdictional authority to act" despite not entering a capacity finding; where the constitution grants original jurisdiction to the superior court, CONST., art. IV, § 6, the legislature cannot restrict the jurisdiction, State v. Posey, 174 Wn.2d 131, 135 (2012), which overruled State v. Werner, 129 Wn.2d 485, 493 (1996); III.

State v. Karpov, 195 Wn.2d 288 (2020)

While jurisdiction is usually not an element of a crime that must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt (except where it is set out specifically in a statute, e.g., DUI), here the trial court erroneously treated it as an element of the crime and dismissed, thus judicially acquitting the defendant, precluding further prosecution based upon double jeopardy, Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 133 S. Ct. 1069, 185 L. Ed. 2d 124 (2013); 9-0.

United States v. Cooley, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 1638, 210 L.Ed.2d 1 (2021)

Tribal police can temporarily detain and search non-Indians on public road running through reservation for violation of state or federal law, see: State v. Eriksen, 172 Wn.2d 506 (2011); 9-0

VUCSA*

State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979)

Guilty knowledge of what is being delivered is an element of delivery, cf.: State v. Smith, 104 Wn.2d 447 (1985), State v. Sims, 119 Wn.2d 138 (1992) (possession with intent to deliver), see: State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143 (1992), State v. Wallway, 72 Wn.App. 407, 410-14 (1994), State v. Warnick, 121 Wn.App. 737 (2004), but see: State v. Nuñez-Martinez, 90 Wn.App. 250 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 25 Wn.App. 746 (1980)

Possession of greater than 40 grams of marijuana is not a lesser of delivery of marijuana; accord: State v. Moore, 54 Wn.App. 211 (1989), State v. Davis, 117 Wn.App. 702 (2003), but see: State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397 (1985); II.

State v. Leek, 26 Wn.App. 651 (1980)

Sale "for profit" means obtaining anything of value in exchange for drugs; need not prove defendant received more than costs; II.

State v. Prather, 30 Wn.App. 666 (1981)

RCW 69.50.401(c), the burn statute, is not vague, is not overbroad, does not violate due process, does not exceed the scope of the legislature's police power, and does not require proof of intent; I.

State v. Keating, 30 Wn.App. 829 (1981)

State has burden of proving legend drug was not exempt, RCW 69.41.010, 030; III.

State v. Wilson, 95 Wn.2d 828 (1981)

Defendant, present during drug sale to police, tells agent that "it's good pot and well worth the price:" held: evidence establishes intent to encourage by defendant, thus establishing accomplice liability, distinguishing State v. Peasley, 80 Wash. 99 (1914), State v. Gladstone, 78 Wn.2d 306 (1970), and In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979); knowledge or intent is not an element of RCW 69.50.401(c) prohibiting arranging for delivery of a controlled substance, see also: State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), distinguishing State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Morgan, 32 Wn.App. 236 (1982)

Defendant gives general delivery address to physician to obtain prescription, gives different address to pharmacist, is charged with obtaining prescription by giving false address; postmaster testifies at trial he was unaware if defendant received mail at general delivery

* See also: VUCSA/Possession, Constructive Possession, PWI: Sufficiency (next section)

address; held: evidence was insufficient as an "address" is not a domicile; state failed to prove address was false; III.

Crape v. Mount, 32 Wn.App. 567 (1982)
Vehicle forfeiture statute, RCW 69.50.505(b)(4) is constitutional; I.

State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882 (1982)
Court instructed jury that Valium a/k/a diazepam, is a controlled substance; held: diazepam is drug scheduled in RCW 69.50.210(c)(7); there was no evidence that Valium is diazepam, thus instruction is a comment on the evidence; but see: State v. Harris, 44 Wn.App. 401 (1986) re: cocaine; court implies that RCW 69.50.403(a)(5), prohibiting offering a forged prescription, is a crime for any prescription, not just for a controlled substance; note identical elements in Legend Drug Act, different penalty; I.

State v. Lauterbach, 33 Wn.App. 161 (1982)
VUCSA burn statute, RCW 69.50.401(c), is violated where a defendant offers to sell a controlled substance and then either knowingly or unwittingly delivers a noncontrolled substance.

State v. Brown, 33 Wn.App. 843 (1983)
Defendant, in possession of Valium, is charged with VUCSA: possession of diazepam; argues improper notice; held: by reference to Physician's Desk Reference, any citizen can determine that diazepam and Valium are the same thing; 2-l; III.

State v. Henry, 36 Wn.App. 530 (1984)
Guns found in a residence where drugs are found are admissible to prove that defendant was a dealer and needed guns for protection; I.

State v. Patterson, 37 Wn.App. 275 (1984)
Possession of psilocybin mushrooms is unlawful, RCW 69.50.204(d)(18); I.

State v. Austin, 39 Wn.App. 109 (1984)
An attempt to obtain drugs by a forged prescription, RCW 69.50.403(2)(3), is a felony and does not fall under the general attempt statute, RCW 9A.28.020; I.

State v. Casto, 39 Wn.App. 229 (1984)
Police officer trained in state crime lab school may testify as expert to identify drugs; chemical proof is not legally required; II.

State v. Eddie A., 40 Wn.App. 717 (1985)
To prove violation of the burn statute, RCW 69.50.401(c), state must prove that the substance delivered was a noncontrolled substance, see also State v. Hernandez, 85 Wn.App. 672 (1997); III.

State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397 (1985)

Defendant, charged with delivery of marijuana, denies possession of marijuana, court refuses to instruct as to lesser included offense of possession; held: possession of marijuana is a lesser of delivery, but see: State v. Davis, 117 Wn.App. 702 (2003), State v. Jones, 25 Wn.App. 746 (1980); where the evidence, regardless of its source, supports an inference that the lesser occurred, court must instruct as to the lesser even where defendant denies it, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), State v. McClam, 69 Wn.App. 885 (1993), but see: State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 560 (1990), State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 67 (1990), State v. Johnson, 59 Wn.App. 867, 873-4 (1990); III.

State v. Adams, 46 Wn.App. 874 (1987)

Growing marijuana is manufacturing a controlled substance, RCW 69.50.401(a), 69.50.101(m),(u), State v. Dodd, 78 Wn.App. 533 (1995); III.

State v. Hawthorne, 48 Wn.App. 23 (1987)

Drug conspiracy must be charged under RCW 69.50.407, and may not be charged under general conspiracy statute, RCW 9A.28.040; an overt act or substantial step is not an element of a drug conspiracy, RCW 69.50.407, see Whitfield v. United States, 160 L.Ed.2d 611 (2005), but see: State v. Piñeda-Piñeda, 1534 Wn.App. 653, 667-71 (2010); I.

State v. Kovac, 50 Wn.App. 117 (1987)

Possession of 8 grams of marijuana packaged in seven baggies is not sufficient to infer an intent to deliver, as it cannot be said with substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact, State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993), State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 216 (1994), State v. Davis, 79 Wn.App. 591 (1995), see also: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017), cf.: State v. Mejia, 111 Wn.2d 892 (1989), State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414 (1975), State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 767-9 (1995), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181, 186 (1998), State v. Nygaard, 154 Wn.App. 641, 647-49 (2010), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 290-91 (2010); III.

State v. Hernandez, 53 Wn.App. 702 (1989)

Knowledge of age is not element of RCW 69.50.406, distributing drugs to minor; III.

State v. Anderson, 58 Wn.App. 135 (1990)

Under burn statute, RCW 69.50.401(c), state must prove that the substance was not a controlled substance, but need not specifically identify the substance delivered; criminalist's testimony that tests eliminated 80 to 90% of possible controlled substances including cocaine, where defendant offered to sell cocaine, is sufficient to convict, State v. Eddie A., 40 Wn.App. 717 (1985); I.

State v. Campbell, 59 Wn.App. 61 (1990)

Defendant places drugs on car seat where, at his direction, third party picks them up and hands them to undercover officer; held: constructive transfer, RCW 69.50.101(f), is the transfer by some other person or manner at the instance or direction of the defendant; information charging delivery need not allege constructive transfer, nor need "transfer" be defined in jury instructions; I.

State v. Stearns, 59 Wn.App. 445 (1990), aff'd on other grounds, 119 Wn.2d 247 (1992)

The definition of "manufacture," RCW 69.50.101(m), does not indicate that packaging and repackaging for personal use is excepted, and no instruction to that effect need be given; II.

State v. Johnson, 59 Wn.App. 867 (1990)

Where police arrest as suspect shows drugs he agreed to deliver, then delivery is complete as "delivery" is defined, inter alia, as "attempted transfer," RCW 69.50.101(f); defendant, charged with delivery of a controlled substance, denies delivering and possessing drugs, is not entitled to instruction on lesser of possession absent affirmative evidence that he simply possessed drugs, State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360 (1990), State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59, 67 (1990), State v. Rodriguez, 48 Wn.App. 815 (1987), see: State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), rejecting State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397 (1985), but see: State v. Davis, 117 Wn.App. 702 (2003); III.

State v. Lua, 62 Wn.App. 34 (1991)

Enhanced penalties for delivery of drugs within 1000 feet of school grounds, RCW 9.94A.310(5), former RCW 69.50.435, are constitutional; accord: State v. Acevedo, 78 Wn.App. 886 (1995), State v. Jenkins, 68 Wn.App. 897 (1993); III.

Chapman v. United States, 114 L.Ed.2d 524 (1991)

Federal statute, 21 USC § 841(a), that requires enhanced penalty due to weight of drug and carrier (here, 50 mg. LSD plus blotter paper-carrier equals 5.7 g.; 1 g. invokes mandatory minimum) is constitutional; 7-2.

State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 748 (1991)

Possession of drug residue in pipe can appropriately be charged as possession of a controlled substance, RCW 69.50.401(d), State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 438-40 (1994), as possession is not concurrent with paraphernalia statute, RCW 69.50.412, 69.50.102, see: State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10, 18-22 (2012); I.

State v. Zamora, 63 Wn.App. 220 (1991)

To enhance penalty for drug crimes within 1000 feet of school, state must charge and prove both substantive drug offense and enhancement statute, RCW 69.50.435; large quantity of drugs plus large amounts of cash, scales, gloves and repackaging materials leads to rational and logical inference of intent to deliver, State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286, 297-8 (1989), State v. Simpson, 22 Wn.App. 572, 575 (1979), State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414, 418-19 (1975); cf.: State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921, 924-5 (1989), State v. Sprague, 16 Wn.App.2d 213 (2021); III.

State v. Olivarez, 63 Wn.App. 484 (1991)

Jury instruction that constructive possession is established by dominion and control over substance or the premises where substance is found is error as effectively a mandatory presumption that defendant is guilty if jury found defendant had dominion and control over premises, but see: State v. Bradford, 60 Wn.App. 857, 862 (1991), State v. Ponce, 79 Wn.App. 651 (1995), overruled, State v. Shumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330 (2007), but see: State v. Bradford,

60 Wn.App. 857, 862 (1991), State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997), State v. Tadeo-Mares, 86 Wn.App. 813, 816 (1997); defense instruction that delivery cannot occur between two persons in joint possession properly refused as delivery between joint possessors is not relevant to charge of possession with intent to deliver; III.

State v. Sigman, 118 Wn.2d 442, 24 A.L.R.4th 856 (1992)

Statute prohibiting knowingly renting or making available any building for an illegal drug purpose, RCW 69.53.010(1), is not vague, State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 385, 393-94 (2011), and is violated where lessor learns of drug activity after renting and deliberately chooses to do nothing about it, cf.: State v. Davis, supra., at 394-96, reversing State v. Sigman, 60 Wn.App. 1 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Carter, 64 Wn.App. 90 (1992)

Enhanced penalties for delivery of drugs within 1000 feet of public park, former RCW 69.50.435(a), are constitutional, State v. Lua, 62 Wn.App. 34 (1991), do not require mens rea element, State v. Wimbs, 74 Wn.App. 511, 515 (1994); III.

State v. Henderson, 64 Wn.App. 339 (1992)

State need not introduce a plat map to prove delivery occurred in a park, RCW 69.50.435(e), see also: State v. Byrd, 83 Wn.App. 509 (1996), State v. Malone, 136 Wn.App. 545, 558-59 (2007); III.

Tacoma v. Luvene, 118 Wn.2d 826 (1992)

Tacoma drug loitering ordinance, TMC 8.72.010, is not preempted by Uniform Controlled Substances Act, State v. Fisher, 132 Wn.App. 26, 30-32 (2006); 8-0.

State v. Sims, 119 Wn.2d 138 (1992)

Guilty knowledge is not an element of possession with intent to deliver, see also: State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), distinguishing State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992)

Evidence is sufficient to convict of possession of drugs where defendant drove car in which drugs were found plus defendant and car smelled of drugs plus defendant did not stop for officer plus passenger made furtive movements, drugs found hidden in laundry in back seat; jury need not be instructed that state has burden of proving constructive possession by "substantial" circumstantial evidence; II.

State v. Smith, 65 Wn.App. 468 (1992)

Defendant agrees to drive co-defendant to another city so that co-defendant can collect on a debt and also so co-defendant can deliver LSD; held: by agreeing to drive co-defendant with prior knowledge that purpose was to sell LSD is sufficient to prove conspiracy to deliver LSD, RCW 69.50.407, 9A.28.040(1); because defendant encouraged the sale by assuring buyer of potency of drug, evidence is sufficient to establish "agreement and concerted action" requirement of conspiracy; I.

State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992)

Defendant is convicted of delivery of drugs and possession with intent to deliver, evidence having established that defendant delivered drugs, possessed more drugs upon arrest; held: because jury was not instructed that the possession with intent to deliver charge could only apply to the drugs still in defendant's possession at arrest and not to the actual delivery, the offenses merge, see: State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 421 (1983), State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314, 319 (1990), thus remanded for new trial on possession with intent charge, but see: State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 816-8 (1994); concurrent sentences doctrine does not apply since SRA offender score on delivery increased due to possession with intent conviction, sentence imposed was not within standard range for delivery alone; I.

State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 380 (1992)

Officer's opinion testimony that absence of drug user paraphernalia indicates residents are not users does not concern sophisticated or technical matters and is thus not subject to Frye analysis, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 310-1 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, , State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 639, 647 (1977), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983); I.

State v. Caldera, 66 Wn.App. 548 (1992)

Scientific testing of a random portion of a substance that is consistent in appearance and packaging supports a finding that the entire quantity is consistent with the test results of the randomly selected portion, even if only one bag was tested; I.

State v. Dobbins, 67 Wn.App. 15 (1992)

Enhanced penalties for UCSA violations within 1000 feet of school, RCW 69.50.435(a), does not violate due process whether or not children are present; affirmative defense to sentence enhancement where delivery occurs in a private home, is not for profit, and children are not present, RCW 69.50.435(d), does not violate equal protection rights of defendants who deliver in or near a vehicle; I.

State v. Coria, 120 Wn.2d 156 (1992)

Enhanced penalties for delivery of drugs within 1000 feet of school bus stop, RCW 9.94A.310(5), former RCW 69.50.435(a), are neither vague nor do they violate equal protection, State v. Johnson, 116 Wn.App. 851, 861-63 (2003), reversing State v. Coria, 62 Wn.App. 44 (1991); 6-3.

State v. Lynn, 67 Wn.App. 339 (1992)

Police deliver counterfeit drugs to defendant who is convicted of attempted possession, RCW 69.50.407; held: impossibility is not a defense under the general attempt statute, RCW 9A.28.020, or under the VUCSA attempt law, RCW 69.50.407, State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993), see: State v. Davidson, 20 Wn.App. 893, 898 (1979); I.

State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993)

Possession of 20 rocks of cocaine plus officer's testimony that street value is $400 and most users carry no more than four pieces is insufficient to establish intent to deliver, State v.

Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1989), State v. Kovac, 50 Wn.App. 117 (1987), State v. Lyles, 11 Wn.App. 166 (1974), State v. Johnson, 61 Wn.App. 539 (1991), State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 216 (1994), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181, 186 (1998), State v. Wade, 98 Wn.App. 331, 338-42 (1999), State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001); evidence of weapons, substantial sums of money, scales, separate packaging, observation of actions suggesting delivery may support intent to deliver, all absent here, see: State v. Llamas-Villa, 67 Wn.App. 448 (1992), State v. Mejia, 111 Wn.2d 892 (1989), State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286, 297 (1989), State v. Simpson, 22 Wn.App. 572 (1979), State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414 (1976), State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111, 122-4 (1994), State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232 (1994), State v. Campos, 100 Wn.App. 218 (2000), State v. Valencia, 148 Wn.App. 302 (2009), reversed, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010), State v. Nygaard, 154 Wn.App. 641, 647-49 (2010), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 290-91 (2010), see also: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); I.

State v. Donald, 68 Wn.App. 543 (1993)

In attempting to obtain drugs by fraud case, RCW 69.50.403(a)(3), reliance upon a false name by a doctor need not be shown, State v. Lee, 62 Wn.2d 228 (1963); use of false name can be used to infer guilty knowledge, although it does not compel such inference, State v. Bundy, 21 Wn.App. 697, 701 (1978); criminal impersonation, RCW 9A.60.040, is not a lesser; III.

State v. Robbins, 68 Wn.App. 873 (1993)

To convict for possession with intent to deliver, state must prove that defendant possessed the same drugs he intended to deliver, thus trace amounts of cocaine, not visible to naked eye, are insufficient to support conviction; II.

State v. Graham, 68 Wn.App. 878 (1993)

To enhance for possession with intent to deliver within 1000 feet of a school, RCW 9.94A.310(5), state need not prove defendant knew the transaction occurred within 1000 feet of a school, State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54, 63 (1997); enhancement applies to accomplices, state need not prove defendant personally profited from transaction, RCW 69.50.435(d), overruled, in part, State v. Silva-Baltazar, 125 Wn.2d 472 (1994), but see: State v. Piñeda-Piñeda, 1534 Wn.App. 653, 667-71 (2010), , State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015), cf.: State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 382-85 (2015); III.

State v. Thompson, 69 Wn.App. 436 (1993)

Guilty knowledge is not an element of possession with intent to manufacture or deliver, RCW 69.50.401(a), as it is impossible for a person to intend to manufacture or deliver without knowing what s/he is doing, State v. Sims, 119 Wn.2d 138, 141 (1992); I.

State v. McClam, 69 Wn.App. 885 (1993)

A defendant, charged with possession with intent to deliver, who denies on the stand possession, is still entitled to instruction on lesser-included offense of possession if any evidence supports the instruction, , State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397, 399 (1985), distinguishing State v. Rodriguez, 48 Wn.App. 815 (1987), but see: State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360 (1990); I.

State v. Johnson, 69 Wn.App. 935 (1993)

VUCSA information that alleges "unlawfully deliver" but fails to allege "guilty knowledge," State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143 (1992), State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979), is sufficient to withstand a post-trial challenge where defense is entrapment and defendant alleged no prejudice; see: State v. Wallway, 72 Wn.App. 407, 410-14 (1994); I.

State v. Pacheco, 70 Wn.App. 27 (1993)

One can attempt to deliver a controlled substance where the sole accomplice is an undercover police informant who committed the crime, albeit with police permission, State v. Davidson, 20 Wn.App. 893, 897-8 (1978), State v. Peterson, 54 Wn.App. 75 (1989); II.

State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993)

Guilty knowledge is not an element in a conspiracy to deliver case, see: State v. Sims, 119 Wn.2d 138, 142 (1992), State v. Wilson, 95 Wn.2d 828 (1981); in a charge of delivery, failure to include guilty knowledge in information is not fatal when challenged for first time on appeal, where other counts in the same information alleged possession with intent to deliver cocaine and conspiracy to deliver cocaine; cocaine is a narcotic drug for purposes of a violation of RCW 69.50.401(a)(1)(i), per RCW 69.50.101(q); 8-0.

State v. Williams, 70 Wn.App. 567 (1993)

Delivery of drugs within 1000 feet of a school, RCW 9.94A.310(5), 69.50.401(a)(1)(i), mandates a 24-month enhancement of sentence if proved beyond a reasonable doubt; enhanced penalty is added to both lower and upper end of sentence range; I.

State v. Rudd, 70 Wn.App. 871 (1993)

If defendant ingests or otherwise conceals inside the body a receptacle containing drugs, and the contents are not assimilated into the body but rather are recovered, the evidence is sufficient to convict of possession, distinguishing State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120 (1986); II.

State v. Sherwood, 71 Wn.App. 481, 486-9 (1993)

Where prior pleas to attempted VUCSA are treated as gross misdemeanors at sentencing on those pleas, subsequent sentencing court cannot convert them to felonies to increase offender score even if they fit within RCW 69.50.407; II.

State v. McGee, 122 Wn.2d 783 (1993)

To enhance for possession with intent to deliver within 1000 feet of a school, RCW 9.94A.310(5), 69.50.435(a), state need not prove that the intended delivery site was within 1000 feet of school, overruling State v. Wimbs, 68 Wn.App. 673 (1993); accord, State v. Thomas, 68 Wn.App. 268 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Wallway, 72 Wn.App. 407, 410-14 (1994)

Failure to allege guilty knowledge, State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342, 344 (1979), in manufacturing a controlled substance information, RCW 69.50.401(a), is not error, see: State v. Warnick, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004), where raised for first time on appeal, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), where information does allege "unlawfully," State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143, 149-50 (1992); II.

State v. Olson, 73 Wn.App. 348, 357-9 (1994)

Evidence that defendant visited grow farm, obtained a hidden key and entered, remained inside for 30 minutes, fingerprints on several items connected to grow operation, was owner of mobile home located at property is sufficient to convict for manufacturing marijuana; II.

State v. Solomon, 73 Wn.App. 724 (1994)

Identity is not an element of the corpus of possession of drugs, distinguishing Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 574 (1986), State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775, 781 (1990), unlike reckless driving, DUI, attempt, conspiracy, perjury; I.

State v. Vinson, 74 Wn.App. 32, 34-6 (1994)

Enhanced penalty for delivery in a bus shelter, RCW 69.50.435(a), is constitutionally valid, see: State v. Coria, 120 Wn.2d 156, 170 (1992), State v. Carter, 64 Wn.App. 90, 93-4 (1992), State v. Henderson, 64 Wn.App. 339 (1992); I.

State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232 (1994)

While possession of 24 rocks of cocaine itself will not support intent to deliver, juvenile respondent's possession of $342 cash will support an inference of intent to deliver, State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286, 297-8 (1989), State v. Valencia, 148 Wn.App. 302 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 78 (2010), see: State v. Wade, 98 Wn.App. 328, 338-42 (1999), State v. Campos, 100 Wn.App. 218 (2000), State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747 (2002), State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005), State v. Missieur, 140 Wn.App. 181 (2007), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008),see also: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); I.

State v. Wimbs, 74 Wn.App. 511, 515 (1994)

Possession with intent to deliver "within 1000 feet" of a school, RCW 69.50.435, means within a 1000 foot radius, State v. Coria, 62 Wn.App. 44, 49 (1991), rev'd on other grounds, 120 Wn.2d 156 (1992); III.

State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 816-8 (1994)

Defendant is charged as an accomplice to delivery of drugs and as an accomplice to possession with intent to deliver, "to convict" instructions do not distinguish between the two incidents; held: absent evidence of jury confusion as to the factual basis for each count, where separate crimes are charged, evidence is presented on each charge and the argument clearly distinguishes, then no double jeopardy violation exists, distinguishing State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992)(jury sent out note indicating confusion); I.

State v. Silva-Baltazar, 125 Wn.2d 472 (1994)

Possession with intent to deliver within 1000 feet of a school, RCW 69.50.435, is a penalty enhancement, not a substantive offense, and applies to accomplices, distinguishing State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111, 116 (1982), but see: State v. Piñeda-Piñeda, 1534 Wn.App. 653, 667-71 (2010), State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015), cf.: State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 382-85 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Clark, 76 Wn.App. 150 (1994), aff'd, on different grounds, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996)

First time offender waiver, RCW 9.94A.120(5), which excludes delivery of a schedule I or II controlled substance, RCW 9.94A.030(20)(a), does not violate equal protection clauses; I.

State v. Hundley, 126 Wn.2d 418 (1995)

Where field test, three color tests and an independent GCMS test are all negative for controlled substances and one GCMS test run by state tests positive for trace amounts, no reasonable trier of fact could reach subjective certitude, evidence is insufficient; affirms, on different grounds, State v. Hundley, 72 Wn.App. 746 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Morris, 77 Wn.App. 948 (1995)

A purchaser of a controlled substance has not delivered it, RCW 69.50.401(a), 69.50.101(f), nor is she an accomplice to the seller, State v. Catterall, 5 Wn.App. 373 (1971); II.

State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 273-85 (1995)

Civil forfeiture of proceeds traceable to a criminal violation does not constitute punishment under the Fifth Amendment; plurality declines to decide double jeopardy issue in companion case, remands for trial court determination whether property forfeited was proceeds, at 284-5; 3-3-3.

State v. Pierce, 78 Wn.App. 1 (1995)

Sentence enhancement for manufacturing drugs within 1000 feet of a school bus stop, RCW 69.50.435(a), applies to marijuana; III.

State v. Olsson, 78 Wn.App. 202, 207-8 (1995)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, is told by driver he has a knife, which driver produces, officer observed "a heightened awareness to his surroundings. His pupils would not react and were fixed at midrange. He had glassy eyes with redness around the membrane," police patdown, find drugs; held: officer had sufficient and specific facts leading him to believe driver was under the influence of drugs, also had legitimate safety concerns prompting patdown search; III.

State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995)

Drug paraphernalia on hood of car stopped in a park at night is grounds to arrest driver and passenger, distinguishing State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414, 417 (1975); 2-1.

State v. Bernard, 78 Wn.App. 764 (1995)

The crime of receipt of a precursor drug, RCW 69.43.070(2), is not proved by mere possession of the drug; here, defendant purchased drug in Canada, arrested at border, once purchased act of receiving ended; I.

State v. Wiley, 79 Wn.App. 117 (1995)

Unwitting possession must be proved by defendant by a preponderance; accord: State v. Knapp, 54 Wn.App. 314 (Division III, 1989), State v. Rowell, 138 Wn.App. 780, 784-86 (2007); but see: State v. Hundley, 72 Wn.App. 746 (1994), aff'd on other grounds, 126 Wn.2d 418 (1995), State v. Balzer, 91 Wn.App. 44, 67-68 (1998) ; I.

State v. Avendano-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706, 709-12 (1995)

Testimony by narcotics officer that drug dealers have money and drugs on their persons, keep drugs in mouth, are often users, keep drugs in mouth in balloons, and how middlemen are used is not inadmissible "profile" testimony, State v. Braham, 67 Wn.App. 930, 936 (1992), State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 576 (1984), State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287, 293 (1983), as it does not identify any group as being more likely to commit drug offenses; II.

State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755 (1995)

Defendant is arrested after buying cocaine from police, more cocaine is found on his person, is convicted of two counts; held: defendant possessed cocaine in a continuous, uninterrupted series of events during a relatively short period of time, thus double jeopardy clause precludes conviction of two counts, at 760-63, State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997), State v. Villanueva-Gonzalez, 180 Wn.2d 975 (2014), distinguishing State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441, 443 (1991), see: State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), Pers. Restraint of Davis,142 Wn.2d 165 (2000), State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 112-19 (1999), State v. Campos, 100 Wn.App. 218 (2000); possession of large amounts of drugs and cash is sufficient to establish intent to deliver, see: State v. Kovac, 50 Wn.App. 117 (1987), State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 216 (1994), State v. Majia, 111 Wn.2d 892 (1989), State v. Valencia, 148 Wn.App. 302 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 290-91 (2010), but see: State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001); III.

State v. Vasquez, 80 Wn.App. 5 (1995)

Delivery within 1000 feet of a public adult GED program is subject to school enhancement, RCW 69.50.435(a), 28A.150.010; I.

State v. Hennessey, 80 Wn.App. 190 (1995)

State must prove sale within 1000 feet of school bus stop beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Lua, 62 Wn.App. 34, 42 (1991), State v. Tongate, 93 Wn.2d 751, 754 (1980); lay opinion about distance of transaction from bus stop plus map without scale is insufficient to submit the issue to a jury, see: State v. Pearson, 180 Wn.App. 576 (2014); II.

State v. Cameron, 80 Wn.App. 374 (1996)

A prior federal conspiracy to distribute marijuana conviction is equivalent to a Washington class B felony for purposes of washout, former RCW 9.94A.360(2) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], even with prior drug conviction, since Washington's second-offense doubling statute, RCW 69.50.408, would require filing of a criminal information alleging a previous drug conviction, but see: State v. McNeal, 142 Wn.App. 777, 785-86 (2008), State v. Roy, 147 Wn.App. 309 (2008), and the feds, in this case, did not treat the conviction as a second offense, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 89 Wn.App. 198, 201 n.14 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 897 (1999); II.

State v. McReynolds, 80 Wn.App. 894 (1996)

Drug delivery defendant is not entitled to instruction that delivery is lawful if defendant believes he is acting as an agent of the police, RCW 69.50.506(c), unless he is actually acting at the direction of the police; III.

State v. Byrd, 83 Wn.App. 509 (1996)

Evidence is sufficient to establish school zone enhancement, RCW 69.50.435, where state proves school-sanctioned use of grounds, need not prove ownership or dominion and control; I.

State v. Clayton, 84 Wn.App. 318 (1996)

School zone enhancement measurement must be from the perimeter of the school to the actual site where the offense was committed, not the property line where the drugs were, RCW 69.50.401(a), State v. Jones, 140 Wn.App. 431 (2007); III.

State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54 (1997)

Enhanced penalty for delivery within 1000 feet of a school, RCW 69.50.435, does not apply to a school program located on third floor of a downtown Seattle building with no signs or other indications that a school is housed therein, reversing State v. Becker, 80 Wn.App. 364 (1996), although lack of knowledge of the school zone is irrelevant to culpability, State v. Akers, 136 Wn.2d 641 (1998, State v. Johnson, 116 Wn.App. 851, 861-63 (2003), cf.: State v. Davis, 93 Wn.App. 648 (1999); special verdict which declares the program to be a school is a comment on the evidence; 7-2.

State v. Wallace, 86 Wn.App. 546 (1997)

Prohibiting home detention for drug offenders, RCW 9.94A.185, does not violate equal protection; I.

Seeley v. State, 132 Wn.2d 776 (1997)

Legislature's classification of marijuana as a schedule I controlled substance is valid under state privileges and immunities and equal protection clauses, State v. Williams, 93 Wn.App. 340, 343-44 (1998), see also: State v. Palmer, 96 Wn.2d 573 (1981); 8-1.

State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997)

At traffic stop, defendant is found with drugs in his car, sock and pocket, is convicted of possession and possession with intent to deliver; held: double jeopardy clause applies if offenses are legally identical and based on same act or transaction, Kansas v. Hendricks, 138 L.Ed.2d 501 (1997); offenses are not legally identical if each offense contains an element not contained in the other, State v. Gocken, 127 Wn.2d 95, 101 (1995); possession of drugs does not contain an element not found in possession with intent to deliver, thus the offenses are identical, see: State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898, 904-07 (2000); defendant's possession here was based upon one transaction "in a continuous, uninterrupted series of events," State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 763 (1995), thus possession charge must be dismissed, distinguishing State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441 (1991), cf.: State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142

Wn.2d 165 (2000), State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 112-19 (1999), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721 (2003); II.

State v. Barajas, 88 Wn.App. 387 (1997)

Possession with intent to deliver in a school zone doubles the maximum sentence, RCW 69.50.435(a), thus when such a defendant is armed, the firearm enhancement period, RCW 9.94A.310(3)(a), depends upon the enhanced maximum sentence, State v. Blade, 126 Wn.App. 174 (2005), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 426-30 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007); III.

State v. Ong, 88 Wn.App. 572, 577-8 (1997)

"To convict" instruction states that defendant knew substance delivered was morphine, state proves defendant gave a pain pill to victim; held: by failing to object to the instruction, state assumed burden of proving defendant knew the substance delivered was morphine, State v. Potts, 93 Wn.App. 82, 86-88 (1998), State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266, 284-87 (2014), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), see: State v. Hunt, 75 Wn.App. 795, 806 (1994), here the evidence only shows defendant knew he delivered a controlled substance, not specifically morphine, thus insufficient, cf.: State v. Sinrud, 200 Wn.App. 643 (2017); court expressly does not decide whether a defendant accused of delivery must know the specific drug being delivered; II.

State v. McCollum, 88 Wn.App. 977, 987-90 (1997)

Maximum sentence for a drug offense may be doubled if there is a prior drug conviction unless the current offense is for possession, RCW 69.50.408, cf.: State v. McGrew, 156 Wn.App. 546, 556-58 (2010); II.

State v. Fernandez, 89 Wn.App. 292, 299-300 (1997)

Operating a drug house, RCW 69.50.402(a)(6), is construed to prohibit maintaining a house that persons other than the residents resort to for the purpose of using drugs, see also: State v. Ceglowski, 103 Wn.App. 346 (2000), State v. Menard, 197 Wn.App. 901 (2017); statute is not vague; I.

State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998)

Defendant is found with small amounts of marijuana in his car and in his store, is convicted of two counts of possession; held: where the same drug is found within defendant's dominion and control at the same time, then double jeopardy clause precludes conviction of multiple counts, Bell v. United States, 99 L.Ed.2d 905 (1955), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721 (2003), unless legislature has "intended to punish a person multiple times for simple possession based upon the drug being stashed in multiple places," at 635 ("unit of prosecution"), cf.: State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 112-19 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Gordon, 91 Wn.App. 415 (1998)

A park created and maintained by a Public Utility District is a public park for purposes of sentence enhancement, RCW 69.50.435(f)(4); III.

State v. Potts, 93 Wn.App. 82 (1998)

Officer, in stopping vehicle for driving violation, observes passenger removing "stuff" from his pockets, has defendant-passenger step out, finds syringes under seat, state charges possession of a controlled substance: methamphetamine, proves defendant possessed amphetamine; held: while state need not prove knowledge of a specific controlled substance, State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.App. 373 (1981), see: McFadden v. United States, 576 U.S. 186, 135 S.Ct. 2298, 192 L.Ed.2d 260 (2015), where prosecutor charges a specific substance and court instructs that a specific substance was possessed, either at state's request or without exception from state, then instructions become law of the case, State v. Ong, 88 Wn.App. 572, 577 (1997), State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266, 284-87 (2014), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), and state must prove the unnecessary element; here, because amphetamines and methamphetamine have different chemical compositions, state failed to prove identity of the charged drug; evidence was sufficient to prove constructive possession; III.

State v. Buford, 93 Wn.App. 149 (1998)

Police seize pipe with cocaine residue under defendant's hat, defense puts on no evidence, court declines unwitting possession instruction; held: defendant is not entitled to unwitting possession instruction unless evidence presented at trial is sufficient to permit a reasonable juror to find, by a preponderance, that defendant unwittingly possessed contraband, see: State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 913-16 (2008); I.

State v. Jones, 93 Wn.App. 166, 176-77 (1998)

Police observe co-defendant flag down a car, talk with occupants, witness testifies they talk about drugs, co-defendant leaves car, calls defendant who appears in less than one minute, defendant gives co-defendant a small plastic-wrapped object in exchange for money, co-defendant goes to car and hands drugs to occupants, defendant is found with more than $400 cash; held: sufficient to prove delivery; I.

State v. Davis, 93 Wn.App. 648 (1999)

School bus stop enhancement, RCW 69.50.435(a), is sufficient and does not violate due process where school district contracts with local public bus company to supply school transportation on regular buses at regular bus stop, as "anyone could discover the stop's location using an objective method, such as observing school children or contacting the school district," at 653, State v. Sanchez, 104 Wn.App. 976 (2001), State v. Coria, 120 Wn.2d 156 (1992), State v. Johnson, 116 Wn.App. 851, 861-63 (2003), distinguishing State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54 (1997), State v. Akers, 136 Wn.2d 641 (1998), see also: State v. Pearson, 180 Wn.App. 576 (2014), State v. Fehr, 185 Wn.App. 505, 513-16 (2015), State v. Hugdahl, 195 Wn.2d 319 (2020); II.

State v. Hollis, 93 Wn.App. 804 (1999)

Involving minor in a drug transaction, RCW 69.50.401(f) [recodified RCW 69.50.4015 (2003)], and delivery of cocaine do not violate double jeopardy clause under same elements test, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 (1995), at 812-15; bringing minor to drug transaction and allowing her to remain is sufficient to prove involving minor in drug transaction notwithstanding minor's lack of participation in deliver, at 816; I.

Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 137 Wn.2d 897 (1999)

Solicitation to deliver a controlled substance, RCW 9A.20.020, -030, 69.50.401, is not subject to the VUCSA doubling statute, RCW 69.50.408(a), which doubles the maximum penalty when a defendant is convicted of a drug offense and has a prior drug conviction, reversing Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 89 Wn.App. 198 (1997), cf.: State v. Howell, 102 Wn.App. 288 (2000), State v. McCarthy, 112 Wn.App. 231 (2002), State v. McGrew, 156 Wn.App. 546, 556-58 (2010), see: State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 429 n. 27 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007); 9-0.

City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000)

Police set up drug roadblock, stop a predetermined number of vehicles, ask for identification, look for signs of impairment, conduct open-view examination of cars, drug dog walks around vehicles, search if particularized suspicion develops; held: because primary purpose of stop is to detect evidence of ordinary criminal wrongdoing, as opposed to border, United States v. Martinez-Fuerte, 49 L.Ed.2d 1116 (1976), or sobriety checkpoints, Michigan Dept. of State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), drug roadblock violates Fourth Amendment, see: Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), see: Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Reed, 101 Wn.App. 704 (2000)

Police officer testifies he observes drug transaction through binoculars, court sustains state's objection to cross-examination disclosing exact position of officer under "surveillance location privilege," state proffers photographs taken from location, trial court excludes photos; held: state cannot withhold surveillance location unless no question is raised about surveillance officer's ability to observe or where contemporaneous videotape provides the relevant evidence, see: State v. Darden, 103 Wn.App. 368 (2000); I.

State v. Howell, 102 Wn.App. 288 (2000)

Defendant pleads guilty to solicitation to deliver cocaine, trial court treats prior VUCSA delivery conviction as one point, relying on In re Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 137 Wn.2d 897 (1999); held: while Hopkins holds that solicitation to deliver drugs is not a drug offense for purposes of the maximum sentence doubling statute, former RCW 9.94A.360(6) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)] unambiguously states that where the present conviction of an anticipatory offense, priors are to be counted as if the present conviction is for a completed offense, State v. Ashley, 187 Wn.App. 908 (2015), aff'd, on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), thus prior deliveries count three, State v. McCarthy, 112 Wn.App. 231 (2002); I.

State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898, 904-07 (2000)

Defendant is convicted of possession of marijuana with intent to manufacture and possession of more than 40 grams of marijuana, both for the same marijuana; held: while possession of marijuana has an additional element (40 g.), thus offenses are not legally identical under same evidence test, distinguishing State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119, 123 (1997), the legislature did not intend that one would be convicted of both, see: State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776, 790 (2000), aff'd, on different grounds, 147 Wn.2d 238 (2002), thus convictions violate double jeopardy, lesser possession charge is dismissed; III.

State v. Ceglowski, 103 Wn.App. 346 (2000)

For drug house conviction, RCW 69.50.402, state must prove that drug activity is of a continuing and recurring character and that a substantial purpose of maintaining the premises is for illegal drug activity, see also: State v. Fernandez, 89 Wn.App. 292 (1997), State v. Menard, 197 Wn.App. 901 (2017); II.

State v. Sanchez, 104 Wn.App. 976 (2001)

School bus stop for enhancement, RCW 69.50.435(a), may be designated by a representative of the school district, not solely by the school board; III.

State v. Lusby, 105 Wn.App. 257, 263-64 (2001)

Enhanced penalties for possession with intent to deliver within a public housing project designated a "drug free zone," RCW 60.50.435(a)(6), do not violate equal protection, State v. Coria, 120 Wn.2d 156, 175 (1992); 24-month enhancement is added to the standard range and increase the maximum penalty, RCW 69.50.435(a), State v. Silva-Baltazar, 125 Wn.2d 472, 478-79 (1994); III.

State v. Neal, 144 Wn.2d 600 (2001)

In drug case, state files CrR 6.13(b) certificate which states that crime lab received the substance from the "evidence vault" rather than a person as required in CrR 6.13(b)(1), defense files demand for expert 6 days before trial, trial court admits certificate as demand was untimely and it substantially complied with rule; held: defendant's untimely demand does not waive hearsay objection where report does not strictly comply with the rule establishing the hearsay objection, failure of the certificate to state the name of the person from whom the lab received the evidence is fatal to admissibility, reversing State v. Neal, 102 Wn.App. 99 (2000); because there was no evidence offered that the item possessed by defendant was controlled, dismissed for insufficiency; 9-0.

State v. Halsten, 108 Wn.App. 759 (2001)

Statute which prohibits possession of pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture methamphetamine, RCW 69.50.440, does not include pseudoephedrine hydrochloride, a salt of pseudoephedrine, State v. Morris, 123 Wn.App. 467, 472-75 (2004), see: State v. Cromwell, 127 Wn.App. 746 (2005); II.

United States v. Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative, 149 L.Ed.2d 722 (2001)

Marijuana has no medical benefit exception to federal controlled substances act, 21 USC § 841(a); 9-0.

State v. Bernal, 109 Wn.App. 150 (2001)

Fourteen-year old dies of heroin overdose, defendant admits selling him heroin day before, is charged with homicide by controlled substance and distributing a controlled substance to a minor; held: absent independent evidence that decedent obtained the heroin by delivery as opposed to stealing it, finding it or some other means, corpus delicti is lacking; 2-1, II.

Pers. Restraint of Bowman, 109 Wn.App. 869 (2001)

Solicitation to deliver drugs is an anticipatory offense under Ch. 9A.28, RCW rather than under Ch. 69.50, RCW, thus sentence range is not 0-12 months, see: In re Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 137 Wn.2d 897 (1999); I.

State v. Darden, 145 Wn.2d 612 (2002)

In drug case, surveillance officer testifies to his height from street and location relative to transaction observed but court overrules defendant's objection to the specific location; held: there is no surveillance location privilege, court's restriction violated defendant's right to confront, see: State v. Reed, 101 Wn.App. 704 (2000); reverses State v. Darden, 103 Wn.App. 368 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Clausing, 147 Wn.2d 620 (2002)

To prove delivery of a legend drug, former RCW 69.41.030, state must establish that recipient had a prescription issued by a practitioner, court's instruction that "practitioner" must be licensed was erroneous, reversing State v. Clausing, 104 Wn.App. 75 (2000); 6-3.

State v. Shepherd, 110 Wn.App. 544 (2002)

To qualify as a defense to marijuana possession under Medical Use of Marijuana Act, RCW 69.51A.005, defense must have a medical opinion that patient will, more likely than not, be aided by marijuana and defense must prove that amount possessed must not exceed a 60-day supply, but see: State v. Browne, 181 Wn.App. 756 (2014), to include the amount the patient needs to use; here, physician's statement that marijuana "may" assist patient is insufficient, see also: State v. Phelps, 118 Wn.App. 740 (2003), State v. Tracy, 158 Wn.2d 683 (2006), State v. Soper, 135 Wn.App. 89 (2006), State v. Fry, 168 Wn.2d 1, 10-13 (2010), State v. Adams, 148 Wn.App. 231 (2009), State v. Constantine, 182 Wn.App. 635, 648-50 (2014), cf.: State v. Otis, 151 Wn.App. 572 (2009); III.

State v. McCarthy, 112 Wn.App. 231 (2002)

Defendant is convicted of VUCSA delivery, sentencing judge counts prior conviction for solicitation to deliver as one point; held: a prior anticipatory offense is scored the same as if completed, former RCW 9.94A.360(4) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], thus the prior solicitation is tripled, State v. Howell, 102 Wn.App. 288 (2000); subsequent legislation which eliminates the tripling rule, while remedial, is not retroactive, State v. Kane, 101 Wn.App. 607 (2000), State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 220, 233-41 (2004), but see: Addleman v. Board of Prison Terms and Paroles, 107 Wn.2d 503, 509-12 (1986); I.

State v. Hepton, 113 Wn.App. 673 (2002)

Police find "almost all components and equipment" needed to manufacture meth, defendant admits that he had completed the process up to the point of precipitation of crystals when it exploded, challenges sufficiency of charge of manufacturing, claiming evidence only sufficient to prove attempt; held: reasonable juror could find that defendant processed meth or its immediate precursor, RCW 69.50.101(d), -(p), at 681-83; where multiple children a present at meth lab, only one children-present sentencing enhancement is authorized, RCW 9.94A.510(6), -.605, at 688-90; III.

State v. Williams, 149 Wn.2d 143 (2003)

State may appeal a DOSA sentence challenging defendant's eligibility, reversing State v. Williams, 112 Wn.App. 171 (2002); per curiam.

State v. Cowin, 116 Wn.App. 752, 760 (2003)

Absent finding of indigency, $1000 felony VUCSA fine must be imposed, RCW 69.50.430(1), cf.: State v. Wood, 117 Wn.App. 207 (2003), State v. Corona, 164 Wn.App. 76 (2011); II.

State v. DeVries, 149 Wn.2d 842, 849-54 (2003)

Respondent gives a pill to another student, no witness testifies that respondent ever referred to the pill as a controlled substance or illegal drug, although a witness says respondent claimed the pill could "mess you up," drug screen of recipient shows presence of meth; held: no rational trier of fact could find that the pill was a controlled substance or that respondent knew it was a controlled substance; 8-1.

State v. Bramme, 115 Wn.App. 844 (2003)

Defendant admits participating in methamphetamine production involving 5000 pills, trial court denies DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(c); held: DOSA statute permits eligibility where offense "involved only a small quantity," "involved" does not require size determination be made solely on basis of drugs seized; if credible evidence exists pointing to defendant's involvement in the production of a significant quantity, court properly may conclude manufacturing offense did not involve a small quantity, see also: State v. Barton, 121 Wn.App. 792 (2004), State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327 (2003) "small" being a relative term; III.

State v. Johnson, 116 Wn.App. 851, 861-63 (2003)

To prove school bus stop enhancement, RCW 69.50.435, where school district transportation manager testifies that there is an active school bus stop within 1000 feet of delivery, there is a logical inference that public could call his office to ascertain the location even if he doesn't so testify, see: State v. Coria, 120 Wn.2d 156, 160 (1992), see also: State v. Pearson, 180 Wn.App. 576 (2014), State v. Hugdahl, 195 Wn.2d 319 (2020); I.

State v. Wood, 117 Wn.App. 207 (2003)

Fine following methamphetamine conviction, RCW 69.50.401(2)(b) (2005), is discretionary, State v. Corona, 164 Wn.App. 76 (2011), see: State v. Cowin, 116 Wn.App. 752, 760 (2003); III.

State v. Davis, 117 Wn.App. 702 (2003)

Possession of methamphetamine is not a lesser of manufacturing methamphetamine, as it is possible to manufacture meth from ingredients that are not themselves controlled substances,

State v. Jones, 25 Wn.App. 746 (1980), State v. Moore, 54 Wn.App. 211 (1989), but see: State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397 (1985); I.

State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721, 725-27 (2003)

Defendant is observed picking up rocks of cocaine, at arrest police find crack pipe with cocaine residue, defendant is convicted of attempted possession of cocaine and possession of cocaine; held: because the conduct occurred at the same location, at the same time, and violated the same underlying statute, albeit one anticipatory offense, double jeopardy clause precludes conviction of the lesser, State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997), State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998); I.

State v. Phelps, 118 Wn.App. 740 (2003)

Trial court's denial of affirmative defense of medical marijuana, ch. 69.51A, RCW, was proper because defendant-grower was not designated in writing by the patient prior to possessing marijuana, State v. Butler, 126 Wn.App. 741 (2005), see also: State v. Shepherd, 110 Wn.App. 544, 551 (2002), State v. Tracy, 158 Wn.2d 683 (2006), State v. Soper, 135 Wn.App. 89 (2006), State v. Otis, 151 Wn.App. 572 (2009), State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 352-61 (2014) ; II.

State v. Goodman, 150 Wn.2d 774 (2004)

Information charges possession of "meth," defense challenges sufficiency for first time on appeal; held: specific identity of the controlled substance is an essential element of possession with intent to deliver, State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013), State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018), State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016), cf.: State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306 (2010), State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019), State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020); where challenged for first time on appeal, under liberal standard, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), defendant had due notice; affirms State v. Goodman, 114 Wn.App. 602 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712 (2004)

For deadly weapon enhancement, jury must be instructed that they must find a nexus between defendant, weapon and crime, at 726-29, State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562, 577 (2002)(Alexander, C.J., concurring), cf.: State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007); II.

State v. Keena, 121 Wn.App. 143 (2004)

Manufacturing methamphetamine can be proved where defendant is preparing and processing it, RCW 69.50.101(p), whether or not he completed the preparation and whether or not any completed meth is found, State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130 (2002), State v. Todd, 101 Wn.App. 945 (2000), State v. Forrester, 135 Wn.App. 195, 201-03 (2006); II.

State v. Warnick, 121 Wn.App. 737 (2004)

Where defendant denies involvement in any manufacturing activities, "to convict" instruction need not allege that defendant knew the substance manufactured was a controlled substance as long as it states that defendant knew it was methamphetamine, see: WPIC 50.11, State v. Wallway, 72 Wn.App. 407, 412-13 (1994); III.

State v. Barton, 121 Wn.App. 792 (2004)

Trial court's finding that DOSA program, RCW 9.94A.660, is administered inadequately is grounds to deny DOSA sentence, State v. Bramme, 115 Wn.App. 844, 850 (2003), State v. Hender, 180 Wn.App. 895 (2014); III.

State v. DiLuzio, 121 Wn.App. 822 (2004)

Policy allowing only prosecutor to refer a defendant to drug court, RCW 2.28.170, [now RCW 2.30.030] does not violate separation of powers doctrine, see: State v. Daniels, 8 Wn.App.2d 160 (2019), distinguishing State ex re. Schillberg v. Cascade Dist. Court, 94 Wn.2d 772 (1980), State v. Wallenberg, 174 Wn.App. 163 (2013); III.

State v. Harner, 153 Wn.2d 228 (2004)

Absence of a drug court in the county in which a defendant is charged does not violate equal protection or due process clauses; 9-0.

State v. Roy, 126 Wn.App. 124 (2005)

Trial court has no authority to revoke a DOSA sentence, RCW 9.94A.660; III.

Gonzales v. Raich, 162 L.Ed.2d 1 (2005)

Federal prohibition of possession of marijuana, in the face of state medical marijuana laws, does not exceed Congress' authority under the commerce clause; 6-3.

State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007)

Convictions for manufacturing marijuana, RCW 69.50.401(a)(ii), and manufacturing methamphetamine, RCW 69.50.401(a)(iii), do not violate double jeopardy clause, at 415-17; trial court has discretion to utilize the maximum sentence doubling statute, RCW 69.50.408, State v. Cameron, 80 Wn.App. 374, 380 (1996), State v. Roy, 147 Wn.App. 309 (2008), but see: Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 89 Wn.App. 198, 203 (1997), State v. Cyr, 195 Wn.2d 492 (2020); II.

State v. Griffin, 126 Wn.App. 700 (2005)

Defendant is convicted of possessing drugs in his hat and sock in a car, trial court finds defendant used a motor vehicle in commission of offense, notifies Department of Licensing, which revokes defendant's license, RCW 46.20.285(4); held: because evidence indicated that defendant had obtained the drugs in exchange for giving someone a ride in the car, trial court's finding was sufficient, but see: State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 609-11 (2006), cf.: State v. Alcantar-Maldonado, 184 Wn.App. 215, 227-30 (2014), need not be submitted to a jury as it is not punitive, distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2003); I.

State v. Mullins, 128 Wn.App. 633 (2005)

Trial court properly excluded evidence supporting affirmative defense of medical marijuana because defendant could not establish that he was currently a primary caregiver, RCW 69.51A.010(2)(b), and was not responsible for the patient's housing, health or care, as defendant's only role was to supply marijuana for glaucoma patient, cf.: State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 352-61 (2014); II.

State v. Poling, 128 Wn.App. 659, 669-71 (2005)

To enhance manufacturing methamphetamine case for child on premises, RCW 9.94A.605, state must prove that child was at the place where the manufacturing occurred, error for trial court to define premises as "any building, dwelling or any real property;" II.

State v. Evans, 129 Wn.App. 211, 227-29 (2005), reversed, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 403 (2007)

Where statute directed a higher sentence for delivery of methamphetamine base, former RCW 69.50.401(a)(1)(ii), but jury only returns a verdict indicating that defendant delivered methamphetamine, court cannot impose the higher sentence, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), see: State v. Cromwell, 157 Wn.2d 529 (2006); II.

State v. Tracy, 158 Wn.2d 683 (2006)

Only a Washington licensed physician may prescribe medical marijuana in Washington, RCW 69.51A.010(3), 18.71.021, State v. Soper, 135 Wn.App. 89 (2006); affirms State v. Tracy, 128 Wn.App. 388 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Cooper, 156 Wn.2d 475 (2006)

Child endangerment statute, RCW 9A.42.100, making it a crime for a person to expose a dependent child to methamphetamine applies to any person, not only a child's parent, custodian or caregiver; 8-1.

State v. Carlson, 130 Wn.App. 589 (2005)

Two "rough dressed, unkempt and dirty" men enter rural store, one purchases muriatic acid, the other purchases denatured alcohol, store manager reports to police the purchase, as his training taught him that when these items are mixed, along with others, one can manufacture methamphetamine, police stop defendants' car, discover pseudoephedrine, defendants are convicted of possession of pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture meth; held: while entering a store with a companion, splitting up and buying pseudoephedrine products may be enough for an investigative stop, here the activity was so innocuous, insufficient to support a Terry stop, cf.: State v. Keller-Deen, 137 Wn.App. 396 (2007); 2-1, III.

State v. Hearn, 131 Wn.App. 601, 609-11 (2006)

Drugs found in defendant's clothes within a basket and in defendant's purse within vehicle do not have a reasonable relation to the operation and use of the vehicle and vehicle did not contribute in some reasonable degree to the commission of the VUCSA offense, thus license suspension, RCW 46.20.285(4), is not valid, State v. Wayne, 134 Wn.App. 873 (2006), State v. B.E.K., 141 Wn.App. 742 (2007), State v. Alcantar-Maldonado, 184 Wn.App. 215, 227-30 (2014), distinguishing State v. Batten, 95 Wn.App. 127, 129 (1999), aff'd, 140 Wn.2d 362 (2000), State v. Griffin, 126 Wn.App. 700 (2005); III.

Pers. Restraint of Cruz, 157 Wn.2d 83 (2006)

VUCSA doubling statute, RCW 69.50.408, doubles the maximum sentence for a subsequent delivery conviction but does not double the standard range, State v. Clark, 123 Wn.App. 515, 520-22 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Cromwell, 157 Wn.2d 529 (2006)

Possession of salts of methamphetamine is prohibited by former RCW 69.50.401(a)(1)(ii), State v. Forrester, 135 Wn.App. 195 (2006), overruling, in part, State v. Morris, 123 Wn.App. 467 (2004), distinguishing State v. Halsten, 108 Wn.App. 759 (2001); affirms State v. Cromwell, 127 Wn.App. 746 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Colquitt, 133 Wn.App. 789 (2006)

Defendant agrees that, should he fail drug court, trial court can admit police report that included a field test, is terminated from drug court, RCW 2.28.170, is found guilty; held: defendant did not enter a "stipulation to the sufficiency of the evidence," but see: State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23 (2010), did not confess, no lab test report was admitted, thus evidence was insufficient to convict, State v. Roche, 114 Wn.App. 424 (2002), cf.: State v. Hernandez, 85 Wn.App. 672, 675 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Delmarter, 124 Wn.App. 154 (2004); 2-1, II.

State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311 (2006)

Defendant steals pseudophed, removing tablets from blister packs, is charged with possession with intent to manufacture methamphetamine, RCW 69.50.440; held: absent some other evidence, no rational jury would have found that defendant intended to manufacture methamphetamine merely because he shoplifted some pseudophed, at 338, State v. Whalen, 131 Wn.App. 58 (2005), cf.: State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), State v. Sprague, 16 Wn.App.2d 213 (2021); 7-2.

State v. Keller-Deen, 137 Wn.App. 396 (2007)

Defendant and cohort are seen making separate purchases of two meth precursor item, store detective "believed" cohort made previous precursor purchases, defendant and cohort meet in parking lot, scan parking lot, police recognize cohort from other purchases, car registered to defendant as being associated with other precursor purchases, police stop car, handcuff defendant-passenger, arrest driver for warrants, search, find drugs; held: facts support reasonable suspicion to conduct Terry stop, State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509 (1991), State v. Samsel, 39 Wn.App. 564, 570 (1985), see: State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445 (1991), distinguishing State v. Carlson, 130 Wn.App. 589, 593 (2005); III.

State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 105-08 (2007)

Minor found in house which is 100 feet from detached shed where meth lab is found is insufficient to support enhancement of minor on drug premises, former RCW 9.94A.128; II.

State v. Hanson, 138 Wn.App. 322 (2007)

After-acquired medical authorization to use marijuana is sufficient to support the medical marijuana affirmative defense, RCW 69.51A.010, where police seize drugs, defendant is not present at seizure, obtains authorization and brings it to police station the next day, State v. Adams, 148 Wn.App. 231 (2009), see: State v. Otis, 151 Wn.App. 572 (2009); 2-1, III.

State v. Jones, 140 Wn.App. 431 (2007)

Officer's tape measurement and estimates is insufficient to submit school bus route stop enhancement, RCW 69.50.401, -435(1), to jury, see also: State v. Pearson, 180 Wn.App. 576 (2014); II.

State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 164-65 (2007)

Medical Marijuana Act, ch. 69.51A RCW, does not implicitly repeal the classification of marijuana as a schedule I drug, State v. Hanson, 138 Wn.App. 322 (2007); III.

State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008)

Officer's testimony that he believed defendants' actions were such that they were buying pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture methamphetamine was an improper opinion of guilt but, because there was no objection, "did not establish actual prejudice, see also: State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12, 28-30 (2018) 7-2.

State v. Gonzales Flores, 164 Wn.2d 1, 10-18 (2008)

Mere act of selling drugs in the presence of a minor is insufficient to convict of involving a minor in a drug transaction, RCW 69.50.4015 (2003); 7-2.

State v. Earl, 142 Wn.App. 777, 785-86 (2008)

VUCSA sentence doubling provision for prior qualifying drug offenses, RCW 69.50.408(1), need not be pled in an information, but see: State v. Cameron, 80 Wn.App. 374 (1996), and need not be determined by a jury because it only reflects the fact of a prior conviction, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403, 412 (2004); 2-1, II.

State v. O'Meara, 143 Wn.App. 638 (2008)

Trial court grants pretrial motion to dismiss use of drug paraphernalia charge, RCW 69.50.412, finding that there was no evidence that defendant used a pipe found in a baggie along with marijuana and a playing card tin containing marijuana; held: a rational trier of fact could conclude that defendant used the tin for storage of marijuana and used the pipe to smoke marijuana, in violation of the statute, thus dismissal was error; II.

State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906 (2008)

Trooper testifies for state that defendant denied knowing he possessed drugs in car, trial court refuses unwitting possession instruction unless defendant testifies; held: unwitting possession is a defense without regard to which party presents evidence in support of it, State v. Olinger, 130 Wn.App. 22, 26 (2005), cf.: State v. Buford, 93 Wn.App. 149 (1998), trial court erred in refusing unwitting possession instruction; 2-1, I.

State v. Adams, 148 Wn.App. 231 (2009)

Police seize marijuana plants at defendant's home, arrest defendant at work, defendant tells police he has authorization, police ask no questions and book defendant, defense submits to trial court letter appointing defendant as a medical marijuana caregiver and verification from physician that patient was prescribed marijuana, trial court refuses primary caregiver affirmative defense under Medical Marijuana Act, ch. 69.51A RCW because defendant did not provide the authorization to police at time of arrest; held: statute which required that an arrestee present a copy of the patient's documentation to any law enforcement officer requesting it, RCW 69.51A.040(4) (1999), does not apply where police do not ask for the authorization, defendant had no means of obtaining it as police took him to jail, State v. Hanson, 138 Wn.App. 322 (2007), defendant presented a prima facie case of the defense, State v. Ginn, 128 Wn.App. 872, 882 (2005), State v. Butler, 126 Wn.App. 741, 744 (2005), State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 352-61 (2014), reversed; III.

State v. Marin, 150 Wn.App. 434 (2009)

Possession of drugs and maintaining a vehicle for drug trafficking, RCW 69.50.402(1)(f), where the drugs were found in the vehicle which had hidden compartments do not violate double jeopardy or constitute the same criminal conduct; trial court's admission into evidence that defendant posted $150,000 bail was not an abuse of discretion where defendant testified that he was a poor handyman, ER 403, even though defendant also testified that bail was posted by another; I.

State v. Otis, 151 Wn.App. 572 (2009)

Physician's written document that states that patient had tried prescription medication unsuccessfully to increase appetite and thus should be able to use marijuana for appetite stimulation is sufficient to meet requirements for "valid documentation" for medical marijuana defense, RCW 69.51A.005 (1999), distinguishing State v. Shepherd, 110 Wn.App. 544 (2002); II.

State v. McCarty, 152 Wn.App. 351 (2009)

Where one person is the designated caregiver of medical marijuana, RCW 69.51A.040 (1999), the defense is unavailable to someone associated with the caregiver, here a housemate; a housemate is entitled to rely upon the affirmative defense that "[n]o person shall be prosecuted for constructive possession…solely for being in the presence or vicinity of medical marijuana," RCW 69.51A.050(2) (1999); II.

State v. Fry, 168 Wn.2d 1 (2010)

Police smell marijuana at residence, defendant hands deputies medical marijuana authorization, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: medical use certificate cannot negate probable cause to search, McBride v. Walla Walla County, 95 Wn.App. 33, 40 (1999), State v. Ellis, 178 Wn.App. 801 (2014), State v. Reis, 180 Wn.App. 438 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 197 (2015), State v. Davis, 182 Wn.App. 625 (2014); medical marijuana authorization for anxiety does not qualify as a "terminal or debilitating medical condition," former RCW 69.51A.010(4) (1999), see: RCW 69.51A.005 et seq. (2008); affirms State v. Fry, 142 Wn.App. 456 (2008); 8-1.

State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23 (2010)

Defendant enters drug court, signing stipulation to police reports and agreeing that the facts in the reports are sufficient to establish guilt, when defendant opts out of drug court trial court finds him guilty; held: courts are not bound by stipulations to legal conclusions, thus stipulation to sufficiency is not binding, court must still determine if evidence establishes guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; affirms State v. Drum, 143 Wn.App. 608 (2008); 5-4.

State v. Eaton, 143 Wn.App. 155 (2008), 168 Wn.2d 476 (2010)

Defendant is lawfully arrested, transported to jail where search yields drugs, trial court finds sentence enhancement for possession within a jail, RCW 9.94A.533(5); held: strict liability punishments for crimes and sentence enhancements without a mens rea requirement still require a minimal mental element to establish the actus reus, State v. Utter, 4 Wn.App. 137, 139 (1971); legislature did not intend the "unlikely, absurd, or strained consequence" of punishing a defendant for his involuntary act, at 484, State v. Deer, 158 Wn.App. 854, 861-65 (2010); 5-4.

State v. Nyegaard, 154 Wn.App. 641, 647-49 (2010), rev. granted and remanded, 172 Wn.2d 1006 (2011)

Defendant-passenger with two others in a car late at night, found with firearm, drugs, driver found with cash in bundles is sufficient to prove possession with intent to deliver, cf.: State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993); 2-1, II.

State v. Piñeda-Piñeda, 154 Wn.App. 653 (2010)

School zone enhancement, RCW 69.50.435, applies to accomplices, State v. Silva-Baltazar, 125 Wn.2d 472, 480-84 (1994), only if the accomplice is present in the school zone, see also: State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015), State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 382-85 (2015), State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015); school zone instruction that states "all twelve of you must agree on the answer to the special verdict," 1A WPIC 160.00, is proper; controlled substance conspiracy, RCW 69.50.407, is concomitant with general conspiracy, RCW 9A.28.020, thus state must plead and prove substantial step, overruling, in part, State v. Casarez-Gastelum, 48 Wn.App. 112 (1987) and State v. Hawthorne, 48 Wn.App. 23 (1987), harmless here when raised for first time on appeal as defendant was also convicted of delivery; I.

State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 290-91 (2010)

Large amount of marijuana in a sophisticated grow operation plus a scale is sufficient to support possession with intent to deliver, State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App.755, 768 (1995), cf.: State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001); III.

State v. McGrew, 156 Wn.App. 546 (2010)

Maximum sentence for a drug offense may be doubled if the prior conviction is a possession offense, at 556-58, RCW 69.50.408(2), cf.: State v. McCollum, 88 Wn.App. 977, 987-90 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Hopkins, 137 Wn.2d 897 (1999); a jury's special verdict that VUCSA defendant was armed with a firearm raises his drug offense from a level II to a level III, RCW 9.94A.518, since a firearm is always a deadly weapon, at 558-61; II.

State v. LaPlant, 157 Wn.App. 685 (2010)

Unlawful use of drug paraphernalia, RCW 69.50.412(1), is not a lesser of possession of a controlled substance; II.

State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 639-40 (2010)

Taking steps in Washington and Oregon to prepare and produce methamphetamine is a continuous course of conduct thus no unanimity instruction is required, State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717, 723-26 (1995); III.

State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 649-51 (2011)

In methamphetamine possession case, jury instruction that state must prove defendant "unlawfully" possessed a controlled substance is redundant since a private citizen may not lawfully possess meth; II.

State v. Christman, 160 Wn.App. 741 (2011)

To prove controlled substances homicide, RCW 69.50.415(1), state must prove that defendant's delivery of a drug was a proximate cause of death, but not that it was the sole cause of death; a defendant's conduct is not a proximate cause if some other conduct is a sole or superseding cause, but it can be a proximate cause if another cause is "merely a concurrent cause," at 756 ¶ 11, State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390, 398-99 (2005); statute which uses language "resulting in" death is not vague; III.

State v. Bribiesca Guerrero, 163 Wn.App. 773 (2011)

Trial court is not obliged to order a chemical dependency screening for a defendant convicted of a drug offense who is eligible for a drug offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.500(1), 9.94A.660; III.

State v. Guzman Nuñez, 174 Wn.2d 707 (2012)

Jury must be unanimous to find that state did not prove special sentencing enhancements, overruling State v. Bashaw, 169 Wn.2d 133 (2010), State v. Goldberg, 149 Wn.2d 888, 894 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10, 18-22 (2012)

Officer observes glass pipe with residue, arrests for VUCSA; held: while mere possession of drug paraphernalia is not a crime, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564, 584 n.8 (2003), observation of "chalky white residue" supports officer's belief that the residue was contraband; 9-0.

State v. Brown, 166 Wn.App. 99 (2012)

RCW 69.51A.010(d) (2007) states that a medical marijuana provider may only be the designated provider to one patient at any one time, defense offers evidence that while there are documents showing defendant prescribed for three people, one will testify he never received any from defendant and defendant did not have a designated provider form for another, trial court declines to allow medical marijuana defense; held: reasonable trier of fact could find, viewing evidence in light favorable to defendant, that defendant was a designated provider only to one recipient, see also: State v. Shupe, 172 Wn.App. 341 (2012), State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335 (2014); III.

State v. Bennett, 168 Wn.App. 197, 207-10 (2012)

School bus route stop enhancement, RCW 9.94A.533(6) (2008), 69.50.435(1), applies to a conviction of delivery of methamphetamine to a minor, RCW 69.50.406(1) (2005); II.

State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013)

Identity of the controlled substance is an essential element of controlled substances homicide, State v. Zillyette, 173 Wn.2d 784 (2012), even if raised for the first time on appeal; reverses State v. Zillyette, 169 Wn.App. 24 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Shape, 172 Wn.App. 341 (2012)

Designated medical marijuana provider may deliver to more than one patient as long as it is not delivered to more than one patient at the same time, RCW 69.51A.010(1)(d) (2010), see: RCW 69.51A.040 (2011), State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 352-61 (2014); where defense establishes a prima facie case to support a medical marijuana defense and state presents no evidence to rebut, remedy is dismissal; 2-1, III.

State v. Huynh, 175 Wn.App. 896 (2013)

Possession of a controlled substance with intent to manufacture or deliver is not an alternative means crime, as the only physical act involved is the act of possession, intent to manufacture or deliver address defendant's mental state, State v. Peterson, 168 Wn.2d 763, 769 (2010); major VUCSA aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(e) (2011) does not require unanimity on which statutory factor was proved; I.

State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 385 (2013)

Selling drugs from a motel room is insufficient to convict of unlawful use of a building for drug purposes, RCW 69.53.010 (1988), as statute only applies to those managing or controlling property who allow others to deal drugs; II.

Burrage v. United States, 571 U.S. 204, 187 L.Ed.2d 715 (2014)

Mandatory minimum in federal controlled substances act, 21 U.S.C. §841(a)(1), (b)(1)(A)-(C), where defendant is accused of supplying a drug that causes death or serious bodily injury, is only applicable if the drug provided is a but-for cause of the death or injury; 9-0.

State v. Pearson, 180 Wn.App. 576 (2014)

To prove school bus route stop enhancement state offers testimony from county Director of Geographic Information Systems who produces a map showing bus stops provided by the school district, RCW 69.50.435(5) (2003), trial court strikes special verdict finding that map was wrongly admitted; held: map is prepared, per the statute, for use in a criminal proceeding and is thus testimonial, defendant had right to confront the official who supplied the information, confrontation clause was violated, see: State v. Hennessey, 80 Wn.App. 190 (1995), State v. Davis, 93 Wn.App. 648 (1999), State v. Johnson, 116 Wn.App. 851, 861-63 (2003), State v. Jones, 140 Wn.App. 431 (2007), State v. Bashaw, 169 Wn.2d 133, 140-44 (2010) , overruled, on other grounds, State v. Guzman Nuñez, 174 Wn.2d 707 (2012); II.

State v. Hender, 180 Wn.App. 895 (2014)

Trial court's refusal to grant a DOSA sentence, RCW 9.94A.660 (2009), because defendant denied accountability is a proper exercise of discretion, State v. Jones, 171 Wn.App. 52, 55-56 (2012), State v. Barton, 121 Wn.App. 792 (2004), see also: State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017), distinguishing State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333 (2005); III.

State v. Browne, 181 Wn.App. 756 (2014)

Defendant may raise medical marijuana defense, that he was entitled to prove that patient's 60-day supply could exceed 24 ounces if the greater amount was medically necessary, former WAC 246-75-010 (2008), see: RCW 69.51A.045 (2011); III.

State v. Sykes, 182 Wn.2d 168 (2014)

Closed adult drug court staffings do not violate CONST. art. I, § 10; 6-3.

McFadden v. United States, 576 U.S. 186, 135 S.Ct. 2298, 192 L.Ed.2d 260 (2015)

To convict under the Analogue Act, 21 U.S.C. § 802, et seq., government must prove that defendant knew that the substance possessed is a controlled substance, knowledge requirement is also met if the defendant knew the specific features of the substance that make it a "'controlled substance analogue,'" cf. State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.2d 373 (1981), State v. Schmeling, 191 Wn.App. 795 (2015), State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Conover, 183 Wn.2d 706 (2015)

School bus route stop enhancements, RCW 69.50.435(1)(c) (2015), must run consecutively to the substantive VUCSA charge but may run concurrently to each other, Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Fehr, 185 Wn.App. 505, 513-16 (2015)

Special interrogatory that asks jury if defendant delivered drugs within 1000 feet of a "school bus stop route" rather than statutory "school bus route stop," RCW 69.50.435(1) (2003), relieves state of proving the correct element, thus enhancement reversed, State v. Hugdahl, 195 Wn.2d 319 (2020); II.

State v. Mohamed, 187 Wn.App. 630 (2015)

Even with school zone enhancement court can impose DOSA or parenting sentencing alternative, RCW 9.9A.655, as enhancements are still part of standard range, Postsentencing Review of Gutierrez, 146 Wn.App. 151 (2008); I.

State v. Schmeling, 191 Wn.App. 795 (2015)

Eighth Amendment cruel and unusual clause does not require state to prove intent to possess a controlled substance, see: State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.2d 373 (1981), McFadden v. United States, 576 U.S. 186, 135 S.Ct. 2298, 192 L.Ed.2d 260 (2015), but see: State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021); II.

State v. Rose, 191 Wn.App. 858 (2015)

Initiative 502 legalizing marijuana applies to people charged prior to adoption, State v. Gradt, 192 Wn.App. 230 (2016); 2-1, III

State v. Yokel, 196 Wn.App. 424 (2016)

Police find one hydrocodone pill in defendant's pocket, at trial defendant offers evidence that her minor daughter has a prescription and defendant was holding the pill for her; held: where a household member possesses another household member's prescription drug she is entitled to an affirmative defense as an "ultimate user," RCW 69.50.4013(1) (2015), as the statute permits possession "pursuant to a valid prescription;" ch. 69.50, RCW, should be construed to be uniform with other states which have adopted it, RCW 69.50.603 (1979); II.

State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 867-73 (2016)

Defendant obtains marijuana from a jar and gives it to a minor, after search police find more than one jar with marijuana, lab tests one of the jars and finds it's marijuana, defendant is convicted of distributing to a minor; held: insufficient evidence to compare the substance tested in the lab with the substance consumed by the minors, cf.: State v. Crocker, 16 Wn.App.2d 731 (2021); 2-1, III.

State v. Menard, 197 Wn.App. 901 (2017)

Defendant owns and lives in a house that he rents to five others, is sometimes paid rent with drugs, is aware that tenants sell drugs, police find drugs in house, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(c), maintaining a drug house, RCW 69.50.402(1) (2016), pretrial for insufficiency; held: state need not prove that premises' major purpose is drug activity, evidence is sufficient if it is a substantial purpose, State v. Ceglowski, 103 Wn.App. 346 (2000), State v. Fernandez, 89 Wn.App. 292 (1997); I.

State v. Williams, 199 Wn.App. 99 (2017)

At sentencing defense requests Drug Offender Sentencing Alternative, court imposes standard range sentence, stating that there was no evidence of drug use; held: while a sentencing court may order a drug evaluation for a DOSA it is not obliged to do so, RCW 9.94A.660(4) (2016), and thus properly exercised discretion in declining to impose DOSA, State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333 (2005); 2-1, III.

State v. Jimenez, 200 Wn.App. 48 (2017)

In minor in possession of marijuana case, state need not prove that the marijuana had greater than 0.3% THC, RCW 69.50.4014 (2003), as a juvenile may not possess any concentration of marijuana, regardless of RCW 69.50.101(2)(w) (2017); III.

State v. Sinrud, 200 Wn.App. 643, 650-52 (2017)

In VUCSA possession with intent case court instructs jury "[m]ere possession of a controlled substance does not allow you to infer an intent to deliver a controlled substance. The law requires substantial corroborating evidence of intent to deliver in addition to the mere fact of possession. The law requires at least one additional corroborating factor," consistent with State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232, 236 (1994), argues on appeal that it is a comment on the evidence; held: trial court should not instruct jury based upon an appellate court's sufficiency holding as the sufficiency standard on appeal ("any rational jury") is lower than beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 557-58 (2015), but see: State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019), thus instruction was a prejudicial judicial comment on the evidence; I.

State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96, 105-14 (2018)

Information charges possession of methamphetamine, lab tech testifies substance taken from defendant contained meth and cocaine, to convict instruction omits reference to specific drug; held: while identify of a controlled substance is an essential element which must be included in the to convict instruction, State v. Goodman, 150 Wn.2d 774 (2004), State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013), error is harmless as uncontroverted testimony that substance contained meth, however because different drugs have different maximum sentences defendant may only be sentenced for the least which is misdemeanor marijuana, State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016), State v. Barbarosh, 10 Wn.App.2d 408 (2019), see also: State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019), State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020); 2-1, II.

State v. Van Noy, 3 Wn.App.2d 494 (2018)

In determining eligibility for a DOSA the issue is when the offender committed the current offense, not when he was sentenced for it, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(g) ;I.

State v. Church, 5 Wn.App.2d 577 (2018)

Defendant is sentenced to a residential DOSA, RCW 9.94A.664 (2011), receives treatment and community custody per the statute, never reports for treatment, argues that court only has authority to impose the mid-point of the standard range, RCW 9.94A.664(4)(c), court revokes and imposes standard range sentence; held: the limitation of the court to impose the mid-point of the standard range does not apply to a defendant who never reports to treatment, see: State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333 (2005); I.

State v. Yancey, 193 Wn.2d 26 (2019)

Defendant pleads guilty to two counts of delivering a drug plus two school bus zone enhancements, total sentence range is 36-44 months, mid-range 40 months, sentencing court imposes residential DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660 (2016); held: residential DOSA can only be imposed if mid-point of range is 24 months or less, court cannot waive enhancements, thus defendant was only eligible for a prison-based DOSA, reversing State v. Yancey, 3 Wn.App.2d 735 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019)

Defendant is charged with possession of methamphetamine, to convict instruction does not identify the drug but verdict form does; held: while the identity of the drug is an essential element, State v. Goodman, 150 Wn.2d 774 (2004), State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013), State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018), State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016), here the jury found the specific controlled substance as it was stated in the verdict form thus the error is harmless, see: State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020); II.

State v. Daniels, 8 Wn.App.2d 160 (2019)

Entry into drug court must be approved by prosecutor, RCW 2.30.030 (2018), see: State v. DiLuzio, 121 Wn.App. 822 (2004); I.

Postsentence Review of Hardy, 9 Wn.App.2d 44 (2019)

Standard ranges for defendant's three convictions include one count of less than a year, one count of more than a year, trial court imposes residential DOSA, DOC appeals; held: if an offender has at least one sentence, greater than a year, that is eligible for a DOSA then defendant is eligible for DOSA, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(f) (2016), distinguishing State v. Smith, 142 Wn.App. 122 (2007); III.

State v. Barbarosh, 10 Wn.App.2d 408 (2019)

In drug case where to convict instruction fails to identify the controlled substance charged then sentence can only be for the lowest possible offense for possession of a controlled substance, State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016). State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018), cf.: State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App.2d 824, 829-30 (2019), State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306 (2010), State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020); III.

State v. Hugdahl, 195 Wn.2d 319 (2020)

Enhancement that alleges that defendant delivered drugs within 1000 feet of a school bus route, rather than statutory "school bus route stop," RCW 69.50.435(l)(c) (2015), is insufficient, State v. Fehr, 185 Wn.App. 505, 513-16 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Cyr, 195 Wn.2d 492 (2020)

Defendant pleads guilty to three counts of selling a drug for profit, RCW 69.50.410(1), a class C felony, admits a prior VUCSA triggering doubling statute, RCW 69.50.408, trial court determines maximum sentence is 60 months, sentence range of 68-100 months exceeds maximum, court exercises discretion and sentences to 60 months, not doubling; held: doubling maximum sentence is mandatory, Personal Restraint of Hopkins, 89 Wn.App. 198, 201, 201-03 (1997), rev'd on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 897, 976 P.2d 616 (1999), thus sentence range is not limited by 60 months, but court is not obliged to impose maximum; remanded for trial court to determine if priors qualify as VUCSAs for purposes of doubling; affirms State v. Cyr, 8 Wn.App.2d 834 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Loughbom, 195 Wn.2d 64 (2020)

Prosecutor's referring to "war on drugs" during voir dire, opening statement and closing argument is flagrant and ill-intentioned misconduct, State v. Echevarria, 71 Wn.App. 595 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Peterson, 12 Wn.App.2d 195 (2020)

RCW 69.50.410(3)(a) (2003), sets penalty for selling heroin for a profit at two years, SRA standard range sentence for this defendant is 68-100 months; held: "RCW 9.94A.505(2)(a)(i) states that the trial court must apply the sentencing grids "[u]nless another term of confinement applies," thus legislative intent and rule of lenity dictate that specific statute applies and sentence of two years is affirmed; affirmed, on other grounds, State v. Peterson, 198 Wn.2d 643 (2021); II.

State v. Salazar, 13 Wn.App.2d 880 (2020)

Defendant's standard range is 22-29 months, is sentenced to prison-based DOSA of 25.5 months with 12.25 months in prison and 12.25 months community custody, defendant violates conditions of community custody, court revokes, RCW 9.94A.660(7)(c) (2020), and imposes 29 months, defendant argues that court could not "modify" sentence to impose high end; held: if DOC revokes while a defendant is in prison it can only reimpose the remainder of the original sentence, but if court revokes it may impose any sentence within standard range, with credit; III.

State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020)

Information charges possession of methamphetamine, to convict instruct only refers to possession of a controlled substance, another instruction states that methamphetamine is a controlled substance, defendant argues she only should be sentenced for misdemeanor, State v. Barbarosh, 10 Wn.App.2d 408 (2019), State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016). State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018); held: based upon all of the instructions, the jury necessarily found defendant possessed a controlled substance other than marijuana, see: State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019), State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306, 311-13 (2010); III.

State v. Anderson*,* 198 Wn.2d 672 (2021)

School bus route stop enhancement jury instruction, RCW 69.50.435(1)(c), need not define the words "school bus;" 9-0.

State v. Peterson*,* 198 Wn.2d 643 (2021)

Sale of heroin, RCW 69.50.410, has not been repealed by implication; affirms, on different grounds, State v. Peterson, 12 Wn.App.2d 195 (2020); 7-2.

State v. Crocker, 16 Wn.App.2d 731 (2021)

During service of search warrant police seize various forms of what police believe is marijuana, people come to the residence seeking to buy marijuana, lab tests a limited sample, defendant is convicted of six counts of distributing marijuana to minors, argues evidence is insufficient due to limited testing; held: because buyers testified at trial that they got high from the drugs they purchased plus packaging plus general information about the marijuana business, evidence was sufficient, distinguishing State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 864 (2016); I.

State v. Ehlert*,* 19 Wn.App.2d 381 (2021)

DOSA statute, RCW 9.94A.660(1)(g) (2021), prohibits a DOSA sentence if defendant has had more than one prior DOSA in ten years, defendant had two concurrent DOSAs within ten years; held: because defendant had only one opportunity for treatment and rehabilitation even though there were two DOSAs he is eligible for another DOSA, but see: State v. Van Noy, 3 Wn.App.2d 494, 497 n.2 (2018); III.

State v. Richter*,* ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 303 (2022)

"The application of former RCW 69.50.435(1)(c) to double statutory maximum sentences on certain drug trafficking violations did not punish unknowing innocent conduct, so it did not violate due process under" State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021);

VUCSA
Possession, Constructive Possession, Possession with intent to deliver: Sufficiency

State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.2d 373 (1981)

Intent or knowledge is not an element of possession of a controlled substance, State v. Bradshaw, 152 Wn.2d 528 (2004), State v. Schmeling, 191 Wn.App. 795 (2015), but see: McFadden v. United States, 576 U.S. 186, 135 S.Ct. 2298, 192 L.Ed.2d 260 (2015); burden of proving unwitting possession is on defense, but see: State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021), State v. A.M., 194 Wn.2d 33 (2019) (Gordon McCloud, concurring); distinguishes State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979); reverses State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 231 (1977), State v. Weaver, 24 Wn.App. 83 (1979); accord: State v. Knapp, 54 Wn.App. 314 (1989), State v. Adame, 56 Wn.App. 803 (1990), see: State v. Hundley, 72 Wn.App. 746 (1994), State v. Staley, 123 Wn.2d 794 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Knapstad, 41 Wn.App. 781 (1985), aff'd, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986)

Police find drugs in a residence, defendant visited residence three times, police found papers with defendant's name but listing a different address, premises rented to defendant's brother, drugs found in attic and not in common area; held: insufficient evidence to prove constructive possession, State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969), State v. Tadeo-Mares, 86 Wn.App. 813 (1997), State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), cf.: State v. Ibarra-Erives, 23 Wn.App.2d 596 (2022); trial court may dismiss pre-trial for insufficiency; I.

State v. Douglas S., 42 Wn.App. 138 (1985)

Where a minor lives in his parents' home, dominion and control are not established by mere residence, State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366, 374-75 (2006); III.

State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999)

Proof of defendant's residence at premises where drugs were sold plus proof that the drugs were not kept out of her presence is insufficient to support a finding of constructive possession, State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004), cf.: State v. Tadeo-Mares, 86 Wn.App. 813 (1997), State v. Roth, 131 Wn.App. 556, 563-66 (2006), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013); I.

State v. Gutierrez, 50 Wn.App. 583 (1988)

Possession of identified drug money plus accompanying renter of storage unit to the unit where drugs are found and staying there for 40 minutes is insufficient to prove constructive possession, State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969), State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 746-48 (2012), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), State v. Ibarra-Erives, 23 Wn.App.2d 596 516 P.3d 1246 (2022); III.

State v. Hagen, 55 Wn.App. 494 (1989)

Mere proximity to drugs is not enough to establish constructive possession, State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001), State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004), State v. Shumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330

(2007), see: State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012), State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), see also: State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 646-49 (2011), cf.: State v. Listoe, 15 Wn.App.2d 308 (2020); trial court is not required to define for jury the terms "dominion and control," State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78, 87-88 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999); if trial court does define dominion and control, it is error to define it merely as the ability to reduce an object to actual possession, as jury could conclude therefrom that mere proximity is enough, see: State v. Castle, 86 Wn.App. 48, 60-2 (1997), State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898 (2000); I.

State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989)

One ounce of cocaine is sufficient to support a finding of intent to deliver where evidence establishes that one-eighth ounce is standard size purchase, ounce is worth $1000, scale and cash found in residence, State v. Zamora, 63 Wn.App. 220 (1991), State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232 (1994), State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747 (2002), State v. Missieur, 140 Wn.App. 181 (2007), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), State v. Slighte, 157 Wn.App. 618, 627-28 (2010), State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374, 389-92 (2010), see also: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017), cf.: State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993), State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 216 (1994), State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005), Pers. Restraint of Bell, 187 Wn.2d 558, 387 P.3d 718, 722-23 (2017), see: State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001); constructive possession instruction which states that "possession need not be exclusive," is correct, State v. Weiss, 73 Wn.2d 372, 375 (1968); court need not instruct the jury that mere proximity, temporary residence, personal possessions on the premises, or knowledge of the presence of the drug are not sufficient, distinguishing State v. Hystad, 36 Wn.App. 42, 48-9 (1983), where an unwitting possession instruction is given, *cf.: State v. Jacobs,*121 Wn.App. 669, 684-85 (2004); III.

State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1990)

In possession with intent to deliver drugs case, evidence of possession of several baggies containing a total of 1.4 grams marijuana and observation of defendant in several brief conversations in area known for drug trafficking is insufficient to establish corpus, see: State v. Whalen, 131 Wn.App. 58 (2005), see also: State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993), State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 216 (1994), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181, 186 (1998), State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001), but see: State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374, 389-92 (2010), State v. Slighte, 157 Wn.App. 618, 627-28 (2010); I.

State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383 (1990)

Defendant's presence in room where drugs were found plus defendant's fingerprint on a plate where drugs were plus defendant's rising from a chair when police break through front door with battering ram is insufficient to establish actual possession, State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004); absent proof of dominion and control over premises where drugs are found, mere proximity to and momentary handling of drugs are insufficient to establish constructive possession, State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969), State v. Hystad, 36 Wn.App. 42, 49 (1983), State v. Summers, 45 Wn.App. 761 (1986), State v. Mathews, 4 Wn.App. 653, 656 (1971), State v. Galbert, 70 Wn.App. 721, 726-9 (1993), State v. Echeverria, 85 Wn.App. 777, 784 (1997), State v. Enlow, 143 Wn.App. 463 (2008), State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 746-48 (2012), see: State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), but see: State v.

Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 383-88 (2001), State v. Jacobs,121 Wn.App. 669, 684-85 (2004), cf.: State v. Porter, 58 Wn.App. 57 (1990), State v. Lakotiy, 151 Wn.App. 699, 713-15 (2009), State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 646-49 (2011), State v. Ibarra-Erives, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 516 P.3d 1246 (2022); I.

State v. Porter, 58 Wn.App. 57 (1990)

Defendant's presence at table near drugs plus possession of large sum of cash plus pointing a gun at a police officer plus flight is sufficient to establish constructive possession, distinguishing State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383 (1990); I.

State v. Campbell, 59 Wn.App. 61 (1990)

Defendant places drugs on car seat where, at his direction, third party picks them up and hands them to undercover officer; held: constructive transfer, RCW 69.50.101(f), is the transfer by some other person or manner at the instance or direction of the defendant; information charging delivery need not allege constructive transfer, nor need "transfer" be defined in jury instructions; I.

State v. Bradford, 60 Wn.App. 857 (1991)

Defendant's presence in residence as only adult with two children plus receipts and bills in defendant's name addressed to him at address searched establishes sufficient evidence of dominion and control, State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004); on another date, defendant's presence undressed in bed plus bills addressed to him at address searched establish dominion and control; see: State v. Dobyns, 55 Wn.App. 609 (1989), State v. Partin, 88 Wn.2d 899 (1977), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Lyons, 174 Wn.2d 354 (2012), State v. Walton, 64 Wn.App. 410, 415-7 (1992), State v. Tadeo-Mares, 86 Wn.App. 813 (1997), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), but see: State v. Hagen, 55 Wn.App. 494, 496 (1989), State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001); II.

State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 748 (1991)

Possession of drug residue in pipe can appropriately be charged as possession of a controlled substance, RCW 69.50.401(d), State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 438-40 (1994), as possession is not concurrent with paraphernalia statute, RCW 69.50.412, 69.50.102; I.

State v. Olivarez, 63 Wn.App. 484 (1991)

Jury instruction that constructive possession is established by dominion and control over substance or the premises where substance is found is error as effectively a mandatory presumption that defendant is guilty if jury found defendant had dominion and control over premises, State v. Shumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330 (2007), but see: State v. Bradford, 60 Wn.App. 857, 862 (1991), State v. Ponce, 79 Wn.App. 651 (1995), overruled, State v. Shumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330 (2007), State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997), State v. Tadeo-Mares, 86 Wn.App. 813, 816 (1997); defense instruction that delivery cannot occur between two persons in joint possession properly refused as delivery between joint possessors is not relevant to charge of possession with intent to deliver; III.

State v. Galisia, 63 Wn.App. 833 (1992)

Defendant's continuing and purposeful presence at scene of drug transaction plus expressed interest in seeing transaction succeed so that he could obtain drugs and money are sufficient to convict for accomplice to possession with intent to deliver, State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 815-6 (1994), distinguishing State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999), State v. Gladstone, 78 Wn.2d 306 (1970); I.

State v. Sims, 119 Wn.2d 138 (1992)

Guilty knowledge is not an element of possession with intent to deliver, see also: State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), distinguishing State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992)

Evidence is sufficient to convict of possession of drugs where defendant drove car in which drugs were found plus defendant and car smelled of drugs plus defendant did not stop for officer plus passenger made furtive movements, drugs found hidden in laundry in back seat; jury need not be instructed that state has burden of proving constructive possession by "substantial" circumstantial evidence; II.

State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992)

Defendant is convicted of delivery of drugs and possession with intent to deliver, evidence having established that defendant delivered drugs, possessed more drugs upon arrest; held: because jury was not instructed that the possession with intent to deliver charge could only apply to the drugs still in defendant's possession at arrest and not to the actual delivery, the offenses merge, see: State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 421 (1983), State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314, 319 (1990), thus remanded for new trial on possession with intent charge, but see: State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 816-8 (1994); concurrent sentences doctrine does not apply since SRA offender score on delivery increased due to possession with intent conviction, sentence imposed was not within standard range for delivery alone; I.

State v. Robbins, 68 Wn.App. 873 (1993)

To convict for possession with intent to deliver, state must prove that defendant possessed the same drugs he intended to deliver, thus trace amounts of cocaine, not visible to naked eye, are insufficient to support conviction; II.

State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 438-40 (1994)

Possession of any amount of cocaine, even if not measurable or useable, is sufficient to support a possession conviction, State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 748, 749-50 (1992), State v. Larkins, 79 Wn.2d 392 (1971); I.

State v. Hundley, 72 Wn.App. 746 (1994), aff'd, on different grounds, 126 Wn.2d 418 (1995)

Gas chromatograph mass spectrometer measurement of controlled substance, in nanograms, is sufficient even where another test establishes no drugs where evidence establishes possible imperfect mixing, at 747-9; II.

State v. Staley, 123 Wn.2d 794 (1994)

Defendant finds vial with white powder, appears to him to be cocaine, 15 minutes later he voluntarily gives it to police during DUI stop, trial court refuses defense proposed instruction "[f]leeting, momentary, temporary or unwitting" possession is not unlawful; held: defense proposed instruction that brief possession is not unlawful is incorrect, rather evidence of brief duration or momentary handling goes to the question of whether defendant had possession in the first instance, State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27, 29 (1969), State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 383-88 (2001), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), which differs from unwitting possession, an affirmative defense, State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.2d 373, 381 (1982), see: State v. Partin, 88 Wn.2d 899, 906 (1977), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Lyons, 174 Wn.2d 354 (2012), but see: State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021); here, trial court correctly instructed jury as to unwitting possession, and properly declined to give defendant's erroneous instruction; reverses State v. Staley, 69 Wn.App. 222 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 214-15 (1994)

Defendant is charged with possessing with intent to deliver one bag containing 14 oz. marijuana, court admits testimony from police as to "normal quantity" seized in an arrest, packaging and expected profit margin, trial court instructs as to lesser of possession; held: evidence of packaging and profits is irrelevant where only evidence presented is bare possession of a quantity of marijuana, see: State v. Wade, 98 Wn.App. 328, 338-42 (1999), State v. Campos, 100 Wn.App. 218 (2000), State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001); III.

State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111, 122-24 (1994)

Search reveals 15 g. cocaine, 1 g. heroin, one bottle diazepam, baggies, scales, large amount of cash, defendant challenges conviction of possession with intent to deliver heroin and diazepam; held: presence of contraband with packaging and processing materials will support finding of intent to deliver, State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286, 297-8 (1989), State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130 (2002), State v. Slighte, 157 Wn.App. 618, 627-28 (2010), State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374, 389-92 (2010); state need not present evidence defendant was dealing each drug in his possession separately in order to establish possession with intent; I.

State v. Carter, 77 Wn.App. 8, 13-14 (1995)

Constructive possession is established where drugs are found in wallet in footlocker beneath inmate-defendant's bed in cell shared with two other inmates, footlocker contained mail addressed to defendant, wallet contained items belonging to defendant and defendant was lethargic and unresponsive; III.

State v. Roberts, 80 Wn.App. 342 (1996)

Defense to VUCSA charge is that defendant-landlord was aware of marijuana grow operation in basement but that he had no dominion and control, trial court excludes evidence establishing tenant's exclusive possession of basement; held: by establishing dominion and control over premises, state makes a prima facie case sufficient to raise a rebuttable presumption of constructive possession of the contraband, State v. Perry, 10 Wn.App. 159, 162 (1974); a landlord's purported ability to evict a tenant does not amount to dominion and control over premises sufficient to support an inference of constructive possession of the contraband; landlord is not an accomplice by accepting rent, paying utilities, not exercising self-help to terminate the grow operation, not contacting police or otherwise terminating tenancy, State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78, 89 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald,138 Wn.2d 680 (1999) (dicta), but see: State v. Winterstein, 140 Wn.App. 676, 685-87 (2007), rev'd, on other grounds, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009); I.

State v. Hernandez, 85 Wn.App. 672 (1997)

Where police observe suspect deliver what appears to be a controlled substance, arrest suspect and find drugs, buyer is gone, there is sufficient evidence to convict of delivery; II.

State v. Castle, 86 Wn.App. 48, 60-2 (1997)

Court need not specifically instruct jury that mere proximity is not sufficient to establish possession where court properly defines possession, State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898 (2000); I.

State v. Tadeo-Mares, 86 Wn.App. 813 (1997)

Evidence establishes defendant leases premises where drugs are found in the only bathroom; held: proof of dominion and control over premises raises a rebuttable presumption there is dominion and control over the contraband in the premises, State v. Cantabrana, 83 Wn.App. 204, 208 (1996), State v. Turner, 103 Wn.App. 515 (2000), State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 388-90 (2001), State v. Listoe, 15 Wn.App.2d 308 (2020), but see: State v. Shumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330 (2007), thus here there was sufficient evidence to establish constructive possession of the drugs, distinguishing State v. Olivarez, 63 Wn.App. 484 (1991), State v. Ponce, 79 Wn.App. 651 (1995), overruled, State v. Shumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330 (2007), cf.: State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald,138 Wn.2d 680 (1999); III.

State v. Balzer, 91 Wn.App. 44 (1998)

Unwitting possession must be proved by defendant by preponderance, State v. Wiley, 79 Wn.App. 117 (1995), State v. Rowell, 138 Wn.App. 780, 784-86 (2007), disapproving State v. Hundley, 72 Wn.App. 746 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 126 Wn.2d 418 (1995); state's interest in protecting society outweighs free exercise of religion to use marijuana, at 52-67; II.

State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181, 186 (1998)

Possession of drugs in amounts appropriate for individual use, empty bindles, list with names, numbers and "monetary marks," $96 and a knife, plus officer's testimony on significance of these items, is sufficient to establish intent to deliver, State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130 (2002), State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374, 389-92 (2010), State v. Slighte, 157 Wn.App. 618, 627-28 (2010), State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005), Pers. Restraint of Bell, 187 Wn.2d 558, 387 P.3d 718, 722-23 (2017), but see: State v. Kovac, 50 Wn.App. 117 (1987), State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1990); II.

State v. Potts, 93 Wn.App. 82 (1998)

Officer, in stopping vehicle for driving violation, observes passenger removing "stuff" from his pockets, has defendant-passenger step out, finds syringes under seat, state charges possession of a controlled substance: methamphetamine, proves defendant possessed amphetamine; held: while state need not prove knowledge of a specific controlled substance, State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.App. 373 (1981), but see: McFadden v. United States, 576 U.S. 186, 135

S.Ct. 2298, 192 L.Ed.2d 260 (2015), where prosecutor charges a specific substance and court instructs that a specific substance was possessed, either at state's request or without exception from state, then instructions become law of the case, State v. Ong, 88 Wn.App. 572, 577 (1997), and state must prove the unnecessary element, State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266, 284-87 (2014), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017); here, because amphetamines and methamphetamine have different chemical compositions, state failed to prove identity of the charged drug; evidence was sufficient to prove constructive possession; III.

State v. Buford, 93 Wn.App. 149 (1998)

Police seize pipe with cocaine residue under defendant's hat, defense puts on no evidence, court declines unwitting possession instruction; held: defendant is not entitled to unwitting possession instruction unless evidence presented at trial is sufficient to permit a reasonable juror to find, by a preponderance, that defendant unwittingly possessed contraband, see: State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 913-16 (2008); I.

State v. Wade, 98 Wn.App. 328, 338-42 (1999)

Possession of nine rocks of cocaine plus respondent's walking away from a van plus respondent's claim ten months earlier that he doesn't use cocaine plus officer's testimony that nine rocks is of a quantity normally held for sale is insufficient to prove intent to distribute, State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993), State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 767-68 (1995), State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 216 (1994), State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232 (1994), State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001), see also: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); "at some point, the quantity of drugs could be large enough to raise an inference that the drugs were possessed with intent to distribute," at 340, but nine rocks weighing 1.3 grams is not enough; II.

State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 595-96 (1999), aff'd, on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002)

Four plastic baggies "full of methamphetamine" plus syringe full of liquid meth, a razor blade, four empty baggies, $4250 cash, plus testimony that the baggies were of the same weight indicating likely for sale is sufficient to prove intent to deliver, State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130 (2002), State v. Slighte, 157 Wn.App. 618, 627-28 (2010), State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374, 389-92 (2010), Pers. Restraint of Bell, 187 Wn.2d 558, 387 P.3d 719, 723-24 (2017); II.

State v. Campos, 100 Wn.App. 218 (2000)

Defendant found in possession of 25 grams of rock cocaine, $1750 in small denominations, pager, cell phone, piece of paper with columns of numbers and the Spanish word for "snow," police testify that 25 grams is more consistent with dealing, cash in small denominations is consistent with drug sales, pagers and cell phones are "tools of the trade" for dealers, snow is slang for cocaine, defendant claims drugs were for personal use, provides innocent explanations for other evidence, jury convicts of possession with intent to deliver; held: while possession of a large amount of drugs, without more, is insufficient, State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480, 485 (1993), additional factors, including cash, State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232, 235-36 (1994), State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 768-69 (1995), State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747 (2002), will support a finding of intent to deliver, State v. Davis, 79 Wn.App. 591, 594 (1995), State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130 (2002), State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005),

State v. Missieur, 140 Wn.App. 181 (2007), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), see also: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017), but see: State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001), State v. Valencia, 148 Wn.App. 302 (2009) rev'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010); 2-1, III.

State v. Todd, 101 Wn.App. 945 (2000), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Rangel-Reyes, 119 Wn.App. 494 (2003)

Police discover meth lab, four items containing meth residue or compounds used in production of meth contain defendant's fingerprints, defendant is convicted of manufacturing methamphetamine and possession with intent to deliver based solely upon fingerprints; held: fingerprint evidence alone is sufficient to support a conviction where evidence establishes that print could only have been impressed at the time the crime was committed, State v. Bridge, 91 Wn.App. 98, 100-1 (1998), State v. Lucca, 56 Wn.App. 597, 599 (1990); here, more than one fingerprint on objects only used to manufacture drugs and evidence that the objects had not recently been purchased were sufficient to convict of manufacturing, State v. Jacobs,121 Wn.App. 669, 680-82 (2004), cf.: State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004); because the manufacturing process was incomplete, there was insufficient evidence of intent to deliver, but see: State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130, 138-41 (2002), State v. Keena, 121 Wn.App. 143 (2004), State v. Forrester, 135 Wn.App. 195, 201-04 (2006); II.

State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001)

Respondent is found in apartment, police find gun in back bedroom closet, photographs of respondent taped to wall of closet, some of his clothes in room, savings account deposit books in his name in shoebox by bed, court finds constructive possession; held: evidence is insufficient to conclude respondent exercised dominion and control over the premises, State v. Partin, 88 Wn.2d 899, 906 (1977), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Lyons, 174 Wn.2d 354 (2012), State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27, 31 (1969), State v. Hagen, 55 Wn.App. 494 (1989), State v. Enlow, 143 Wn.App. 463 (2008), State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 746-48 (2012), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), cf.: State v. Lakotiy, 151 Wn.App. 699, 713-15 (2009), but see: State v. Ibarra-Erives, 23 Wn.App.2d 596 (2022); III.

State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 76-78 (2001)

Police observe defendant take wrapped white object from another man and attempt to hand the other man something, defendant runs when he sees police, tosses package, police recover tossed package containing 22 grams of "warm soft cocaine," find $900 on defendant, jury convicts of possession with intent, trial court arrests judgment and convicts of possession, state appeals; held: mere possession of large quantity of drugs plus officer's opinions that defendant intended to deliver is insufficient to find intent to deliver, State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 768 (1995); evidence that the cocaine was "freshly cooked" without evidence that a user could not receive drugs directly from a manufacturer is insufficient; absence of a pipe or other paraphernalia indicative of personal use only shows that defendant did not intend to use the drugs shortly after he received them, State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211 (1994); I.

State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 383-88 (2001)

Firearm is found under felon's pillow, defendant claims weapon belongs to a friend, might have defendant's fingerprints as he had handled it in the past, trial court declines to instruct that possession does not entail only a momentary handling or that fleeting possession is not unlawful; held: while possession is more than passing control and momentary handling, without more, is insufficient to prove possession, evidence of momentary handling, when combined with other evidence such as dominion and control of premises or motive to hide the item from police, is sufficient to prove possession, State v. Ibarra-Erives, 23 Wn.App.2d 596 (2022); even passing control of contraband is not legal, it is merely insufficient to prove possession, see: State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969), State v. Werry, 6 Wn.App. 540 (1972), State v. Bowman, 8 Wn.App. 148 (1972), State v. Staley, 123 Wn.2d 794 (1994), State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013); II.

State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130 (2002)

Police stop defendant in vehicle, find 2 grams of methamphetamine, bottles of cold pills with ground up pills, scale with residue, notebooks with names, phone numbers and credit card numbers, tank with trace amounts of anhydrous ammonia, is convicted of manufacturing a controlled substance and possession with intent to deliver; held: no minimum quantity of drugs is necessary to support a finding of intent to deliver, as long as other factors, such as cash and paraphernalia, are present, State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232, 236 (1994), State v. Slighte, 157 Wn.App. 618, 627-28 (2010), see: State v. Taylor,74 Wn.App. 111, 122-24 (1994), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181, 186 (1998), State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 595-96 (1999), aff'd on other grounds,145 Wn.2d 352 (2002), State v. Campos, 100 Wn.App. 218 (2000), see also: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); ground up pseudoephedrine plus anhydrous ammonia is sufficient to conclude defendant manufactured methamphetamine, State v. Keena, 121 Wn.App. 143 (2004), State v. Forrester, 135 Wn.App. 195, 201-03 (2006), see: State v. Todd, 101 Wn.App. 945 (2000); 2-1, III.

State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004)

Defendant, seen as a passenger in a stolen truck containing components of a meth lab including two chemical jars with defendant's fingerprints, is convicted of possession with intent to manufacture; held: "totality of the situation" establishes only proximity and mere handling of chemicals, insufficient to establish constructive possession, State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969), State v. Knapstad, 41 Wn.App. 781 (1985), aff'd, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986), State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999), State v. Hagen, 55 Wn.App. 494 (1989), State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383 (1990), see: State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012), but see: State v. Bradford, 60 Wn.App. 857 (1991), State v. Enlow, 143 Wn.App. 463 (2008), State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Lakotiy, 151 Wn.App. 699, 713-15 (2009); III.

State v. Martinez, 123 Wn.App. 841 (2004)

Defendant grabs a juvenile's arm, momentarily puts cocaine in the palm of her hand without letting go, she immediately refuses the cocaine, shoving it back to defendant, defendant is convicted of delivery to a minor; held: delivery requires a transfer from one person to another, RCW 69.50.101(f), which necessarily involves relinquishing control, State v. Morris, 77 Wn.App. 948, 951 (1995); here, evidence was insufficient to establish a completed delivery; II.

State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005)

Possession of large numbers of pseudoephedrine pills removed from blister packs is sufficient to convict of possession of pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture methamphetamine, State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747, 759 (2002), State v. Missieur, 140 Wn.App. 181 (2007), cf.: State v. Whalen, 131 Wn.App. 58 (2005), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008); II.

State v. Whalen, 131 Wn.App. 58 (2005)

Defendant steals several boxes of pseudoephedrine, admits he was going to manufacture meth; held: mere possession of pseudoephedrine is insufficient to establish corpus delicti of possession with intent to manufacture, RCW 69.50.440, see: State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1990), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), but see: RCW 69.50.440, State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005), cf.: State v. Missieur, 140 Wn.App. 181 (2007), State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); 2-1, II.

State v. G.M.V., 135 Wn.App. 366, 374-75 (2006)

Respondent moved from bedroom to basement, police search bedroom and find contraband; held: when a minor lives with her parents, court cannot presume dominion and control from her mere residence in the home, State v. Douglas S., 42 Wn.App. 138, 142 (1985), fact that bedroom was respondent's even a day before the search is insufficient; III.

State v. Chavez, 138 Wn.App. 29 (2007)

Officer hears a snorting noise coming from a barroom bathroom stall, observes three men in stall, one man leaves, another man, who is seen holding a dollar bill with white powder, attempts to hand bill to defendant who refuses it, police arrest defendant, find drugs in wallet; held: police did not see defendant holding drugs, using them or in dominion and control; an aspect of dominion and control is that defendant may immediately reduce object to actual possession, which here defendant refused to do, thus police lacked probable cause, search of wallet was unlawful; III.

State v. Rowell, 138 Wn.App. 780 (2007)

Burden to prove unwitting possession is on defense, distinguishing State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713, 718 (2005), wherein burden of proving unwitting possession of an unlawful firearm is on state because knowledge is an element of possession of a firearm, State v. Michael, 160 Wn.App. 522 (2011); III.

State v. Messieur, 140 Wn.App. 181 (2007)

Evidence that defendant shoplifted 30 boxes of pseudoephedrine, more found in his car with 64 lithium batteries is sufficient to convict for possession of pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture methamphetamine, State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747, 759 (2002), State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008); I.

State v. Winterstein, 140 Wn.App. 676, 685-87 (2007), reversed, on other grounds, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009)

Where a landlord is present, aware of drug manufacturing and fails to take affirmative steps to stop it, State v. Roberts, 80 Wn.App. 342 (1996), trial court need not give special accomplice instructions, State v. Roberts, supra., at 355-57, standard accomplice instruction is adequate; II.

State v. Schumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330 (2007)

Dominion and control over premises (here, a car) does not create an inference of dominion and control over drugs, State v. Olivarez, 63 Wn.App. 484 (1991), overruling State v. Ponce, 79 Wn.App. 651 (1995), but see: State v. Tadeo-Mares, 86 Wn.App. 813 (1997); III.

State v. Enlow, 143 Wn.App. 463 (2008)

Defendant David Enlow is found hiding in the bed of a truck that contains drugs, truck is not registered to defendant, resident of house asks police what he should do with "David's truck," defendant's identification card is found in bed of truck, defendant's fingerprints are on property in truck but not on items containing drugs; held: while exclusive control of a vehicle is not necessary to establish constructive possession, mere proximity alone is insufficient to infer constructive possession, State v. Turner, 103 Wn.App. 515, 521-24 (2000), State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 543, 549 (2004), State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27, 28-31 (1969), State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383, 388-89 (1990), see: State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012), cf.: State v. Lakotiy, 151 Wn.App. 699, 713-15 (2009), State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 646-49 (2011), State v. Listoe, 15 Wn.App.2d 308 (2020), thus reversed; 2-1, III.

State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008)

Trooper stops vehicle for speeding, smells marijuana, removes all occupants including defendant from rear seat, finds hookah with marijuana residue under driver's seat in front of where defendant was sitting; held: mere proximity to defendant is insufficient to convict of possession of drugs, State v. Gutierrez, 50 Wn.App. 583 (1988), State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383 (1990), State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001), State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 383-88 (2001), State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 746-48 (2012), see: State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012), but see: State v. Mathews, 4 Wn.App. 653 (1971), cf.: State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 646-49 (2011), State v. Ibarra-Erives, 23 Wn.App.2d 596 (2022), knowledge of the presence of marijuana is insufficient to prove dominion and control, State v. Davis, 16 Wn.App. 657, 659 (1977); 2-1, I.

State v. Valencia, 148 Wn.App. 302 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010)

Defendants seen leaving a house that contained 68 pounds of marijuana, $126,000 cash, other items used in a "major marijuana distribution operation," defendants seen carrying garbage bags "that appeared to contain something light," others seen leaving house with similar bags including driver "using counter-surveillance techniques, police smell odor of marijuana in defendants' cars, all sufficient to prove possession with intent to deliver; large amounts of marijuana plus cash plus weapons, communication devices, scales, packaging materials are sufficient, State v. Campos, 100 Wn.App. 218, 224 (2000), cf.: State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993), State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); even though police did not discover any marijuana on defendants' persons or in their cars, circumstantial evidence supports the charge; II.

State v. Bowen, 157 Wn.App. 821, 827-28 (2010)

"An individual's sole occupancy and possession of a vehicle's keys sufficiently supports a finding that the defendant had dominion and control over the vehicle's contents," at 828 ¶ 15, State v. Listoe, 15 Wn.App.2d 308 (2020), State v. Potts, 1 Wn.App. 614, 617 (1969); II.

State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374, 389-92 (2010)

Marijuana in house plus plastic bags on regrigerator, some with cut tops, some with marijana residue, dollar amounts written on box of plastic bag along with weights plus scale tainted with residue is sufficient to prove intent to deliver; II.

State v. Michael, 160 Wn.App. 522 (2011)

It is not ineffective assistance of counsel for defense attorney not to offer an unwitting possession instruction in unlawful possession of a firearm case because knowledge is an element state must prove while burden on unwitting possession is on defense, State v. Rowell, 138 Wn.App. 780 (2007), State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713, 718 (2005); III.

State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 646-49 (2011)

Deputy arrests defendant for suspended license, while patting her down hears something drop to ground, finds vial with drugs, at trial defense requests mere proximity instruction; held: where possession of drug case does not rest solely on proximity, court need not give a separate proximity instruction, State v. Castle, 86 Wn.App. 48 (1997), State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898, 903 (2000); II.

State v. Higgs, 177 Wn.App. 414, 435-38 (2013)

There is no minimum quantity requirement to be convicted of possession of a controlled substance, State v. Larkins, 79 Wn.2d. 392, 394 (1971), State v. Rowell, 138 Wn.App. 780, 786 (2007), State v. Malone, 72 Wn.App. 429, 439 (1994), State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 748, 751 (1991); II.

State v. Listoe, 15 Wn.App.2d 308 (2020)

Defendant-driver is stopped for expired registration, police claim he made furtive movements and didn't stop right away, defendant says he isn't the owner, passenger is allowed to leave, pursuant to a bench warrant defendant is arrested, searched, drugs found, drug dog alerts to drugs in the car, search discloses more drugs in back seat, no other evidence ties defendant to the vehicle, defendant is convicted of possession of drugs in the car; held: considering evidence in light most favorable to the state, the fact that defendant was driving, that he had drugs on his person, furtive movements could lead a rational trier of fact to conclude defendant had constructive possession, State v. Bowen, 157 Wn.App. 821, 828 (2010), State v. Turner, 103 Wn.App. 515, 523-24 (2000), cf.: State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012), State v. Hagen, 55 Wn.App. 494 (1989); II.

State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021)

Washington's strict liability drug possession statute, RCW 69.50.4013, violates due process clauses and is void, see also: State v. A.L.R.H., 20 Wn.App.2d 384 (2021); 5-4.

State v. Sprague, 16 Wn.App.2d 213 (2021)

Police serve search warrant, seize 9-10 grams of meth, a homemade pipe, a metal container with methamphetamine residue, a scale, and a bundle of plastic grocery bags, defendant confesses to dealing, is convicted of possession with intent to deliver; held: quantity alone is insufficient to establish intent to deliver, State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1990), possession of other items is consistent with both innocence and guilt as to intent to deliver, thus evidence is insufficient to establish corpus of the charged crime, State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311 (2006), State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 660 (1996), State v. Cardenas-Flores, 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017), thus statements were improperly admitted, however the evidence absent the confession established a prima facie case of possession with intent to deliver, thus there was sufficient evidence to convict, State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 290-91 (2010), State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989), State v. Simpson, 22 Wn.App. 572, 575 (1979); unlike the corpus delicti analysis, the sufficiency of the evidence analysis does not involve evaluation of hypotheses of innocence; II.

State v. A.L.R.H., 20 Wn.App.2d 384 (2021)

Possession of marijuana by a juvenile, former RCW 69.50.4014, violates due process, State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021); II.

State v. Ibarra-Erives, 23 Wn.App.2d 596 (2022)

Police serve search warrant, find drugs in backpack in a closet, defendant says he lives in the room, has drug paraphernalia and $591 cash in pockets that detective says is "consistent with drug sales," is convicted of possession with intent to deliver; held: ties to the apartment exceeded that of an overnight guest, admission he lived in the unit and slept in the bedroom, discovery of his clothes and medications in bedroom is sufficient to prove constructive possession, State v. Mathews, 4 Wn.App. 653, 658 (1971), distinguishing State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 913 (2008), State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27, 29 (1969), but see: State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001); II.

WELFARE FRAUD

State v. Harvey, 25 Wn.App. 392 (1980)

Welfare fraud of less than $250 is theft in the third degree; I.

State v. Warren, 25 Wn.App. 886 (1980)

Plaintiff need not prove defendant was ineligible for public assistance under a different category; I.

Bazan v. DSHS, 26 Wn.App. 16 (1980)

Civil case akin to State v. Warren, 25 Wn.App. 886 (1980); approves 25% penalty; I.

State v. Ermert, 94 Wn.2d 839 (1980)

Statute requires that welfare recipients report "income or resources" only; public assistance payments are not "income or resources," and do not have to be reported; here, defendant saved her public assistance moneys and bought a car; court held no crime was committed; fact that WACs purport to require additional reporting cannot result in criminal liability as there is an improper legislative delegation; 8-0.

State v. Matthews, 28 Wn.App. 198 (1981)

State need not establish which of two defendants was principal and which was accomplice; II.

State v. Wallace, 97 Wn.2d 846 (1982)

Defendant failed to report as income funds provided to her by her imprisoned husband under instructions from him directing her to purchase tools for him, theft 1° conviction reversed for lack of proof that defendant had actual knowledge that the funds were "available for her use;" 9-0.

State v. Holmes, 98 Wn.2d 590 (1983)

Welfare fraud statute, RCW 74.08.331, does not unconstitutionally delegate legislative authority to DSHS and is not vague; 9-0.

State v. Carrier, 36 Wn.App. 755 (1984)

Defendant is charged with welfare fraud over three-year period, some transactions occurred outside statute of limitations; held: series of transactions, some of which occur outside statute may be charged when acts comprise one continuous crime, State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013); II.

State v. Brisebois, 39 Wn.App. 156 (1984)

To establish a prima facie case of welfare fraud, RCW 74.08.331, state must establish ineligibility only as to the program under which benefits were received; if defense produces some evidence of eligibility under another program, the state must then prove ineligibility under that program beyond a reasonable doubt as an element of the offense; statute of limitations does not begin to run until crime is completed; I.

In re Taylor, 105 Wn.2d 67 (1985), superseded, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of St. Pierre, 118 Wn.2d 321 (1992)

RCW 50.36.010, knowingly giving false information to obtain unemployment compensation, does not have the same elements as RCW 9A.56.030, theft, thus there is no equal protection violation; because RCW 50.36.010 expressly provides that the penalty under that section is not exclusive, then the general/special rule of State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982) is inapplicable, and defendant who commits unemployment compensation fraud may be charged under the general theft statute; 9-0.

State v. Delcambre, 116 Wn.2d 444 (1991)

Intent to deprive is not an element of welfare fraud, RCW 74.08.331; affirms State v. Delcambre, 55 Wn.App. 681 (1989); 9-0.

State v. LaRue, 74 Wn.App. 757 (1994)

Evidence is insufficient to convict of welfare fraud, RCW 74.08.331, where there is no evidence that defendant knew of the statutory obligation to notify DSHS of income, RCW 74.04.300, as an element of the crime is a willful failure to notify DSHS of change of circumstance; I.

State v. Campbell, 125 Wn.2d 797 (1995)

Dollar amount unlawfully obtained is an element of welfare fraud that must be charged in information, State v. Sass, 94 Wn.2d 721 (1980), State v. Bryce, 41 Wn.App. 802 (1985), reversing, in part, State v. Campbell, 69 Wn.App. 302 (1993), see: State v. Hull, 83 Wn.App. 786 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Williams, 132 Wn.2d 328 (1997)

At DSHS administrative hearing, defendant is found to have been overpaid public assistance, ordered to repay, state charges defendant with welfare fraud, defense seeks dismissal; held: purposes underlying administrative hearings and criminal trials are wholly distinct, state would suffer an injustice if collateral estoppel doctrine were to apply, reversing State v. Williams, 78 Wn.App. 593 (1995), see: State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990), State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268 (1980), State v. Vasquez, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002); 7-2.

WIRETAP/RECORDINGS

State v. Cunningham, 93 Wn.2d 823 (1980), op. modified, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981)

Transcripts of recordings could not be used unless authenticated by stipulation or proof of accuracy; RCW 9.73 should be complied with, but may be harmless error, see: State v. Mazzante, 86 Wn.App. 425 (1997), Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446 (2006), State v. Courtney, 137 Wn.App. 376 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Williams, 94 Wn.2d 531 (1980)

State privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(1), prohibits any person from intercepting or recording private conversations, even federal agents acting lawfully under federal law, and fruits must be suppressed; a participant in an unlawfully recorded conversation who was a party to the illegal recording cannot testify to the contents of the conversation; a defendant has standing to object to illegally recorded conversations even if defendant was not a participant in the conversation; recordings of threats of extortion, blackmail or bodily harm are admissible as a statutory exception, per RCW 9.73.030(2)(b), cf.: State v. Gearhard, 13 Wn.App.2d 554 (2020); 6-3.

State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981)

Although tape recorded statement does not specifically start with statement that recording is being made, extrinsic evidence may satisfy RCW 9.73.090(1)(b)(i) if it shows suspect was aware of recording, distinguishing State v. Cunningham, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981), see: State v. Mazzante, 86 Wn.App. 425 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Platz, 33 Wn.App. 345 (1982)

To obtain judicial authorization to secretly tape record a statement per RCW 9.73.090, state must establish probable cause to believe that nonconsenting party committed a felony and that other investigative procedures have been tried and failed or reasonably appear to be unlikely to succeed; state's claim that, absent a recording, the case would be "reduced to a one-on-one swearing contest" meets that test, State v. Kichinko, 26 Wn.App. 304, 311 (1980); United States v. Martin, 599 F.2d 880, 866-87 (9th Cir. 1979); Kilgore v. Mitchell, 623 F.2d 631, 635 (9th Cir. 1980); I.

State v. Cramer, 35 Wn.App. 462 (1983)

Where recording is made in violation of RCW 9.73.030, contents, substance and fact that recording was made are all inadmissible; harmless here; I.

State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501 (1983)

Recordings of threats or other unlawful requests or demands of extortion, blackmail or bodily harm are admissible as a statutory exception to RCW 9.73.030(2)(b), and include recordings of conversations involving the implementation of threats previously made, see also: State v. Valdiglesias LaValle, 23 Wn.App.2d 934 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984)

Where suspect is not in custody and police tape record a statement, tape must contain statement that conversation is being recorded, RCW 9.73.030(3), and information obtained in violation of RCW 9.73.030(3) is not admissible, RCW 9.73.050; harmless here, as statement was not incriminating, distinguishing State v. Lavaris, 99 Wn.2d 851 (1983); tape recorded statement must contain an announcement that conversation is being recorded, need not contain consent from suspect; failure to state starting time of interview on tape herein substantially complies with RCW 9.73.090, State v. Hutchinson, 85 Wn.App. 720, 741-2 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 863 (1998), State v. Demery, 100 Wn.App. 416, 419-20 (2000), rev'd, on other grounds, 144 Wn.2d 753 (2001), but see: State v. Mazzante, 86 Wn.App. 425 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 40 Wn.App. 371 (1985)

Witnesses in custody make tape recorded statements to police, recording does not contain statement that recording is being made although tape recorders were visible and witnesses agreed to sign transcripts; held: RCW 9.73.030(3) permits consent to recording to be found in any reasonably effective manner; compliance with RCW 9.73 would not prevent witness from testifying to independent recollection of facts obtained before recording was made; III.

State v. O'Neill, 103 Wn.2d 853 (1985)

Police obtain court order to record conversations with one-party consent, defense argues only prosecutor or attorney general are solely authorized to obtain such an order, RCW 9.73.040(1); held: only prosecutor or attorney general may obtain a "no consent" electronic eavesdropping order; police may obtain a "one-party consent" order, RCW 9.73.090(2); 7-0; local police may use information obtained by federal officer from electronic eavesdropping conducted by them in accordance with federal law, even if the information would be inadmissible in state courts, to establish probable cause to obtain a state court order authorizing electronic eavesdropping, distinguishing State v. Williams, 94 Wn.2d 531, (1980); accord: State v. Pacheco, 70 Wn.App. 27 (1993); 5-2.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.2d 179 (1985)

Lawyer calls chief of police to discuss case; unbeknownst to lawyer, chief records telephone call, chief is charged with violating RCW 9.73.080; held: all incoming calls to police may be lawfully recorded, RCW 9.73.090(1)(a); 9-0.

State v. Ross, 42 Wn.App. 806 (1986)

Assault victim disappears during trial before she testifies, no record is made as to why she did not appear and what efforts were made to locate her, court admits victim's 911 call as an excited utterance, ER 803(a)(2); held: 911 tapes meet business record requirements, RCW 5.45.020, State v. Bradley, 17 Wn.App. 916 (1977); however, where the hearsay content in a business record goes to the heart of an issue at trial, the hearsay should be rejected unless it meets the test of another exception, State v. White, 72 Wn.2d 524, 530 (1967); here, confrontation clause violated because unavailability not established, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985), cf.: State v. Davis, 116 Wn.App. 81, 87-88 (2003), aff'd, 154 Wn.2d 291 (2005), see: Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006); I.

State v. Irwin, 43 Wn.App. 553 (1986)

Requirement of RCW 9.73.130(3)(f) that warrant for surreptitious tape recording contain particular statement showing that normal investigative procedures have failed or reasonably appear to be unlikely to succeed met here where property enclosed by fence, guard dogs protected area, and previous attempts to gain access to neighboring property failed; accord: State v. Cisneros, 63 Wn.App. 724 (1992); suppression is not a remedy for failure to give notice to persons whose conversations were recorded within 30 days, RCW 9.73.140; suppression is not a remedy for failure of judge authorizing warrant to give notice to Administrator for the Courts, RCW 9.73.120; I.

State v. Gelvin, 43 Wn.App. 691 (1986)

Following arrest, police videotape DUI suspect, fail to state ending time of tape as required by RCW 9.73.090(1)(b)(ii); held: tape is admissible as police substantially complied with statute, and no claim of police misconduct or editing was made, State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 685 (1984), State v. Hutchinson, 85 Wn.App. 726, 741-2 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 863 (1998), State v. Demery, 100 Wn.App. 416, 419-20 (2000), rev'd, on other grounds, 144 Wn.2d 753 (2001), but see: State v. Mazzante, 86 Wn.App. 425 (1997); dicta that videotape is a recording of conduct and not a private conversation; II.

State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986)

Long distance telephone records may only be obtained by police through a search warrant or subpoena; a pen register may only be placed on a telephone line pursuant to a search warrant or court order obtained in accordance with RCW 9.73; cf.: State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993) (telephone line tap), State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993) (intercepted telepager); 9-0.

State v. Slemmer, 48 Wn.App. 48 (1987)

A secret tape recording of a meeting where minutes were taken and defendant knew substance of the meeting could be revealed to anyone should not be suppressed as defendant did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy, RCW 9.73.030; I.

State v. Strandy, 49 Wn.App. 537 (1987)

Videotape of crime scene may go into jury room with VCR, as it is not susceptible of being overemphasized, distinguishing State v. Ross, 42 Wn.App. 806, 812 (1986); II.

State v. Hawkins, 53 Wn.App. 598 (1989)

An edited surveillance recording is admissible where at trial state gives both original and edited version to defense and trial judge informs defense that if he believes any relevant information was omitted he can propose his own and defense counsel takes no action, distinguishing State v. Williams, 49 Wn.2d 354, 360 (1956); II.

State v. Knight, 54 Wn.App. 143 (1989)

Judicial authorization to record a private conversation, RCW 9.73.130(3), will be affirmed if the facts set forth in the application were minimally adequate to support the authorization; police need not exhaust all alternatives to recording, but must seriously consider other techniques, and the authorizing court must be informed of the reasons the alternatives have been or likely will be inadequate, State v. Cisneros, 63 Wn.App. 724 (1992), State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259, 265-7 (1993), State v. Johnson, 125 Wn.App. 443, 455-56 (2005); III.

State v. Fjermestad, 114 Wn.2d 828 (1990)

Police, with body wire, transmit, but do not record, drug transaction without judicial authorization or consent of dealer; held: when an officer knowingly transmits a private conversation without court authorization or consent of all parties, any evidence obtained, including simultaneous visual observation and assertive gestures, is inadmissible in criminal trial, RCW 9.73.050, State v. Salinas, 121 Wn.2d 689 (1993), State v. Porter, 98 Wn.App. 631, 637-38 (1999), see: State v. Jimenez, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996), State v. Costello, 84 Wn.App. 150 (1996), State v. Gearhard, 13 Wn.App.2d 554 (2020), cf.: Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446, 471-73 (2006), State v. Bilgi, 19 Wn.App. 845 (2021); 6-3.

State v. Raymer, 61 Wn.App. 516 (1991)

Soundless video recording of conduct is not prohibited by RCW 9.73; see: Haymond v. Department of Licensing, 73 Wn.App. 758 (1994); III.

State v. Cisneros, 63 Wn.App. 724 (1992)

Application to record telephone conversation is sufficient where it establishes that drug dealer refused to talk to unknown persons and that recording would help state rebut entrapment and enhance credibility of informant, RCW 9.73.090(2), State v. Irwin, 43 Wn.App. 553 (1986), State v. Knight, 54 Wn.App. 143 (1989), State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259, 265-7 (1993), State v. Johnson, 125 Wn.App. 443, 455-56 (2005); federal cases are inapplicable, as 18 United StatesC. 9' 2518(1)(c) and (3)(c) apply to no-party consent; I.

State v. Salinas, 119 Wn.2d 192 (1992)

RCW 9.73.230, authorizing one-party consent where approved by police supervisor on probable cause, does not violate CONST. Art. 1, § 7; accord: State v. Kadoranian, 65 Wn.App. 193 (1992), State v. Pulido, 68 Wn.App. 59 (1992), State v. Knight, 79 Wn.App. 670, 678-9 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Clapp, 67 Wn.App. 263 (1992)

Where a tape recording is admitted, trial court may allow jury to have a typewritten transcript to illustrate evidence contained on the tape where state lays a foundation showing its accuracy, State v. Frazier, 99 Wn.2d 180 (1983); where witnesses testify they listened to tape and created transcript, and where party to the taped conversation testifies that transcript is accurate, and where judge instructs jury that the transcript is not the evidence and should not be considered as such, then foundation is adequate; II.

State v. Flora, 68 Wn.App. 802 (1992)

Suspect who tape records his arrest on a public thoroughfare in the presence of a third party within sight and hearing of passersby cannot be convicted of recording a private conversation, RCW 9.73.030, as the conversation was not secret or intended only for the persons involved in the conversation, Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446, 457-60 (2006), see also: Haymond v. Department of Licensing, 73 Wn.App. 758 (1994); I.

State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993)

Telephone line trap which traces computer hacking activity to suspect's home is not a private communication, RCW 9.73, as it does no more than discover suspect's telephone number, and does not involve act of imparting or transmitting facts or information communicated, distinguishing State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986); see: State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993); 7-0.

State v. Salinas, 121 Wn.2d 689 (1993)

Police officer, wearing hidden recording device without authorization from judge or commanding officer, observes drugs, obtains warrant; held: all information obtained by police officer wearing hidden recording device, including visual observations, is not admissible where police did not obtain written authorization from a commander or judicial order, RCW 9.73.210, .230, State v. Fjermestad, 114 Wn.2d 828, 835-6 (1990), but see: State v. Jiminez, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996), State v. Costello, 84 Wn.App. 150 (1996), Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446, 471-73 (2006); affirms State v. Salinas, 67 Wn.App. 323 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Moore, 70 Wn.App. 667 (1993)

Body wire evidence is admissible where there is consent of one party, probable cause that conversation involves delivery or possession with intent to deliver drugs, written authorization by a supervisor, RCW 9.73.230; failure to obtain judicial authorization, and failure to comply with post-recording judicial review requirements, RCW 9.73.230(6), (7), do not make recordings inadmissible, State v. Salinas, 121 Wn.2d 689 (1993); I.

State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993)

Police seize a telepager from third party, defendant calls in, police observe incoming phone number displayed on the pager, return call and set up drug deal; held: by transmitting his number to telepager, defendant did not reasonably expect confidentiality, police did not intercept a private communication, thus no violation of RCW 9.73, but see: State v. Hinton, 169 Wn.App. 28 (2012), State v. Roden, 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014), see: State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986), State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993), State v. Bilgi, 19 Wn.App. 845 (2021); II.

State v. Gonzalez, 71 Wn.App. 715 (1993)

Where police exceed the authorized 24-hours of a one-party consent drug transaction recording, and the authorization is not extended by the authorizing officer, RCW 9.73.230, then the recordings and eyewitness testimony during the unauthorized intercept must be suppressed, see: State v. Salinas, 121 Wn.2d 689, 696-7 (1993); overruled, in part, State v. Jimenez, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996); III.

State v. Corliss, 123 Wn.2d 656 (1994)

Informer tilting telephone receiver so that officer can hear conversation with drug dealer does not violate privacy act, RCW 9.73, or constitutions, State v. Gonzales, 78 Wn.App. 976 (1995), cf.: State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021); affirms State v. Corliss, 67 Wn.App. 708 (1992); 7-2.

Haymond v. Department of Licensing, 73 Wn.App. 758 (1994)

Where video camera's audio recording mechanism malfunctions, making audio portion garbled and inaudible from start to finish, then the privacy act, RCW 9.73, is inapplicable, State v. Raymer, 61 Wn.App. 516 (1991), and testimony regarding the substance of any conversation taped is admissible, State v. Fjermestad, 114 Wn.2d 828 (1990); I.

State v. Goucher, 124 Wn.2d 778 (1994)

During search of residence pursuant to warrant, phone rings, police answer, caller asks to buy drugs, police agree, defendant arrives, is sold drugs by police and arrested; held: no reasonable privacy interest under state or United States constitutions for a person to disclose information to an acknowledged stranger on the telephone, State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021); defendant lacks standing to challenge police answering telephone as beyond scope of warrant; 9-0.

State v. Jimenez, 76 Wn.App. 647 (1995), rev'd on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996)

Authorization to record a private conversation must specifically state the names of the officers authorized to intercept, transmit and record the conversation, report which names some officers and "any other member" is invalid, RCW 9.73.230(2)(c), State v. Gonzalez, 71 Wn.App. 715, 718-9 (1993); written applications for authorizations to record are not required; signed one-party consent is not required; information from an illegally recorded transaction cannot be used to establish probable cause for a warrant; reversed, as to remedy, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996); I.

State v. Gonzalez, 77 Wn.App. 479, 483 (1995)

An application for authorization to record a conversation must establish basis of knowledge and reliability when based upon an informant's information, State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259, 263 (1993); III.

State v. Gonzales, 78 Wn.App. 976 (1995)

Police, serving search warrant, answer ringing telephone, defense moves to suppress conversation; held: answering phone is neither an intercept nor use of a device, thus RCW 9.73 is not implicated, State v. Bonilla, 23 Wn.App. 869, 871-3 (1979), State v. Corliss, 123 Wn.2d 656 (1994); answering phone falls within scope of warrant, no legitimate expectation of privacy in incoming calls; I.

State v. Knight, 79 Wn.App. 670 (1995)

Police supervisor cannot authorize one-party consent recording outside of his jurisdiction, RCW 9.73.230, but see: State v. Barron, 139 Wn.App. 266 (2007); county sheriff captain may authorize recording in incorporated municipalities within his county; submitting recording to judge for probable cause determination beyond 15 days after the recording, RCW 9.73.230(7)(a), is not grounds for suppression, as noncompliance with post-invasion statutory requirements should warrant reversal only if state fails to show substantial compliance, or defendant establishes prejudice; II.

State v. Sengxay, 80 Wn.App. 11, 15 (1995)

Failure to object to unlawfully taped confession, RCW 9.73.030, waives issue; III.

State v. Faford, 128 Wn.2d 476 (1996)

Neighbor uses scanner to listen to defendants' cordless telephone convesations, relays information to police about a marijuana farm, police go to defendants' home, advise one defendant about their knowledge and ask to seize marijuana, defendant ultimately agrees; held: scanner interceptions of cordless telephone conversations violate privacy act, RCW 9.73, State v. Christensen, 153 Wn.2d 186 (2004), State v. Roden, 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014); consent to search was obtained solely through the knowing exploitation of the illegal interception by the private citizen, thus evidence, including simultaneous physical observations, State v. Salinas, 121 Wn.2d 689, 693 (1993), suppressed, State v. Kipp, 179 Wn.2d 718 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Jimenez, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996)

Where police attempt to comply with the authorization requirements of RCW 9.73.230, and act in good faith on an invalid authorization, the intercepted or recorded communication itself is inadmissible, however the unaided evidence provision of RCW 9.73.230(8) precludes suppression of any other evidence, including officer's observations,State v. Costello, 84 Wn.App. 150 (1996), State v. Smith, 85 Wn.App. 381 (1997), overruling, in part, State v. Gonzalez, 71 Wn.App. 715 (1993), reversing, in part, State v. Jimenez, 76 Wn.App. 647 (1995), cf.: State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 173-84 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996)

Undercover informant with court authorization, RCW 9.73.090, records street drug transactions; held: brief transactions involving strangers on a public street which concern the terms of routine drug transactions, some of which took place in the presence of third persons, and some of which were concluded in vehicles at least partially visible to passersby are not private conversations within the meaning of RCW 9.73, Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446 (2006), State v. Babcock, 168 Wn.App. 598 (2012), see: Kadoranian v. Bellingham Police Dep't, 119 Wn.2d 178 189 (1992), State v. Clark, 76 Wn.App. 150 (1994), State v. Hardy, 76 Wn.App. 188 (1994), State v. Barron, 139 Wn.App. 266 (2007), State v. Clayton, 11 Wn.App.2d 172 (2019), State v. J.K.T., 11 Wn.App.2d 544 (2019); affirms State v. D.J.W., 76 Wn.App. 135 (1994); 5-4.

State v. Manning, 81 Wn.App. 714 (1996)

Affidavit asserting that defendant had been the target of previous drug investigations that ended inconclusively which were terminated because defendant was known to be dangerous meets requirement that affidavit establish inadequacy of normal investigative procedures for wire intercept, RCW 9.73.130(3)(f), State v. Irwin, 43 Wn.App. 553, 557 (1986), State v. Cisneros, 63 Wn.App. 724, 729 (1992), State v. Johnson, 125 Wn.App. 443, 455-56 (2005); boilerplate recitals, desirability of avoiding swearing contests in court, are insufficient, at 721, State v.Gonzalez, 17 Wn.App.2d 64 (2021), cf.: State v.Constance, 154 Wn.App. 861 (2010); I.

State v. Baird, 83 Wn.App. 477, 484-4 (1996)

Trial court suppresses tape recorded by defendant in violation of privacy act, RCW 9.73; held: because the tape was collateral, the interests served by the privacy act justify the limitation of defendant's right to present his defense; I.

State v. Costello, 84 Wn.App. 150 (1996)

Application for police authorization to record that does not reveal that a confidential informant would be present is insufficient, State v. Ridgley, 17 Wn.App.2d 846 (2021), see: State v. Jiminez, 76 Wn.App. 647 (1995), rev'd on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996); authorization's conclusive language that drug dealers carry guns is not sufficient; because police in good faith sought to comply with RCW 9.73, officer's testimony is admissible, although recording itself is not, State v. Jiminez, 128 Wn.2d at 726, cf.: State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 173-84 (2010); III.

State v. Castellanos, 132 Wn.2d 94 (1997)

Body wire tapes and a tape player may go to the jury room during deliberations where trial court determines the exhibits bear directly on the charge and are not unduly prejudicial, State v. Frazier, 99 Wn.2d 180, 189 (1983), State v. Clapp, 67 Wn.App. 263, 272 (1992), State v. Forrester, 21 Wn.App. 855 (1978), State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 293-98 (1999), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 846-48 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Magnano, 181 Wn.App. 689 (2014), overruling, in part, State v. Ross, 42 Wn.App. 806, 812 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Forest, 85 Wn.App. 62 (1997)

Police supervisor authorizes recording of a drug transaction, police record telephone conversation with defendant and, later, the delivery, defense claims RCW 9.73.230 permits only one recording per authorization; held: legislature did not intend to limit police agency authorizations to one conversation per authorization; I.

State v. Smith, 85 Wn.App. 381 (1997)

Police know expected address of a communication to be recorded but, in request for authorization for body wire, state that location is "King County;" held: while tape recording itself is suppressed for failure to comply with expected location requirement, RCW 9.73.230(2)(e), police made a "genuine effort to comply," the equivalent of good faith, thus other evidence regarding the transaction is admissible, RCW 9.73.230(2), trial court's admission of the tape itself was thus harmless error, State v. Jimenez, 128 Wn.2d 720 (1996), State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 173-84 (2010); modifies State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 535, remanded, 129 Wn.2d 1022 (1996) I.

State v. Mazzante, 86 Wn.App. 425 (1997)

Police tape record confession, defendant acknowledges he had previously been advised of Miranda warnings, but warnings are not given on tape, trial court finds substantial compliance, defense obtains interlocutory review; held: failure to advise of rights on the tape requires suppression, as strict compliance is required, RCW 9.73.090(1)(b)(iii), State v. Cunningham, 93 Wn.2d 823, 830-1 (1980), distinguishing State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 685 (1984), State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616, 627 (1981), State v. Gelvin, 43 Wn.App. 691, 695-6 (1986), see also: State v. Demery, 100 Wn.App. 416, 419-20 (2000), *rev'd, on other grounds,*144 Wn.2d 753 (2001), Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446 (2006), but see: State v. Courtney, 137 Wn.App. 376 (2007)(harmless error analysis); II.

State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 583-91 (1997)

California police record defendant's confession without defendant's knowledge; held: RCW 9.73 does not apply to evidence independently and lawfully obtained by another jurisdiction's police, State v. Mayes, 20 Wn.App. 184 (1978), In re Teddington, 116 Wn.2d 761, 772-3 (1991), State v. Gwinner, 59 Wn.App. 119 (1980), State v. Fowler, 157 Wn.2d 387 (2006), cf.: State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 984 (1994), see also: Pers. Restraint of Brown, 143 Wn.2d 431 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Porter, 98 Wn.App. 631 (1999)

Police, suspecting drug use, obtain intercept warrant without indicating that police tried, or even considered, other investigative techniques; held: intercept application affidavit must explain why normal investigative procedures are impractical or inadequate, RCW 9.73.130(3)(f); here, usual investigative technique is to obtain a search warrant, no indication in affidavit why this was not tried; mere desire to avoid a swearing contest in court is insufficient, State v. Manning, 81 Wn.App. 714, 720 (1996), cf.: State v. Constance, 154 Wn.App. 861 (2010); because intercept was unlawful, defendant's arrest was unlawful and observation of defendant trying to destroy drugs while in custody is suppressed, State v. Fjermestad, 114 Wn.2d 828, 835-36 (1990); III.

State v. Demery, 100 Wn.App. 416 (2000), rev'd, on other grounds, 144 Wn.2d 753 (2001)

Taped confession states incorrect start time, officer testifies he misread watch; held: substantial compliance with RCW 9.73.090(1)(b)(ii) precludes suppression, State v. Rupe,101 Wn.2d 664, 685 (1984), State v. Gelvin, 43 Wn.App. 691, 695-96 (1986), distinguishing State v. Mazzante, 86 Wn.App. 425, 429-30 (1997); failure to redact interrogating officer's statements on tape that suspect is lying is constitutional error as it amounts to officer's opinion as to guilt; II.

State v. Matthews, 101 Wn.App. 894 (2000)

Tacoma police authorize recording telephone conversation from a drug dealer suspected of dealing from Tacoma, dealer returns call from Sumner, moves to suppress, RCW 9.73.230(3); held: where a recording is made within a police agency's jurisdiction, an interception of a call involving drug activity from outside the jurisdiction is valid, Kadoranian v. Bellingham Police Dep't, 119 Wn.2d 178, 183-86 (1992); II.

State v. Koontz, 145 Wn.2d 650 (2002)

During deliberations, jury reports that it is deadlocked, upon further inquiry from trial court, foreperson advises that jurors who are doubtful of guilt lack enough information, requests that videotaped testimony be replayed; over objection, trial court allows jury to view three witnesses' testimony, instructs that jury should not place undue emphasis on the testimony of those three witnesses; held: video record which moves between different trial participants provides a different view of the trial and increases the likelihood it will be given undue emphasis; determination to play back should balance need to provide relevant portions of testimony to answer a specific jury inquiry against danger of allowing witness to testify a second time; "it is seldom proper to replay the entire testimony of a witness," at 657, but see: State v. Morgensen, 148 Wn.App. 81, 86-90 (2008); in spite of trial court's precautions, abuse of discretion to replay here; reverses State v. Koontz, 102 Wn.App. 309 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Jackson, 113 Wn.App. 762 (2002)

Victim testifies that she listened to 911 tape, it was her voice and it was accurate; held: witness with personal knowledge of conversation who testifies that tape accurately portrays the original conversation and identifies each relevant voice authenticates the evidence, ER 901, State v. Williams, 49 Wn.2d 354. 360 (1956), State v. Smith, 85 Wn.2d 840, 847 (1975); II.

State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666 (2002)

Defendant e-mails a fictitious juvenile to persuade her to have sex, e-mail and ICQ (real-time instant message communication) is admitted at his attempted child rape trial; held: while 1:1 e-mail is private and recorded on a device, pursuant to the privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(1)(a), there is implied consent that it be recorded as e-mail because it must be recorded by the receiving computer, thus e-mail is admissible, but see: State v. Roden, 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014); because defendant here encouraged the fictitious juvenile to set up an ICQ account, it is inferred that he was familiar with the technology, knowing that it can be recorded, thus defendant consented to the recording, State v. Smith, 189 Wn.2d 655 (2017), distinguishing State v. Faford, 128 Wn.2d 476, 481 (1996); affirms State v. Townsend, 105 Wn.App. 622 (2001); 8-1.

State v. Christensen, 153 Wn.2d 186 (2004)

Mother listens to daughter's cordless telephone conversation with boyfriend who makes incriminating statements which are admitted at trial; held: listening to cordless telephone conversation violates privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(1)(a), thus evidence is inadmissible, RCW 9.73.050, but see: 2005 amendments; reverses State v. Christensen, 151 Wn.App. 74 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 125 Wn.App. 443, 455-56 (2005)

Application for one-party consent to record telephone conversation, RCW 9.73.090(2), is "minimally adequate" where it states that normal procedures have not been tried because defendant has provided false statements concerning her involvement in the homicide and that she is likely to engage the consenting party in a cover-up, State v. Cisneros, 63 Wn.App. 724, 729 (1992), State v. Manning, 81 Wn.App. 714, 720 (1996), State v. Constance, 154 Wn.App. 861 (2010); II.

State v. Fowler, 157 Wn.2d 387 (2006)

Oregon police record, without consent, telephone conversation from Oregon with defendant in Washington; held: RCW 9.73 does not apply where the recording is made in a state where such a recording is lawful, State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 583-91 (1997), see: Kadoranian v. Bellingham Police Dep't, 119 Wn.2d 178 (1992); silver platter doctrine applies when foreign jurisdiction lawfully obtains evidence and Washington officers did not act as agents or cooperate or assist the foreign jurisdiction, State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 63 (2018); affirms State v. Fowler, 127 Wn.App. 676 (2005); 9-0.

Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446 (2006)

Police record conversations at traffic stops, arrest for DUI; held: conversations between police officers and detainees at a traffic stop are not private for purposes of the privacy act, at 458-60, RCW 9.73.030, State v. Flora, 68 Wn.App. 802 (1992), State v. Clayton, 11 Wn.App.2d 172 (2019), see: State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996), State v. Babcock, 168 Wn.App. 598

(2012); an officer's failure to advise a detainee that he was being recorded on the recording violates the privacy act, RCW 9.73.090(1)(c), at 460-67; remedy for recording traffic stop without warning is suppression of the recording, State v. Cunningham, 93 Wn.2d 823, 831 (1980), but not exclusion of other evidence acquired at the same time as the improper recordings since the conversation was not private, State v. Courtney, 137 Wn.App. 376, 382-85 (2007), distinguishing State v. Fjermestad, 114 Wn.2d 828 (1990); reverses Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 125 Wn.App. 666 (2005) and Auburn v. Kelly, 127 Wn.App. 54 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014)

After arrest, police ask to tape record statement, defendant refuses but makes statement, state offers evidence that defendant declined recording; held: testimony that defendant did not consent to recording, where not mentioned in closing argument nor used to imply guilt, does not amount to a comment on a statutory right, at 836-40, cf.: RCW 9.73.090(b); jury may watch admitted videotape of crime scene, State v. Elmore, 138 Wn.2d 250, 294-96 (1999), no error for bailiff to show video to jurors in courtroom in absence of defendant where bailiff does not improperly communicate with jurors, at 846-48, distinguishing State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501, 505 (1983), O'Brien v. City of Seattle, 52 Wn.2d 543, 546-47 (1958); 8-1.

State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App.434, 447-450 (2006)

Jail records telephone conversations after announcing to inmate-caller and recipient that the call is being recorded, court admits recording; held: inmate's expectation of privacy is less that that of a free citizen, no prisoner should reasonably expect privacy in outbound telephone calls, parties to call were on notice that calls were being recorded, both parties consented to the recording by continuing to speak after notice of recording, State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 249-60 (2012); I.

State v. Courtney, 137 Wn.App. 376, 382-85 (2007)

Where police record confession, failure to include Miranda warnings on tape is grounds for suppression, State v. Mazzante, 86 Wn.App. 425, 428 (1997), harmless here; violation of privacy act does not require suppression of evidence derived from a recorded confession as opposed to a private conversation, RCW 9.73.090, Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446, 467 (2006); III.

State v. Barron, 139 Wn.App. 266 (2007)

Reserve police officer, with authority from a ranking officer, records a drug transaction outside of his jurisdiction, officer's agency has a Mutual Aid agreement, RCW 10.93, with the jurisdiction in which the recording took place but agreement directs that "advance notice should be given…prior to the exercise of these powers," no notice is provided; held: Mutual Aid agreement authorized the officer to act, consent letter said that advance notice "should" be provided, not "shall," thus police were authorized to make the recording, distinguishing State v. Knight, 79 Wn.App. 670, 679 (1995); while a reserve officer is not a general authority peace officer, RCW 10.93.020(5), thus not authorized by the Mutual Aid act to act outside of his jurisdiction in these circumstances, an undercover drug transaction is not encompassed by the Mutual Aid act, and no caselaw supports suppression as a remedy for violation of RCW

10.93.090, see: State v. Barker, 98 Wn.App. 439, 446, rev'd on other grounds, 143 Wn.2d 915, 922 n.4 (2001); I.

State v. Modica, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008)

Jail records telephone conversations after announcing to inmate-caller and recipient that the call is being recorded, court admits recording; held: inmate has a lessened expectation of privacy, jail security and lack of privilege plus notice that calls were being recorded all lead to conclusion that privacy act does not preclude admissibility of the recordings, State v. Archie, 148 Wn.App. 198 (2009), State v. Mohamed, 195 Wn.App. 161 (2016); "[s]igns or automated recordings that calls may be recorded or monitored do not, in themselves, defeat a reasonable expectation of privacy;" affirms State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434 (2006); 7-2.

State v. Archie, 148 Wn.App. 198 (2009)

Where notice is given, jail may record telephone conversations of pretrial detainees, State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 249-60 (2012), State v. Mohamed, 195 Wn.App. 161 (2016), see: State v. Modica, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008); I.

State v. Constance, 154 Wn.App. 861 (2010)

One-party consent application to record, RCW 9.73.090, is sufficient where police show that "normal investigative techniques" were inadequate because they have previously questioned defendant about the incident unsuccessfully, crime was solicitation to murder, proof of knowledge is an element, State v. Porter, 98 Wn.App. 631, 636 (1999), officer safety is a factor because undercover officer needs quick backup, mere fact that there is some boilerplate language in application does not require suppression, see: State v. Manning, 81 Wn.App. 714, 717 (1996); I.

State v. Babcock, 168 Wn.App. 598 (2012)

Undercover agent meets jailed defendant in visiting room containing up to 3 inmates, minimal separators, defendant proposes murder, agent obtains warrant and records conversation; held: reasonable person would not have assumed that conversation was private as others were nearby, "possible presence of third parties" reduces expectation of privacy, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211, 225-27 (1996); offer to hire a hit man is a threat, within statutory exception to privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(2)(b) (1986), State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501, 507-08 (1983); warrant application that must contain a particular showing that other normal investigative procedures reasonably appear unlikely to succeed or too dangerous, RCW 9.73.131(3)(f) (2011) is satisfied where it states that using other inmates to talk to defendant is dangerous, having another inmate wired is difficult and dangerous, see: State v. Platz, 33 Wn.App. 345, 350 (1982); II.

State v. Kipp, 179 Wn.2d 718 (2014)

Father of victim secretly records conversation with defendant, a relative, who confesses to molestation; held: privacy of conversation depends upon intent or reasonable expectations of participants; factors: (1) duration and subject matter of conversation, (2) location and potential presence of third parties, (3) role of non-consenting party and relationship to consenting parties, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211, 225-27 (1996); here, ten minute conversation suggests privacy, incriminating statement is the type protected under the privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(1)(b) (1986), State v. Faford, 128 Wn.2d 476 (1996), distinguishing State v. Clark, supra. at 231, location in private home and fact that the parties were brothers-in-law and no one else present tilts toward reasonable expectation of privacy, recording should have been suppressed; 9-0.

State v. Hinton*,* 179 Wn.2d 862 (2014)

Officer is handed a smartphone that was seized from an arrestee, defendant sends text message thinking recipient is the arrestee, officer replies, defendant asks to buy drugs, is convicted of attempted possession; held: a text message is a "private affair," protected from warrantless search, CONST. art. I, § 7, a person does not lose all privacy interest in text messages merely because they are disclosed to a recipient, cf.: State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021), reversing State v. Hinton, 169 Wn.App. 28 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Roden*,* 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014)

Incident to drug arrest of Lee, police seize smartphone, detective looks through the phone, sees a text message offering to sell drugs, posing as arrestee Lee replies, arranges to buy drugs, arrest defendant Roden; held: a text message to an individual, as opposed to a group texting function, manifests a subjective intent of privacy, illicit subject matter indicates a belief in privacy, thus text messages were private communications protected by privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(1), detective reading the texts intercepted the messages, police should have obtained a warrant, thus evidence must be suppressed, State v. Hinton, 179 Wn.2d 862 (2014), cf.: State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021), see also: State v. Faford, 128 Wn.2d 476 (1996), cf.: State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666 (2002), State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993), but see: State v. Bilgi, 19 Wn.App. 845 (2021); reverses State v. Roden, 169 Wn.App. 59 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Bliss*,* 191 Wn.App. 903 (2015)

District Court judges may authorize one-party consent recordings of telephone conversations, RCW 9.73.090 (2011); II.

State v. Mohamed*,* 195 Wn.App. 161, 163-68 (2016)

Jail inmate calls defendant, system announces that call is recorded to inmate and recipient who must acknowledge, court admits call; held: jail phone recording is admissible against the caller, State v. Modica, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008), State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 259-60 (2012), and the recipient, does not violate privacy act, ch. 9.73, RCW, or Fourth Amendment, State v. Corliss, 123 Wn.2d 656, 663 (1994), or CONST. art. I, § 7, State v. Archie, 148 Wn.App. 198, 204 (2009), even if it is recorded as a tool of investigation; I.

State v. Novick, 196 Wn.App. 513 (2016)

Defendant installs software on victim's smartphone that allows defendant to listen and record everything on it, is convicted of computer trespass, former RCW 9A.52.110 (2011), and intercepting a private communication, RCW 9.73.030 (1986); held: evidence was sufficient to convict of each; multiple convictions for several acts constitute multiple units of prosecution; II.

State v. Smith*,* 189 Wn.2d 655 (2017)

During assault of victim defendant's voice mail is inadvertently left on after he calls his cellular phone to locate it thus recording the incident, trial court denies suppression under privacy act, RCW 9.73.030 (1986); held: while an inadvertent recording is within the purview of the privacy act, see: State v. Smith, 85 Wn.2d 840 (1975), the recording here is not a "conversation" as contemplated by the privacy act; because defendant called his own telephone he took the risk that it would record, thus he is deemed to have consented to the recording, State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Clayton, 11 Wn.App.2d 172 (2019)

Police, in defendant's home, record conversation with defendant, recording up to the point that defendant is arrested is admitted at trial; held: conversations with uniformed, on-duty police officers are typically not private conversations, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996), State v. Flora, 68 Wn.App. 802 (1992), Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446 (2006), thus recordings are admissible; III.

State v. J.K.T., 11 Wn.App.2d 544 (2019)

Court authorizes one-party consent recording, RCW 9.73.130, finding probable cause to record respondent's brother at a "homeless encampment" identifying a cross-street, recording includes respondent who admits to murder; held: conversations lawfully recorded are admissible, RCW 9.73.090(2), regardless of who is recorded; place identified for recording was "minimally adequate to satisfy the requirement of RCW 9.73.130(3)(d), see: State v. D.J.W., 76 Wn.App. 135 (1994), aff'd, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996); I.

State v. Gearhard, 13 Wn.App.2d 554 (2020)

Complainant tells police he was molested by a neighbor, police record pretext phone call in which complainant calls defendant, says police are coming to speak with complainant and asks what to do, defendant asks complainant to say he lied and he would make it worth his while later, defendant is convicted of witness tampering; held: exception to one-party consent recording statute, RCW 9.73.030(2) (1986), which permits court to admit recorded conversation that conveys threats of extortion, blackmail, bodily harm "or other unlawful requests or demands" only applies if the other "unlawful request or demand" is of a similar nature to extortion, blackmail, bodily harm, State v. Williams, 94 Wn.2d 531 (1980); here, defendant asked complainant to lie, which is not of a similar nature to a threat, thus recording and testimony of the conversation must be suppressed, cf.: State v. Valdiglesias LaValle, 23 Wn.App.2d 934 (2022); III.

State v. Glant, 13 Wn.App.2d 356 (2020)

Defendant engages in email conversation with a person whom he believes is offering sex with children, recipient is police engaged in sting operation, defendant claims emails are private conversations and should be suppressed; held: while emails may be private conversations the sender impliedly consents to them being recorded since the sender understands that an email is recorded, State v. Racus, 7 Wn.App.2d 287, 299-300 (2019); II.

State v. Ridgley, 17 Wn.App.2d 846 (2021)

Police "self-authorize an undercover narcotics recording which states that a named detective "and/or any other officers participating," record via informant's body wire transaction; held: strict compliance with RCW 9.73.230(2)(c) (2011) requires that the names of all officers participating be in the report, State v. Jimenez, 76 Wn.App. 647, 651-52 (1995), rev'd on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 720, 722 (1996), suppression is the remedy, remanded for trial court to analyze harmless error; III.

State v. Gonzalez, 17 Wn.App.2d 64 (2021)

Intercept orders for placement of a body wire on an informant making controlled buys state the police wanted to corroborate the informant's testimony and that due to firearms in the seller's home the body wire could mitigate the risk to the informant; held: particularity requirement of intercept orders, RCW 9.73.130 (2011), that includes a particular statement showing that normal investigative procedures are too dangerous to employ meet statutory requirement, must consist of more than boilerplate showing of need, State v. Manning, 81 Wn.App. 714, 720 (1996); here, report of firearms in the home is sufficient to establish a need to "listen and be prepared to move in if necessary," State v. Knight, 54 Wn.App. 143, 151 (1989); III.

State v. Bilgi, 19 Wn.App. 845 (2021)

Defendant sends texts to a police officer acting as a fictitious child, police software allows other officers to view the texts, defense claims privacy act violation; held: "it is commonly understood that a written communication, once sent to its intended recipient, can be passed on or shared by the recipient," distinguishing State v. Roden, 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014), State v. Fjermestad, 114 Wn.2d 828 (1990), defendant effectively consented to the disclosure; II.

State v. Valdiglesias LaValle, 23 Wn.App.2d 934 (2022)

Defendant asks her 10-year old son to poison her ex-husband so that they will be "together forever," son records conversation, defense moves to suppress, arguing that the exception in RCW 9.73.030(2) (2021) requires an explicit threat with consideration; held: teaching someone to poison a person conveys a threat of bodily harm justifying one-person consent, State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501 (1983), State v. Babcock, 168 Wn.App. 598 (2012), cf.: State v. Gearhard, 13 Wn.App.2d 554 (2020); I.

WITNESSES*

State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33 (1980)

Sale of drugs to informant who had previously been fired by another police department for unsuitability, trial court refused to permit defense to inquire as to reasons for firing or to call witness who fired informant; held: abuse of discretion to limit cross-examination concerning credibility, cf.: State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 781-87 (2017); III.

State v. Styles, 93 Wn.2d 173 (1980)

Can discredit character witness by cross regarding specific acts of misconduct of defendant, but must be good faith by plaintiff to discredit witness, not to discredit defendant; reverses State v. Styles, 23 Wn.App. 198 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Demos, 94 Wn.2d 733 (1980)

Court properly denied motion for psychiatric evaluations of rape victims in absence of a compelling reason, State v. Israel, 91 Wn.App. 846, 849-53 (1998); 8-0.

State v. Allen, 94 Wn.2d 860 (1980), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983)

A witness under Army orders to be in another state at time of trial is grounds for taking a deposition, per CrR 4.6(d); 8-0.

State v. Mulder, 29 Wn.App. 513 (1981)

In child abuse case, expert may testify about "battered child syndrome" if s/he can express with reasonable probability that injury is not accidental or is inconsistent with explanation offered by defendant; I.

State v. Brown, 29 Wn.App. 770 (1981)

Co-defendant agrees to testify for state in exchange for reduction in charge; at defense counsel's request, co-defendant does not plead until after he testifies so that his plea agreement is only good if there is a conviction; held: if state had withheld benefits of bargain until after witness performed, it might be contrary to public policy and due process, but here defense requested delayed plea, thus no error; I.

State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981)

Trial court has discretion to call a witness whom all parties may cross-examine; I.

State v. Olson, 30 Wn.App. 298 (1981)

Defendant refuses to name potential co-conspirators on cross-examination, whereupon court strikes her direct testimony, held: court has four alternatives: (1) strike testimony, (2) contempt, (3) instruct jury that it can consider defendant's refusal in determining credibility, (4) no sanctions, all within court's discretion; II.

---

* See also: WITNESS COMPETENCY, infra.

State v. Eisner, 95 Wn.2d 458 (1981)

Prosecutor could not get five year old statutory rape complainant to testify to penetration, so court examined witness in detail, resulting in conviction; held: questions of judge went beyond clarification so as to be a comment on the evidence; 9-0.

State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301 (1981)

RCW 5.60.050(2) is inapplicable to determine the competence of an adult witness; a psychiatrist may testify to a witness's ability to differentiate between truth and untruth where the witness is cross-examined, his/her mental disability is obvious, and there has been a challenge to the witness's capacity to testify; apparently holds that by cross-examining a witness, the witness's credibility is attacked, thereby permitting corroborating evidence, State v. Schuman, 89 Wash. 9, 17-18 (1915), see: State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512, 532-34 (2015), aff'd, 188 Wn.2d 244 (2017); 6-3.

State v. Jessup, 31 Wn.App. 330 (1982)

Terms of an immunity agreement are not admissible absent an attack on the veracity of a witness, State v. Green, 119 Wn.App. 15 (2003), see: State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389, 402 (1997); trial court should excise references in an immunity agreement that witnesses are placed in protective custody; I.

State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009)

Incompetent infant's excited utterances are admissible, ER 803(a), irrespective of the competence of the declarant; excited utterance in response to a parent's questions are admissible in sex offense cases where spontaneity is clear and danger of fabrication is remote, State v. Bloomstrom, 12 Wn.App. 416 (1974), State v. Canida, 4 Wn.App. 275 (1971); II.

State v. Russell, 31 Wn.App. 715 (1982)

No error where court declines to instruct jury that where witness has willfully testified falsely you are at liberty to disregard the testimony of such witness entirely; I.

United States v. Valenzuela-Bernal, 73 L.Ed.2d 1193 (1982)

Fact that government deported two alien witnesses without first permitting defendant to interview witnesses, government knowing they were witnesses, held not to violate Sixth Amendment right to compulsory process absent showing by defendant of materiality of witnesses' testimony; 7-2.

State v. Steward, 34 Wn.App. 221 (1983)

In a child murder case, state calls pathologist to testify that babysitting boyfriends are most likely to be child abusers, based on sample of 16 cases; held: no scientific basis for the testimony; I.

State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287 (1983)

In statutory rape case, state called a worker from sex assault clinic to testify that sex abuse is more likely than not committed by a biological parent, defendant being natural father; held: inadequate foundation to admit this expert testimony; extensive discussion of foundation requirements per ER 702 and 703; character witness may not give opinion as to whether s/he would believe another witness, ER 608(a); I.

State v. Mines, 35 Wn.App. 932 (1983)

Defense sought appointment of psychiatrist to evaluate competency of a state's witness who had been committed to a mental hospital; held: no error, as trial court acted within its discretion; I.

United States v. Lindstrom, 698 F.2d 1154 (11th Cir. 1983)

Where credibility of a key prosecution witness is crucial, court should grant defense access to witness's psychiatric records and permit cross-examination.

State v. Dixon, 37 Wn.App. 867 (1984)

Where a child-witness demonstrates an understanding of difference between truth and falsity, s/he need not be formally sworn, ER 603, see: State v. Avila, 78 Wn.App. 731, 737-9 (1995); where rebuttal witness violates an order excluding witnesses, court may permit witness to testify; I.

State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984)

Battered woman syndrome may be proved by expert testimony where appropriate; 9-0.

State v. Martin, 101 Wn.2d 713 (1984)

Testimony by a witness as to a fact which became available following hypnosis is inadmissible in the trial; a witness may testify based on what he knew before hypnosis if the party offering the testimony meets the burden of establishing what the witness remembered prior to hypnosis, reversing State v. Martin, 33 Wn.App. 486 (1982), limiting State v. Long, 32 Wn.App. 732 (1982); see: State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984), State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 789 (1984); 6-3; cf.: Rock v. Arkansas, 97 L.Ed.2d 37 (1987).

United States v. Abel, 80 L.Ed.2d 450 (1984)

Trial court properly permitted inmate-witness to testify that defendant and defense witness were members of a prison gang that was sworn to perjury and self-protection on each member's behalf to show bias, Fed. R. Evid. 608(b); 9-0.

State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985)

Where witness violates witness exclusion order, ER 615, it is within sound discretion of court whether or not to prohibit the witness from testifying, State v. Grant, 77 Wn.2d 47, 51 (1969), State v. Dixon, 37 Wn.App. 867, 877 (1984), cf.: State v. Skuza, 156 Wn.App. 886 (2010); I.

State v. Yapp, 45 Wn.App. 601 (1986)

Where witness identifies rape suspect after hypnosis, but police preserved detailed record of witness's prehypnotic memory including witness's statement that she would recognize suspect if she saw him again, then the intervening hypnosis does not invalidate the identification, distinguishing State v. Martin, 101 Wn.2d 713 (1984); III.

State v. Justiniano, 48 Wn.App. 572 (1987)

Incompetency of a child witness to testify at trial does not render inadmissible the child's earlier hearsay statement so long as the child was then competent to make such statement; a statement by mother to a physician about what the child told the mother is admissible, ER 803(a)(4), but see: State v. Alvarez-Abrego, 154 Wn.App. 351, 366-69 (2010); II.

State v. Brown, 48 Wn.App. 654 (1987)

Evidence of an alleged rape victim's ingestion of LSD at the time of the offense, and expert testimony about the effects of LSD, is admissible; III.

State v. Coe, 109 Wn.2d 832 (1988)

All post-hypnotic testimony is inadmissible; hypnosis acts as a time barrier after which no admissible identifications can be made; 6-3.

State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77 (1990)

A request that a witness "drop charges" is not witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120, where defendant and witness knew each other, and the context is such that there was no attempt to induce the witness to withhold testimony, reversing State v. Rempel, 53 Wn.App. 799 (1989); see also: State v. Jensen, 57 Wn.App. 501 (1990), State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 445-47 (2000), but see: State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 878 (1992), cf.: State v. Williamson,131 Wn.App. 1 (2004), State v. Thompson, 153 Wn.App. 325, 328-35 (2009), State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96, 114-15 (2018); 9-0.

Baird v. Larson, 59 Wn.App. 715 (1990)

An expert who acquires his/her opinion not in anticipation of litigation is an occurrence witness and is thus not entitled to expert witness fee, CR 26(b)(4)(C); III.

State v. Guerin, 63 Wn.App. 117 (1991)

Where child witness establishes, on direct, independent recollection but is unable to remember details on cross, the witness remains competent, lack of recollection goes to weight rather than admissibility, Jenkins v. Snohomish Cy. PUD 1, 105 Wn.2d 99, 103 (1986), State v. Allen, 70 Wn.2d 690 (1967), State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672 (2003); II.

State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 878 (1992)

Defendant tampers with witness, charges dismissed, tampering continues, charges refiled, "to convict" instruction includes period during which charge had been dismissed; held: because evidence of tampering during dismissal period was corroborative of intent to cause witnesses to be unavailable for the original scheduled official proceeding, instructions were proper, distinguishing State v. Pella, 25 Wn.App. 795 (1980); causing nine-year old witness to be removed from her home, arranging for family's transport out of state is sufficient to convict, distinguishing State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77 (1990); I.

Bellevue v. Vigil, 66 Wn.App. 891 (1992)

Trial court's denial of material witness warrant was not an abuse of discretion absent a showing that other available means of securing the witness's presence at trial had proved futile or a showing of coercion or intimidation, see: State v. Hartley, 51 Wn.App. 442 (1988); I.

Paiya v. Durham Constr. Co., 69 Wn.App. 578 (1993)

A treating health care provider is a factual witness and not an expert witness entitled to expert witness fees, CR 26(b)(5), unless facts and opinions are developed in anticipation of litigation; I.

State v. Tatum, 74 Wn.App. 81 (1994)

Subpoenas remain in effect beyond specific date for which they are issued and impose a continuing duty to appear until discharged by court, even where trial date for which subpoena was issued is continued, CR 45(g), CrR 6.12(b), State v. Iniquez, 143 Wn.App. 845, 854 (2008), cf.: State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330, 337 (1991); I.

State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 709-12 (1995)

Testimony which is merely cumulative or confirmatory or which is merely a contradiction by a party who has already so testified does not justify surrebuttal, State v. Dupont, 14 Wn.App. 22, 24 (1978), State v. Stambach, 76 Wn.2d 298, 301 (1969); 9-0.

State v. Avila, 78 Wn.App. 731, 737-9 (1995)

Every witness must be sworn before testifying, ER 603, CONST. Art. I, § 6, although court need not administer a formal oath to a child, State v. Dixon, 37 Wn.App. 867, 876 (1984), State v. Collier, 23 Wn.2d 678, 694 (1945); failure to object waives issue; I.

State v. Lubers, 81 Wn.App. 614, 621-2 (1996)

Defendant asks witness to write a letter recanting information witness had given police implicating defendant, is convicted of witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120; held: asking someone about to be called as a witness to make a false statement recanting a prior signed statement, thereby withholding information necessary to a criminal investigation is sufficient to prove witness tampering, see: State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96, 114-15 (2018); II.

State v. Simonson, 82 Wn.App. 226, 231-4 (1996)

Prosecutor subpoenas officer, defense counsel informs prosecutor he wants to call the officer, officer arrives outside court, prosecutor sees officer and tells officer he won't be calling her, defense is unaware she leaves, trial court denies continuance to obtain the witness; held: prosecutor had an obligation to advise the court and counsel of the witness's presence because he knew defense wanted to call her, trial court erred in denying continuance, harmless here; while a continuance is not required to obtain evidence that is merely impeaching, State v. Harris, 12 Wn.App. 481, 496-7 (1975), there are circumstances in which impeachment testimony is so important as to require a continuance; II.

State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389 (1997)

Prosecutor asks state's witnesses, over objection, if they wanted to be in court, elicits that a witness had to be arrested on material witness warrant, witnesses testified they were in fear of being injured; held: absent an attack on credibility from opposing counsel, evidence intended to fortify or corroborate credibility of a witness is inadmissible, at 319, State v. Kosanke, 23 Wn.2d 211, 215 (1945), State v. McGhee, 57 Wn.App. 457, 460-1 (1990), State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301 (1981), cf.: State v. Hakimi, 121 Wn.App. 15, 24-26 (2004); fears and threats to witnesses, where not linked to defendant, is irrelevant; reverses State v. Bourgeois, 82 Wn.App. 314 (1996) as harmless error; I.

State v. James, 88 Wn.App. 812 (1997)

Threats made to prevent a witness from reporting a crime is intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.110, as amended in 1994, distinguishing State v. Wiley, 57 Wn.App. 533 (1990); II.

State v. Israel, 91 Wn.App. 846, 849-53 (1998)

Ordering co-defendant who is testifying for state to submit to a defense psychological examination is an abuse of discretion, as there are no compelling reasons and defense has other methods of impeachment, State v. Demos, 94 Wn.2d 733, 738 (1980), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 89 (1991); I.

State v. Wimbish, 100 Wn.App. 78 (2000)

To compel the attendance of an out-of-state witness, RCW 10.55.060, defense must establish materiality by presenting specific facts to which the witness would testify, State v. Lodge, 42 Wn.App. 380, 392 (1985); II.

State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 445-47 (2000)

Demand that witness get the charges dropped or he will have criminal charges filed against witness and will be compelled to seek revenge is sufficient to prove intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.110(1), State v. Williamson, 131 Wn.App. 1 (2004), distinguishing State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77, 83-84 (1990); II.

State v. Rodriguez, 146 Wn.2d 260 (2002)

Defense witness is shackled during testimony, defense does not object; held: upon objection, trial court must hold a hearing to determine the need for security measures whenever a prisoner will appear before a jury in shackles, whether a defendant or defense or state witness; here, because defense did not object or request curative instruction, no prejudice, but see: State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020); 8-1.

State v. Anderson, 111 Wn.App. 317 (2002)

Defendant writes to his mother threatening a witness, telephones a witness' husband, states that witness' wife "is fucked and she better watch out," claims latter is not a threat, former was not intended to be communicated; held: intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.110(2), requires no proof that defendant intended his threats to reach the victim, State v. Hansen, 122 Wn.2d 712 (1993), State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015),telephone call is sufficient to establish threat; III.

State v. Williams, 118 Wn.App. 178, 183-85 (2003)

Where a witness completes testimony in chief and neither party seeks to have the witness remain in attendance, the witness is excused, CrR 6.12(b), and trial court does not abuse its discretion by refusing to wait for the witness to reappear, see: State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003); II.

State v. Green, 119 Wn.App. 15 (2003)

Until an immunized witness' credibility is attacked, immunity agreement should not be admitted, State v. Jessup, 31 Wn.App. 304 (1982), see: State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389, 402 (1997); when agreement is admitted, those portions that relate to the witness testifying truthfully should be redacted, State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010), see: State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011); I.

State v. Hakimi, 124 Wn.App. 15, 19-22 (2004)

Trial court allowing child rape complainants to hold dolls while testifying was not an abuse of discretion, distinguishing State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855, 862 (1983); I.

State v. Williamson, 120 Wn.App. 903 (2004), remanded, 154 Wn.2d 1031, amended, 131 Wn.App. 1 (2004)

Defendant asks one witness to tell child rape complainant that if she doesn't recant her parents will go to jail, is convicted of witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120; held: because a person tampers with a witness if s/he attempts to alter the witness' testimony, State v. Whitfield, 132 Wn.App. 878, 897-98 (2006), asking one person to tell another to recant coupled with a false explanation of adverse consequences is sufficient to convict, State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 445-47 (2000), see: State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96, 114-15 (2018), distinguishing State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77 (1990); II.

State v. Hakimi, 124 Wn.App. 15, 24-26 (2004)

Following child rape complainant's testimony, court admits, without objection, complainant's mother's testimony that complainant was reluctant to testify; held: while corroborating or bolstering testimony should not be admitted to rehabilitate absent an attack of a witness' credibility, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 574 (1984), here the victim's credibility was an inevitable, central issue, state could anticipate that defense would attack, thus trial court did not err, distinguishing State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389, 400-02 (1997); I.

State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010)

Evidence that an immunized witness has agreed to testify truthfully should not be admitted in state's case-in-chief, State v. Green, 119 Wn.App. 15 (2003), but may be elicited by the state if the defense has attacked the witness' credibility on cross-examination, see: State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011); reverses State v. Ish, 150 Wn.App. 775 (2009); 5-4.

State v. Thompson, 153 Wn.App. 325 (2009)

Defendants videotape incompetent vulnerable adult, coaching her to acknowledge that she gave her estate to defendants who present the tape at a guardianship hearing, state charges defendants with witness tampering and theft and uses the tape at the criminal trial without calling victim; defendants, knowing that victim suffered from dementia, had her sign over her estate; held: a witness need not be called as a witness nor need the witness be competent to support a charge of witness tampering, state need not prove that defendants knew victim was competent, video meets necessary definition of "witness" and "testimony;" I.

State v. Skuza, 156 Wn.App. 886 (2010)

Having excluded witnesses, ER 615, trial judge overhears a defense witness speaking to the defendant outside the courthouse, excludes the witness from testifying, see: State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985); held: trial judge became a witness, defendant had no opportunity to question him about his observations, judge's description of the conversation was insufficient to warrant a finding that a violation occurred, court erred when it applied the harshest possible sanction of excluding evidence central to defense case; II.

State v. McCabe, 161 Wn.App. 781 (2011)

Potential defense witness claims she is medically unable to come to court, defense argues Sixth Amendment right to compulsory process requires court to permit telephonic testimony; held: telephonic testimony in criminal cases is not a right, state has right to cross-examine and test credibility before jury, trial court properly exercised discretion, ER 611, live testimony is "superior evidence," cf.: Detention of Stout, 159 Wn.2d 357 (2007), CR 43 (a)(1) does not apply in criminal cases, but see: State v. Cayetano-Jaimes, 190 Wn.App. 286 (2015), State v. Sweidan, 13 Wn.App.2d 23 (2020), State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d 279 (2022); III.

State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015)

Guards find letter written by defendant threatening a witness in defendant's jail cell, convicted of intimidating a former witness, RCW 9A.72.110 (2011); held: a defendant "directs a threat" when he communicates a threat to someone though not necessarily the intended victim, circumstantial evidence here establishes that the threat was communicated to a third party albeit not the corrections officer who confiscated it, see: State v. Hansen, 122 Wn.2d 712 (1993), State v. Anderson, 111 Wn.App. 317 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Cayetano-Jaimes, 190 Wn.App. 286 (2015)

Trial court abused discretion by excluding telephone or live video testimony of a defense witness who had been deported and was thus unavailable to testify in person where the witness' evidence had high probative value whose exclusion effectively barred defense from presenting his defense, distinguishing State v. McCabe, 161 Wn.App. 781 (2011), see: State v. Sweidan, 13 Wn.App.2d 53 (2020), State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d 279 (2021); I.

State v. Lizarraga, 191 Wn.App. 530, 551-63 (2015)

Absent the state playing a part in deportation or bad faith by the prosecutor it is not a violation of the right to compulsory process that a defense witness was deported and thus unavailable to testify and thus his hearsay statements are not admissible; I.

State v. Arredondo, 188 Wn.2d 244, 267-71 (2017)

At offer of proof state's witness testifies he has problems with depression, concentration, comprehension, anxiety, distrust of other people, hypervigilance, PTSD, substance abuse, but none impact long term memory, trial court finds that his issues do not affect his ability to recall or describe, precludes defense from inquiring during trial; held: witness did not display any readily apparent mental deficiencies, distinguishing State v. Perez, 139 Wn.App. 522 (2007), State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301(1981), absent evidence that witness was under influence at time of incident or at time of testifying, State v. Tigano, 63 Wn.App. 336, 344 (1991), trial court did not abuse discretion, State v. Darden, 145 Wn.2d 612 (2002); trial court should apply the following factors to assess whether past mental health issues are permissible on cross-examination: 1) the nature of the psychological problems; 2) whether the witness suffered from the condition at the time of the events to which the witness will testify; [and] 3) the temporal recency or remoteness of the condition; affirms State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 781-86 (2017)

In assault/self-defense case victim testifies he is not a fighting person, defense seeks to impeach with a domestic violence harassment order, ER 608; held: door would only be opened to evidence directly contradicting his testimony and challenging his credibility, facts were sufficiently different such that refusal of court to permit impeachment was not an abuse of discretion, distinguishing State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33 (1980), see: State v. Gefeller, 76 Wn.2d 449, 455 (1969), State v. Rushworth, 12 Wn.App.2d 466 (2020); affirms State v. Lile, 193 Wn.App. 179 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96, 114-15 (2018)

Jailed defendant tells complainant on phone to tell defense investigator a different story than she told police, is convicted of witness tampering; held: defendant's statement to victim implied that she would testify falsely as telling defense investigator by itself would have little effect, thus rational trier of fact could find defendant guilty, see: State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77 (1990), State v. Lubers, 81 Wn.App. 614, 621-2 (1996), State v. Williamson, 131 Wn.App. 1 (2004); 2-1, II.

State v. Sweidan, 13 Wn.App.2d 53 (2020)

State's witness in Michigan, under out-of-jurisdiction summons, RCW 10.55.060 (2010), submits unsworn statement that she cannot appear in person, in-home caregiver for ill mother, physician writes that mother needs continuous medical care for which witness needs to be present, court permits, over objection, live video testimony; held: confrontation clause entitles a defendant to "meet the witnesses . . . face-to-face," CONST. art. I, § 22, although considerations of public policy and necessities of the case, in narrow circumstances, may preempt the right of a physical face-to-face encounter, Maryland v. Craig, 497 U.S. 836, 845-46, 110 S. Ct. 3157, 111 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1990), State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022), trial court must render a case-specific finding that (1) excusing the presence of the witness necessarily furthers an important public policy, and (2) the procedure otherwise assures the reliability of the testimony, State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998). State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d. 279 (2022), here, state failed to establish the necessity to present the witness' testimony by video, no evidence that the witness was unable to find another caregiver; trial court should enter findings of fact and declare on record the details of how the video is set up, who can see the screens; harmless here; III.

State v. Taylor, 18 Wn.App.2d 568 (2021)

In case with diminished capacity defense state's expert violates orders in limine by testifying defendant asked for an attorney, used drugs and had criminal history, prosecutor neglected to instruct her not to refer to request for counsel or criminal history, motions for mistrial denied; held: failure of state to instruct a witness about a court order establishes seriousness of the irregularity, ER 103(c), State v. Weber, 159 Wn.2d 252, 270-79 (2006), forces defense to repeatedly object, witness' statements were not cumulative of other properly admitted evidence, repeated need to give curative instructions highlights the prejudice, thus reversed; I.

State v. Wood, 19 Wn.App.2d 743 (2021)

At defense request, court permits defendant to testify as to one of the counts and not the others, after defense rests defendant demands to be recalled to testify to other counts, trial court denies it as state would have changed it's cross-examination and could have called other rebuttal witnesses; held: trial court does not abuse its discretion in denying motion to reopen when based upon finding of delay and prejudice to state, State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App.191 (2001), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378 (2010); I.

State v. Lucas-Vicente, 22 Wn.App.2d 212 (2022)

Witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120(1), is an alternative means crime; I.

State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d 279 (2022)

During pre-vaccine COVID-19 pandemic trial court enters detailed findings allowing two witnesses from out of state to testify via video; held: defendant's right to confront may be satisfied absent a face-to-face confrontation where denial of such confrontation is necessary to further an important public policy; here, at the time of the trial there was uncertainty as to whether air travel was safe, trial courts must critically analyze on a case by case basis the issue of necessity for remote testimony, which was satisfied here, Maryland v. Craig, 497 U.S. 836, 845-46, 110 S. Ct. 3157, 111 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1990) State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998); II.

WITNESSES
Competency to Testify

State v. Smith, 30 Wn.App. 251 (1981)

Severely developmentally disabled witness (23 IQ) held competent to testify; CrR 6.12(c)(1), which excludes testimony of witnesses of "unsound mind" applies to those who are "without comprehension at all, not to those whose comprehension is merely limited," State v. Wyse, 71 Wn.2d 434, 436 (1967); State v. Hardung, 161 Wash. 379 (1931); I.

State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301 (1981)

RCW 5.60.050(2) is inapplicable to determine the competence of an adult witness; a psychiatrist may testify to a witness's ability to differentiate between truth and untruth where the witness is cross-examined, his/her mental disability is obvious, and there has been a challenge to the witness's capacity to testify, see: State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512, 532-34 (2015); apparently holds that by cross-examining a witness, the witness's credibility is attacked, thereby permitting corroborating evidence, State v. Schuman, 89 Wash. 9, 17-18 (1915); 6-3.

State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009)

Incompetent infant's excited utterances are admissible, ER 803(a), irrespective of the competence of the declarant; excited utterance in response to a parent's questions are admissible in sex offense cases where spontaneity is clear and danger of fabrication is remote, State v. Bloomstrom, 12 Wn.App. 416 (1974), State v. Canida, 4 Wn.App. 275 (1971); II.

State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 801 (1982)

Developmentally disabled adult is not incompetent to testify under CrR 6.12(c); under RCW 5.60.050, "unsound mind" means total lack of comprehension or the inability to distinguish between right and wrong, State v. Wyse, 71 Wn.2d 434 (1967); State v. Hardung, 161 Wn. 379 (1931); where a person has been "adjudicated insane," there is a rebuttable presumption of incompetency; where there is no such adjudication, a presumption of competency exists, State v. Morrison, 43 Wn.2d 23 (1953); affirms State v. Smith, 30 Wn.App. 251 (1981).

State v. Tuffree, 35 Wn.App. 243 (1983)

Colloquy to determine competency of a child witness performed in presence of jury is "bothersome, but . . . not erroneous as a matter of law"; court cites with approval Stafford, The Child as a Witness, 37 Wash. L. Rev. 303 (1962).

State v. Hunsaker, 39 Wn.App. 489 (1984)

Test for competency of a child witness is not youth but intelligence; three and one-half year old witness who attends preschool and can state age, birthdate, address and sing a song is competent; III; see: State v. Sardinia, 42 Wn.App. 533 (1986), State v. Allen, 70 Wn.2d 690 (1967), State v. Strange, 53 Wn.App. 638 (1989).

State v. Justiniano, 48 Wn.App. 572 (1987)

Incompetency of a child witness to testify at trial does not render inadmissible the child's earlier hearsay statement so long as the child was then competent to make such statement; a statement by mother to a physician about what the child told the mother is admissible, ER 803(a)(4), but see: State v. Alvarez-Abrego, 154 Wn.App. 351, 366-69 (2010); II.

State v. Przbylski, 48 Wn.App. 661 (1987)

Trial court need not find that a child witness is capable of perceiving and relating the facts of the incident charged in determining competency to testify; as long as the witness demonstrates an ability to receive just impressions of and accurately relate events which occurred at least contemporaneously with the incident at issue, the court may infer competency, State v. Borland, 57 Wn.App. 7 (1990), State v. Hancock, 17 Wn.App.2d 113 (2021), see: State v. Avila, 78 Wn.App. 731, 737-9 (1995), Dependency of A.E.P., 135 Wn.2d 208 (1998), State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010); I.

State v. Leavitt, 111 Wn.2d 66 (1988)

No error for trial court to permit six year old victim to whisper answers to questions to social worker who states answers out loud at competency hearing where jury was not present, and where defense counsel did not request to be in position to hear answers; Rules of Evidence do not apply to competency hearing, ER 104(a); 9-0.

State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865 (1991)

Child witness is competent if s/he demonstrates (1) understanding of duty to speak truth on stand, (2) mental capacity at the time of the occurrence to receive an accurate impression of it, (3) sufficient memory to retain an independent recollection of the occurrence, (4) capacity to express in words memory of the occurrence, (5) capacity to understand simple questions about it, State v. Allen, 70 Wn.App. 690 (1967), State v. Johnson, 28 Wn.App. 459 (1981), State v. Borland, 57 Wn.App. 7 (1990), State v. Pham, 75 Wn.App. 626, 629-30 (1994), see also: State v. Woods, 154 Wn.2d 613 (2005); inconsistencies in testimony go to weight, not competency, State v. Strange, 53 Wn.App. 638, 642 (1989), State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010); I.

State v. Guerin, 63 Wn.App. 117 (1991)

Where child witness establishes, on direct, independent recollection but is unable to remember details on cross, the witness remains competent, lack of recollection goes to weight rather than admissibility, Jenkins v. Snohomish Cy. PUD 1, 105 Wn.2d 99, 103 (1986), State v. Allen, 70 Wn.2d 690 (1967), State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672 (2003); II.

State v. Watkins, 71 Wn.App. 164 (1993)

Absent manifest signs of incompetence, trial court has no sua sponte duty to inquire into the competence of witnesses with known mental disabilities; I.

State v. Avila, 78 Wn.App. 731, 735-7 (1995)

In ruling on competency of child witness, trial court should state its analysis of the five State v. Allen, 70 Wn.App. 690 (1967) factors on the record, State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865 (1991); witness nodding affirmatively to prosecutor's asking it is important to tell the truth satisfies requirement (1) that witness understands duty to speak the truth; relating details of a trip close in time to the incident is sufficient to establish, (2) mental capacity, and (3) ability to retain memory of the incident, even if witness is reluctant to discuss the incident itself; reluctance to testify about abuse at competency hearing does not undermine competency finding, as court is not required to examine witness regarding the particular facts of the case to determine competency, State v. Przybylski, 48 Wn.App. 661, 665 (1987), State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010), State v. Hancock, 17 Wn.App.2d 113 (2021); I.

State v. Karpenski, 94 Wn.App. 80, 99-106 (1999)

In competency hearing, where child testifies to a wholly false event (here, that he was born at the same time as his five-year younger brother), then the evidence is insufficient to support a finding that the witness is capable of distinguishing truth from falsity, thus the witness is incompetent, but see: State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 103-05 (2007), State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912 (2009), aff'd, on other grounds, 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010)State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 877-79 (2009); a young child who lacks at trial the capacity to distinguish truth from falsehood probably also lacked that capacity when, younger, made a hearsay statement; 2-1, II.

State v. Carol M.D., 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999)

Where it is alleged that a child witness was improperly influenced in her testimony or in her child hearsay statements, trial court should hold a competency hearing to determine whether state subjected her to coercive and improper tactics that rendered her incapable of testifying accurately and whether her statements to counselor were reliable or were the product of improper and suggestive questioning, In re Dependency of A.E.P., 135 Wn.2d 208 (1998); Division III withdraws, in part, opinion in State v. Carol M.D., 89 Wn.App. 77 (1997); 2-1.

State v. Maule, 112 Wn.App. 887 (2002)

While the burden of proving incompetency of a witness is on the party opposing the witness, State v. Watkins, 71 Wn.App. 164, 169 (1993), State v. S.J.W., 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010), due process does not require that defense counsel be permitted to cross-examine a child witness at a competency hearing, State v. Brousseau, 172 Wn.2d 331 (2011), even where prosecutor has examined the witness; I.

State v. C.M.B., 130 Wn.App. 841 (2005)

Trial court need not examine a child witness' competency absent a challenge by a party, RCW 5.60.020, -.050, and may not be challenged for the first time on appeal; I.

State v. Borboa, 157 Wn.2d 108, 119-22 (2006)

Admissibility of child hearsay, RCW 9A.44.120, does not depend on whether the child is competent to testify but on whether the statement and circumstances surrounding the statement indicate the statement is reliable, State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 685 (2003); 8-1.

State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 103-05 (2007)

At competency hearing, 4-year old witness testifies that he may believe in dragons but understands the difference between teasing and truth, that he was not teasing about substance of testimony, another witness testifies that he told the exact same story about the offense earlier, trial court finds witness competent; held: judge addressed all State v. Allen, 70 Wn.App. 690 (1967), factors, did not abuse discretion, but see: State v. Karpenski, 94 Wn.App. 80, 99-106 (1999); III.

State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 448-51 (2007)

Prior to admitting child hearsay, trial court must hold a competency hearing to determine availability, even if parties stipulate that complainant is incompetent, RCW 9A.44.120, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 172 (1984), overruled, in part, State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 683 (2003), State v. John Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986); II.

State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 13-15 (2007)

Absent manifest signs of incompetence, trial court has no sua sponte duty to inquire into the competence of witnesses with known mental disabilities, State v. Watkins, 71 Wn.App. 164, 170 (1993), State v. C.M.B., 130 Wn.App. 841 (2005); III.

State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 877-79 (2009)

6-year old with ADHD, confused about some details of the incident such as day and time, shape of bed, types of doors and floor, once said he dreamed the incident, is competent, within trial court's discretion, where court finds all State v. Allen, 70 Wn.2d 690, 692 (1967) factors are met; II.

State v. S.J.W., 170 Wn.2d 92 (2010)

A party challenging the competency of a child witness has the burden of rebutting the presumption that the child is competent with evidence indicating that the child is of unsound mind, intoxicated, incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts or incapable of relating facts truly, State v. Maule, 112 Wn.App. 887 (2002), State v. Hancock, 17 Wn.App.2d 113 (2021), see: State v. Brousseau, 172 Wn.2d 331 (2011); reverses, in part, State v. S.J.W., 149 Wn.App. 912, 920-27 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Brousseau, 172 Wn.2d 331 (2011)

A bare assertion by defense that child victim is incompetent to testify is insufficient to require that she testify at a competency hearing; child victim is not required to testify at a child hearsay hearing, RCW 9A.44.120(2)(a); 5-4.