State v. Watson, 63 Wn.App. 854 (1992)

"Credit for time served" in a standard SRA plea bargain means credit for time served solely on offense for which defendant is being sentenced, RCW 9.94A.120(13) [recodified RCW

9.94A.505(6) (2010)], Matter of Allery, 6 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018); while defendant's misunderstanding of plea agreement, caused by significant mutual mistake between prosecutor and defense, would be grounds for withdrawal of plea, State v. Miller, 110 Wn.2d 528 (1988), defendant's misunderstanding of "concurrent" is unreasonable; I.

State v. Hale, 65 Wn.App. 752 (1992)

Defendant is misadvised in information as to maximum penalty, after trial she claims she "may have" pled guilty to prosecutor's offer of a lesser offense if she had been correctly advised; held: only on a plea of guilty is court required to advise of correct maximum penalty; defendant's claim that she "may have" pled guilty is insufficient to establish prejudice; III.

Parke v. Raley, 121 L.Ed.2d 391 (1992)

In challenge to validity of a guilty plea, defendant's prior experience with criminal justice system is relevant to question of whether he knowingly waived constitutional rights, Marshall v. Lonberger, 74 L.Ed.2d 646 (1983); 9-0.

State v. Koivu, 68 Wn.App. 869 (1993)

Defendant pleads to reduced charge on prosecutor's agreement to recommend sex offender sentencing option if presentence report indicates he is amenable to treatment and to obtain agreement not to file charges in another jurisdiction; defendant found not amenable to treatment, prosecutor recommends sentence greater than sentence range on original charge, prosecutor does get agreement not to file in other jurisdiction; held: no breach by state, as court was not bound by any recommendation, plea agreement was not illusory; III.

State v. Olivas, 122 Wn.2d 73 (1993)

Mandatory DNA blood draw, required by RCW 43.43.754 following plea or conviction of a sex or violent offense, where the result may be used for possible future punishment, does not violate due process, State v. Surge, 160 Wn.2d 65 (2007), see also: State v. Freeman, 124 Wn.App. 413 (2004), even where defendant was not advised during plea colloquy, as possible future punishment is not a definite or immediate consequence of the testing, and defendant did not seek to withdraw plea, see: State v. Ward, 123 Wn.2d 488, 512-15 (1994); 8-0.

Godinez v. Moran, 125 L.Ed.2d 321 (1993)

Competency standard for entering plea of guilty is same as competency to be tried, i.e., sufficient present ability to consult with counsel with reasonable degree of rational understanding plus rational as well as factual understanding of proceedings; 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Ness, 70 Wn.App. 817 (1993)

Loss of right to bear arms is a collateral consequence of pleading guilty to a felony about which defendant need not be advised at time of plea; a subsequent federal felon in possession of firearm charge, 18 U.S.C. § 922(g), is not grounds to withdraw prior plea, cf.: State v. Barton, 93 Wn.2d 301 (1980); an Alford plea is valid as long as the record contains "strong evidence of actual guilt," In re Montoya, 109 Wn.2d 270, 280 (1987), from any reliable source, including the prosecutor's statement, State v. Saas, 118 Wn.2d 37, 43, State v. Osborne, 102 Wn.2d 87, 95 (1984); III.

State v. Stowe, 71 Wn.App. 182 (1993)

Defendant enters Alford plea upon counsel's erroneous advice that such a plea would not automatically result in discharge from United States Army; held: while voluntary nature of a guilty plea is not automatically destroyed because of erroneous advice by counsel, McMann v. Richardson, 25 L.Ed.2d 763 (1970), here record reflects defendant specifically asked about the collateral consequence of dishonorable discharge and relied upon counsel's response in making his decision to plead, thus counsel's performance was deficient, defendant has shown prejudice, defendant's motion to withdraw plea must be granted; cf.: State v. Holley, 75 Wn.App. 191, 196-9 (1994); II.

State v. Tracy, 73 Wn.App. 386 (1994)

Sentencing court may not impose restitution upon a defendant who pleads guilty unless defendant is advised of that possibility prior to entering plea, State v. Cameron, 30 Wn.App. 229, 234 (1981), State v. Raleigh, 50 Wn.App. 248, 253 (1988); here, guilty plea form advised defendant court will order restitution if crime resulted in injury, but Division III finds that "[p]rior to entering his plea, however, Mr. Tracy was neither advised of the possibility of restitution nor that restitution might be ordered," case involved stabbing, defendant pled guilty to unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270; remedy is to strike restitution order, distinguishing State v. Cameron, supra, at 234, see also: State v. Acevedo, 137 Wn.2d 179, 205-6 (1999).

State v. Cortez, 73 Wn.App. 838, 841 (1994)

Where plea form contains immigration consequences, RCW 10.40.200(2), trial court need not orally warn defendant of those consequences, at least where record reflects defendant has read form, cf.: State v. Chervenell, 99 Wn.2d 309, 314 (1983), State v. Chetty, 167 Wn.App. 432 (2012), see: State v. Littlefair, 112 Wn.App. 749, 763-69 (2002); III.

State v. Smith, 74 Wn.App. 844 (1994)

Neither information charging felony murder-assault nor plea statement contain a mens rea element, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: assault itself indicates an intentional act, State v. Osborne, 102 Wn.2d 87, 94 (1984), factual basis adopted at plea colloquy discloses defendant understood assault encompasses intentional conduct; II.

State v. Clark, 75 Wn.App. 827 (1994)

Sex offender registration requirement is a collateral consequence of pleading guilty, and failure to advise is not grounds for withdrawal of plea, at 831; motion to withdraw is timely if made within one year of plea, at 830-1, RCW 10.73.090, State v. Brand, 65 Wn.App. 166, 170-1, rev'd on other grounds, 120 Wn.2d 365, 370 (1992); I.

State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919 (1995)

Defendant offers to plead guilty at arraignment, prosecutor's motion to continue in order to provide defense further discovery is granted over defense objection, before next hearing prosecutor amends to a greater charge; held: while defendant has right to plead guilty at arraignment, CrR 4.2(a), State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 354 (1980), trial court's concern the plea was not knowing because of defendant's right to review Brady material is grounds for continuance, amendment to greater offense later was proper, see: State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901 (2000); 6-2.

State v. D.T.M., 78 Wn.App. 216 (1995)

Where defendant enters an Alford plea and factual basis rests solely on statement of a witness who later recants by affidavit, trial court must hold a hearing to evaluate victim's credibility, State v. Scott, 150 Wn.App. 281, 294-99 (2009), and, if she adheres to facts in recantation under oath, subject to cross-examination, court must permit withdrawal of plea,, Pers. Restraint of Spencer, 152 Wn.App. 698 (2009), see: State v. Rolax, 84 Wn.2d 836, 838 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Wright v. Morris, 85 Wn.2d 899 (1975), State v. Powell, 51 Wash. 372 (1909), State v. York, 41 Wn.App. 538 (1985), State v. Landon, 69 Wn.App. 83 (1993), State v. Arnold, 81 Wn.App. 379 (1996), Pers. Restraint of Reise, 146 Wn.App. 772 (2008); III.

State v. Thomas, 79 Wn.App. 32, 35-41 (1995)

Defendant pleads guilty to rendering criminal assistance, agrees to testify against co-defendant, state agrees to file no other charges, defendant refuses to testify, state submits defendant breached, defendant seeks to withdraw plea, state objects, insists upon enforcement of agreement and files robbery charge; held: where defendant breaches plea agreement, he has no right to have the agreement enforced, In re James, 96 Wn.2d 847, 850 (1982), State v. Hall, 32 Wn.App. 108, 110 (1982), State v. Gilchrest, 25 Wn.App. 427, 428 (1980); state may elect to enforce or rescind; here, because state chose to enforce the agreement in spite of defendant's breach, state could not properly charge robbery, which must be dismissed, see: State v. Armstrong, 109 Wn.App. 458 (2001); II.

State v. Zumwalt, 79 Wn.App. 124 (1995), overruled, in part, State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 520 n. 5 (2006)

Court should not accept plea statements that parrot the information, as essential facts underlying the elements must be included; defendant may introduce evidence that a facially valid guilty plea was involuntary, state may not rebut defendant's claim with extrinsic evidence unless defendant is raising a collateral attack, at 131 n. 7, State v. Frederick, 100 Wn.2d 550 (1983); I.

In re Paschke, 80 Wn.App. 439 (1996), remanded, on other grounds, 156 Wn.2d 1030 (2006)

A conviction's later use for confinement under the Sexually Violent Predator's Act is a collateral consequence to the prior guilty plea about which defendant need not be advised when he pleaded guilty, State v. Ward, 123 Wn.2d 488, 512 (1994), State v. Gregg, 9 Wn.App.2d 569, rev. granted, 194 Wn.2d 1002 (2019); II.

State v. Harrell, 80 Wn.App. 802 (1996)

Motion to withdraw guilty plea is a critical stage requiring counsel or valid waiver of counsel; implicit in trial court's decision to hold a hearing on a motion to withdraw plea is a finding that sufficient facts were alleged to warrant a hearing, cf.: State v. Quy Dinh Nguyen, 179

Wn.2d 271 (2014), but see: State v. Winston, 105 Wn.App. 318 (2001), State v. Forest, 125 Wn.App. 702 (2005); I.

State v. Ross, 129 Wn.2d 279 (1996)

Mandatory community placement, RCW 9.94A.120, constitutes a direct consequence of a guilty plea, failure to inform defendant renders plea invalid, CrR 4.2(f), State v. Kissee, 88 Wn.App. 817 (1997), State v. Rawson, 94 Wn.App. 293 (1999), State v. Hurt, 107 Wn.App. 816 (2001), State v. Olivera-Avila, 89 Wn.App. 320 (1997) (timeliness of motion to withdraw plea), Pers. Restraint of Isadore, 151 Wn.2d 294 (2004), see: State v. Acevedo, 137 Wn.2d 179 (1999), State v. Restraint of Snively, 180 Wn.2d 28 (2014), trial court reversed for failing to honor defendant's choice to withdraw plea as remedy; 9-0.

State v. Arnold, 81 Wn.App. 379 (1996)

Defendant pleads guilty to assault, factual basis states that defendant had bodily contact without consent, lacks mens rea element, victim later recants, defendant seeks withdrawal of plea; held: record establishes that trial court relied upon probable cause certificate in addition to guilty plea statement at time plea was taken, thus factual basis was sufficient, distinguishing State v. Osborne, 102 Wn.2d 87, 96 (1984); recanting victim is not grounds for withdrawing a non-Alford guilty plea, Pers. Restraint of Crabtree, 141 Wn.2d 577, 588-89 (2000), Pers. Restraint of Reise, 146 Wn.App. 772 (2008), see also: State v. Ice, 138 Wn.App. 744 (2007), State v. Scott, 150 Wn.App. 281 (2009), independent evidence corroborated victim's original allegation, distinguishing State v. D.T.M., 78 Wn.App. 216 (1995), trial court may determine credibility of child-victim's recantation, State v. Macon, 128 Wn.2d 784 (1996), Pers. Restraint of Clements, 125 Wn.App. 634 (2005); I.

State v. Branch, 129 Wn.2d 635, 639-44 (1996)

Failure to sign plea form is not grounds to withdraw plea where record establishes fully colloquy and defendant orally ratifies plea; where plea statement is complete and defendant acknowledges in court that he had a copy in front of him, read it and went over it with his attorney, understood it, knew he was giving up the rights listed and had not been threatened or promised anything, then plea is valid, see: In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203, 206-7 (1980), Wood v. Morris, 87 Wn.2d 501, 508 (1976); 9-0.

State v. Wakefield, 130 Wn.2d 464, 471-5 (1996)

In colloquy prior to entry of plea to reduced charge, trial court tells defendant that, in her opinion, she would be sentenced within standard range, at sentencing court imposes exceptional sentence greater than standard range, defense moves for specific performance; held: where trial court promises a sentence and then reneges, plea is involuntary and defendant may withdraw it; specific performance is not a remedy, as prosecutor did not breach the plea agreement, Pers. Restraint of Murillo, 134 Wn.App. 521 (2006), see: State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); 6-3.

State v. Kissee, 88 Wn.App. 817 (1997)

Defendant pleads guilty to luring, RCW 9A.40.090, state agrees as part of bargain to recommend SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.120, if defendant is amenable to treatment, at sentencing court determines that luring is not a sex offense, thus defendant is ineligible for SSOSA, denies motion to withdraw plea; held: SSOSA is a direct sentencing consequence, where all parties erred as to eligibility, plea was not knowing and voluntary, thus defendant is entitled to withdraw plea; II.

State v. McCollum, 88 Wn.App. 977, 981-3 (1997)

Defendant seeks to withdraw guilty pleas, claiming ineffective assistance as he claims he only met with counsel twice, did not go over plea agreement, counsel did not investigate adequately, another attorney was present at plea; held: defendant failed to meet burden and overcome presumption that counsel provided reasonable assistance, see: State v. Quy Dinh Nguyen, 179 Wn.2d 271 (2014); II.

State v. Holm, 91 Wn.App. 429, 434-39 (1998)

Prosecutor mails defense counsel guilty plea offer expiring at omnibus hearing which, if accepted, would result in sentence range of one to three months, defense counsel does not receive offer, never discusses with defendant pleading nor does defense counsel initiate plea bargaining, defendant misses numerous appointments with defense counsel, following trial defendant is sentenced to 75 months; held: under the facts of this case, counsel was not ineffective in failing to negotiate a plea offer or discuss the possibility with defendant; "situations might arise in which defense counsel must engage in plea bargaining without first consulting with the client," at 439, but here, defendant's failure to keep appointments precluded discussions; I.

Pers. Restraint of Breedlove, 138 Wn.2d 298 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty to lesser offense, agrees to exceptional sentence, appeals; held: where trial court approves a plea agreement as consistent with the interests of justice and in conformance with SRA, the stipulation to an exceptional sentence is a substantial and compelling reason justifying an exceptional sentence, State v. Cooper, 63 Wn.App. 8 (1991), State v. Hilyard, 63 Wn.App. 413 (1991), but see: State v. Gaines, 121 Wn.2d 687, 696-703 (2004), State v. Gronnert, 122 Wn.App. 214 (2004), trial court must still enter written findings; by agreeing to the sentence, defendant waives right to appeal, State v. Dillon, 142 Wn.App. 269 (2007); 5-1-3.

State v. Stough, 96 Wn.App. 480 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty, year later seeks to withdraw plea, at hearing trial court finds that counsel who represented defendant at the plea had been involved in a sexual relationship with her and that she had not understood her plea in part because of the "inappropriate relationship"; held: "a lawyer performs deficiently by commencing a sexual relationship with an accused during the course of the representation," at 487, trial court's finding that defendant did not understand her plea is supported by substantial evidence, thus defendant showed a "manifest injustice" validating withdrawal of plea, CrR. 4.2(f), State v. Taylor, 83 Wn.2d 594 (1974), cf.: State v. McDermond, 112 Wn.App. 239 (2002); II.

Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581, 587-90 (1999)

Where court, in guilty plea colloquy, advises defendant that if he is not a citizen a plea may subject him to deportation, advice is sufficient and subsequent deportation proceedings do not create grounds to withdraw plea, State v. Malik, 37 Wn.App. 414 (1984), Pers. Restraint of Ramos, 181 Wn.App. 743 (2014), but see: State v. Sandoval, 171 Wn.2d 165 (2011), Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010); 7-2.

State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901 (2000)

Defendant is charged with manslaughter in district court, negotiates an agreement with prosecutor that he would be charged in superior court with two misdemeanors and, upon a plea of guilty, state would recommend 90-day, concurrent sentences; at arraignment, superior court judge refuses to accept plea agreement, arraigns defendant on the two misdemeanors, court enters pleas of not guilty without objection, state subsequently is allowed to amend to manslaughter, defendant files interlocutory appeal; held: court had authority at arraignment to reject a plea agreement that is not "consistent with the interests of justice and with the prosecuting standards," RCW 9.94A.090, see: State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919 (1995), distinguishing State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1 (1980), however once court rejected plea agreement, it was obliged to give defendant opportunity to withdraw or maintain plea, entry of not guilty pleas sua sponte was error, see: State v. Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001); reverses State v. Conwell, 96 Wn.App. 457 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Henderson, 99 Wn.App. 369 (2000)

At plea, state agrees to recommend 26 months, low end of standard range, which court imposes; DOC requests resentencing due to error of law, parties determine that low end of range is 41 months, state recommends exceptional sentence of 26 months, court imposes 41 months, defendant demands specific performance sentence of 26 months; held: where defendant is not misled by the state and state is not responsible for the mistake, then trial court need not impose the recommended sentence in spite of a contrary statute, State v. Morley, 35 Wn.App. 45, 48 (1983), In re Pers. Restraint of Powell, 117 Wn.2d 175 (1991), State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Murillo, 134 Wn.App. 521 (2006), see: State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); II.

Defendant pleads guilty to assault with deadly weapon enhancement, to wit: hands and feet, at sentencing defendant argues he cannot be sentenced for the enhancement because, under these facts, hands and feet do not meet the statutory definition of a deadly weapon, RCW 9.94A.125; held: where a guilty plea is entered knowingly and voluntarily, factual deficiencies underlying the agreement will not invalidate it, In re Pers. Restraint of Barr, 102 Wn.2d 265, 269-71 (1984), State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354, 357-58 (1980), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450, 456 (2001), where defendant receives some benefit from the bargain, State v. Bao Sheng Zhao, 157 Wn.2d 188 (2006), State v. Wilson, 16 Wn.App.2d 537 (2021), see also: State v. Zumwalt, 79 Wn.App. 124 (1995), , disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 520 n.5 (2006), *but see: Pers. Restr. State v. S.M., 100 Wn.App. 401, 412-13 (2000)

Duty to register as a sex offender is a collateral consequence, thus constitution does not require that counsel advise a client about this duty before entering a plea, State v. Ward, 123 Wn.2d 488, 513-14 (1994); II.

Pers. Restraint of Thompson, 141 Wn.2d 712 (2000)

Defendant who pleads guilty to a crime that did not exist at the time the violation was alleged to have happened may withdraw the plea, remedy is dismissal without prejudice, even if defendant received some benefit of a plea bargain, distinguishing State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354, 356-57 (1980); 9-0 (6-3 on remedy).

State v. Walsh, 143 Wn.2d 1 (2001)

A challenge to the voluntariness of a plea is not waived if defendant fails to move to withdraw plea and proceeds to sentencing after it becomes clear that the plea is based upon a misunderstanding of the sentence range, In re Pers. Restraint of Hews, 99 Wn.2d 80 (1983), State v. Christen, 116 Wn.App. 827, 832-33 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Wilson, 102 Wn.App. 161 (2000)

At plea, defendant is told by state that he is eligible for work ethic camp; at sentencing, state discovers that a prior VUCSA was for delivery rather than possession, thus defendant ineligible for work ethic camp, court grants specific performance; held: because defendant was aware that the prior VUCSA was for delivery and failed to correct the error, specific performance would be unjust to the state, State v. Skiggn, 58 Wn.App. 831, 838 (1990), see: State v. Codiga, 162 Wn.2d 912 (2008), see: State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011), remanded for defendant to withdraw plea; I.

State v. Paul, 103 Wn.App. 487 (2000)

In written plea statement, sentence range is left blank, defendant acknowledges that there are disputed prior convictions, plea statement provides for prosecutor's recommendation, which was within range if all alleged priors counted, defendant orally acknowledges at plea that while there is a dispute, state will recommend high end and that new convictions may increase range; defendant moves to withdraw plea, prior to hearing pleads guilty in another county to a felony which, at sentencing, increased range; held: omission of range does not render plea involuntary where defendant knew of dispute, was informed of the highest possible range if all priors counted and that subsequent convictions before sentence could affect range, and that the ultimate sentence rested with trial judge; II.

State v. Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001)

Juvenile, charged in the alternative with two crimes, waives arraignment, at next hearing offers an Alford plea to one of the crimes, trial court finds the plea to be valid, but refuses to accept it because respondent should accept responsibility for his actions; held: because no court rule deems a juvenile arraignment waiver to be a not guilty plea, cf.: CrRLJ 4.1(d)(2), then respondent had the right to plead guilty, CrR 4.2(a), State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901, 907 (2000), State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1, 4 (1980), and trial court erred in refusing to accept the plea; where charges are in the alternative, respondent may plead "as charged" to either one of the crimes, distinguishing State v. Bowerman, 115 Wn.2d 794, 800 (1990) disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); III.

State v. Holgren, 106 Wn.App. 477, 480-81 (2001)

Where plea agreement indicates that at the time of the plea the sentencing consequences of prior convictions was uncertain and that defendant understands that prosecutor's recommendation could change and that standard range could be higher, then defendant is not entitled to specific performance; I.

State v. Trickler, 106 Wn.App. 727, 731-32 (2001)

During voir dire, defendant offers to plead guilty to one charge and proceed to trial on another, court declines to accept plea; held: once defendant has pleaded not guilty, trial court is not required to accept a change of plea, State v. James, 108 Wn.2d 483, 488 (1987); III.

State v. Armstrong, 109 Wn.App. 458 (2001)

In plea agreement, state agrees not to file other charges, defendant specifically agrees that if he fails to appear for sentencing, state is released from agreement but defendant is bound by plea; defendant fails to appear, court denies state's motion to add charges unless defendant is allowed to withdraw plea; held: where plea agreement is unambiguous and state proves defendant breached, then state is no longer bound by its obligations to forgo additional charges, defendant may not withdraw plea, distinguishing State v. Thomas, 79 Wn.App. 32 (1995); 2-1, II.

United States v. Ruiz, 153 L.Ed.2d 586 (2002)

Defendant is offered a reduced sentence on an early plea if, inter alia, she waives the right to receive impeachment information relating to government witneses, defendant declines, later pleads guilty without a bargain and demands same reduced sentence; held: while a defendant has the right to exculpatory impeachment material prior to a trial, the Fifth, Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments do not require that impeachment material be disclosed prior to a guilty plea, Pers. Restraint of Delmarter, 124 Wn.App. 154, 167-69 (2004), as the information is more closely related to the fairness of trial than to the voluntariness of the plea; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Fawcett, 147 Wn.2d 298 (2002)

At plea hearing, defendant is told he will have "at least" one year of community placement as condition of SSOSA, although law required two years; six months after sentencing, court revokes SSOSA, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: in PRP petitioner must show actual prejudice, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Isadore, 151 Wn.2d 294 (2004); here, could only have been prejudiced if SSOSA was revoked in the second year of community placement, thus PRP dismissed; 9-0.

Before sentencing, parties discover that standard range is lower than was contemplated at time of guilty plea, trial court allows defendant to withdraw plea; held: trial court need not find a manifest necessity to allow withdrawal of plea, see: State v. Mendoza, 157 Wn.2d 582 (2006), State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 431, 436-39 (2007), cf.: State v. Taylor, 83 Wn.2d 594 (1974); test:

(1) was defendant incompletely or inaccurately advised about a consequence of the plea, (2) could the defective advice have materially affected defendant's decision to plead, (3) did the defective advice materially affect defendant's decision?, see: United States v. Dominguez Benitez, 159 L.Ed.2d 157 (2004), *State v. Counsel, contrary to instructions on plea form, CrR 4.2(g), strikes immigration consequences paragraph, defendant-resident alien pleads guilty, more than a year later, subject to deportation, seeks to withdraw plea; held: time limitation on collateral attack, RCW 10.73.090, can be equitably tolled, *In re Pers. State v. Christen, 116 Wn.App. 827 (2003)

At plea, defendant is told that indicated sentence range could go up or down "if they find additional criminal history," at sentencing range decreases, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: where defendant is accurately advised at plea, he assumes the risk that range may go up or down at sentencing, State v. McDermond, 112 Wn.App. 239, 248 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Matthews, 128 Wn.App. 267 (2005), State v. Calhoun, 134 Wn.App. 84, 91-94 (2006), *State v. State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003)

By stipulating that an out-of-state drug offense is equivalent to a Washington felony, defendant waives the opportunity to challenge comparability on appeal, as defense is not agreeing to a punishment in excess of statutory authority, but rather is resolving a factual issue, State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 220 (2004), State v. McDougall, 132 Wn.App. 609, 612-13 (2006), State v. Foster, 140 Wn.App. 266 (2007), State v. Collins, 144 Wn.App. 547 (2008), *State v. State v. Williams, 117 Wn.App. 390 (2003)

A plea is not invalid if entered pursuant to a plea agreement that includes leniency for a third party or in response to a prosecutor's justifiable threat to prosecute a third party if the plea is not entered, State v. Cameron, 30 Wn.App. 229 (1981); prosecutor is obliged to inform the court that a plea bargain is a "package deal," whereupon court must specifically inquire whether defendant was pressured by co-defendant; mere fact that defendant felt pressure to plead guilty to assist the co-defendant is not a basis to withdraw the plea as long as the plea was voluntary and of defendant's own volition; I.

State v. Adams, 119 Wn.App. 373 (2003)

At plea, state agrees to recommend Special Sex Offender Sentencing Alternative (SSOSA) if defendant obtains evaluation; at sentencing, state concludes that evaluator was not qualified, defendant is sentenced to prison after which it is determined that defendant was never eligible for SSOSA, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: defendant was incorrectly advised about consequence of plea and the defective advice did materially affect decision to plead, State v. McDermond, 112 Wn.App. 239, 247 (2002), thus defendant must be allowed to withdraw plea unless state can show that withdrawal would be unfair, State v. Miller, 110 Wn.2d 528, 535 (1988), abrogated, in part, State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); because trial court is statutorily prohibited from imposing SSOSA, specific performance is not an option, State v. Barber,supra.; II.

United States v. Dominguez Benitez, 159 L.Ed.2d 157 (2004)

To withdraw a guilty plea because trial court failed to give one of the warnings required by Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 11, defendant is obliged to show a reasonable probability that, but for the error, he would not have entered the plea, State v. Aaron, 95 Wn.App. 298 (1999), but see: Pers. Restraint of Isadore, 151 Wn.2d 294 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Haydel, 122 Wn.App. 365 (2004)

Trial court grants defendant's motion to withdraw guilty plea to attempted assault 1° because he was not told, at the time of plea, that state had burden to disprove self defense beyond a reasonable doubt; held: because defendant presented no evidence of self defense, state had no obligation to inform him of its burden of proof on his "purely hypothetical claim at the time" of the plea, even though defense had disclosed self defense in omnibus application; I.

State v. Davis, 125 Wn.App. 59 (2004)

For purposes of a motion to withdraw a plea, CrR 4.2(f), sentence is not imposed until the judgment and sentence is signed by the court, even if it is orally stated, State v. Hampton, 107 Wn.2d 403 (1986), State ex. Rel. Echtle v. Card, 148 Wash. 270 (1928); written statement on plea of guilty, CrR 4.2(g), is prima facie verification of a constitutional plea and, when supported by a court's oral inquiry on the record, "the presumption of voluntariness is well nigh irrefutable," at 68 ¶17, State v. Perez, 33 Wn.App. 258, 261-62 (1982); I.

State v. Robinson, 153 Wn.2d 689 (2005)

Defendant is not entitled to counsel at public expense at a motion to withdraw a guilty plea after sentencing, CrR 7.8, unless the trial court makes a preliminary finding that there are grounds for relief, see: State v. Quy Dinh Nguyen, 179 Wn.2d 271 (2014); 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Clements, 125 Wn.App. 634 (2005)

Following Alford plea, victim recants, defendant moves to withdraw plea, trial court finds that independent evidence supported the plea, recantation was unreliable, denies motion; held: where a plea does not rest solely on retracted evidence, it is within discretion of trial court to allow withdrawal of plea, see: State v. Rolax, 84 Wn.2d 836 (1974)(new trial analysis), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Reise, 146 Wn.App. 772 (2008), *Pers. State v. Forest, 125 Wn.App. 702 (2005)

Motion to withdraw guilty plea, unaccompanied by an affidavit or sworn declaration, is not properly before the trial court; motion to withdraw a guilty plea is a collateral attack and is thus not a critical stage at which counsel must be appointed, State v. Winston, 105 Wn.App. 318 (2001), but see: State v. Harrell, 80 Wn.App. 802 (1996); II.

Pers. Restraint of Fonseca, 132 Wn.App. 464 (2006)

Defendant pleads guilty with DOSA recommendation, at sentencing court determines defendant is ineligible due to prior violent crime; held: DOSA is a direct consequence, ineligibility is a mutual mistake, thus defendant may withdraw plea or "ask for specific performance," but see: State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); III.

State v. Kennar, 135 Wn.App. 68 (2006)

Defendant pleads guilty to murder 2º, is advised maximum sentence is life, seeks to withdraw plea claiming he was misadvised because the maximum sentence is actually the top of the standard range; held: at a guilty plea, defendant must be advised of the statutory maximum, and the anticipated standard range based upon the criminal history known at the time of the plea; at sentencing, the court determines the offender score and sets the actual standard range, see also: Pers. Restraint of McKiearnan, 165 Wn.2d 777 (2009); I.

State v. Knotek, 136 Wn.App. 412 (2006)

Defendant pleads guilty to felonies, prior to sentencing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004) is decided, defendant does not seek to withdraw plea, appeals claiming she was misinformed about maximum sentence since Blakely made it impossible to impose an exceptional sentence; held: when defendant enters a plea agreement under the erroneous belief that her standard ranges are higher than they are in fact, she is not entitled to withdraw her plea under a claim that it was invalidly entered, Pers. Restraint of Matthews, 128 Wn.App. 267, 273 (2005), see: State v. Codiga, 162 Wn.2d 912 (2008), Pers. Restraint of Toledo-Sotelo, 176 Wn.2d 759 (2013); II.

State v. Malone, 136 Wn.App. 545, 550-55 (2007)

Defendant pleads guilty pursuant to plea bargain, agreeing to offender score, at sentencing defendant questions offender score, state moves to vacate plea, defendant joins in motion, trial court grants it, at trial defendant is convicted of more counts, now seeks to set aside vacation of plea; held: "[i]f a defendant pleads guilty in the mistaken belief that he can renegotiate an agreed minimum offender score at sentencing, the court does not abuse its discretion in vacating the plea," at 555 ¶19; 2-1, III.

Defendant pleads guilty to two counts, state agrees to recommend 14 months concurrent, range on count II was erroneously calculated at 0-12 months when in fact it was 14-18 months, defendant sentenced to 14 months, motion to withdraw plea denied; held: even though a plea agreement sets forth an incorrect range, where defendant receives the same punishment under the correct range, trial court properly exercised discretion in finding no manifest injustice, Pers. Restraint of Toledo-Sotelo, 176 Wn.2d 759 (2013); trial court cannon allow withdrawal of plea to an individual count where the plea agreement is a package deal, State v. Turley, 149 Wn.2d 395 (2003), Pers. Restraint of Bradley, 165 Wn.2d 934 (2009), *State v. State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007)

Pursuant to plea bargain, defendant and state sign an "understanding of defendant's criminal history" setting forth priors, at sentencing defense challenges offender score, state seeks to vacate plea for defendant's breach, judge gives defendant a choice of being sentenced under what defendant believed was an improperly calculated offender score or vacation, defendant agrees to vacation of plea, goes to trial, is convicted of more offenses, appeals seeking specific performance; held: trial court cannot vacate a plea agreement without finding a manifest injustice, CrR 4.2(f), and without finding a breach, thus trial court abused its discretion; defendant cannot by way of a negotiated plea agree to a sentence in excess of that authorized by law, Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861, 872 (2002), cf.: State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), State v. Collins, 144 Wn.App. 547 (2008), but see: State v. Ross, 152 Wn.App. 220 (2004); when court wrongfully grants state's motion to vacate a plea, defendant can choose remedy which, here, is specific performance, State v. Tourtellotte, 88 Wn.2d 579, 584 (1977); prior opinion, State v. Malone, 136 Wn.App. 545 (2007), withdrawn; III.

State v. Blanks, 139 Wn.App. 543, 548-50 (2007)

Defendant enters plea, argues that state incorrectly calculated offender score because priors were the same criminal conduct, trial court agrees and reduces score, defendant does not expressly move to withdraw plea at or before sentencing but seeks withdrawal of plea on appeal; held: where an offender score is miscalculated, defendant may withdraw his plea even if the range is lower, State v. Mendoza, 157 Wn.2d 582, 587 (2006), but only if defendant affirmatively seeks to withdraw his plea in the trial court; determination of same criminal conduct is a question for the trial court, not attorneys in plea negotiations and is not an error in computing the score that surprises defendant and renders his plea unknowing; II.

Where written statement of defendant on plea of guilty is complete and defendant acknowledges his understanding, trial court need not orally question defendant to ascertain his understanding of the elements of the crime and consequences of the plea, *Pers. State v. Collins, 144 Wn.App. 547 (2008)

Defendant agrees to plead guilty to reduced charge, agrees that criminal history is accurate, before sentencing declares that he will challenge comparability of out-of-state convictions included in agreed criminal history, trial court vacates plea and reinstates original charge; held: where defendant affirmatively acknowledges that a foreign conviction is properly included in offender score, trial court need not require further proof of classification, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 483 n.5 (1999), State v. Ross, 152 Wn.2d 220 (2004), State v. Hickman, 116 Wn.App. 902 (2003), State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007), here the waiver addresses a factual matter, i.e., proof of comparability as opposed to washed out priors, thus defendant breached and the court's decision to vacate was proper; I.

State v. A.N.J., 168 Wn.2d 91 (2010)

Twelve-year old respondent pleads guilty to child molestation 1°, counsel having erroneously advised respondent that he "believes" the conviction may be removed from his record, only speaks to respondent in the presence of his parents, does no investigation, trial court fails to ascertain if respondent understood that mere contact with the genitals of another is not sufficient to prove the crime; held: juvenile sex offenses never go away, RCW 9.94A.525(2)(2008), while failure to advise that the conviction would remain on respondent's record may not rise to a manifest injustice itself, where respondent is misinformed, he should be allowed to withdraw his plea; failure of counsel to consult with a client in a confidential manner is a factor that may be considered in deciding whether a plea is voluntary; public defense contract that requires counsel to pay investigative, expert and conflict fees out of the defender's fees is evidence of ineffective assistance; 9-0.

At plea, defendant is informed that he will be sentenced to community custody, judgment and sentence has boilerplate language which states defendant is sentenced to community custody for certain offenses which do not apply, court later amends, ex parte, J&S to delete the community custody language, ten years later defendant seeks to withdraw plea, claiming judgment and sentence is invalid on its face, RCW 10.73.090(1); held: PRP more than a year after sentencing may only be considered if J&S is invalid on its face, not whether plea documents are facially invalid, *Pers. At plea, counsel advises resident alien to accept plea bargain as he would not be immediately deported and could retain an attorney to ameliorate immigration consequences, after deportation proceedings begin defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: erroneous immigration advice is ineffective assistance, Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), Lee v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1958, 198 L. Ed. 2d 476 (2017); where immigration law is "truly clear" that a conviction of the crime would subject defendant to deportation, a competent attorney must correctly advise or seek consultation to correctly advise, State v. Martinez, 161 Wn.App. 436 (2011), Pers. Restraint of Ramos, 181 Wn.App. 743 (2014), Lee v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1958, 198 L. Ed. 2d 476 (2017), see: State v. Chetty, 167 Wn.App. 432 (2012), Pers. Restraint of Yung-Cheng Tsai, 183 Wn.2d 91 (2015), State v. Chetty, 184 Wn.App. 607 (2014), cf.: Chaidez v. United States, 568 U.S. 342, 133 S.Ct. 1103 185 L.Ed.2d 149 (2013); 9-0.

Before plea, defendant accepts prosecutor's criminal history calculation, prior to sentencing parties discover undisclosed juvenile convictions which defendant believed had washed but, due to a law change in 2002, no longer wash, tripling standard range, defendant immediately moves to withdraw plea, trial court finds that his failure to disclose priors was based upon a mistake of law, thus plea was not knowing, voluntarily and intelligent, state appeals; held: complicated SRA plus defendant's not knowing the legal impact of the law change impacting the offender score plus trial court's determination that plea was not knowing and thus allowing plea to stand would be a manifest injustice all support trial court's exercise of discretion, see: State v. A.N.J., 168 Wn.2d 91 (2010), State v. Codiga, 162 Wn.2d 91 (2008); reverses State v. Robinson, 150 Wn.App. 934 (2009); 5-4.

State v. Wilson, 162 Wn.App. 409 (2011)

Defendant pleads guilty to VUCSA, prior to sentencing Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009) is decided, trial court denies motion to withdraw plea; held: a plea of guilty waives any search issue on appeal even if law changes, State v. Brandenburg, 153 Wn.App. 944, 947-48 (2009), McMann v. Richardson, 397 U.S. 759, 774, 25 L.Ed.2d 763 (1970), and even if defendant has not been sentenced; II.

State v. Chambers, 176 Wn.2d 573 (2013)

Defendant is charged in three informations with numerous crimes, prosecutor writes to counsel offering a plea bargain encompassing all informations, threatening to amend upwards absent a plea, defendant pleads guilty to some crimes on one day, is sentenced, pleads guilty to others another day, is sentenced consistent with the plea agreement, trial court allows defendant to withdraw pleas to some but not all charges; held: prosecutor's letter encompassing all of the charges which defendant acknowledged at sentencing establish that the plea agreement is indivisible and thus defendant must seek to withdraw pleas to all counts in all informations to obtain relief, Pers. Restraint of Bradley, 165 Wn.2d 934 (2009), State v. Ermels, 156 Wn.2d 528 (2006), see: State v. Coombes, 191 Wn.App. 241, 255-58 (2015); affirms State v. Chambers, 163 Wn.App. 54 (2011); 6-3.

State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 124-30 (2012)

Defendant is convicted and sentenced, as a juvenile, of indecent liberties and, on a separate occasion, burglary, after which legislature extends prohibition of possessing firearms to juvenile felony adjudications, moves to withdraw burglary plea after being charged with felon in possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a)(i), trial court finds manifest injustice, CrR 4.2, because defendant had not been advised at time of plea that he would lose his right to possess a firearm, dismisses firearm charges; held: meeting only the manifest injustice standard of CrR 4.2(f) is insufficient when considering a post-judgment motion to withdraw a guilty plea; whether a plea is voluntary is determined by whether defendant was sufficiently informed of the direct consequences of the plea that existed at the time of the plea, loss of firearm right at time of plea was not a consequence, thus failure to advise defendant of loss of right does not render plea involuntary; reverses, in part, State v. Lamb, 163 Wn.App. 614 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Gomez Cervantes, 169 Wn.App. 428 (2012)

In a motion to vacate a judgment and sentence, CrR 7.8, a bare statement that "counsel did not inform him of the immigration implications of his plea" is insufficient to show the "deficient performance" prong to establish ineffective assistance, see: Pers. Restraint of Rice, 117 Wn.2d 876, 886 (1992); III.

Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), requiring counsel to provide advice about risk of deportation, is not retroactive, *State v. Pers. Restraint of Toledo-Sotelo, 176 Wn.2d 759 (2013)

Seriousness level in plea is incorrect but court finds correct standard range, defendant files untimely PRP; held: while a judgment and sentence containing incorrect range or seriousness level may make the judgment facially invalid, Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861 (2002), where defendant cannot show both facial invalidity and prejudice, Pers. Restraint of Coats, 173 Wn.2d 123, 13 (2011), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 77-80 (2015), an untimely PRP shall be dismissed; because standard range was correct, judgment and sentence was valid on its face; 9-0.

State v. Martinez-Leon, 174 Wn.App. 753 (2013)

In 2006 defendant pleads guilty to a felony and a gross misdemeanor, plea form contains "grounds for deportation" language, trial court engages in colloquy without specifically mentioning immigration consequences, finds defendant entered plea knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently, sentences defendant, inter alia, to 365 days suspended, in 2011 defendant seeks to withdraw plea, prior counsel declares she had a general discussion about possible immigration consequences and that she did not seek a sentence of 364 days because she was unaware that a 365 days sentence is considered an aggravated felony for immigration purposes; held: defendant's untimely motion to withdraw the plea, CrR 7.8, RCW 10.73.090, does not become timely per RCW 10.73.100(6) because there was no "significant change in the law," Chaidez v. United States, 568 U.S. 342, 133 S.Ct. 1103 185 L.Ed.2d 149 (2013), but see: Pers. Restraint of Yung-Cheng Tsai, 183 Wn.2d 91 (2015), *Pers. Restraint of Orantes,*197 Wn.App. 737 (2017); because trial counsel was aware defendant was not a citizen, discussed potential deportation consequences, and plea form advised of same, equitable tolling doctrine to the time limit is inapplicable, distinguishing State v. Littlefair, 112 Wn.App. 749 (2002); trial counsel's failure to advise that a 365 day sentence would result in definite deportation was not required before Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), which does not apply retroactively, but see: Pers. Restraint of Garcia-Mendoza, 196 Wn.2d 836 (2021); II.

Pers. Restraint of Stockwell, 179 Wn.2d 588 (2014)

Defendant is advised at plea that maximum sentence is 20 years, actual maximum is life, defendant files PRP seeking to withdraw plea; held: while maximum sentence is a direct consequence of a plea, Pers. Restraint of Bradley, 165 Wn2d 934 (2009), defendant must show actual prejudice when challenging plea in PRP, State v. Weyrich, 163 Wn.2d 554 (2008), Pers. Restraint of Yates, 180 Wn.2d 33 (2014), State v. Buckman, 190 Wn.2d 51 (2018), challenging plea 21 years after completion of sentence does not establish prejudice where state concedes it is bound by the lower maximum; affirms *Pers. Pers. Restraint of Snively, 180 Wn.2d 28 (2014)

Plea agreement and sentence includes community custody which was not authorized, 17 years later defendant seeks to withdraw plea due to erroneous community placement; held: facially invalid judgment and sentence does not permit raising of other time-barred claims, RCW 10.73.100, Pers. Restraint of Toledo-Sotelo, 176 Wn.2d 759 (2013), Pers. Restraint of Clark,168 Wn.2d 581, 587 (2010), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 77-80 (2015), defendant's sole remedy is correction of sentence; per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Yates, 180 Wn.2d 33 (2014)

To avoid death penalty, defendant pleads guilty and is sentenced to 408 year determinate sentences but law at time of the crimes required indeterminate life sentences, seeks to withdraw pleas 13 years later; held: a judgment and sentence invalid on its face permits challenge beyond one year time bar, RCW 10.73.090(1), -.100 (1989), but because under either sentence defendant would never be released as there is no practical difference between 408 year determinate sentence and a 408 year minimum sentence, defendant has not shown prejudice and PRP must be dismissed, Pers. Restraint of Stockwell, 179 Wn.2d 588 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Kinnaman, 180 Wn.2d 197 (2014)

Defendant pleads guilty to eluding a pursuing police vehicle and endangerment enhancement, RCW 9.94A.834 (2008), state's recommendation for the enhancement was 12 months, but statute, RCW 9.94A.533(11) (2013), requires 12 months and one day which court imposed, defendant moves to withdraw plea to the enhancement only; held: sentence was not in excess of statutory authority, defendant did not move to withdraw plea to the crime, rather only to the enhancement, a plea agreement may be divisible if there are multiple counts, State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 519 (2006), a plea to one crime is not divisible; per curiam.

State v. Quy Dinh Nguyen, 179 Wn.App. 271 (2014)

Defendant pleads guilty, before sentencing moves to withdraw plea claiming he was inadequately advised, court appoints new counsel to make threshold showing that plea was invalid, counsel moves for 4-6 month continuance to read 28,000 pages of discovery, investigate whether to advise defendant to withdraw plea, trial court denies continuance, holds a hearing with prior counsel testifying as to advice given defendant, denies motion and imposes sentence; held: trial court did not err by requiring defendant to produce something more than his mere allegations, State v. Robinson, 153 Wn.2d 689 (2005), lengthy continuance is not required without defendant first demonstrating any likelihood of establishing a manifest injustice, new counsel's role was not to advise defendant whether withdrawing his plea was an intelligent course of action, rather it was to demonstrate that the motion to withdraw the plea had a basis beyond defendant's self-serving allegations; I.

Pers. Restraint of Ramos, 181 Wn.App. 743 (2014)

Defendant pleads guilty to theft 1° in 1997, told in plea statement that a plea of guilty may resulted in deportation, filed PRP seeking to vacate plea maintaining counsel did not inquire as to immigration consequences and that he is subject to mandatory deportation; held: Court of Appeals role is to decide "on our own" if defendant's conviction is one for an "aggravated felony," an immigration lawyer's opinion is not binding as questions of law are not the subject of expert testimony; as fraud and deceit "did not infect" defendant's theft per probable cause affidavit or plea, crime is not an aggravated felony nor does it involve moral turpitude, if the law is not succinct and straightforward, counsel must provide only a general warning of a risk of adverse immigration consequences, Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 369, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), see: State v. Sandoval, 171 Wn.2d 163 (2011), cf.: Lee v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1958, 198 L. Ed. 2d 476 (2017), thus counsel was not ineffective, PRP denied; III.

Pers. Restraint of Smalls, 182 Wn.App. 381 (2014)

Defendant pleads guilty to murder and assault, files PRP more than a year later claiming statute of limitations for assault had passed, seeks withdrawal of pleas to both; held: while defendant's judgment and sentence is facially invalid because court lacked authority to convict for assault thus reducing offender score, he is only entitled to a remand to correct the invalidity but is not entitled to assert a time-barred challenge to the validity of the plea, Pers. Restraint of Snively, 180 Wn.2d 28 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Yates, 180 Wn.2d 33 (2014), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 77-80 (2015); I.

United States v. Davila, 569 U.S. 597, 133 S.Ct. 2139, 186 L.Ed.2d 139 (2013)

Defendant and defense counsel appear before magistrate judge in camera, to discuss defendant's dissatisfaction with counsel, magistrate judge urges defendant to plead guilty, three months later defendant pleads guilty, later moves to withdraw plea due to judge's involvement; held: although Fed R. Crim. P. 11(c)(1) reads "[t]he court must not participate in these discussions," violation of the rule does not mandate reversal, see RCW 9.94A.421 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 77-80 (2015)

A mere misstatement of the maximum sentence on the judgment and sentence does not by itself render it facially invalid, remedy through an untimely PRP is limited to technical correction, Pers. Restraint of Coats, 173 Wn.2d 123, 135, 143-44 (2011); 9-0.

Lee v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1958, 198 L.Ed.2d 476 (2017)

Where defendant demonstrates a reasonable probability that he would not have pleaded guilty if he had known that it would lead to mandatory deportation, plea-counsel's erroneous advice as to deportation consequences of defendant's guilty plea prejudiced defendant and amounted to ineffective assistance; here, while the plea meant defendant would certainly be deported and at trial he would "almost certainly" be convicted, sentenced to more time and deported, it would not have been irrational for defendant to go to trial rather than plead guilty; 6-

State v. Manajeres, 197 Wn.App. 798 (2017)

Defendant enters Alford plea to unlawful imprisonment in 2002, is deported, now seeks to withdraw plea because counsel did not advise that unlawful imprisonment is a crime of moral turpitude that will result in deportation; held: to determine whether or not a crime is an aggravated felony/crime of moral turpitude immigration court looks to the fact of conviction and the statutory definition, does the full range of conduct encompassed by the state statute constitute an aggravated felony, Taylor v. United States, 495 U.S. 575, 110 S.Ct. 2143, 109 L.Ed.2d 607 (1990); here, appellate counsel did not identify any federal aggravated felony into which unlawful imprisonment fits, thus defendant did not establish that his lawyer at plea provided deficient representation; it is not automatically deficient performance for a lawyer to advise a non-citizen client to enter an Alford plea; when a state statute is "divisible," i.e., some conduct amounts to an aggravated felony and some does not, then immigration court can look to the factual basis for the plea which, in an Alford plea, will include documents outside the plea form which become part of the judgment of conviction, Shepard v. United States, 544 U.S. 13, 125 S.Ct. 1254, 161 L.Ed.2d 205 (2005), Descamps v. United States, 570 U.S. 254, 133 S.Ct. 2276, 186 L.Ed.2d 458 (2013); because the law was not fully clear in 2002 that unlawful imprisonment was an aggravated felony, defendant has not met his burden of showing that defense counsel "could have researched and discovered that Mr. Manajares's Alford plea carried a truly clear risk of adverse consequences," at 815, thus defendant has not established deficient representation, see: Lee v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1958, 198 L. Ed.2d 476 (2017), court need not look to prejudice; III.

State v. Buckman, 190 Wn.2d 51 (2018)

Defendant commits rape of a child 2° at age 17, is charged after he turns 18, pleads guilty with a SSOSA recommendation after being told that the maximum sentence is life in prison which, pursuant to RCW 9.94A.507(b)(2) (2008), does not apply to a person who commits the crime under age 18, moves to withdraw plea after SSOSA is revoked, stating he would not have pleaded guilty had he been properly informed; held: defendant was misinformed as to maximum, thus plea was involuntary, however a motion to withdraw a plea is a collateral attack on the judgment and sentence requiring a showing, by a preponderance, of actual and substantial prejudice, Personal Restraint of Riley, 122 Wn.2d 772 (1993), Personal Restraint of Stockwell, 179 Wn.2d 588 (2014); defendant here made a bare claim that he would not have pleaded guilty but for the erroneous information but an objective, rational person test, rather than a subjective test, establishes, in light of the strength of the state's evidence, that he would not have risked a trial, Pers. Restraint of Yates, 180 Wn.2d 33, 41 (2014) and thus his motion to withdraw his plea is denied; 7-2.

State v. Taylor, 4 Wn.App.2d 381, 389-91 (2018), *reversed, on other grounds,*193 Wn.2d 691 (2019)

Written plea statement sets out all elements of the crime, when court inquires defendant appears to deny willfulness, an element, trial court accepts plea; held: conflicting statement in a factual basis for a plea obliges trial court to inquire further, remanded for court to question defendant further, see: State v. R.L.D., 132 Wn.App. 699 (2006); III

Pers. Restraint of Burlingame, 3 Wn.App.2d 600 (2018)

Defendant is charged with rape 3°, defense counsel has discovery prior to arraignment, defendant wants to plead guilty but is advised not to because defense counsel thought state might amend to a gross misdemeanor, defendant declines to enter a plea, trial court enters plea of not guilty, state later is granted leave to amend to rape 2° to which defendant pleaded guilty and is sentenced to indeterminate life sentence; held: CrR 4.2(a) provides a defendant with the right to plead guilty at arraignment, State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1, 4 (1980), "[g]iven the evident risk of an amendment to a higher charge, the strength of the State's evidence for the higher charge, its harsh consequences, and Mr. Burlingame's demonstrated interest in pleading guilty at arraignment, we conclude that competent counsel would have advised Mr. Burlingame of his one-time right to plead guilty as charged without the agreement of the prosecutor—even if the lawyer's recommendation was that Mr. Burlingame not plead guilty," at 610, see: State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901 (2000); III.

State v. Robinson, 8 Wn.App.2d 629 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of violation of a no contact order enhanced to a felony by two prior misdemeanor no contact order violations, RCW 26.50.110(5) (2017), to which he had pleaded guilty albeit the two stemmed from a single incident which was originally charged as a felony but through plea negotiations defendant agreed to plead to two counts, one straight plea, the other to take advantage of the plea bargain, acknowledging that there was no factual basis; held: while a defendant may plead guilty to an amended charge if there is no factual basis as long as there is a factual basis for the original charge, State v. Bao Sheng Zhao, 157 Wn.2d 188 (2006), State v. Wilson, 16 Wn.App.2d 537 (2021), however a defendant cannot be convicted of two crimes based on a single act and a single original charge as it violates the double jeopardy clause, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 662 (2011); while a guilty plea precludes a collateral attack unless there is a double jeopardy violation; I.

State v. Connors, 9 Wn.App.2d 93 (2019)

An officer wearing a department-issued vest over civilian clothes is in uniform for purposes of RCW 46.61.024(1) (2010) which requires a driver to stop when signaled by an officer in uniform; III.

State v. Gregg, 9 Wn.App.2d 569 (2019), rev. granted, 194 Wn.2d 1002

On plea form paragraph stating that because the offense is a felony firearm offense judge may require registration as a firearm offender, RCW 9.41.335, is crossed out even though it applies, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: registration as a firearm offender is a collateral consequence of a guilty plea, misinformation is not grounds to withdraw the plea; I.

State v. Wilson, 16 Wn.App.2d 537 (2021)

Defendant enters Alford plea to a greater offense in exchange for dismissal of 21 other counts, factual basis establishes sufficient evidence to support the lesser offense, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: because the plea benefitted defendant court did not err in accepting the plea, Personal Restraint of Barr, 102 Wn.2d 265 (1984), State v. Zhao,157 Wn.2d 188, 199-200 (2006); II.

State v. Snider, 199 Wn.2d 435 (2022)

"A trial court must ensure a defendant understands the nature of a crime and the essential elements before accepting a guilty plea, but an otherwise valid guilty plea is not rendered illegitimate because the trial court does not detail every fact that could be relevant to every element;" 6-3.

Corpus delicti for felony hit and run, RCW 46.52.020, does not include identity, distinguishing State v. Hamrick, 19 Wn.App. 417, 420 (1978), as defendant's physical condition is not an element of the crime; I.

Seattle v. Wandler, 60 Wn.App. 309 (1991)

Seattle hit and run ordinance, SMC § 11.56.420, does not unconstitutionally conflict with state statute, RCW 46.52.020, as variances are insignificant; I.

State v. Hughes, 80 Wn.App. 196 (1995)

"Involved in an accident" for purposes of hit and run, RCW 46.52.020, can be proved even without physical contact between defendant's vehicle and victim vehicle, State v. Perebeynos, 121 Wn.App. 189 (2004); where defendant drag races another vehicle which crashes, defendant is involved in an accident; III.

State v. Bourne, 90 Wn.App. 970 (1998)

Defendant injures three people in same vehicle and flees, is charged with three counts of felony hit and run, RCW 46.52.020; held: number of counts should be based on number of times defendant is involved in an accident and fails to provide information, not on number of persons injured in victim-vehicle, State v. Ustimenko, 137 Wn.App. 109, 116-19 (2007), see: State v. Clark, 117 Wn.App. 281, 285-86 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 614 (2005); II.

State v. Wagner, 97 Wn.App. 344 (1999)

Running over a dead body and leaving the scene is not felony hit and run, as RCW 46.52.020(1) requires proof that an accident resulted in injury to or the death of a person; II.

State v. Sutherland, 104 Wn.App. 122 (2001)

Knowledge of an accident is an essential element of felony hit and run, RCW 46.52.020(3), State v. Bourne, 90 Wn.App. 963, 969 (1998), even under the Kjorsvik "fair construction" rule, State v. Cournyea, 132 Wn.App. 347 (2006); II.

State v. Silva, 106 Wn.App. 586 (2001)

Officer reaches into car to turn off ignition, defendant drives off pulling officer along who ultimately pushes away and is injured, defendant continues to drive away, claims evidence is insufficient to prove "accident," RCW 46.52.020, since his acts were intentional; held: "accident" includes incidents arising from intentional conduct on the part of the driver and/or victim; I.

State v. Perebeynos, 121 Wn.App. 189 (2004)

Evidence is sufficient to prove felony hit and run, RCW 46.52.020, where defendant does not collide with another vehicle, State v. Hughes, 80 Wn.App. 196 (1995) and did not cause the collision or violate a rule of the road; knowledge of a collision may be inferred from circumstantial evidence, in this case defendant's behavior before and after the collision; I.

State v. Stalker, 152 Wn.App. 805 (2009)

Hit and run is subject to compromise of misdemeanor, ch. 10.22 RCW, State ex rel. Fitch v. Roxbury Dist. Court, 29 Wn.App. 591, 597 (1981); I.

IDENTIFICATIONS

United States v. Crews, 63 L.Ed.2d 537 (1980)

In-court identification not suppressible due to illegal arrest, State v. Tan Le, 103 Wn.App. 354, 363-67 (2000); defendant's "face" is not a fruit of illegal arrest, see: Frisbie v. Collins, 96 L.Ed. 541 (1952); 8-0.

State v. Scott, 93 Wn.2d 8 (1980)

In determining fairness of identification, test is totality of circumstances; to suppress, court must find identification was so suggestive and conducive to misidentification as to amount to a denial of due process; 9-0.

State v. Jamison, 93 Wn.2d 794 (1980)

Lay witness can't testify to his or her opinion that photo is of defendant except where there is a change of appearance, but see: State v. Collins, 152 Wn.App. 429, 436-38 (2009); reverses: State v. Jamison, 23 Wn.App. 454 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Agren, 28 Wn.App. 1 (1980)

State v. Springfield, 28 Wn.App. 446 (1981)

One person showup okay under totality test, Neil v. Biggers, 34 L.Ed.2d 401 (1972), State v. Hilliard, 89 Wn.2d 430, 438-39 (1977), State v. Scabbyrobe, 16 Wn.App.2d 870 (2021), where victim is with defendant for six minutes, had previously picked defendant in montage, and showup occurred 17 hours after crime; no need for state to show independent basis for in-court ID on these facts; III.

State v. Burrell, 28 Wn.App. 606 (1981)

Victim and witness pick suspect from montage after police conclude there are insufficient matches in jail for lineup, although defendant is in custody; defendant's picture is only one on montage with "frizzy Afro" as described by witnesses; Division I holds that suggestiveness of montage is outweighed by reliability of witnesses; modifies State v. Thorkelson, 25 Wn.App. 615, rev. den. 94 Wn.2d 1001 (1980) to eliminate per se rule of exclusion; see: State v. Poulos, 31 Wn.App. 241 (1982); accord: State v. Smith, 37 Wn.App. 381 (1984); see also: State v. Shea, 85 Wn.App. 56 (1997); I.

State v. Weddel, 29 Wn.App. 461 (1981)

Division II holds that courts shall not suppress a montage merely because defendant is in custody, choosing not to follow State v. Thorkelson, 25 Wn.App. 615 (Div. I, 1980); will suppress photo montage only if impermissibly suggestive; factors include (1) showing one photo, (2) photo of single individual recurs or is in some way emphasized and (3) police indicate that they have other evidence that one of the persons pictured committed the crime; see: Simmons v. United States, 19 L.Ed.2d 1247 (1968).

State v. King, 31 Wn.App. 56 (1982)

Guidelines established by Neil v. Biggers, 34 L.Ed.2d 401 (1972) do not apply to a witness's identification of an article of clothing worn by a suspect at a showup, State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App.454 (2006); II.

State v. Cook, 31 Wn.App. 165 (1982)

Montage and lineup identifications were "not entirely without suggestion," but do not violate due process; I.

State v. Ammlung, 31 Wn.App. 696 (1982)

Court may order a defendant to shave and cut his hair prior to appearing in a lineup, State v. Smith, 90 Wn.App. 857(1998); no abuse of discretion for trial court to refuse to allow other lineup participants to be called as witnesses in order for jury to determine whether identification procedure was suggestive; instruction based upon United States v. Telfaire, 469 F.2d 552 (D.C. Cir. 1972) properly rejected; II.

State v. Haskins, 33 Wn.App. 185 (1982)

Suspect's counsel is unavailable to witness lineup, so prosecutor finds substitute counsel, unassociated with suspect's counsel and unfamiliar with case, who witnesses lineup; held: no error, although court states it does not encourage substitute counsel; III.

State v. Hebert, 33 Wn.App. 512 (1982)

Upholds one-person showup, per Manson v. Braithwaite, 53 L.Ed.2d 140 (1977); I.

State v. Booth, 36 Wn.App. 66 (1983)

One-person showup of suspect in police car with his back to eyewitness was suggestive, but not impermissibly suggestive in light of witness's reliability, State v. Springfield, 28 Wn.App. 446, 447 (1981); II.

State v. Smith, 36 Wn.App. 133 (1983)

During a recess in trial, prosecutor brings witnesses into court and, in the absence of defense counsel, asks if he can identify defendant; held: while identification procedure violated Sixth Amendment, state established that in-court identification at trial had an origin independent of the improper identification, State v. Redmond, 75 Wn.2d 62, 64 (1968); court applies Neil v. Biggers, 34 L.Ed.2d 401 (1972) factors, State v. Abernathy, 31 Wn.App. 635, 637 (1982); I.

In re Armed Robbery, 99 Wn.2d 106 (1983)

Police, believing that a description of a robber fit a suspect, show montage to victim who states that suspect bore a "striking resemblance" to the robber; police obtain a show cause order to require suspect to appear in lineup; held: an individual may not be ordered to participate in a lineup where no probable cause exists to believe that the suspect has committed the offense; dicta that police may not seize a suspect to obtain physical evidence (such as eyewitness identification) on less than probable cause, at 111; see: State v. Doleshall, 53 Wn.App. 69 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Vaughn, 101 Wn.2d 604 (1984)

Where there is no allegation of an impermissibly suggestive identification procedure, the "reliability" of an identification goes to weight and not to admissibility, Pers. Restraint of Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 224 (2012), cf.: State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343 (2014), disapproving State v. Abernathy, 31 Wn.App. 635 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984)

Requiring rape defendant to repeat rapist's words in front of jury within discretion of court, State v. Spadoni, 137 Wash. 684, 691 (1926); 9-0.

State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984)

Police unlawfully seize and photograph defendant; based upon pick from montage which included his photograph, defendant is tried for robbery; held: in-court identification is not subject to suppression if police knew witness's identity before illegal search and in-court identification is based on a witness's observation of the crime; 9-0.

State v. Jordan, 39 Wn.App. 530 (1985)

Defendant has the right to have counsel present at the actual physical confrontation between the suspect and witnesses at a lineup, not at the brief witness preparation stage prior to the lineup; proper to exclude evidence that defendant was misidentified at lineup on other dismissed charges; I.

State v. Kinard, 39 Wn.App. 871 (1985)

Testimony that assailant "sounded like a black man" is proper lay opinion, ER 701; voice lineup not required; III.

State v. Boot, 40 Wn.App. 215 (1985)

Where defendant is in custody, lineup is preferred; court will not suppress photo montage unless defense establishes identification procedure was impermissibly suggestive; then court must balance corrupting effect of suggestive identification against factors indicating reliability of identification, State v. Burrell, 28 Wn.App. 606 (1981); I.

State v. McDonald, 40 Wn.App. 743 (1985)

Twenty-two hours after strongarm robbery, victim picks two suspects at lineup, after which police tell victim that another person in lineup was arrested, whereupon victim agrees it was "a toss up" between one whom he picked and the arrestee, trial court suppresses lineup, admits in-court identification; held: police statement to victim was impermissibly suggestive; due to limited opportunity of victim to view the criminal at time of crime and inaccuracy of descriptions, in-court identifications suppressed, Manson v. Braithwaite, 53 L.Ed.2d 140 (1977), cf.: State v. Gould, 58 Wn.App. 175 (1990), State v. Maupin, 63 Wn.App. 887, 895-7 (1992), State v. Courtney, 137 Wn.App. 376, 385-86 (2007), cf.: State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343 (2014); I.

State v. Traweek, 43 Wn.App. 99 (1986)

Victim describes robber as blonde, victim picks defendant at lineup in which he is only blonde; held: in motion to suppress identification, defense must first show procedure was unnecessarily suggestive, Foster v. California, 22 L.Ed.2d 402 (1969), Stovall v. Denno, 18 L.Ed.2d 1199 (1967), after which court must review totality of circumstances to determine if suggestiveness created a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification, Manson v. Brathwaite, 53 L.Ed.2d 140 (1977), by applying Neil v. Biggers, 34 L.Ed.2d 401 (1972) factors of (1) opportunity of victim to view criminal at scene of crime, (2) victim's degree of attention, (3) accuracy of prior description, (4) level of certainty, and (5) length of time between crime and confrontation, cf.: State v. Shea, 85 Wn.App. 56 (1997), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Vickers, 107 Wn.App. 960, 967 n. 10 (2001); here, lineup was unnecessarily suggestive, but identification was reliable applying Biggers factors; II.

State v. Hoffpauir, 44 Wn.App. 195 (1986)

Suspect does not have right to counsel at pre-arrest one-person voice identification; while one-person voice identification is highly suggestive, the totality of the circumstances was such that the identification is admissible as it occurred shortly after the crime, suspect was brought promptly to the victim, met description, victim had adequate opportunity to know the voice; III.

State v. Rogers, 44 Wn.App. 510 (1986)

Factors to consider in determining reliability of one-person showup include: (1) opportunity of witness to view the criminal at time of crime, (2) witness's degree of attention, (3) accuracy of prior description by the witness, (4) level of certainty demonstrated at the showup, and (5) time between crime and confrontation, Manson v. Brathwaite, 53 L.Ed.2d 140 (1977), State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474, 482 (1984); State v. Maupin, 63 Wn.App. 887, 895-7 (1992); I.

State v. Moon, 45 Wn.App. 692 (1986)

Where (1) identification of defendant is principal issue at trial, (2) defendant presents alibi, but see: State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 644-52 (2003), and (3) there is little or no other evidence linking defendant to the crime, it is an abuse of discretion to prohibit the defense from calling an expert to testify about eyewitness identification, see: State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857, 868-72 (2010)(Sanders, J., dissenting), cf.: State v. Moon, 48 Wn.App. 647 (1987); accord: State v. Taylor, 50 Wn.App. 481 (1988), but see: State v. Hernandez, 58 Wn.App. 793 (1990); I.

State v. Knight, 46 Wn.App. 57 (1986)

A suggestive pretrial photo montage presented by a private citizen does not invalidate a subsequent identification; II.

State v. Pacheco, 107 Wn.2d 59 (1986)

Trial court should not permit a look-alike to testify unless there is evidence that the look-alike could have committed the crime; 9-0.

State v. Guzman-Cuellar, 47 Wn.App. 326 (1987)

Being handcuffed and standing 15 feet from police car during showup are not sufficient to demonstrate unnecessary suggestiveness, State v. Shea, 85 Wn.App. 56 (1997), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Vickers, 107 Wn.App. 960, 967 n. 10 (2001), see: State v. Gould, 58 Wn.App. 175 (1990); I.

State v. Taylor, 50 Wn.App. 481 (1988)

A 29-photograph montage which contains suspect's photo twice is not impermissibly suggestive; I.

State v. Coe, 109 Wn.2d 832 (1988)

All post-hypnotic testimony is inadmissible; hypnosis acts as a time barrier after which no admissible identifications can be made; 6-3.

United States v. Owens, 98 L.Ed.2d 951 (1988)

Assault victim testifies he remembered identifying defendant as assailant in an interview with FBI, but does not remember assailant nor could he recall who assaulted him; held: inability of victim to recall does not violate confrontation clause, as defense counsel had opportunity to cross-examine; identification is admissible pursuant to Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(c); 6-2.

State v. Doleshall, 53 Wn.App. 69 (1988)

Once suspect has been lawfully arrested, police may place suspect in lineup for crimes unrelated to arrest, distinguishing In re Armed Robbery, 99 Wn.2d 106 (1983); reasonable force may be used to compel suspect to appear in lineup, United States v. Parhms, 424 F.2d 152, 154 (9th Cir., 1970); where defense fails to establish that a lineup was unnecessarily suggestive, State v. Traweek, 43 Wn.App. 99, 103 (1986), trial court need not engage in balancing test per Manson v. Brathwaite, 53 L.Ed.2d 140 (1977); I.

State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44 (1989)

Trial court properly excluded evidence of a look-alike suspect unless there is a train of facts or circumstances as tend clearly to point out look-alike as the guilty party, State v. Jones, 26 Wn.App. 551, 555 (1980); I.

State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 923 (1989)

Police testimony that victim stated defendant committed robbery is not hearsay, as it is prior statement of identification of person made after perceiving him, ER 801(d)(1)(iii), State v. Jenkins, 53 Wn.App. 228, 233 n. 3 (1989), State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 252 (1989), State v. Stratton, 139 Wn.App. 511, 516-18 (2007); ER 801(d)(1)(iii) is not limited to lineup, showup or montage identifications; I.

State v. Bell, 57 Wn.App. 447 (1990)

Where trial court's reasons for excluding expert eyewitness identification testimony are "fairly debatable," exercise of its discretion will not be reversed, State v. Ward, 55 Wn.App. 382 (1988); exclusion of testimony regarding unconscious transference, impact of eyewitness identification on juries, duration of observation and impact of chronic stress on individuals, while admitting expert testimony about how memory works, the effect of situational stress, the effect of the passage of time and cross-racial identification affirmed, see: State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857, 868-72 (2010)(Sanders, J., dissenting); I.

State v. Thomson, 70 Wn.App. 200 (1993)

Defendant is absent during trial, police witnesses testify that person who committed the crime was defendant, that police handcuffed defense counsel's client, that the man he knew to be defendant had been present during a pretrial hearing; held: evidence was sufficient for a reasonable trier of fact to conclude that defendant was the man whom officers arrested; I.

State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 837 (1993)

At assault trial of identical twins, victim could not identify which defendant was which, one acquitted, one convicted; held: evidence at trial established identification card with defendant's name was taken from defendant, co-defendant referred to defendant by name, co-defendant identified himself by name, defendant identified himself at trial, thus evidence was sufficient; I.

State v. Mahoney, 80 Wn.App. 495, 498 (1996)

Police telephone defendant at home, defendant confesses, claims identity not authenticated, ER 901(b)(6); held: officer testified he had known defendant for years, was familiar with his voice, telephoned his residence and left message, defendant tried unsuccesfully to return call, officer called again to same number, defendant gave firsthand details about the crime, thus defendant was adequately identified to authenticate the conversation, State v. Deaver, 6 Wn.App. 216, 218-9 (1971); III.

State v. Shea, 85 Wn.App. 56, 58-61 (1997)

In determining admissibility of a showup, defense must prove, State v. Gould, 58 Wn.App. 175, 185 (1990), that under totality of circumstances the identification procedure leads to a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification, applying factors: (1) opportunity of witness to view the criminal at time of crime, (2) witness's degree of attention, (3) accuracy of the witness's prior description of the criminal, (4) level of certainty at the confrontation, and (5) time between crime and confrontation, modifying State v. Traweek, 43 Wn.App. 99 (1986), see: State v. Vickers, 107 Wn.App. 960, 969-71 (Morgan, concurring)(2001), aff'd, 148 Wn.2d 91, 118-19 (2002), but see: State v. Linares, 98 Wn.App. 397 (1999); I.

State v. Smith, 90 Wn.App. 857 (1998)

Trial court may order defendant to shave before lineup to conform to eyewitness's description, absent "irrefutable evidence that the defendant's appearance at that time differs from eyewitness descriptions of the perpetrator," State v. Ammlung, 31 Wn.App. 696 (1982); evidentiary hearing is not required; I.

State v. Eacret, 94 Wn.App. 282 (1999)

Eight-photo montage which contains three suspects is not impermissibly suggestive; I.

State v. Linares, 98 Wn.App. 397 (1999)

Where there is no evidence that an identification procedure was suggestive, there is no basis to suppress, and any uncertainty or inconsistency goes only to weight, State v. Vaughn, 101 Wn.2d 604 (1984), State v. Eacret, 94 Wn.App. 282 (1999), State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 224 (2012); Division I declines to follow State v. Shea, 85 Wn.App. 56, 60 (1997), see: State v. Vickers, 107 Wn.App. 960, 969-71 (Morgan, concurring)(2001), aff'd, 148 Wn.2d 91, 118-19 (2002); I.

State v. Tan Le, 103 Wn.App. 354 (2000)

Identification of suspect immediately following unlawful arrest must be suppressed absent attenuation of taint, Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S.Ct. 2254, 45 L.Ed.2d 416 (1975), State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019), cf.: State v. Eserjose, 171 Wn.2d 907 (2011), State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019), but see: Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. 232, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016); in-court identification, absent unreliability, is admissible irrespective of lawfulness of arrest, United States v. Crews, 63 L.Ed.2d 537 (1980); I.

State v. Kinard, 109 Wn.App. 428, 432-35 (2001)

Witness reports that suspect has buck teeth, defendant is only one in montage with buck teeth; held: trial court's conclusion that montage is suggestive is supported by substantial evidence, State v. Linares, 98 Wn.App. 397, 403 (1999), as is its determination that the suggestive montage did not create a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification, State v. Barker, 103 Wn.App. 893 (2000), State v. Ramires, 109 Wn.App. 749, 760-63 (2002); III.

State v. Vickers, 148 Wn.2d 91 (2002)

In montage, defendant's is only photo not wearing coveralls; held: minor differences in photos are not suggestive enough to warrant further inquiry into the likelihood of misidentification, State v. Eacret, 94 Wn.App. 282, 285 (1999), State v. Shea, 85 Wn.App. 56, 58-61 (1997), cf.: State v. Linares, 98 Wn.App. 397 (1999); affirms State v. Vickers, 107 Wn.App. 960 (2003); II.

State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 644-52 (2003)

In rape case, defense offers eyewitness identification expert to testify about the impact of stress and violence, weapon focus, lighting and cross-racial identification on perception and memory, refused by trial court; held: where eyewitness identification is a key element, trial court must consider whether expert testimony would assist the jury in assessing reliability, including factors such as whether victim and suspect are same race, display of weapon, effect of stress, within court's discretion; fact that expert did not meet victim and has no personal knowledge of the case is not a proper consideration, at 649, n. 5; whether or not defendant presents an alibi is irrelevant to admissibility, overruling State v. Moon, 45 Wn.App. 692 (1986), see: State v. Hernandez, 58 Wn.App. 793 (1990), see: State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857, 868-72 (2010)(Sanders, J., dissenting); 8-1.

State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 454 (2006)

Trial court suppresses identification as impermissibly suggestive but allows victim to identify jacket defendant was wearing as victim testified that he remembered coat from robbery not from showup; held: independent source doctrine, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005), applies to identifications; guidelines established by Neil v. Biggers, 34 L.Ed.2d 401 (1972) do not apply to a witness's identification of an article of clothing worn by a suspect at a showup, State v. King,31 Wn.App. 56 (1982); II.

State v. Courtney, 137 Wn.App. 376, 385-86 (2007)

After witnesses pick out defendant from montage, police tell witnesses that they picked the same person who is in custody; held: suggestive statements by police after an identification is made may impermissibly reinforce an identification, State v. McDonald, 40 Wn.App. 743, 746 (1985), but absent evidence of a substantial likelihood of misidentification resulting from suggestiveness, suppression is not a remedy, State v. Vickers,148 Wn.2d 91, 118 (2002), cf.: State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343 (2014); III.

State v. Stratton, 139 Wn.App. 511, 516-18 (2007)

Civilian witness testifies that he could not remember what color shirt defendant was wearing, officer then testifies that civilian told him that the defendant's shirt was yellow; held: prior statement of identification of a person made after perceiving him is admissible as a hearsay exception, ER 801(d)(1)(iii), State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 923 (1989), State v. Jenkins, 54 Wn.App. 228, 233 n.3 (1989), State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 252 (1989), which may include the various physical characteristics of a person perceived by the witness; III.

State v. Birch, 151 Wn.App. 504, 513-15 (2009)

Witness, who was not shown montage or lineup, sees defendant handcuffed outside courtroom, trial court denies motion to suppress in-court identification; held: one-party showup by itself does not demonstrate unnecessary suggestiveness, State v. Guzman-Cuellar, 47 Wn.App. 326 (1987); II.

State v. Collins, 152 Wn.App. 429 (2009)

Defendant is accused of killing a taxicab driver, camera in cab shows a person in back seat, family and friends of defendant identify him as the man in the photo, defense seeks suppression due to unduly suggestive procedures; held: suppression is not a remedy for suggestive procedures where a witness recognizes someone in a photograph, distinguishing situations where a person identifies a suspect whom the person has seen under the stress of a crime in progress, State v. Hardy, 76 Wn.App. 188 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996), distinguishing State v. Jamison, 93 Wn.2d 794 (1980), see: State v. Sanjurjo-Bloom, 16 Wn.App.2d 120 (2021); I.

Absent evidence that police used unnecesarily suggetive identification procedures, eyewitness testimony identifying defendant is not subject to a pretrial hearing on suggestiveness and reliability of identification, United States v. Wade, 388 U.S. 218, 18 L.Ed.2d 1149 (1967) only applies to identification procedures arranged by police, State v. Sanchez, 171 Wn.App. 518, 571-83 (2012), State v. Ramirez, 5 Wn.App.2d 118, 129-35 (2018); 8-1.

State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 224 (2012)

Victim fails to pick defendant in montage, court denies motion to suppress in-court identification; held: where defendant does not claim that police used impermissibly suggestive identification procedures, due process clause does not condition the admission of identification testimony upon proof of reliability, State v. Vaughn, 101 Wn.2d 604, 605 (1984), Perry v. New Hampshire, 565 U.S. 228, 181 L.Ed.2d 694 (2012), State v. Ramirez, 5 Wn.App.2d 118, 129-35 (2018); I.

Suppression of an identification procedure is only permitted where there is improper police conduct, intentional or not, Perry v. New Hampshire, 565 U.S. 228, 181 L.Ed.2d 694 (2012), State v. Ramirez, 5 Wn.App.2d 118, 129-35 (2018); presenting a picture to a witness twice is not improper, State v. Smith, 9 Wn.App. 279 (1973); III.

State v. Allen*,* 176 Wn.2d 611, 616-26 (2013)

Cautionary cross-racial eyewitness identification instruction, see: United States v. Telfaire, 469 F.2d 552 (1972), is not required where witness' identification is based on identifying factors "unrelated to cross-race bias" (here apparel and sunglasses, not on facial appearance), but failure to give such an instruction in an appropriate case may be an abuse of discretion, see also: State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745, 767-69 (1984), State v. Butler, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL17839530 (2022), overruled on other grounds, State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520, 529 (1989); 7-2.

State v. Kloepper*,* 179 Wn.App. 343, 349-52 (2014)

Victim fails to identify anyone in montage which includes defendant's photo, five days later is shown another montage with same photo, victim identifies another man but says she recognizes defendant who works in her building, DNA testing excludes man she identified, police tell her that the DNA matched defendant, victim decides defendant was attacker, when asked why she said "well the DNA thing," trial court denies motion to exclude in-court identification; held: in-court identification is not excluded because a witness had failed to identify the defendant during pretrial identification opportunities, State v. Sanchez, 171 Wn.App. 518 (2012), State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 224 (2012), although there no action by government tainted the identification; here, because the police suggestive behavior was not directed to victim's identification of her assailant but rather was made as an update of the case against the first man identified, it was not truly a suggestive identification procedure, here defendant "better fit" victim's description, other evidence established that defendant could have access to victim's home, thus there was not a substantial likelihood of misidentification, see Perry v New Hampshire, 565 U.S. 228, 181 L.Ed.2d 694 (2012); 2-1, III.

State v. Henson*,* 11 Wn.App.2d 97 (2109)

At trial officer testifies that he observed a person buying drugs and identified him from his Facebook page; held: proper lay opinion, ER 701; I.

State v. Sanjurjo-Bloom*,* 16 Wn.App.2d 120 (2021)

Over objection police officer testifies that defendant is the person depicted in a video that is in evidence, trial court orders that there be no mention that officer knew defendant from prior police contacts, during deliberations jury asks about defendant's prior criminal contact with the officer, trial court declines to respond; held: while an officer may state an opinion that a video depicts the defendant where the officer has known the person for several years, State v. Hardy, 76 Wn.App. 188, 190 (1994), aff'd sub nom, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996), it is not helpful to the jury to allow opinion identification testimony where an officer has had limited prior contacts with the defendant, State v. George, 150 Wn.App. 110, 118 (2009); trial court's failure to provide a meaningful limiting instruction when it was clear that the jury was considering the evidence of the officer's knowledge of defendant for an improper purpose compounds the error, court was obliged to correct the jury's misunderstanding, State v. Campbell, 163 Wn.App. 394, 402 (2011); I.

State v. Scabbyrobe, 16 Wn.App.2d 870 (2021)

Defendant is observed by victim stealing his car, car crashes, victim opens door, orders defendant out, she runs, police arrive quickly, observe defendant wearing different clothes, not carrying what victim said she had, police stop defendant, victim is brought to scene and says he's 100% certain she is the thief, at trial defense counsel fails to move to suppress the identification, defendant claims ineffective assistance on appeal; held: a one-person showup is not unnecessarily suggestive, State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984), State v. Springfield, 28 Wn.App. 446 (1981); while police could have taken a photo of defendant and created a montage, the fact that a different procedure could have been used does not mean the procedure used was impermissibly suggestive; here, the reliability factors in Neil v. Biggers, 409 U.S. 188, 198, 93 S. Ct. 375, 34 L. Ed. 2d 401 (1972) support reliability of the identification; 2-1, III.

State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022)

In deciding whether an identification procedure is suggestive court must consider current scientific understanding of the fallibility of eyewitness identification, including administering the procedure in double-blind fashion, present photomontages sequentially rather than simultaneously, give pre-identification admonitions informing the witness that the perpetrator may or may not be in the montage and that the witness need not make a selection, never show the same suspect to the same witness over the course of multiple identification procedures, construct montage so that suspect is not the only one pictured who matches the description of the perpetrator; here, defendant was the only one in the montage with a neck tattoo, but because the tattoo was not part of the description, thus tattoo, while suggestive, did not, under the totality of the circumstances, create "a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification," Manson v. Brathwaite, 432 U.S. 98, 114, 97 S. Ct. 2243, 53 L. Ed. 2d 140 (1977), see also: State v. Butler, ___ Wn.2d ___, 521 P.3d 931 (2022); affirms State v. Derri, 17 Wn.App.2d 376 (2021); 9-0.

In assault case by Black defendant on white victim trial court gives eyewitness identification instruction but declines to give the bracketed language on cross-racial identification, WPIC 6.52 (5th ed. 2021), ruling that there was no evidence regarding either the fallibility of cross-racial identification in general or the victim's familiarity or lack of familiarity with Black people; held: trial court's decision of whether or not to instruct on cross-racial eyewitness identification is reviewed for abuse of discretion, State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611 (2013), here trial court did not abuse discretion because no evidence was presented supporting the language of that instruction; "[w]e leave for another day broader questions about what steps courts should take to mitigate the significant risk that eyewitness identifications are unreliable in the cross-racial context;" 9-0.

IMMUNITY

State v. Mannhalt, 33 Wn.App. 696 (1983)

Dicta that defendant may have right to have witnesses immunized upon a showing of extreme prosecutorial misconduct or vital necessity in obtaining exculpatory, noncumulative testimony, see: State v. Carlisle, 73 Wn.App. 678, 681-82 (1994), State v. Fish, 99 Wn.App. 86, 93 (1999); I.

State v. Runions, 100 Wn.2d 52 (1983)

Where defendant is convicted and sentenced and, while his appeal is pending, he is compelled to testify against a co-defendant under a grant of immunity, the grant of immunity has no effect on the conviction and sentence, but would bar a retrial, reversing State v. Runions, 32 Wn.App. 669 (1982); 9-0.

State v. McCullough, 49 Wn.App. 546 (1987)

Where defendant is granted transactional immunity, CrR 6.14, after trial but before sentencing, he cannot be sentenced, and case must be dismissed, distinguishing State v. Runions, 100 Wn.2d 52 (1983); I.

State v. Entz, 58 Wn.App. 112 (1990)

A cautionary instruction is not required when a witness testifies under a grant of immunity; I.

State v. Decker, 68 Wn.App. 246 (1992)

Trial court has authority to grant use immunity absent prosecutor's motion, CrR 6.14, for compelled predisposition psychological interview of respondent, cf.: Dependency of Q.L.M., 105 Wn.App. 532 (2001); I.

State v. Bryant, 97 Wn.App. 479 (1999)

Defendant, in exchange for cooperation, is given contractual use plus derivative use immunity, defendant provides information leading to a witness, state charges defendant with crimes, seeks to use witness to testify against defendant; held: state has the burden of proving that its evidence is untainted by defendant's immunized statements, that the prosecution be based on independent sources, but state need not negate all abstract possibility of taint, Kastigar v. United States, 32 L.Ed.2d 212 (1972), United States v. Byrd, 765 F.2d 1524, 1531 (11th Cir. 1985); trial court properly suppressed witness's testimony as state would not have obtained the witness's cooperation without defendant's immunized statements; while use plus fruits immunity does not bar all nonevidentiary use of immunized testimony, state may not use it as an investigatory lead; I.

State v. Bryant, 146 Wn.2d 90 (2002)

King County enters into informal immunity agreement with defendant for his testimony, written agreement does not limit immunity to King County crimes, Snohomish County, not a party to the agreement, charges defendant; held: "fundamental fairness" requires dismissal of Snohomish County case, although collateral estoppel, contract and agency theories do not mandate dismissal; 2 justices in majority, 4 concur, 3 dissent.

State v. Green, 119 Wn.App. 15 (2003)

Until an immunized witness' credibility is attacked, immunity agreement should not be admitted, State v. Jessup, 31 Wn.App. 304 (1982), see: State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389, 402 (1997), see: State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011); when agreement is admitted, those portions that relate to the witness testifying truthfully should be redacted, State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010), State v. Coleman, 155 Wn.App. 951 (2010); I.

State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010)

Evidence that an immunized witness has agreed to testify truthfully should not be admitted in state's case-in-chief, State v. Green, 119 Wn.App. 15 (2003), State v. Lozcano, 188 Wn.App. 338, 368-70 (2015), but may be elicited by the state if the defense has attacked the witness' credibility on cross-examination, see: State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011); reverses State v. Ish, 150 Wn.App. 775 (2009); 5-4.

State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011)

At outset of trial, defense counsel announces his intent to attack immunized witness' credibility based upon his plea bargain requiring him to testify truthfully, prosecutor refers in opening and direct of the witness that he is obliged to testify truthfully without objection; held: while evidence that immunized witness agrees to testify truthfully should not be admitted until defense has attacked credibility, State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010), State v. Lozcano, 188 Wn.App. 338, 368-70 (2015), it is not improper where there is "little doubt" that defendant will attack veracity during cross-examination; III.

INFORMATION/COMPLAINT/CITATION

State v. Theroff, 95 Wn.2d 385 (1980)

Special allegations must be included in information or they cannot be used to enhance penalty; 6-3.

State v. Hall, 95 Wn.2d 536 (1981)

Where two victims are alleged in the same count, may be error to charge in the conjunctive and instruct in the disjunctive, but harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Carr, 97 Wn.2d 436 (1982)

To amend misdemeanor complaint, plaintiff may not charge different or additional crime, State v. Lutman, 26 Wn.App. 766 (1980), but see: CrRLJ 2.4(f) (1987); defendant must be given a written copy of the amended complaint or information if demanded, State v. Newman, 63 Wn.App. 841 (1992); 6-3.

State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982)

Information charging defendant with rape 1° failed to specify crime defendant intended to commit when he feloniously entered building; held: whereas defense failed to "request an order calling for amendment of the information," issue will not be considered on appeal; see also: State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988).

McGuire v. Seattle, 31 Wn.App. 438 (1982)

During trial, city's motion to amend from DUI to physical control held permissible as amended complaint does not charge a new crime, State v. Lutman, 26 Wn.App. 766 (1980), State v. Olds, 39 Wn.2d 258 (1951), but charges a lesser included offense, see: State v. Nguyen, 165 Wn.2d 428 (2008); I.

State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 680 (1982)

Defendant charged with multiple counts of promoting prostitution for having multiple prostitutes working for him may be convicted on each count but must receive concurrent sentences, but see: State v. Barbee, 187 Wn.2d 375 (2017); II.

State v. Chelly, 32 Wn.App. 916 (1982)

Defendant's argument that a burglary 2° information was defective in that it failed to specify the underlying crime he intended to commit in the building he entered was waived by his failure to object or to demand a bill of particulars per CrR 2.1(e); the state is required only to prove criminal intent at the time of the illegal entry, not the intent to commit a particular crime; possession of stolen property (PSP) is not a lesser of burglary 2°; the "inherent relationship" test for a lesser does not apply; I.

State v. Gosser, 33 Wn.App. 428 (1982)

State amends, on day of trial, from assault 2° with intent to commit a felony to assault 2° with a weapon, defense objects but does not request a continuance; held: defendant has burden of showing prejudice; the fact that defense did not request a continuance is persuasive of lack of prejudice, State v. Wilson, 56 Wn.App. 63 (1989), State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745, 762 (1984), see: State v. Gehrke, 193 Wn.2d 1 (2019), where the principal element of new charge is inherent in the previous charge and no other prejudice is demonstrated, no abuse of discretion, State v. Johnson, 7 Wn.App. 527 (1972), aff'd, 82 Wn.2d 156 (1973); State v. Schaffer, 120 Wn.2d 616 (1993); II.

State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788 (1983)

Where information charges in the conjunctive ("taking and riding"), state is only required to prove disjunctive, see: State v. Munson, 120 Wn.App. 103 (2004); I.

State v. Powell, 34 Wn.App. 791 (1983)

Defendant is charged with felony murder 1°, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c)(5), pleads guilty, on appeal plea is reversed; upon remand state amends charge to premeditated murder 1°, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(a); defendant seeks dismissal for speedy trial violation because of failure to join a related offense, CrR 4.3(c); held: information may be amended to include an alternate means of committing a crime formerly charged without violating joinder or speedy trial rules; I.

State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984)

Defendant charged with one count each statutory rape and indecent liberties; victim-granddaughter testifies to numerous incidents; defense moves to require state to elect counts and to elect which incident is to be relied upon to convict; held: mere fact that victim is same is not enough to call the offense a continuing offense or transaction; state must elect or jury must be instructed that they must be unanimous as to which incident has been proved, modifying State v. Workman, 66 Wash. 292 (1911); 9-0.

State v. Alferez, 37 Wn.App. 508 (1984)

State amends information to add special allegations, sends copy to defense counsel but defendant is not arraigned on amended information; held: may not enhance penalty without actual notice, thus remanded for resentencing, State v. Theroff, 95 Wn.2d 385 (1980); III.

State v. Brisebois, 39 Wn.App. 156 (1984)

Trial court grants state's motion to amend information, during trial, to include a longer period of time of unlawful conduct; no written amendment was provided; held: information may be amended during trial without giving defendant a copy unless defense demands a copy or a different crime is charged, distinguishing State v. Carr, 97 Wn.2d 436 (1982); accord: State v. Newman, 63 Wn.App. 841 (1992); I.

State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985)

While a continuing course of conduct may form the basis of one charge in an information, the mere fact that the rape victim is the same is not enough to find that the offenses contained in a single count constitute a single transaction, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984); I.

State v. Allyn, 40 Wn.App. 27 (1985)

Where information is amended to change date of offense, and alibi is claimed, rearraignment and/or continuance were not required, see: State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58 (1991), State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185, 193-94 (2004), State v. Becklin, 133 Wn.App. 610, 614-15 (2006); III.

State v. Fischer, 40 Wn.App. 506 (1985)

Date of offense in information is outside statute of limitations, date in affidavit of probable cause is within statute, state's motion to amend information to change date of offense is denied, information dismissed; held: where charge is filed within statute of limitations but error is made in date crime is alleged to have occurred, state may amend information after the expiration of the limitations period if defendant had notice, amendment does not change the offense or alter a material element, and no prejudice is shown, State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58 (1991), see: State v. Peltier, 181 Wn.2d 290 (2014); I.

State v. Bryce, 41 Wn.App. 802 (1985)

Where original information charged a crime beyond the statute of limitations, trial court may not amend information to bring case within the limitation period, State v. Glover, 25 Wn.App. 58 (1979), but see: State v. Fischer, 40 Wn.App. 508 (1985); II.

State v. Holt, 104 Wn.2d 315 (1985)

Where information fails to allege statutory element of crime, defense may move to dismiss at any time; failure of defense to request bill of particulars does not waive issue as bill of particulars is not part of information and cannot cure a fundamentally defective information; a complete jury instruction cannot cure a defective information; 9-0.

State v. Royster, 43 Wn.App. 613 (1986)

Failure to arraign a defendant on an amended information is error only where defendant fails to have sufficient notice and adequate opportunity to defend, State v. Alferez, 37 Wn.App. 508, 516 (1984), State v. Allyn, 40 Wn.App. 27, 35 (1985); where defendant fails to request a copy of an amended information, he waives his right to receive such a copy, State v. Brisebois, 39 Wn.App. 156, 162 (1984); I.

State v. Flieger, 45 Wn.App. 667 (1986)

Where information and probable cause affidavit establish that state cannot make factual issue on each element, then the trial court may resolve the issue prior to trial; III.

State v. Purdom, 106 Wn.2d 745 (1986)

State's motion to amend information on day of trial from conspiracy to deliver drugs to accomplice is granted, defense motion for continuance is denied; held: when information is amended on day of trial, continuance should be granted if requested, State v. Jones, 26 Wn.App. 1, 6 (1980); 6-3.

State v. Hawthorne, 48 Wn.App. 23 (1987)

Where information is vague concerning the state's theory of what constitutes a conspiracy, charge is not subject to dismissal where the information can be amended, there is no prejudice, there is time to continue case under speedy trial rule, and state never disobeyed an order to provide greater specificity; where information contains elements that are not elements of the statutory offense they need not be proved by the state in a bench trial, State v. Benitez, 175 Wn.App. 116, 123-26 (2013), distinguishing State v. Worland, 20 Wn.App. 559 (1978), State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882 (1982); I.

State v. Baker, 48 Wn.App. 222 (1987)

At trial, state is granted leave to amend information to name a different victim; defense demands a copy of amended information, which is denied; held: harmless error where defendant was fully informed of the change and the change was a technical formality which did not address elements of the crime; but see: State v. Carr, 97 Wn.2d 438 (1982); accord: State v. Newman, 63 Wn.App. 841 (1992); I.

State v. Rivas, 49 Wn.App. 677 (1987)

Surplusage in an information need not be proved unless incorporated in jury instructions, State v. McGary, 37 Wn.App. 856 (1984), State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), see: State v. France, 180 Wn.2d 809 (2014), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), distinguishing State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882 (1982); I.

State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484 (1987)

Information may not be amended to charge a different crime after state has rested its case-in-chief unless new charge is a lesser included offense or a lesser degree of original charge, State v. Peterson, 133 Wn.2d 885 (1997), CONST. Art. 1, § 22 (amend. 10), State v. Cortes Aguilar, 176 Wn.App. 264, 274-75 (2013), State v. Gehrke, 193 Wn.2d 1 (2019); defense need not show prejudice, see: State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424 (1992), cf.: State v. Schaffer, 63 Wn.App. 761 (1991), State v. Hakimi, 124 Wn.App. 15, 26-28 (2004); 9-0 (5-4 on prejudice issue).

State v. Bray, 52 Wn.App. 30 (1988)

Where information charges one mode of committing crime, instructions may not allow jury to convict of alternative mode, State v. Chino, 117 Wn.App. 531, 538-41 (2003), State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 341-44 (2007), see: State v. Doogan, 82 Wn.App. 185 (1996), State v. S.E., 90 Wn.2d 886 (1998), State v. Boiko, 131 Wn.App. 595 (2006), State v. Brewczynski, 173 Wn.App. 541 (2013); I.

State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 679 (1989)

Failure of criminal complaint in misdemeanor case to state every element of offense mandates automatic dismissal, need not be raised at trial court level, State v. Holt, 104 Wn.2d 315 (1985); I.

State v. Nieblas-Duarte, 55 Wn.App. 376 (1989)

"Unlawfully and feloniously" equals knowingly, State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 384 (2001); I.

State v. Warren, 55 Wn.App. 645 (1989)
In rape 1° case with 11-year old victim, failure of information to allege nonmarriage as element is not grounds for dismissal where raised for first time on appeal, see: State v. Stockwell, 159 Wn.2d 394 (2007); I.

State v. Delcambre, 55 Wn.App. 681 (1989)
Intent to deprive is not an element of welfare fraud, RCW 74.08.331, which must be alleged in information; I.

State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989)
Amendment of information on first day of trial from rape to indecent liberties based upon the same evidence where defendant did not show prejudice was not error; II.

Seattle v. McKinney, 58 Wn.App. 607 (1990)
"DUI" on citation, coupled with references to ordinance subsections, is adequate to charge under blood alcohol level theory, State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 679 (1989), State v. Ortiz, 80 Wn.App. 746 (1996), State v. Grant, 104 Wn.App. 715 (2001), see: Seattle v. Norby, 88 Wn.App. 545 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Robbins, 138 Wn.2d 486 (1999); I.

State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740 (1990)
Robbery information that fails to allege the nonstatutory element of intent is still sufficient as long as facts in the information support the element of intent, State v. Strong, 56 Wn.App. 715, 717 (1990); see also: State v. Hernandez, 58 Wn.App. 793 (1990), State v. Mathews, 60 Wn.App. 761 (1991), but see: State v. Moavenzadeh, 135 Wn.2d 359 (1998), ; I.

Seattle v. Hein, 115 Wn.2d 555 (1990)
Essential elements rule, State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 679 (1989), applies to citations; 40-word per curiam opinion appears to hold that citation which reads "physical control" is insufficient.

State v. Weiding, 60 Wn.App. 184 (1991)
Information which cites a statute that is not yet in effect is not fatally defective where defense admits having full notice of crime charged and jury instructions clearly set out correct elements.

State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991)
Charging document must include all essential elements of the crime, statutory or common law, overruling State v. Johnson, 59 Wn.App. 867 (1990), State v. Hernandez, 58 Wn.App. 793 (1990), State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740 (1990), State v. Strong, 56 Wn.App. 715 (1990), State v. Smith, 49 Wn.App. 596 (1987), State v. Bower, 28 Wn.App. 704 (1981), to the extent that those cases hold that common law elements need not be pled; where charging document is challenged for the first time after verdict, see: State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936 (2000), it is sufficient where the necessary facts appear in any form, or by fair construction can be found within the terms of the charging document as long as all elements are present and there is no prejudice; thus, an apparently missing element may be fairly implied from language within the document; here, robbery information that does not allege "intent to steal" is sufficient, as information alleged that defendant unlawfully took money from cash register, against the will of victim by use of force while displaying a weapon, distinguishing State v. Hicks, 102 Wn.2d 182 (1984); insufficient charging document does not impact court's jurisdiction; 7-2.

State may amend aggravated murder complaint to add felony murder without being required to elect, State v. Irizarry, 111 Wn.2d 591 (1988), State v. Bowerman, 115 Wn.2d 794 (1990) disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); 9-0.

State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58 (1991)

Amending information after state rests and after defendant testifies to change date of offense, where no alibi or other substantial prejudice is offered and where a continuance is granted, is not error, State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185, 193-94 (2004), State v. Becklin, 133 Wn.App. 610, 614-15 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 519 (2008), State v. Goss, 189 Wn.App. 571, 576-77 (2015), affirmed, on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 372 (2016), State v. Brooks, 195 Wn.2d 91 (2020), distinguishing State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484 (1987); I.).

State v. Kitchen, 61 Wn.App. 915 (1991)

Failure of information to allege guilty knowledge as an element of delivery of a controlled substance, RCW 69.50.401(a), State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342, 344 (1979), is grounds for dismissal, even if raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93, 101 (1991); III.

State v. Sanchez, 62 Wn.App. 329 (1991)

Vehicular homicide information fails to allege proof of causal relationship between death and driving, State v. MacMaster, 113 Wn.2d 226 (1989); during trial, defense counsel acknowledged that state had to prove proximate causation, jury was so instructed, defense did not challenge sufficiency of information until appeal; held: information alleged "some language" giving notice of missing element, no prejudice, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991); see: State v. Tang, 75 Wn.App. 475-8 (1994), State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644 (1995); III.

State v. Rhode, 63 Wn.App. 630 (1991)

"Attempt" in information encompasses and is sufficient to inform defendant that "substantial step" is an element of the crime, State v. Smith, 49 Wn.App. 596, 599 (1987), overruled, in part, State v. Moavenzadeh, 135 Wn.2d 359 (1998), State v. Borrero, 97 Wn.App. 101 (1999), where no prejudice is shown, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93, 111 (1991); I.

State v. Newman, 63 Wn.App. 841 (1992)

State is granted leave to orally amend information to change charging period, defendant is not given copy; held: absent demand, defendant waives right to written information where no new crime is charged, State v. Carr, 97 Wn.2d 436 (1982), State v. Brisebois, 39 Wn.App. 156 (1985), State v. Baker, 48 Wn.App. 222 (1987); I.

State v. Ferro, 64 Wn.App. 195 (1992)

Complaint reads "RCW 9A.88.010 public indecency (see notes)"; held: for a complaint to adequately incorporate by reference, the incorporated document must be described with sufficient specificity that it can be readily and accurately identified as the document intended to be incorporated, here complaint is inadequate; I, 2-1.

State v. Graham, 64 Wn.App. 305 (1992)

Robbery 2° information that alleges defendant took property "unlawfully" but fails to allege common law element that defendant did not own property is sufficient where challenged for first time on appeal, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936, 944-45 (2000), see: State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701 (1995); I.

State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992)

On morning of trial, court permits state to amend from assault 2° (bodily injury) to assault 2° (deadly weapon), defense moves for continuance "to prepare a defense," motion denied; held: because defense failed to indicate any defense to amended charge that was not available as a defense to prior charge, no prejudice was shown, thus continuance motion was properly denied; III.

State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143 (1992)

In delivery of controlled substance case, information alleged defendants "unlawfully" delivered cocaine, did not specify defendants knew identity of substance delivered, State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979), defense challenged informations prior to trial; held: "unlawful" does not include "knowledge," State v. Armstrong, 69 Wn.App. 430 (1993) and, where challenged before trial, information is deficient, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991); see also: State v. Nuñez-Martinez, 90 Wn.App. 250 (1998), State v. Taylor, 140 Wn.2d 229 (2000); 8-1.

In promoting prostitution 1° case, RCW 9A.88.070(1), where amended information charges defendant "knowingly profit[ed] by compelling [victim] by force to engage in prostitution; and did advance and profit from prostitution of a person who was less than 18 years," failure to allege mens rea element of knowingly to promoting prostitution of a minor is fatal, even where raised for first time on appeal, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), irrespective of lack of prejudice; semicolon separating modes establishes that "knowingly" modifies only the first alternative means, as sentence structure and punctuation are the very means by which persons of common understanding are able to ascertain the meaning of written words, RCW 10.37.050; where information is amended, prior information is of no force and effect, even where it alleges all elements, In re Behrens, 24 Wn.2d 125, 133 (1945); Supreme Court holds that appropriate remedy is dismissal without prejudice to the state refiling, State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 440-1 (1992), cf.: State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324 (1995); I.

State v. Sanders, 65 Wn.App. 28 (1992)

Where information charges malicious mischief 3°, RCW 9A.48.090, but fails to allege amount of damage or whether crime charged is misdemeanor or gross misdemeanor, then information is sufficient to charge misdemeanor, distinguishing State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 679 (1989); see: State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782, 791-5 (1995); I.

State v. Gallegos, 65 Wn.App. 230 (1992)

An attempt is a lesser which need not be charged for trier of fact to convict; information which alleges that defendant, "by forcible compulsion did attempt to engage in sexual intercourse" sufficiently establishes elements of intent and substantial step where challenged for first time on appeal; I.

State v. Hartz, 65 Wn.App. 351 (1992)

In felony murder case, state need not allege in information the elements of the underlying felony, State v. Medlock, 86 Wn.App. 89, 101-2 (1997), see: State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 842 (1991); but see: Kreck v. Spalding, 721 F.2d 1229 (9th Cir. 1983); I.

State v. Bryant, 65 Wn.App. 428 (1992)

In felony murder case, state need not elect in information which alternative method of committing assault 1° will apply, see: State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 842 (1991); but see: Kreck v. Spalding, 721 F.2d 1229 (9th Cir. 1983); I.

State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992)

Drug delivery information alleges delivery to officer, prosecutor proves delivery to co-defendant, defense admits having full notice of actual charge against him and acknowledges case was tried and argued as if he had been charged with delivery to co-defendant; held: error in information was merely technical as it was not relied upon or even noticed by either party, distinguishing State v. Brown, 45 Wn.App. 571, 576 (1986); I.

Information which erroneously states maximum penalty is not defective; III.

Auburn v. Brooke, 119 Wn.2d 623 (1992)

Charging document, including citation, that recites no more than numerical code section and title of offense is insufficient unless it contains all essential elements of the crime charged; "disorderly conduct" and "Hit/Run; Attended" is insufficient; reverses Auburn v. Brooke, 60 Wn.App. 87 (1991) and Seattle v. Wandler, 60 Wn.App. 309 (1991); on collateral review, petitioners must show actual prejudice, as errors in charging documents do not constitute per se prejudicial error, In re St. Pierre, 118 Wn.2d 321, 329 (1992) (dicta), State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); retrial is permitted after a conviction is reversed due to defect in charging document, Montana v. Hall, 95 L.Ed.2d 354 (1987), Ball v. United States, 41 L.Ed. 300 (1896),

State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 441 (1992) (dicta); "statutes of limitation usually do not bar recharging," see: RCW 9A.04.080(3) (dicta); cf.: State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Schaffer, 120 Wn.2d 616 (1993)

Before resting during bench trial, state is permitted to amend malicious mischief information from "damage to tires" to "damage to tires and mailboxes;" held: absent specific evidence of prejudice, at least in bench trial, trial court may permit state to amend to different or additional manner of committing crime originally charged, CrR 2.1(e), distinguishing State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484 (1987), affirming State v. Schaffer, 63 Wn.App. 761 (1991), see: State v. Wilson, 56 Wn.App. 63 (1989), State v. Mahmood, 45 Wn.App. 200 (1986), State v. Gosser, 33 Wn.App. 428, 435 (1982), State v. Alvarado, 73 Wn.App. 874 (1994), State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782 (1995), State v. Aho, 89 Wn.App. 842, 845-50 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 736 (1999), State v. Ziegler, 138 Wn.App. 804 (2007), State v. Hockaday, 144 Wn.App. 918 (2008), 149 Wn.App. 521 (2009), but see: State v. Rapozo, 114 Wn.App. 321 (2002); 6-3.

State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509 (1993)

Amending information from burglary 2° to residential burglary on day of trial is proper where claimed prejudice is only that defendant is deprived of defense she would have had under prior information, or because sentence range is harsher, State v. James, 108 Wn.2d 483, 489-90 (1987); III.

State v. Armstrong, 69 Wn.App. 430 (1993)

After jury is sworn, defense counsel moves to dismiss VUCSA information for failure to allege mens rea element, State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143 (1992), court denies motion and then denies state's motion to amend to add element when defense objects; held: while trial court erred in denying motion to amend, error was invited as defense urged court to deny motion; "error being invited, the situation is the same as it would be if the motion to amend was granted," see: State v. Lewis, 15 Wn.App. 172 (1976); I.

VUCSA information that alleges "unlawfully deliver" but fails to allege "guilty knowledge," State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143 (1992), State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342 (1979), is sufficient to withstand a post-trial challenge where defense is entrapment and defendant alleged no prejudice; see: State v. Wallway, 72 Wn.App. 407, 410-14 (1994); I.

State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993)

Guilty knowledge is not an element in a conspiracy to deliver case, see: State v. Sims, 119 Wn.2d 138, 142 (1992), State v. Wilson, 95 Wn.2d 828 (1981); in a charge of delivery, failure to include guilty knowledge in information is not fatal when challenged for first time on appeal, where other counts in the same information alleged possession with intent to deliver cocaine and conspiracy to deliver cocaine; 8-0.

State v. VanValkenburgh, 70 Wn.App. 812 (1993)

In malicious mischief case, naming lessee of damaged property rather than fee owner in information is sufficient where challenged for first time on appeal, and where no prejudice is alleged or proved; III.

State v. Cozza, 71 Wn.App. 252 (1993)

Information charges indecent liberties of child between 1984 and 1987; held: defendant does not have due process right to reasonable opportunity to raise alibi defense, thus information alleging crime that occurred over three-year period is valid; see also: State v. Jordan, 6 Wn.2d 719, 721 (1940), State v. Warren, 55 Wn.App. 645 (1989), State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122, 126 (1984), State v. Bailey, 52 Wn.App. 42, 51 (1988), aff'd, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990), State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 429-31 (1996); III.

State v. Wallway, 72 Wn.App. 407, 410-14 (1994)

Failure to allege guilty knowledge, State v. Boyer, 91 Wn.2d 342, 344 (1979), in manufacturing controlled substance information, RCW 69.50.401(a), is not error, see: State v. Warnick, 121 Wn.App. 737 (2004), where raised for first time on appeal, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), where information does allege "unlawfully," State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143, 149-50 (1992); II.

State v. Alvarado, 73 Wn.App. 874 (1994)

State may not file an amended information absent approval of court, although defect is cured if approval is subsequently obtained; filing an amended information immediately prior to trial, even if it adds a count, is proper absent a specific showing of prejudice by the defense, State v. James, 108 Wn.2d 483, 489 (1987), State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509, 511 (1993); where accused fails to seek a continuance following late amendment, absence of surprise and prejudice is presumed, State v. Schaffer, 63 Wn.App. 761, 767 (1991), aff'd, 120 Wn.2d 616 (1993); III.

State v. Arseneau, 75 Wn.App. 747 (1994)

In incest 1°, RCW 9A.64.020(1), age of stepchildren and adopted children, RCW 9A.64.020(3), is defense, not element of crime; use of "stepdaughter" rather than "descendant" in information is sufficient when challenged for first time on appeal; I.

State v. Roberts, 76 Wn.App. 192 (1994)

In violation of drug burn statute, RCW 69.50.401(c), information alleging defendant negotiated delivery of cocaine and delivered another substance is sufficient even though it does not allege delivery of noncontrolled substance, where challenged on appeal; I.

State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782, 787-95 (1995)

In attempted murder 1° trial, allowing amendment after state rests to add premeditation element is an abuse of discretion even absent prejudice, State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484, 491 (1987), State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 433 (1992), State v. Hull, 83 Wn.App. 786, 799-803 (1996), State v. Quismundo, 164 Wn.2d 499 (2008), remedy is dismissal without prejudice to refile, State v. Simon, 120 Wn.2d 196, 199 (1992), distinguishing State v. Sanders, 65 Wn.App.

28 (1992); affirms State v. Vangerpen, 71 Wn.App. 94 (1993); cf.: State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324 (1995), State v. Hockaday, 149 Wn.App. 521 (2009); see: State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644, 647 (1995), State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919 (1995)

Defendant offers to plead guilty at arraignment, prosecutor's motion to continue in order to provide defense further discovery is granted over defense objection, before next hearing prosecutor amends to a greater charge; held: defendant was not prejudiced by the amendment as the prior plea offer could not be used at trial, ER 410; 6-2.

State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324 (1995)

Where trial court erroneously allows state to amend information to a different crime at the close of state's case, State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782 (1995), proper remedy is dismissal with prejudice under mandatory joinder analysis, CrR 4.3(c), see: State v. Ramos, 124 Wn.App. 334 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Holland, 77 Wn.App. 420, 426-7 (1995)

Defendant is charged with three counts of child molestation, each alleged to have occurred "between October 2 and November 2, 1991," defendant challenges sufficiency after verdict; held: liberally construed, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), defendant was informed he was charged with three separate instances of molestation, state need not fix a precise time of the offense where it cannot intelligently do so, particularly where victim is a young girl who could not remember the date of each offense, defendant was not prejudiced, as defense was that the events did not occur, State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122, 126 (1984); III.

State v. Lee, 128 Wn.2d 151 (1995)

Name of victim is not an element of larceny, at 158, State v. Jefferson, 74 Wn.2d 787, 790 (1968), State v. Easton, 69 Wn.2d 965, 967-8 (1966), State v. Greathouse, 113 Wn.App. 889, 899-906 (2002), although allegations of ownership must be sufficiently stated in an information to establish that the property was not that of the accused, at 159-60, need not be included in to convict instruction, at 160; reverses, in part, State v. Lee, 77 Wn.App. 119 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Corrado, 78 Wn.App. 612 (1995)

Due to missing witness, state seeks and obtains dismissal without prejudice; when witness is found, defendant is "rearraigned," but no new information is filed; held: superior court lacks subject matter jurisdiction without an information or indictment, but see: State v. Franks, 105 Wn.App. 950 (2001), conviction is void due to prosecutor's failure to refile, State ex rel. Superior Court of Snohomish County v. Sperry, 79 Wn.2d 69, 74 (1971), see: State v. Barnes, 146 Wn.2d 74 (2002), State v. Eaton, 164 Wn.2d 461 (2008); II.

State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701 (1995)

Robbery information that alleges, inter alia, that defendant "did unlawfully attempt to take personal property with intent to steal from the person" is insufficient, where challenged at the end of state's case, State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644 (1995), as it fails to allege that the property belonged to another, "steal" fails to cure defect, State v. Morgan, 31 Wash. 226 (1903), State v. Dengel, 24 Wash. 49 (1901), State v. Ralph, 85 Wn.App. 82 (1997), see: State v. Graham, 64 Wn.App. 305 (1992), but see: State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936, 944-45 (2000); I.

Conspiracy information, RCW 9A.28.040, need not allege "substantial step," State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 473-7 (1994); II.

State v. Tunney, 129 Wn.2d 336 (1996)

Assault 3° information, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(g), alleging that defendant "did assault officer who was performing official duties" is sufficient where challenged for first time after verdict, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93, 106 (1991), State v. Allen, 67 Wn.App. 824 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Brown, 140 Wn.2d 456 (2000); affirms State v. Tunney, 77 Wn.App. 929 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 429-31 (1996)

Defendant is charged with four counts of rape of a child over a two-year period, victim testifies defendant committed offense at least four times up to two-three times per week, allegations of each count are identical; held: if an information states each element but is vague as to some other matter, a bill of particulars can correct the defect, defendant who fails to demand a bill of particulars waives challenge to information as vague on appeal, State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 844 (1991); I.

State v. Oestreich, 83 Wn.App. 648 (1996)

Defendant is charged with robbery and burglary, pursuant to plea agreement state files amended information charging only robbery, to which defendant pleads guilty, later is granted leave to withdraw plea, state does not file second amended information or move to withdraw amended information, defendant later pleads guilty to both robbery and burglary, appeals burglary; held: defendant procured the amended information pursuant to plea bargain, thus rule that an amended information supersedes the original, State v. Navone, 180 Wash. 121, 123-4 (1934), State v. Kinard, 21 Wn.App. 587, 589-90 (1978), is inapplicable, State v. Johansen, 69 Wn.2d 187, 193-4 (1966); II.

State v. Hull, 83 Wn.App. 786, 799-803 (1996)

After state has rested, court may not permit amendment of information to add a required element even where the original information was deficient and charged no crime at all, State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782, 785-6 (1995); III.

State v. Williamson, 84 Wn.App. 37 (1996)

Information charges knowingly hinder, delay or obstruct an officer, former RCW 9A.76.020, state proves defendant gave false name; held: information is insufficient because the facts establish speech, not conduct which is what is prohibited by the former statute, State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92, 101 (1982), see: State v. Hoffman, 35 Wn.App. 13, 16 (1983), State v.

Swaite, 33 Wn.App. 477, 483 (1982), State v. E.J.J., 183 Wn.2d 497 (2015); court does not address sufficiency issue; II.

State v. Chaten, 84 Wn.App. 85 (1996)

Where defense challenges information after state rests, court should apply the pre-verdict strict standard, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93, 97 (1991), but see: State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936 (2000), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 314 (2016), even though state cannot amend, see: State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782, 788 (1995); I.

State v. Ralph, 85 Wn.App. 82 (1997)

Where defendant moves to dismiss based upon insufficiency of charging document after state and defense have rested but before verdict, strict construction of information analysis applies, State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782, 788 (1995), State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701, 703 (1995), State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644 (1995), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 314 (2016), but see: State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936 (2000) not liberalized standard, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991); information which charges that defendant "did steal" is insufficient to allege theft, as theft necessarily involves property of another, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a), but "steal" fails to include the ownership element, State v. Morgan, 31 Wash. 226, 228 (1903), State v. Bacani, supra. at 705; III.

State v. Peterson, 133 Wn.2d 885 (1997)

Defendant is charged with assault 1°, at bench trial following all the evidence, state is granted leave to amend to assault 2°, defendant is found guilty; held: state may amend at any time prior to verdict to an inferior degree crime, even if the elements are different, RCW 10.61.003, State v. Foster, 91 Wn.2d 466, 471 (1979), State v. Ackles, 8 Wash. 462, 464-5 (1894), distinguishing State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484 (1987); even absent an amendment, trier of fact may find defendant guilty of any degree inferior to that charged in the information; 9-0.

State v. Moavenzadeh, 135 Wn.2d 359 (1998)

Information alleging that defendant "did possess stolen property" is insufficient as it lacks mens rea element, State v. Khlee, 106 Wn.App. 21 (2001), overruling, in part, language to the contrary in State v. Sims, 59 Wn.App. 127 (1990) and State v. Smith, 49 Wn.App. 596 (1987); while "theft" may be adequate to convey intentional, wrongful taking, State v. Tresenriter, 101 Wn.App. 486, 494 (2000), value element must be set forth in information, cf.: State v. Tinker, 155 Wn.2d 219 (2005), State v. Leyda, 157 Wn.2d 335, 340-42 (2006); conspiracy information must allege "substantial step"; per curiam.

State v. Aho, 89 Wn.App. 842, 845-50 (1998), reversed, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 736 (1999)

In sexual assault of a child case, state advises defense in trial brief that it might add a count of child molestation as an alternative to rape charge, depending upon victim's testimony, after state calls last witness but before resting, state is permitted to so amend; held: state had not formally rested, thus amendment is permitted absent prejudice, State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484, 491 (1987), defense had sufficient notice of possible amendment, sole difference between charges was whether or not penetration was proved, thus additional discovery or a continuance could not have benefited defendant, thus no prejudice has been established, State v. Ziegler, 138 Wn.App. 804 (2007), State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021), see: State v. Schaffer, 120 Wn.2d 616 (1993), but see: State v. Gehrke, 193 Wn.2d 1 (2019), thus trial court did not abuse discretion, see: State v. Rapozo, 114 Wn.App. 321(2002); I.

State v. S.E., 90 Wn.App. 886 (1998)

Where language of information charges one subsection of a crime, but statutory citation alleges the crime generally, court cannot convict of the uncharged alternative, see: State v. Doogan, 82 Wn.App. 185, 188 (1996); I.

State v. Schloredt, 97 Wn.App. 789, 794-95 (1999)

Information charging possessing a stolen credit card is sufficient to charge possession of a stolen access device, RCW 9A.56.160(1)(c); I.

State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936 (2000)

Where defense challenges information after state rests, liberal State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991) standard applies, as state could no longer amend, State v. Tang, 75 Wn.App. 473, 477 n.3 (1994), distinguishing State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782, 789 (1995), State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 143, 150 (1992), but see: State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644 (1995), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 314 (2016), State v. Chaten, 84 Wn.App. 85 (1996), robbery information alleging that defendant displayed what appeared to be a deadly weapon in immediate flight and unlawfully took personal property intending to steal is sufficient to inform defendant that he used force to retain property and that he stole property of another, under liberal construction, State v. Graham, 64 Wn.App. 305 (1992), distinguishing State v. Morgan, 31 Wash. 226 (1903), State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701 (1995), State v. Ralph, 85 Wn.App. 82, 85-86 (1997); II.

State v. McCarty, 140 Wn.2d 420 (2000)

Drug conspiracy information which fails to allege involvement of more than two people is insufficient, State v. Miller, 131 Wn.2d 78, 91 (1997), even where raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Mendoza-Solorio, 108 Wn.App. 823, 829-33 (2001), cf.: State v. Morgan, 163 Wn.App. 341 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Johnston, 100 Wn.App. 126, 132-34 (2000)

Trial court dismisses a count for insufficiency after state rests, then grants state leave to amend to an inferior degree crime; held: court may allow the state to amend to an inferior degree crime at the end of the state's case, State v. Peterson, 133 Wn.2d 885, 893 (1997), even after dismissal, cf.: Hudson v. Louisiana, 67 L.Ed.2d 30 (1981), State v. LeFever, 102 Wn.2d 777 (1984), but see: Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 133 S.Ct. 1069, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013); III.

State v. Tresenriter, 101 Wn.App. 486, 490-94 (2000)

Burglary 1° information alleges that defendant intended to commit a crime against a person therein, omitting against property, "to convict" instruction requires proof of intent to commit a crime against a person or property, defense moves to dismiss with prejudice; held:

because an essential element is missing, and because other counts of theft in the information do not clearly relate to the burglary other than the date, even under liberal construction rule dismissal is mandated; because an uncharged crime is a nullity, jeopardy does not preclude refiling a proper information, thus dismissal without prejudice is proper remedy, distinguishing State v. Hescock, 98 Wn.App. 600 (1999); alleging "theft" is sufficient, under liberal construction, to charge theft, State v. Moavenzadeh, 135 Wn.2d 359, 364 (1998); II.

State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 384-86 (2001)

Unlawful possession of firearm information, RCW 9.41.040(1)(b), which alleges that defendant "unlawfully and feloniously" possessed firearm, but which fails to allege "knowingly" is sufficient when raised after trial, State v. Nieblas-Duarte, 55 Wn.App. 376, 378 (1989), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357, 366-67 (2000), see: State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221, 227-31 (2003); II.

State v. Grant, 104 Wn.App. 715 (2001)

Citation which alleges "driving while intoxicated" and includes statutory reference and BAC readings is sufficient for both BAC and "under the influence" means, State v. Ortiz, 80 Wn.App. 746 (1996), Seattle v. McKinney, 58 Wn.App. 607 (1990), where challenged after state has rested; "[w]hile the State must charge the elements of an offense, it need not charge the alternate means by which one might commit the offense," at 720; III.

State v. Franks, 105 Wn.App. 950 (2001)

Information names respondent in caption but charging language erroneously names co-respondent, raised for first time on appeal; held: while an information which is blank where defendant's name should be is sufficient, State v. Maldonado, 21 Wash. 653 (1899), Port Angeles v. Fisher, 130 Wash. 110 (1924), where the wrong name is used in charging language, a necessary fact is excluded, thus dismissed without prejudice; 2-1, I.

State v. Mendoza-Solorio, 108 Wn.App. 823, 829-33 (2001)

Drug conspiracy information which fails to allege involvement of more than two people is insufficient, State v. Miller, 131 Wn.2d 78, 91 (1997), even where raised for first time on appeal, State v. McCarty, 140 Wn.2d 420 (2000), cf.: State v. Morgan, 163 Wn.App. 341 (2011), and cannot be supplemented with the names of co-conspirators after trial; III.

Bellingham v. Struthers, 109 Wn.App. 864 (2001)

Citation charges "violation of no-contact order," cites RCW 10.99.040 prohibiting violation of pre-trial order, city proves violation of post-judgment order; held: erroneous reference to citation is a technical defect which does not require reversal, CrRLJ 2.1(a)(2); I.

State v. Barnes, 146 Wn.2d 74 (2002)

Defendant is charged by information with assault 3˚, later court grants leave to amend to add resisting arrest, defendant is arraigned, convicted, state neglects to file amended information; held: filing of original information conferred subject matter jurisdiction, distinguishing State v. Corrado, 78 Wn.App. 612 (1995); failure to file amended information has no impact upon jurisdiction, defendant was not prejudiced, conviction of resisting arrest affirmed, see: State v. Eaton, 164 Wn.2d 461 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Borrero, 147 Wn.2d 353 (2002)

Attempted murder information fails to allege "substantial step," RCW 9A.28.020(1), defense moves to dismiss after state rests; held: "substantial step" is commonly understood from the word "attempt," thus defendant had sufficient notice, see also: Pers. Restraint of Borrero, 161 Wn.2d 532 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Trujillo, 112 Wn.App. 390, 408-12 (2002)

Defendants are charged with assault 1˚ or, alternatively, attempted murder 1˚, court allows jury to convict of both crimes although defendant is only sentenced for attempted murder; held: alternatively charging technically duplicative crimes does not violate due process or double jeopardy where sentenced only for one, State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 437 (1992), State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 773 (1995), distinguishing State v. Gohl, 109 Wn.App. 817 (2001), State v. Womac, 160 Wn.2d 643 (2007), State v. Turner, 169 Wn.2d 448 (2010), State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 832-35 (2012); II.

State v. Rapozo, 114 Wn.App. 321 (2002)

After opening statement, defense moves to dismiss because prosecutor had charged the wrong crime, state motion to amend information is denied by court which dismisses, state appeals; held: trial court's decision that state's motion to amend was untimely was not untenable; discretion is the standard, not prejudice, see: State v. Schaffer, 120 Wn.2d 616, 621-22 (1993), State v. Aho, 89 Wn.App. 842, 845-50 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 736 (1999), State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 130-32 (2012), State v. Agustin, 1 Wn.App.2d 911 (2018), State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021); II.

State v. Spiers, 119 Wn.App. 85, 89-91 (2003)

Bail jumping information that states the class of crime defendant was charged with and failed to appear for is sufficient even if it does not specifically state the crime, State v. Anderson, 3 Wn.App.2d 67 (2018), see: State v. Gonzalez-Lopez, 132 Wn.App. 622 (2006), State v. Williams, 162 Wn.2d 177 (2007); II.

State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176, 184-86 (2003)

Rape 3° information is deficient where it fails to allege that complainant expressed her lack of consent by actual words or conduct under either strict or liberal standard, State v. Kjorsvik, 118 Wn.2d 93 (1991); 2-1, III.

State v. Goodman, 150 Wn.2d 774 (2004)

Information charges possession of "meth," defense challenges sufficiency for first time on appeal; held: specific identity of the controlled substance is an essential element of possession with intent to deliver, State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013), State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018), State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016), cf.: State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306 (2010), State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019), State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207

(2020), where challenged for first time on appeal, under liberal standard, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), defendant had due notice; affirms State v. Goodman, 114 Wn.App. 602 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Munson, 120 Wn.App. 103 (2004)

In leading organized crime case, RCW 9A.82.060, where information charges that defendant did intentionally "organize, manage, direct and finance" others with intent to engage in "forgery..., theft..., and possession of a controlled substance," prosecutor need not prove, at least at a bench trial, that defendant committed each of the alternatives, as statute lists alternatives in disjunctive, state may charge in conjunctive and prove disjunctive, State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788, 789-90 (1983); III.

State v. McGary, 122 Wn.App. 308 (2004)

Information charging criminal mistreatment 2°, RCW 9A.42.030(1), must allege that defendant created an imminent and substantial risk of death or great bodily harm by withholding basic necessities of life, and failure to allege withholding necessities is insufficient; here, case was tried on defective information, even though evidence was insufficient, defective information results in dismissal without prejudice; II.

State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 84-86 (2005)

In assault case, neither name of victim, State v. Plano, 67 Wn.App. 674 (1992), nor weapon used nor manner in which defendant used weapon are essential elements that need be alleged in information, State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 293-95 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014), State v. Lindsey, 177 Wn.App. 233, 239-48 (2013); where information is vague, a bill of particulars will resolve the vagueness, State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 679, 687 (1989); II.

State v. Griffith, 129 Wn.App. 482, 490-92 (2005)

After both parties rest, court allows state to amend information from dealing in child pornography, RCW 9.68A.050(1) to possession with intent to deal in child pornography, RCW 9.68A.050(2); held: possession with intent is not a lesser included offense of dealing in child porn, as "there are a myriad of situations in which one could publish, disseminate or finance child pornography without ever possessing it," at 491, thus amendment was improper; II.

State v. Courneya, 132 Wn.App. 347 (2006)

Where non-statutory element is missing from information (here, knowledge in hit and run, State v. Sutherland, 104 Wn.App. 122 (2001)), dismissal is remedy even where case was tried to a hung jury and instructions included the missing element; II.

State v. Williams, 162 Wn.2d 177 (2007)

Bail jumping information need not set forth the class of the underlying crime for which it is alleged defendant failed to appear, nor must the class appear in the to convict instruction, affirming State v. Williams,133 Wn.App. 714 (2006), overruling State v. Ibsen, 98 Wn.App. 214, 217 (1999), see: State v. Anderson, 3 Wn.App.2d 67 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Ziegler, 138 Wn.App. 804 (2007)

During prosecutor's case, court allows state to amend from child rape to child molestation and to add two counts of child rape; held: because there is no prejudice in amending from rape to molestation, the amendment was timely, State v. Aho, 89 Wn.App. 842, 845-50 (1990), aff'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 736 (1999), State v. Schaffer, 120 Wn.2d 616 (1993), State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021); adding additional counts is prejudicial, affecting defendant's ability to prepare his defense as trial strategy and plea negotiations would likely have been different, thus those counts are dismissed; II.

State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 337-40 (2007)

Information alleging interfering with reporting of domestic violence, RCW 9A.36.150, need not identify victim and the underlying domestic violence crime where other counts in the information do so, State v. Nonog, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010), cf.: State v. Holcomb, 200 Wn.App. 54 (2017), in challenging an information for the first time on appeal, reviewing court need not limit its inquiry to the specific count at issue; granting motion to amend information just prior to deliberations to conform to the instruction was error, State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484, 490-91 (1987); III.

State v. Tellez, 141 Wn.App. 479 (2007)

In telephone harassment case, trial court must define "true threat" in an instruction, State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36, 43 (2004), State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 207 (2001), but need not include it in to convict instruction, State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799, 804-07 (2010), nor must it be pled in information, State v. Warren, 161 Wn.App. 727, 745-56 (2011), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 542-45 (2013), distinguishing State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006); I.

State v. Eaton, 164 Wn.2d 461 (2008)

Original information charges possession of amphetamine, is amended before trial to cocaine, although amended information "does not appear in the record," jury is hung, defendant is rearraigned for possession of amphetamine although amended information charges possession of cocaine, prior to second trial court advises defendant that the charge is cocaine, defendant is convicted; held: court has subject matter jurisdiction upon filing of any information, amendment was effective, CrR 2.1(d), once information is amended the original information is deemed "quashed, abandoned or superseded," State v. Navone, 180 Wash. 121, 123-34 (1934); following mistrial, rearraignment is unnecessary, State v. Whelchel, 97 Wn.App. 813, 819 (1999), defendant was aware of the actual charge, thus conviction affirmed; 8-1.

State v. Quismundo, 164 Wn.2d 499 (2008)

Information lacks an element, after state rests defense moves to dismiss with prejudice, trial court allows state to reopen and amend; held: court may not allow state to reopen and amend to add an essential element after state has rested, State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782, 787-95 (1995), cf.: State v. Hockaday, 144 Wn.App. 918 (2008), 149 Wn.App. 521 (2009), fact that proper remedy is dismissal without prejudice and defense asked for wrong remedy does not cure the error as "[a] trial court's obligation to follow the law remains the same regardless of the arguments raised by the parties before it," cf.: State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Hockaday, 144 Wn.App. 918 (2008), 149 Wn.App. 521 (2009)

After state rests, prosecutor moves to amend information, advising court that she discussed amendment with defense counsel before resting and that defense had no problem with it; held: defendant's prior knowledge of and agreement to amendment eliminated the risk of prejudice, see: State v. Schaffer, 120 Wn.2d 616 (1993), distinguishing State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484 (1987); II.

State v. Brown, 169 Wn.2d 195 (2010)

Where information is missing an element and wholly fails to allege the element by any fair construction, then prejudice to defendant need not be shown and remedy must be dismissal without prejudice even where raised for the first time on appeal; per curiam.

State v. Nonog, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010)

One count in information charging interfering with reporting of domestic violence, RCW 9A.36.150, need not name the underlying domestic violence crime if other counts do so when challenged for first time on appeal, State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 337-40 (2007), overruling State v. Clowes, 104 Wn.App. 935, 940-42 (2001); affirms State v. Nonog, 145 Wn.App. 802 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Deer, 158 Wn.App. 854, 860-61 (2010)

After state rests, it is improper for court to allow state to amend an information from child molestation to rape of a child even where information cited the statute for rape of a child; I.

Pers. Restraint of Cruz Benavidez, 160 Wn.App. 165 (2011)

An information alleging a firearm allegation that cites to a former statute rather than its current codification where the language of the two statutes are identical provides sufficient notice to defend; III.

State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600, 616 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012)

Amending information changing date of offense by two days is not prejudicial if time remains to prepare a defense, State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509, 512 (1993); 2-1, III.

State v. Zillyette, 173 Wn.2d 784 (2012)

When challenging information for first time on appeal, appellate court must first construe information to determine whether the facts appear in or could be fairly construed from the face of the document, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), and then determine prejudice, reversing State v. Zillyette, 163 Wn.App. 124 (2011); per curiam.

State v. Kosewicz, 174 Wn.2d 683 (2012)

Defendants are charged with felony murder/kidnap and kidnapping 1°, Court of Appeals reverses kidnapping conviction because jury instruction contained a prong not charged in the kidnapping information, appellants argue that felony murder charge must be dismissed for the same reason even though jury instruction on felony murder only referred to the felony as kidnapping 1°, did not set out separate elements to include the uncharged prong, and no objection was made at trial; held: liberal construction of the information, to which no objection was made, was adequate to advise defendants of the elements of felony murder, state need not set out all of the elements of an underlying felony to convict of felony murder, State v. Whitfield, 129 Wash. 134, 139 (1924), just as state need not set forth aggravating circumstances in an information, State v. Siers, 174 Wn.2d 269 (2012), information does not need to specify the alternative means of committing the underlying felony, State v. Hartz, 65 Wn.App. 351, 354 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 130-32 (2012)

Defendant is charged with felon in possession of a firearm based upon a prior juvenile adjudication of indecent liberties, trial court allows defendant to withdraw his juvenile plea, state moves to amend information to allege the predicate felony of a different burglary to which defendant had pleaded guilty in juvenile court, trial court denies motion to amend; held: trial court may deny a state's motion to amend "in the interests of justice," CrR. 2.1(d), whether or not there is prejudice to the defendant's right to a fair trial, State v. Rapozo, 114 Wn.App. 321, 322-24 (2002), State v. Haner, 95 Wn.2d 858 (1981), state has not established that trial court abused its discretion in denying motion to amend, but see: State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021), cf.: State v. Agustin, 1 Wn.App.2d 911 (2018); reverses, in part, State v. Lamb, 163 Wn.App. 614 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Kiliona-Garramone, 166 Wn.App. 16 (2011)

Statute uses phrase "true and correct as to every material matter," RCW 74.08.055 (1979, 2009), information charges "material," omits "matter," trial court dismisses at end of state's case; held: dismissal without prejudice is normally unappealable, State v. Taylor, 150 Wn.2d 599, 602 (2003), where state cannot refile due to statute of limitations, state may appeal; applying liberal analysis as state was unable to amend, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), information was sufficient to inform defendant about the essence of the crime, no evidence of prejudice; 2-1, II.

State v. Rivas, 168 Wn.App. 882, 886-91 (2012)

Defendant is charged with one count of malicious mischief 2° for breaking windows of two vehicles with aggregate damage exceeding $750, information does not allege common scheme or plan; held: state may aggregate the value of damage to charge malicious mischief 2°, RCW 9A.48.100(2) (1984), but must allege common scheme in the information, failure to so allege is prejudicial even if challenged for first time on appeal, see also: State v. Hassan, 184 Wn.App. 140 (2014); II.

State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 542-45 (2013)

Information charging unlawful imprisonment need not include the statutory definition of "restrain;" the definition of an element of an offense is not an essential element that must be alleged in an information, State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. Saunders, 177 Wn.App. 259 (2013), State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021); 2-1, I.

State v. Peterson*,* 174 Wn.App. 828, 849-55 (2013)

In animal cruelty 1° charge, RCW 16.52.205(2), starvation, suffocation and dehydration are alternative means, State v. St. Clare, 198 Wn.App. 371 (2017), cf.: State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016), but see: State v. Jallow, 16 Wn.App.2d 625 (2021), State v. Shoop, 22 Wn.App.2d 242 (2022); I.

State v. Benitez*,* 175 Wn.App. 116, 123-26 (2013)

In bench trial, state need not prove surplusage charged in information as law of the case doctrine does not apply to a bench trial, State v. Hawthorne, 48 Wn.App. 23, 27 (1984), see: State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017); II.

State v. Owens*,* 180 Wn.2d 90 (2014)

Alternative means of committing trafficking stolen property 1°, RCW 9A.82.050 (2003), are facilitating theft of property so that it can be sold and facilitating the sale of property known to be stolen, State v. Lindsey, 177 Wn.App. 233, 239-48 (2013), overruling dicta in State v. Strohm, 75 Wn.App. 301, 307 (1994), State v. Hayes, 164 Wn.App. 459, 476 (2011), cf.: State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Goss*,* 189 Wn.App. 571, 576-77 (2015), affirmed, on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 372 (2016)

Amendment of charging period is usually not a material element, amendment of date is a matter of form rather than substance and should be allowed absent alibi defense or other substantial prejudice, State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58, 60-62 (1991); I.

State v. Ring*,* 191 Wn.App. 787 (2015)

In forgery case legal efficacy of the written instrument is not an essential element of the crime, rather it is definitional, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 300-02 (2014), State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021), distinguishing State v. Kuluris, 132 Wash. 149 (1925); II.

State v. Richie*,* 191 Wn.App. 916 (2015)

Before her shift begins store clerk observes defendant stealing wine, attempts to stop defendant who hits her with the bottle, defendant is convicted of robbery; held: to convict of robbery the state must prove that the theft was from one with ownership, representative capacity or possession, State v. Latham, 35 Wn.App. 862 (1983), State v. Hall, 54 Wash. 142, 143-44 (1909), State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705 (2005), off-duty clerk was acting in her employee capacity thus evidence was sufficient, however failure to include the implied element that victim had an ownership, representative or possessory interest in the property was error even absent an objection; II.

State v. Porter, 186 Wn.2d 85 (2016)

Information charging possession of a stolen vehicle, RCW 9A.56.068 (2007) and 9A.56.140 (2004), need not allege that the defendant withheld or appropriated the vehicle for the use of a person other than the true owner as that is merely definitional, State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 542-45 (2013), State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021), overruling State v. Satterthwaite, 186 Wn.App. 359 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Goss, 186 Wn.2d 372, 376-82 (2016)

Information charging child molestation 2° stating victim was "less than 14 years old" rather than statutory language "at least twelve … but less than 14," RCW 9A.44.086, as sole purpose of age in charging document is to differentiate degrees of child molestation and is not an essential element, at 376-82, see: State v. Smith, 122 Wn.App. 294, 296 (2004), distinguishing Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L.Ed.2d 314 (2013); affirms State v. Goss, 189 Wn.App. 571 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 314 (2016)

Assault of a child information lacks "reckless" element, RCW 9A.36.021(l)(a), defense motion to dismiss when state rests is denied; held: Division III holds that liberal standard applies when challenge to information is made after state rests, State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936 (2000)(Division II), disagreeing with Division I, State v. Chaten, 84 Wn.App. 85 (1996), information is insufficient and thus dismissed without prejudice.

State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017)

In unlawful possession of firearm case to convict instruction includes serial numbers and make and model of guns, state offers no evidence to support serial numbers; held: law of the case doctrine requires state to prove what is in the to convict instruction even if they are not elements of the crime, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), see: State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), unless the extra elements are in parenthesis, State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870 (2015); III.

State v. Holcomb, 200 Wn.App. 54 (2017)

Information charging interfering with reporting of domestic violence, RCW 9A.36.150 (1996), must set forth the underlying crime of domestic violence, even when challenged for the first time on appeal, cf.: State v. Nonog, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010), State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 337-40 (2007); III.

State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96, 105-14 (2018)

Information charges possession of methamphetamine, lab tech testifies substance taken from defendant contained meth and cocaine, to convict instruction omits reference to specific drug; held: while identify of a controlled substance is an essential element which must be included in the to convict instruction, State v. Goodman, 150 Wn.2d 774 (2004), , State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013), error is harmless as uncontroverted testimony that substance contained meth, however because different drugs have different maximum sentences defendant may only be sentenced for the lowest which is misdemeanor marijuana, State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016), State v. Barbarosh, 10 Wn.App.2d 408 (2019), see also: State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019), State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020); 2-1, II.

Name of the underlying crime is not an element of bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170 (2001), State v. Spiers, 119 Wn.App. 85, 89-91 (2003), State v. Gonzalez-Lopez, 132 Wn.App. 622 (2006), State v. Williams, 162 Wn.2d 177 (2007); II.

State v. Yallup, 3 Wn.App.2d 546 (2018)

Information alleges two counts of rape of a child within three year charging period, child victim testifies that separate incidents occurred within a 16 month period but does not narrow incidents more specifically; held: when charging "on or about" proof is not limited to the delineated time period, where time is not a material element "on or about" is sufficient to admit proof of the act at any time within the statute of limitations unless alibi is the defense, State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 432 (1996), State v. Osborne, 39 Wash. 548 (1905); where defendant is a "resident child molester" alibi or misidentification are not genuine defenses, State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738, 748-49 (1989), Hayes, supra. at 433; III.

State v. Gehrke, 193 Wn.2d 1 (2019)

Defendant is charged with felony murder/assault, at commencement of trial state informs court that it may amend to add manslaughter 1°, at end of state's case prosecutor informs court that it will rest after the court rules on its motion to amend, moves to amend to add manslaughter, defense objects, court grants motion, jury convicts of manslaughter; lead opinion (4 justices): amending to anything other than a lesser included or lesser degree offense when state has completed its case-in-chief, regardless of whether or not state has announced that it has rested, is per se prejudicial in violation of defendant's right to be informed of the charge, State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484, 490 (1987), State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 433 (1992), CrR 2.1(d), manslaughter is not a lesser of felony murder/assault, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457, 469 (2005), failure of defense to seek a continuance during trial as opposed to before commencement of trial is not evidence of a lack of prejudice, distinguishing State v. Brown, 74 Wn.2d 799, 801 (1968); concurring opinion (2 justices): motion to amend is timely up until state formally rests, which did not occur here, thus while motion was timely defense here showed prejudice as self-defense to manslaughter involves a different strategy to self-defense to felony murder, but see: State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021).

State v. Merritt, 193 Wn.2d 70 (2019)

Statute of limitations is not an element of a crime that must be included in an information; while RCW 10.37.050(5) (2010) does state that an information should include language that the crime was committed within the statute of limitations, it provides no remedy thus, at least absent an objection, an information that lacks that statement is still sufficient; affirms State v. Merritt, 200 Wn.App. 398, 405-06 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Barboza-Cortez, 194 Wn.2d 639 (2019)

Unlawful possession of a firearm 2°, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a), and identity theft 2°, RCW 9.35.020(1), are not alternative means crimes, overruling, in part, State v. Barboza-Cortez, 5 Wn.App. 86, 88-89 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Pry, 194 Wn.2d 745 (2019)

Information charging rendering criminal assistance 1°, RCW 9A.76.070(1), is insufficient, even if raised for first time on appeal, if it does not contain the elements set out in RCW 9A.76.050 which are not definitional, State v. Budik, 173 Wn.2d 727, 736-37 (2012), cf.: State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021), State v. Derri, 17 Wn.App.2d 376 (2021), aff'd, on different grounds, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022); 7-2.

State v. Downey, 9 Wn.App.2d 852 (2019)

Defendant is charged with vehicular assault, information alleges only the means of reckless driving, court, at defense request, instructs as to the alternative uncharged means of disregard for the safety of others, on appeal defense claims lack of notice per State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484, 491 (1987); held: since defense requested the instruction defense had notice; I.

State v. Brooks, 195 Wn.2d 91 (2020)

After both parties rest trial court grants state's motion, over objection, to expand the time period in the information, defense does not seek a continuance; held: because the date of an offense is "usually" not a material element of the crime, State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58, 61-62 (1991), and because the information alleged "on or about," State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484, 490 (1987), does not apply, defense failed to show prejudice thus trial court did not abuse discretion; 9-0.

State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021)

Trial court's decision granting state's motion to amend is discretionary, defense has burden to establish specific prejudice to a substantial right, State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662, 666 (1991), see: State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 130-32 (2012); while there is a presumption of vindictiveness where state seeks to amend to a higher charge, defendant asserting prosecutorial vindictiveness in the pretrial context bears the burden of establishing either actual vindictiveness or "a realistic likelihood of vindictiveness which will give rise to a presumption of vindictiveness," State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 791 (1998), United States v. Goodwin, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982), State v. McKenzie, 31 Wn.App. 450 (1981), State v. Penn, 32 Wn.App. 911 (1982), State v. McDowell, 102 Wn.2d 341 (1984), State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300 (1989), State v. Soderholm, 68 Wn.App. 363 (1993), State v. Lee, 69 Wn.App. 31 (1993), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); 6-3.

State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021)

Information charging promoting prostitution, RCW 9A.88.080(1)(b), which does not define the element "advances prostitution" is not deficient as an information need not include definitions, State v. Porter, 186 Wn.2d 85, 91 (2016), State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 302, 325 (2014), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 545 (2013); definitions are not transformed into essential elements even if they must ultimately be proved at trial to obtain a conviction, State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611, 626-30 (2013); I.

Information charging possession of a motor vehicle theft tool, RCW 9A.56.063(1), that lacks the element of intent is insufficient; III.

State v. Martinez Platero, 17 Wn.App.2d 716 (2021)

Defendant is charged with rape of a child, just before state rests court grants amendment to child molestation, defense objects arguing that counsel tailored cross based on original charge and amendment was not timely, defendant testifies that he did not penetrate or touch; held: state had not formally rested so motion was timely, while lead opinion in State v. Gehrke, 193 Wn.2d 1 (2019) would hold that "functional resting" is the test for timeliness of a motion to amend it is a plurality opinion and thus not binding; amendment to a different crime is permitted absence prejudice, State v. Aho, 89 Wn.App. 842, 845-50 (1998), reversed, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 736 (1999); I.

State v. Briggs, 18 Wn.App.2d 544 (2021)

Information charging no contact order violation, RCW 10.99.050(2)(a), that does not include mens rea element of "willfulness" is deficient even when raised for the first time on appeal; information alleging attempted violation of a no contact order must include mens rea element that defendant intended to commit the specific crime; I.

State v. Level, 19 Wn.App.2d 56 (2021)

Information charges defendant with "unlawfully" possessing a stolen motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.068(1) and 9A.56.140 prohibit knowingly possessing a stolen motor vehicle, defense raises it for first time on appeal; held: "unlawfully" is insufficient to convey an inference that the conduct was done "knowingly," thus reversed without prejudice; III.

State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 1267 (2022)

That portion of robbery statute that states "[s]uch force or fear must be used to obtain or retain possession of the property, or to prevent or overcome resistance to the taking, RCW 9A.56.190, is an essential element of the crime, disapproving, in part, State v. Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019), but, where challenged after trial the element can be fairly implied by inclusion of the language "take…by…immediate force…and fear; affirms State v. Derri, 17 Wn.App.2d 376 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Chambers, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 649 (2022)

Information charging dissemination and possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68A.050(1) –(2) (2019) and RCW 9.68A.070(1) (2019), is sufficient, where challenged for the first time on appeal, although it does not allege that defendant was aware of the general nature of the material he possessed as it is implied; III.

INSANITY

State v. Griffith, 91 Wn.2d 572 (1979)

At arraignment, defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, moves for appointment of expert, trial court denies motion without prejudice, appoints court experts, defendant does not pursue insanity defense nor seek further appointment of defense psychiatrist; held: while it was error not to appoint a defense expert at arraignment, defendant's withdrawal of insanity defense results in harmless error; court need not appoint defense expert to assist defendant in preparing to be evaluated by state's expert; 9-0.

State v. Wilcox, 92 Wn.2d 610 (1979)

For disposition following insanity acquittal, state has burden of showing dangerousness by preponderance; 6-3.

State v. Jamison, 94 Wn.2d 663 (1980)

Psychologist testified defendant had a limited ability to perceive nature and quality of act; held that this is insufficient to support insanity instructions; insanity is available only to those who have lost contact with reality so completely that they are beyond any of the influences of the criminal law; 8-0.

State v. Crenshaw, 27 Wn.App. 326 (1980), affirmed, on other grounds, 98 Wn.2d 789 (1983)

Lay witness may testify as to opinion of defendant's sanity; 2-1, I.

State v. Thompson, 28 Wn.App. 728 (1981)

At conditional release revocation hearing, court may consider evidence presented at prior revocation hearings; I.

State v. Stoudamire, 30 Wn.App. 41 (1981)

Court need not instruct jury of consequences of an insanity acquittal; accord: Shannon v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 459 (1994); I.

In re Herman, 30 Wn.App. 321 (1981)

Commitment following acquittal by reason of insanity is not justified by a showing that defendant represents a danger only to a particular item of property; state has burden of showing by a preponderance that defendant is a danger to others or is likely to commit felonious acts jeopardizing public safety; here, defendant kept destroying the same statue, but committed no other felonious acts, thus commitment improper; II.

State v. Jones, 32 Wn.App. 359 (1982), rev'd, on other grounds, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983)

Where jury returns special verdict finding that defendant does not present substantial likelihood of committing felonious acts but is a substantial danger to other persons, court may commit or conditionally release; I.

State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982)

Juvenile respondent retains court-appointed psychiatrist for decline hearing, JuCR 9.3(a); after decline, respondent raises insanity defense; held: where respondent raises insanity defense, statements uttered by respondent in the context of a psychiatric examination are removed from the reach of the Fifth Amendment and the attorney-client privilege, see: concurring opinion at 29, State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004), Kansas v. Cheever, 571 U.S. 87, 134 S.Ct. 596, 187 L.Ed.2d 519 (2013); accord: State v. Jones, 111 Wn.2d 239 (1988), State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457 (1990); 5-4.

State v. Kolocotronis, 34 Wn.App. 613 (1983)

A petition for final discharge filed within one year of a prior determination denying final discharge must be accompanied by an affidavit showing improvement in petitioner's mental condition; a petition filed pursuant to RCW 10.77.200(3) (without DSHS approval) triggers procedure set forth in RCW 10.77.200(2) (with DSHS approval); I.

State v. Wicks, 98 Wn.2d 620 (1983)

Where voluntary use of intoxicants is the direct and immediate cause of insanity, defense is not entitled to insanity instructions unless the influence of intoxicants triggers an underlying psychotic disorder of a settled nature, State v. Thompson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 498 P.3d 40 (2021); 7-2.

State v. Keller, 98 Wn.2d 725 (1983)

Revocation of conditional release may be based on a showing of either a violation of a condition of release or renewed dangerousness, irrespective of the statute's use of the conjunctive, former RCW 10.77.190(3); 9-0.

State v. Crenshaw, 98 Wn.2d 789 (1983)

Where defendant knew the illegality of the act, he does not meet M'Naghten test, see: State v. Johnson, 150 Wn.App. 663, 674-76 (2009), State v. Chanthabouly, 164 Wn.App. 104 (2011); only exception is where defendant knew the act is legally wrong but the act was "ordained by God," State v. Applin, 116 Wn.App. 818 (2003), State v. Cameron, 100 Wn.2d 520 (1983), State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577 (1988), but see: State v. Potter, 68 Wn.App. 134 (1992); court should not define "wrong" in instructions to jury; legislature codified M'Naghten test in 1975, thus language in cases prior to codification is disapproved.

State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983)

Court may "rarely, if ever" impose an insanity plea on a competent defendant over the defendant's objection, State v. Coristine, 177 Wn.2d 370 (2013), reversing State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 639 (1977), and reverses, in part, State v. Jones, 32 Wn.App. 359 (1982); see also: State v. Hahn, 41 Wn.App. 826 (1985), State v. Hartley, 56 Wn.App. 562 (1990), State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 604-05 (2005), State v. Lynch, 178 Wn.2d 487 (2013); 5-4.

Jones v. United States, 77 L.Ed.2d 694 (1983)

Statute which permits indefinite commitment to a mental hospital for a defendant acquitted by reason of insanity, where the commitment exceeds the maximum penalty had defendant been convicted, does not violate due process clause; 5-4.

State v. Higa, 38 Wn.App. 522 (1984)

Bizarre behavior in court is not enough for court to interpose NGI plea over defendant's objection; II.

State v. Harris, 39 Wn.App. 460 (1985)

Where accused is acquitted of multiple charges by reason of insanity, he cannot be detained for more than the maximum prison term for any single crime with which he was charged, i.e., must assume terms were concurrent, State v. Reanier, 157 Wn.App. 194 (2010); I.

State v. Hicks, 41 Wn.App. 303 (1985)

Special verdict form, RCW 10.77.040, does not deny defendant due process rights by suggesting to jury that defendant might be released if acquitted on grounds of insanity; court need not instruct jury that, if acquitted by reason of insanity, he will be hospitalized, State v. McDonald, 89 Wn.2d 256 (1977); I.

State v. Lover, 41 Wn.App. 685 (1985)

Where defendant wishes to raise self-defense and insanity, defendant is not entitled to a bifurcated trial; trial court must establish whether or not defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived right to plead not guilty by reason of insanity and, in absence of proof that defendant understood the waiver, case is remanded for trial on insanity issue; I.

Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 83, 84 L.Ed.2d 53 (1985)

Where a defendant has made a preliminary showing that his sanity at the time of offense is likely to be a significant factor at trial, state must provide access to a psychiatrist's assistance if defendant is indigent, McWilliams v. Dunn, 137 S. Ct. 1790, 198 L. Ed. 2d 341 (2017); dicta that the motion should be ex parte, 84 L.Ed.2d at 66; 7-1-1.

State v. Box, 109 Wn.2d 320 (1987)

Requiring defendant to prove insanity by preponderance, RCW 10.77.030(2), does not violate due process, State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 233-46 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577 (1988)

Where court instructs jury based on pattern instruction of M'Naghten test, RCW 9A.12.010, prosecutor may not argue to jury what that means based on caselaw interpreting the statute; harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Jones, 111 Wn.2d 239 (1988)

Statements to a psychologist with respect to competency are admissible at trial where defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, even where the statements were made prior to the NGI plea, State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983), State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Sommerville, 111 Wn.2d 524 (1988)

Trial court must analyze a motion for acquittal by reason of insanity, RCW 10.77.080, on the merits and not merely to determine if there is a jury question, State v. Wheaton, 121 Wn.2d 347, 362 (1993), overruling State v. McDonald, 89 Wn.2d 256, 267 (1977); where defendant is acquitted by reason of insanity on one charge but convicted on another, he is to be committed to the hospital first, then, upon completion of that commitment, sent to prison; see also: State v. Sommerville, 86 Wn.App. 700 (1997); 8-1.

State v. Jeppesen, 55 Wn.App. 231 (1989)

In deciding whether to bifurcate guilt and insanity stages of trial, court should determine (1) if both insanity and defense on the merits is supported by the facts and the law, and, if they are, (2) determine likelihood of prejudice to defendant which may result if both defenses are presented in a unitary trial, see: State v. Jones, 32 Wn.App. 359 (1982), reversed, in part, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983), State v. Monschke, 133 Wn.App. 313, 334-35 (2006); I.

State v. Hartley, 56 Wn.App. 562 (1990)

Defendant entered NGI plea, withdrew it, was convicted, then argued that he did not validly waive NGI plea; at hearing, state calls defense counsel regarding counsel's advice; held: voluntariness of waiver of NGI plea may be determined by extrinsic evidence; attorney-client privilege does not apply to calling defense counsel, as disclosure of the fact that counsel has advised a client of the advantages and disadvantages of an NGI plea is unlikely to indirectly disclose client communications, State v. Chervenell, 99 Wn.2d 309 (1983); I.

Lee v. Hamilton, 56 Wn.App. 880 (1990)

A person committed to state hospital following insanity acquittal is entitled to credit for time served at hospital for competency evaluation prior to acquittal; II.

State v. Autrey, 58 Wn.App. 554 (1990)

For trial court to accept a motion for acquittal by reason of insanity, RCW 10.77.080, due process requires that defendant be informed of and understand (1) elements of crime, (2) by making motion, he admits to committing the acts charged and cannot later contest this, (3) he waives right to remain silent, right to confront, right to jury trial,and (4) he can be committed for up to maximum term, State v. Brasel, 28 Wn.App. 303 (1981), State v. Schwab, 141 Wn.App. 85, 93-94 (2007); trial court should try to avoid questions that call for a simple "yes" or "no" response; I.

State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457 (1990)

Defense retains psychiatrist who interviews defendant for insanity defense; defense discloses that it will not call this psychiatrist, whereupon state seeks discovery of reports and serves psychiatrist with subpoena to testify at trial; held: attorney-client privilege does not extend to testimony of psychiatrist when defendant raises insanity as a defense, State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1, 20 (1982); psychiatric examination at defendant's request to prove insanity defense waives right to raise a Fifth Amendment challenge to state's use of evidence obtained through that examination to rebut the defense, Powell v. Texas, 106 L.Ed.2d 551, 556 (1989), see: State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004); right to counsel not violated by use of psychiatrist by state or by court-ordered disclosure of psychiatrist's reports, Buchanan v. Kentucky, 97 L.Ed.2d 336 (1987); CrR 4.7(b)(2)(x) authorizes court to order disclosure of written reports in possession of defense which have been prepared by defense psychiatrists who examine defendant on issue of sanity where an insanity defense is raised, irrespective of defense decision not to call psychiatrist who prepared report; work product doctrine, in a criminal case, applies only to "opinions, theories or conclusions" of defense counsel, CrR 4.7(f)(1), and does not extend to reports and testimony of experts, as CR 26 does not apply to criminal cases, see also: Kansas v. Cheever, 571 U.S. 87, 134 S.Ct. 596, 187 L.Ed.2d 519 (2013); 7-2.

Insanity acquittee is entitled to release when s/he is no longer mentally ill, irrespective of dangerousness, Jones v. United States, 77 L.Ed.2d 694 (1983), State v. Sommerville, 86 Wn.App. 700 (1997), see also: Addington v. Texas, 60 L.Ed.2d 323 (1979), State v. Klein, 156 Wn.2d 102 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Paul, 64 Wn.App. 801 (1992)

When Secretary of DSHS recommends conditional release, RCW 10.77.150(2), state has burden of persuasion by preponderance; III.

State v. Potter, 68 Wn.App. 134 (1992)

Deific decree which overcomes defendant's volitional control but does not overcome defendant's cognitive ability to know that his act is wrong is insufficient to establish insanity defense, cf.: State v. Crenshaw, 98 Wn.2d 789, 798 (1983), State v. Cameron, 100 Wn.2d 520, 527 (1983), State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 604 (1988), State v. Applin, 116 Wn.App. 818 (2003); II.

State v. Pepin, 76 Wn.App. 196 (1994)

Where Secretary of DSHS opposes final discharge, defendant has burden of proof by preponderance, State v. Kolocotronis, 27 Wn.App. 883 (1980), distinguishing Foucha v. Louisiana, 118 L.Ed.2d 437 (1992); I.

State v. Sunich, 76 Wn.App. 202 (1994)

Commitment following insanity acquittal shall be for up to maximum penalty for crime, irrespective of SRA sentence range, RCW 10.77.020(3); II.

In re Weaver, 84 Wn.App. 290 (1996)

A juvenile acquitted by reason of insanity may not be committed pursuant to RCW 10.77, as a juvenile offense is not a felony, RCW 10.77.110, In re Frederick, 93 Wn.2d 28, 30 (1980); II.

State v. Greene, 139 Wn.2d 64 (1999)

Dissociative Identity Disorder (DID), formerly called multiple personality disorder, meets Frye test, as it is accepted in DSM-IV; even if generally accepted in principle, scientific evidence is inadmissible unless helpful to trier of fact under particular facts of specific case, ER 702; here, the evidence failed to establish which personality the mental evaluation should focus upon, thus expert testimony is inadmissible, see: State v. Wheaton, 121 Wn.2d 347 (1993); reverses State v. Greene, 92 Wn.App. 80 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Platt, 143 Wn.2d 242 (2001)

Where DSHS opposes conditional release, defendant has burden of proving lack of mental illness, , see: State v. Howland, 180 Wn.App. 196 (2014), State v. Beaver, 184 Wn.2d 321 (2015); affirms State v. Platt, 97 Wn.App. 494 (1999); I.

State v. Applin, 116 Wn.App. 818 (2003)

Where deific decree defense is presented, State v. Crenshaw, 98 Wn.2d 789 (1983), State v. Potter, 68 Wn.App. 134 (1992), court need not instruct jury defining and distinguishing moral from legal wrong, State v. Cameron, 100 Wn.2d 520, 526-27 (1983); I.

State v. Barrows, 122 Wn.App. 902 (2004)

Where trial court grants a motion for acquittal, RCW 10.77.080, trial has occurred for purposes of CrR 3.3, and court's failure to enter findings does not entitle defendant to a dismissal; III.

State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004)

Defendant raises insanity defense, at examination by state's experts refuses to answer questions which might be incriminating, state's experts report that they could not form an opinion as to sanity at time of the offense, state moves to exclude insanity defense, trial court denies state's motion but permits state to refer to defendant's silence at trial; held: defendant has statutory right to refuse to answer questions that may be incriminating, RCW 10.77.020(3), State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457, 460-66 (1990), State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1, 20 (1982), distinguishing State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 876-80 (1998); state may offer evidence of defendant's silence for the purpose of explaining why the state's experts were unable to form an opinion as to sanity, defense is entitled to an instruction that jury may not infer sanity from defendant's refusal to answer incriminating questions, distinguishing State v. Easter, 130 Wn.2d 228, 241 (1996); 6-3.

State v. Matthews, 132 Wn.App. 936 (2006)

A jury rejection of insanity defense is reviewable, standard is whether, considering the evidence in a light most favorable to the state, could a rational trier of fact have found that defendant failed to prove the defense by a preponderance, State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 17 (1996), State v. Chanthabouly, 164 Wn.App. 104 (2011); here, while four experts testified defendant was insane, one testified he was sane and lay witnesses testified to defendant's demeanor, words and conduct at the time of the offense, thus evidence was sufficient to support verdict; I.

Clark v. Arizona, 165 L.Ed.2d 842 (2006)

State law which limits expert testimony about a defendant's mental incapacity to an insanity defense but not on the element of mens rea does not violate due process, see also: Kahler v.. Kansas, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1021, 206 L.Ed.2d 312 (2020); 5-4.

State v. Johnson, 150 Wn.App. 696, 6773-76 (2009)

Where fetal alcohol syndrome expert never met defendant and testified in offer of proof that he had no knowledge how defendant was affected by the syndrome, trial court did not abuse discretion by excluding his testimony that people with the syndrome have an impairment in reasoning about the right thing to do, see: State v. Crenshaw, 98 Wn.2d 789, 797-98 (1983); I.

State v. Reanier, 157 Wn.App. 194, 203-09 (2010)

Defendant agrees to insanity acquittal and commitment for ten years for two counts of assault 3°, after conditional release at revocation hearing, defendant challenges length of commitment; held: where accused is acquitted by reason of insanity, commitment period is limited to the maximum sentence for the most serious crime, i.e., must treat commitment as if the sentences were concurrent, RCW 10.77.025(1) (2000), State v. Harris, 39 Wn.App. 460 (1985); I.

State v. Chanthabouly, 164 Wn.App. 104 (2011)

A defendant's psychotic delusion that he needed to kill victim in self defense may support an insanity defense but absent evidence supporting an objective self defense standard, defendant is not entitled to self defense instructions; II.

State v. C.B., 165 Wn.App. 88 (2012)

Court may authorize forced medication to a defendant found not guilty by reason of insanity, as RCW 10.77.120 (2010) authorizes the department to "provide adequate care and individualized treatment;" II.

State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 272-77 (2012)

When defendant raises insanity as a defense, court may order defendant to submit to an examination by a state psychiatrist, State v. Hutchinson, 111 Wn.2d 872, 188 (1989); trial court must balance defendant's Fifth Amendment rights and ability of state to gather information to contravene defendant's claim of insanity by weighing incriminating nature of statements defendant made to state's expert against its probative value; statement should not be ruled incriminating merely because it shows defendant was capable of committing the crime, but trial court should exclude defendant's statements that he committed the crime, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 870 (1998); I.

State v. Bao Dinh Dang, 178 Wn.2d 868 (2013)

Failure to adhere to terms of a conditional release alone is not sufficient to revoke conditional release, court must first find dangerousness, O'Connor v. Donaldson, 422 U.S. 563, 575, 45 L.Ed.2d 396 (1975), see: State v. Beaver, 184 Wn.2d 321 (2015), by preponderance, not clear, cogent and convincing, distinguishing Addington v. Texas, 441 U.S. 418, 433, 60 L.Ed.2d 323 (1979); hearsay evidence is admissible at a revocation hearing only if there is good cause to forgo live testimony, State v. Dahl, 139 Wn.2d 678, 686 (1999), defined in terms of difficulty and expense of procuring witnesses in combination with demonstrably reliable or clearly reliable evidence; affirms State v. Bao Dinh Dang, 168 Wn.App. 480 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Howland, 180 Wn.App. 196 (2014)

Insanity acquittee petitions for conditional release, defendant's therapist and hospital Risk Review Board oppose release, defendant presents no expert evidence to support her petition, trial court denies a hearing; held: trial court has discretion whether or not to held a hearing on applications recommended for disapproval by DSHS, RCW 10.77.150(3)(a), absent some evidence to support defendant's position trial court did not abuse discretion, there was no probable error thus discretionary review denied; I.

State v. Derenoff, 182 Wn.App. 458 (2014)

Insanity acquitee need not be restored to competency before or during a less restrictive alternative revocation hearing; II.

State v. Beaver, 184 Wn.2d 321 (2015)

Trial court, following insanity acquittal, finds acquittee dangerous and commits, at later conditional release revocation hearing evidence establishes that he is no longer mentally ill, court revokes based upon violation of conditions alone; held: where court finds an insanity acquittee mentally ill and dangerous, due process does not require that court find a current mental illness in order to revoke, distinguishing State v. Bao Dinh Dang, 178 Wn.2d 868 (2013), insanity is presumed to continue to exist until defense proves defendant has regained sanity, State v. Platt, 97 Wn.App. 494, 505, aff'd, 143 Wn.2d 242 (2001); affirms State v. Beaver, 184 Wn.App. 235 (2014); 9-0.

State v. West, 185 Wn.App. 625 (2015)

Failure to make a motion to acquit, RCW 10.77.080 (1998), is not ineffective assistance where, here, jury rejected defendant's insanity defense; III.

McWilliams v. Dunn, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S.Ct. 1790, 198 L.Ed.2d 341 (2017)

Two days before capital sentencing hearing court appointed neuropsychologist (employed by the state Department of Mental Health) who provides an evaluation and mental health records, defense seeks a recess and an expert to assist defense in evaluating the report and translate the data into a legal strategy, denied by trial court; held: Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 105 S.Ct. 1087, 84 L.Ed.2d 53 (1985) requires, when threshold criteria are met, the government must provide an indigent defendant with access to a mental health expert who is sufficiently available to the defense, and independent of the prosecution, to effectively "assist in evaluation, preparation, and presentation of the defense, *id.*at 83, 105 S.Ct. 1087, which should include help in preparing direct or cross-examination, denied by trial court here, thus reversed; 5-4.

An insanity acquitee can choose between petitioning the court for conditional release, State v. Reid, 144 Wn.2d 621 (2001), RCW 10.77.200(50 (2010), or apply indirectly through DSHS, and in either circumstance, s/he is entitled to appointment of counsel, reversing State v. Fletcher, 198 Wn.App. 157 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Coleman, 6 Wn.App.2d 507 (2018)

An insanity acquitee's denial of final release, RCW 10.77.200, is appealable; I.

Kahler v. Kansas, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1021, 206 L.Ed.2d 312 (2020)

Due process does not oblige a state to adopt an insanity defense; 6-3.

State v. Thompson, 19 Wn.App.2d 727 (2021)

Defense psychiatrist offers to testify that due to mental disease defendant was unable to perceive the nature and quality of the act and was unable to tell right from wrong which was aggravated by voluntary use of alcohol, trial court refuses to allow the evidence because defendant's mental state was also impacted by alcohol, ruling that RCW 10.77.030(3) precludes the insanity defense where the "condition of mind" was induced by alcohol; held: where insanity is proximately induced by voluntary acts of the defendant then it is not available as a defense, but here a preexisting mental condition may have been aggravated by intoxication but it was not caused by the intoxication, State v. Wicks, 98 Wn.2d 620 (1983), State v. Huey, 14 Wn.2d 387, 394 (1942), thus trial court abused its discretion in excluding the defense; II.

INSTRUCTIONS ## Accomplice*

State v. Willoughby, 29 Wn.App. 828 (1981)

Defendant is entitled to cautionary accomplice instruction unless accomplice testimony is sufficiently corroborated, Pers. Restraint of Sarausad, 109 Wn.App. 824, 849-50 (2001); such instruction is not a comment on evidence; an unarmed accomplice of an armed principal may have his sentence enhanced by deadly weapon and firearm allegations, State v. Silvernail, 25 Wn.App. 185 (1980); I.

State v. Castro, 32 Wn.App. 559 (1982)

Where trial court finds "as a matter of fact" that a witness does not possess criminal intent, then accomplice cautionary instruction need not be given; I.

State v. Harris, 34 Wn.App. 649 (1983)

Where accomplice's testimony is corroborated as to some element or fact, court need not give cautionary accomplice instruction; accord: State v. Jennings, 35 Wn.App. 216 (1985), State v. Lee, 13 Wn.App. 900, 910 (1975), State v. Johnson, 40 Wn.App. 371 (1985), State v. Harris, 102 Wn.2d 148 (1984), State v. Gross, 31 Wn.2d 202 (1948); I.

State v. Cirkovich, 35 Wn.App. 134 (1983)

Uncorroborated testimony of accomplice should be regarded with skepticism and carefully scrutinized, but it is the exclusive province of the trier of fact to review the testimony and accord it the appropriate weight; I.

State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984)

State need not prove that an accomplice shared the same mental state as principal; accomplice liability is proved by showing that accomplice acted with knowledge that his acts will promote the crime, RCW 9A.08.020(3)(a), even if mental state for substantive offense is intent; I.

State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984)

WPIC 10.51 approved; 9-0.

State v. Markham, 40 Wn.App. 75 (1985)

Vicarious liability instruction approved where there is evidence that principal caused agent to commit acts which constitute a crime, distinguishing Windsor v. United States, 384 F.2d 535 (9th Cir. 1967); III.

While it is always the better practice for a trial court to give the cautionary instruction whenever accomplice testimony is introduced, *State v. State v. Stovall, 115 Wn.App. 650 (2003)

Where jury instruction erroneously states that defendant is accountable when he is an "accomplice of such other person in the commission of a crime," State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000), and there is evidence before the jury of an uncharged crime and the prosecutor argues that the defendant's participation in such crime triggered liability for the specific crime charged, then the error is not harmless, *cf.: State v. State v. Mullin-Coston, 115 Wn.App. 679, 690-92 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 107 (2004)

Instruction which requires knowledge that defendant's participation would promote or facilitate the commission of the crime is adequate, State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000), State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654, 656 (1984), court need not specify which crime, Waddington v. Sarausad, 172 L.Ed.2d 532 (2008); I.

State v. Teal, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004)

Evidence establishes that defendant is an accomplice to robbery, to convict instruction does not state "defendant or accomplice," but accomplice definition is given; held: rule requiring that all elements of a crime be listed in a single instruction is not violated when accomplice liability is listed in a separate instruction, State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423, 423-31 (1997), see: State v. Emmanuel, 42 Wn.2d 799 (1953), State v. Mills, 154 Wn.2d 1 (2005), but see: State v. Spencer, 111 Wn.App. 401 (2002), cf.: State v. Fallentine, 149 Wn.App. 614, 625-26 (2009); affirms State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 835-42 (2003); 8-1.

State v. Carter, 154 Wn.2d 71 (2005)

Defendant plans, with others, a robbery but is not present at the robbery where the victim is slain, is convicted as an accomplice of felony murder after trial court erroneously instructs jurors that defendant is an accomplice in "the commission of a crime," State v. Roberts, 142

Wn.2d 471 (2000); held: where a defendant is charged with felony murder and has participated in the predicate felony, the co-participant clause of the felony murder statute, RCW 9A.32.030(1), imputes criminal liability for the homicide; where defendant has not participated directly in the commission of the predicate felony, state must establish accomplice liability; here, the accomplice liability instruction was harmless, see: State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002), see also: State v. Stovall, 115 Wn.App. 650 (2003); affirms State v. Carter, 119 Wn.App. 221 (2003); 8-1.

State v. Winterstein, 140 Wn.App. 676, 685-87 (2007), reversed, on other grounds, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009)

Where a landlord is present, aware of drug manufacturing and fails to take affirmative steps to stop it, State v. Roberts, 80 Wn.App. 342 (1996), trial court need not give special accomplice instructions, State v. Roberts, supra., at 355-57, standard accomplice instruction is adequate; II.

State v. Coleman, 155 Wn.App. 951, 961 (2010)

Accomplice instruction need not require proof of an overt act as long as it requires the jury to find that defendant "knowingly, with specific criminal mens rea, stood ready to aid or aided" principal in the commission of the crime; I.

Rosemond v. United States, 572 U.S. 65, 134 S.Ct. 1240, 188 L.Ed.2d 248 (2014)

In federal case charging aiding and abetting a drug transaction while armed, 18 U.S.C. § 924(c), instruction "[he] knew his cohort used a firearm in the drug trafficking crime" is misleading as it does not require foreknowledge; 7-2.

State v. Walker, 182 Wn.2d 463, 481-85 (2015)

In murder 1° case, to convict instruction reads "defendant or an accomplice acted with intent to cause the death…[and] that the intent to cause the death was premeditated" is affirmed as accomplice liability law allows a jury to convict participants without unanimously determining which participants satisfied which elements of the crime, State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423, 427 (1997), State v. Holcomb, 180 Wn.App. 583, 586-88 (2014); allowing the jury to convict by "splitting the elements of the crime" between accomplices is consistent with accomplice liability, State v. Dreewes, 192 Wn.2d (2019); reverses, on other grounds, State v. Walker, 178 Wn.App. 478 (2013); 9-0.

INSTRUCTIONS
Character Evidence

State v. Mark, 94 Wn.2d 520 (1980)

Approved instruction: "Evidence has been presented in this case which bears upon the good character and good reputation of the defendant. Such evidence should be considered by you along with all the other evidence, in determining the guilt or innocence of the defendant"; distinguishes State v. Allen, 89 Wn.2d 651 (1978); 9-0.

State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

Court need not instruct jury that evidence of good reputation alone may create a reasonable doubt of guilt; III.

State v. Thomas, 110 Wn.2d 859 (1988)

Where character evidence is admitted, jury should be instructed, upon request, "Any evidence which bears upon good character and good reputation of the defendant should be considered by you, along with all other evidence, in determining whether or not the defendant is guilty. However, even if you find that the defendant is a person of good character or reputation, you should not acquit if you are convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt," modifying State v. Thomas, 46 Wn.App. 280 (1986); 7-2.

Defendant's Failure to Testify

Carter v. Kentucky, 67 L.Ed.2d 241 (1981)

If requested court must instruct jury that defendant need not testify and jury may not draw adverse inferences from defendant's failure to testify, per 5th and 14th amendments; 8-1.

State v. Ortiz, 34 Wn.App. 694 (1983)

Instructing jury that it is not to consider the fact that defendant did not testify, combined with instruction that "the law does not impose upon a defendant the burden or duty of calling any witnesses or producing any evidence," is sufficient; I.

State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987)

Trial court may instruct jury that it must not consider defendant's failure to testify even if not requested by defense, State v. Dauenhauer, 103 Wn.App. 373, 374-77 (2000), cf.: Lakeside v. Oregon, 55 L.Ed.2d 319 (1978); 9-0.

State v. Barnes, 54 Wn.App. 536 (1989)

Instructing jury that "the fact that the defendant has not testified cannot be used to infer guilt and should not prejudice him" is adequate; III.

INSTRUCTIONS
Defining Terms

State v. Tucker, 32 Wn.App. 83 (1982)

Direct/circumstantial pattern instruction, WPIC 5.01, is not a comment on the evidence, see: State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130, 135 (2002); I.

State v. Ratliff, 46 Wn.App. 325 (1986)

In malicious mischief case, instruction that "damages, in addition to its ordinary meaning, includes any breaking, and includes any diminution in the value of any property or the reasonable value of necessary repairs to any property which was damaged as a consequence of an act" approved; I.

State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32 (1988)

In robbery case, failure to define "theft" is not of constitutional magnitude; "theft" is a term of sufficient common understanding to allow jury to convict of robbery without further definition, State v. Pawling, 23 Wn.App. 226 (1979), State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936, 945-47 (2000), State v. O'Donnell, 142 Wn.App. 314, 324-25 (2007), see: State v. VanVlask, 53 Wn.App. 86 (1988), State v. Campbell, 59 Wn.App. 61 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Peerson, 62 Wn.App. 755 (1991)

"Common scheme or plan" as an aggravating factor need not be further defined in aggravated murder case, State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 420 (1986); I.

State v. Webb, 64 Wn.App. 480 (1992)

In malicious mischief case in which victim is spouse, defendant is not entitled to a community property definition, as "property of another," RCW 9A.48.080(1)(a), includes property co-owned by defendant; further, here, victim had superior interest in property in her possession, State v. Pike, 118 Wn.2d 585, 590 (1992), see: State v. Coria, 146 Wn.2d 631 (2002), State v. Wooten, 178 Wn.2d 890 (2013); I.

State v. Stearns, 119 Wn.2d 247 (1992)

Where not objected to in trial court, defendant cannot challenge definition of "manufacture," RCW 69.50.101(m), for first time on appeal; as long as instructions properly inform jury of elements of the charged crime, any error in further defining terms used in the elements is not of constitutional magnitude, but see: State v. O'Hara, 167 Wn.2d 91, 104-09 (2009); affirms State v. Stearns, 59 Wn.App. 445 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Rehak, 67 Wn.App. 157 (1992)

Proposed instruction requiring "substantial" circumstantial evidence to support a finding of premeditation need not be given; II.

State v. May, 68 Wn.App. 491 (1993)

Vehicular homicide by operating in a reckless manner and vehicular homicide by operating with disregard for safety of others are distinct methods of committing the offense, with different SRA implications, and must be defined differently for the jury, see: State v. Eike, 72 Wn.2d 760 (1967), State v. Jacobsen, 78 Wn.2d 491 (1970); I.

State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 473-7 (1994)

"Substantial step" requirement for conspiracy, RCW 9A.28.040(1), need not be limited to conduct which is more than mere preparation; definition of substantial step in conspiracy case is not the same as in attempt, RCW 9A.28.020(1), WPIC 100.05; I.

State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 611-3 (1997)

In aggravated murder case, trial court properly exercised discretion in not defining "in the course of," in furtherance of," and "in immediate flight," even where jury asked for clarification, as they are words of common understanding; 9-0.

State v. Vanoli, 86 Wn.App. 643, 646-8 (1997)

Knowledge instruction with permissible inference does not violate due process, WPIC 10.02, State v. Shipp, 93 Wn.2d 510 (1980), State v. Davis, 39 Wn.App. 916 (1985), State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640 (1986), State v. Kees, 48 Wn.App. 76 (1987), State v. Barrington, 52 Wn.App. 478 (1988), State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700, 710 (1990), State v. Hoffman, 51, 107 (1991), distinguishing United States v. Aguilar, 80 F.3d 329 (9th Cir., 1996), see: State v. Johnson, 119 Wn.2d 167, 174-6 (1992), State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 871-2 (1998), State v. Jones, 13 Wn.App.2d 386 (2020), see: State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021); I.

State v. Daniels, 87 Wn.App. 149 (1997)

In assault of a child 2°, RCW 9A.36.130, where the offense is committed by an actual battery, the definition of battery is not an element of the crime, thus failure to define battery to the jury is not reviewable for the first time on appeal, distinguishing State v. Byrd, 125 Wn.2d 707 (1995), State v. Eastmond, 129 Wn.2d 497 (1996); I.

Premeditation, defined in WPIC 26.01.01 (2d ed. 1994), is sufficient, In re Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 317 (1994); 9-0.

State v. David, 134 Wn.App. 470 (2006)

Trial court's defining elements of a crime (here, proximate cause) does not violate separation of powers doctrine; II.

State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 749-51 (2007)

In aggravated murder case, defining "common scheme or plan" for purposes of an aggravating factor as "a connection between the crimes in that one crime is done in preparation of the other [and] when a person devises an overarching criminal plan and uses it to perpetrate separate but very similar crimes," State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 854-55 (1995), was proper; 8-1.

State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799, 804-07 (2010)

In harassment case, court must define true threat, State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274 (2010), cf.: State v. Clark, 175 Wn.App. 109 (2013), but it is not an essential element, thus need not be in to convict instruction, State v. Tellez, 141 Wn.App. 479 (2007), State v. Warren, 161 Wn.App. 727, 748-56 (2011), State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. Saunders, 177 Wn.App. 259 (2013); I.

State v. Gordon, 172 Wn.2d 671 (2011)

Appellant may not challenge failure of the trial court to further define terms contained with an aggravating circumstance instruction for the first time on appeal as it is not of constitutional magnitude, State v. Duncalf, 164 Wn.App. 900 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 177 Wn.2d 289 (20130; reverses, in part, State v. Gordon, 153 Wn.App. 516 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Allen, 161 Wn.App. 727 (2011), 176 Wn.2d 611 (2013)

In harassment case, where court defines "true threat," it need not include it as an element in to convict instruction, State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799 (2010), State v. Tellez, 141 Wn.App. 479 (2007), State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 796-801 (2013), see: State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 279, 288 n. 6 (2010); I.

In assault of a child 1°, RCW 9A.36.120(1)(b)(1), defining "reckless" in instruction to include "wrongful act" is error as the crime requires proof that defendant recklessly disregarded that great bodily harm would occur, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.App. 457 (2005), State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 304-07 (2014); II.

State v. Ballew, 167 Wn.App. 359 (2012)

In threats to bomb case, defining "true threat" per WPIC 2.24 (2008) properly establishes an objective test, State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274 (2010), State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36, 43 (2004), does not conflict with Virginia v. Black, 538 U.S. 343, 155 L.Ed.2d 535 (2003), State v. Trey M., 186 Wn.2d 884 (2016), court need not inform the jury that idle talk and jokes are not true threats, State v. Clark, 175 Wn.App. 109 (2013), at least where issue is raised for the first time on appeal; I.

State v. Clark, 175 Wn.App. 109 (2013)

In harassment case, court defining true threat as an attempt to induce victim not to report information relevant to a criminal investigation focuses on the statute's mens rea element, State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.App. 274 (2010), thus decision not to instruct that a reasonable person would foresee that statement would be interpreted as a serious expression rather than a jest or idle talk is not error; II.

In assault 2° case, defining "reckless" as including "a wrongful act" instead of the more charge-specific language "substantial bodily harm" was not error where the to convict instruction identified the wrongful act as "substantial bodily harm," distinguishing State v. Harris, 164 Wn.App. 377, 385 (2011); reverses, in part, State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012) 7-2.

State v. Boyle*,* 183 Wn.App. 1, 9-12 (2014)

In harassment of a criminal justice participant case, court's instruction that "it is not harassment if it is apparent to the criminal justice participant that the person does not have the ability to carry out the threat" was proper even though statute states that "the defendant does not have the present and future ability to carry out the threat," RCW 9A.46.020(2)(b) (2011); Division I substitutes "or" for "and."

INSTRUCTIONS
Generally

State v. Pickens, 27 Wn.App. 97 (1980)

When victim establishes exact time when act charged was committed and defense is alibi, jury should be instructed to determine whether act occurred at that particular time per State v. Coffelt, 33 Wn.2d 106 (1949), State v. Severns, 13 Wn.2d 542 (1942); II.

State v. Duhaime, 29 Wn.App. 842 (1981)

After deliberation began, court responded to several questions from the jury, held proper as long as the supplemental instructions or answers to jurors' interrogatories were correct, State v. Frandsen, 176 Wash. 558, 563 (1934); once verdict is received and filed a juror cannot change his/her mind, even if jury had not been discharged, Belinger v. Shield, 164 Wash. 147 (1931); I.

State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982)

In rape 1° case, jury instructions must specify which crime or crimes defendant intended to commit when s/he feloniously entered building, cf., State v. Franco, 96 Wn.2d 816 (1982), cf.: State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 732-36 (2015), harmless here; 5-4.

State v. Russell, 31 Wn.App. 715 (1982)

No error where court declines to instruct jury that where witness had willfully testified falsely you are at liberty to disregard the testimony of such witness entirely; I.

State v. Gibson, 32 Wn.App. 217 (1982)

Typographical error in "to convict" instruction which, if read literally completely eliminates an element is not error, as it is "inconceivable that the jury could have been misled"; I.

State v. Mercer, 34 Wn.App. 654 (1983)

Where defense in homicide case is excusable homicide, RCW 9A.16.030, court need not instruct jury state has burden of proving absence of excuse, State v. Henderson, 192 Wn.2d 508 (2018), as long as burden is not placed on defendant at least as to cases tried prior to decision in State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484 (1983); I.

State v. Steward, 35 Wn.App. 552 (1983)

In attempted rape case, reversible error to fail to instruct jury that attempt must include "intent" and "substantial step"; an instructional error is harmless only if it is trivial or formal or merely academic and in no way affected the final outcome, see: State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002); instructions which relieve the state of its burden on an element constitute fundamental error which cannot be waived by a failure to except; I.

Where tracking dog evidence is offered, defense is entitled to cautionary instruction prohibiting convicton upon such evidence alone, State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 223 (2012); where evidence requires corroboration, the jury must be so informed, State v. Crouch, 60 Wash. 450 (1910), State v. Hess, 86 Wash. 240 (1915), State v. Aton, 67 Wash. 485, 486 (1912), see: State v. Ellis, 48 Wn.App. 333 (1987); I;

State v. Watkins, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983)

Where a jury is potentially deadlocked, court may give supplemental instructions as long as they do not suggest need for agreement, consequences of no agreement or length of time jury will be required to deliberate, CrR 6.15(f)(2), see: State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006); here, Supreme Court approved trial court giving supplemental instruction, after jury reported deadlock, that it need not be unanimous on greater offense before considering lesser included offense; 9-0.

State v. Langdon, 42 Wn.App. 715 (1986)

Once jury has begun deliberation, it is error for the court to respond to any jury request for clarification in the absence of the defendant and counsel, even if the instruction merely tells jury "you are bound by those instructions already given to you," CrR 6.15(f), State v. Jasper, 158 Wn.App. 518, 538-43 (2010), affirmed, on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), cf.: State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 96-102 (2013), harmless here; I.

State v. Young, 48 Wn.App. 406 (1987)

After deliberations have begun, it may be error for trial court to refuse to clarify or supplement an instruction upon juror's request; technical terms should be clarified if requested; III.

Mathews v. United States, 99 L.Ed.2d 54 (1988)

Defense is entitled to entrapment instructions whenever there is sufficient evidence to support defense even if defendant denies one or more elements of the crime; 7-2.

State v. Nicholas, 55 Wn.App. 261 (1989)

Where information alleges one mode of committing a crime, it is error to instruct jury as to an uncharged alternative, State v. Severns, 13 Wn.2d 542, 548 (1942), State v. Chino, 117 Wn.App. 531, 538-41 (2003), State v. Laramie, 144 Wn.App. 332, 341-44 (2007), State v. Brewczynski, 173 Wn.App. 541 (2013), see also: State v. Boiko, 131 Wn.App. 595 (2006), harmless here; I.

State v. Ransom, 56 Wn.App. 712 (1990)

In answer to a jury question after deliberations had begun, court gave accomplice instruction over objection; held: accomplice liability is a distinct theory of culpability, for which state must offer timely instructions to permit the defense to argue the issue, State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757 (1984); supplemental instructions should not go beyond matters that had been, or could have been, argued, cf.: State v. Becklin, 163 Wn.2d 519 (2008); II.

State v. Bailey, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990)

Defendant, charged with statutory rape 1°, is convicted of indecent liberties as lesser, to which defense does not except; held: failure to except waives issue, State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 748-9 (1986); even if instructing on the lesser involved the constitutional issue of notice of charge, harmless beyond a reasonable doubt; affirms State v. Bailey, 52 Wn.App. 42 (1988), aff'd, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990); but see: State v. Hodgson, 44 Wn.App. 592 (1986); 5-4.

State v. Hanson, 59 Wn.App. 651 (1990)

Where "to convict" instruction omits element, failure of defense to object does not waive issue on appeal, cf.: State v. Henderson, 114 Wn.2d 867 (1990), State v. Ahlquist, 67 Wn.App. 442, 447-8 (1992), State v. Sao, 156 Wn.App. 67, 78-79 (2010); II.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

In aggravated murder (police victims) case, trial court instructs jury that victims were law enforcement officers and determines lawfulness of arrest without submitting issues to jury; held: harmless as to instruction that victims were police (7-2), validity of arrest or search are determinations for court to make, State v. John Doe, 6 Wn.App. 978, 982 (1972), unless information makes it element of crime, as in resisting arrest (8-1); trial court is not required to give instruction which is erroneous in any respect, State v. Camp, 67 Wn.2d 363, 369 (1965), State v. Robinson, 92 Wn.2d 357, 361 (1979).

State v. Bradford, 60 Wn.App. 857 (1991)

"Separate crime" instruction, WPIC 3.01 (revised), should include language that all evidence is applicable on all counts absent a limiting instruction; 2-1, I.

State v. Stearns, 61 Wn.App. 224 (1991)

An instruction is not a comment on the evidence unless it has the effect of conveying to the jury the judge's view of the credibility, weight or sufficiency of the evidence, State v. Eisner, 95 Wn.2d 458, 461-2 (1981); where there is evidence in the record to support an instruction, and it is an accurate statement of law, it is not an impermissible comment, State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 193 (1986); I.

State v. Ramirez, 62 Wn.App. 301 (1991)

Limiting instruction can be given contemporaneously or at close of all the evidence, within trial court's discretion; I.

State v. Jones, 63 Wn.App. 703 (1992)

Party is entitled to instruction on his/her theory of the case only if party supplies instructions which accurately state the law, State v. Goree, 36 Wn.App. 205, 208 (1983); court is not required to give an instruction which is erroneous in any respect, State v. Ellis, 48 Wn.App. 333, 335 (1987), State v. Dent, 67 Wn.App. 656 (1992), aff'd, 123 Wn.2d 467 (1993), State v. Staley, 123 Wn.2d 794, 803 (1994), State v. Jacobson, 74 Wn.App. 715, 724 (1994); I.

State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992)

Information charges delivery of drugs to X, to convict instruction does not specify recipient of drugs, state proves delivery to Y; held: because no evidence of delivery to X existed, and defense proposed to convict instruction also did not specify recipient, no error or, at most, harmless error, distinguishing State v. Brown, 45 Wn.App. 571, 576 (1986); I.

State v. Dent, 67 Wn.App. 656 (1992), aff'd, 123 Wn.2d 467 (1994)

Trial court has no duty to rewrite incorrect statements of law contained in proposed instructions, State v. Robinson, 92 Wn.2d 357, 361 (1979); a request for an instruction that is in part erroneous is no request at all, State v. Mayner, 4 Wn.App. 549, 552 (1971); I.

State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631 (1993)

Defense proposed instruction "if there [are] two equally reasonable inferences and under only one would defendant be guilty, you should adopt that which admits innocence" need not be given, see: State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130, 135 (2002), where court instructs "your deliberations must be based upon the evidence, and not upon speculation, guess or conjecture," see: State v. Gosby, 85 Wn.2d 758 (1975), State v. Bencivenga, 137 Wn.2d 703, 711 (1999); 6-3.

State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 478-9 (1994)

Defense exception to instructions during court's reading of instructions to jury is untimely, Nelson v. Mueller, 85 Wn.2d 234, 238 (1975); affirms State v. Dent, 67 Wn.App. 656 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 131 Wn.2d 258 (1997)

Where "to convict" instruction is missing an element, reversal is mandated even where other instructions may supply the missing element, State v. Emmanuel, 42 Wn.2d 799, 819 (1953), Seattle v. Norby, 88 Wn.App. 545, 555-8 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Robbins, 138 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Haberman, 105 Wn.App. 926 (2001), but see: Hedgpeth v. Pulido, 172 L.Ed.2d 388 (2008), State v. Oster, 147 Wn.2d 141 (2002), State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002), State v. Mills, 154 Wn.2d 1 (2005), reversing, in part, State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Ong, 88 Wn.App. 572, 577-8 (1997)

"To convict" instruction states that defendant knew substance delivered was morphine, state proves defendant gave a pain pill to victim; held: by failing to object to the instruction, state assumed burden of proving defendant knew the substance delivered was morphine (law of the case doctrine), State v. Potts, 93 Wn.App. 82, 86-88 (1998), State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266, 284-87 (2014), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), see: State v. Hunt, 75 Wn.App. 795, 806 (1994), State v. Salas, 127 Wn.2d 173, 182 (1995), State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882, 887-8 (1982), overruled on other grounds, State v. Monson, 113 Wn.2d 833 (1989), here the evidence only shows defendant knew he delivered a controlled substance, not specifically morphine, thus insufficient, cf.: State v. Sinrud, 200 Wn.App. 643 (2017); court expressly does not decide whether a defendant accused of delivery must know the specific drug being delivered; II.

State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998)

Where unnecessary elements are included, without objection, in the "to convict" instruction (here, venue), the law of the case doctrine obliges the state to prove the elements, and defense may challenge sufficiency of the added elements on appeal, State v. Johnson, 188

Wn.2d 742 (2017), State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882, 887-8 (1982), State v. Hobbs, 71 Wn.App. 419 (1993), State v. Worland, 20 Wn.App. 559, 566 (1978), cf.: State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 479-81 (1994), State v. Benitez, 175 Wn.App. 116, 123-26 (2013), State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 19-23 (2013), State v. France, 180 Wn.2d 809 (2014), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), cf.: State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017); 5-4.

State v. Potts, 93 Wn.App. 82 (1998)

State charges possession of a controlled substance: methamphetamine, proves defendant possessed amphetamine; held: while state need not prove knowledge of a specific controlled substance, State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.App. 373 (1981), where prosecutor charges a specific substance and court instructs that a specific substance was possessed, either at state's request or without exception from state, then instructions become law of the case, State v. Ong, 88 Wn.App. 572, 577 (1997), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), and state must prove the unnecessary element, State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266, 284-87 (2014); here, because amphetamines and methamphetamine have different chemical compositions, state failed to prove identity of the charged drug; III.

State v. Peterson, 94 Wn.App. 1 (1998)

Defendant is charged with felony murder 1° and, as an alternative, felony murder 2°, court instructs jury to consider felony murder 1° first and, if it finds defendant not guilty or cannot reach a unanimous verdict, then consider felony murder 2°; held: proper procedure is for jury to consider more serious alternative crime first, then move to less serious crime if it does not convict of the more serious crime, which did not convert the less serious alternative crime to a lesser included offense, cf.: State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991), State v. Trujillo, 112 Wn.App. 390, 408-12 (2002); I.

State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533 (1999)

Defense may not request instruction and then, on appeal, challenge that instruction as constitutionally infirm, State v. Henderson, 114 Wn.2d 867 (1990), Seattle v. Patu, 147 Wn.2d 717 (2002), State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 89 (2005), cf.: State v. O'Hara, 167 Wn.2d 91 (2009), State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009), although where defense also submits a curative instruction that is not given, then the invited error doctrine does not apply, at 552, State v. Ortiz-Triana, 193 Wn.App. 769 (2016); 8-1.

State v. Townsend, 142 Wn.2d 838 (2001), overruled, State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

In noncapital murder case, jury may not be informed that the case does not involve the death penalty, State v. Murphy, 86 Wn.App. 667 (1997), State v. Hicks, 163 Wn.2d 477 (2008), State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 928-31 (2007), reversing State v. Townsend, 97 Wn.App. 25 (1999), but see: State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 774-81 (2012), State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641 (2017), harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 380-83 (2001)

Where defense counsel proposes a to convict instruction that fails to include an essential element, invited error doctrine bars reversal, State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 546-47 (1999), State v. Lucero, 140 Wn.App. 782, 785-87 (2007), 152 Wn.App. 287, 293-94 (2009), but see: State v. Rodriguez, 121 Wn.App. 180 (2004), State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009); where, at the time of trial, the missing element was not required by caselaw which changed after trial, then counsel was not ineffective, Studd, supra., at 551; II.

State v. Oster, 147 Wn.2d 141 (2002)

In felony no contact order violation case, court used special verdict form for jury to decide whether or not defendant had committed two or more prior violations, necessary elements for the offense to be a felony; held: where element of a crime is prior criminal history, instructional bifurcation is the better practice, State v. Davis, 116 Wn.App. 81, 90-96 (2003), aff'd, 154 Wn.2d 291, aff'd, on other grounds, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), see: State v. Mills, 154 Wn.2d 1 (2005), *cf.: State v. State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002)

Instructional error which omits an element of a charged crime is subject to harmless error analysis to determine whether the error has not relieved state of burden, State v. Borrero, 147 Wn.2d 353 (2002), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221 (2003), but see: State v. Smith, 131 Wn.2d 258, 265 (1997), State v. Eastmond, 129 Wn.2d 497, 502 (1996), *State v. State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130, 135 (2002)

Circumstantial evidence need not be inconsistent with any hypothesis of innocence, State v. Gosby, 85 Wn.2d 758, 764-65 (1975), cf.: State v. Sewell, 49 Wn.2d 244, 246 (1956); 2-1, III.

State v. Atkinson, 113 Wn.App. 661, 666-68 (2002)

In defining "substantial bodily harm" for assault 2°, RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b), court instructs that "disfigurement means that which impairs or injures the beauty, symmetry, or appearance of a person or thing; that which renders unsightly, misshapen, or imperfect, or deforms in some manner," defense claims definition is overbroad and eliminates distinction between assault 2° and assault 4°; held: trial courts have "considerable discretion in wording jury instructions," State v. Castle, 86 Wn.App. 48, 62 (1997), definition here was accurate and merely supplemented and clarified statutory language; III.

Seattle v. Patu, 147 Wn.2d 717 (2002)

Invited error doctrine prohibits defense from proposing an instruction that omits an element of the offense and then challenging that instruction on appeal, State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533 (1999), State v. Henderson, 114 Wn.2d 867, 869 (1990), State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 380-82 (2001), *State v. Wn.App. 180 (2004), State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009); affirms Seattle v. Patu, 108 Wn.App. 364 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Davis, 116 Wn.App. 81, 90-96 (2003), 154 Wn.2d 291, aff'd, on other grounds, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006)

In felony no contact order violation case, court gave to convict instruction without assault language, defined assault separately, instructed about finding an assault in special verdict instruction and special verdict form; held: instructional bifurcation "benefits the defendant," and is better practice, State v. Oster, 147 Wn.2d 141 (2002), cf.: State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020), see: State v. Mills, 154 Wn.2d 1 (2005); as long as all elements are properly instructed, they need not be included in a single to convict instruction; I.

State v. Dolan, 118 Wn.App. 323, 330-32 (2003)

In child abuse case, instructing jury that "the presence of bruising and and swelling can be sufficient evidence of substantial bodily harm" is immaterial, misleading and a comment on the evidence; II.

State v. Sanchez, 122 Wn.App. 579, 588-91 (2004)

While reading instructions to jury, trial court skips reading one instruction, no objection taken; held: failure to read an instruction, CrR 6.15(d), is constitutional error; III.

State v. Mills, 154 Wn.2d 1 (2005)

In felony harassment case, trial court puts "threat to kill" element in special verdict, not in to convict instruction; held: "where the legislature has established a statutory framework which defines a base crime which is elevated to a greater crime if a certain fact is present, a trial court may, consistent with the guaranties of due process and trial by jury, bifurcate the elevating fact into a special verdict form," at 10 ¶ 19, State v. Oster, 147 Wn.2d 141 (2002); here, because it was unclear that the threat to kill had to be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, felony conviction was in error; reverses State v. Mills, 116 Wn.App. 106 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Chamroeum Nam, 136 Wn.App. 698 (2007)

Where court instructs jury defining robbery as taking property from the victim's person and omits the language prohibiting taking property in a victim's presence, evidence that defendant took victim's purse from a seat next to her is insufficient, see also: State v. O'Donnell, 142 Wn.App. 314, 321-24 (2007);; II.

State v. Becklin, 163 Wn.2d 519 (2008)

Complainant testifies that, following issuance of no contact order, two people drive defendant's car past her home, two weeks later defendant follows her home, defendant is convicted of felony stalking, RCW 9A.46.110(1), after jury inquires whether a person can be stalked through a third party and court answers, "yes;" held: trial court's answer was a correct statement of the law, "course of conduct," as defined by legislature, contemplates that stalking could include direction or manipulation of third parties, RCW 10.14.020, both parties argued the theory to the jury, cf.: State v. Ransom, 56 Wn.App. 712, 714 (1990), State v. Davenport, 100

Wn.2d 757 (1984), thus trial court did not abuse discretion in further instructing the jury in response to the jury question; reverses State v. Becklin, 133 Wn.App. 610 (2006); 6-3.

State v. Bache, 146 Wn.App. 897, 904-06 (2008)

Where a prior conviction is a predicate that elevates a crime from a misdemeanor to a felony, the prior conviction must be proved and jury must be instructed either in to convict instruction or in a special verdict, see: State v. Oster, 147 Wn.2d 141 (2002), and failure to do so requires reversal; III.

State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 493-94 (2009)

Unobjected-to jury instructions are not subject to constitutional vagueness challenges on appeal, State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 233 (2006);

State v. Jain, 151 Wn.App. 117 (2009)

Defendant is charged with money laundering, RCW 9A.83.020, for using drug proceeds to buy specific named property, to convict instruction does not identify the specific property, evidence addresses other named property as well; held: instructions were insufficient, State v. Brown, 45 Wn.App. 571 (1986); I.

State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306, 311-13 (2010)

Information charges delivery of methamphetamine, to convict instruction does not refer to specific drug; held: because to convict instruction begins "[t]o convict the Defendant…of the crime of Delivery of a Controlled Substance as charged," the reference to the charging document impliedly incorporates the drug named in the information; where identity of the drug determines the maximum sentence it is an essential element, see: State v. Goodman, 150 Wn.2d 774 (2004), State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013), State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018), State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016), State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019); 4-1-4 [plurality opinion, see: Barbarosh, supra. at ¶¶ 25-26].

State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274 (2010)

In harassment case, failure to give "true threat" instruction is manifest error, State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006), see: State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799, 804-07 (2010), State v. Warren, 161 Wn.App. 727, 748-56 (2011), State v. Clark, 175 Wn.App. 109 (2013); 6-3.

State v. Koch, 157 Wn.App. 20 (2010)

Defendant lives with elderly father who previously accused him of assault, father refuses medical assistance, defendant does not force unwanted care on father, who dies, defendant is convicted of criminal mistreatment, RCW 9A.42.020, and manslaughter 2° after trial court declines to instruct jury that use of physical force, absent consent, is assault even if purpose is to provide assistance; held: while the evidence was sufficient to support the conviction, defense was denied due process by failing to instruct jury of defendant's theory of the case; "trial court should deny a requested jury instruction that presents a theory of the defendant's case only where the theory is completely unsupported by evidence," at ¶ 26, State v. Barnes, 153 Wn.2d 378, 382 (2005); 2-1.

State v. Gordon, 172 Wn.2d 671 (2011)

Appellant may not challenge failure of the trial court to further define terms contained within an aggravating circumstance instruction for the first time on appeal as it is not of constitutional magnitude, State v. Duncalf, 164 Wn.App. 900 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 177 Wn.2d 289 (2013); reverses, in part, State v. Gordon, 153 Wn.App. 516 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Jasper, 158 Wn.App. 518, 538-43 (2010)

Trial court answers jury inquiry with instruction to reread instructions without notifying parties and in defendant's absence; held: because the questions did not raise issues involving disputed facts, court's response did not involve a critical stage, and thus defendant's Sixth Amendment right was not violated, Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 306 (1994), State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 96-102 (2013), but CrR 6.15(f)(1) requires defendant's presence during any communication between the court and the jury, State v. Langdon, 42 Wn.App. 715, 717 (1986); where the trial court's response is "negative in nature and conveys no affirmative information," State v. Russell, 25 Wn.App. 933, 948 (1980), State v. Safford, 24 Wn.App. 783, 794 (1979), State v. Johnson, 56 Wn.2d 700 (1960), then error is harmless; I.

State v. O'Brien, 164 Wn.App. 924 (2011)

In bail jumping case, state need not disprove statutory affirmative defense of uncontrollable circumstances, RCW 9A.76.172, as it does not negate an element of the crime; I.

State v. Hummel, 165 Wn.App. 749, 777-79 (2012)

Failure of trial court to give cautionary instruction that prison informant testimony is unreliable is not an abuse of discretion and may be a comment on the evidence; I.

State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820, 834-36 (2012)

In robbery/kidnapping case, defendant is shot by homeowner, trial court instructs jury on homeowner's right to use deadly force; held: instruction accurately stated the law, is relevant to the issues at trial, is not a comment on the evidence, see: State v. Malone, 20 Wn.App. 712, 714 (1978); III.

State v. Lynch, 178 Wn.2d 487 (2013)

In rape 1° case where defendant denies forcible compulsion, trial court may not, over defendant's objection, instruct jury on the defense of consent with burden to prove consent on defendant, State v. Coristine, 177 Wn.2d 370 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 19-23 (2013)

In assault on officer case that does not involve self defense, court defines assault as "an act, with unlawful force…," during deliberations jury asks for definition of unlawful force, court, over objection, submits supplemental instruction, CrR 6.15(f), removing unlawful force language, offers defense option to re-argue, defense declines and seeks a mistrial; held: while law of the case doctrine holds that an instruction not objected to becomes the law of the case and thus where an unnecessary element is included the state must prove it anyway, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97, 101-02 (1998), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), State v. Ransom, 56 Wn.App. 712 (1990), State v. Hobbs, 71 Wn.App. 419, 420-21 (1993), see: State v. France, 180 Wn.2d 809 (2014), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017), where defense did not adapt its trial strategy to the inclusion of the unlawful force language and defense was given the opportunity to reargue, trial court did not abuse its discretion; I.

State v. Mendes, 180 Wn.2d 188 (2014)

When state rests defense asks court whether it will instruct on self-defense based upon state's case, court declines, defendant testifies but claims he is being compelled to testify; held: trial court has discretion when to rule on jury instructions, defendant's testimony was not compelled, State v. Foster, 91 Wn.2d 466, 472-73 (1979); 9-0.

State v. France, 180 Wn.2d 809 (2014)

Defendant threatens lawyers from jail, in felony harassment trial court defines "threat" to include "intent immediately to use force" as well as "threatened … to do any act … intended to harm …physical safety," RCW 9A.04.110(28) (2011), defendant could not have immediately used force, on appeal defendant maintains that definition became law of the case which state had to prove, State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611, 626 (2013), State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304, 309–10 (2006); held: multiple definitions of statutory terms do not necessarily create either new elements or alternate means, see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778, 785 (2007), State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638, 646 (2002); an instruction that provides for ten definitions of threat do not create ten alternative means, State v. Marko, 107 Wn.App. 215, 218–19 (2001), State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016), State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 196-99 (2014)

In identity theft to convict instruction, RCW 9.35.020 (2008), court need not identify the crime intended to be committed, State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1, 6-16 (1985), State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 419-20 (1986); I.

State v. Barry, 183 Wn.2d 297 (2015)

During deliberations jury inquires if it can consider "observations of the defendant" who didn't testify, trial court answers, over objection, "[e]vidence includes what you witness in the courtroom;" held: jury may not consider defendant's demeanor when he is not testifying as evidence, see: State v. Klok, 99 Wn.App. 81, 82 (2000), State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 679 (2001), although lack of record as to what defendant's demeanor was makes it impossible to determine if defendant was prejudiced, thus affirmed; affirms State v. Barry, 179 Wn.App. 175, 178-83 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870, 881-83 (2015)

In child rape case information alleges victim's initials and, in parentheses, date of birth, defendant maintains that date of birth must be proved per law of the case doctrine even though it's not an element of the crime as it was alleged in the charging document, State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998); held: by using parenthetical date of birth information state did not add the victim's birth date to elements to be proved at trial; III.

State v. Hood, 196 Wn.App. 127, 131-36 (2016)

Failure of defense to propose any jury instructions is not an affirmative assent to the state's proposed instructions, invited error doctrine is not applicable, although failure to preserve error by objecting generally operates as a waiver, RAP 2.5(a); defendant has no duty to propose instructions that will enable the state to convict him; I.

State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641 (2017), overruled, State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

In non-capital murder case court invites counsel to handle issue of telling jury it's not a death penalty case as appropriate, state informs some jurors during individual voir dire, defense does not object; held: absent proof of prejudice informing jury that a murder case is not a death penalty case is not ineffective assistance, but see: State v. Townsend, 142 Wn.2d 838, 846-49 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017)

Defendant is charged with theft 2° of access device, to convict instruction includes an element that requires proof that defendant intended to deprive victim of an access device, statute only requires proof that defendant intended to deprive of property, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a) (2004); held: law of the case doctrine obliges the state to prove all elements contained in to convict instruction, even surplusage, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1988), State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017), see: State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); law of the case doctrine is grounded in state common law, thus Washington will not follow Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017)

In unlawful possession of firearm case to convict instruction includes serial numbers and make and model of guns, state offers no evidence to support serial numbers; held: law of the case doctrine requires state to prove what is in the to convict instruction even if they are not elements of the crime, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), unless the extra elements are in parenthesis, State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870 (2015); III.

State v. Sinrud, 200 Wn.App. 643, 650-52 (2017)

In VUCSA possession with intent case court instructs jury "[m]ere possession of a controlled substance does not allow you to infer an intent to deliver a controlled substance. The law requires substantial corroborating evidence of intent to deliver in addition to the mere fact of possession. The law requires at least one additional corroborating factor," consistent with State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232, 236 (1994), argues on appeal that it is a comment on the evidence; held: trial court should not instruct jury based upon an appellate court's sufficiency holding as the sufficiency standard on appeal ("any rational jury") is lower than beyond a reasonable doubt,

State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 557-58 (2015), but see: State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019), thus instruction was a prejudicial judicial comment on the evidence; I.

State v. St. Peter, 1 Wn.App.2d 961 (2017)

Trial court need not instruct that all jurors must be present during deliberations, State v. Sullivan, 3 Wn.App.2d 376, 379-80 (2018), not error absent evidence that a juror left the jury room during deliberations; III.

State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App. 3d 824 (2019)

Defendant is charged with possession of methamphetamine, to convict instruction does not identify the drug but verdict form does; held: while the identity of the drug is an essential element, State v. Goodman, 150 Wn.2d 774 (2004), State v. Zillyette, 178 Wn.2d 153 (2013), State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018), State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016), cf.: State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020), here the jury found the specific controlled substance as it was stated in the verdict form thus the error is harmless; II.

State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019)

In possessing stolen property case instructing jury that a credit card is an access device is not a comment on the evidence, distinguishing " State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 557 (2015). II.

State v. Gorman-Lykken, 9 Wn.App.2d 687 (2019)

To convict instruction that concludes "If you find from the evidence that either (1), (2), and (3), has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt, then it will be your duty to return a verdict of guilty" relieves that state of its burden to prove each element; II (Melnik, concurring).

State v. Barbarosh, 10 Wn.App.2d 408 (2019)

In drug case where to convict instruction fails to identify the controlled substance charged then sentence can only be for the lowest possible offense for possession of a controlled substance, State v. Clark-El, 196 Wn.App. 614 (2016). State v. Gonzalez, 2 Wn.App.2d 96 (2018), cf.: State v. Rivera-Zamora, 7 Wn.App.2d 824, 829-30 (2019), State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306 (2010), State v. Gardner, 14 Wn.App.2d 207 (2020); III.

State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

In a murder case it is not error for the jury to be told that it is not a death penalty case, overruling State v. Townsend, 142 Wn.2d 838, 846-49 (2001); 5-4.

INSTRUCTIONS
Lesser Included Offense/Inferior Degree Crime*

State v. Putnam, 31 Wn.App. 156 (1982)

Permitting prostitution, RCW 9A.88.090 is not a lesser of promoting prostitution 2°, RCW 9A.88.080; I.

State v. Watkins, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983)

Jury need not acquit defendant of greater offense before considering lesser; instruction that "it is not necessary that you agree on assault 1° before considering assault 2°" upheld, see: State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991), State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Krup, 36 Wn.App. 454 (1984)

Although it is not necessary for jury to agree on acquittal of greater offense before considering lesser offense, State v. Watkins, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983), jury need not be specifically instructed to that effect if that is fairly conveyed by instructions as whole; I.

State v. Partosa, 41 Wn.App. 266 (1985)

Lesser included offense need not be offered where lesser is merely an "inherent characteristic" of greater, distinguishing State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 448 (1978); I.

State v. Hansen, 46 Wn.App. 292 (1986)

Whereas failure to instruct on a proper lesser is error, where the jury has rejected another lesser included offense by convicting on the greater offense, failure to instruct may be harmless, State v. Guilliot, 106 Wn.App. 355, 368-69 (2001), distinguishing State v. Parker, 102 Wn.2d 161 (1984); I.

State v. Taylor, 109 Wn.2d 438 (1987)

Where jury reports it is hung on greater yet convicts of lessers, this does not amount to acquittal on greater, and trial court may require further deliberations on greater offense, distinguishing State v. Watkins, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983, see: State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991), State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), but see: State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006); 5-4.

State v. Peters, 47 Wn.App. 854 (1987)

Defendant admits to burglary, claims duress, excepts to court's failure to instruct as to trespass as a lesser; held: unless the evidence supports an inference that only the lesser crime had been committed, defendant is not entitled to an instruction on the lesser, distinguishing State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397; accord: State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360 (1990), State v. Jacobson, 74 Wn.App. 715, 725-6 (1994), State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), *but see: State v. State v. Knight, 54 Wn.App. 143 (1989)

Possessing stolen property is lesser of attempted trafficking in stolen property 1°; III.

State v. Elliott, 114 Wn.2d 6 (1990)

Being an accomplice is a distinct theory of criminal liability and cannot be a lesser included offense; 9-0.

State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990), disapproved on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 487 (1991) Although unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), is a lesser of assault 2°, where defendant did not offer evidence at trial that he intended to intimidate victim or that he displayed gun in a manner which would cause victim alarm, then defendant was not entitled to the instruction; "[i]t is not enough that the jury might simply disbelieve the State's evidence . . . some evidence must be presented which affirmatively establishes the defendant's theory on the lesser . . . before an instruction will be given," State v. Rodriguez, 48 Wn.App. 815, 820 (1987), State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993), State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 754-57 (1995), State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), *State v. State v. Falco, 59 Wn.App. 354 (1990)

Trial court may amend charge sua sponte where the amended charge is a lesser included offense, State v. Jollo, 38 Wn.App. 469, 474 (1984); communicating with a minor for immoral purposes, former RCW 9.68A.090, is not a lesser of statutory rape 1°, former RCW 9A.44.070; I.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

Trial court need not sua sponte instruct on lessers over express objections of defendants, State v. Scott, 110 Wn.2d 682, 686 (1988), State v. Kroll, 87 Wn.2d 829, 843 (1976), see: State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 364-70 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991)

Jury must be instructed it is to first consider crime charged and if after full and careful consideration of the evidence it cannot agree on a verdict as to that crime, it may then proceed to arrive at a verdict on a lesser crime, see: State v. Watkins, 31 Wn.App. 485 (1982), aff'd, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983), State v. Taylor, 109 Wn.2d 438 (1987); it is not reversible error to have given instruction which arguably requires jury unanimity on greater before reaching a verdict on lesser prior to 19 September 1991; affirms State v. Labanowski, 58 Wn.App. 860 (1990); see: State v. Kirk, 64 Wn.App. 788 (1992), State v. Linton,156 Wn.2d 777 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Baldwin, 63 Wn.App. 536 (1991)

Minor in possession of alcohol, RCW 66.44.270(2) is not a lesser of minor purchasing or attempting to purchase liquor, RCW 66.44.290, because a minor can attempt to purchase alcohol without obtaining possession of it, State v. Jackson, 112 Wn.2d 867 (1989); cf.: State v. Gatalski, 40 Wn.App. 601 (1985); I.

State v. Kirk, 64 Wn.App. 788 (1992)

Jury returns no verdict on greater offense, convicts of lesser, State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991); trial court discharges jury without consent of defendant and without determination of "extraordinary and striking" circumstances (such as jury acknowledgment of hopeless deadlock on greater offense), State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159, 162 (1982), state re-notes greater offense for trial, defense seeks discretionary review; held: mere acknowledgment jurors were unable to agree on greater offense is insufficient to allow discharge of jury, thus defendant's right to be protected from double jeopardy was violated, Green v. United States, 2 L.Ed.2d 199 (1957), State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006), but see: State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009); III.

An attempt is a lesser which need not be charged for trier of fact to convict; I.

State v. Liewer, 65 Wn.App. 641 (1992)

Official misconduct, RCW 9A.80.010(1), misconduct of a public officer, RCW 42.20.010, and failure of duty of a public officer, RCW 42.20.100 are not lessers of bribery, RCW 9A.68.010(1)(b); I.

Criminal impersonation, RCW 9A.60.040, is not a lesser of attempting to obtain drugs by fraud, RCW 69.50.403(a)(3); III.

State v. Bandura, 85 Wn.App. 87, 94-7 (1997)

Defendant need not consent on the record to defense counsel's offering lesser included offense instructions, as court can give lessers on request of state, accused or on court's own initiative; defendant does not have the right to be tried only on the specific crime charged; II.

State v. Peterson, 133 Wn.2d 885 (1997)

Defendant is charged with assault 1°, at bench trial following all the evidence, state is granted leave to amend to assault 2°, defendant is found guilty; held: state may amend at any time prior to verdict to an inferior degree crime, even if the elements are different, RCW 10.61.003, State v. Foster, 91 Wn.2d 466, 471 (1979), State v. Ackles, 8 Wash. 462, 464-5 (1894), distinguishing State v. Pelkey, 109 Wn.2d 484 (1987); even absent an amendment, trier of fact may find defendant guilty of any degree inferior to that charged in the information; 9-0.

In capital case, state law that precludes lesser included offenses is constitutional, distinguishing Beck v. Alabama, 65 L.Ed.2d 392 (1980).

State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 466-68 (1999)

Negligent driving 2º, RCW 46.61.525, is not a lesser of reckless driving, as an infraction cannot be a lesser of a crime; II.

State v. Newbern, 95 Wn.App. 277, 285-88 (1999)

State v. Thomas, 98 Wn.App. 422 (1999)

Assault 4° is not a lesser of indecent liberties as intent is not an element of indecent liberties, but see: State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 909, 913-14 (1990), State v. Bluford, 195 Wn.App. 570 (2016), rev'd, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 298 (2017), State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304, 310-11 (2006); III.

State v. Hernandez, 99 Wn.App. 312 (1999)

In murder trial, state offers defendant's statement that death was an accident, that he had not touched the gun when victim, who was holding the gun, was shot, defense objects to court's refusal to instruct on lesser manslaughters; held: because manslaughter requires that the accused caused the death of another, factual test fails, thus defense is not entitled to lessers, State v. Guilliot, 106 Wn.App. 355, 366-69 (2001); I.

State v. Guilliot, 106 Wn.App. 355 (2001)

In intentional murder 1° case, defense produces evidence that he showed gun to victim and it accidentally discharged after diabetic defendant had failed to monitor his blood sugar, causing hypoglycemia resulting in confusion, anxiety, trial court instructs on murder 2° but refuses manslaughter; held: jury could have rationally concluded defendant acted recklessly or with criminal negligence in failing to monitor his blood sugar or in not acting with appropriate caution in showing victim gun, thus it was error not to instruct on manslaughter lessers, but see: State v. Hunter, 152 Wn.App. 30, 43-48 (2009); because jury convicted of murder 1°, thus rejecting murder 2° lesser, then jury necessarily rejected the factual defense which might have supported a verdict as to manslaughter, thus error was harmless, State v. Hansen, 46 Wn.App. 292, 297-98 (1986), State v. Barriault, 20 Wn.App. 419, 427 (1978); II.

State v. Porter, 150 Wn.2d 732 (2004)

Defendant is charged with delivering cocaine to undercover police, testifies he was there to buy drugs, trial court declines to offer lesser included offense instructions for attempted possession of cocaine; held: because a lesser offense must arise from the same act or transaction supporting the greater charged offense, trial court properly denied instructions; 9-0.

State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304, 310-12 (2006)

Assault 4° is a lesser of child molestation 2°, as a touching may be unlawful because it was neither legally consented to nor otherwise privileged, State v. Thomas, 98 Wn.App. 422, 424 (1999), State v. Bluford, 195 Wn.App. 570, 583-86 (2016) (concluding that Thomas, supra., was wrongly decided), , rev'd, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 298 (2017); here, defendant testified that the touching was accidental, which would not support the lesser, but state's evidence supported the possibility that a reasonable juror could find that defendant willfully touched victims' breasts but without the purpose of sexual gratification as defendant was drunk; 5-4.

State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006)

In assault 1º trial, jury is instructed to first consider greater and then, if it acquits or is unable to reach a verdict as to greater it can then consider lesser, jury is silent as to greater, convicts of assault 2º, trial court inquires of jurors who respond they were hung on greater, state seeks to retry defendant on assault 1º, trial court refuses; held: where court instructs jury that, if they are unable to agree on greater offense, they may consider lesser, State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991), State v. Watkins, 31 Wn.App. 485 (1982), aff'd, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983), then it is error for court to inquire into jurors' thinking about the greater, and thus jury implicitly acquitted defendant of greater, State v. Kirk, 64 Wn.App. 788, 789-90 (1992), but see: State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009), State v. Scott, 145 Wn.App. 884 (2008); affirms State v. Linton, 122 Wn.App. 73 (2004); 9-0 on result.

State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006)

Defendant is charged with aggravated murder 1º, jury is instructed to first consider crime charged and, if it acquits or is unable to agree on greater, can move to lesser, jury leaves verdict form for aggravated murder blank, convicts of lesser felony murder/assault which is later vacated, Pers Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), state refiles aggravated murder; held: jurors leaving verdict form blank means on its face that the jury was unable to agree which is not an implied acquittal, thus jeopardy is not terminated and state may re-try defendant on the greater offense, State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009), State v. Glasmann, 183 Wn.2d 117 (2015), State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777, 789 (2006)(Sanders, J., concurring), State v. Scott, 145 Wn.App. 884 (2008), State v. Wright, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Crittenden, 146 Wn.App. 361 (2008)

Taking a motor vehicle without permission of the owner is not a lesser of theft, see also: State v. Richey, 1 Wn.App.2d 387 (2017); I.

State v. Nguyen, 165 Wn.2d 428 (2008)

A lesser penalty is not a requirement for a crime to be a lesser included offense; physical control is a lesser of DUI; 9-0.

State v. Hassan, 151 Wn.App. 209 (2009)

In delivery of marijuana case, failure to request possession as a lesser is not ineffective assistance, as it was a legitimate trial strategy, State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011), State v. Conway, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 257 (2022), cf.: State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 539-43 (2018); Division I acknowledges that, in State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004), the court failed to "properly take into consideration the strong presumption of effective assistance," ¶ 30, n. 6.

State v. Hunter, 152 Wn.App. 30, 43-48 (2009)

Defendant, accused of murder, testifies both that he didn't remember shooting victim and that he shot victim but it was an accident, trial court declines manslaughter lessers; held: testimony that shooting was an accident raised the inference that defendant was guilty only of manslaughter, thus court abused its discretion in declining lessers, distinguishing State v. Hernandez, 99 Wn.App. 312 (1999), see: State v. Guillot, 106 Wn.App. 355 (2001); II.

State v. Meneses, 169 Wn.App. 586, 595-97 (2010)

Witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.110(1)(d), is a legal lesser of intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.120(1)(c), the latter requiring evidence of a threat; here, defendant threatened victim, even if jury found the threat not to be a "true threat," State v. J.M., 144 Wn.2d 472, 478 (2001), there is still no affirmative evidence that defendant committed the former but not the latter; affirms State v. Meneses, 149 Wn.App. 707 (2009); 9-0.

Unlawful use of drug paraphernalia, RCW 69.50.412(1), is not a lesser of possession of a controlled substance; II.

State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 364-70 (2010)

In this murder 1° case, it was not objectively unreasonable for counsel to pursue a strategy of acquittal only and not request a murder 2° lesser instruction, State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011), State v. Hassan, 151 Wn.App. 209 (2009), distinguishing State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004), State v. Pittman, 134 Wn.App. 376, 387-90 (2006); I.

State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011)

In murder case, counsel submits manslaughter lessers then withdraws them, defendant agrees on the record upon inquiry of the court, counsel argues self defense and reasonable doubt, defendant is convicted, appeals claiming ineffective assistance for failure to request lessers; held: decision whether or not to seek lessers is a tactical decision by counsel with consultation with client, State v. Witherspoon, 180 Wn.2d 875, 885-87 (2014), see: State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 392-97 (2012), defendant's waiver does not preclude a claim of ineffective assistance; choosing not to request lessers is a tactical decision by counsel and is not ineffective assistance; counsel's decision to proceed with an all or nothing approach is a proper tactic regardless of the lesser penalty of the lesser, State v. Conway, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 257 (2022), cf.: State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 539-44 (2018), reversing State v. Grier, 150 Wn.App. 619 (2009), overruling State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004), State v. Pittman, 134 Wn.App. 376, 387-90 (2006); 9-0.

Blueford v. Arkansas, 566 U.S. 599, 132 S.ct. 2044, 182 L.Ed.2d 937 (2012)

Jury is instructed on charged offense and lessers, sends out a note saying it cannot agree "on any one charge," judge brings jurors into court, foreperson reports jury is unanimous "against" the charged offense, court orders more deliberations after which jury reports it has not reached a verdict, mistrial declared; at retrial, defendant is convicted of greater offense; held: oral report of foreperson was not a "final resolution of anything," thus double jeopardy clause does not preclude retrial; instructions that jury may convict on any one offense or acquit on all were proper under state law, trial court did not abuse discretion by refusing to instruct that jury could acquit on some but not others; 6-3.

State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012)

Defendant solicits informant to have complainant "disappear, make it look like she didn't exist," is charged with solicitation to commit murder, trial court refuses lesser of solicitation to commit assault 4°; held: while solicitation to commit assault is a legal lesser, and while "disappear" may have "nonhomicidal meaning, the inferential leap to mere fourth degree assault is too great even when the evidence is interpreted" in defendant's favor, reversing State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885 (2011); per curiam.

State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 393-400 (2012)

Where counsel does not submit instructions for a lesser included offense, defendant's assertion that counsel did not consult him and his post-trial declaration that he would have asked counsel to seek a lesser is hindsight, absent evidence in the record of a failure to consult, defense has not established the counsel's performance was deficient, State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011); II.

State v. Sharkey, 172 Wn.App. 386 (2012)

Taking a motor vehicle 2°, RCW 9A.56.075(1) (2003), is not a lesser of robbery 1°; III.

State v. Henderson, 180 Wn.App. 138 (2014), aff'd, on other grounds, 182 Wn.2d 734 (2015)

Defendant is convicted of murder 1° with extreme indifference to human life, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), for shooting into a party as a gang retaliation, argues at trial that another was the shooter, trial court refuses manslaughter 2° lesser; held: manslaughter 2° is not a lesser, as no rational jury could find that defendant shot into a crowd while failing to be aware that a homicide would occur; II.

State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014)

In rape 2° case victim testifies defendant digitally penetrated her in a hot tub in spite of her persistently pushing him away, defendant apparently presents no evidence, defendant is acquitted of rape 2°, convicted of lesser degree offense of rape 3° having objected to the instruction; held: evidence supported a jury finding that defendant did not engage in forcible compulsion to achieve his nonconsensual sexual intercourse with the victim as victim's testimony about force was "vague," thus jury could have believed victim's testimony but still have found that defendant's conduct did not amount to forcible compulsion, thus rape 3° instruction was not error, distinguishing State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64, 72 (2009), State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d. 353, 356 (1995), *State v. State v. Hampton, 182 Wn.App. 805, 828-31 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015)

In rape 2°/incapable of consent case victim testifies she told defendant "no," defendant testified that no intercourse occurred, trial court gives lesser degree rape 3° instructions, defendant is convicted of lesser; held: jury could find that the evidence affirmatively established that victim expressed her lack of consent, not that she was incapable of consent, thus lesser instruction was proper, see: State v. Corey, 181 Wn.App. 272 (2014), cf.: State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d 353 (1995), State v. Wright, 152 Wn.App. 64 (2009); I.

State v. Boswell, 185 Wn.App. 321, 332-35 (2014)

Assault 3º is not a lesser of attempted murder, State v. Harris, 121 Wn.2d 317 (1993); II.

State v. Henderson, 182 Wn.2d 734 (2015)

Defendant is convicted of murder 1° with extreme indifference to human life, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), for shooting into a party as a gang retaliation, argues at trial that another was the shooter, trial court refuses manslaughter 1° and 2° lessers; held: manslaughter 1° meets the legal prong justifying a lesser, because manslaughter 1°'s recklessness element requires that defendant disregard a substantial risk of homicide rather than just a substantial risk of a wrongful act, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457, 467-68 (2005), a rational jury could find that defendant shot into a crowd but that he did so with a disregard for a substantial risk of homicide rather than an extreme indifference that caused a grave risk of death, thus manslaughter 1° meets factual test, Pers. Restraint of Sandoval, 189 Wn.2d 811 (2018); State v. Pettus, 89 Wn.App. 688 (1998) and State v. Pastrana, 94 Wn.App. 463 (1999) no longer control due to State v. Gamble, supra.; affirms State v. Henderson, 180 Wn.App. 138 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Glasmann, 183 Wn.2d 117 (2015)

Where defendant is charged with greater and lesser offenses and jury is unable to agree regarding the greater but convicts of the lesser which is reversed on appeal, state may retry defendant for the greater without violating double jeopardy clause, State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256, 265 (2007), adhered to on recons., 165 Wn.2d 627, 628 (2009); 6-3.

Assault 4° is a lesser of indecent liberties, State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.App. 304 (2006), distinguishing State v. Thomas, 98 Wn.App. 422 (1999); I.

State v. Sandoval, 189 Wn.2d 811 (2018)

Murder defendant, charged as an absent accomplice to a homicide where the shooter shot into a car killing an occupant, requests manslaughter lesser which is denied; held: sufficient evidence supported the reckless element of manslaughter 1°, thus court erred in refusing lesser, State v. Henderson, 182 Wn.2d 734 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Ritchey, 1 Wn.App.2d 387 (2017)

Taking a motor vehicle 2°, RCW 9A.56.075 (2003), is not a lesser of theft of a motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.065 (2007); III.

State v. Fluker, 5 Wn.App.2d 374 (2018)

In murder case with lawful use of force defense defendant testifies he shot victim (8 times) intending to stop him, not to kill him, trial court instructs on lesser of manslaughter 1°, declines to instruct on manslaughter 2°; held: while evidence supports claim that defendant killed victim recklessly, no evidence exists to support a claim that defendant was unaware of the risk and thus acted negligently, thus court properly declined to instruct on manslaughter 2°; I.

State v. Downey, 9 Wn.App.2d 852 (2019)

An alternative mean of an offense cannot be a lesser included offense since a lesser must be a separate crime; for vehicular assault driving with disregard for the safety of others is not a lesser included offense of driving in a reckless manner; I.

State v. Loos, 14 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020)

Defendant is charged with assault of a child 3°, is convicted of assault 4° as an inferior degree offense; held: assault 4° is not an inferior degree offense of assault 3° by criminal negligence, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(f) (2013), as assault 4° requires proof of intent; I.

State v. Coryell, 197 Wn.2d 397 (2021)

"[W]hen there is affirmative evidence from which the jury could conclude that only the lesser included offense occurred, a lesser offense instruction should be given. The word "only" is meant to suggest that a jury might have a reasonable doubt about whether the charged crime was committed but may find that, instead, the lesser crime was committed. Thus, the trial court should consider whether any affirmative evidence exists upon which a jury could conclude that the lesser included offense was committed. The test was never intended to require evidence that the greater, charged crime was not committed—only that a jury, faced with conflicting evidence, could conclude the prosecution had proved only the lesser or inferior crime," at ¶48, distinguishing State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), ; here, "the trial court erred in requiring evidence that would exclude the commission of the charged crime;" 9-0.

State v. Conway, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 257 (2022)

Foregoing a lesser-included offense instruction is a strategic decision and is thus not ineffective assistance, State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011), cf.: State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 539-44 (2018); III.

State v. Avington, 23 Wn.App.2d 847 (2022)

In murder by extreme indifference, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b) (1990), evidence shows defendant shooting towards a bar entrance where victims were gathered, court refuses lesser instruction on manslaughter 1°, RCW 9A.32.060(1)(a) (2011); held: no reasonable jury would rationally find that defendant was acting recklessly as required for manslaughter rather than with extreme indifference; in order for defendant to be entitled to an instruction on a lesser included offense there must be some evidence which affirmatively establishes defendant's theory of the crime, State v. Coryell, 197 Wn.2d 397 (2021), State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443 (1978); II.

INSTRUCTIONS
Mens rea

State v. Simmons, 28 Wn.App. 243 (1980)

Malice instruction as defined in statute may be constitutional presumption, distinguishing State v. Johnson, 23 Wn.App. 506 (1979); I.

State v. Shipp, 93 Wn.2d 510 (1980)

Knowledge instruction as defined in statute is unconstitutional; reverses State v. Van Antwerp, 22 Wn.App. 674 (1979); 6-3.

State v. Gibson, 32 Wn.App. 217 (1982)

Instruction that "intent may be established by inference" does not shift burden to defense, State v. Caldwell, 94 Wn.2d 614, 619-20 (1980); I.

State v. MacReady, 32 Wn.App. 928 (1982)

Inference of intent to commit a crime from unlawful entry into a building is not a shifting of the burden of proof because the inference is permissible, not mandatory; no explanatory instruction was necessary when the jury sent out a question about whether the inference was mandatory; I.

State v. Bledsoe, 33 Wn.App. 720 (1983)

In murder 1° case, failure to define "intent," where not proposed, is not error; I.

Bellevue v. Kinsman, 34 Wn.App. 786 (1983)

Malice instruction with inference is improper, State v. Johnson, 23 Wn.App. 605 (1979); I.

State v. Allen, 101 Wn.2d 355 (1984)

The level of culpability which must be proved for an attempted crime is that mental state which must be proved for the substantive offense; defense is entitled to have the mental state element defined for the jury; 5-4.

In re Music, 104 Wn.2d 189 (1985)

Instruction defining intent as prohibited by Sandstrom v. Montana, 61 L.Ed.2d 39 (1979) held not to violate due process in this case, where issue is raised in personal restraint petition; 9-0.

State v. Tyler, 47 Wn.App. 648 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Delcambre, 116 Wn.2d 648, 653 (1987)

Failure to define "intent" in theft case where defense was that defendant did not intend to deprive is not harmless; 2-1, I.

State v. Scott, 110 Wn.2d 682 (1988)

Failure to define "knowledge," RCW 9A.08.010(1)(b), is not constitutional error, effectively overruling language in State v. Boot, 40 Wn.App. 215 (1985); "knowledge" is not technical term which need be defined for the jury, overruling dicta in State v. Allen, 101 Wn.2d 355, at 360 (1984); accord: State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990); 6-3.

Cheek v. United States, 112 L.Ed.2d 617 (1991)

Defendant, in willful failure to file income tax case, testifies he sincerely believed tax laws were unconstitutional; trial court instructs jury that a persons opinion that tax laws violate rights is not a good faith misunderstanding of the law; held: because the term "willfully" as used in federal criminal tax statutes has been interpreted to mean specific intent to violate the law, United States v. Murdock, 78 L.Ed. 381 (1933), then court's instruction to disregard evidence of defendant's understanding that he was not required to file was error; 6-2.

State v. Kepiro, 61 Wn.App. 116 (1991)

Intent to harm or reasonably cause alarm is not an element of intimidating a judge, RCW 9A.72.160, see also: State v. Brown, 137 Wn.App. 587 (2007), cf.: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015); I.

Staples v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 608 (1994)

Federal statute prohibiting possession of an unregistered machine gun, 26 USC §§ 5861(d), 5845(a)(6), is silent as to whether government must prove defendant knew of weapon's automatic firing ability; held: common law rule requiring mens rea as an element of a crime requires proof of knowledge absent some indication of congressional intent, express or implied, to dispense with mens rea, United States v. Balint, 66 L.Ed. 604 (1922), United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 57 L.Ed.2d 854 (1978), see: United States v. X-Citement Video, 130 L.Ed.2d 372, 380-5 (1994), *State v. Bryan v. United States, 141 L.Ed.2d 197 (1998)

Willful means an act undertaken with a "bad purpose," i.e., the government must prove that defendant acted with knowledge that his conduct was unlawful, Ratzlaf v. United States, 126 L.Ed.2d 615 (1994), does not require proof that defendant knew what the law was; 6-3.

Knowledge instruction with permissible inference, WPIC 10.02, may be given, State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700, 710 (1990), but trial court must determine that inferred fact (knowledge) flows from proven fact (in bail jumping case, notice) by a preponderance unless the only basis for finding an element is the inference, State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98, 108-9 (1995), determined on a case-by-case basis, State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 712 (1994), Stae v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 739-42 (2009), *see: State v. State v. Goble, 131 Wn.App. 194, 202-04 (2005)

Where instructions require that state prove that defendant knew victim was a law enforcement officer, a knowledge instruction which includes last paragraph of WPIC 10.02 "[a]cting knowingly…also is established if a person acts intentionally" is error as it relieves that state of its burden of proving defendant knew victim's status if jury found the crime was intentional, State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632, 641-48 (2009), State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910, 924 (2007), cf.: State v. Gerdts, 136 Wn.App. 720 (2007), State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910, 924 (2007), State v. Keend, 140 Wn.App. 858, 863-68 (2007), *but see: State v. State v. Gerdts, 136 Wn.App. 720 (2007)

In malicious mischief case, instruction that acting knowingly is also established by acting intentionally does not relieve state of its burden, State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910, 924 (2007), State v. Coleman, 155 Wn.App. 951, 962 (2010), State v. Holzknecht, 157 Wn.App. 754 (2010), distinguishing State v. Goble, 131 Wn.App. 194, 202-04 (2005), *but see: State v. State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632, 641-48 (2009)

In assault 2º/reckless infliction case, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a), where the mens rea elements are intentional assault and reckless infliction of substantial bodily harm, instruction defining reckless that includes "recklessness also is established if a person acts intentionally" is error as it relieves state of burden of proving that defendant acted recklessly if jury finds that defendant assaulted intentionally, State v. Goble, 131 Wn.App. 194, 202-04 (2005), State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799, 807-17 (2010), see also: State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306 (2010), effectively overruling *State v. State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306, 315-17 (2010)

In drug delivery case, instruction that acting knowingly is also established by acting intentionally, WPIC 10.02, does not create a conclusive presumption, State v. Gerdts, 136 Wn.App. 720, 728 (2007), State v. Holzknecht, 157 Wn.App. 754 (2010), acknowledging that *State v. State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799, 807-17 (2010)

In assault 3° case where to convict instruction requires state to prove that defendant knew victim was a police officer, but see: State v. Brown, 140 Wn.2d 456, 470 (2000), and court defines assault as an intentional act, then the knowledge instruction that reads "acting knowingly…is established if a person acts intentionally" creates an impermissible mandatory presumption, but see: *State v. State v. Holzknecht, 157 Wn.App. 754 (2010)

In assault of a child 2° case, instructions that make clear that a different mental state must be determined for each element, intent as to assault and recklessness as to infliction of substantial bodily harm, then instructions that also direct that recklessness is established if a person acts intentionally or knowingly do not create impermissible presumptions, State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306, 315-17 (2010), State v. Gerdts, 135 Wn.App. 720 (2007), State v. Nordgren, 167 Wn.App. 653 (2012), but see: State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632 (2009), see also: State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489, 508-10 (2011) ; II.

Elonis v. United States, 575 U.S. 723, 135 S.Ct. 2001 192 L.Ed.2d 1 (2015)

In federal harassment case, 18 U.S.C. § 875(c) (1986), First Amendment obliges government to prove that defendant transmitted a communication with the purpose of communicating a threat or with knowledge that it would be viewed as a threat, instructing that defendant communicated what a reasonable person would view as a threat is insufficient, State v. Lilyblad, 163 Wn.2d 1 (2008), see: State v. Trey M., 186 Wn.2d 884 (2016); court does not reach question of whether recklessness is sufficient; 7-2.

State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 770-73 (2015)

In strangulation murder case, absent evidence that the strangulation was reckless or criminally negligent, defense is not entitled to manslaughter lessers; I.

State v. Rudolph, 199 Wn.App. 813 (2017)

In community custody violator/escape from community custody, RCW 72.09.310 (1992), defining element of "willful" as knowledge and not as a "purposeful act" is correct; III.

State v. Yishmael, 195 Wn.2d 155 (2020

Unlawful practice of law for holding oneself out as a lawyer, RCW 2.48.180(2)(a), is a strict liability crime; affirms State v. Yishmael, 6 Wn.App.2d 203 (2018); 6-3.

State v. Jallow, 16 Wn.App.2d 625 (2021)

Absence of causation element in animal cruelty, RCW 16.52.205(2), to convict instruction is reversible error; I.

State v. Flores, 18 Wn.App.2d 486 (2021)

Alien in possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.171, which does not contain an explicit mental state element, requires proof of knowing possession, State v. Bash, 130 Wn.2d 594 (1996), State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021), State v. Bash, 130 Wn.2d 594 (1996); I.

State v. Weaver, 198 Wn.2d 459 (2021)

Criminal trespass to convict instruction that reads, in part, that defendant "knew that the entry or remaining was unlawful" does not conflict with knowledge definition that reads, in part, "[i]t is not necessary that defendant know that the fact, circumstance, or result is defined by law as being unlawful or an element of a crime;" 6-3.

Missing Witness

State v. Bonner, 21 Wn.App. 783 (1978)

For witness to be "available" to one party, there must be a community of interest; informant meets such a test, but absence can be explained by threats on an informant's life, whereupon no instruction should be given, State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 571-74 (2012); II.

State v. Dickamore, 22 Wn.App. 851 (1979)

To get a missing witness instruction, testimony of uncalled witness must be important and necessary, not merely trivial or cumulative; III.

State v. Lopez, 29 Wn.App. 836 (1981)

Where police made immediate contact with witness on day of offense, informed witness he had a duty to stay in contact with prosecutor and, when trial date was set, made reasonable efforts to serve subpoena, defense is not entitled to missing witness instruction, see: State v. Davis, 116 Wn.App. 81, 88-90 (2003), aff'd, 154 Wn.2d 291 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), State v. Clinton, 25 Wn.App. 400 (1980)State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 571-74; I.

State v. Mark, 34 Wn.App. 349 (1983)

Missing witness instruction should not be given unless defense establishes circumstances creating a reasonable probability that state failed to call the witness because his testimony would have damaged the state's case, Wright v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 7 Wn.2d 341 (1941); II.

State v. Frazier, 55 Wn.App. 204 (1989)

Absent a missing witness instruction, trial court may prohibit the defense from arguing to the jury that if the facts were not as stated by the defendant, the state would have called a certain witness to contradict, see: State v. French, 101 Wn.App. 380 (2000); I.

State v. McGhee, 57 Wn.App. 457 (1990)

To obtain missing witness instruction, defense need not prove that state deliberately suppressed unfavorable evidence, rather defendant must establish such circumstances which would indicate, as a matter of reasonable probability, that state would not knowingly fail to call the witness unless the witness's testimony would be damaging and when the witness is peculiarly available to the state, State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 571-74; where both the defense and the state have connections with the witness, trial court can consider defendant's failure to compel the witness's testimony in determining whether instruction should be given; I.

State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008)

In possession of precursor drugs/methamphetamine case, defendant testifies to innocent explanations of his pseudoephedrine and chemical purchases for his grandson and landlord, trial court gives missing witness instruction at request of state; held: missing grandson's testimony would have been cumulative, State v. Dickamore, 22 Wn.App. 851 (1979), absence was explained as grandson was in school, State v. Bonner, 21 Wn.App. 783 (1978), his testimony was not "key," cf.: State v. Contreras, 57 Wn.App. 471, 475-76 (1990), thus instruction as to grandson was error; landlord was not under defendant's control, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 485-86 (1991), state did not raise issue until after both parties had rested, not giving defense the opportunity to explain the landlord's absence, cf.: State v. Sundberg, 185 Wn.2d 147 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 571-74 (2012)

Domestic violence victim fails to appear at trial, state does not seek material witness warrant (opinion is silent as to whether or not she was served with a subpoena), recorded telephone calls from jail show defendant urged victim to say she lied to police, victim's hearsay statements are admitted, court declines missing witness instruction; held: missing witness instruction is proper where a witness is peculiarly available to a party and circumstances at trial establish that it is reasonably probable that the party would not have knowingly failed to call the witness unless the witness' testimony would be damaging, State v. Davis, 73 Wn.2d 271, 280 (1968), overruled on other grounds, State v. Abdulle, 174 Wn.2d 411 (2012); here, victim was known to both parties, thus not peculiarly available only to state, defendant had the opportunity to call victim, plus her absence was explained by defendant's conduct instructing her to recant; I.

State v. Houser, 196 Wn.App. 486 (2016)

In DUI case defendant testifies another person who he can't find was driving and left the scene of the accident, over objection trial court gives missing witness instruction for state; held: missing witness instruction is error where the witness' testimony would necessarily be self-incriminating, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 489–90 (1991), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 846 (2006), overruled on other grounds, State v. W.R., Jr., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); I.

Reasonable Doubt

State v. Cox, 94 Wn.2d 170 (1980)

Failure to give burden of proof instruction may be harmless error; 9-0.

In re Lile, 100 Wn.2d 224 (1983)

Failure to give presumption of innocence instruction may be harmless error under CONST. art. 1, § 3, Kentucky v. Whorton, 60 L.Ed.2d 640 (1979); 9-0.

Sullivan v. Louisiana, 124 L.Ed.2d 182 (1993)

Constitutionally defective reasonable doubt instruction, Cage v. Louisiana, 112 L.Ed.2d 339 (1990), cannot be harmless error, but not retroactive to cases on collateral review, Tyler v. Cain, 150 L.Ed.2d 632 (2001); 9-0.

Victor v. Nebraska, 511 U.S. 1, 114 S. Ct. 1239, 127 L. Ed. 2d 583 (1994)

United States Constitution does not require trial court to define "reasonable doubt" for jury; instruction that defines reasonable doubt in part as "not a mere possible doubt [as] everything relating to human affairs, and depending on moral evidence, is open to some possible or imaginary doubt. It is that state of the case which leaves the minds of the jurors in that condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction, to a moral certainty, of the truth of the charge" is sufficient; equating reasonable doubt with "a substantial doubt," while "somewhat problematic," at 599, is sufficient in a context which tells jurors that the doubt "is distinguished from a doubt arising from mere possibility, from bare imagination, or from fanciful conjecture"; 7-2.

State v. Castle, 86 Wn.App. 48 (1997)

"If…you are firmly convinced that the defendant is guilty…, you must find him guilty. If on the other hand, you think there is a real possibility that he is not guilty, you must give him the benefit of the doubt and find him not guilty" does not lower state's burden and is thus valid; instructing jury that it should find defendant guilty or not guilty based upon the evidence, but excluding "or lack of evidence," is not error, State v. Dykstra, 127 Wn.App. 1, 9-11 (2005), State v. Hunt, 128 Wn.App. 535 (2005), but see: State v. Bennett, 161 Wn.2d 303 (2007), State v. Smith, 174 Wn.App. 359 (2013), but preferable that lack of evidence language be included, see: State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990); I.

State v. Bennett, 161 Wn.2d 303 (2007)

While instructing jury pursuant to State v. Castle, 86 Wn.App. 48 (1997) defining, in part, reasonable doubt to include "[t]here are very few things in this world that we know with absolute certainty, and in criminal cases the law does not require proof that overcomes every possible doubt" does not violate the constitution, see: State v. Hatley, 41 Wn.App. 789 (1985), State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 656-68 (1995), State v. Cervantes, 87 Wn.App. 440 (1997), State v. Meggyesy, 90 Wn.App. 693, 697-706 (1998), State v. Chenoweth, 127 Wn.App. 444, 461-62 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 160 Wn.2d 454 (2007), State v. Hunt, 128 Wn.App. 535, 538-41

(2005), State v. Jimenez Macias, 171 Wn.App. 323 (2012), Supreme Court exercises it's "inherent supervisory powers" to direct that courts use WPIC 4.01, State v. Castillo, 150 Wn.App. 466 (2009), State v. Lizarraga, 191 Wn.App. 530, 567-68 (2015), cf.: State v. Lundy, 162 Wn.App. 865 (2011), State v. Kalebaugh, 183 Wn.2d 578 (2015), see: State v. Osman, 192 Wn.App. 355 (2016), but see: State v. Chacon, 192 Wn.2d 545 (2018); 5-4.

State v. Smith, 174 Wn.App. 359 (2013)

In to convict instruction, stating "if you find from the evidence that each of these elements has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt, then you should return a verdict of guilty" is manifest constitutional error; III.

State v. Wilson, 176 Wn.App. 147 (2013)

Instructing jury "if you find…that each of these elements has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt, then it will be your duty to return a verdict of guilty" is proper, State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932, 947-48 (2014) , rev., on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016), State v. Nicholas, 185 Wn.App. 298 (2014), and instructing "in order to return a verdict of guilty, you must unanimously find from the evidence that each of these elements has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt" invites jury nullification, State v. Meggyesy, 90 Wn.App. 693, 698 (1998), abrogated on other grounds, State v. Recuenco, 154 Wn.2d 156 (2005), State v. Brown, 130 Wn.App. 767 (2005), State v. Moore, 179 Wn.App. 464 (2014); state constitution does not provide a broader right to a jury trial with respect to the instruction; III.

State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 199-200 (2014)

"Abiding belief" in reasonable doubt instruction is not error, State v. Price, 33 Wn.App. 472 (1982), State v. Manry, 51 Wn.App. 24 (1988), State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 784-85 (2014), State v. Jenson, 194 Wn.App. 900 (2016), State v. Boyd, 1 Wn.App.2d 501, 521-22 (2017), see: State v. Osman, 192 Wn.App. 355 (2016); I.

State v. Kalebaugh, 183 Wn.2d 578 (2015)

Preliminary instruction defining reasonable doubt as a "doubt for which a reason can be given" is not error where there was no objection and court correctly instructed after closing, State v. Parnel, 195 Wn.App. 325 (2016), distinguishing State v. Bennett, 161 Wn.2d 303 (2007); affirms State v. Kalebaugh, 183 Wn.App. 414 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Osman, 192 Wn.App. 355, 368-79 (2016)

Defense argument that abiding belief means you can't change your mind a year from now is proper, see: Victor v. Nebraska, 127 L.Ed.2d 583 (1994); I.

State v. Jenson, 194 Wn.App. 900 (2016)

"Abiding belief in the truth of the charge" accurately informs the jury its job is to determine whether state has proved the offense beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187 (2014), does not encourage jury to undertake an impermissible search for the truth, State v. Boyd, 1 Wn.App.2d 501, 521-22 (2017), distinguishing State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 760 (2012); II.

State v. Parnel, 195 Wn.App. 325 (2016)

"A reasonable doubt is one for which a reason exists" does not oblige the jury to articulate a reason for doubt, State v. Kalebaugh, 183 Wn.2d 578, 585-86 (2015); II.

State v. Chacon, 192 Wn.2d 545 (2018)

Omitting language that the defendant bears no burden of proving a reasonable doubt exists, does not violate the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments and is not manifest constitutional error, defense did not object, but see: State v. Bennett, 161 Wn.2d 303 (2007); 5-4.

INSTRUCTIONS
Self-Defense

State v. Fesser, 23 Wn.App. 422 (1979)

Self-defense instructions must include essential element that person using force need only reasonably believe that he or she is in danger; III.

State v. Crigler, 23 Wn.App. 716 (1979)

Instruction limiting jury to only those acts and circumstances occurring at or immediately before killing is insufficient; jury must be permitted to consider all circumstances, including those occurring substantially before killing; II.

State v. Fischer, 23 Wn.App. 756 (1979)

Must instruct that the person using force need only reasonably believe, in light of what is known to her, that she or another person is in danger; also, one who acts in defense of others is justified in using force if she reasonably believes one being protected was an innocent party, even if in fact the party being protected was the aggressor; State v. Penn, 89 Wn.2d 63 (1977) II.

State v. Theroff, 95 Wn.2d 385 (1980)

Instruction that defendant can't use deadly weapon to eject a nonviolent trespasser is approved; affirms State v. Theroff, 25 Wn.App. 590 (1980); 5-1.

State v. Bernardy, 25 Wn.App. 146 (1980)

Defense of other: defendant reasonably believed other party was innocent and in danger, even if other party was in fact the aggressor; I.

State v. Painter, 27 Wn.App. 708 (1980)

Defining great bodily harm as "more than an ordinary striking with the hands or fists" is a comment on the evidence, and undermines the subjective standard; accord: State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469 (1997), State v. Corn, 95 Wn.App. 41 (1999), State v. Rodriguez, 121 Wn.App. 180 (2004), see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998), see also: State v. Lucero, 140 Wn.App. 782, 785-87 (2007); I.

State v. Williams, 27 Wn.App. 848 (1980)

Standard for probable cause to arrest by a citizen is same as for police; I.

State v. Collins, 30 Wn.App. 1 (1981)

At defendant's murder trial, defendant testifies that he does not remember what happened; detective testifies that defendant stated at arrest that he believed the victim went for a knife; court refused self-defense instructions; held: "it is not for the court to weigh the evidence in a jury case," thus reversed, but see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998); III.

State v. Castro, 30 Wn.App. 586 (1981)

Slayer must use no more than reasonable force to repel a violent felony being committed upon the slayer; I.

State v. Adams, 31 Wn.App. 393 (1982)

Self-defense instructions are required when there is "any evidence" tending to prove self-defense, State v. Redwine, 72 Wn.App. 625, 630-1 (1994); in determining whether there is any evidence to support self-defense instructions, court must adopt subjective perspective of defendant, State v. Janes, 64 Wn.App. 134 (1992), rev'd on other grounds, 121 Wn.2d 220 (1993); cf.: State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561 (1991), see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998); I.

State v. Heath, 35 Wn.App. 269 (1983)

First aggressor instruction, former WPIC 16.04, may be given if there is any evidence defendant provoked fight even if victim threw first blow, State v. Hawkins, 89 Wash. 449 (1916), State v. Currie, 74 Wn.2d 197 (1968), State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85 (2008), see: State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999), State v. Wingate, 123 Wn.App. 415 (2004), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), Pers. Restraint of Harvey, 3 Wn.App.2d 204 (2018), State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d 874 (2018), State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); where the to convict instruction requires state to prove defendant "unlawfully" shot victim, it is deemed state has burden of disproving self-defense, satisfying State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484 (1983), distinguishing State v. LeBlanc, 34 Wn.App. 306 (1983), wherein instruction did not carry word "unlawfully" nor assign burden of proof as to self-defense; III, 2-1.

State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484 (1983)

State has burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt the absence of self-defense in a murder case, modifying State v. Savage, 94 Wn.2d 569 (1980), State v. Hanton, 94 Wn.2d 129 (1980), State v. Burt, 94 Wn.2d 108 (1980), State v. King, 92 Wn.2d 541 (1979); 5-3.

State v. Alferez, 37 Wn.App. 508 (1984)

Where defendant testifies he was not in fear when he pulled his gun out, and that it discharged accidentally, he is not entitled to self-defense instruction; III.

State v. Negrin, 37 Wn.App. 516 (1984)

Self-defense instructions which direct that self-defense may only be employed when defendant is actually attacked are erroneous, State v. Janes, 64 Wn.App. 134 (1992), rev'd on other grounds, 121 Wn.2d 220 (1993), State v. LeFaber, 128 Wn.2d 896 (1996); cf.: State v. Brenner, 53 Wn.App. 367 (1989), Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401 (2007); I.

State v. Robinson, 38 Wn.App. 871 (1984)

Failure to assign burden of disproving self-defense to state is harmless error here; 2-1; III.

State v. Martineau, 38 Wn.App. 891 (1984)

Court instructed jury that a person commits murder 1° by killing another with premeditation "unless the killing is justified," fails to assign burden to state; held: instructions, read as a whole, permit jury to infer state had burden of disproving self-defense; 2-1; III.

State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984)

Error not to instruct that jury should consider self-defense from defendant's perspective in light of all she knew and had experienced with victim, see: State v. Goodrich, 72 Wn.App. 71, 76-7 (1993), defendant is entitled to no duty to retreat instruction, State v. Hiatt, 187 Wash. 226 (1936), State v. Lewis, 6 Wn.App. 38 (1971), State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 493-95 (2003), but see: State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 549-50 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Harvey, 3 Wn.App.2d 204 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Acosta, 101 Wn.2d 612 (1984)

In assault 2° case, jury must be instructed that state has burden of proving the absence of self-defense, reversing State v. Acosta, 34 Wn.App. 387 (1983); accord: State v. Despenza, 38 Wn.App. 645 (1984); 5-4.

State v. Sampson, 40 Wn.App. 594 (1985)

Instructing jury that an assault is an act with "unlawful force," then defining "lawful force" adequately conveys to jury that state bears burden of proof on self-defense, distinguishing State v. Acosta, 101 Wn.2d 612 (1984); first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, is not a comment on the evidence where supported by sufficient evidence, but see: State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120 (1985); II, 2-1.

State v. Walker, 40 Wn.App. 658 (1985)

Defendant stabs her husband in the back, claims that she acted in self-defense because she suffers from battered woman syndrome and "knew" victim would hit her, although no contemporaneous threats or acts of violence occurred; held: defendant is not entitled to self-defense instructions, as there was no evidence that there was imminent danger of an assault; fear alone, without more, is insufficient to establish the appearance of imminent danger to justify self-defense instructions; battered woman syndrome does not, by itself, establish a defense, see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998); II.

State v. Fondren, 41 Wn.App. 17 (1985)

Better practice is to include lack of excuse or justification in to convict instructions, State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484 (1983); III.

State v. Singleton, 41 Wn.App. 721 (1985)

In parental discipline case, jury should be instructed using an objective standard rather than the subjective self-defense standard; I.

State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120 (1985)

First aggressor instruction, former WPIC 16.04, is unconstitutionally vague, but see: State v. Grott, 195 Wn.2d 256 (2020); to be constitutional, it must be directed to intentional acts which the jury could reasonably assume would provoke a belligerent response by the victim,

State v. Birnel, 89 Wn.App. 459, 472-4 (1998), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), see also: State v. Washington, 64 Wn.App. 118 (1992), State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999); I.

State v. Bennett, 42 Wn.App. 125 (1985)

Absence of use of lawful force for parental discipline purposes, RCW 9A.16.020(5), must be proved by the state beyond a reasonable doubt and jury must be so instructed; I.

State v. Brower, 43 Wn.App. 893 (1986)

First aggressor instruction improper where there is no evidence that defendant was involved in wrongful or improper conduct which precipitated the charged offense, see: State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), State v. Grott, 195 Wn.2d 256 (2020); here, defendant had a CCW permit, only evidence that he was an aggressor was in terms of the charged assault, see: State v. Wingate, 155 Wn.2d 817 (2005), State v. Douglas, 128 Wn.App. 555 (2005), State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018); II.

State v. Hardy, 44 Wn.App. 477 (1986)

While a first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, is appropriate where the evidence establishes that defendant is in the role of an aggressor and the cause of the affray is sufficient to raise a jury question on the issue, State v. Thomas, 63 Wn.2d 59, 65 (1963), the use in that instruction of the phrase "unlawful act" is impermissably vague, State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120 (1985), as the phrase was not defined with respect to the particular circumstances of the case, distinguishing State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176 (1986), see: State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d 874 (2018), but see: State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999); I.

State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176 (1986)

Claim that defendant manifested honest or good faith but unreasonable belief that self-defense was necessary ("imperfect self-defense") is not defense nor should trial court instruct jury to that effect; see also: State v. Bergeson, 64 Wn.App. 366 (1991); first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, is appropriate where defendant fires first at police officers who had drawn their weapons first to effectuate a lawful arrest, see: State v. Davis, 119 Wn.2d 657 (1992), State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85 (2008), distinguishing State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640 (1986)

Where defendant testifies he was trying to get away from victim who was attacking him, tried to push her off but does not know if he actually touched her, and denied telling police that he pushed her causing her to fall, then defense is not entitled to self-defense instructions, as the defendant is claiming accident, but see: State v. Dyson, 90 Wn.App. 433 (1998); I.

No duty to retreat instruction, WPIC 16.08, is not required where the issue of whether or not defendant should have retreated was not an issue raised by either party, distinguishing State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984), accord: State v. Frazier, 55 Wn.App. 204 (1989), State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 658-9 (1993), State v. Wooten, 87 Wn.App. 821, 824-6 (1997), State v.

Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 549-50 (1999), see: Pers. Restraint of Harvey, 3 Wn.App.2d 204 (2018), State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306, 328 (2017), but see: State v. Williams, 81 Wn.App. 738 (1996), State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 493-95 (2003); definition of necessary, WPIC 16.05, is proper as it does not single out escape or retreat as an alternative to be considered by jury, distinguishing State v. Lewis, 6 Wn.App. 38 (1971); first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04 is harmless error where the evidence of unlawful conduct was clear, State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176 (1986); I.

Martin v. Ohio, 94 L.Ed.2d 267 (1987)

State legislature may properly place burden of proving self-defense on defendant; 5-4.

State v. Brigham, 52 Wn.App. 208 (1988)

Defendant and victim are involved in a fight commenced by victim, whereupon defendant pulls a knife and stabs victim eight times in back, defendant charged with felony murder 2° (assault); trial court declines to instruct as to assault self-defense, RCW 9A.16.020(3), WPIC 17.02, but does instruct as to homicide self-defense, RCW 9A.16.050; held: stabbing victim eight times in back is excessive force as a matter of law and cannot be interjected as self-defense, see: State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 855 (2006); I.

State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156 (1989)

First aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, should not be given where there is no evidence that defendant acted intentionally to provoke an assault against the victim, State v. Brower, 43 Wn.App. 893 (1986), State v. Birnel, 89 Wn.App. 459, 472-4 (1998); "[f]ew situations come to mind where the necessity for an aggressor instruction is warranted," State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120, 125 n.1 (1985), State v. Wingate, 155 Wn.2d 817 (2005), State v. Doluglas, 128 Wn.App. 555 (2005), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), but see: State v. Grott, 195 Wn.2d 256 (2020), State v. Davis, 119 Wn.2d 657 (1992), State v. Bea, 162 Wn.App. 570, 575-78 (2011), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), ), State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018); III.

State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591 (1989)

In felony murder (assault) case, jury need not be instructed that lawful use of force is a defense to both murder and assault; dicta at n. 4 suggests that self-defense is not a defense to felony murder 2°; I.

State v. Kidd, 57 Wn.App. 95 (1990)

Reasonable but mistaken belief instruction, WPIC 17.04, need not be given where jury is instructed that, in order for defendant to have acted lawfully, he must have reasonably believed that he was in danger, as it allows defense to argue that the defendant's reasonable belief could properly be a mistaken belief, State v. Bius, 23 Wn.App. 807, 810 (1979), State v. Prado, 144 Wn.App. 227, 247-48 (2008); first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, while not favored, but see: State v. Grott, 195 Wn.2d 256 (2020), may be given when there was credible evidence from which the jury could reasonably have concluded that it was the defendant who provoked the need to act in self-defense, State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 192 (1986), where the provoking act was intentional, State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120, 124 (1985), the provoking act was not the actual assault, State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156, 159 (1989), State v. Bea, 162 Wn.App. 570, 575-78 (2011), and was not an act directed toward one other than the actual victim, unless the act was likely to provoke a belligerent response from the actual victim, State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85 (2008), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), see: State v. Birnel, 89 Wn.App. 459, 472-4 (1998), State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999), State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018), State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d (2018), State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); I.

State v. Baker, 58 Wn.App. 222 (1990)

Where theory of defense case is accidental shooting, and there is no evidence that defendant or others were afraid of bodily harm by victim, then self-defense instructions need not be given, State v. Kerr, 14 Wn.App. 584 (1975), State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506, 518-27 (2005), see: State v. Slaughter, 143 Wn.App. 936 (2008); I.

State v. Smits, 58 Wn.App. 333 (1990)

Absent a threat of serious bodily injury to an arrestee, a person is prohibited from interfering with an unlawful arrest, State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426, 429-30 (1985), State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1 (1997); a third party may be justified in coming to the aid of an arrestee if she reasonably believes him to be in danger of serious bodily injury; I.

State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990)

Defendant, during burglary in which he was armed, confronts homeowner who is armed, defendant flees when gunfire ensues, homeowner is killed; held: lawful use of force is not available as a defense to felony-murder 1° (burglary), State v. Bolar, 118 Wn.App. 490, 506-10 (2003); self-defense is not revived, State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777 (1973), cf.: State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023),absent good faith intention to withdraw from burglary removing decedent's fear; even while fleeing from burglary scene, burglary is still in progress; affirms State v. Dennison, 54 Wn.App. 577 (1989); 7-2.

State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561 (1991)

Defendant claims victim grabbed his crotch and tried to kiss him, so defendant killed victim; held: trial court's determination that there was no evidence that it was reasonable for defendant to believe he must use deadly force, from an objective standpoint, precludes the giving of justifiable homicide/self-defense instructions, State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 201 (1986), cf.: State v. Adams, 31 Wn.App. 393 (1982); trial court need not give excusable homicide instructions, RCW 9A.16.030, where court determines that victim's death resulted from an intentional act and that there is no evidence to establish that victim's death resulted from defendant's commission of a lawful act by lawful means or that the act was committed by accident or misfortune, see: State v. Henderson, 192 Wn.2d 508 (2018); I.

State v. Bergeson, 64 Wn.App. 366 (1992)

Murder 2° defendant is not entitled to manslaughter instructions if the only inferences available from evidence are that s/he (1) subjectively believed that there was imminent danger of great personal injury, (2) subjectively intended to kill in self-defense, and (3) recklessly or negligently used more force than was objectively reasonable under the circumstances, but see: State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981); inference needed to support manslaughter instruction is that without intent to kill, but with recklessness, defendant caused death of another; II.

State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992)

Defendant drove to victim's home armed, broke in, victim saw gun, attempted to wrest it from defendant, is killed, trial court refuses self-defense instructions; held: self-defense is not available to defendant who is aggressor such that his actions precipitated or provoked the altercation which necessitated use of force, State v. Currie, 74 Wn.2d 197 (1968), State v. Sampson, 40 Wn.App. 594, 600 (1985), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010); III.

State v. Davis, 119 Wn.2d 657 (1992)

Evidence that defendant was first to strike others, after which defendant reemerged from his apartment with a knife and pushed victim is sufficient to support the giving of a first aggressor instruction, as they were intentional acts reasonably likely to provoke a belligerent response, State v. Cyrus, 66 Wn.App. 502, 508-10 (1992), State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156, 159 (1989), State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 191-3 (1986), State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999), State v. Wingate, 155 Wn.2d 817 (2005), State v. Douglas, 125 Wn.App. 555 (2005); affirms State v. Davis, 60 Wn.App. 813 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220 (1993)

Battered child syndrome is admissible to support claim of self-defense so trier of fact can evaluate reasonableness of defendant's perception that s/he was in imminent danger at time of homicide, State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984); imminence does not require actual physical assault, State v. Walker, 40 Wn.App. 658 (1985) and is not the same as immediate; a threat, or its equivalent, can support self-defense when there is reasonable belief threat will be carried out; "that the triggering behavior and the abusive episode are divided by time does not necessarily negate the reasonableness of defendant's perception of imminent harm," see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998); reverses State v. Janes, 64 Wn.App. 134 (1992); 7-0.

State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 837, 840-3 (1993)

In assault 3° on police officer, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(g), lawful use of force instruction should read, "[t]he use of force upon or toward a uniformed police officer performing his official duties is only lawful when used by a person who is actually about to be seriously injured," see: State v. Westlund, 13 Wn.App. 460, 466-7, 77 A.L.R.3d 270 (1975), State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426, 430 (1985), Seattle v. Cadigan, 55 Wn.App. 30 (1989); instruction allowing use of force when defendant has reasonable belief that he is about to be injured, WPIC 17.04 (Supp. 1986) is not proper when dealing with uniformed officers, State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1 (1997), State v. Bradley, 141 Wn.2d 731 (2000), State v. Garcia, 107 Wn.App. 545 (2001), State v. Calvin,176 Wn.App. 1, 13-14 (2013); I.

WPIC 17.02 (Supp. 1986), which reads, in part, "the person using the force may employ such force as a reasonably prudent person would use under the same or similar conditions as they appeared to the person, taking into consideration all of the facts and circumstances known to the person at the time of and prior to the incident" is sufficient to set forth the State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984) subjective factors, State v. Prado, 144 Wn.App. 227, 247-48 (2008); court need not instruct jurors to specifically place themselves in defendant's position; III.

State v. Redwine, 72 Wn.App. 625 (1994)

Self-defense instruction which does not assign burden to state is constitutional error which may be raised for the first time on appeal, State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484, 488 (1983), cf.: State v. Lucero, 152 Wn.App. 287, 292-93 (2009); III.

State v. Valentine, 75 Wn.App. 611, 618-9 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 132 Wn.2d 1 (1997)

In assault on police officer case, instruction which defines probable cause may properly state, "The officer need not be able to correctly articulate the proper or specific crime at the time the arrest is made," State v. Goodman, 42 Wn.App. 331, 337 (1985); III.

State v. Kassahun, 78 Wn.App. 938 (1995)

Defendant is charged with murder and assault, is acquitted of assault, hung on murder; at retrial on murder, defense offer of evidence of acquittal is refused, trial court gives first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, which arguably referred to the previously acquitted assault; held: collateral estoppel doctrine requires that evidence of acquittal be admitted, distinguishing State v. Tarman, 27 Wn.App. 645, 652 (1980), and that jury receive an instruction as to the issue-preclusion consequences of the acquittal; first aggressor instruction must be crafted to preclude argument that defendant's aggression towards assault victim negates self-defense; I.

State v. LeFaber, 128 Wn.2d 896 (1996)

Homicide self-defense instruction which reads, "[h]omicide is justifiable when committed in the lawful defense of the defendant when the defendant reasonably believes that the person slain intends to inflict death or great personal injury and there is imminent danger of such harm being accomplished" is error, as jury could have believed that actual harm was required as opposed to the correct statement of law that defendant reasonably believed that there was imminent danger of such harm being accomplished, reversing, in part, State v. LeFaber, 77 Wn.App. 766 (1995); "[t]he structure of WPIC 16.02 could mislead a jury because the imminent danger requirement is set off by a separate number and thus lacking connection to the reasonable belief qualifier," at 902, see: State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533 (1999), cf.: State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 883-86 (1998), State v. Cowen, 87 Wn.App. 45 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Williams, 81 Wn.App. 738 (1996)

No duty to retreat instruction, WPIC 16.08, should be given where a jury may conclude that flight is a reasonably effective alternative to the use of force in self-defense, State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 493-95 (2003), even if evidence establishes that defendant was indeed retreating, State v. Wooten, 87 Wn.App. 821 (1997), distinguishing State v. Thompson, 47 Wn.App. 1, 5-6 (1984), see: State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 549-50 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Harvey, 3 Wn.App.2d 204 (2018; I.

State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469 (1997)

Instructing the jury that "great bodily injury" means an injury of a more serious nature than an ordinary striking with the hands or fists injects an impermissible objective standard, as a simple battery may inflict great personal injury, depending upon the circumstances, State v. Painter, 27 Wn.App. 708 (1980), State v. Rodriguez, 121 Wn.App. 180 (2004), State v. Marquez, 131 Wn.App. 566 (2006), State v. L.B., 132 Wn.App. 948 (2006), approving WPIC 2.04.01, distinguishing State v. Foster, 91 Wn.2d 466 (1979), see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998), State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 855 (2006), State v. Woods, 138 Wn.App. 191 (2007), State v. Lucero, 140 Wn.App. 782, 785-87 (2007), 152 Wn.App. 287, 293-93 (2009); Supreme Court recommends use of "great personal injury" rather than "great bodily harm" or "great bodily injury," State v. Freeburg, 105 Wn.App. 492, 502-07 (2001); 8-1.

State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1 (1997)

In assault on police officer, arrestee may not use force against arresting officers if s/he is faced only with a loss of freedom, even if arrest is unlawful, State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426 (1985), State v. Bradley, 141 Wn.2d 731 (2000), State v. Mann, 157 Wn.App. 428 (2010), overruling State v. Rousseau, 40 Wn.2d 92 (1952); 7-2.

State v. Cowen, 87 Wn.App. 45 (1997)

In attempted murder self-defense case, deadly force is only justified if defendant perceived death or great personal injury, thus a modified WPIC 16.02, rather than WPIC 17.02, should be used, at 53, State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 855 (2006), see: State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401 (2007); I.

State v. Birnel, 89 Wn.App. 459 (1998), rev'd, sub silentio, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401, 408 (2007)

Defendant searches wife's purse for drugs, knowing she would not like it, asked if she was on drugs, is attacked with knife, kills wife, trial court gives first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, over objection; held: to give first aggressor instruction, there must be evidence that it was defendant who provoked need to act in self-defense, State v. Kidd, 57 Wn.App. 95, 100 (1990), State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156, 159 (1989), provoking act must be intentional and one that would reasonably provoke a belligerent response, State v. Wasson, supra. at 159, State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120, 124 (1985), State v. Wingate, 155 Wn.2d 817 (2005), State v. Douglas, 128 Wn.App. 555 (2005), State v. Anderson 144 Wn.App. 85 (2008), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019), see: State v. Grott, 195 Wn.2d 256 (2020); here, a juror could not reasonably assume searching purse and questioning deceased would provoke a knife attack, thus reversed; III.

State v. Schaffer, 135 Wn.2d 355 (1998)

Defendant is charged with premeditated murder 1° and felony murder 2°, is acquitted of murder 1°, convicted of murder 2°, trial court declines to give manslaughter instructions as lessers; held: a defendant who reasonably believes he is in imminent danger and needs to act in self-defense, but recklessly or negligently uses more force than necessary is entitled to instructions on manslaughter, State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616, 628 (1981), *State v. Chamb*ers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 119-22 (2016); per curiam.

State v. Dyson, 90 Wn.App. 433 (1998)

Defendant testifies during struggle with complainant, while acting to "dislodge" him by "passive resistance," complainant fell into a door and injured himself, court declines self-defense instructions; held: the inference from defendant's testimony is that he was acting to protect himself, which caused complainant's injuries, not that complainant was injured due to an accident, thus self-defense instructions were required, State v. Hendrickson, 81 Wn.App. 397 (1996), distinguishing State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640 (1986), see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998); I.

State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 884-86 (1998)

Ambiguity in former WPIC 16.02 which appears to require that defendant must be in actual danger to use lawful force is resolved when court also instructs pursuant to WPIC 16.07 that "a reasonably prudent person mistakenly" believing himself to be in danger may "defend himself . . . against apparent injury . . . even if he is not actually in such danger," State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 855 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401 (2007), distinguishing State v. LeFaber, 128 Wn.2d 896, 902-03 (1996), reversing State v. Hutchinson, 85 Wn.App. 726 (1997); 6-3.

In homicide case, defendant, smaller than deceased, had a back injury, had been threatened with kicking by deceased, did not know deceased was violent, brought a knife to an anticipated fight, deceased swings and punches defendant repeatedly, defendant and deceased grapple, defendant stabs deceased five times, trial court declines self-defense instructions; held: trial court must apply a mixed subjective and objective analysis; subjective aspect requires court to place itself in defendant's shoes and view defendant's acts in light of facts known to defendant, State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220, 238 (1993); objective aspect requires court to determine what a reasonable person in defendant's situation would have done, imminent threat of great bodily harm does not actually have to be present, as long as a reasonable person could have believed threat was present, State v. Woods, 138 Wn.App. 191 (2007); court must then determine whether defendant produced any evidence to support claimed good faith belief that deadly force was necessary and reasonable, State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561, 567 (1991), but see: State v. Thysell, 194 Wn.App. 422 (2016); if trial court finds no reasonable person in defendant's shoes could have perceived a threat of great bodily harm, the court need not instruct on self-defense; factual finding that no evidence supports defendant's claimed belief of imminent danger of great bodily injury is reviewable only for abuse of discretion; here, number of stab wounds, absence of injuries to defendant, lack of bruising to deceased's fists supports trial court's finding that only an ordinary battery was intended, no reasonable person would believe s/he was going to be injured, thus deadly force was unjustified; 5-4.

Where defense offers erroneous self-defense instruction, WPIC 16.02, State v. LeFaber, 128 Wn.2d 896 (1996), defense is precluded from claiming on appeal that it was reversible error, even if of constitutional magnitude, State v. Henderson, 114 Wn.2d 867, 870-72 (1990), State v. Lucero, 152 Wn.App. 287, 292-93 (2009), State v. O'Hara, 167 Wn.2d 91 (2009), see also: Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401 (2007); absent an inference that defendant could have avoided use of force through a timely retreat, court need not give no duty to retreat instruction, State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017), but cf.: State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 493-95 (2003); instruction that "right of self-defense does not permit action done in retaliation or revenge" is a correct statement of the law, at 550; reverses State v. Studd, 87 Wn.App. 385 (1997); affirms State v. Bennett, 87 Wn.App. 73 (1997), State v. McLoyd, 87 Wn.App. 66 (1997), State v. Fields, 87 Wn.App. 57 (1997); 8-1.

First aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04 may not be given where words alone are the asserted provocation, as one is not entitled to respond with force when faced only with words, State v. Wingate, 123 Wn.App. 415 (2004), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), ), State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d 874 (2018), see: State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85 (2008), *State v. State v. Irons, 101 Wn.App. 544 (2000)

Where defendant slays a member of a group who he alleges he is defending himself from, then instruction that requires that the defendant reasonably believed that the victim (rather than the victim and those whom defendant reasonably believed were acting in concert with the victim) intended to inflict death or great personal injury precludes the jury from considering the right to act upon reasonable appearances, cf.: State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 855 (2006), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 291-96 (2016), thus former WPIC 16.02 must be modified, State v. Harris, 122 Wn.App. 547, 553-55 (2004); instruction misstating law of self-defense is presumed prejudicial, State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469, 473 (1997); I.

State v. Bradley, 141 Wn.2d 731 (2000)

In assault on custodial officer case, jury must be instructed that, to find lawful use of force defendant must have been in actual danger of serious injury under an objective standard, State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1, 20-21 (1997), State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426, 430 (1985), State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 837, 843 (1993), State v. Garcia, 107 Wn.App. 545 (2001), distinguishing *State v. State v. Freeburg, 105 Wn.App. 492, 502-07 (2001)

In justifiable homicide case, using and defining the "great bodily harm," WPIC 16.07, 2.04, as opposed to "great personal injury," WPIC 2.04.01, undercuts the subjective standard that the slayer may act on appearances, State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469, 478 (1997), State v. Woods, 138 Wn.App. 191 (2007), see: State v. Rodriguez, 121 Wn.App. 180 (2004), State v. Marquez, 131 Wn.App. 566 (2006), *cf.: State v. State v. Walther, 114 Wn.App. 189 (2002)

Complainant borrows defendant's car, does not return it when promised, defendant finds complainant sleeping in the car, shoots into the car several times, complainant drives towards defendant who shoots again, complainant is injured by bullet fragments, trial court declines to instruct on lawful use of force; held: defendant was not "about to be injured" when he found victim sleeping, thus he was not entitled to use force to prevent her from driving away, car was not "in his…possession," rather it was in victim's possession at the time he fired; even if defendant met the "about to be injured" element of RCW 9A.16.020, "firing a gun multiple times at close range through the glass into the car was far more force than was necessary, see: State v. Madry, 12 Wn.App. 178, 181 (1974), State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998), State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506, 523-24 (2005), but see: State v. Collins, 30 Wn.App. 1 (1981); II.

State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 493-95 (2003)

Thompson*, 47 Wn.App. 1 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 138, 147-50 (2005)

Defendant arrives at scene with another who engages in a fist fight with victim, defendant joins in fight and kills victim, claims self defense, court gives first aggressor instruction; held: aggressor instruction is particularly appropriate where there is conflicting testimony as to whether defendant or victim provoked altercation, State v. Cyrus, 66 Wn.App. 502, 508-09 (1992), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); even though person with defendant started the fight, a person may reasonably perceive imminent danger when set upon by multiple assailants, thus it was not unreasonable for trial court to conclude that victim perceived a threat of imminent danger when faced off with both defendant and initial aggressor; I.

State v. Bland, 128 Wn.App. 511 (2005)

In defense of property case, instruction must make it manifestly clear such that it cannot be interpreted to require the jury to find that defendant reasonably believed that he was about to be injured before he could exert reasonable force to expel a malicious trespasser, as there is not requirement to fear injury to oneself, Peasley v. Puget Sound Tug & Barge Co., 13 Wn.2d 485, 506 (1942); WPIC 17.02, as punctuated, is unclear relative to defense of property, see: Peasley v. Puget Sound Tug & Barge, supra. at 507, State v. Murphy, 7 Wn.App. 505, 513 (1972), cf.: State v. Prado, 144 Wn.App. 227, 244-45 (2008); I.

State v. Douglas, 128 Wn.App. 555 (2005)

Homicide victim threatens defendant in defendant's home, is ordered to leave, assaults defendant, defendant's gun discharges, kills victim, trial court declines justifiable homicide instruction and gives first aggressor instruction; held: because no evidence established that defendant was involved in any wrongful or unlawful conduct before the shooting or that his conduct precipitated the fight, first aggressor instruction was error, see: State v. Wingate, 155

Wn.2d 817 (2005); because defendant had revoked victim's privilege to remain, State v. Crist, 80 Wn.App. 511, 514 (1996), court should have instructed jury that homicide is justifiable in actual resistance of attempt to commit a felony in a dwelling, at 566 ¶ 35; II.

State v. Wingate, 155 Wn.2d 817 (2005)

Witness testifies that defendant drew a gun and aimed it at a person, after which defendant believed that victim had a gun and shot him, court gives first aggressor instruction; held: where there is conflicting evidence as to whether defendant's conduct precipitated the fight, State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904, 910 (1999), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), and engaged in "aggressive conduct," a first aggressor instruction is proper, State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018), see: State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d 874 (2018), reversing State v. Wingate, 123 Wn.App. 415 (2004), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), State v. Hatt, 11Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); per curiam.

State v. Marquez, 131 Wn.App. 566 (2006)

In assault 1º/defense of others case, trial court instructs "[a] person is entitled to act on appearances in defending another if that person believes in good faith and on reasonable grounds that another is in actual danger of great bodily harm…[a]ctual danger is not necessary for the use of force to be lawful," does not further define "great bodily harm" except as defined for purposes of defining assault 1º; held: because the definition of great bodily harm for self defense excludes less serious injuries, the exclusion could have caused a reasonable juror to interpret the defense of another instruction as prohibiting consideration of defendant's subjective impressions of all the facts and circumstances, improperly undercutting defendant's claim of lawful force, State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469, 473 (1997), State v. Rodriguez, 121 Wn.App. 180, 186 (2004), State v. L.B., 132 Wn.App. 948 (2006), State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009); error in self defense instruction is presumed prejudicial, State v. Walden, supra., at 473; II.

State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 855 (2006)

In felony murder/assault case, WPIC 17.02 allowing use of force by a person who reasonably believes he is about to be injured is improper "because it can never be reasonable to use a deadly weapon in a deadly manner unless the person attacked had reasonable grounds to fear death or great bodily harm, State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469, 475 (1997), see: State v. Slaughter, 143 Wn.App. 936, 946-47 (2008), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 461-67 (2012); proper instructing for lawful use of force in murder case is WPIC 16.02, State v. Irons, 101 Wn.App. 544 (2000); II.

State v. L.B., 132 Wn.App. 948 (2006)

In assault 4º bench trial, court relies upon WPIC 17.04 (2d ed. 1994) entitling a defendant to act in self defense if he had a good faith belief that we was in danger of great bodily harm, State v. Miller, 141 Wash. 104, 105-06 (1926); held: great bodily harm is not a test where non-deadly force is used, State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009), proper standard is WPIC 17.02; harmless; I.

Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401 (2007)

While instruction stating that, to use lawful force the defendant must be in actual danger of imminent harm is error, State v. LeFaber, 128 Wn.App. 896 (1996), where court also instructs that a right of self-defense exists if the person mistakenly believes he is in danger is sufficient and reversal is not required, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 884-86 (1998), State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 549 (1999); III.

State v. Woods, 138 Wn.App. 191 (2007)

WPIC 17.04, instructing that a person is entitled to act on appearances if that person believes that he is in danger of "great bodily harm" is error because it is inconsistent with WPIC 17.02 and must use the term "great personal injury," State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469, 475 n.3 (1997), see: State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009), even if instructions do not define "great bodily harm;" III.

State v. Pottorff, 138 Wn.App. 343, 349-50 (2007)

Failure of defense counsel to offer definition of "necessary," RCW 9A.16.010(1), is not ineffective assistance as ordinary use of the term is less complicated than the statutory definition, it's "possible" that the decision not to offer the instruction was tactical; III.

State v. Slaughter, 143 Wn.App. 936 (2008)

In a case where a defendant does something in self defense that leads to an accidental homicide, the applicable defense is excusable, not justifiable, homicide, State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506, 525 (2005), see: State v. Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925 (1997), thus an act precipitating an accidental killing may amount to lawful self defense even if the accidental killing was not a justifiable homicide, State v. Werner, 170 Wn.2d 333 (2010); thus, instruction as to excusable homicide which places burden on state is proper, and the defining of lawful force, WPIC 17.02, which helps the defense explain the phrase in the excusable homicide instruction "doing any lawful act by any lawful means," WPIC 1501 (1994), need not include language placing burden on the state for lawful use of force, see: State v. Henderson, 192 Wn.2d 508 (2018); I.

State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85, 89-90 (2008)

Daughter observes defendant arguing with her mother, sees defendant "lean into" mother's face with his hands on the arms of her chair, daughter walks in with a steel bar in her hand and tells defendant to get away, defendant points shotgun at daughter, trial court gives first aggressor instruction; held: defendant's conduct was more than words, see: State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999), cf.: State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), ), State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d 874 (2018), State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019), and is thus sufficient to support a first aggressor instruction; III.

State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009)

Where non-deadly force is at issue, instruction that states that defendant may act on appearances if he believes that he is in danger of "great bodily harm," as opposed to mere injury, is error, see: WPIC 17.04, State v. L.B., 132 Wn.App. 948 (2006), RCW 9A.16.020(3); 9-0.

State v. Lucero, 152 Wn.App. 287, 292-93 (2009)

Where defense proposes and court gives an erroneous self-defense instruction, the error is invited and may not be challenged for the first time on appeal, State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533 (1999), cf.: State v. Redwine, 72 Wn.App. 625 (1994); trial court is not obliged to give no duty to retreat instruction sua sponte, cf.: State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 493-95 (2003); I.

State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952, 959-61 (2010)

Defendant and son enter family home, complainant unexpectedly enters, son serves complainant with restraining order, complainant threatens defendant, makes a motion toward a knife, defendant shoots complainant numerous times, court gives first aggressor instruction; held: restraining order is insufficient provocation to justify first aggressor instruction as words alone are not enough, State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999), ), State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d 874 (2018), cf.: State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85, 89-90 (2008), State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 289-91 (2016), State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); III.

Teacher drags mentally disabled student across the floor, jerks his arm when student tried to hold onto door jamb and swings him into bathroom where he slid 7 to 8 feet, at assault trial seeks instruction providing for lawful use of force to prevent a mentally disabled person from posing a danger to himself or others, RCW 9A.16.020(6); held: a "concrete, imminent danger," at 121 ¶ 18, may include a reasonable but mistaken belief of imminent danger, but here there was no evidence of danger; II.

State v. Bea, 162 Wn.App. 570 (2011)

Defendant and victim have a fistfight, break up, defendant reapproaches victim with a knife, they grapple, defendant stabs victim, court gives first aggressor instruction; held: state need only produce "some evidence" that defendant was the aggressor, State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904, 909-10 (1999), and that the provoking act is intentional, State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156, 159 (1989), related to the eventual assault but not the actual assault to which self defense is claimed, State v. Kidd, 57 Wn.App. 95, 100 (1990); defendant is not entitled to invoke self defense if he provoked victim by initiating a fight after the first incident nor by use of unreasonable force; III.

State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 461-67 (2012)

In felony murder/assault case, because intent to kill or cause great or serious physical injury is an element, lawful use of force instruction that states that defendant reasonably believed that victim "intended to commit a felony or to inflict death or great personal injury" lessens state's burden and is manifest constitutional error, instruction should be pursuant to WPIC 16.02, not WPIC 17.02, see: State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 855, 856-59 (2006); II.

State v. Mendes, 180 Wn.2d 188 (2014)

When state rests defense asks court whether it will instruct on self-defense based upon state's case, court declines, defendant testifies but claims he is being compelled to testify; held: trial court has discretion when to rule on jury instructions, defendant's testimony was not compelled, State v. Foster, 91 Wn.2d 466, 472-73 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Thysell, 194 Wn.App. 422 (2016)

Defendant is entitled to self-defense instruction when, considering all of the evidence, jury could have a reasonable doubt as to whether defendant acted in self-defense; trial court' refusal to instruct on self-defense because only the state presented evidence of self-defense is error, distinguishing State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220, 237 (1993), State v. Walden, 131 Wn.2d 469, 473-74 (1997), State v. McCreven 170 Wn.App. 444, 462 (2012); III.

State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277 (2016)

Words, combined with physical acts, may support a first aggressor instruction where testimony conflicts about whether defendant's conduct provoked the fight, State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952, 959 (2010), where a jury could reasonably determine that defendant provoked the fight, State v. Hatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 113 (2019); first aggressor instruction that requires jury to find an "intentional violent act: rather than just an "intentional act" is more favorable to defendant, distinguishing State v. Wingate, 155 Wn.2d 817, 821 (2005), State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120, 124-25 (1985), at 289-91; where there are potential multiple assailants court need not give a specific multiple assailant instruction, State v. Irons, 101 Wn.App. 544 (2000), as long as other instructions do not limit defendant's justification to a reasonable fear of one person, at 291-93; I.

Pers. Restraint of Caldellis, 187 Wn.2d 127, 140-43 (2016

In murder by extreme indifference case, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b) (1990), defense counsel's failure to request self-defense instruction and instead arguing excusable homicide is a legitimate trial tactic; one cannot "kill by accident and claim that the homicide was justifiable." State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506, 525, 122 P.3d 150 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306, 328 (2017)

In murder case defendant's evidence is that he stepped out of a truck, backed up "a little bit," saw angry decedent go for a gun and shot him, trial court refuses no duty to retreat instruction; held: "[b]ecause the facts would not support retreat as an option to someone pulling a gun at close range and because the State did not argue that Duarte Vela could have retreated, the trial court did not err in refusing the instruction," State v. Thompson, 47 Wn.App. 1 (1987), State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533 (1999), but see: State v. Williams, 81 Wn.App. 738 (1996), State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 493-95 (2003); 2-1, III.

State v. Henderson, 192 Wn.2d 508, 430 P.3d 637 (2018)

In murder case where defense claims self defense and accident trial court instructs on lawful use of force but declines to instruct on excusable homicide; held: excusable homicide/accident, RCW 9A.16.030 (1979), is not an affirmative defense, defendant can argue accident by asserting that state has not proved mens rea element, thus an instruction of excusable homicide is not required, see: State v. Burt, 94 Wn.2d 108, 110-11 (1980); court doubts "usefulness" of WPIC 15.01 (2016); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Harvey, 3 Wn.App.2d 204 (2018)

Defendant enters parking lot of another in attempt to recover a vehicle, shoots and kills victim, at trial defense successfully opposes first aggressor instruction, trial court deciding that while it may be appropriate in the exercise of caution he won't give it, see: State v. Arthur, 42 Wn. App. 120, 125 n.1 (1985), claims ineffective assistance on direct appeal for not raising claim of error in failure to request no duty to retreat instruction; held: absent evidence that defendant had the right to be in the parking lot, and thus was not in a place he had the right to be, it was not ineffective for counsel not to request no duty to retreat instruction, State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591, 598 (1984), State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 549 (1999); there was no evidence that defendant, a non-resident, was invited or impliedly licensed to be in the parking lot, see: State v. C.B., 195 Wn. App. 528, 538–41 (2016); while defendant may have had a right to possession of the vehicle in question, before one is impliedly licensed to enter real property to recover a chattel s/he must make a demand for delivery of the property, get permission to enter or establish that it would be futile to so demand or request, absent here, Restatement (Second) of Torts § 198; where a first aggressor instruction is supported by the evidence but the trial court decides not to so instruct, defense is not entitled to a no duty to retreat instruction, State v. Hawkins, 89 Wash. 449, 455 (1916), State v. Bea, 162 Wn.App. 570, 577 (2011); III.

State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018)

Evidence at trial conflicts on whether defendant came out of his home with a 2x4 and clubbed victim to death vs. defendant's testimony that he only picked up the 2x4 when victim approached him with a knife, court gives first aggressor instruction over objection; held: a first aggressor instruction may be issued in circumstances where "(1) the jury can reasonably determine from the evidence that the defendant provoked the fight, (2) the evidence conflicts as to whether the defendant's conduct provoked the fight, or (3) the evidence shows that the defendant made the first move by drawing a weapon." State v. Anderson, 144 Wn. App. 85, 89, (2008); here, conflict in testimony justified first aggressor instruction, law no longer requires an unlawful act for a first aggressor instruction, State v. Wingate, 155 Wn.2d 817, 822 (2005); 2-1, I.

State v. Kee, 6 Wn.App.2d 847 (2018)

Where a first aggressor instruction is appropriate but there is some evidence that the words rather than physical acts first provoked the altercation then the instruction must include the language that words alone cannot be the provoking conduct, State v. Riley, 137 Wn.2d 904 (1999), State v. Wingate, 123 Wn.App. 415 (2004), State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952 (2010), see: State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85 (2008), see also: State v. Whitfield, 155 Wn.2d 817 (2005), Pers. Restraint of Harvey, 3 Wn.App.2d 204 (2018), modifying 11 WPIC 16.04 (4th Ed); II.

State v. Tullar, 9 Wn.App.2d 151 (2019)

Defendant need not testify to his state of mind to be entitled to lawful use of force instruction where it is supported by sufficient evidence other than defendant's testimony; III.

State v. Ackerman, 11 Wn.App.2d 304 (2019)

At murder trial defendant testifies that he shot deceased while deceased was attempting to rob him with a gun, trial court modifies WPIC 16.03 (4th ed., 2016) to add that the slayer must be resisting a "violent felony" and reasonably believe he was in imminent danger of death or great personal injury, and declined to define robbery as a violent felony; held: instructions permit an erroneous interpretation that robbery is not necessarily a violent felony that could warrant deadly force in self-defense; adding that the slayer reasonably believed that the violent felony threatens imminent danger is error as RCW 9A.16.050(2) does not require that the slayer reasonably believe he is in imminent danger when resisting a felony; I.

State v. Grott, 195 Wn.2d 256 (2020)

Where defendant engaged in a course of aggressive conduct rather than a single aggressive act a first aggressor instruction is appropriate; where a defendant who is charged for firing a single shot, State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156, 159 (1989), or making a single threat with a gun, State v. Brower, 43 Wn.App. 893, 896 (1986) and claims self-defense a first aggressor instruction is not supported [dicta]; first aggressor instructions are not "broadly disfavored," disapproving language in, State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156 (1989), State v. Arthur, 42 Wn.App. 120, 125 n.1 (1985); here, defendant engaged in a course of aggressive conduct, thus first aggressor instruction was appropriate; failure to object to a first aggressor instruction waives issue on appeal; 9-0.

State v. Miller, 14 Wn.App.2d 469 2020WL5200775 (2020)

Defendant is charged as principal, defense case lays blame on a state's witness, trial court over objection, gives accomplice instruction; held: when determining if the evidence at trial is sufficient to support the giving of an instruction, the court views the supporting evidence in the light most favorable to the party that requested the instruction." State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448, 455-56 (2000);" here, because defendant could be viewed as an accomplice, even though the original state's theory was that he was the principal, the instruction was proper; III.

State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023)

Defendant initiates a fight, arguably withdraws and disengages from it, victim follows defendant who has backed up against a wall, victim throws a "hard punch," defendant shoots and kills victim, court gives first aggressor instruction, defense counsel does not offer instruction on revived self-defense; held: "the right of self-defense is revived as to the aggressor if that person in good faith withdraws from the aggression in such time and manner as to clearly apprise the other person that they intend to disengage in further aggression," State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990), State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777 (1973), counsel was ineffective for failing to propose such an instruction; I.

Unanimity

State v. Garvin, 28 Wn.App. 82 (1980)

Where offense may be committed by various means, jury need only be unanimous as to guilt as long as there is substantial evidence to support each mode, State v. Arndt, 87 Wn.2d 374 (1976), State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345, 352-8 (1993), State v. Ortega-Martinez, 124 Wn.2d 702 (1994), State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 473-75 (2012), see: State v. Woodlyn, 188 Wn.2d 157 (2017); II.

State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980)

Where the commission of a specific underlying crime is necessary to sustain a conviction for a more serious statutory offense, jury unanimity as to the underlying crime is imperative.

State v. Osborn, 28 Wn.App. 111 (1981)

Negligent homicide constitutes a single offense and there need not be unanimity of mode instruction if there is substantial evidence to support each mode; distinguishes State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980); accord: State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985), State v. Barefield, 47 Wn.App. 444 (1987).

State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984)

Defendant charged with one count each statutory rape and indecent liberties, victim-granddaughter testifies to numerous incidents, defense moves to require state to elect counts and to elect which incident is to be relied upon to convict; held: mere fact that victim is the same is not enough to call the offense a continuing offense or transaction; state must elect or jury must be instructed that they must be unanimous as to which incident has been proved, modifying State v. Workman, 66 Wash. 292 (1911), see: State v. Kitchen, 110 Wn.2d 403 (1988), State v. Bautista-Galdera, 56 Wn.App. 186 (1989), State v. Newman, 63 Wn.App. 841 (1992), State v. Coleman, 159 Wn.2d 509 (2007), State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357 (2007), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831 (1991), State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 753-55 (2009), State v. Carson, 179 Wn.App. 961, 972-80 (2014), State v. Shoop, 22 Wn.App.2d 242, 255-57 (2022), see also: State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985)

Where defendant is charged with single count of criminal behavior, yet information alleges period of time over which this occurred, state must elect act upon which it will rely or jury must be instructed that all 12 must agree that the same act has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984); I.

State v. Stark, 48 Wn.App. 245 (1987)

It is sufficient for jury to be given instruction that it must be unanimous that the same act of sexual intercourse has been proved; need not require that the jury specify which act was proved, distinguishing State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984); I.

State v. Southard, 49 Wn.App. 59 (1987)

Alternative means of committing theft, RCW 9A.56.020, do not constitute separate and distinct offenses requiring jury unanimity, State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016), State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); I.

State v. Whitney, 108 Wn.App. 506 (1987)

Alternative means of committing rape 1° (kidnap and deadly weapon) do not constitute separate and distinct offenses requiring jury unanimity, distinguishing State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980); I.

State v. Noel, 51 Wn.App. 436 (1988)

In one count statutory rape case with multiple acts, instruction reading, "[a]lthough the twelve of you need not agree that all the acts have been proved, you must unanimously agree that at least one particular act has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt" is adequate, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 572 (1984), see: State v. Ellis, 71 Wn.App. 400 (1993), State v. Moultrie, 143 Wn.App. 387, 392-96 (2008), State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 753-55 (2009); 2-1, I.

State v. Gooden, 51 Wn.App. 615 (1988)

Promoting prostitution, RCW 9A.88.070, involving facilitating several acts of prostitution is a continuing course of conduct constituting a single crime, jury need not be unanimous that any specific act of prostitution occurred, see: State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 571 (1984), United States v. Berardi, 675 F.2d 894 (7th Cir. 1982); I; accord: State v. Barrington, 52 Wn.App. 478 (1988), State v. Campbell, 69 Wn.App. 302 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 125 Wn.2d 797 (1995), State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), State v. Love, 80 Wn.App. 357 (1996).

State v. Handran, 113 Wn.2d 11 (1989)

Defendant breaks into ex-spouse's home, kisses her, pins her, jury is not instructed that it must be unanimous as to which act alleged constituted the assault element of burglary 1°; held: requirement of an instruction that jury must unanimously decide upon a distinct act is inapplicable where the evidence constitutes a continuing course of conduct, see: State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717, 723-6 (1995), State v. Love, 80 Wn.App. 357 (1996), State v. Brown, 159 Wn.App. 1, 13-15 (2010), State v. Howard, 182 Wn.App. 91, 102-03 (2014), State v. Rodriquez, 187 Wn.App. 922 (2015), State v. Lee, 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020); where the evidence involves conduct at different times and places, then the evidence tends to show "several distinct acts," State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 639-40 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989)

In child sex abuse case with multiple acts, instruction that jury must unanimously agree "that the same underlying criminal act has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt" approved; II.

State v. Elliott, 114 Wn.2d 6 (1990)

Defendant is charged with two counts of promoting prostitution 2°, RCW 9A.88.080(1)(a) and (b), by profiting from and advancing the prostitution of two women; state need not elect whether defendant promoted prostitution by advancing an enterprise or by advancing several individual acts of prostitution; two counts were continuing courses of conduct, State v. Gooden, 51 Wn.App. 615 (1988), State v. Doogan, 82 Wn.App. 185, 191 (1996), State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 883-84 (1998), see: State v. Russell, 69 Wn.App. 237 (1993); affirms State v. Elliott, 54 Wn.App. 532 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Camarillo, 115 Wn.2d 60 (1990)

Failure to give a unanimity instruction where prosecution presents evidence of several acts that could form the basis of one count charged is presumed prejudicial and is deemed harmless only if no rational juror could have a reasonable doubt as to whether each incident established the crime beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Kitchen, 110 Wn.2d 403, 409 (1988), State v. York, 152 Wn.App. 92 (2009), see: State v. Beasley, 126 Wn.App. 670, 681-85 (2005), State v. Coleman, 159 Wn.2d 509 (2007), State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 801-04 (2013), where defense is a broad denial of any incidents without any factual distinctions among them, then lack of instruction is harmless; accord: State v. Allen, 57 Wn.App. 134 (1990), State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 821-2 (1993), State v. Loehner, 42 Wn.App. 408 (1986), State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 324-28 (2008), 166 Wn.2d 881, 891-95 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Hanson, 59 Wn.App. 651 (1990)

Test to determine if unanimity instruction is required, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984): (1) what must be proven under statute, a single event or a continuing course of conduct?, (2) what does evidence disclose?, and (3) does evidence disclose more than one violation of statute; if more than one, then a Petrich instruction is required, see: State v. Russell, 69 Wn.App. 237 (1993), State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 497-99 (2007); II.

State v. Crane, 116 Wn.2d 315 (1991)

State's evidence establishes that defendant rendered fatal injuries to a child over a two-hour period; to convict instruction alleges felony murder (assault) "on or between the 9th and 15th day of May"; held: a unanimous jury verdict, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), would not be required as to each incident of assault during a short (two-hour) period of time, as this would be a continuous course of conduct, State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), State v. Love, 80 Wn.App. 357 (1996), State v. Marko, 107 Wn.App. 215 (2001), State v. Beasley, 126 Wn.App. 670, 681-85 (2005), State v. Monaghan, 166 Wn.App. 521, 536-38 (2012), State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 801-04 (2013), State v. Gomez, 7 Wn.App.2d 441 (2019); "to convict" instruction was erroneous, albeit harmless as the only evidence pointing to fatal assault was for the two-hour period; 7-2.

State v. Newman, 63 Wn.App. 841 (1992)

Unanimity instruction as opposed to election of specific acts is not error unless defense offers the court a specific indication as to how it would be hampered at presenting alibi; I.

State v. Russell, 69 Wn.App. 237 (1993)

In homicide by abuse case, RCW 9A.32.055, trial court need not give unanimity instruction with respect to particular cluster of assaultive incidents to prove "pattern or practice of assault or torture," as it is a continuing course of conduct, State v. Hanson, 59 Wn.App. 651 (1990), State v. Elliott, 114 Wn.2d 6 (1990), State v. Monaghan, 166 Wn.App. 521, 536-38 (2012); II.

State v. Campbell, 69 Wn.App. 302 (1993), rev'd, on other grounds, 125 Wn.2d 797 (1995)

Welfare fraud, RCW 74.08.33, contemplates a continuing course of conduct, so no unanimity instruction need be given, State v. Gooden, 51 Wn.App. 615 (1988), State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717, 723-6 (1995); I.

State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993)

In child abuse case, where evidence establishes continuing assaults over a three-week period, there is a continuing course of conduct such that no unanimity instruction, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), is required, State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 801-04 (2013), see: State v. Gooden, 51 Wn.App. 615, 618 (1988), *State v. State v. Havens, 70 Wn.App. 251 (1993)

In rape of child case where state presents evidence of several incidents of fellatio and declines to elect, then an instruction that reads, "[a]ll 12 jurors must agree that the same act of criminal conduct has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt for you to return a verdict" satisfies unanimity requirement of State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984); whether or not to submit a special interrogatory to jury identifying time and place of the proved event is within discretion of trial court; III.

Where defendant is charged with assault 2° with a deadly weapon, and evidence establishes a punching and a shooting, unanimity instruction is not necessary where information charges deadly weapon mode only, special verdict forms clearly establish deadly weapon requirement and in closing state only argues deadly weapon mode, as state has effectively elected, State v. Kitchen, 110 Wn.2d 403, 411 (1988), State v. Rivas, 97 Wn.App. 349 (1999), State v. Fleming, 140 Wn.App. 132 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020), *State v. State v. Ellis, 71 Wn.App. 400, 404-06 (1993)

Unanimity instruction that "[a]lthough twelve of you need not agree that all the acts have been proved, you must unanimously agree that at least one particular act has been proved...for each count" is marginally adequate, State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 843 (1991), State v. Noel, 51 Wn.App. 436, 440-1 (1988); Division II encourages use of State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 572 (1984) language, to wit: "all 12 jurors must agree that the same underlying criminal act has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt," and that jurors should be separately instructed that the same act cannot be used by the jury to convict on more than one count, see: State v. Watkins, 136 Wn.App. 240 (2006), State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357 (2007), State v. Moultrie, 143 Wn.App. 387, 392-96 (2008).

State v. Dyson, 74 Wn.App. 237, 249-50 (1994)

Repeated telephone calls do not oblige a unanimity instruction, State v. Monaghan, 166 Wn.App. 521, 536-38 (2012), or election to convict for telephone harassment, RCW 9.61.230(2), as statute authorizes conviction for a continuing course of conduct; I.

State v. King, 75 Wn.App. 899, 902-4 (1994)

Two distinct instances of drug possession occurring at different times (albeit moments apart), in different places and involving different containers, in which one alleged possession was constructive, the other actual, do not constitute a continuing course of conduct, but see: State v. Love, 80 Wn.App. 357 (1996), cf.: State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717, 723-6 (1995), State v. Brown, 159 Wn.App. 1, 13-15 (2010); where state claims it will elect and later equivocates, trial court must remedy state's error by issuing a unanimity instruction; I.

State v. Holland, 77 Wn.App. 420 (1995)

Defendant is charged with three counts of child molestation, each alleged to have occurred "between October 2 and November 2, 1991," to convict instruction for each count states, "on an occasion other than one found to support Count 2;" victim testifies to "more than three" acts, but cannot pinpoint a time, defendant convicted of two counts; held: where it is impossible from the record to conclude that all jurors agreed on the same act to support convictions on each count, and because no unanimity instruction was given, reversal is mandated, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 572 (1984), WPIC 4.25; 2-1, III.

State v. Brooks, 77 Wn.App. 516, 520-1 (1995)

Where burglary information alleges that defendant entered buildings, state must elect the building, or unanimity instruction must be given; III.

State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644, 649-51 (1995)

Where alternative means have different penalties, jury need not be unanimous, but special interrogatories are required to determine seriousness level so defendant will be sentenced using the proper standard range, State v. May, 68 Wn.App. 491 (1993), see: State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62, 77-81 (2008); I.

State v. Fortune, 128 Wn.2d 464 (1996)

Felony murder/robbery and premeditated murder are alternative means of committing murder 1°, jury need not be unanimous, Schad v. Arizona, 115 L.Ed.2d 555 (1991); see also: State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644, 649-51 (1995); affirms State v. Fortune, 77 Wn.App. 628 (1995).

State v. Lee, 128 Wn.2d 151 (1995)

Where alternative victims of theft are alleged, and the crime involves alternative means, then unanimity instruction need not be given if evidence supports each alternative means charged, at 156-69, State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 473-75 (2012), cf.: State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638 (2002); victims' names need not be included in to convict instruction, at 160; reverses, in part, *State v. State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717, 723-26 (1995)

Delivery of a small sample of cocaine followed by delivery of significantly larger amount a short time later to same buyer is a continuing course of conduct since both were intended for the same ultimate purpose, thus unanimity instruction not required, State v. Handran, 113 Wn.2d 11 (1989), State v. Campbell, 69 Wn.App. 302 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 125 Wn.2d 797 (1995), State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), *distinguishing State v. State v. Kiser, 87 Wn.App. 126 (1997)

Assault of a child 1°, RCW 9A.36.120(b)(ii), requiring proof of an assault which causes substantial bodily harm preceded by a pattern or practice of assaults, does not require a unanimity instruction absent more than one distinct episode of assault, State v. Nason, 96 Wn.App. 686, 695-97 (1999), Matter of Mulamba, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL1256426 (2022); I.

Seattle v. Norby, 88 Wn.App. 545, 561-4 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Robbins, 138 Wn.2d 486 (1999)

In DUI case, unanimity instruction requiring jury to agree whether to convict under two-hour rule or under the influence prong is not required, State v. Franco, 96 Wn.2d 816 (1982), cf.: State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 732-36 (2015); I.

State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 217 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638 (2002)

To convict instruction names two types of theft victims (clients who lost property, business who lost either property or services) in disjunctive, no unanimity instruction is offered, nor is exception taken by defense; held: instructions which identify separate criminal acts must be accompanied by unanimity instruction, distinguishing State v. Lee, 128 Wn.2d 151, 156-7 (1995), see: State v. Stephens, 93 Wn.2d 186, 190 (1980), State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 497-99 (2007), but see: State v. McNearney, 193 Wn.2d 136 (2016); II.

State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 883-84 (1998)

Where jury is given option of finding defendant guilty as accomplice or principal, a unanimity instruction is not required, even if some jurors found he was principal and some found he was accomplice, all necessarily found he committed the same crime; II.

Richardson v. United States, 143 L.Ed.2d 985 (1999)

Federal statute, 21 USC § 848, prohibits a person from "engag[ing] in a continuing criminal enterprise," "continuing criminal enterprise" is defined as a violation of the drug statutes where "such violation is part of a continuing series of violations"; trial court refused to instruct jury that it must be unanimous as to which acts constituted the violation; held: jury must unanimously agree not only that the defendant committed some "continuing series of violations," but also about which specific violations make up that "continuing series"; 6-3.

State v. Parra, 96 Wn.App. 95, 102-103 (1999)

Defendant demands money from two bank tellers, is charged and convicted of one count of robbery, no unanimity instruction is given; held: because no rational juror could have had a reasonable doubt as to either act establishing the crime, failure to give unanimity instruction was harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Kitchen, 110 Wn.2d 403, 411 (1988), cf.: State v. Coleman, 159 Wn.2d 509 (2007); I.

State v. Rivas, 97 Wn.App. 349 (1999)

Defendant is charged with assault 2° with a weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(c), instruction defining assault lists three common law definitions (battery, attempted battery, assault), no unanimity instruction or special verdict is provided but all evidence establishes common law assault only; held: because evidence established only one of the alternative means and substantial evidence supported that alternative, unanimity instruction is not required, State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345 (1993), State v. Fleming, 140 Wn.App. 132 (2007), see also: State v. Nonog, 145 Wn.App. 802, 811-13 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010), but see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778, 787 (2007); I.

State v. Laico, 97 Wn.App. 759 (1999)

Where a definition statute, here RCW 9A.04.110(4)(c) defining "great bodily harm" for purposes of assault 1°, states methods of committing a crime in the disjunctive, it does not create alternative means of committing the crime for purposes of unanimity, State v. Strohm, 75 Wn.App. 301 (1994), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Owens, 180 Wn.2d 90 (2014), State v. Marko, 107 Wn.App. 215 (2001), State v. Al-Hamdani, 109 Wn.App. 599 (2001), State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638 (2002), , State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 89-90 (2005), State v. Lindsey, 177 Wn.App. 233, 239-48 (2013), State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016), State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018), see: State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417, 426-68(2004), 159 Wn.2d 738 (2007); I.

State v. Garman, 100 Wn.App. 307 (1999)

In a theft case, a unanimity instruction is not required where (1) defendant is charged with a single count of theft based on a common scheme or plan, (2) evidence indicates multiple incidents of theft from same victim, (3) multiple transactions are aggregated for charging purposes, (4) jury is instructed on the law of aggregation, and (5) to-convict instruction requires the jury to find that the multiple incidents are part of a "common scheme or plan, a continuing course of conduct and a continuing criminal impulse," see: State v. Knutz, 161 Wn.App. 395 (2011); I.

State v. Al-Hamdani, 109 Wn.App. 599 (2001)

Rape 2˚ "when the victim is incapable of consent by reason of being physically helpless or mentally incapacitated," RCW 9A.44.050(1)(b), states a single means of committing the offense, not alternative means, distinguishing State v. Ortega-Martinez, 124 Wn.2d 702, 707-09 (1994); I.

State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638 (2002)

Theft by embezzlement is not an alternative mean of committing the crime of theft, rather it is a way to define the alternative mean of theft by "wrongfully obtaining or exerting unauthorized control," RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a); definitions provided in RCW 9A.56.010 do not create additional alternative means of theft, State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 89-90 (2005), State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016), State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); unanimity is not required as to whether a defendant embezzled money , former RCW 9A.56.010(7) or took the property or services of another, RCW 9A.56.010(7)(a), State v. Perez, 130 Wn.App. 505 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 645-48 (2005)

Where multiple incidents are offered in support of aggravating factors for purposes of proving aggravated murder, jury should be instructed that it had to be unanimous as to which of the five alleged acts constituted the aggravating circumstance, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 572 (1984), harmless here due to defendant's Alford plea to one of the incidents; II.

State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 872-77 (2005)

Defendant enters house without permission, commits assault, in burglary 1° trial to convict instruction states "enters or remains unlawfully," no Petrich unanimity instruction is given; held: while "enters unlawfully" and "remains unlawfully" are alternative means, State v. Allen,127 Wn.App. 125 (2005), cf.: State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634, 636-40 (1993), State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988), they are not necessarily repugnant and, where evidence establishes that both unlawful entry and remaining occurred, lack of unanimity instruction is not error; I.

State v. Boiko, 131 Wn.App. 595 (2006)

Where state charges witness intimidation by every statutory means, RCW 9A.72.110(1), and jury is so instructed, but one mean has no evidence to support it, lack of a unanimity instruction requires reversal, see: State v. Chino, 117 Wn.App. 531, 539 (2003), State v. Ortega-Martinez, 124 Wn.2d 702, 707 (1994); III.

State v. Watkins, 136 Wn.App. 240 (2006)

Unanimity instruction that reads, in part, "you must unanimously agree that at least one separate act…pertaining to each count has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt" is not error because it has been expressly approved by the Supreme Court, State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831 (1991), it does not protect defendant's right to a unanimous jury verdict, see: State v. Ellis, 71 Wn.App. 400, 404-6 (1993); I.

State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 496-99 (2007)

Burglary 1° information charges that defendant assaulted "a person, to wit: Makeba Otis and Leslie Johnson," no unanimity instruction is given, state claims it elected; held: while state emphasized assault against one victim, it did not "expressly elect," at 497 ¶22, thus unanimity instruction was required, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566, 569 (1984), State v. Espinoza, 14 Wn.App.2d 810 (2020), two assaults constitute only one mode of commission, distinct criminal acts, not alternative means, see: State v. Hanson, 59 Wn.App. 651, 657 (1990); I.

State v. Boyd, 137 Wn.App. 910, 922-23 (2007)

In voyeurism case, court admits two photographs of same victim to establish a single count, no unanimity instruction is given; held: because photos were taken of the same victim within a few moments of each other, the photos comprised a continual course of conduct, distinguishing State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984); II.

State v. Fleming, 140 Wn.App. 132 (2007)

In witness tampering case, jury is instructed as to all three modes, evidence only supports one mode, no unanimity instruction is given; held: where there is insufficient evidence to support charged modes such that the verdict could only have been based upon one of the alternative means and substantial evidence supports that alternative, there is no denial of the right to jury unanimity, State v. Rivas, 97 Wn.App. 349, 351-52 (1999), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), see: State v. Nonog, 145 Wn.App. 802, 811-13 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010); II.

State v. Lobe, 140 Wn.App. 897 (2007)

In witness tampering case, RCW 9A.72.120, jury is instructed as to all three means but state fails to present evidence supporting each alternative, no unanimity instruction is given; held: absent a finding that substantial evidence supported each of the means and that jury relied only on the alternatives for which evidence was presented, reversal is mandated, State v. Woodlyn, 188 Wn.2d 157 (2017); 2-1, II.

State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 324-28 (2008), 166 Wn.2d 881, 891-95 (2009)

In child rape and incest case, victim testifies defendant committed oral sex and anal sex, no unanimity instruction is offered, state does not elect; held: each of the methods of sexual intercourse constitutes a distinct criminal act, not alternative means, see: State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 498 (2007), failure to give unanimity instruction is error; absent contravening evidence, plus general denial, similar acts, error is harmless, State v. Camarillo, 115 Wn.2d 60, 62-63 (1990); III.

State v. York, 152 Wn.App. 92 (2009)

Child victim testifies that defendant had molested her on three specific instances and many other times, state charges four counts, no unanimity instruction is given; held: unless an act is specified, a unanimity instruction is required, State v. Coleman, 159 Wn.2d 509, 511 (2007), "continuous conduct" exception, State v. Crane, 116 Wn.2d 315, 330 (1991), does not apply as victim testified to numerous separate rapes, each of which could have been the basis for count 4; II.

State v. Peterson, 168 Wn.2d 763 (2010)

Failure to register, RCW 9A.44.130, is not an alternative means crime requiring jury unanimity, but see: State v. Mason, 170 Wn.App. 375 (2012); affirms State v. Peterson, 145 Wn.App. 672 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Furseth, 156 Wn.App. 516 (2010)

Multiple images of child porn are found on defendant's computer, defendant is charged with one count of possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68A.070 (1990), trial court does not give unanimity instruction, state does not elect a single picture; held: unit of prosecution is one count per possession without regard to the number of images, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870 (2009), but see: State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015), thus it is not a multiple act case, State v. Bobenhouse, 166 Wn.2d 881, 892 (2009), thus a unanimity instruction is not required; I.

State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 639-40 (2010)

Taking steps in Washington and Oregon to prepare and produce methamphetamine is a continuous course of conduct thus no unanimity instruction is required, State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717, 723-26 (1995); III.

State v. Brown, 159 Wn.App. 1, 13-15 (2010)

Violations of no contact orders were a continuing course of conduct where the time separating the acts was short, involved same parties, same location, same ultimate purpose; I.

State v. Hayes, 164 Wn.App. 459, 473 (2011)

Possessing stolen property, RCW 9A.56.140, which prohibits possessing, concealing, retaining or disposing stolen property does not create alternative means, thus unanimity instruction is not required; definitional statutes do not generally create alternative means, State v. Strohm, 75 Wn.App. 301, 309 (1994), State v. Lindsey, 177 Wn.App. 233, 239-48 (2013), State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016), State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018), see: State v. Owens, 180 Wn.2d 90 (2014); I.

State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 801-04 (2013)

Three threatening emails sent within four minutes from same location to same place is a continuous course of conduct, no multiple acts unanimity instruction is required, State v. Crane, 116 Wn.2d 315, 330 (1991), State v. Marko, 107 Wn.App. 215, 221 (2001); 2-1, II.

State v. Huynh, 175 Wn.App. 896 (2013)

Possession of a controlled substance with intent to manufacture or deliver is not an alternative means crime, as the only physical act involved is the act of possession, intent to manufacture or deliver address defendant's mental state, State v. Peterson, 168 Wn.2d 763, 769 (2010); major VUCSA aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(e) (2011) does not require unanimity on which statutory factor was proved; I.

State v. Carson, 184 Wn.2d 207 (2015)

In 3-count child rape case with identical to convict instructions defense counsel objects to unanimity instruction, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State v. Kitchen, 110 Wn.2d 403 (1988), arguing it's unnecessary and confusing, trial court doesn't so instruct, on appeal defense raises ineffective assistance; held: invited error doctrine precludes claiming error, State v. Corbett, 158 Wn.App. 576, 585-92 (2010), counsel's decision was a reasonable trial strategy; affirms State v. Carson, 179 Wn.App. 961, 972-80 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Lizarraga, 191 Wn.App. 530, 563-65 (2015)

Murder 2° is an alternative means crime, jury need not be unanimous where there is sufficient evidence to support each of the alternative means; III.

State v. McNearney, 193 Wn.App. 136 (2016)

Failure of defense to request unanimity instruction is constitutional error but not necessarily manifest, cf.: State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 217 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638 (2002); III.

State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016)

Possession of a stolen vehicle, RCW 9A.56.068(1), is a single means crime as "receive, retain, possess, conceal or dispose," RCW 9A.56.140(1) are definitional, State v. France, 180 Wn.2d 809 (2014); use of disjunctive in to convict instruction does not transform them into alternative means, State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); II.

State v. Butler, 194 Wn.App. 525 (2016)

Identity theft, RCW 9.35.020 (2008), in which one may not "knowingly obtain, possess, use or transfer a means of identification" is not an alternative means crime, State v. Barboza-Cortes, 194 Wn.2d 639 (2019); II.

State v. Woodlyn, 188 Wn.2d 157 (2017)

If jury is instructed on alternative means and there is no evidence to support one of the alternatives and jury is also instructed it need not be unanimous as to which means then case must be reversed, State v. Joseph, 3 Wn.App.2d 365, 369-70 (2018), see: State v. Gomez, 7 Wn.App.2d 441 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333, 339-44 (2017)

Felony violation of a domestic violence no contact order alleging both assault and two previous no contact order convictions, RCW 26.50.110(4), -(5) (2015), is an alternative means crime, jury need not be unanimous as to which means; 6-3.

State v. Lambert, 199 Wn.App. 51, 72-77 (2017)

Defendant is invited into home to visit victim, kills victim, goes to another home to steal gun, enters house then comes out, sees victim in driveway and demands keys to garage, victim refuses, defendant kills him in driveway, claims that insufficient evidence to support felony murder/burglary 1° as he did not remain unlawfully; held: a jury could reasonably infer that defendant's license to remain was revoked when defendant attacked first victim in home, State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988); while, to prove felony murder, there must be evidence that the murder occurred in the course of or in furtherance of the burglary, RCW 10.95.020(11) (2003), there is insufficient evidence here that the second murder occurred in immediate flight from the burglary, State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 506-20 (2007), distinguishing State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 199-203 (2015); I.

State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018)

Possessing a stolen vehicle, RCW 9A.56.068(1). is not an alternative means crime, State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App 407, 414 (2016), regardless of the fact that the statute prohibits a list of disjunctive terms; where the to convict instruction does not include the disjunctive (or), the law of the case doctrine does not require the state to prove all means; affirms State v. Tyler, 195 Wn.App. 385 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Barboza-Cortez, 194 Wn.2d 639 (2019)

Unlawful possession of a firearm 2°, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a), and identity theft 2°, RCW 9.35.020(1), are not alternative means crimes, overruling, in part, State v. Barboza-Cortez, 5 Wn.App. 86, 88-89 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Lee, 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020)

Defendant strangles victim in kitchen, they then go to bedroom where defendant strangles and rapes her digitally and with his penis, court does not give unanimity instruction, prosecutor argues in closing that the separate and distinct acts are in the living area and then the bedroom, jury sends out note asking for definition of separate and distinct, why there are separate counts and whether the separate counts were for kitchen and bedroom, trial court answers that jurors should reread instructions; held: "common sense" establishes that the acts were a single course of conduct, State v. Handran, 113 Wn.2d 11, 17 (1989), thus no unanimity instruction is required, state clearly elected during closing, jury was not confused; unanimity instruction was not necessary for the rape as it was a continuous course of conduct, State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107 (1999); I.

State v. Roy, 12 Wn.App.2d 968 (2020)

Animal cruelty 2°, RCW 16.52.207(a) (2020), provides for a single means of committing the crime five different ways; II.

State v. Espinoza, 14 Wn.App.2d 810 (2020)

Defendant is charged in one count with harassing "Wilson and/or … Tappan," no unanimity instruction is given nor does state elect; held: either an election or unanimity instruction is required to assure that a unanimous jury found defendant guilty, harassment, RCW 9A.46.020, is not an alternative means crime; I.

State v. Jallow, 16 Wn.App.2d 625 (2021)

Animal cruelty 1°, RCW 16.52.205(2), is not an alternative means crime, State v. Shoop, 22 Wn.App.2d 242 (2022), abrogating State v. Peterson, 174 Wn.App. 828, 849-55 (2013); I.

State v. Christian, 18 Wn.App.2d 185 489 P.3d 657 (2021)

Defendant is charged with assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(g), by strangulation and suffocation, no evidence at trial discusses suffocation, jury is instructed on both; held: strangulation and suffocation are means within a means and not alternative means; I.

State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 146 (2021)

Burglary ("enters or remains unlawfully") is not an alternative means offense; Division II rejects holdings to the contrary in State v. Sony, 184 Wn.App. 496, 500 (2014), State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125, 131 (2005), State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003); even if burglary is an alternative means offense where the jury is instructed as to both entering and remaining unlawfully, there is no evidence of entering unlawfully, and prosecutor elects in closing only remaining, defendant's right to a unanimous verdict is not violated; II.

Matter of Mulamba, 199 Wn.2d 488 (2022)

Assault of a child 1° and 2° are alternative means crimes that do not require a unanimity instruction, State v. Kiser, 87 Wn.App. 126 (1997); 8-1.

State v. Shoop, 22 Wn.App.2d 242, 255-57 (2022)

In 8-count animal cruelty case involving starvation where jury is repeatedly told that there were eight counts, one for each bison, and because the offenses were a continuing course of conduct via starvation no unanimity instruction was required, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), see: State v. Hanson, 59 Wn.App. 651 (1990); II

INTERPRETERS

State v. Woo Won Choi, 55 Wn.App. 895 (1989)

No right to interpreter if defendant's language skills are adequate to understand trial proceedings and present his defense; trial court need not engage in interpreter-waiver colloquy until court determines that an interpreter is necessary; court may rely upon counsel's representation that interpreter is not necessary, need not inquire directly of defendant until court has determined that an interpreter may be necessary; I.

State v. Mendez, 56 Wn.App. 458 (1989)

Trial court has no affirmative obligation to appoint an interpreter where defendant's lack of fluency or facility in English is not apparent (withdrawal of guilty plea case); I.

State v. Bell, 57 Wn.App. 447 (1990)

Trial court appoints a police victim advocate as interpreter for victim; held: whether a person is too interested in a proceedings to qualify as an interpreter is within discretion of trial court, State v. Boulet, 5 Wn.2d 654, 660 (1940); where there is no evidence of personal interest in outcome, wrongdoing or untrustworthiness, no difficulty in interpreting and an instruction from court that literal interpretation was required, then no abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Cervantes, 62 Wn.App. 695 (1991)

Police use of potential co-defendant as interpreter to translate Miranda warnings, waiver and interrogation violates due process; III.

State v. Lopez, 74 Wn.App. 264, 268-9 (1994)

Defendant seeks continuance of trial and signs time for trial waiver, no interpreter present but counsel represents defendant is sufficiently fluent to understand, defendant later claims waiver was involuntary; held: where defendant requests continuance, defense has the burden of showing an abuse of discretion in granting the continuance, see: State v. Dowell, 16 Wn.App. 583, 588 (1976), State v. Livengood, 14 Wn.App. 203, 209 (1975); trial court reasonably relied upon representations of counsel that defendant understood proceedings; I.

State v. Pham, 75 Wn.App. 626, 632-3 (1994)

In child abuse case with ESL victim, court permits uncertified interpreter when it learns that victim answers questions more openly with female interpreter (uncertified), directs that certified male interpreter remain present to ensure accuracy; held: no constitutional right to certified interpreter, although there is a constitutional right to a competent interpreter; RCW 2.43.030(1)(b) which allows uncertified interpreters for good cause, specifically that "services of certified interpreter are not reasonably available," is not exclusive, see: State v. Aljaffar, 198 Wn.App. 75 (2017); III.

State v. Sengxay, 80 Wn.App. 11, 15-16 (1995)

Failure to swear interpreter is not error absent objection; III.

State v. Aquino-Cervantes, 88 Wn.App. 699 (1997)

During CrR 3.5 hearing, interpreter testifies, over objection, that, based upon her observations of defendant during attorney-client interviews and in open court, defendant understands both Spanish and English; held: language interpreters may not testify about communications or observations made during confidential attorney-client interviews, but may testify about observations made during open court, independent of interpreting privileged communications, GR 11(e), RCW 2.43.080, harmless here; II.

State v. Garcia-Trujillo, 89 Wn.App. 203, 207-10 (1997)

Trial court suppresses officer's testimony about defendant's statements made through a police interpreter, state appeals; held: a witness may not testify to extrajudicial statements made by another when it was necessary to have the statement translated before it could be understood by the witness, the testimony is hearsay as the witness testifies to what the interpreter asserts the other party said, State v. Huynh, 49 Wn.App. 192, 203 (1987), State v. Lopez, 29 Wn.App. 836 (1981), State v. Gonzales-Hernandez, 122 Wn.App. 53 (2004); I

State v. Marintorres, 93 Wn.App. 442, 449-52 (1999)

Statutes which provide that hearing-impaired defendant is entitled to interpreter without cost to defendant, RCW 2.42.120(1), but that a non-English speaking defendant may be taxed costs of interpreters, RCW 2.43.040(4), violate equal protection rights of non-English speaking defendants, as there is no rational basis for the classification, State v. Diaz-Farias, 191 Wn.App. 512 (2015); II.

State v. Gonzales-Morales, 138 Wn.2d 374 (1999)

Use of defendant's interpreter to translate testimony of a state's witness does not violate Sixth Amendment right to counsel, affirming State v. Gonzales-Morales, 91 Wn.App. 420 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Serrano, 95 Wn.App. 700, 703-04 (1999)

Trial court's sole colloquy is to inquire whether Spanish-English interpreter is "certified or qualified," to which interpreter responds, "qualified," no objection made by defense; held: right to certified interpreter is not constitutional error, thus it may not be raised for the first time on appeal, RAP 2.5(a)(3), nothing in record suggested interpreter was incompetent, thus no error; III.

State v. Harris, 97 Wn.App. 647 (1999)

Deaf probationer is not entitled to an interpreter at meetings with his probation counselor where he can communicate in writing; RCW 2.42.120(3), which requires interpreters at court-ordered treatment programs, unconstitutionally violates the one-subject rule, CONST. Art. II, § 19; I.

State v. Teshome, 233 Wn.App. 705 (2004)

At plea hearing, trial court inquires of uncertified interpreter if she had interpreted in superior court before on criminal matters, interpreter says yes, court swears him in and proceeds with plea, defendant seeks to withdraw plea, submits another tinterpreter's translation of the plea hearing, which contains significant errors, trial court finds that defendant understood sufficient

English, denies motion; held: trial court erred in not determining, on the record, that proposed interepreter is capable of communicating effectively and understands code of ethics, RCW 2.43.030(2), however because court's finding that defendant spoke English was supported by substantial evidence, defendant is not entitled to withdraw plea; I.

State v. Ramirez-Dominguez, 140 Wn.App. 233 (2007)

Defendant's primary language is Mixteco but requests a Spanish interpreter, does not ask for clarification due to interpretation problems, communicated with family and friends in Spanish, asked a few times for definitions, responded appropriately to questions is sufficient to affirm trial court's finding that Spanish interpretation was adequate; II.

Pers. Restraint of Khan, 184 Wn.2d 679 (2015)

Petitioner files timely PRP accompanied by declaration stating he told his lawyer he does not speak much English, that counsel told him not to worry about it; held: petitioner is entitled to a reference hearing to determine whether he was prejudiced by not having an interpreter; 5-4.

State v. Castillo-Murcia, 188 Wn.App. 539, 547-49 (2015)

Defendant has an interpreter present at all pretrial hearings and trial, submits a jury waiver, court inquires in English, defendant answers in English, interpreter does not participate, during trial defendant testifies in English and has to be asked to await interpretation, at sentencing allocution is in English; held: an extended waiver discussion is not necessary as long as defendant personally expresses his desire to waive jury, inquiring whether defense counsel explained the right is a factor but lack of it is not fatal, see: State v. Ramirez-Dominguez, 140 Wn.App. 233, 239-40 (2007); II.

State v. Aljaffar, 198 Wn.App. 75 (2017)

At Spokane trial with Arabic-speaking defendant state informs court that only certified Arabic interpreter is in Seattle and that it would be "logistically difficult" to fly her to Spokane and house her during the trial, court finds good cause and approves uncertified interpreter, after colloquy deems him qualified; held: defendant has right to certified interpreter absent good cause, RCW 2.43.030 (2005), "[t]he fact the interpreter lived a few hours away and could not be made available on short notice did not provide the State good cause to excuse retaining a certified interpreter. The State as plaintiff is expected to anticipate the needs of its case and make necessary arrangements before the day of trial," at 86, harmless here; III.

State v. Jieta, 12 Wn.App.2d 227 (2020)

Court fails to provide an interpreter fifteen times over fifteen months, trial court dismisses for governmental misconduct, CrRLJ 8.3(b); held: CrRLJ 8.3(b) applies where court administration mismanages a case; I.

State v. Cruz-Yon, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 498 P.3d 533 (2021)

On appeal an indigent non-English speaking defendant is entitled to a translation of the report of proceedings deemed necessary by the trial court for purposes of appeal and a translation of appellate counsel's brief; I.

Pers. Restraint of Pheth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6690336 (2021)

Electronically recorded record need not include an audible recording of all statements made to and from interpreters; I.

Matter of Pheth, 20 Wn.App.2d 326 (2022)

Trial court need not make an audible recording of all statements made to and from interpreters in both languages as English interpretation is the official record; I.

JOINDER, SEVERANCE AND CONSOLIDATION*

State v. Townson, 29 Wn.App. 433 (1981)

Denial of severance of counts is within trial court's discretion and will not be set aside as long as the counts are sufficiently "connected together" to warrant joinder per CrR 4.3; I.

State v. Weddel, 29 Wn.App. 461 (1981)

Where counts are joined, mere fact that a defendant states he wants to testify on one count and not on other is not grounds for a severance; impeachment by prior conviction is not a "strong need to refrain from testifying"; here, defendant failed to make any showing, thus conviction affirmed; accord: State v. Watkins, 53 Wn.App. 264 (1989), State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 62-8 (1994); II.

State v. Mitchell, 30 Wn.App. 49 (1981)

Defendant charged with six burglaries several months after being arrested but not charged in a seventh burglary; speedy trial rule does not commence for six counts at arrest for a seventh permissibly joined offense, CrR 4.3(a) unless the offenses are related arising from the same criminal conduct and thus required to be joined, CrR 4.3(c); I.

State v. Ammlung, 31 Wn.App. 696 (1982)

Mere fact that one defendant's decision not to testify is inconsistent with or adversely affected by the defense presented by co-defendant is not grounds for severance; see: Zaviro v. United States, 122 L.Ed.2d 317 (1993); II.

State v. Hentz, 32 Wn.App. 186 (1982)

Defendant has heavy burden of demonstrating that denial of motion to sever counts was an abuse of discretion; defendant's claim that he wants to testify as to one count but not as to another joined count is not sufficient to require severance absent a showing that he had important testimony concerning the first count and a strong reason for not testifying as to the second; Division II adopts a broad joinder rule, CrR 4.3, to conserve judicial and prosecutorial resources.

State v. Anderson, 96 Wn.2d 739 (1982)

Defendant is convicted in 1977 of murder 1° by "extreme indifference," RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), conviction is reversed on appeal by Supreme Court, defendant is then charged with murder 1° by premeditation; Supreme Court orders information dismissed without prejudice, as state failed to join related offenses of premeditated murder 1° with murder 1° by extreme indifference, CrR 4.3(c)(3), but see: State v. Havens, 70 Wn.App. 251 (1993); Supreme Court holds state is not barred by double jeopardy clause from charging defendant with any lesser included offense (murder 2°, manslaughter), as original reversal was not based upon insufficiency of evidence, but rather upon inapplicability of statute [extreme indifference does not apply where defendant intended death of particular victim], State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.2d 176 (1980)]; 6-3

State v. Ben-Neth, 34 Wn.App. 600 (1983)

Failure to renew severance motion at trial waives issue on appeal, CrR 4.4(a)(2), State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543, 551 (1987), see: State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 863-9 (1998), State v. Bluford, 188 Wn.2d 298, 306 (2017); I.

State v. Holt, 36 Wn.App. 224 (1983)

Where offenses are intimately related under the mandatory joinder rule, CrR 4.3(c), defendant does not waive his right to joinder by failing to so move if he was unaware of the charges at such a time as to afford him a reasonable opportunity to evaluate the situation; remedy is dismissal of second set of charges; II.

State v. Thompson, 36 Wn.App. 249 (1983)

Defendant is convicted of two counts of VUCSA on 4 May 1981; on 28 May 1981 state files information charging four more counts, alleging crimes occurred before crimes that were subject of 4 May conviction; held: while charges were subject to permissive joinder, CrR 4.3(a), as they were of "same or similar character," they were not "related offenses" requiring mandatory joinder, CrR 4.3(c), State v. Mitchell, 30 Wn.App. 49 (1981), distinguishing State v. Dailey, 18 Wn.App. 525 (1977); I.

State v. Culver, 36 Wn.App. 524 (1984)

Defendant is convicted at a single trial of theft, acquitted of conspiracy, seeks new trial due to prejudice from evidence of the conspiracy; held: no error, as no prejudice here, distinguishing United States v. Branker, 395 F.2d 881, 887-89 (2d Cir. 1968), United States v. Donaway, 447 F.2d 940, 943 (9th Cir. 1971); I.

State v. Harris, 36 Wn.App. 746 (1984)

Defendant charged with two rapes, two weeks apart, one in a residence and one in a vehicle, defense motion for severance during trial denied; held: where evidence of both offenses could not be admitted as ER 404(b) evidence, there is a strong likelihood of prejudice from joinder; failure to seek severance at omnibus hearing may constitute waiver, CrR 4.4(a), State v. Hernandez, 58 Wn.App. 793 (1990); I.

State v. Gatalski, 40 Wn.App. 601 (1985)

Counts may be joined where evidence in each count is admissible in trial of other count under ER 404(b); here, intent was an issue, thus evidence of two incidents of attempted sex offenses could be joined for trial, distinguishing State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358 (1982); trial court must exercise discretion and should make a record of balancing unfair prejudice against probative value, ER 403; see: State v. Wilson, 71 Wn.App. 880, 886-67 (1993), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Buford, 188 Wn.2d 298, 307-09 (2017), State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669, 686-8 (1994); I.

United States v. Lane, 88 L.Ed.2d 814 (1986)

Misjoinder, Fed.R.Crim.Pro. 8, is subject to harmless error analysis.

State v. Standifer, 48 Wn.App. 119 (1987)

Even if a denied motion to sever was meritorious, where jury scrupulously follows instruction to treat each count as a separate trial by rendering different verdicts, then defense has failed to show prejudice; but see: State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986); accord: State v. York, 50 Wn.App. 446 (1988); I.

State v. York, 50 Wn.App. 446 (1988)

In deciding whether or not to sever counts, trial court may consider judicial economy; I.

State v. White, 50 Wn.App. 858 (1988)

Married co-defendants are entitled to severance as a matter of right; III.

State v. Thompson, 55 Wn.App. 888 (1989)

Failure to sever felon in possession of firearm charge from assault is not constitutional error per se, State v. Tully, 198 Wash. 605, 608 (1939), Pettus v. Cranor, 41 Wn.2d 567, 568 (1952); failure to argue joinder prejudice issues in trial court precludes appellate review on those bases; I.

State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989)

In joint trial, one defendant testifies that the other is a drug addict, although both defendants testified that they were unaware of presence of drugs; held: defenses were the same and not antagonistic or irreconcilable, thus no abuse of discretion in joining trials, State v. McKinzy, 72 Wn.App. 85, 89-90 (1993), State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 68-70 (2012); III.

State v. Bythrow, 114 Wn.2d 713 (1990)

Severance of counts is not automatically required when evidence of one count would not be admissible in a separate trial on the other count; defense must demonstrate undue prejudice resulting from a joint trial which outweighs concerns for judicial economy, effectively overruling State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986), except for sex offenses; when issues are relatively simple and the trial lasts only "a couple of days," the jury can be reasonably expected to compartmentalize the evidence; when state's evidence is strong on each count, then there is less of a prejudicial effect, State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525 (1993), see: State v. Eastabrook, 58 Wn.App. 805 (1990), State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 438-9 (1992), State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 876 (1992), State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581, 586-7 (1993), State v. Wilson, 71 Wn.App. 880, 886-7 (1993), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Buford, 188 Wn.2d 298 (2017), State v. Herzog, 73 Wn.App. 34, 50-1 (1994), State v. McDonald, 122 Wn.App. 804, 814-15 (2004), State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 217-29 (2011), State v. Wood, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 498 P.3d 968 (2021); 9-0.

Motion to sever counts made the day of trial is not made "before trial" as required by CrR 4.4(a)(1), cf.: State v. Wood, 94 Wn.App. 636, 640-44 (1999); renewing motion when state rests, however, is timely and preserves issue, CrR 4.4(a)(2), State v. Harris, 36 Wn.App. 746 (1984); in three-count robbery trial alleging crimes on different dates, counts one and two have a single eyewitness each, count three has three eyewitnesses; because evidence was "weak" on first two counts, and evidence on each count would not have been admissible at separate trials, then denial of severance was manifest abuse of discretion, State v. Harris, supra, at 752; II.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

Defendants seeking severance have the burden of demonstrating that a joint trial would be so manifestly prejudicial as to outweigh the concern for judicial economy, State v. Philips, 108 Wn.2d 627, 640 (1987); mutually antagonistic defenses is not alone sufficient to compel separate trials, State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 752-54 (2012), State v. Barry, 25 Wn.App. 751 (1980), State v. Davis, 73 Wn.2d 271, 290 (1968), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Abdulle, 174 Wn.2d 411 (2012), rather the conflict must be shown to be so prejudicial that defenses are irreconcilable and the jury will unjustifiably infer that the conflict alone demonstrates that both are guilty, State v. Grisby, 97 Wn.2d 493, 507-8 (1982), State v. McKinzy, 72 Wn.App. 85, 89-90 (1993), State v. Medina, 112 Wn.App. 40, 51-54 (2002), State v. Johnson, 147 Wn.App. 276 (2008), State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 68-70 (2012), cf.: Zafiro v. United States, 122 L.Ed.2d 317 (1993), see also: State v. Campbell, 78 Wn.App. 813, 818-20 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Vazquez, 66 Wn.App. 573 (1992)

Where co-defendants are tried at the same time, but one has waived jury, they are effectively severed; II.

Zafiro v. United States, 122 L.Ed.2d 317 (1993)

Fed. R. Crim. Pro. 14 does not require severance when co-defendants present mutually antagonistic defenses; trial court should sever properly joined co-defendants only if there is a serious risk that a joint trial would compromise a specific trial right (e.g., evidence suppressed against one defendant only), or would prevent jury from making a reliable judgment about guilt or innocence, State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 752-54 (2012); defendants accusing each other of the crime do not require severance; 9-0.

State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525 (1993)

Denial of severance in five-count rape case is not abuse of discretion where crimes were not particularly difficult for jury to compartmentalize, state's evidence on each count was strong, jury instructed to consider crimes separately, State v. Bythrow, 114 Wn.2d 713 (1990), effectively overruling State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986) for all crimes including sex offenses; fact that separate counts would not be cross-admissible in separate trials does not necessarily represent a sufficient ground to sever as matter of law, State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669, 686-8 (1994), State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 217-29 (2011); 8-0.

State v. Wilson, 71 Wn.App. 880, 884-87 (1993)

Charges of harassment and assault 1° of different victims are of same or similar character, and thus subject to joinder, CrR 4.3(a)(1), see: RCW 9A.46.060(4); propriety of joinder is a question of law, subject to full appellate review; once counts or defendants are properly joined, severance is subject to abuse of discretion standard, State v. Hentz, 32 Wn.App. 186, 189-90 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 99 Wn.2d 538 (1983), see: State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 863-9 (1998),but see: State v. Bluford, 188 Wn.2d 298 (2017); II.

State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 62-68 (1994)

In determining whether the potential for prejudice requires severance, court must consider (1) strength of state's evidence on each count, (2) clarity of defenses as to each count, (3) instruction to consider each count separately, and (4) cross-admissibility of evidence, see: State v. Redd, 51 Wn.App. 597 (1988), State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 878 (1992), State v. Eastabrook, 58 Wn.App. 805, 811-2 (1990), State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 439 (1992), State v. Williams, 156 Wn.2d 482, 499-500 (2010); likelihood that joinder will cause jury to be confused as to defenses is very small where the defense is identical on each charge, State v. Hernandez, 58 Wn.App. 793, 799 (1990); defendant's desire to testify only on one count requires severance only if defendant makes a convincing showing that he has important testimony to give concerning one count and a strong need to refrain from testifying about another, State v. Watkins, 53 Wn.App. 264, 270 (1989), State v. Weddel, 29 Wn.App. 461, 467 (1981), see: State v. McDonald, 122 Wn.App. 804, 814-15 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Canedo-Astorga, 79 Wn.App. 518, 527-9 (1995)

Trial court need not sever defendants merely because co-defendant is representing himself badly; II.

State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 863-69 (1998)

Robbery defendant fails to appear for omnibus hearing, state amends and adds bail jumping charge over objection, court denies motion to sever which is not renewed at trial; held: failure to renew motion to sever waives issue, State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543, 551 (1987), State v. Ben-Neth, 34 Wn.App. 600, 606 (1983), CrR 4.4(a)(2), but because offenses should not be joined if there is proof of prejudice, Division I will consider prejudice in determining propriety of joinder, State v. Bluford, 188 Wn.2d 298 (2017), see: State v. Culver, 36 Wn.App. 524, 529 (1984); when a defendant fails to appear on an underlying substantive charge, a charge of bail jumping is properly joined, absent a strong showing of prejudice to the accused, but see: State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021), see: State v. Nation, 110 Wn.App. 651 (2002), cf.: State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 217-29 (2011), as state need not show that flight was in order to avoid prosecution; I.

State v. Wood, 94 Wn.App. 636, 640-44 (1999)

On day of trial, co-defendant's counsel discovers conflict of interest, state moves to sever, defendant objects; held: absent prejudice, defendant lacks right to have cases tried together; II.

State v. Larry, 108 Wn.App. 894 (2001)

Redacted confession that substitutes pronouns rather than blank spaces does not mandate severance as long as the redaction is facially neutral, Bruton v. United States, 20 L.Ed.2d 476 (1968), free of obvious deletions, Gray v. Maryland, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998), and accompanied by a limiting instruction, Richardson v. Marsh, 95 L.Ed.2d 176 (1987), State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171, 206-13 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016), State v. Moses, 193 Wn.App. 341 (2016), redacting exculpatory statements as inadmissible hearsay is permitted as long as it does not distort the statement, State v. Alsup, 75 Wn.App. 128 (1994) or violate rule of completeness, ER 106, 611(a), see: State v. Perez, 139 Wn.App. 522, 530-31

(2007); test for rule of completeness: statement is necessary to (1) explain the admitted evidence, (2) place the admitted portions in context, (3) avoid misleading the trier of fact, (4) insure fair and impartial understanding of the evidence, at 910; II.

State v. Medina, 112 Wn.App. 40 (2002)

State offers redacted statement of co-defendant that refers to "other guys," "the guy," "one guy," and "they," from statement it is "impossible to track the activities of any particular 'guy' referenced, trial court twice cautions jury not to consider statement against defendant; held: redacted confession that omits all reference to defendant and can only be deemed incriminating when linked to other evidence later introduced at trial does not mandate severance, Richardson v. Marsh, 95 L.Ed.2d 176 (1987), State v. Moses, 193 Wn.App. 341 (2016), where jury is not provided statement that includes obvious or express deletions, Gray v. Maryland, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998), see: State v. Fisher, 186 Wn.2d 836, 841-48 (2016); III.

State v. MacDonald, 122 Wn.App. 804, 814-15 (2004)

In two count rape case, defendant testifies as to one count but not another, one count is stronger than the other, thus severance should be granted, State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 62-68 (1994), State v. Bythrow, 114 Wn.2d 713, 717-18 (1990); II.

State v. Johnson, 147 Wn.App. 276 (2008)

Mutually antagonistic defenses do not require reversal of a consolidated trial, even where one defendant testifies and blames a co-defendant, State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 68-70 (2012), State v. Larry, 108 Wn.App. 894, 911 (2001), State v. McKinzy, 72 Wn.App. 85, 90 (1993), State v. Davis, 73 Wn.App. 271, 290 (1968), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Abdulle, 174 Wn.2d 411 (2012), State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 752-54 (2012); mandatory severance to avoid admission of a confession which inculpates a co-defendant does not apply to in-court testimony, State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777, 788 (1973); II.

State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 883-87 (2009)

Child rape and possession of child pornography counts are tried together without a severance motion, evidence of child porn was strong but child rape was weaker, defendant offered separate defenses, state argued that child porn proved defendant's sexual motivation for rape, child porn evidence would likely have been inadmissible in a separate trial since the pornography did not involve pictures of the rape victim, see: State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 547 (1991); held: failure to move to sever was ineffective assistance as there was a reasonable likelihood that trial court would have granted a severance; 6-3.

State v. Williams, 156 Wn.App. 482, 499-500 (2010)

In ruling on joinder, CrR 4.3(a), trial court should consider (1) strength of state's evidence on each count, (2) clarity of defenses on each count, (3) instruction to consider each count separately and (4) cross-admissibility, State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 62-68 (1994), State v. Bluford, 188 Wn.2d 298 (2017), omission here is harmless; III.

State v. Rodrigue*z,* 163 Wn.App. 215, 227-29 (2011)

Witness tampering count need not be severed as tampering is admissible as evidence of consciousness of guilt in the trial of the charge to which the witness' testimony pertains; III.

State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 68-70 (2012)

In joint murder trial, one defendant does not testify but generally denied, other testifies he was not present at the homicide, motion to sever denied; held: while the two offenses here are irreconcilable, they do not reach the level where the jury would unjustifiably infer from the conflict that both are guilty; jury could have believed either or neither but not both, from verdict clearly jury believed neither, defense has not shown that this was due to the conflicting defenses rather than the evidence produced at trial; affirms State v. Sublett, 156 Wn.App. 160 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Bluford, 188 Wn.2d 298, 305-16 (2017)

Failure of defense to renew a motion to sever before or at the close of the evidence, CrR 4.4(b), waives the issue but court can consider propriety of state's motion to join, CrR 4.3(a), in determining prejudice to defendant, State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 863-69 (1998), overruling, in part, State v. Wilson, 71 Wn.App. 880, 886, 863 P.2d 116 (1993*), rev'd in part on other grounds*, 125 Wn.2d 212, 883 P.2d 320 (1994); where counts are joined in an original charging document then state need not move to join and severance rules apply; marked dissimilarities and the absence of any distinctive similarities which tilt against cross-admissibility is a basis to deny joinder due to prejudice; 9-0.

State v. Linville, 191 Wn.2d 513 (2018)

Defendant is convicted of one count of "leading organized crime," in violation of Washington's Criminal Profiteering Act (CPA), RCW 9A.82.060(l)(a), plus 137 other offenses, some of which were crimes listed in RCW 9A.82.010(4) as predicate offenses, which, when combined, form the requisite "pattern of criminal profiteering" on which the umbrella crime called "leading organized crime" is based but some of these 137 other offenses were not listed in RCW 9A.82.010(4) as predicate crimes, RCW 9A.82.085 ("joinder bar") prohibits joinder of non-predicate crimes in a single prosecution, defense does not move to sever, defendant claims ineffective assistance on appeal; held: while the statutory list of predicate profiteering crimes is exclusive and thus defendant would have had a right to a severance, the record fails to reflect why defense counsel failed to object, which could have been tactical to avoid separate convictions and sentencings which can only be established by collateral attack; reverses State v. Linville, 199 Wn.App. 461 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021)

A single failure to appear in court is not indicative of consciousness of guilt, thus it is error for a court to admit such evidence of flight, State v. Bruton, 66 Wn.2d 111, 112 (1965), cf.: State v. Cobb, 22 Wn.App. 221, 224 (1978), State v. Jefferson, 11 Wn.App. 566, 570 (1974); a bail jumping charge based upon a single failure to appear is unfairly prejudicial, court must sever; 9-0.

State v. Martinez, 22 Wn.App.2d 621 (2022)

Two brothers are joined for trial for serially raping another sibling, incriminating statements from both, admitted at trial, do not incriminate the other party, defendants seek severance in part because they did not know if the other defendant would testify; held: ER 404(b) does not prohibit evidence of a crime committed by a defendant's family member where the defendant is not inculpated; factors for determining improper joinder of counts, State v. Bluford, 188 Wn.2d 298, (2017), do not apply to motion to sever defendants; III.

State v. Eisner, 95 Wn.2d 458 (1981)

Prosecutor could not get five-year-old statutory rape complainant to testify to penetration, so court examined witness in detail, resulting in conviction; held: questions of judge went beyond clarification so as to be a comment on the evidence; 9-0.

State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701 (1981)

Judge who takes plea from co-defendant may preside at jury trial of remaining defendants; II.

State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981)

Trial court has discretion to call a witness whom all parties may cross-examine; I.

State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 53 (1983)

Counsel and defendant must specifically consent in open court or in writing to have a judge pro tem hear a criminal case in Superior Court or court lacks jurisdiction, CONST. Art. 4, § 7, RCW 2.08.180, but see: State v. Osloond, 60 Wn.App. 584 (1991), State v. Belgarde, 62 Wn.App. 684 (1991), State v. Robinson, 64 Wn.App. 201 (1992), Vancouver v. Boldt, 21 Wn.App.2d 100 (2022); III.

State v. Romano, 34 Wn.App. 567 (1983)

Sentencing judge contacts individuals about defendant ex parte without revealing the fact prior to sentencing; held: judge may not make an ex parte undisclosed investigation, see: State v. Watson, 120 Wn.App. 521, 534-36 (2004); remanded for sentencing before a different judge; II.

State v. Dagenais, 47 Wn.App. 260 (1987)

Judge finds juvenile respondent guilty, stating that the respondent lied, proceeds to hear another trial on same respondent; held: having just stated his belief as to respondent's credibility, judge should have disqualified himself at second trial, as a fair trial requires absence of actual bias and the appearance of bias, cf.: State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 187-89 (2010); I.

Ladenburg v. Campbell, 56 Wn.App. 701 (1990)

District court lacks authority to appoint a special prosecutor; II.

State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990)

Trial court's referring to state's witness as "an expert on that subject" in ruling on an objection is not a comment on the evidence, CONST. Art. 4, § 16; 9-0.

State v. Hastings, 115 Wn.2d 42 (1990)

In a court of limited jurisdiction, a defendant has neither a constitutional nor statutory right to withhold consent to the authority of a judge pro tempore, Vancouver v. Boldt, 21 Wn.App.2d 100 (2022) State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 53 (1983); 8-0.

State v. Barnes, 58 Wn.App. 465 (1990)

In diminished capacity case, defendant testifies that he "went crazy," judge sua sponte tells jury that this is not a mental irresponsibility case; held: not a comment on the evidence, CONST. Art. 4, § 16, as it does not address credibility, weight or sufficiency of evidence, State v. Jacobsen, 78 Wn.2d 491, 495 (1970), but was a statement of law; I.

State v. Osloond, 60 Wn.App. 584 (1991)

Where defense counsel stipulates in writing to appointment of a judge pro tempore, absence of defendant's written agreement or consent on the record is insufficient to challenge validity of the appointment absent defendant's argument that the stipulation was entered without his consent, distinguishing State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 553 (1983); I.

State v. Kepiro, 61 Wn.App. 116 (1991)

Intent to harm or reasonably cause alarm is not an element of intimidating a judge, RCW 9A.72.160, cf.: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015), ; I.

Seattle v. Knutson, 62 Wn.App. 31 (1991)

Dismissal for inconvenience and delay because of trial court's inability to provide a court clerk is an abuse of discretion, CrRLJ 8.3(b); I.

State v. Bryant, 65 Wn.App. 547 (1992)

Judge makes oral findings, imposes exceptional sentence, after appeal filed, commissioner signs findings of fact; held: only judge who has heard evidence has authority to find facts, CR 63(b), CrR 6.11, thus remanded for entry of findings by disposition judge or for new disposition hearing, cf.: State v. Soto, 45 Wn.App. 839 (1986), State v. Ward, 182 Wn.App. 574 (2014); I.

State v. Belgarde, 119 Wn.2d 711 (1992)

Acquiescent conduct alone is insufficient to support valid appointment of judge pro tempore to hear case in Superior Court, as there must be affirmative and knowing oral consent by party or his attorney where there is no written appointment signed by parties, State ex rel. Cougill v. Sachs, 3 Wash. 691, 694 (1892), National Bank of Wash. v. McCrillis, 15 Wn.2d 345, 356 (1942), Vancouver v. Boldt, 21 Wn.App.2d 100 (2022); retired judge who made discretionary rulings in a case before retirement may hear the case without consent of the parties, CONST. Art. 4, § 7 (amend. 80); affirms State v. Belgarde, 62 Wn.App. 684 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Carlson, 66 Wn.App. 909 (1992)

Appellate judge's participation in a program to prepare child sex abuse victims to testify is not grounds for disqualification from a case involving credibility of child witnesses; motion to disqualify appellate judge on grounds that prosecutor participated in her reelection campaign is untimely where motion is made after opinion is filed; counsel has an obligation to check PDC information in timely fashion; I.

Hanno v. Neptune Orient Lines, 67 Wn.App. 681 (1992)

Pretrial orders which involve arranging calendars and setting hearings are not discretionary decisions precluding filing an affidavit of prejudice, RCW 4.12.040, -.050; accord: Marriage of Henneman, 69 Wn.App. 345 (1990), but see: State v. Parra, 122 Wn.2d 590 (1993), State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 777-81 (2017); I.

State v. Smith, 68 Wn.App. 201 (1992)

Failure of Superior Court to enter findings following a CrR 3.6 hearing will result in dismissal absent compelling reasons, State v. Peña, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992), State v. Cruz, 88 Wn.App. 905 (1997), but see: State v. Pulido, 68 Wn.App. 59 (1992), cf.: State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998); I.

Yakima v. Irwin, 70 Wn.App. 1 (1993)

In abortion protest case, instruction that "[a] moral objection to abortion will not justify the commission of a violation of law" is not a comment on the evidence, as it does not convey judge's personal attitudes toward the merits, State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990); III.

State v. Hansen, 122 Wn.2d 712, 716-18 (1993)

Defendant calls an attorney to sue a judge, attorney tells defendant he won't represent him, defendant tells counsel he will "blow away" judge, attorney reports it, defendant is convicted of intimidating a judge, RCW 9A.72.160; held: statute prohibits threatening a judge through a third person because of an official decision of the judge, even if defendant did not intend that judge learn of threat, State v. Side, 105 Wn.App. 787 (2001), overruling, in part, State v. Hansen, 67 Wn.App. 511 (1992), see: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015); 5-4 (6-3 for result).

Court may not vacate sentence to prevent deportation pursuant to CrR 7.8(b)(1), 7.8(b)(5), see also: State v. Quintero Morelos, 133 Wn.App. 591 (2006), or by writ of audita querela; III.

State v. Lane, 125 Wn.2d 825, 835-41 (1995)

Trial judge informs jury of the reason for a witness's early release from jail, which is contested by defense; held: the judge's statement to the jury was an opinion on a contested issue of fact, and thus was a comment on the evidence, CONST. Art. 4, § 16, State v. Hansen, 46 Wn.App. 292, 300 (1986), State v. Trickel, 16 Wn.App. 18, 25 (1976), State v. Crotts, 22 Wash. 245, 250-1 (1900), State v. Eaker, 113 Wn.App. 111 (2002), State v. Ratliff, 121 Wn.App. 642 (2004), cf.: State v. Sivins, 138 Wn.App. 52, 58-62 (2007); presumed prejudicial, State v. Bogner, 62 Wn.2d 247, 249 (1963), burden rests on state to show that no prejudice could have resulted, State v. Stephens, 7 Wn.App. 569, 573 (1972), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 83 Wn.2d 485 (1974), harmless here; 7-2.

State v. Martinez, 76 Wn.App. 1, 6-8 (1994)

Trial court amending information sua sponte does not, by itself, violate appearance of fairness doctrine; see: State v. Falco, 59 Wn.App. 354 (1990); I.

State v. Carter, 77 Wn.App. 8, 11-12 (1995)

At sentencing on Alford plea, judge expresses belief in defendant's guilt, plea is later withdrawn, same judge presides at trial over defense objection under appearance of fairness doctrine; held: absent evidence of a judge's actual or potential bias, appearance of fairness doctrine is not violated, State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596, 618-9 (1992), State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 187-89 (2010), State v. C.B., 195 Wn.App. 528, 544-47 (2016); here, judge's comments at original sentencing were relevant to his determining whether there were facts to support Alford plea, no evidence of prejudice or bias; 2-1, III.

State v. Duran-Davila, 77 Wn.App. 701 (1995)

To determine age of a witness, judge telephones juvenile court clerk who relates information from juvenile court file, court takes judicial notice that she is a minor; held: court may not take judicial notice of the existence of a juvenile court file without having viewed the actual file; age of witness was neither "generally known within the territorial jurisdiction" nor "capable of accurate and ready determination by resort to sources" of unquestionable accuracy, thus not an appropriate fact for judicial notice, ER 201(b); II.

State v. Bilal, 77 Wn.App. 720 (1995)

After verdict, defendant assaults trial judge in court, judge refuses to disqualify himself for sentencing; held: defendant should not benefit from his or her own misbehavior, recusal lies within the sound discretion of the trial court, which is not required to disqualify itself for threats or assaults which occur inside the courtroom; II.

State v. Goss, 78 Wn.App. 58 (1995)

Superior Court commissioner, CONST. art. 4, § 23, is authorized to issue search warrant; II.

State v. Dominguez, 81 Wn.App. 325 (1996)

Trial judge was both defense counsel and prosecuted defendant on prior cases, defendant claims he filed a lawsuit against the judge which was still pending, judge refuses to disqualify himself; held: bare oral assertion that defendant filed a lawsuit or disciplinary complaint is insufficient to prove potential bias, State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 596 (1992), absent a specific showing of bias, a judge is not disqualified merely because he worked as a lawyer for or against a party in a previous, unrelated case, former CJC Canon 3(D)(1), Pers. Restraint of Swenson, 158 Wn.App. 812 (2010), State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 287-90 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014), see: State v. Eastabrook, 58 Wn.App. 805, 817 (1990); III.

State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389, 406-11 (1997)

During trial, juror reports to court that she saw an apparent friend of defendant glaring at witness and making threatening gesture, trial court does nothing until after verdict; held: failure of trial court to notify counsel promptly was harmless error, State v. Johnson, 56 Wn.2d 700, 709 (1960), as no prejudice shown, reversing State v. Bourgeouis, 82 Wn.App. 314 (1996); 8-1.

State v. Akers, 88 Wn.App. 891 (1997), affid, on other grounds, 136 Wn.2d 641 (1998)

In proceeding to enhance penalty for sale of drugs within a school zone, special verdict form which does not state that the entity is a school is not a comment on the evidence, distinguishing State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54 (1997); I.

State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 794 (1998)

A superior court judge is a "public servant," RCW 9A.04.110(22), for purposes of intimidating a public servant statute, RCW 9A.76.180, even if the judge has not filed his/her oath with the secretary of state, as required by RCW 2.08.080, see: State v. Hendrickson, 177 Wn.App. 67, 74-77 (2013), State v. K.L.B., 180 Wn.2d 735 (2014); II.

State v. Graham, 91 Wn.App. 663 (1998)

During bench trial, judge realizes and discloses that he works for complainant, defense does not agree to allow judge to continue, judge disqualifies himself and declares a mistrial; held: mistrial necessitated by recusal in accordance with CJC 3(D)(1) constitutes a manifest necessity, see: State v. Eldridge, 17 Wn.App. 270, 276 (1977), State v. Jones, 26 Wn.App. 1 (1980), absent bad faith, see: State v. Browning, 38 Wn.App. 772 (1984), State v. Rich, 63 Wn.App. 743 (1992), jeopardy has not terminated and trial may proceed before a different judge; II.

State v. Dewey, 93 Wn.App. 50, 58-59 (1998), overruled, on other grounds, State v. DeVencentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003)

In rape case, court's limiting instruction referring to prior misconduct as a "rape" was a comment on the evidence, CONST. Art. IV, § 16; II.

State v. Turner, 143 Wn.2d 715, 728 (2001)

Defendant curses at and threatens trial judge, then seeks disqualification; held: where trial court concludes, based upon its own observations, that defendant's behavior is intended to disrupt proceedings, it need not disqualify itself as defendant should not be allowed to benefit from his own misbehavior; 9-0.

State v. Lown, 116 Wn.App. 402 (2003)

When the superior court reviews a juvenile court commissioner's ruling, it must determine if the findings of fact are supported by substantial evidence, and reviews the conclusions of law de novo, RCW 2.24.050, but see: State v. Wicker, 105 Wn.App. 428 (2001); III.

State v. Ratliff, 121 Wn.App. 642 (2004)

Trial judge responds to jurors' questions without notifying parties, provides facts in response that were not established at trial; held: ex parte communications with jurors violates CrR 6.15(f)(1); providing facts to jurors is a comment on the evidence, violating CONST. art. IV, § 16; II.

State v. Watson, 155 Wn.2d 574 (2005)

Prosecutor submits memorandum to all judges in county opposing DOSA sentences, sends copies to public defender, at sentencing defense objects to ex parte communication; held: a general policy memo that does not address a specific case is not an improper ex parte communication, reversing, in part, State v. Watson, 120 Wn.App. 521 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Zimmerman, 130 Wn.App. 170, 180-83 (2005), reaffirmed, 135 Wn.App. 970 (2006)

In child molestation case, instruction to jury that testimony of victim need not be corroborated is not a comment on the evidence, State v. Clayton, 32 Wn.2d 571, 572 (1949), State v. Malone, 20 Wn.App. 712, 714-15 (1979), but see: State v. Johnson, 152 Wn.App. 924, 934-37 (2009); 2-1, II.

State v. Jackman, 156 Wn.2d 736, 742-45 (2006)

Where age is an element of an offense, a jury instruction which provides the date of birth of the complainant is a comment on the evidence, State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54, 65 (1997), and is not harmless, Neder v. United States, 144 L.Ed.2d 35 (1999), State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709 (2006), but see: State v. Zimmerman, 130 Wn.App. 170, 175-80 (2005), 135 Wn.App. 970, 975-76 (2006), State v. Baxter, 134 Wn.App. 587, 592-95 (2006); affirms State v. Jackman, 125 Wn.App. 552 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Perala, 132 Wn.App. 99, 114 (2006)

A motion to disqualify a judge is governed by CR 6, see: CrR 8.1, and must be served at least five days prior to the time when they are to be heard; III.

State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709, 720-27 (2006)

To convict burglary instruction that reads "enters or remains unlawfully in a building to wit: the building…located at…" is a comment on the evidence, as it relieves that state of its burden of proving that defendant entered a building, State v. Becker, 132 Wn.2d 54, 64 (1997); instruction that states that, to convict, state must prove defendant "was armed with a deadly weapon, to wit: a .38 caliber revolver a crowbar" is a comment on the evidence, as it relieved the state of its burden of proving that the use of the crowbar caused it to be qualified as a deadly weapon, but is not a comment as to the revolver, as a revolver is a deadly weapon as a matter of law; robbery to convict instruction that reads, in part, that defendant unlawfully took personal property "to wit jewelry" is not a comment on the evidence as there is no dispute as to whether jewelry is personal property; naming victim is not a comment as it does not improperly suggest to the jury that it need not find that the property was taken from another; judicial comments are presumed prejudicial, distinguishing Neder v. United States, 144 L.Ed.2d 35 (1999), harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Leon, 133 Wn.App. 810 (2006)

Attorney who appears regularly before the judge as counsel appears as a witness in motion to withdraw guilty plea, court declines to disqualify itself; held: where judge declares that "he had no special relationship with [counsel] and that he could independently judge the matter at hand without any bias," then court's refusal to disqualify itself is not an abuse of discretion, see also: State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 287-90 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014); I.

State v. Baxter, 134 Wn.App. 587, 592-95 (2006)

Including birth date of victim in instructions where age is an element is a manifest violation of CONST. art. IV, § 16, State v. Jackman, 156 Wn.2d 736, 742-45 (2006), is not a structural error or prejudicial per se, State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709, 725 (2006), State v. Zimmerman, 135 wn.App. 970 (2006), but is presumed prejudicial, with burden of showing absence of prejudice unless the record affirmatively shows no prejudice; here, because defendant admitted to 911 operator that victim was below the threshhold age, the error was harmless; II.

State v. Zimmerman, 135 Wn.App. 970 (2006)

In child molestation case, instruction to jury stating age of complainant is a comment on the evidence, State v. Jackman, 156 Wn.2d 736 (2006), but is not structural error, Neder v. United States, 144 L.Ed.2d 35 (1999); here, because there was no dispute regarding complainant's age, the comment was harmless; reaffirms State v. Zimmerman, 130 Wn.App. 170 (2005); II.

State v. Chamberlin, 161 Wn.2d 30, 36-41 (2007)

A judge who issues a search warrant is not obliged to disqualify him or herself from hearing a suppression motion; 9-0.

State v. Brown, 137 Wn.App. 587 (2007)

In intimidating a judge case, RCW 9A.72.160, defendant tells third party that he has thought about shooting the judge; held: an expression of thoughts of harming a judge in the past is not a "true threat," State v. Knowles, 91 Wn.App. 367, 373 (1998), State v. Johnson, 157 Wn.2d 355, 360-61 (2006), to use force in the future, thus dismissed, cf.: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015), State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019); II.

State v. Sivins, 138 Wn.App. 52, 58-62 (2007)

Trial court suppresses some evidence pretrial, then reads information to jury which refers to the evidence that was suppressed; held: because trial judge did nothing to convey his personal opinion of the facts or merits of the case during his inadvertent disclosure, court did not establish disputed facts, prove state's case or bear on credibility of witnesses, thus no art. IV, § 16 comment on the evidence violation, see: State v. Eisner, 95 Wn.2d 458 (1981); III.

State v. Hermann, 138 Wn.App. 596 (2007)

Defendant takes rings from his mother, pawns them, court admits evidence of purchase price 20 years earlier plus current wholesale price, court instructs jury "evidence of retail price may be sufficient to establish value," defendant is convicted of theft 1º and trafficking in stolen property, RCW 9A.82.050(1); held: by instructing jury that evidence of retail price could be sufficient to establish value, trial court improperly directed jury to give greater weight to that evidence than evidence of wholesale value, Det. Of R.W., 98 Wn.App. 140, 144 (1999); II.

State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 353 (2007)

One judge hears pretrial testimony and makes factual and legal findings, case is then assigned to another judge for trial, defendant's motion for mistrial denied; held: CrR 6.11(a) does not require that, after a mistrial, a case must be assigned to the same judge who heard pretrial motions and testimony; I.

State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688, 704-05 (2008)

Trial judge comments during instruction colloquy that he will not give self defense because, in part, defendant is "some distorted character who breeds and lives violently," scolds defendant for nodding "as if you are agreeing with me," provides state with proposal of theories for us in admitting improper ER 404(b) evidence, expresses concern at sentencing for victim's war record were all improper; II.

State v. Boss, 167 Wn.2d 710, 720-22 (2009)

In custodial interference case, instruction to jury that Child Protection Service had lawful right to custody is a comment on the evidence, see: State v. Baxter, 134 Wn.App. 587, 592-93 (2006); while trial court is to determine the validity of the order granting custody to CPS, it is for the jury to determine whether state proved that CPS had a right to physical custody, harmless here; affirms State v. Boss, 144 Wn.App. 878 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Morgensen, 148 Wn.App. 81, 90-91 (2008)

Trial judge discloses that he may have previously represented defendant, at sentencing judge further discloses his opinion about defendant; held: absent objection or affidavit of prejudice, defense waives objection, In re Welfare of Carpenter, 21 Wn.App. 814, 820 (1978), State v. Bolton, 23 Wn.App. 708, 714 (1979); II.

State v. Francisco, 148 Wn.App. 168, 178-80 (2009)

In drug possession case, defense counsel argues to jury that state failed to produce a dirty urinalysis from the jail, state responds in clsoing that jail must have a court order before it can produce a urinalysis, defense objection is overruled, judge in overruling objection states that jail must have an order; held: judge's statement was not a comment on the evidence as it was merely a response to an argument of counsel, trial court instructed jury to disregard it's statement so no error occurred; III.

In child molestation case, instruction to jury that testimony of victim need not be corroborated, RCW 9A.44.020(1), is not a comment on the evidence, State v. Zimmerman, 130 Wn.App. 170, 180-83 (2005), 135 Wn.App. 970 (2006), but Division II urges courts to "consider instructing the jury that it is to decide all questions of witness credibility as part of the instruction," ¶ 28.

State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 187-89 (2010)

Following reversal of 1991 murder case, new trial judge is assigned in 2005, defendant seeks disqualification because judge had represented defendant's wife in 1991 in dissolution, judge says she has no recollection of the case, reviews her dissolution file and states that representation was brief, never spoke to defendant; held: while potential bias is present, remoteness of representation and lack of recollection by judge establishes that defendant has not established an appearance of unfairness; 8-1.

State v. Tracer, 155 Wn.App. 171 (2010), 173 Wn.2d 708, 723 (2012)

Due to conflict, prosecutor appoints special prosecutor who fails to appear at a hearing, defense counsel reports to court that special prosecutor had agreed to reduce charge, trial court appoints an attorney who happens to be in the courtroom as special prosecutor, orders attorney to move to reduce charge, takes plea to lesser charge, state appeals; held: judge lacks authority to amend information or accept plea to lesser, as court violated separation of powers doctrine by effectively amending sua sponte; trial judge has authority to appoint a special prosecutor when any prosecutor fails to attened court, RCW 36.27.030, appointing a criminal defense attorney creates a conflict of interest, plea taken was thus invalid; II.

State v. Skuza, 156 Wn.App. 886 (2010)

Having excluded witnesses, ER 615, trial judge overhears a defense witness speaking to the defendant outside the courthouse, excludes the witness from testifying, see: State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985); held: trial judge became a witness, defendant had no opportunity to question him about his observations, judge's description of the conversation was insufficient to warrant a finding that a violation occurred, court erred when it applied the harshest possible sanction of excluding evidence central to defense case; II.

State v. Hartzell, 156 Wn.App. 918, 935-41 (2010)

Limiting instruction that reads, "[e]vidence…has been admitted that you may or may not consider as establishing an association of the defendants to the crimes charged," while inartful, did not comment on the evidence due to the use of the word "may;" I.

Pers. Restraint of Swenson, 158 Wn.App. 812 (2010)

A year after sentencing, defendant files PRP demanding resentencing before a different judge because sentencing judge was a prosecutor in a prior juvenile case against defendant twenty years earlier; held: without a specific showing of actual or potential bias, a judge who has previously prosecuted the defendant need not be disqualified, at least where there is nothing to indicate that the judge was aware of her prior involvement, State v. Dominguez, 81 Wn.App. 325 (1996), se also: State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 287-90 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014); I.

State v. Duran-Madrigal, 163 Wn.App. 608 (2011)

A judge pro tempore, approved by the parties and sworn by the court, CONST., Art. IV, § 7, RCW 2.08.180, may accept a guilty plea, Mitchell v. Kitsap County, 59 Wn.App. 177, 185 (1990); I.

State v. Hawkins, 164 Wn.App. 705, 711-14 (2011)

A visiting judge is presumed to have received a request to sit in a different county even where the record is silent, CONST., art. IV, § 7, State v. Holmes, 12 Wash. 169 (1895); a ruling on a post-conviction motion to dismiss is a discretionary ruling, defendant has no right to an affidavit of prejudice as to that judge in a subsequent motion to modify or vacate a sentence, CrR

7.8(b), as it is not a new case arising from new facts that have occurred since the entry of final judgment, State v. Belgarde, 119 Wn.2d 711, 715 (1992), State v. Clemons, 56 Wn.App. 57, 59 (1989), distinguishing State v. Torres, 85 Wn.App. 231, 234 (1997); I.

State v. Jones, 171 Wn.App. 52, 54-55 (2012)

After witness identifies defendant, prosecutor asks if the record may reflect same, trial court states that it shall so reflect, defense does not object; held: judge stating an undisputed peripheral fact is not a comment on the evidence, State v. Louie, 68 Wn.2d 304, 314 (1966); II.

State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 287-90 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014)

Trial judge states he may have represented defendant fifteen years ago, denies disqualification; held: absent evidence that judge had actually represented defendant and absent evidence to overcome presumption that court performed its functions without bias or prejudice, judge's impartiality may not be reasonably questioned, State v. Dominguez, 81 Wn.App. 325, 327-29 (1996); II.

State v. Hendrickson, 177 Wn.App. 67, 74-77 (2013)

A candidate for judicial or other public office is not a "public servant" for purposes of intimidating a public servant, RCW 9A.76.180 (2011), see: State v. K.L.B., 180 Wn.2d 735 (2014); a threat against a judicial candidate who is a sitting judge is insufficient to convict of intimidating a public servant where the threat is directed against candidacy rather than official judicial actions; III.

State v. Ward, 182 Wn.App. 574 (2014)

Following suppression hearing judge orally states findings, parties submit proposed written findings to the court, a different judge signs defendant's proposed findings, no objection below; held: a substitute judge may sign findings and conclusions based upon another judge's ruling when the parties do not object, after knowledge of the signature of the substitute judge, distinguishing State v. Bryant, 65 Wn.App. 547 (1992), Marriage of Crosetto, 101 Wn.App. 89, 95 (2000); III.

State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 556-60 (2015)

Instruction regarding domestic violence aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(h)(i) (2008), that states that a "prolonged period of time means more than a few weeks" is a comment on the evidence, distinguishing State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 203 (2001), cf.: State v. Hood, 196 Wn.App. 127, 136-37 (2016), State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Gentry, 183 Wn.2d 749, 759-63 (2015)

A judge who worked as a prosecutor during a defendant's trial but had no involvement in the case is not obliged to disqualify herself from hearing a post-trial motion; a judge whose husband worked for the police during a defendant's trial is not obliged to disqualify herself; 9-0.

State v. Blizzard, 195 Wn.App. 717, 724-29 (2016)

County prosecutor writes judge a letter claiming bias and prejudice against the state, criticizing the case at bar and others, stating state cannot get a fair trial, deputy assigned to case does not move for disqualification nor does defense except on appeal; held: appearance of fairness doctrine is waived if not raised before the trial court, Pers. Restraint of Swenson, 158 Wn.App. 812, 818 (2010), State v. Bolton, 23 Wn.App. 708, 714 (1979); due process violation may be raised for first time on appeal, Williams v. Pennsylvania, 579 U.S. 1, 136 S.Ct. 1899, 1909-10, 195 L.Ed.2d 132 (2016), requires an objective analysis; unconstitutional judicial bias must be based upon (1) judge having a financial interest in the outcome, (2) judge previously participated in the case in an investigative or prosecutorial capacity, (3) individual with a stake in the case had a disproportionate role in placing the judge on the case, Caperton v. A.T. Massey Coal Co., 556 U.S. 868, 881, 129 S.Ct. 2252, 173 L.Ed.2d 1208 (2009), and, possibly, when a judge is the recipient of personal criticisms that are highly offensive, Ungar v. Sarafite, 376 U.S. 575, 583, 84 S.Ct. 841, 11 L.Ed.2d 921 (1964); here the letter was professional, not personal; a rule requiring disqualification would enable the prosecutor to manipulate the judiciary; III.

State v. Solis-Diaz, 187 Wn.2d 535 (2017)

Court of Appeals reverses and remands for resentencing because trial judge did not adequately consider defendant's youth and mitigating circumstances, at resentencing judge criticizes Court of Appeals decision and imposes the same sentence, Court of Appeals remands again but declines to order that judge be disqualified; held: record suggests that sentencing judge had already reached a firm conclusion and might not be amenable to considering mitigating evidence, thus another judge must hear the resentencing; reverses, in part, State v. Solis-Diaz, 194 Wn.App. 129 (2016); per curiam.

Defense provides affidavits that spectators saw judge and jurors sleeping during part of the trial; held: sleeping judges and jurors is not structural error absent some evidence that demonstrate what testimony was missed, Pers. Restraint of Lui, 188 Wn.2d 525, 540-42 (2016); 9-0.

Rippo v. Baker, 137 S. Ct. 905, 197 L. Ed.2d 167 (2017)

At defendant's jury trial defense learns that judge is being investigated by the prosecutor for bribery, judge denies motion for disqualification; held: "the Due Process Clause may sometimes demand recusal even when a judge 'ha[s] no actual bias.' Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Lavoie, 475 U.S. 813, 825, 106 S.Ct. 1580, 89 L.Ed.2d 823 (1986). Recusal is required when, objectively speaking, 'the probability of actual bias on the part of the judge or decisionmaker is too high to be constitutionally tolerable.'" Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. 35, 47, 95 S.Ct. 1456, 43 L.Ed.2d 712 (1975); see Williams v. Pennsylvania, 579 U.S. ——,136 S.Ct. 1899, 1905, 195 L.Ed.2d 132 (2016)," Bracy v. Gramley, 520 U.S. 899, 117 S.Ct. 1793, 138 L.Ed.2d 97 (1997); per curiam.

State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 786-92 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018)

Trial judge admonishing defense counsel for unprofessional conduct in the absence of the jury does not violate appearance of fairness doctrine where defense counsel's conduct was unprofessional; I.

State v. Sinrud, 200 Wn.App. 643, 650-52 (2017)

In VUCSA possession with intent case court instructs jury "[m]ere possession of a controlled substance does not allow you to infer an intent to deliver a controlled substance. The law requires substantial corroborating evidence of intent to deliver in addition to the mere fact of possession. The law requires at least one additional corroborating factor," consistent with State v. Hagler, 74 Wn.App. 232, 236 (1994), defendant argues on appeal that it is a comment on the evidence; held: trial court should not instruct jury based upon an appellate court's sufficiency holding as the sufficiency standard on appeal ("any rational jury") is lower than beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 557-58 (2015), but see: State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019), thus instruction was a prejudicial judicial comment on the evidence; I.

State v. Agustin, 1 Wn.App.2d 911 (2018)

State moves to dismiss asserting that the evidence is insufficient, trial court denies motion, orders prosecutor to call witnesses and convicts; held: while the court has discretion to deny a state's motion to dismiss, CrR 8.3(a), see: State v. Haner, 95 Wn.2d 858 (1981), State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 130-32 (2012), a trial court may not deny a prosecutor's request to dismiss a charge the prosecutor believes is unsupported by sufficient evidence as it violates separation of powers doctrine, see: State v. Rice, 174 Wn.2d 884, 901-02 (2012), judge may only deny government's motion to dismiss when provided an "inappropriate reason;" III.

State v. Backemeyer, 5 Wn.App.2d 841 (2018)

During deliberations jury sends out questions which clearly establish that they did not understand the self defense instructions, defense counsel agrees with suggestion that court answer the questions with "read your instructions;" held: where a jury indicates that it does not understand a jury instruction, court must eliminate the confusion, . Bollenbach v. United States, 326 U.S. 607, 612-13, 66 S.Ct. 402, 90 L.Ed. 350 (1946), cf.: State v. Sutton, 18 Wn.App.2d 38 (2021), and counsel's failure to ask court to re-instruct to clear up the confusion is ineffective assistance; 2-1, III.

State v. Lemke, 7 Wn.App.2d 23 (2019)

Defendant flunks drug court, seeks DOSA, judge calls him, inter alia, "a fucking addict" and "just a criminal," denies DOSA; held: judge's manifestation of personal animosity toward a defendant is not something appellate court can write off as a byproduct of the informal and confrontational culture of drug court. A "fair trial in a fair tribunal is a basic requirement of due process," reversed and remanded for resentencing before a different judge; I.

State v. N.B., 7 Wn.App.2d 831 (2019)

During judge's decision at bench trial court states that it is not uncommon for child witnesses to testify inconsistently, defense claims court improperly took judicial notice; held: judge may explain her reasoning based upon her experience, State v. Grayson, 154 Wn.2d 333, 339 (2005),which is not judicial notice; III.

State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019)

In possessing stolen property case instructing jury that a credit card is an access device is not a comment on the evidence, distinguishing " State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 557 (2015). II.

State v. Mansour, 14 Wn.App.2d 323 (2020)

In child molestation case use of victim's initials in information and to convict instruction does not deprive defendant of due process, is not a comment on the evidence, and does not amount to a court closure; I.

State v. Bass, 18 Wn.App.2d 760 (2021)

Judge's answer to a juror's question during voir dire that the court would determine whether a witness had relevant information is not a comment on the evidence; I.

Pers. Restraint of Ayerst, 17 Wn.App.2d 356 (2021)

The fact that the judge who presided over petitioner's jury trial was subsequently charged with rape is not a basis, by itself, for reversal; III.

Vancouver v. Boldt, 21 Wn.App.2d 100 (2022)

Defense counsel can orally stipulate to a district court commissioner trying a case, RCW 3.42.020, cf.: State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 53 (1983), State v. Hastings, 115 Wn.2d 42 (1990); I.

JURY
Batson

Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986)

Prosecutor may not peremptorily challenge a juror solely on the basis of race, see: Johnson v. California, 162 L.Ed.2d 129 (2005), Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), *State v. Holland v. Illinois, 107 L.Ed.2d 905 (1990)

White defendant's Sixth Amendment right to impartial jury not violated by prosecutor's peremptory challenges to all black jurors, cf.: Powers v. Ohio, 113 L.Ed.2d 411 (1991); Sixth Amendment right to impartial jury does not assure that the jury will be representative, rather that the jury is drawn from a fair cross-section of the community, see: Berhhuis v. Smith, 559 U.S. 314, 176 L.Ed.2d 249 (2010); 7-2.

State v. Burch, 65 Wn.App. 828 (1992)

Male defendant may object to prosecutor's peremptory challenges to female jurors as violating equal protection, state ERA, CONST. art. 31, and court may require a gender-neutral explanation to uphold challenge, Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986), J.E.B. v. Alabama ex rel. TB., 128 L.Ed.2d 89 (1994), State v. Beliz, 104 Wn.App. 206, 213-14 (2001), *State v. Georgia v. McCollum, 120 L.Ed.2d 33 (1992)

Defendant's exercise of a racially discriminatory peremptory challenge is state action, prohibited by equal protection clause, prosecutor has standing to raise equal protection claim on behalf of excluded jurors, State v. Bennett, 180 Wn.App. 484 (2014); 7-2.

State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 458-60 (1993)

Prosecutor's claim that challenge was due to juror's "nervousness and evasiveness" is a sufficient neutral explanation of exercising a peremptory challenge, as they are related to demeanor, which was supported by the record, see: Purkett v. Elem, 131 L.Ed.2d 834 (1995), Snyder v. Louisiana, 170 L.Ed.2d 175 (2008), State v. Bennett, 180 Wn.App. 484 (2014), State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018), *State v. State v. Sanchez, 72 Wn.App. 821 (1994)

To establish a prima facie case of purposeful discrimination in selection of jury, defense must first show that the use of the peremptory challenge to a member of a cognizable group (race or sex) raises an inference of discrimination, which may include a pattern of strikes and the questions during voir dire, State v. Burch, 65 Wn.App. 828, 840 (1992), see: Johnson v. California, 162 L.Ed.2d 129 (2005), Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), after which prosecutor must come forward with a neutral explanation, whereupon trial court enters a finding of fact based upon credibility, Hernandez v. New York, 500 U.S. 352, 114 L.Ed.2d 395 (1991), State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010); where trial court finds that state's challenges were nondiscriminatory, there is no need to decide whether defendant had established a prima facie case, but see: State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018), cf.: State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022); III.

Prosecutor's explanations for excusing two black jurors because one had long unkempt hair and facial hair, and the other because he had facial hair and had had a gun pointed at him in a robbery were satisfactory nondiscriminatory reasons which supported the trial court's finding of a nondiscriminatory motive, see: State v. Bennett, 180 Wn.App. 484 (2014), but see: State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); accord: State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 699-701 (1995), State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022); 7-2.

State v. Wright, 78 Wn.App. 93 (1995)

Prosecutor exercises peremptory challenge on only African-American juror, who states during defense voir dire that blacks are unfairly targeted by police; prosecutor challenges two Hispanics, one of whom said he had a personal experience with police who lied, the other expressed negative impression of prosecution stemming from another case he had sat on; held: prosecutors had legitimate explanations for excusing the jurors, no prima facie case of purposeful discrimination was established, see: State v. Vreen, 143 Wn.2d 923 (2001), State v. Hicks, 163 Wn.2d 477, 489-94 (2008), State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010), State v. Meredith, 178 Wn.2d 180 (2013), State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022), but see: State v. Saintcalle, 178 Wn.2d 34 (2013), Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); absent court rules defining proper procedures for Batson challenges, they may be raised for the first time on appeal; I.

State v. Rhodes, 82 Wn.App. 192 (1996)

Sole black juror is excused by prosecutor over objection, juror stated on voir dire he had been improperly stopped by police but could be fair; held: where the sole member of a constitutionally cognizable racial group is challenged, trial court should, upon demand, ask prosecutor to articulate reason for challenge, State v. Wright, 78 Wn.App. 93, 101 (1995), State v. Beliz, 104 Wn.App. 206, 213 (2001), State v. Hicks, 163 Wn.2d 477, 489-94 (2008), State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010), Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), but see: State v. Powell, 55 Wn.App. 914 (1989), State v. Vreen, 143 Wn.2d 923 (2001); challenge to a juror who believes he was improperly stopped by police is a race-neutral explanation, cf.: State v. Saintcalle, 178 Wn.2d 34 (2013), State v. Meredith, 178 Wn.2d 180 (2013), but see: State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); I.

White defendant has standing to raise equal protection and due process objections to alleged discrimination against black grand jurors; 7-2.

State v. Evans, 100 Wn.App. 757 (2000)

Trial judge may raise a Batson issue sua sponte; trial court should not elicit a party's race-neutral explanation before determining whether opposing party has established a prima facie case that the challenge was based upon membership of a constitutionally cognizable group by a pattern of strikes against members of the group or the particular questions asked, State v. Wright 78 Wn.App. 93, 100-101 (1995), see: State v. Cook, 175 Wn.App. 36 (2013), but see: State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010), State v. Saintcalle, 178 Wn.2d 34 (2013), Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017); improper for trial court to require a race-neutral reason for every peremptory challenge to persons of color, see: State v. Meredith, 178 Wn.2d 180 (2013); I.

State v. Jorden, 103 Wn.App. 221, 229-30 (2000)

Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986), is inapplicable to challenges for cause; II.

Johnson v. California, 162 L.Ed.2d 129 (2005)

State standard that establishes a preponderance of the evidence burden on defense to establish prosecutor's discriminatory peremptory challenges is at odds with the prima facie inquiry mandated by Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986); 8-1.

State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 34-37 (2007)

Absent evidence of a systematic exclusion of members of defendant's own racial group from jury venire, Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69, 85-86 (1986), State v. Hilliard, 89 Wn.2d 430, 440 (1977), trial court is not obliged to provide defense with a copy of the master jury pool list, State v. Cienfuegos, 144 Wn.2d 222, 232 (2001), GR 18, GR 31; III.

State v. Hicks, 163 Wn.2d 477, 489-94 (2008)

State exercises peremptory challenge to sole remaining African-American juror, trial court finds prima facie case of discrimination, prosecutor states challenge is because juror has a masters in education, is a social worker and a relative had served time, court grants challenge finding explanation is race-neutral; held: trial court has discretion to demand a race-neutral explanation following challenge to a single minority juror, State v. Thomas, 166 Wn.2d 380, 395-98 (2009), see: State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010), Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), lack of questioning prior to dismissing a juror can be evidence that the removal is race-based, Miller-El v. Dretke, 162 L.Ed.2d 196 (2005); where there is a race-neutral explanation, appeals court need not determine whether a prima facie case was properly found, Hernandez v. New York, 500 U.S. 352, 359, 114 L.Ed.2d 395 (1991), State v. Bennett, 180 Wn.App. 484 (2014), cf.: State v. Meredith, 178 Wn.2d 180 (2013), but see: State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022); "dismissing teachers or social workers from jury service … are not race- or gender-based and thus constitutionally permitted," at 494 ¶ 40; 6-3.

Sole black juror expresses concern about all-white makeup of venire, trial judge upholds prosecutor's argument that the juror was hostile to state as a race-neutral reason; held: while a judge may, but need not, recognize a prima facie case on the basis of the state's strike of a lone juror of a constitutionally cognizable group, State v. Hicks, 163 Wn.2d 477, 489-94 (2008), but see: Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), the court's credibility ruling that the prosecutor's explanation is race-neutral eliminates the need to determine if the court properly found a prima facie case of discrimination, State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 699 (1995), State v. Cook, 175 Wn.App. 36 (2013), State v. Bennett, 180 Wn.App. 484 (2014), see: State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010), *State v. Thaler v. Haynes, 559 U.S. 43, 175 L.Ed.2d 1003 (2010)

Trial court need not observe a juror's demeanor to conclude that a prosecutor's explanation that juror's demeanor was "humorous" and "not serious" was a race-neutral explanation in denying a challenge pursuant to Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986); per curiam.

State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010)

"A prima facie case of discrimination is established under Batson when the sole remaining venire member of the defendant's constitutionally cognizable racial group or the last remaining minority member of the venire is peremptorily challenged," at 661 ¶ 27; trial court's determination that there was no discriminatory motive is upheld by five justices, but concurring opinion by fifth justice agrees with dissent on the bright line rule: "a defendant establishes a prima facie case of discrimination when, as here, the record shows that the state exercised a peremptory challenge against the sole remaining venire member of the defendant's constitutionally cognizable racial group," at 659 ¶ 23, but see: State v. Meredith, 178 Wn.2d 180 (2013), see: State v. Cook, 175 Wn.App. 36 (2013), State v. Saintcalle, 178 Wn.2d 34 (2013), Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); defendant's assertion of discriminatory peremptory challenge occurred after the last minority member was excused and jury panel was sworn, thus "had the trial court concluded that the prosecutor's peremptory challenge…was discriminatory…the trial court would be required to dismiss the entire jury, declare a mistrial," at 649 n. 1, State v. Hillman, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL16642464 (2022), but see: Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017).

Felkner v. Jackson, 562 U.S. 594, 179 L.Ed.2d 374 (2011)

State v. Saintcall*e*, 178 Wn.2d 34 (2013)

Lead opinion strongly suggests that it is abandoning Batson's purposeful discrimination requirement with a requirement that necessarily accounts for and alerts trial courts to the problem of unconscious bias and that a Batson challenge is to be sustained if there is a reasonable probability that race was a factor in the exercise of the peremptory or where the judge finds it is more likely than not that, but for defendant's race, the peremptory would not have been exercised, at 54, Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), but see: State v. Meredith, 178

Wn.2d 180 (2013), see: State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); 8-1 (three concurring opinions).

State v. Meredith, 178 Wn.2d 180 (2013)

Regarding Batson procedure, Supreme Court rejects apparent bright-line rule in State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645 (2010) which appeared to hold that a prima facie case of discrimination is established when the sole remaining member of defendant's racial group is peremptorily challenged, returning to prior rule that requires "something more than a peremptory challenge against a member of a racially cognizable group" as set forth in Rhone lead opinion, but see: Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017), State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); affirms State v. Meredith, 165 Wn.App. 704 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Cook, 175 Wn.App. 36 (2013)

State strikes one of two Black jurors, defense raises Batson challenge, state claims that Black defense counsel called juror "brother," and that juror stated he had been on a hung jury previously, record does not support claim that counsel called juror "brother" and that it was the other black juror who sat on a case unable to reach a unanimous verdict; held: reasons that are not legitimate because they are not supported by the record raise an inference that the remaining reasons are pretextual; a reason for challenging a juror may be deemed pretextual and not race-neutral if other unchallenged jurors made similar assertions; state's assertion that juror's statement that past conduct would not have a bearing on defendant's guilt is not valid as a race-neutral explanation as the statement is consistent with ER 404(b), 15 other jurors answered similarly of whom 5 were selected to serve; state's explanation that juror in question had said he had negative experiences with the police is belied by the fact that the juror also said he had positive experiences with the police and harbored no bias against police; while challenge to a single Black juror should require defense to set forth a prima facie case of purposeful discrimination, where state has proffered a race-neutral explanation and the trial court has ruled on the ultimate question of intentional discrimination, a prima facie showing is unnecessary, State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 699 (1995), Hernandez v. New York, 500 U.S. 352, 359, 114 L.Ed.2d 395 (1991), cf.: State v. Saintcalle, 178 Wn.2d 34 (2013), see: State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018), State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022); prior opinion, State v. Cook, 173 Wn.App. 166 (2013), withdrawn,; I.

State v. Bennett, 180 Wn.App. 484 (2014)

State raises Batson challenge to defense exercise of peremptory challenges to four Hispanic jurors, defense counsel offers reasons for striking, trial judge determines that two of the four were racially motivated and denies challenges; held: trial judge's decision on whether the "race-neutral explanations" are credible, like any other credibility determination, cannot be overturned by an appellate court, cf.: Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 339, 154 L.Ed.2d 931 (2003), State v. Thomas, 166 Wn.2d 380, 395-98 (2009) , Felkner v. Jackson, 562 U.S. 594, 179 L.Ed.2d 374 (2011); III.

Defense interposes Batson objections, court allows prosecutor to make "race neutral" explanations ex parte so as not to disclose prosecution strategy, explanations do not disclose strategy and court finds all seven peremptory challenges striking all black and Hispanics were race neutral; held: assuming that exclusion of defense counsel from hearing government's explanations for peremptory challenges was improper it was harmless error; 5-4.

Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017)

City exercises peremptory challenge to sole Black juror, after juror is excused defense raises Batson challenge, trial court denies challenge because there were Hispanics on the panel; held: "the peremptory strike of a juror who is the only member of a cognizable racial group on a jury panel constitutes a prima facie showing of racial motivation. The trial court must ask for a race-neutral reason from the striking party and then determine, based on the facts and surrounding circumstances, whether the strike was driven by racial animus;" the fact that there were other minorities on the panel does not defeat the court's duty to determine if the peremptory challenge was based upon a race-neutral reason, see: State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018), State v. Omar, 12 Wn.App.2d 747 (2020); challenge raised after the jury was empanelled but before any other motions were made or testimony heard is timely as court could declare a mistrial, but see: State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645, 649 n. 1 (2010), State v. Hillman, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL16642464 (2022); overrules, sub silentio., State v. Powell, 55 Wn.App. 914 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018)

Three-step Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986) analysis is modified: 1. defendant must establish a prima facie case of a discriminatory purpose to the peremptory challenge of a racially-cognizable juror and if the challenge is to the last such juror on the panel then the trial court must recognize a prima facie case of discriminatory purpose; 2. the burden shifts to the prosecution to provide a race-neutral reason for the challenge; 3. if there is a race-neutral explanation, the trial court must decide whether "an objective observer could view race or ethnicity as a factor in the use of the peremptory challenge," and, if so, then the peremptory strike shall be denied, see also: State v. Omar, 12 Wn.App.2d 747 (2020), State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022); reverses, in part, State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772 (2017); 6-3.

In determining the credibility of a lawyer's attempt to provide a race-neutral explanation for exercising a peremptory challenge, court can consider challenges to Black jurors in prior trials of the same defendant, disparate questioning, comparing prospective jurors who were struck and not struck; 7-2.

State v. Berhe, 193 Wn.2d 647 (2019)

Following conviction a juror approaches defense counsel and reports racial bias during deliberations, both sides contact jurors and obtain declarations, trial court denies evidentiary hearing and new trial; held: "once a claim of racial bias is raised, investigations into allegations of racial bias are conducted on the record and with the oversight of the court. It is far too easy for counsel, in their role as advocates, to taint the jurors and impede the fact-finding process," court must instruct counsel to have no contact with jurors unless on the record; court must supervise the process and conduct a "sufficient inquiry" to determine if there is a prima facie basis to hold an evidentiary hearing; no-impeachment rule does not apply in cases involving possible racial bias of jurors, Peña-Rodriguez v. Colorado, 137 S. Ct. 855, 197 L. Ed. 2d 107 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

In fractured opinion three justices suggest that excusing an African American juror because the juror is opposed to the death penalty is an improper race-based peremptory challenge.

State v. Omar, 12 Wn.App.2d 747 (2020)

"Apparently" Asian juror states, in robbery case, that she had been present during a robbery, defense exercises peremptory challenge, trial court sua sponte asks for race-neutral reason for challenge, defense counsel states he didn't feel comfortable with her answer, court denies challenge; held: articulated reasons by defense counsel address juror's demeanor which "has historically been associated with improper discrimination in juror selection," "nebulous" reasons for the challenge offered by defense may be indicative of unconscious bias, thus denial of challenge is affirmed; appellate court reviews Batson challenges de novo, State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225, 249-50 (2018); I.

State v. Listoe, 15 Wn.App.2d 308 (2020)

During voir dire prosecutor posits hypothetical that the law prohibits eating cookies, asks if anyone would have a problem convicting if there was overwhelming evidence that the accused ate a cookie, sole Black juror states he would have a problem convicting because of the law, prosecutor exercises peremptory challenge, defense objects, GR 37(e), trial court overrules and allows the peremptory challenge, finding that a race-neutral reason existed; held: juror's expression of distrust of the system and discomfort at the idea of convicting for a ridiculous law have historically been associated with discriminatory reasons for exclusion, an objective observer aware of implicit bias could conclude that race was a basis for exclusion, thus trial court erred in granting the peremptory challenge, State v. Orozco, --- Wn.App.2d ___, 496 P.3d 1215 (2021), State v. Tesfasilasye, ___ Wn.2d ___, 1001665 (2022); "we do not mean to suggest that the State, in exercising the challenge, acted with a discriminatory purpose or that the State acted with unconscious or implicit bias. Whereas the prior Batson formulation required the party contesting use of a preemptory challenge to prove such a discriminatory purpose, GR 37 represents a sweeping change that focuses instead on the perspective of an objective observer who is presumed to be aware that implicit, institutional, and unconscious bias, as well as purposeful discrimination, have all contributed to the unfair exclusion of jurors;" II.

State v. Orozco,___ Wn.App.2d ___, 496 P.3d 1215 (2021)

Prosecutor asks juror no questions, exercises peremptory, defense states that juror appears to be Black and the only person of color, objects, prosecutor states that he prosecuted the juror and she appears in police reports, court overrules Batson objection, on appeal state argues that there is insufficient evidence that the juror was Black; held: under GR 37, the record gives rise to a reasonable inference that an objective observer could have perceived the juror is a person of color, State v. Lahman, 17 Wn.App.2d 925, 935 n.6 (2021); striking the only member of a racially cognizable group establishes a prima facie case of discriminatory purpose, Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721, 734 (2017); while prosecuting a juror is race neutral, recognizing the juror from police reports fits into GR 37(h)(i), (iii) as prior contacts with police is historically associated with improper racial discrimination in jury selection, thus state failed to rebut the presumption that its challenge was not for a discriminatory purpose; a de novo review on appeal establishes that an objective observer could view race as a factor, thus reversed; III.

State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541 (2022)

While Batson applies to gender discrimination, State v. Beliz, 104 Wn.App. 206, 213-14 (2001), failing to raise the question of whether GR 37 and State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018) apply to gender discrimination is not ineffective assistance as it is a novel theory, thus Batson test applies; here, court's finding that state's gender-neutral explanations for peremptory challenges are affirmed; III.

State v. Booth, 22 Wn.App.2d (2022)

Where court erroneously grants a GR 37 motion made by the state, thereby causing a juror to be wrongfully empaneled over a defense peremptory challenge, absent proof of prejudice defendant is not entitled to a new trial, Pers. Restraint of Meredith, 191 Wn.2d 300 (2018), Rivera v. Illinois, 556 U.SW. 148, 160-62, 129 S.Ct. 1443, 173 L.Ed.2d 320 (2009), State v. Hillman, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 593 (2022), distinguishing State v. Vreen, 143 Wn.2d 923, 932 (2001); I.

State v. Lupastean, 200 Wn.2d 26 (2022)

During voir dire juror fails to disclose, in response to questions, that her husband was involved in a similar matter, mistrial denied; held: mistrial or new trial is not required solely because a juror's nondisclosure in voir dire prevented a party from intelligently exercising a peremptory challenge, effectively overruling State v. Simmons, 59 Wn.2d 381, 390-92 (1962), Robinson v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 113 Wn.2d 154, 1`60 (1989), rather the party seeking a new trial must show actual prejudice; 6-3.

State v. Tesfasilasye, 200 Wn.2d 345 (2022)

Peremptory challenge of an Asian juror who might be biased because her son had been treated unfairly by the criminal justice system is presumptively invalid, as an objective observer aware of implicit biases could view race as a factor; test is whether an objective observer could view race as a factor, not whether it would; appellate review is de novo, see: State v. Hillman, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 593 (2022); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Rhone, 23 Wn.App.2d 307 (2022)

Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017) and State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225, 230 (2018) changing the state's Batson inquiry to an "objective observer" standard are significant changes in the law, apply retroactively thus one-year time bar to PRP does not apply; 2-1, II.

State v. Hillman, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 593 (2022)

Defense counsel asks no questions of Black juror, exercises peremptory challenge after questioning was concluded, state objects, GR 37, defense argues juror seemed detached, not interested, court denies peremptory strike; held: reliance on juror demeanor has historically been associated with improper discrimination; because defense did not bring concerns to the attention of the court prior to the closing of questioning invalidated the purported justification for the strike, State v. Rhone, 168 Wn.2d 645, 649 n. 1 (2010), but see: Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017); as there is no constitutional right to a peremptory challenge, State v. Booth, 22 Wn.App.2d 565, 581-84 (2022), State v. Lupastean, 200 Wn.2d 26, 30-31, 47-53 (2022), "it appears unlikely that the erroneous denial of a peremptory challenge is a matter that can be remedied on review;" III.

Misconduct

State v. Cummings, 31 Wn.App. 427 (1982)

Following conviction, jurors submitted conflicting affidavits as to whether or not jurors knew that defendant had a criminal record; outlines law on jury misconduct; held: where jury considered matters not admitted into evidence, a new trial should be granted where there is reasonable ground to believe defendant may have been prejudiced, State v. Pete, 152 Wn.2d 546 (2004); where jury considered defendant's record not in evidence, doubt should be resolved in favor of defendant; remanded for hearing to determine whether in fact jury misconduct occurred; III.

State v. Wilmoth, 31 Wn.App. 820 (1982)

During trial, juror gives rape victim-complaining witness aspirin; held: harmless error; III.

State v. Booth, 36 Wn.App. 66 (1983)

During deliberations, bailiff informs jurors that defendant and an absconded co-defendant jumped bail together; defendant testified at trial that he did not know co-defendant; held: bailiff's statement was not innocuous or neutral, State v. Yonker, 133 Wn.App. 627 (2006), and there was a strong likelihood the statements prejudiced the verdict, thus reversed; II.

State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501 (1983)

Improper for court to replay tapes for jury during deliberations in absence of defendant, but see: State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 846-48 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), cf.: State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 96-102 (2013), harmless here; 9-0.

Rushen v. Spain, 78 L.Ed.2d 267 (1983)

During trial of Black Panther, a juror who, during voir dire, stated she did not associate the Black Panthers with violence, spoke with trial judge to advise that she remembered a childhood friend had been murdered by a Black Panther; trial judge made no record of this communication; Ninth Circuit reverses; Supreme Court holds harmless error analysis applies, reverses summarily; 7-2.

State v. Hall, 40 Wn.App. 162 (1985)

During trial, juror telephoned a relative three times and stated things did not look good for defendant but defendant had not yet testified, and defendant was black and victim was white; trial court found juror misconduct, but denied new trial; held: mere possibility of prejudice, thus trial court did not abuse its discretion; see: Gardner v. Malone, 60 Wn.2d 830, 846 (1962), State v. Crowell, 92 Wn.2d 143, 147 (1979); I.

Byerly v. Madsen, 41 Wn.App. 495 (1985)

Affidavits of jurors may be considered by the court on the issue of the fact of jury misconduct, but not on the prejudicial effect of the misconduct on the verdict; latter is for the trial court alone to determine; III.

State v. Hatley, 41 Wn.App. 789 (1985)

After conviction, trial court grants new trial based upon testimony of a juror's acquaintance to the effect that juror expressed an opinion as to defendant's guilt during trial; held: evidence concerning mental process of juror's, including their opinions and when they made up their minds, inheres in the verdict and is inadmissible, State v. Aker, 54 Wash. 342, 345-346 (1909), Hosner v. Olympia Shingle Co., 128 Wash. 152, 154-55 (1924), see: Warger v. Shauers, 574 U.S. 40, 190 L.Ed.2d 422 (2014), but see: Peña-Rodriguez v. Colorado, 137 S. Ct. 855, 197 L. Ed. 2d 107 (2017), State v. Berhe, 193 Wn.2d 647 (2019); even if juror had made up his mind before deliberations does not mean he was biased, Tate v. Rommel, 3 Wn.App. 933 (1970), State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); I.

United States v. Gagnon, 470 U.S. 522, 105 S.Ct.1482, 84 L.Ed.2d 486 (1985)

Juror becomes upset with defendant sketching jurors, judge holds in camera discussion with juror and one defense attorney, reassures juror that defendant's sketching was harmless; held: in camera discussion with a juror on a minor matter does not violate Fifth Amendment due process clause; failure of defense to object waives right to be present, Fed. R. Crim. Pro. 43; 6-2.

State v. Murphy, 44 Wn.App. 290 (1986)

During trial, juror solicits her daughter's opinion as to defendant's guilt, daughter states she believes defendant is guilty, trial court holds post-trial hearing during which it determines that misconduct occurred but initially juror voted to acquit, and did not disclose her conversation to other jurors; held: communications by jurors constitutes misconduct giving rise to a presumption of prejudice which state must overcome beyond a reasonable doubt, Remmer v. United States, 98 L.Ed. 654 (1954), harmless here; III.

Tanner v. United States, 97 L.Ed.2d 90 (1987)

Post-trial evidence from jurors regarding intoxication of jurors during the trial is inadmissible, Fed.R.Evid. 606(b), as intoxication is not an "outside influence;" 5-4.

Adkins v. Aluminum Company, 110 Wn.2d 128 (1988)

Bailiff provides jurors with a law dictionary; held: where jury misconduct can be demonstrated by objective proof without probing the jurors' mental processes, the effect the improper information may have had upon the jury is a question properly determined in the sound discretion of the trial court; if the trial court has any doubt about whether the misconduct affected verdict, it is obliged to grant a new trial, State v. Pete, 152 Wn.2d 546 (2004), see: State v. Fry, 153 Wn.App. 235 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Wall, 52 Wn.App. 665 (1988)

Trial court does not sequester jury, during trial publicity concerned evidence jury was not permitted to hear; held: test to evaluate whether error occurred in not sequestering jury is probability of prejudice (not actual prejudice); here, there is no indication jurors read the news articles in question, thus harmless; III.

State v. Carpenter, 52 Wn.App. 680 (1988)

Photocopies of exhibits with highlighting and prosecutor's notes are inadvertently sent to jury; held: in the absence of actual or probable prejudice, State v. Hicks, 41 Wn.App. 303, 312 (1985), State v. Lemieux, 75 Wn.2d 89, 91 (1968), State v. Rinkes, 70 Wn.2d 854, 862 (1967), verdict will not be vitiated, cf.: State v. Pete, 152 Wn.2d 546 (2004); fact that material was not marked as an exhibit is proper consideration alleviating taint; I.

State v. Jackman, 113 Wn.2d 772 (1989)

Affidavit from juror that the jury rushed to verdict so that a juror could go on vacation is inadmissible to prove misconduct because it asserts matters inhering in the verdict; affidavit from bailiff that she heard same from a juror is inadmissible hearsay; jurors' own motives for haste is not misconduct, as distinguished from cases where jurors suffer outside influences on decision making, State v. Crowell, 92 Wn.2d 143 (1979), State v. Boogard, 90 Wn.2d 733 (1978); affidavit from juror stating that prosecutor's misrepresentation of evidence during closing argument was relied upon by jury is inadmissible to establish effect of misstatement on the jury's deliberation, State v. Parker, 25 Wash. 405, 415 (1901); 9-0.

State v. Tigano, 63 Wn.App. 336 (1991)

One juror fails to respond to voir dire question asking whether anyone had heard about the case when she had previous knowledge; another juror violates court's order not to read about case while trial is in progress, learning that defendant had previously been tried to hung jury, mentions to other jurors what she read; held: information known by jurors, while misconduct, was not prejudicial as substance came out at trial; prior hung jury did not point to defendant's guilt, attorneys referred repeatedly to prior "hearing" in examining witnesses; correct response from juror during voir dire would not have supported a challenge for cause, McDonough Power Equip., Inc. v. Greenwood, 78 L.Ed.2d 663 (1984), State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44, 52 (1989), inability to utilize withheld information to exercise peremptory challenge is not prejudicial as a matter of law, State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865, 878 (1991), State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001), but see: State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007), State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147 (2018), *State v. United States v. Olano, 123 L.Ed.2d 508 (1993)

Presence of alternate jurors in jury room during deliberations is not error absent proof of prejudice; 6-3.

State v. Balisok, 123 Wn.2d 114 (1994)

Jurors' reenactment of struggle based upon testimony is not misconduct, State v. Everson, 166 Wash. 534 (1932), State v. Brown, 139 Wn.2d 20, 23-25 (1999), State v. Barker, 103 Wn.App. 893, 904 (2000); reverses State v. Balisok, 68 Wn.App. 277 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Jackson, 75 Wn.App. 537 (1994)

No juror answers affirmatively to the general question, "is there any juror that knows of any reason why s/he would not be able to try this case impartially," after conviction of black defendant, a juror files an affidavit that another juror expressed dismay at having to socialize with "coloreds"; defense moves for a new trial, denied; held: juror should have disclosed his feelings about African-Americans in voir dire, trial court should have held an evidentiary hearing to explore juror's bias and whether race played a role in deliberations; remanded for new trial due to time between trial and appeal (22 years), and because state did not request an evidentiary hearing as alternative relief (although defense objected to evidentiary hearing to trial court); 2-1; I.

State v. Kell, 101 Wn.App. 619 (2000)

Jurors use of cellular telephones during deliberations is not misconduct absent proof of prejudice; II.

State v. Jorden, 103 Wn.App. 221 (2000)

During trial with alternate juror who had not been identified, state moves to disqualify a juror for sleeping, at hearing state calls bailiff and a detective who was present in court who testify that juror is inattentive or sleeping, defense requests a hearing at which the juror can be questioned, court declines and excuses the juror; held: trial court has discretion to hear and resolve jury misconduct in a way that avoids tainting the juror, need not question or allow counsel to question the juror in question, State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 817-23 (2012), see: CrR 6.5, RCW 2.36.110, State v. Hughes, 106 Wn.2d 176, 204 (1986), distinguishing State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 461-62 (1993), State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 72 (1998); trial judge will inevitably act as both an observer and a decision maker, akin to deciding a challenge for cause, Ottis v. Stevenson-Carson Sch. Dist. No. 303, 61 Wn.App. 747, 753 (1991); II.

Breckenridge v. Valley Gen. Hosp., 150 Wn.2d 197 (2003)

In medical negligence case in which an issue is whether physician should have ordered a CT scan for report of a severe headache, juror in deliberations recounts his wife's migraines and that they never got a CT scan, trial court grants new trial for misconduct; held: a juror's personal life experience used to evaluate evidence presented at trial inheres in the verdict and is what jurors are expected to do during deliberations," at 204, thus new trial was abuse of discretion, see: Warger v. Shauers, 574 U.S. 40, 135 S.Ct. 521, 190 L.Ed.2d 422 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Tandecki, 120 Wn.App. 303 (2004), aff'd, on different grounds, 153 Wn.2d 842 (2005)

At attempt to elude trial, forensic engineer testifies to likely injuries from collision, during deliberations, jurors discuss personal experiences about accidents and spectrum of injuries; held: no juror withheld information during voir dire, being in accidents is within common experience of jurors, no juror introduced some undisclosed and highly specialized information regarding car accidents, no misconduct occurred, see: State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007), distinguishing State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44 (1989); I.

During deliberations, two jurors send out notes alleging that a third juror refused to follow instructions and disregarded every witness, trial judge inquires of all three jurors, accused juror says that it's a credibility dispute, judge dismisses juror and substitutes alternate; held: court should not inquire into a juror's mental processes; where there is a reasonable possibility that the impetus for a juror's dismissal stems from his views on the merits of the case, dismissal is error, State v. Johnson, 125 Wn.App. 443, 456-61 (2005), State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106 (2014), distinguishing State v. Jorden, 103 Wn.App. 221 (2000), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018), cf.:State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 817-23 (2012); trial court should only apply "reasonable possibility" standard where a juror is accused of engaging in nullification, refusing to deliberate or refusing to follow the law, see: State v. Depaz, 165 Wn.2d 842 (2009), State v. Hopkins, 156 Wn.App. 468 (2010), State v. Gaines, 194 Wn.App. 892 (2016); affirms State v. Elmore, 121 Wn.App. 747 (2004); 8-1.

State v. Boling*, 131 Wn.App. 329 (2006)

In manslaughter case, juror does independent internet research on cause of death, trial court grants new trial; held: trial court's inability to rule out juror's misconduct impacting verdict establishes a proper exercise of discretion in granting new trial;, see: State v. Arndt, 5 Wn.App.2d 341 (2018); III.

State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007)

During rape case voir dire, jurors are asked if they or family members had a similar experience, 8 jurors say yes and were questioned individually, one juror who does not respond is seated and, during deliberations, discloses that her daughter had been a rape victim, motion for new trial is denied; held: nondisclosure during voir dire and injection of undisclosed information into deliberations is so prejudicial such that denial of new trial was an abuse of discretion, State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44, 53 (1989), State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147 (2018), see: State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001), State v. Arndt, 5 Wn.App.2d 341 (2018); distinguishing McDonough Power Equip., Inc. v. Greenwood, 78 L.Ed.2d 663 (1984); II.

State v. Earl, 142 Wn.App. 768 (2008)

A personal, derogatory remark between jurors during a deliberation break is not juror misconduct if it does not involve the substance of the jury's deliberations; II.

State v. Applegate, 147 Wn.App. 166, 175-76 (2008)

During trial, one juror reports that he heard two other jurors express surprise that defendant did not plead guilty and speculate about cost of trial, court interviews the jurors, finds that conversation did not occur, instructs jurors to presume defendant innocent, also finds that if conversation did occur, instruction remedies harm; held: trial court determines credibility, decision was not an abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Depaz, 165 Wn.2d 842 (2009)

During deliberations, jurors report that juror 3 was overheard telling someone on telephone that the evidence was circumstantial and she was being badgered, juror 3 tells court that she did tell her husband that she was in the minority, her husband told her to stick to her guns, does not recall referring to circumstantial evidence, court declines to replace juror 3; jury later reports that it is hung, trial court reconsiders and replaces juror 3, jury convicts; held: while communication by a juror is misconduct, where trial court has knowledge of the substantive opinion of the juror, the court may replace the juror only if the court finds that the juror's misconduct is prejudicial, which may not be presumed, State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171, 213-19 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016); prejudice can be found only where the court determines that the misconduct has affected the juror's ability to deliberate, see:

State v. Elmore, 155 Wn.2d 758 (2005), State v. Hopkins, 156 Wn.App. 468 (2010), State v. Gaines, 194 Wn.App. 892 (2016), RCW 2.36.110; here, the misconduct could not reasonably have altered the juror's formulated opinion of the case, thus it was an abuse of discretion to replace the juror, State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106 (2014), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Fry, 153 Wn.App. 235 (2009)

Following conviction, trial judge finds that a juror consulted a dictionary to look up the word "substantial," that the definition "had a little bit to do" with her verdict, and that she did not share the definition with other jurors, concludes juror's conduct did not influence verdict and denies new trial; held: trial court's determination that use of a dictionary did not affect the verdict was based upon tenable grounds, determination of credibility rests with trial court, State v. Arndt, 5 Wn.App.2d 341 (2018), cf.: Adkins v. Aluminum Company, 110 Wn.2d 128 (1988); III.

Kuhn v. Schnall, 155 Wn.App. 560 (2010)

"When jurors introduce extrinsic evidence into deliberations, the verdict cannot stand unless the trial court is satisfied the evidence had no effect upon the verdict. If the court has any doubt, it must order a new trial," at 573 ¶ 38, Halverson v. Anderson, 82 Wn.2d 746, 749-50 (1973); I.

State v. Hopkins, 156 Wn.App. 468 (2010)

During deliberations, jury submits a note stating that one of the jurors feels unable to continue because of being too emotional, cannot be fair, court consults with counsel, interviews presiding juror and juror in question who says she cannot be fair to both sides, court dismisses juror over objection, calls in alternate and orders jury to begin anew; held: where a juror is alleged to be committing misconduct or nullification, trial court may not excuse the juror if there is any reasonable possibility that the juror's views stem from an evaluation of the evidence, State v. Elmore, 155 Wn.2d 758, 778 (2005), State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106 (2014), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018), but here, there was only speculation that juror's decision that she could not be fair was related in any way to the evidence, thus trial court's decision to excuse was not an abuse of discretion, see: State v. Depaz, 165 Wn.2d 842 (2009); 2-1, II.

Pers. Restraint of Crace, 157 Wn.App. 81 (2010), rev'd, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 835 (2012);

Before voir dire, juror observes defendant in hall in shackles, is not asked about it during voir dire, does not volunteer information, after conviction writes a newspaper article describing what she saw; held: a juror is not required to volunteer information, State v. Gilmore, 59 Wn.2d 514, 515-16 (1962); 2-1, II.

State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 817-23 (2012)

During trial, before deliberations, jurors report that another juror repeated that she would do anything to get off the jury, appeared to be writing letters rather than taking notes, removed notes from notepad, appeared to be sleeping, over course of trial court changes jurors' seating, discusses issue with jurors and counsel, inquires of the juror in question who denies misconduct, court excuses juror over objection; held: when determining whether circumstances establish juror misconduct, trial court need not follow any specific format, court acts as both observer and decision maker, State v. Jorden, 103 Wn.App. 221, 226-29 (2000), here court made every effort to resolve issues by means of seating adjustments, oral admonishments, carefully questioned jurors without use of leading questions and allowed counsel to inquire, court properly exercised discretion; I.

State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 481-82 (2012)

Jurors report that other jurors had discussed a witness' demeanor and attitude before deliberations, trial court interviews the jurors "privately" and finds they could continue to listen fairly and impartially; dicta: when jurors have been found to have violated their oath, correct inquiry is not whether the jurors can fairly weigh the evidence but whether the jurors are able to adhere to their oath in the future, CrR 6.6; II.

State v. Morfin, 171 Wn.App. 1 (2012)

During deliberations, presiding juror reports that another juror is no longer interested in voting or the process, refuses to deliberate, says "he's made up his mind," did not refuse to vote but won't speak, court declines to remove juror; held: if there is "any reasonable possibility" that an allegation against a juror is the result of the accused juror's views on the sufficiency of the evidence, court may not dismiss the juror, State v. Elmore, 155 Wn.2d 758 (2005), State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106 (2014), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018), when allegation is made, first step for trial court is to reinstruct the jury; if reinstruction fails to remedy the problem, further inquiry should remain as limited in scope as possible to protect secrecy and court should stop inquiring once it is satisfied that the juror is participating and does not intend to ignore the law; here, had trial court excused the juror without inquiring of the juror, there may have been error, but since trial court found that the accusation lacked merit, then there was no error; III.

FRE 606(b) precludes a court from considering an affidavit of a juror stating that, based upon statements made by another juror during deliberations, the juror lied during voir dire, but see: Peña-Rodriguez v. Colorado, 580 U.S. 206, 137 S.Ct.855, 197 L.Ed.2d 107 (2017), cf.: ER 606, State v. Berhe, 193 Wn.2d 647 (2019); 9-0.

State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171, 213-19 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016)

As jury reports that it has reached a verdict bailiff discloses Twitter printout showing a juror tweeted complaints about the police and possibly suggesting the jury split at some point, neither defense counsel ask to interview juror but, after verdict, move for new trial; held: juror committed misconduct by communicating with a third party about the case, State v. Depaz, 165 Wn.2d 842, 859 (2009), but juror's negative attitudes about the justice system, length of jury service and lawyers did not necessitate a court inquiry, thus trial court did not abuse discretion in not sua sponte inquiring; III.

State v. Gaines, 194 Wn.App. 892 (2016)

During deliberations juror sends a note to court reporting that juror no. 2 said that he read that defendant had prior convictions, court inquires of jurors who state that they recognized the problem immediately and disregarded, court excuses juror no. 2, replaces with alternate and orders jury to recommence deliberations; held: while in a post-verdict motion where extrinsic evidence inheres in the verdict court must make an objective inquiry, asking whether the evidence could have affected the verdict, State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862, 870 (2007), Breckenridge v. Valley Gen. Hosp., 150 Wn.2d 197, 204 (2003), see: Peña-Rodriguez v. Colorado, 137 S. Ct. 855, 197 L. Ed. 2d 107 (2017), State v. Arndt, 5 Wn.App.2d 341 (2018), court may inquire, before jury reaches a verdict, whether jurors may subjectively disregard extrinsic information as there is no verdict to impeach; II.

Pers. Restraint of Lui, 188 Wn.2d 525, 567-69 (2016)

Witness testifies about the existence of a mall, during deliberations one juror claims she knows the mall had not been constructed at the time, declaration of another juror says that the jury considered this statement; held: testimony about a witness' credibility inheres in the verdict, Breckenridge v. Valley Gen. Hosp., 150 Wn.2d 197 (2003); 7-2.

Peña-Rodriguez v. Colorado, 137 S. Ct. 855, 197 L. Ed. 2d 107 (2017)

After conviction at sexual assault trial two jurors inform defense counsel that a third juror expressed belief during deliberations that Mexicans are physically controlling of women, they take whatever they want and that a defense witness was not credible because he was "an illegal," state courts deny new trial because the statements inhere in the verdict and the "no impeachment" rule, Tanner v. United States, 483 U.S. 107, 107 S.Ct. 2739, 97 L.Ed.2d 90 (1987); Warger v. Shauers, 574 U.S. ——, 135 S.Ct. 521, 190 L.Ed.2d 422 (2014); held: "where a juror makes a clear statement that indicates he or she relied on racial stereotypes or animus to convict a criminal defendant, the Sixth Amendment requires that the no-impeachment rule give way in order to permit the trial court to consider the evidence of the juror's statement and any resulting denial of the jury trial guarantee," State v. Berhe, 193 Wn.2d 647 (2019); 5-4.

State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 792-97 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018)

During trial a juror informs court that after the prior day's session she observed people who were in the gallery watching her and other jurors as they were getting into their cars and that it was "nerve wracking," court inquires of that juror and others who stated that they saw the same thing but were not in fear, court excuses first juror, denies mistrial; held: denial of mistrial was not manifestly unreasonable following a full hearing on the issue; I.

State v. St. Peter, 1 Wn.App.2d 961 (2017)

Speculation that a juror may not have been in the jury room during some of deliberations is insufficient to warrant review, RAP 2.5(a); trial court need not instruct that all jurors must be present during deliberations; III.

State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147 (2018)

During trial juror reports that he was a witness to some of the events testified to in court, trial judge declines to discharge or question juror; held: trial court was at least required to question the juror to determine if there is actual bias, State v. Stentz, 30 Wn. 134 (1902), abrogated on other grounds by State v. Fire, 145 Wn.2d 152 (2001), actual bias of a juror is structural error, but see: State v. Tigano, 63 Wn.App. 336 (1991); 2-1, III.

State v. Arndt, 5 Wn.App.2d 341 (2018)

Months after murder 1° trial a juror reports that she used the internet to search for the word "premeditation," at a hearing juror testifies that she learned that one of the definitions was that premeditation could be "short," did not remember sites she looked at, trial judge denies new trial, finding that the juror's research, while misconduct, was consistent with the jury instruction defining premeditation; held: while prejudice following jury misconduct is presumed, State v. Boling, 131 Wn.App. 329, 332-33 (2006), "[a] strong, affirmative showing of misconduct is necessary in order to overcome the policy favoring stable and certain verdicts and the secret, frank and free discussion of the evidence by the jury," State v. Balisok, 123 Wn.2d 114, 117-18 (1994), "great deference is due to the trial court's determination that no prejudice occurred, [but] greater deference is owed to a decision to grant a new trial than a decision not to grant a new trial." State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862, 871 (2007), trial court's decision here was not an abuse of discretion, State v. Fry, 153 Wn.App. 235, 238 (2009); 2-1, II.

State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020)

During deliberations juror 2 leaves jury room, tells bailiff other jurors are hectoring him and he wants to be excused, then has a heart attack and is excused; before deliberations another juror told jurors that defendant is guilty and "I hope they fry" defendant; held: juror 2 was not excused because of the evidence, trial court's decision to excuse juror was not an abuse of discretion, fact that bailiff did not ask juror to write out his issue, CrR 6.15(f)(1), does not mandate reversal; conversation with bailiff in absence of defendant was not a violation of open courts doctrine or defendant's right to be present as there was no other way it could have been handled, distinguishing State v. Tinh Trinh Lam, 161 Wn.App. 299 (2011); "[T]he mere revealing of an opinion, as to the ultimate outcome of a trial by an otherwise unbiased juror, before submission of the case to the jury, based upon evidence properly received, while not to be condoned, does not, standing alone, constitute such misconduct as to justify the granting of a new trial," Tate v. Rommel, 3 Wn.App. 933, 937-38 (1970), State v. Hatley, 41 Wn.App. 789, 794 (1985); I.

Juror reports that another juror during deliberations said that karma should come back at the reporting juror and that someone should do that to me and that the other juror hopes that he is the next person that happens to if he doesn't agree, court finds a deadlock on one count, jurors convict on other counts; held: while the alleged threats did not inhere to the verdict as it did not probe in the jurors' mental process, a mere derogatory remark that does not involve the substance of the jury's deliberation is not misconduct, State v. Earl, 142 Wn.App. 768 (2008); trial court properly exercised discretion in not conducting further inquiry, State v. Elmore, 155 Wn.2d 758, 773-75 (2004); II.

JURY
Other

State v. Brown, 29 Wn.App. 11 (1981)

Defendant need not be present when court gives jury additional instructions as long as counsel is present; I.

State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981)

Sequestering jury is necessary only upon a showing of probability of prejudice; individual voir dire is not necessary when news coverage was predominantly factual and nonsensational; I.

Seattle v. Filson, 98 Wn.2d 66 (1982)

Six-person jury approved for courts of limited jurisdiction; 9-0.

Pasco v. Mace, 98 Wn.2d 87 (1982)

Defendants charged with jailable misdemeanors are entitled to jury trials; 9-0.

State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501 (1983)

Improper for court to replay tapes for jury during deliberations in absence of defendant, but see: State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 846-48 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), harmless here; 9-0.

United States v. Gagnon, 84 L.Ed.2d 486 (1985)

Juror becomes upset with defendant sketching jurors; judge holds in camera discussion with juror and one defense attorney, reassures juror that defendant's sketching was harmless; held: in camera discussion with a juror on a minor matter does not violate Fifth Amendment due process clause; failure of defense to object waives right to be present, Fed. R. Crim. Pro. 43; 6-2.

State v. Standifer, 48 Wn.App. 121 (1987)

A juror's letter to the judge stating that she changed her mind after conviction is not grounds for a new trial; I.

State v. Pockert, 49 Wn.App. 859 (1987)

Failure to poll jury following conviction, CrR 6.16(a)(3), is reversible error, cf.: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 199-200 (2001), prejudice need not be shown; III.

State v. Wall, 52 Wn.App. 665 (1988)

Trial court does not sequester jury, during trial publicity concerned evidence jury was not permitted to hear; held: test to evaluate whether error occurred in not sequestering jury is probability of prejudice (not actual prejudice); here, there is no indication jurors read the news articles in question, thus harmless; III.

Blanton v. North Las Vegas, 103 L.Ed.2d 550 (1989)

United States constitution does not mandate jury trial for an offense which has a maximum penalty of six months in jail plus mandatory license suspension; see also: Lewis v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 590 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131 (1991)

Thirteen-year old tried as an adult is not entitled to have 13-year old jurors, Carter v. Jury Comm'n, 24 L.Ed.2d 549, 559 (1970); II.

State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991)

Trial court may deny discovery of jurors' prior verdicts; 9-0.

State v. Rodriquez, 61 Wn.App. 391 (1991)

After impanelment, juror reports his sister died in Germany, wanted to go to funeral, defense counsel "suggested a recess" but said his client wanted to get trial over with, rejected impaneling new juror or trial by 11, trial court declares mistrial; held: absent bad faith of judge or prosecutor, judge's finding of manifest necessity should be accorded deference where, as here, defense rejected alternatives; juror's need to go to Germany was an extraordinary and striking circumstance; III.

State v. Brinkley, 66 Wn.App. 844 (1992)

A juror's question to a witness should be in writing, submitted to counsel in the jury's absence so that objections can be taken, see: WPIC 4.66, State v. Monroe, 65 Wn.App. 245, 253 (1992); trial court has discretion to allow state to reopen after defense has rested to address a juror's question, see: Estes v. Hopp, 73 Wn.2d 263, 264-5 (1968), Seattle v. Heath, 10 Wn.App. 949 (1973), State v. Vickers, 18 Wn.App. 111, 113 (1977), State v. Johnson, 1 Wn.App. 602 (1969), see also: State v. Muñoz, 67 Wn.App. 533 (1992); I.

Seattle v. Lewis, 70 Wn.App. 715 (1993)

Obstructing a public officer ordinance which requires the judge to determine lawfulness of officer's action does not violate state constitutional right to a jury trial; I.

State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 614-6 (1995)

Where trial court erroneously allows an alternate juror to deliberate, with both parties' agreement, no constitutional error occurs, issue may not be raised for first time on appeal; 9-0.

State v. Hobble, 126 Wn.2d 283, 297-303 (1995)

Contemner held in summary or direct contempt in the presence of the court, RCW 7.21.050(1), for refusing to testify over an order to do so is not entitled to a jury trial under United States or state constitutions; 7-2.

Lewis v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 590 (1996)

In federal court, multiple offenses which could result in an aggregate penalty greater than six months does not entitle defendant to jury trial, Blanton v. North Las Vegas, 103 L.Ed.2d 550 (1989), Duncan v. Louisiana, 20 L.Ed.2d 491 (1968); 7-2.

State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 72-3 (1998)

During deliberations, one juror calls bailiff from home to say she was too nervous to continue, judge denies mistrial and substitutes alternate, directing jurors to recommence deliberation anew, CrR 6.5; held: while preferred method would have been to voir dire the juror in question and allow additional voir dire of the alternate, no error here; III.

State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 866-68 (1999)

Trial court's order prohibiting attorneys from initiating contact with jurors after trial to protect jurors' privacy interests is proper, State v. Blazina, 174 Wn.App. 906 (2013), remanded, on different grounds, 182 Wn.2d 827 (2015); 7-2.

State v. Twyman, 143 Wn.2d 115 (2001)

District court need not summon jurors from the county as a whole, and may summon jurors from zip codes which permit empanelling some jurors from within the county but outside the division of the court, see: Tukwila v. Garrett, 165 Wn.2d 152 (2008), cf.: Bothell v. Barnhart, 172 Wn.2d 223 (2011); affirms State v. Twyman, 98 Wn.App. 508 (1999).

State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 199-200 (2001)

To poll jury, where judge asks jurors if anyone disagrees with verdicts signed by foreperson and goes through each verdict separately, asking jurors as a group if the verdict is unanimous and whether any juror disagrees or dissents, requirements of CrR 6.16(a)(3) are met; III.

State v. Monroe, 107 Wn.App. 637 (2001)

Jury asks to see transcript of two witness' testimony, trial court allowed jurors to view one witness' transcript in courtroom, declined to provide the other; held: while trial court has broad discretion to respond to a jury's request to view testimony during deliberations, State v. Koontz, 102 Wn.App. 309 (2000), see: State v. Morgensen, 148 Wn.App. 81, 86-90 (2008), it is error if court does not undertake measures to ensure jury does not improperly evaluate the testimony; here, trial court allowed jury to place undue emphasis on the testimony of one witness; I.

State v. Koontz, 145 Wn.2d 650 (2002)

During deliberations, jury reports that it is deadlocked, upon further inquiry from trial court, foreperson advises that jurors who are doubtful of guilt lack enough information, requests that videotaped testimony be replayed; over objection, trial court allows jury to view three witnesses' testimony, instructs that jury should not place undue emphasis on the testimony of those three witnesses; held: video record which moves between different trial participants provides a different view of the trial and increases the likelihood it will be given undue emphasis; determination to play back should balance need to provide relevant portions of testimony to answer a specific jury inquiry against danger of allowing witness to testify a second time; "it is seldom proper to replay the entire testimony of a witness," at 657 but see: State v. Morgensen, 148 Wn.App. 81, 86-90 (2008); in spite of trial court's precautions, abuse of discretion to replay here; reverses State v. Koontz, 102 Wn.App. 309 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Oakley, 117 Wn.App. 730 (2003)

State has the right to a jury trial in district court, RCW 3.66.010, 10.04.050, even over defendant's objection and waiver, CrRLJ 6.1.1; defendant does not have a constitutional right to a bench trial, Singer v. United States, 13 L.Ed.2d 630 (1965), State v. Jones, 70 Wn.2d 591, 594 (1967), State v. Maloney, 78 Wn.2d 922, 927 (1971), State v. Thompson, 88 Wn.2d 13 (1977), State v. Rupe, 108 Wn.2d 734, 753-54 (1987), State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489, 500-01 (2011); I.

State v. Morgensen, 148 Wn.App. 81, 86-90 (2008)

During deliberations, jury requests transcript of witnesses' testimony, trial court consults with counsel, decides to play audiotape of testimony (35 minutes for all witnesses), instructs jurors that demeanor cannot be available for them during playing of audiotape, orders counsel not to react during process; held: with procedural precautions, State v. Koontz, 145 Wn.2d 650, 655-57 (2002), State v. Monroe, 107 Wn.App. 637 (2001), trial court properly exercised discretion to play audiotape as opposed to showing jury videotape, Koontz, supra.; 2-1, II.

Tukwila v. Garrett, 165 Wn.2d 152 (2008)

RCW 2.36.052 (1998) which allows a court of limited jurisdiction and a superior court to agree that superior court may issue summonses for the lower court and include jurors who do not live in the city does not deprive a defendant of his right to a proper jury pool, see: Bothell v. Barnhart, 172 Wn.2d 223 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Lanciloti, 165 Wn.2d 661 (2009)

RCW 2.36.055 (2005), which allows counties with two superior court facilities to divide the county jury assignment area, does not violate the constitutional guarantee to a jury of the county, CONST. art. I, § 22; 9-0.

Bothell v. Barnhart, 172 Wn.2d 223 (2011)

A city located in two counties may only use jurors from the county where the crime is alleged to have occurred, CONST. art. I, § 22, distinguishing Tukwila v. Garrett, 165 Wn.2d 152 (2008), State v. Lanciloti, 165 Wn.2d 661 (2009); affirms Bothell v. Barnhart, 156 Wn.App. 531 (2010); I.

State v. Campbell, 163 Wn.App. 394, 401-02 (2011)

Where a jury's question to the court indicates an erroneous understanding of the applicable law, it is incumbent upon the court to issue a corrective instruction, State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757, 764 (1984), State v. Sanjurjo-Bloom, 16 Wn.App.2d 120 (2021); 2-1, II.

State v. Blazina, 174 Wn.App. 906 (2013), remanded, on different grounds, 182 Wn.2d 827 (2015)

After verdict, jurors tell counsel that they believed defendant's witnesses lied and thus he must have been guilty, defense demands disclosure of juror information to investigate misconduct, denied by trial court; held: juror information, other than name, is presumed private, GR 31(j), trial court may allow access to juror information upon showing of good cause, here jury's assessment of credibility is solely its province and inhere in the verdict, sound reasons support trial court's denial; II.

State v. Booth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 196 (2022)

Before deliberations juror calls court to report she is ill, judge excuses the juror in defendant's absence without conferring with counsel; held: where alternate jurors remain the pre-deliberation ex parte dismissal of a seated juror who has become unable to perform her duties is not a critical state under defendant's right to counsel or right to be present, State v. Jordan, 103 Wn.App. 221, 227 (2000), see: State v. Turpin, 190 Wn.App. 815, 821 (2015), distinguishing State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 463 (1993), State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 613 (1988); I.

Defense, using a 2015 study, shows that a study from three years prior to trial Blacks in the county represented 5.6% of the population but only 3.61% of jury pool, demands a jury drawn from a "fair cross-section of the community;" held: [t]o establish a prima facie case of a violation of the right to a fair cross-section, a defendant must establish "(1) that the group alleged to be excluded is a 'distinctive' group in the community; (2) that the representation of this group in venires from which juries are selected is not fair and reasonable in relation to the number of such persons in the community; and (3) that this underrepresentation is due to system exclusion of the group in the jury-selection process." State v. Cienfuegos, 144 Wn.2d 222, 230-32 (2001); held: defense failed to show that representation of Black persons is not fair and reasonable in relation to the number in the community, Duren v. Missouri, 439 U.S. 357, 364, 99 S. Ct. 664, 668, 58 L. Ed. 2d 579 (1979), nor that underrepresentation is systemic, Cienfuegos, supra., at 231-32, Duren, supra., at 439 U.S. at 364; I.

JURY
Verdict and Deliberations

State v. Fisch, 22 Wn.App. 381 (1979)

Juror became ill after unanimity reached, but before verdict announced; conviction affirmed; III.

State v. Bellingham Municipal Court, 26 Wn.App. 144 (1980)

Discharge of jury based solely upon length of deliberations operates as an acquittal; I.

State v. Duhaime, 29 Wn.App. 842 (1981)

After deliberation began, court responded to several questions from the jury, held proper as long as the supplemental instructions or answers to jurors' interrogatories were correct, State v. Frandsen, 176 Wash. 558, 563 (1934), State v. Campbell, 163 Wn.App. 394 (2011); once verdict is received and filed a juror cannot change his/her mind, even if jury had not been discharged, Beglinger v. Shield, 164 Wash. 147 (1931); I.

State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159 (1982)

Judge inquires of a jury whether there is any possibility of reaching a verdict by 1:30 am, having deliberated since 11:10 am the previous day; jury reports there is no possibility, court declares a mistrial; held: "extraordinary and striking circumstances" must exist before a judge can declare a hung jury; jury's acknowledgement of a hopeless deadlock meets test; here, court's inquiries were insufficient to establish that jury was genuinely deadlocked, thus mistrial was improperly declared, and retrial is prohibited by double jeopardy clause; see: State v. Kirk, 64 Wn.App. 788 (1992), State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 656-8 (1997), State v. Fish, 99 Wn.App. 86, 90-92 (1999), State v. Strine, 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Hoff, 31 Wn.App. 809 (1982)

Illness of a juror which may have weakened his/her resolve inheres in the verdict and may not be used to impeach the verdict, State v. Reynoldson, 168 Wn.App. 543 (2012); II.

State v. Dykstra, 33 Wn.App. 648 (1983)

After 13 ½ hours of deliberation, an indication from foreman that no progress had been made in two-and-one-half hours, and other factors indicating a breakdown in deliberation, court declares mistrial over objection; held: test of "extraordinary and striking" circumstances which indicate substantial justice cannot be obtained without declaring a mistrial was met, State v. Fish, 99 Wn.App. 86, 90-92 (1999), State v. Strine, 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013); II.

State v. Simmons, 35 Wn.App. 421 (1983)

Jury renders a guilty verdict but adds a note which appears to contradict the general verdict; held: if such a finding is susceptible of two constructions, one which supports the general verdict and one which does not, the court must adopt the construction which supports the general verdict, see: State v. Peerson, 62 Wn.App. 755 (1991), State v. McNeal, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002); I.

State v. Watkins, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983)

Where a jury is potentially deadlocked, court may give supplemental instructions as long as they do not suggest the need for agreement, the consequences of no agreement or the length of time a jury will be required to deliberate, CrR 6.15(f)(2); here, Supreme Court approved trial court giving supplemental instruction, after jury reported deadlock, that it need not be unanimous on greater offense before considering lesser included offense; 9-0.

State v. Culver, 36 Wn.App. 524 (1984)

Jury convicts defendant of theft, acquits of conspiracy to commit same theft; held: elements and proof of each crime were not the same, thus verdicts are not inconsistent, State v. Fairfax, 42 Wn.2d 777 (1953), State v. O'Neil, 24 Wn.2d 802, 809 (1946), State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 45-48 (1988), State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 122, 131-35 (2002); I.

United States v. Powell, 83 L.Ed.2d 461 (1984)

Defendant convicted on one count cannot attack that conviction because it was inconsistent with the verdict of acquittal on another count; accord: State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32 (1988), overruling State v. O'Neil, 24 Wn.2d 802 (1946), State v. Goins, 151 Wn.2d 728; 9-0. ,

State v. Jury, 109 Wn.2d 438 (1987)

Jury reports that it has reached a verdict, and returns verdict forms indicating acquittal on greater, conviction on lessers; when court polls jury, two jurors state they did not agree with acquittal on greater; foreperson states that there is no reasonable possibility jury could be unanimous on greater charge, but other jurors disagree; trial court returns jurors to deliberate, who later convict of greater; held: within trial court's discretion to require further deliberations; "jury's own assessment that it is deadlocked, while helpful, is not itself sufficient grounds for declaring a mistrial"; 5-4.

State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991)

Trial court may deny discovery of jurors' prior verdicts; 9-0.

State v. Peerson, 62 Wn.App. 755 (1991)

Special verdict is not so inconsistent with general verdict to require reversal as long as they can be reconciled without doing violence to logic, i.e., special finding will not control general verdict unless it is so irreconcilably inconsistent that it cannot otherwise be interpreted, State v. Robinson, 84 Wn.2d 42 (1974), State v. Eker, 40 Wn.App. 134, 139-40 (1985), State v. Longworth, 52 Wn.App. 453, 464 (1988), State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 48 (1988), State v. Burke, 90 Wn.App. 378, 385-9 (1998), State v. McNeal, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002), cf.: State v. Goins, 151 Wn.2d 728 (2004); I.

Jury returns no verdict on greater offense, convicts of lesser, State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991); trial court discharges jury without consent of defendant and without determination of "extraordinary and striking" circumstances (such as jury acknowledgment of a hopeless deadlock on greater offense), State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159, 162 (1982), state re-notes greater offense for trial, defense seeks discretionary review; held: mere acknowledgment that jurors were unable to agree on greater offense is insufficient to allow discharge of jury, thus defendant's right to be protected from double jeopardy was violated, Green v. United States, 2

State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 460-67 (1993)

After deliberations have begun, a snowstorm delays deliberations, a juror with a ticket to Europe is excused by trial court and replaced by alternate without consultation with the parties, and without court ordering jury to disregard prior deliberations and recommence from the beginning; held: while planned vacation of juror is grounds to substitute a juror due to the weather delay, see: State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330, 336 (1991), failure to make a reasonable effort to contact counsel for input into the court's decision to excuse and replace a juror is constitutional error, cf.: State v. Booth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 196 (2022); failure to instruct reconstituted jury on the record to disregard prior deliberations and begin anew, CrR 6.5, is reversible error, State v. Stanley, 120 Wn.App. 312 (2004); I.

Schiro v. Farley, 127 L.Ed.2d 47 (1994)

Defendant is charged with three counts of murdering one victim by different modes, two of which are capital offenses; jury convicts of one of the capital modes, returns blank verdicts with respect to other modes, defense maintains blank verdict to noncapital mode was a constructive acquittal under double jeopardy and collateral estoppel analysis; held: because instructions arguably required jury to find intentional (capital) murder to return any verdict, and because there was substantial evidence to support intentional murder, then the failure to return a verdict was not tantamount to an acquittal, Green v. United States, 2 L.Ed.2d 199 (1957), Price v. Georgia, 26 L.Ed.2d 300 (1970), see: State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009) , State v. Glasmann, 183 Wn.2d 117 (2015); because record does not establish that the issue was actually and necessarily resolved in defendant's favor, failure to return verdicts does not have collateral estoppel effect, Ashe v. Swenson, 25 L.Ed.2d 469 (1970); 7-2.

State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 615-19 (1993)

Defendant is charged with two counts of aggravated murder, is acquitted of one of the counts, special verdict finds that both victims died as a result of a common scheme or plan, an aggravating factor, RCW 10.95.020(8), defense claims verdicts are inconsistent; held: defendant cannot attack a conviction based on an acquittal on another count, Dunn v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 356, 80 A.L.R. 161 (1932), State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 122, 131-35 (2002), State v. Goins, 151 Wn.2d 728 (2004); here, verdicts were not truly inconsistent; I.

State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 209, 211-2 (1994)

Trial judge dismisses jury for early lunch and later directs it to continue deliberations, in absence of parties; held: while there should be no communication between the court and the jury in the absence of the defendant, State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501, 508 (1983), to reverse defendant must establish a reasonably substantial possibility that the verdict was improperly influenced by trial court's intervention, none here; I.

State v. Zwiefelhofer, 75 Wn.App. 440 (1994)

Jury announces acquittal, is polled and is discharged, after which jurors state foreperson erred and should have written "guilty" on one count, court reverses verdict and sentences; held:

once acquittal is announced and jurors pass from trial court's control, "correction" of verdict violates defendant's double jeopardy rights; II.

State v. Lee, 77 Wn.App. 119, 125, rev'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 151 (1995)

Deliberating jury is asked if it wishes to continue deliberations into the evening or return, some jurors claim deadlock, trial court asks jurors individually if they think further deliberations would be beneficial and is there a reasonable probability of a verdict, jurors disagree, court requires further deliberation which results in conviction, juror files affidavit claiming she felt coerced to convict; held: trial court did not suggest a desired outcome nor nullify its instructions on the duty to deliberate, and did not impose time constraints, thus no coercion, distinguishing State v. Boogaard, 90 Wn.2d 733, 739-40 (1978), cf.: State v. Ford, 171 Wn.2d 185 (2011); III.

State v. Perez, 77 Wn.App. 372, 377 (1995)

Where only Hispanic juror is unable to get to court on day case is to be submitted to jury, trial court has discretion to seat an alternate; III.

State v. Imhoff, 78 Wn.App. 349 (1995)

Defendant is charged with attempted crime, instructions are correct but verdict form omits "attempted," defense fails to except; held: omitted word did not cause defendant to be unaware of the charge he was facing, nor did it misinstruct the jury, jury is presumed to follow instructions, thus error, if any, was harmless, see: State v. Clements, 4 Wn.App.2d 628 (2018), but see: State v. Morales, 196 Wn.App. 106, 112-22 (2016); I.

State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 656-8 (1997)

Jury reports twice that it is unable to reach a unanimous verdict, court declares mistrial without further inquiry; held: trial court had reason to believe jury was truly deadlocked, court is not required to conduct detailed inquiry due to finality implied by the two notes from the jury, distinguishing State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159, 160-1 (1982), State v. Kirk, 64 Wn.App. 788, 793 (1992), State v. Strine, 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013), see: State v. Fish, 99 Wn.App. 86, 90-92 (1999); II.

State v. Park, 88 Wn.App. 910, 917 (1997)

Once a jury is discharged, it cannot be reconvened, see: State v. Zwiefelhofer, 75 Wn.App. 440, 444 (1994), but see: State v. Clements, 4 Wn.App.2d 628 (2018); III.

State v. Marks, 90 Wn.App. 980 (1998)

After speaking with jurors after verdict, trial court grants new trial based upon its perception that jurors were confused about the application of a missing witness instruction to both a defense and state's witness; held: the instruction was correct, how the jury interpreted the instruction can only be discovered by probing into the jurors' mental processes, which is improper as mental processes of jurors inhere in the verdict, Ayers v. Johnson & Johnson Baby Prods. Co., 117 Wn.2d 747, 768-9 (1991), see: Warger v. Shauers, 547 U.S. 40, 135 S.Ct. 521, 190 L.Ed.2d 422 (2014), State v. Berhe, 193 Wn.2d 647 (2019); 2-1, III.

State v. Holmes, 106 Wn.App. 775 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of robbery 1º (deadly weapon prong) but jury rejects deadly weapon special verdict, defense seeks dismissal for inconsistency; held: special finding will not control general verdict unless irreconcilably inconsistent, State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 616 (1993); where guilty verdict is supported by sufficient evidence, inconsistent acquittal on another count does not support reversal, State v. Wai-Chiu Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 48 (1988), Dunn v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 356 (1932); here, difference in definitions of deadly weapon for substantive offense and enhancement establish that verdicts are not irreconcilably inconsistent; II.

State v. McNeal, 145 Wn.2d 352 (2002)

Defendant is convicted of vehicular homicide and vehicular assault for a single incident, jury returns special verdict on homicide that defendant was not under the influence but, having found defendant guilty of vehicular assault, must have found that he was under the influence for that charge, defense seeks dismissal of assault for inconsistent verdicts; held: because there was sufficient evidence to support the vehicular assault verdict, inconsistencies may be attributed to "considerations of jury lenity," thus defendant may not attack the conviction, State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 45 (1988), State v. Goins, 151 Wn.2d 728 (2004); affirms State v. McNeal, 98 Wn.App. 585, 590-94 (1999); 6-3.

State v. Goins, 151 Wn.2d 728 (2004)

Jury finds defendant guilty of assault 2° with intent to commit indecent liberties, answers sexual motivation special verdict in the negative; held: where an inconsistency is between the general verdict and a special verdict relating to that same count, the general verdict will stand it if is supported by substantial evidence, see: United States v. Powell, 83 L.Ed.2d 461 (1984), cf.: State v. Peerson, 62 Wn.App. 755 (1991), State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 615-19 (1993); RCW 4.44.440 is inapplicable in criminal cases, see: State v. McNeal, 145 Wn.2d 352, 369 (2002); 7-2.

State v. Stanley, 120 Wn.App. 312 (2004)

Where a juror, during deliberations, becomes ill, trial court must inquire of alternate to determine continued impartiality, but see: State v. Feliciano Chirinos, 161 Wn.App. 844, 849-50 (2011), State v. Dye, 170 Wn.App. 349 (2012), and must instruct jurors to recommence deliberations anew, CrR 6.5, all in the presence of defendant and counsel, State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 460-67 (1993); I.

State v. Wirth, 121 Wn.App. 8 (2004)

Jury advises court it has reached a verdict but, before jurors are brought into court to announce verdict a juror becomes ill, trial court substitutes alternate and orders jury to commence deliberations anew, CrR 6.5, defense objects, asserts that jury had reached a verdict and thus substitution was improper; held: verdict is not final until rendered and received by the trial court, thus court did not abuse discretion to replace ill juror; 2-1, II.

During deliberations, presiding juror complains that juror 9 was distraught, would retreat to corner, cease communicating, impeding deliberations, juror 9 says she was crying and upset because she took a different view of the evidence; bailiff speaks with presiding juror, inquires how deliberations were proceedings and offers suggestions for making the process run more smoothly; trial court finds foreperson credible and removes juror 9, substitutes alternate and directs that deliberations begin anew, denies mistrial for bailiff's involvement; held: bailiff's conversations with jurors was "highly improper," State v. Booth, 36 Wn.App. 66, 68 (1983);State v. Hall, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL91685, 80996-2-I (2022), by finding that presiding juror was credible and juror 9 was not, court improperly intruded into deliberations by ruling on what the jurors said during deliberation, State v. Elmore, 155 Wn.2d 758 (2005), see: State v. Depaz, 165 Wn.2d 842 (2009), State v. Gaines, 194 Wn.App. 892 (2016), court may not enter into a jury's deliberations for the purpose of ruling on conflicting reports about jurors' discussions, State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106 (2014); because there was a reasonable probability that juror 9 was removed because of her views on the evidence, reversal is required; II.

State v. Rooth, 129 Wn.App. 761 (2005)

Defendant is charged with unlawful possession of two different firearms, counts I and II, verdict forms distinguish the two by count in the information not by description of the firearm, state concedes one count was insufficient, but jury appears to have erroneously convicted of the insufficient count and acquitted of the other, state seeks correction of "clerical error," CrR 7.8(a), and to change the verdicts; held: a judicial error, not a clerical error, occurred which cannot be corrected, Wilson v. Henkle, 45 Wn.App. 162, 167 (1986), nor can verdict be impeached as juror motives inhere in the verdict, State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 43 (1988), State v. Morales, 196 Wn.App. 106, 112-22 (2016), cf.: State v. Imhoff, 78 Wn.App. 349, 352 (1995); II.

State v. Ford, 171 Wn.2d 185 (2011)

Presiding juror declares unanimous verdicts, as court is reading verdicts discovers one count is blank, sends jury back to jury room stating "[i]t must be filled in," jury returns guilty verdict in less than five minutes; held: to show judicial coercion, defendant must establish that jury was still deliberating and was undecided and that judicial action designed to compel a decision occurred and, if raised for the first time on appeal, interference actually prejudiced constitutional right to a fair trial; here, jury returned quickly and was later polled individually, thus insufficient evidence to establish improper judicial influence, State v. Lee, 77 Wn.App. 119, 125, rev'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 151 (1995), distinguishing State v. Boogaard, 90 Wn.2d 733 (1978); reverses State v. Ford, 151 Wn.App. 530 (2009); 6-3 (4 justices in lead opinion, 2 in concurring opinion).

State v. Feliciano Chirinos, 161 Wn.App. 844 (2011)

Alternate juror is "temporarily excused" with admonition not to discuss case, seated juror is excused during deliberations and alternate is brought back, jury is instructed to recommence deliberations but alternate is not questioned regarding continued impartiality; held: CrR 6.5 provides that the judge "may conduct brief voir dire before seating such alternate," thus court has discretion to do so but failure is not error, State v. Dye, 170 Wn.App. 340, 349 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 178 Wn.2d 541 (2013), overruling dicta in State v. Stanley, 120 Wn.App. 312, 318 (2004); I.

Jury is instructed on charged offense and lessers, sends out a note saying it cannot agree "on any one charge," judge brings jurors into court, foreperson reports jury is unanimous "against" the charged offense, court orders more deliberations after which jury reports it has not reached a verdict, mistrial declared; at retrial, defendant is convicted of cgreater offense; held: oral report of foreperson was not a "final resolution of anything," thus double jeopardy clause does not preclude retrial, State v. Strine, 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013); instructions that jury may convict on any one offense or acquit on all were proper under state law, trial court did not abuse discretion by refusing to instruct that jury could acquit on some but not others; 6-3.

State v. Reynoldson, 168 Wn.App. 543 (2012)

After verdict is announced and accepted, a juror reports she was coerced into voting guilty and lied when polled, later provides affidavit stating same, trial court grants new trial; held: while a juror's affidavit may provide facts of misconduct, trial court may not consider juror's statement as to how conduct affected deliberations, mental processes by which jurors reach conclusions inheres in the verdict, State v. Marks, 90 Wn.App. 980, 986 (1998), Cox v. Charles Wright Acad., Inc., 70 Wn.2d 173, 179-80 (1967), State v. Gay, 82 Wash. 423 (1914), see: Warger v. Shauers, 574 U.S. 40, 190 L.Ed.2d 422 (2014), Peña-Rodriguez v. Colorado, 137 S. Ct. 855, 197 L. Ed. 2d 107 (2017), State v. Berhe, 193 Wn.2d 647 (2019); II.

State v. Strine, 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013)

Jury returns verdict forms finding defendant not guilty, trial court polls jury believing it is obligatory, defense does not object, 6 jurors dissent, presiding juror states jury will be unable to reach unanimous verdict, court declares mistrial; held: polling jury is discretionary, CrR 6.16(a)(3), defense failure to object to polling waives review of decision to poll; appellate courts should defer to trial court's determination of a need for a mistrial, Renico v. Lett, 559 U.S. 766, 176 L.Ed.2d 678 (2010), cf.: State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159 (1982), thus double jeopardy clause does not prevent retrial; 9-0.

State v. Lamar, 180 Wn.2d 576 (2014)

Jury deliberates, next day a juror is ill and parties agree to replace with an alternate, judge instructs reconstituted jury to review and recap for the alternate what had occurred, neither party objects; held: CrR 6.5 requires that when an alternate substitutes after deliberation have begun jury is to be instructed on the record to disregard all previous deliberations and begin anew; here, the court's supplemental instruction effectively barred the reconstituted jury from deliberating on all aspects of the case, thus court violated defendant's right to a unanimous jury, State v. Blancaflor, 183 Wn.App. 215, 220-29 (2014), State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 460-67 (1993), State v. Stanley, 120 Wn.App. 312 (2004), State v. Blancaflor, 183 Wn.App. 215, 220-29 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106 (2014)

During deliberations court staff notices a juror in distress, refers her to a "juror debriefer" who testifies that the juror said she had considered harming herself because "everybody would be against her," court declines to question juror to determine if her distress was because she was in the minority, excuses juror and instructs jury to begin deliberations anew; held: where there is any reasonable possibility that the impetus for the complaint is the juror's views on the merits, court may only send jury back to continue deliberations or declare a mistrial, State v. Elmore, 155 Wn.2d 758, 776 (2005), as dismissal of a holdout juror implicates right to impartial jury and unanimous verdict, State v. Johnson, 125 Wn.App. 443 (2005), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191

Wn.2d 798 (2018), trial court had a duty to conduct a balanced investigation and apply a heightened evidentiary standard, which court failed to do, structural error; II.

State v. Morales, 196 Wn.App. 106, 112-22 (2016)

Defendant is charged with child molestation 1°, verdict form states child molestation 2° (no lesser given), jury finds defendant guilty of 2°, jury is discharged, defense moves for new trial, trial court corrects verdict to 1°; held: while a judge may correct a clerical error after jury is discharged, CrR 7.8, see: State v. Imhoff, 78 Wn.App. 349, 352 (1995), but see: State v. Rooth, 129 Wn.App. 761 (2005), here, even if verdict was erroneous, jury trial right requires that sentence be authorized by the jury's verdict, State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.App. 889, 896 (2010), court's authority after jury is discharged does not extend to impeaching a verdict or adversely impacting defendant, cf.: State v. Clements, 4 Wn.App.2d 628 (2018); I.

State v. Clements, 4 Wn.App.2d 628 (2018)

After verdict is read judge discharges jury, immediately discovers that one of the crimes in a verdict form was not the crime charged, jurors had not left the hallway, court brings jurors back, tells them an error occurred and that they were to deliberate further, gives them corrected verdict forms, jurors return another verdict; held: common law rule that once discharged a jury cannot be reconvened, see: Beglinger v. Shield, 164 Wash. 147, 152 (1931), is "too severe," where jurors have not separated and passed "from the sterility of the court's control," State v. Edwards, 15 Wn.App. 848, 850-51 (1976), court may allow a correction of the verdict, cf.: State v. Morales, 196 Wn.App. 106, 112-22 (2016); III.

State v. Backemeyer, 5 Wn.App.2d 841 (2018)

During deliberations jury sends out questions which clearly establish that they did not understand the self defense instructions, defense counsel agrees with suggestion that court answer the questions with "read your instructions;" held: where a jury indicates that it does not understand a jury instruction, court must eliminate the confusion, . Bollenbach v. United States, 326 U.S. 607, 612-13, 66 S.Ct. 402, 90 L.Ed. 350 (1946), cf.: State v. Sutton, 18 Wn.App.2d 38 (2021), and counsel's failure to ask court to re-instruct to clear up the confusion is ineffective assistance; 2-1, III.

State v. Sutton, 18 Wn.App.2d 38 (2021)

During deliberations jury sends out a question seeking clarification of an instruction, parties agree that the correct answer to the question is "yes," court directs jurors to refer to instructions; held: because the question did not create an inference that the entire jury was confused, question shows jury understood the instructions, thus trial court did not abuse its discretion, State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 42-43 (1988), cf.: State v. Backemeyer, 5 Wn.App.2d 841 (2018); Division III urges trial courts to answer jury questions.

State v. Hall, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL91685, 80996-2-I (2022)

After 8 days of deliberations a juror asked bailiff to be excused, bailiff tells jury that it would have to start over if juror was excused and "that's not what the alternate is for," jury then reaches a verdict, court denies mistrial; held: because it's possible that bailiff's comments resulted in juror who asked to be excused was pressured to reach a verdict bailiff's communication with jury was improper, RCW 4.44.300, State v. Christensen, 17 Wn.App. 922, 926 (1977); I.

JURY
Voir Dire/Challenges

State v. Gladstone, 29 Wn.App. 426 (1981)

Where population of county is 2.5% Hispanic and venire is 0.3%, disparity is not constitutionally significant, see: Berhhuis v. Smith, 559 U.S. 314, 176 L.Ed.2d 249 (2010); I.

State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981)

Sequestering jury is necessary only upon a showing of probability of prejudice; individual voir dire is not necessary when news coverage was predominantly factual and nonsensational; I.

State v. Gosser, 33 Wn.App. 428 (1982)

Challenge for cause to juror who was formerly a state patrolman and who testified that he would tend to believe a police officer over a defendant denied by trial court; held: no abuse of discretion, State v. Gilcrist, 91 Wn.2d 603 (1979), State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021), cf.: State v. Gonzales, 111 Wn.App. 276, 277-82 (2002), RCW 4.44.170; II.

State v. Latham, 100 Wn.2d 59 (1983)

In arson case, fact that two jurors had firefighting experience and were acquainted with state's witnesses, but jurors agreed to evaluate case fairly supports court's denial of challenge for cause; use of peremptory challenge to remove a juror who should have been removed for cause cures the error in absence of proof by defendant that use of peremptory challenge actually prejudiced his case, State v. Talbott, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL17839790 (2022), State v. Fire, 145 Wn.2d 152 (2001), State v. Noltie, 57 Wn.App. 21 (1990), State v. Munzanreder, 199 Wn.App. 162 (2017); trial court grants motion in limine to preclude impeachment of defendant by prior drug conviction, after voir dire, court reverses itself to permit impeachment; defense moves for mistrial, arguing defendant was precluded from questioning jurors on bias re: drug use; held: error for court to reverse its final ruling, harmless here; 7-2.

Rushen v. Spain, 78 L.Ed.2d 267 (1983)

During trial of Black Panther, a juror who, during voir dire, stated she did not associate the Black Panthers with violence, spoke with trial judge to advise that she remembered a childhood friend had been murdered by a Black Panther; trial judge made no record of this communication; Ninth Circuit reverses; Supreme Court holds harmless error analysis applies, reverses summarily; 7-2.

State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984)

Scope of voir dire, while in discretion of trial court, should afford defendant "every reasonable protection," State v. Tharp, 42 Wn.2d 494, 499 (1953), and so that defense may "determine the advisability of interposing their peremptory challenges," State v. Hunter, 183 Wash. 143, 153 (1935); 9-0.

State v. Killen, 39 Wn.App. 416 (1985)

Trial court temporarily withheld names of jurors who expressed that they would be inconvenienced, then placed them back into venire; held: as long as element of chance is not removed from selection process, there is no prejudice; see also: State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572, 582-4 (1992); III.

State v. Sellers, 39 Wn.App. 799 (1985)
Defendant has burden of proving discrimination in selection of jury panel, see: Berhhuis v. Smith, 559 U.S. 314, 176 L.Ed.2d 249 (2010); use of voter registration lists is best source to obtain a fair cross-section of the community, RCW 2.36.060; II.

State v. Allyn, 40 Wn.App. 27 (1985)
Jurors' knowledge via the press that defendant has a record is not sufficient by itself to disqualify juror or to change venue; III.

State v. Reid, 40 Wn.App. 319 (1985)
Paranoid schizophrenic juror is not per se "incapable of performing the duties of a juror," RCW 4.44.160; where defense fails to exercise available peremptory challenge, cannot later challenge a juror's inclusion, State v. Johns, 61 Wash. 636 (1911); II.

State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 719 (1985)
A juror who works for a state juvenile correctional facility is not biased for purposes of a challenge for cause, RCW 4.44, where the juror agrees to lay aside opinions, has no specific knowledge about the case, and will decide the case solely on the evidence, State v. Latham, 100 Wn.2d 59, 63 (1983), State v. Gosser, 33 Wn.App. 428 (1982); III.

State v. Frederiksen, 40 Wn.App. 749 (1985)
Court prohibits voir dire question, "if court instructs you as to self-defense, will you follow the instruction;" held: on this record, court could prohibit the question; dicta that a blanket prohibition as to self-defense voir dire questions is unduly broad; to challenge trial court's ruling on voir dire, objection must be specific, too general here; I.

State v. Johnson, 42 Wn.App. 425 (1985)
Employment by the state does not automatically disqualify a juror in a criminal case unless the person's financial interest could be affected by the state's success or failure in the case, RCW 4.44.180(2); II.

State v. Anderson, 108 Wn.2d 188 (1987)
Aggravated murder 1° defendant is not entitled to 12 peremptory challenges where state does not seek death penalty, CrR 6.4(e); 7-2.

State v. Coe, 109 Wn.2d 832 (1988)
Trial court denied challenges for cause to jurors who were aware defendant had been convicted of these charges at an earlier trial; held: trial court may decide, as a question of fact, whether a juror's "protestation of impartiality" should be believed, Patton v. Young, 81 L.Ed.2d 847 (1984), see: State v. Toennis, 52 Wn.App. 176 (1988); 9-0;

State v. Brenner, 53 Wn.App. 367 (1989)

During voir dire, juror admits knowing police but, when asked if he has developed a bond with police, says no; later, defense discovers juror meets with a police officer daily, juror denies discussing case; held: juror did not lie, need not volunteer information not requested, see: State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001), State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007), State v. Boiko, 138 Wn.App. 256 (2007); I.

State v. Rempel, 53 Wn.App. 799 (1989)

During voir dire, juror states she is not acquainted with name of complainant; when complainant is called to testify, juror discloses she knows complainant, but remains unbiased, trial court denies mistrial; held: unintentional failure of juror to disclose information does not mandate mistrial where trial court determines that juror can be fair and impartial, even if defense still had peremptory challenges to exercise; I.

Robinson v. Safeway Stores, 113 Wn.2d 154 (1989), overruled, State v. Lupastean, ___ Wn.2d ___, 99850-7 (2022)

Juror denies, during voir dire, bias against Californians, during deliberations expresses bias against same, plaintiff being from California; held: false answer during voir dire which materially deprives parties of intelligent exercise of a challenge is grounds for a new trial, State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007), State v. Boiko, 138 Wn.App. 256 (2007), State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147 (2018), see: State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44 (1989)

In rape case where victim claims rapist did not stutter, and defense maintains that defendant stutters, counsel inquired of jurors in voir dire if any had a speech problem; specific juror does not answer that he did, but in deliberations discusses his personal speech problems with other jurors; held: when a juror withholds material information during voir dire and then later injects it into deliberations, court must inquire into the prejudicial effect of the misconduct, State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147 (2018); here, juror's withholding information deprived the defense of the opportunity to pursue the matter further to determine whether or not to exercise a challenge for cause and prejudiced defendant by the use of extraneous evidence during deliberations, State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001), State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007), State v. Boiko, 138 Wn.App. 256 (2007), cf.: Richards v. Overlake Hospital, 59 Wn.App. 266 (1990); I.

Cheney v. Grunewald, 55 Wn.App. 807 (1989)

In DUI case, while actual bias is not presumed from an association with MADD, where juror states that if he were charged he would not want six jurors with his frame of mind on the jury, there is a reasonable suspicion of bias, Rowley v. Group Health Coop., 16 Wn.App. 373, 377 (1976), and failure to grant a challenge for cause was error; III.

State v. Noltie, 57 Wn.App. 21 (1990)

Within trial court's discretion to deny challenge for cause to juror who said on voir dire that she "hoped" she would be fair and would try, but never said she would not be fair, distinguishing State v. Moser, 37 Wn.2d 911 (1951), wherein juror said he did not know if he would be fair; I.

Richards v. Overlake Hospital, 59 Wn.App. 266 (1990)

During voir dire in medical malpractice case, juror discloses her medical training, which, during deliberations, she imparts to other jurors in interpreting admitted medical records; held: although interpretation of evidence interjected by juror is outside realm of typical juror's general life experience, because juror fully disclosed background, denial of new trial by trial court was not an abuse of discretion, distinguishing State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44 (1989), see: State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001), State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007), State v. Boiko, 138 Wn.App. 256 (2007); 2-1, I.

White defendant may object to prosecutor's peremptory challenges to black jurors as violating equal protection, distinguishing Holland v. Illinois, 107 L.Ed.2d 905 (1990), see : Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986), Edmonson v. Leesville Concrete Co., 114 L.Ed.2d 660 (1991); 7-2.

Mu'min v. Virginia, 114 L.Ed.2d 493 (1991)

Criminal case engenders substantial local publicity; during voir dire, trial judge refused to ask (or permit) questions relating to content of news items which jurors may have seen, but did inquire of jurors who had seen any news items if they had formed opinions and excused those who indicated they had; held: trial court's voir dire must "cover the subject," Aldridge v. United States, 75 L.Ed.2d 1054 (1931), of pretrial publicity, but questions about content are not required by constitution; 5-4.

State v. Tingdale, 117 Wn.2d 595 (1991)

Clerk excuses jurors from panel because they were acquainted with petitioner, trial court denies defense request that they be recalled; held: acquaintance with a party is not, by itself, grounds for a challenge for cause; trial court's dismissal of jurors without factual basis in the record to base finding of actual or imputed bias is abuse of discretion, cf.: State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572 (1992), see: State v. Rice, 120 Wn.2d 549 (1993), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018); 6-3.

Procedural analysis of challenges for cause for actual and implied bias; II.

State v. Tigano, 63 Wn.App. 336 (1991)

One juror fails to respond to voir dire question asking whether anyone had heard about the case when she had previous knowledge; another juror violates court's order not to read about case while trial is in progress, learning that defendant had previously been tried to hung jury, mentions to other jurors what she read; held: information known by jurors, while misconduct, was not prejudicial as substance came out at trial; prior hung jury did not point to defendant's guilt, attorneys referred repeatedly to prior "hearing" in examining witnesses; correct response from juror during voir dire would not have supported a challenge for cause, McDonough Power Equip., Inc. v. Greenwood, 78 L.Ed.2d 663 (1984), State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44, 52 (1989), inability to utilize withheld information to exercise peremptory challenge is not prejudicial as a matter of law, State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865, 878 (1991), State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315

State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572 (1992)

Requests for excuses from summoned jurors may be granted by a clerk pursuant to standards developed by the court, where the standards are consistent with RCW 2.36.100, is not error, distinguishing State v. Tingdale, 117 Wn.2d 595 (1991), see: State v. Killen, 39 Wn.App. 416, 418-9 (1985).

State v. Rice, 120 Wn.2d 549 (1993)

Clerks have authority to excuse jurors for reasons set forth in RCW 2.36.100 (hardship, extreme inconvenience, etc.), distinguishing State v. Tingdale, 117 Wn.2d 595 (1991), Pers. Restraint of Yates, 177 Wn.2d 1, 20-25 (2013); where selection process is in substantial compliance with statute, defendant must show prejudice; 9-0.

Brady v. Fibreboard Corp., 71 Wn.App. 280 (1993)

Judge excuses jurors based upon questionnaire without hearing from counsel, case is assigned to another judge for voir dire and trial; held: procedure destroyed randomness of panel, State v. Tingdale, 117 Wn.2d 595, 600 (1991) and abridged statutory procedures that govern challenges for cause, State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 838 (1991), Ottis v. Stevenson-Carson Sch. Dist. 303, 61 Wn.App. 747, 752-4 (1991), thus reversed; II.

State v. Medrano, 80 Wn.App. 108 (1995)

In diminished capacity case, peremptory challenge to an African-American juror had a race-neutral explanation where juror was a nurse who worked with alcoholics; juror's familiarity with the subject matter of anticipated expert testimony is a legitimate basis for a peremptory challenge; III.

State v. Witherspoon, 82 Wn.App. 634 (1996)

Juror states during voir dire that he is "a little bit prejudiced," sees Blacks dealing drugs, challenge for cause denied; held: unequivocal concession of prejudice against African-Americans, irrespective of juror's later agreement to presume black defendant innocent, obliges excusal for cause, State v. Gonzales, 111 Wn.App. 276, 277-82 (2002), see: State v. Jackson, 75 Wn.App. 537 (1994); I.

State v. Stackhouse, 90 Wn.App. 344, 350-2 (1998)

Trial court precludes evidence of defendant's prior murder conviction, two jurors state during voir dire that they are aware of the conviction and that they might be predisposed to believe defendant was involved, court denies challenges for cause, jurors were impaneled; held: court properly excluded prior murder due to prejudicial effect, thus jurors' knowledge of it was prejudicial, and denial of challenge was abuse of discretion, State v. Parnell, 77 Wn.2d 503, 505-8 (1969); 2-1, III.

State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 72-3 (1998)

During deliberations, one juror calls bailiff from home to say she was too nervous to continue, judge denies mistrial and substitutes alternate, directing jurors to recommence deliberation anew, CrR 6.5; held: while preferred method would have been to voir dire the juror in question and allow additional voir dire of the alternate, no error here; III.

State v. Alires, 92 Wn.App. 931, 936-39 (1998)

In response to general question, "does anybody believe Hispanics are more likely to commit crimes," six jurors raise their hands, one of the jurors is questioned and is not seated, other five are not questioned individually, indicate they would be fair, defense counsel does not excuse the jurors, defendant claims ineffective assistance; held: jurors indicated they would be fair and impartial, counsel made a "trial decision" not to pursue the topic because it was unlikely court would excuse jurors for cause, and did not want to risk antagonizing jurors, thus counsel was effective; 2-1, III.

United States v. Martinez-Salazar, 145 L.Ed.2d 792 (2000)

Trial court erroneously denies challenge for cause, defendant exercises peremptory challenge to that juror, exhausts all challenges but does not object to any jurors seated; held: loss of a peremptory challenge does not constitute a violation of Sixth Amendment right to impartial jury, State v. Fire, 145 Wn.2d 152 (2001), State v. Talbott, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL17839790 (2022), see: Rivera v. Illinois, 173 L.Ed.2d 320 (2009), cf.:State v. Vreen,143 Wn.2d 983 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Williamson, 100 Wn.App. 248, 252-55 (2000)

After first witness begins testimony, a juror informs the court that she knows the victim, state is allowed to exercise peremptory challenge over objection; held: trial court substantially complied with CrR 6.4(e)(2), RCW 4.44.210, absent prejudice, no abuse of discretion; III.

Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986), is inapplicable to challenges for cause; II.

State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 762-64 (2001)

Where defense fails to exercise all peremptory challenges, it cannot challenge on appeal trial court's rulings on challenges for cause, State v. Tharp, 42 Wn.2d 494, 500 (1953), State v. Collins, 50 Wn.2d 740, 744 (1957), State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 277 (1999), even under struck jury method, State v. Talbott, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL17839790 (2022),; 9-0.

State v. Nemitz, 105 Wn.App. 205, 209-12 (2001)

There is no constitutional right to have non-English speaking persons on any jury, State v. Marsh, 106 Wn.App. 801 (2001); III.

State v. Cienfuegos, 144 Wn.2d 222, 230-32 (2001)

After conviction, defense moves for jury list to contact jurors to determine their ethnicity, arguing that county jurors did not fairly represent ethnic makeup of county, court denies discovery; held: party challenging panel has burden, CrR 6.4(a), of showing that (1) group alleged to be excluded is "distinctive," (2) representation is not fair in relation to the numbers in the community and (3) that underrepresentation is due to systematic exclusion in jury selection process, Duren v. Missouri, 58 L.Ed.2d 579 (1979), Berhhuis v. Smith, 559 U.S. 314, 130 S.Ct. 1382, 176 L.Ed.2d 249 (2010), State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023); bare allegation is insufficient to "bring this issue into play," and require discovery, some showing of actual disproportionality is required, State v. Hilliard, 89 Wn.2d 430 (1977), Taylor v. Louisiana, 42 L.Ed.2d 690 (1975), State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 34-37 (2007), State v. Clar, 167 Wn.App. 667, 673-76 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Fire, 145 Wn.2d 152 (2001)

If a defendant exercises a peremptory challenge against a juror who should have been excused for cause and exhausts his peremptory challenges, there is no prejudice because he has been convicted by a jury on which no biased juror sat, United States v. Martinez-Salazar, 145 L.Ed.2d 792 (2000), State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 517-18 (2000), State v. Latham, 100 Wn.2d 59 (1983), State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 729 (1985), State v. Munzanreder, 199 Wn.App. 162 (2017), see: State v. Talbott, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL17839790 (2022), but see: State v. Parnell, 77 Wn.2d 503, 508 (1969); reverses State v. Fire, 100 Wn.App. 722 (2000); 5-4.

State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001)

Juror, while not directly asked, does not disclose that he is a former police officer, does not answer that he has police friends, after trial defense declares that, had it known, it would have exercised challenge for cause; held: misleading or false answers during voir dire require reversal only if accurate answers would have provided grounds for a challenge for cause, McDonough Power Equipment, Inc. v. Greenwood, 78 L.Ed.2d 663 (1984), Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 313 (1994), see: State v. Johnson, 137 Wn.App. 862 (2007), State v. Boiko, 138 Wn.App. 256 (2007), State v. Moen, 4 Wn.App.2d 589 (2018), there is nothing inherent in the experience or status of a police officer that would support a finding of actual bias; here, however, because the juror stated he had been excluded before when it came out he was a former officer, there is a "troubling inference" of deliberate concealment, remanded for evidentiary hearing; I.

State v. Rivera, 108 Wn.App. 645, 648-52 (2001)

Erroneously denying a party a peremptory challenge to an alternate who does not deliberate is harmless error, cf.: State v. Vreen, 143 Wn.2d 923, 932 (2001), see also: Rivera v. Illinois, 173 L.Ed.2d 320 (2009),; I.

State v. Brady, 116 Wn.App. 143 (2003)

Trial court grants specific time to defense for voir dire but changes mind during voir dire eliminating a promised second segment to inquire, defense claims that it reserved some issues, including race bias, for second segment; held: defense established that the court's altered time allowance prejudiced defendants, thus court abused discretion; II.

Miller-El v. Dretke, 162 L.Ed.2d 196 (2005)

Prosecutor's excusing 91% of eligible African-American jurors plus implausible explanations plus history of discrimination by prosecutor's office establishes discriminatory peremptory challenges, Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986), Snyder v. Louisiana, 170 L.Ed.2d 175 (2008), but see: State v. Bennett, 180 Wn.App. 484 (2014), see: Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017); 6-3.

State v. Bird, 136 Wn.App. 127, 133-34 (2006)

Trial court deprives defense of a peremptory challenge, declaring that when a party accepts the panel that act counts as a challenge, juror whom defense wished to challenge deliberates; held: acceptance of the jury panel is not a peremptory challenge; erroneous denial of a peremptory challenge cannot be harmless when the objectionable juror actually deliberates, State v. Vreen, 143 Wn.2d 923, 932 (2001), but see: Rivera v. Illinois, 173 L.Ed.2d 320 (2009), State v. Booth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 82039-7-I (2022), error may be raised in a motion for a new trial, State v. Wicke, 91 Wn.2d 638, 642 (1979); II.

State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 747-49 (2007)

An individual's religious affiliations and beliefs are not proper subjects of inquiry during voir dire, CONST. art. I, § 11, unless the case involves religious issues or if a necessary predicate for a challenge for cause; 8-1.

State v. Boiko, 138 Wn.App. 256 (2007)

During voir dire, juror discloses she knows a witness, does not disclose she's married to the witness, trial court grants new trial; held: trial court did not abuse its discretion, State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001), State v. Moen, 4 Wn.App.2d 589 (2018); III.

State v. Wilson, 141 Wn.App. 597, 606-08 (2007)

Trial court denies challenge for cause to a juror who previously worked at the store where the crime occurred and recognized but did not know a witness; held: party challenging the juror for actual bias bears the burden of demonstrating facts necessary to sustain challenge by a preponderance, Ottis v. Stevenson-Carson Sch. Dist. No. 303, 61 Wn.App. 747, 752-53 (1991); it is within trial judge's discretion to deny a challenge for cause where the judge evaluated juror's answers and demeanor and determined she could be fair, cf.: State v. Fire, 100 Wn.App. 722, 724-29, rev'd on other grounds, 145 Wn.2d 152 (2001); III.

State v. Grenning, 142 Wn.App. 518, 540-41 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 47 (2010)

Juror acknowledges she saw a headline, recognized it might apply to case, did not read story, trial court denies challenge for cause; held: to excuse a juror for cause, party must prove actual bias, State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 838 (1991), State v. Gosser, 33 Wn.App. 428, 433 (1982), State v. Birch, 151 Wn.App. 504, 512-13 (2009), see: State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018); II.

Absent evidence of a systematic exclusion of members of defendant's own racial group from jury venire, Batson v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 69, 85-86 (1986), State v. Hilliard, 89 Wn.2d 430, 440 (1977), trial court is not obliged to provide defense with a copy of the master jury pool list, State v. Cienfuegos, 144 Wn.2d 222, 232 (2001), GR 18, GR 31; III.

Rivera v. Illinois, 173 L.Ed.2d 320 (2009)

Erroneous denial of a peremptory challenge may be harmless and does not require automatic reversal under United States Constitution, State v. Booth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 82039-7-I (2022), but see: State v. Bird, 136 Wn.App. 127, 133-34 (2006), State v. Vreen, 143 Wn.2d 923, 932 (2001); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Crace, 157 Wn.App. 81 (2010), rev'd, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 835 (2012)

Before voir dire, juror observes defendant in hall in shackles, is not asked about it during voir dire, does not volunteer information, after conviction writes a newspaper article describing what she saw; held: a juror is not required to volunteer information, State v. Gilmore, 59 Wn.2d 514, 515-16 (1962); passing glimpses of a defendant in restraints are insufficient to find prejudice, State v. Early, 70 Wn.App. 452, 462 (1993), State v. Gosser, 33 Wn.App. 428 435 (1982); 2-1, II.

State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 253-55 (2011)

Potential juror 25 arrives late and is sworn for voir dire in absence of defendant, no objection is taken, juror is seated, at end of testimony an alternate is excused; held: failure to swear a juror is trial error to which defense must object, defense could have requested that alternate juror replace juror 25, thus even if all peremptories were used defense waived issue, State v. Tharp, 42 Wn.2d 494, 499-51 (1953), see: State v. Lloyd, 138 Wash. 8 (1926); II.

State v. Cleary, 166 Wn.App. 43 (2012)

Juror answers questionnaire that he has been convicted of a felony, questionnaire does not inquire if civil rights have been restored, a statutory prerequisite to serving on a jury, RCW 2.36.070, court asks counsel if she wishes to inquire, declines, juror is seated, defendant is convicted and appeals; held: even if a juror is unqualified to sit due to felony conviction, the disqualification criterion is statutory, not constitutional, thus issue cannot be raised for first time on appeal; error, if any, was invited by counsel declining to address the issue; III.

State v. Perez, 166 Wn.App. 55, 63-69 (2012)

After conviction, defense counsel reports that a juror was acquainted with defendant, not disclosed during voir dire, trial court then reports that the juror told the bailiff that the juror said he might know defendant's family, trial judge did not inform the parties, juror is summoned and says he knew family, had read a police report that involved defendant "a long time ago" but did not remember it, new trial denied; held: absent a showing that would have supported a challenge for cause of implied bias, RCW 4.44.180, State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001), trial court did not abuse discretion by denying new trial, State v. Moen, 4 Wn.App.2d 589 (2018), see: State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147 (2018); III.

After being selected juror sends note that he has learned that his parents were friends of victim's parents, said he had not seen victim in 40 years, court denies challenge for cause; held: there were tenable grounds for denying challenge for cause, an acquaintance 40 years earlier did not amount to bias as a matter of law; 2-1, III.

State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 190-97 (2015)

Defendant waives counsel and waives his presence at trial, one juror states she "would like to say he's guilty," another that she's predisposed to believe police but will try to decide on the evidence, court seats both; held: juror who states defendant is guilty cannot be seated as it is manifest constitutional error, court should have excused juror sua sponte,, State v. Guevara Diaz, 11 Wn.App.2d 843 (2020), State v. Gutierrez, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 513 P.3d 812 (2022), but see: State v. Lawler, 194 Wn.App. 275 (2016), see also: State v. Phillips, 6

Wn.App.2d 651 (2018); "I will try" is within court's discretion to view an answer as an adequate assurance of impartiality; I.

State v. Strange, 188 Wn.App. 679, 684-87 (2015)

During general voir dire in child molestation case a potential juror states that molestation is not an easy accusation to make and in her experience people don't make the accusation for no reason, juror is later excused for hardship, for first time on appeal defense argues that the panel was tainted; held: because the juror did not profess expertise about child molestation and did not state that children never lie about abuse defendant was not denied an impartial jury; II.

By agreement of the defense, during a recess, judicial assistant draws the names of sitting jurors who are alternates, court announces which jurors are alternates; held: randomly selecting the names of jurors to serve as alternates does not violate public trial right; selection of alternates off the record does not violate defendant's right to be present where defense does not object, distinguishing State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874 (2011); reverses, in part, State v. Jones, 187 Wn.App. 87 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Lawler, 194 Wn.App. 275 (2016)

Juror expresses doubt that he can be objective, neither defense counsel nor court challenge for cause, defense does not exercise peremptory challenge; held: while trial judge has a duty to excuse an unfit or biased juror, RCW 2.36.110, CrR 6.4(c)(1), State v. Davis, 175 Wn.2d 287, 309-16 (2012), here there was some "slight equivocation" by the juror, court should be careful not to interfere with defense counsel's strategic decisions during jury selection, thus no abuse of discretion in failure to sua sponte excuse juror, distinguishing State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183 (2015), see: State v. Phillips, 6 Wn.App.2d 651 (2018), State v. Guevara Diaz, 11 Wn.App.2d 843 (2020), State v. Gutierrez, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 513 P.3d 812 (2022); II.

State v. Sullivan, 196 Wn.App. 277, 287-89 (2016)

Juror states he was confident he had met a witness, might be friends on social media but would not impact assessment of credibility; held: even if juror knows a witness if trial court is satisfied that juror can disregard it and decide issue impartially then court does not abuse discretion in declining to excuse the juror; I.

State v. Munzanreder, 199 Wn.App. 162, 176-180 (2017)

Defense challenges a juror for cause which is denied, defense has remaining peremptory challenges but does not use one on the juror in question; held: if trial court errs in denying a challenge for cause where the party elects not to use an allotted peremptory challenge or request additional peremptory challenges the issue is waived on appeal, State v. Talbott, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL17839790 (2022), State v. Fire, 145 Wn.2d 152 (2001); III.

Pers. Retraint of Meredith, 191 Wn.2d 300 (2018)

Trial court seats two alternates but only provides seven peremptory challenges, no objection in trial court, not raised on direct appeal, petitioner claims ineffective assistance; held: failure to provide sufficient peremptory challenges as permitted by court rule is not structural error or a manifest error affecting a constitutional right, State v. Booth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 82039-7-I (2022); 9-0.

State v. Sassen Van Elsloo*, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018)

Following testimony of crucial defense witness juror discloses that, having seen the witness in court, she was acquainted with the witness but had no opinion about the witness, state moves to replace juror over objection, court acknowledges that juror was not biased but replaced her anyway because of the importance of the defense witness and not because of bias by the juror; held: absent evidence of bias it is an abuse of discretion to excuse an impaneled juror for cause; while erroneous dismissal of a potential juror does not require reversal absent proof of prejudice, State v. Noltie, 116 Wash.2d 831, 839, 809 P.2d 190 (1991), erroneous dismissal of an empaneled juror requires reversal if it is based upon the juror's views of the merits of the case, see: State v. Elmore, 155 Wash.2d 758, 123 P.3d 72 (2005); State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wash. App. 444, 463, 859 P.2d 60 (1993); a juror's acquaintance with a witness, by itself, is not grounds for dismissal of that juror, State v. Tingdale, 117 Wash.2d 595, 601, 817 P.2d 850 (1991), here, the trial court's statement that the dismissal of the juror was due to the importance of the defense witness establishes that it was based on the merits, and thus reversal is mandated; 6-3.

State v. Moen, 4 Wn.App.2d 589 (2018)

During murder trial juror discloses that she was reminded that she had been contacted by defendant's family to advise on nursing care, that she was aware that he had shot himself sometime prior to the homicide, could keep an open mind and be fair; held: juror did not intentionally facts during voir dire, did not demonstrate bias, thus trial court did not abuse discretion in denying motion to excuse the juror, distinguishing State v. Cho, 108 Wn.App. 315 (2001); II.

State v. Phillips, 6 Wn.App.2d 651 (2018)

In domestic violence case with African-American defendant, juror states that domestic violence occurred in his family and that he had been assaulted by a black man, that black men are more prone to violence, that he doesn't know what the "life of these emotional truths are" but will follow the law and decide case on the evidence, no challenge for cause or peremptory challenge is made; held: while trial court has an independent obligatiuon to excuse a juror regardless of inaction by counsel where bias is such that it is incompatible with proper jury service, State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 193 (2015), here the record is clear that defense counsel was alert to the possibility of bias but chose not to disqualify the juror, thus it was a legitimate trial strategy; I.

State v. Guevara Diaz, 11 Wn.App.2d 843 (2020)

In juror questionnaire juror states she cannot be fair to both sides in sex assault case, court denies defense request to question her outside the presence of other jurors, defense does not exercise challenge for cause or peremptory challenge; held: juror's answer established actual bias which is manifest constitutional error, State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 190-97 (2015), State v. Gutierrez, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 513 P.3d 812 (2022), cf.: State v. Lawler, 194 Wn.App. 275 (2016), which can be raised for first time on appeal; I.

State v. Roach, 18 Wn.App.2d 98 (2021)

Juror states that if there is only one witness to a crime with no other corroborating evidence he would have to acquit, over objection trial court grants state's challenge for cause; held: not an abuse of discretion to excuse a juror who states that she could not convict based upon one witness' testimony regardless of the content of the testimony or the witness' perceived credibility; even if the dismissal of the juror was improper defense failed to show that the dismissal resulted in an unqualified juror being impaneled, at n. 1, State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798, 816-17 (2018); I.

State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021)

Three jurors answer yes to general question "would anybody give more weight to…a police officer's testimony just because they were a police officer," one states he is not biased, another states he can decide based on the evidence, third states he has had negative experiences with police, trial court denies challenges for cause; held: trial court did not abuse discretion, cf. State v. Gonzales, 111 Wn.App. 276, 277-82 (2002); I.

State v. Taylor, 18 Wn.App.2d 568 (2921)

Juror states that he knows a state's witness, that he volunteered with the county emergency medical service where the witness works, that he might give the witness "a bit more credibility" than someone else but that he could put his own training and experience aside and would "trust the facts," challenge for cause denied; held: when viewed as a whole trial court did not abuse discretion as juror ultimately indicated his willingness and ability to be impartial, State v. Wilson, 141 Wn.App. 597, 606-08 (2007); I.

State v. Talbott, ___ Wn.2d ___, 521 P.3d 948 (2022)

Trial court denies challenge for cause to a juror, defense allows the juror to sit even though it has remaining peremptory challenges; held: if a party allows a juror to be seated and does not exhaust peremptory challenges then the party cannot prevail on appeal on the grounds that the juror should have been excused for cause, at least absent racial or ethnic bias, United States v. Martinez-Salazar, 145 L.Ed.2d 792 (2000), State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 762-64 (2001), State v. Fire, 145 Wn.2d 152 (2001), overruling State v. Peña Salvador, 17 Wn.App.2d 769 (2021), State v. David, 118 Wn.App.61 (2003), State v. Gonzales, 111 Wn.App. 276 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Booth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 196 (2022)

Where court erroneously grants a GR 37 motion made by the state, thereby causing a juror to be wrongfully empaneled over a defense peremptory challenge, absent proof of prejudice defendant is not entitled to a new trial, Pers. Restraint of Meredith, 191 Wn.2d 300 (2018), Rivera v. Illinois, 556 U.SW. 148, 160-62, 129 S.Ct. 1443, 173 L.Ede.2d 320 (2009), distinguishing State v. Vreen, 143 Wn.2d 923, 932 (2001); state constitution does not create a right to the use of peremptory challenges, unless a biased juror is seated defense has no appellate argument I.

State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d (2022)

Before voir dire defense objects to excusing jurors based on economic hardship and asks court to compensate jurors who would otherwise be so excused, court denies compensation and does excuse some jurors for economic hardship; held: while excluding jurors based on low economic status violates the right to a fair cross-section of the community, this applies to selection of the venire, not to the excusing of individual jurors, Holland v. Illinois, 493 U.S. 474, 480, 110 S. Ct. 803, 107 L. Ed. 2d 905 (1990), see: Rocha v. King Cnty., 195 Wn.2d 412 (2020), jurors excused for financial hardship do not create a distinctive group, Thiel v. S. Pac. Co., 328 U.S. 217, 224 (1946); prospective jurors cannot be systematically excluded due to poverty but individual jurors may be excused for undue hardship; ability to serve on a jury is not a fundamental right, State v. Marsh, 106 Wn.App. 801, 808-09 (2001), implicating the equal protection clause, nor does it violate privilege and immunities clause, CONST. art. I, § 12; I.

State v. Gutierrez, 21 Wn.App.2d 815 (2022)

Juror inquires whether defendant is a citizen, counsel says he can't answer, juror responds that if he is not he's most likely committing an immigration fine, neither party challenges juror who is seated; held: juror expressed actual bias, court has an obligation to conduct an independent inquiry and excuse the juror if the court determines the juror is not impartial and without prejudice, State v. Guevara Diaz, 11 Wash. App. 2d 843 (2020), State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 190-97 (2015), cf.: State v. Lawler, 194 Wn.App. 275 (2016); III.

State v. McKnight, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL140979 (2023)

Prospective jurors are divided into three groups due to COVID, each group to be questioned separately, defense observes that third group had four Black jurors, first two groups had none, trial court denies defense to re-order the groups to increase likelihood of a Black juror being seated; held: fair cross section right applies to the selection of the jury venire, not to selection of individual jurors, State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022), jurors actually chosen need not mirror the community, Taylor v. Louisiana, 419 U.S. 522, 530-31, 95 S.Ct. 692, 42 L.Ed.2d 690 (1975); II.

JURY
Waiver

State v. Downs, 36 Wn.App. 143 (1983)

Written jury waiver, while not determinative of voluntariness, is "strong evidence" of effective waiver; court is not required to engage in colloquy with defendant, State v. Castillo-Murcia, 188 Wn.App. 539, 547-49 (2015); here, college graduate signs waiver as does counsel who, as officer of the court, represents that client voluntarily waived right to jury by signing waiver; accord: State v. Lund, 63 Wn.App. 553 (1991); I.

Seattle v. Williams, 101 Wn.2d 445 (1984)

Defendants in courts of limited jurisdiction are entitled to a jury trial unless they waive same; local rule which deems a jury waived unless demanded within ten days of arraignment is invalid; at arraignment, defendant must be advised of constitutional right to jury trial and, if waived, defendant must be given at least 10 days to change his mind; within courts discretion to grant jury trial after ten days; motion should be granted unless trial court finds motion was made for delay; 6-3.

Bellevue v. Acrey, 103 Wn.2d 102 (1984)

Post—Seattle v. Williams, 101 Wn.2d 445 (4/12/84), jury waivers must be written, reversing Bellevue v. Acrey, 37 Wn.App. 57 (1984); but see: State v. Donahue, 76 Wn.App. 695, 697-8 (1995), State v. Ramirez-Dominguez, 140 Wn.App. 233 (2007), State v. Hos, 154 Wn.App. 238, 249-52 (2010), State v. Cham, 165 Wn.App. 438, 445-49 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Fleming, 41 Wn.App. 33 (1985)

Local rule striking jury trial where defendant fails to appear for a pretrial conference is unconstitutional; III.

Renton v. Willard, 44 Wn.App. 525 (1986)

Written jury waiver, without a colloquy, held sufficient to waive jury where waiver advised defendant of right to change mind within 14 days, and advised defendant of right to consult with counsel before deciding; I.

State v. Brand, 55 Wn.App. 780 (1989)

Written jury waiver plus colloquy with defendant that he is aware of right to a jury trial, has discussed waiver with counsel and desires bench trial is sufficient, State v. Lund, 63 Wn.App. 553 (1991), State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270, 287-8 (1993), State v. Pierce, 134 Wn.App. 763, 769-72 (2006), State v. Benitez, 175 Wn.App. 116, 127-30 (2013), State v. Castillo-Murcia, 188 Wn.App. 539, 547-49 (2015); 2-1, I.

State v. Stegall, 124 Wn.2d 719 (1994)

For a felony to be tried with fewer than 12 jurors, record must demonstrate a knowing, intelligent and voluntary waiver, which must include more than silent acquiescence by defendant; record must reflect a personal expression from defendant or an indication that either counsel or the judge discussed the right with defendant; reverses State v. Stegall, 69 Wn.App.

750 (1993); see: State v. Allman, 19 Wn.App. 169, 172-3 (1977); 6-3.

State v. Donahue, 76 Wn.App. 695 (1995)

An oral jury waiver on the record is valid if made knowingly and voluntarily, State v. Vasquez, 109 Wn.App. 310 (2001), aff'd, on other grounds, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002), State v. Ramirez-Dominguez, 140 Wn.App. 233 (2007), see: State v. Rangel, 33 Wn.App. 774, 775 (1983), In re Reese, 20 Wn.App. (1978), aff'd sub nom. State v. Wicke, 91 Wn.2d 638 (1979), State v. Hos, 154 Wn.App. 238, 249-52 (2010), but see: Bellevue v. Acrey, 103 Wn.2d 102 (1984), CrR 6.1(a); III.

State v. Steele, 134 Wn.App. 844 (2006)

In plea agreement, defendant waives jury and stipulates to existence of aggravating factors, after exceptional sentence imposed defendant challenges waiver; held: plea agreement and jury waiver cannot be separated, waiver was effective as to sentencing; II.

State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489, 500-01, aff'd, on other grounds, 172 Wn.2d 802 (2011)

Trial court has discretion to deny a jury waiver; defendant does not have the constitutional right to a bench trial; 2-1, II.

State v. Bange, 170 Wn.App. 843 (2012)

Defendant waives jury after which trial court dismisses for discovery violation, dismissal is reversed, upon remand defendant does not ask for a jury trial, parties proceed to bench trial; held: when defendant waives jury and charges are dismissed before trial, cf.: Wilson v. Horsley, 137 Wn.2d 500 (1999), jury waiver remains effective absent an attempt to revoke jury waiver; 2-1, II.

State v. Benitez, 175 Wn.App. 116, 126-30 (2013)

State constitution does not prohibit defendant from waiving jury; II.

State v. Trebilcock, 184 Wn.App. 619, 631-36 (2014)

Defendant waives jury after which state adds aggravating factors, defendant claims she has right to jury on the factors; held: waiver covered aggravating factors where defendant did not move to rescind her jury waiver or request a jury; II.

State v. Castillo-Murcia, 188 Wn.App. 539, 547-49 (2015)

Defendant has an interpreter present at all pretrial hearings and trial, submits a jury waiver, court inquires in English, defendant answers in English, interpreter does not participate, during trial defendant testifies in English and has to be asked to await interpretation, at sentencing allocution is in English; held: an extended waiver discussion is not necessary as long as defendant personally expresses his desire to waive jury, inquiring whether defense counsel explained the right is a factor but lack of it is not fatal, see: State v. Ramirez-Dominguez, 140 Wn.App. 233, 239-40 (2007); II.

JUVENILES*

Nelson v. Seattle Municipal Court, 29 Wn.App. 7 (1981)

Where a juvenile willfully deceives an adult court into believing she is more than 18 years old she waives her right to be tried as a juvenile, see: Dillenburg v. Maxwell, 70 Wn.2d 331, 354-56 (1967), State v. Mendoza-Lopez, 105 Wn.App. 382 (2001); I.

State v. Lawley, 32 Wn.App. 337 (1982)

Where court commissioner issues a ruling, and state seeks revision, RCW 2.24.050, speedy trial rule is stayed pending decision by superior court judge; III.

State v. Tidwell, 32 Wn.App. 971 (1982)

Juvenile court lacks jurisdiction over federal crimes (civil rights violation cross burning); I.

In re Smiley, 96 Wn.2d 950 (1982)

Defendant, committed by juvenile court, escapes and commits a new offense, which juvenile court declines, and for which Superior Court sentences to jail, following which he is returned to the juvenile facility to complete the juvenile court commitment; held that decline does not nullify the former juvenile court commitment; adult sentence can run concurrent with prior juvenile court disposition; 7-2.

State v. Hovland, 34 Wn.App. 830 (1983)

For speedy trial purposes, start counting day after juvenile court enters order retaining jurisdiction; III.

State v. Tuffree, 35 Wn.App. 243 (1983)

Colloquy to determine competency of a child witness performed in presence of jury is "bothersome, but . . . not erroneous as a matter of law"; court cites with approval Stafford, The Child as a Witness, 37 Wash. L. Rev. 303 (1962).

State v. Holland, 98 Wn.2d 507 (1983)

While written findings must be entered for a decline order, a court's oral findings may supplement inadequate written findings;statements made by a juvenile to a mental health professional prior to a decline hearing are privileged but privilege is waived if defendant takes the stand at trial; affirms State v. Holland, 30 Wn.App. 366 (1981); 9-0.

State v. Frazier, 99 Wn.2d 180 (1983)

A juvenile may not plead guilty in juvenile court when a decline hearing is pending; 9-0.

State v. Sharon, 100 Wn.2d 230 (1983)

Once juvenile court declines jurisdiction, juvenile court has lost jurisdiction for all subsequent offenses, RCW 13.40.020(10), but see: State v. Mora, 138 Wn.2d 43 (1999); affirms State v. Sharon, 33 Wn.App. 491 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Lawson, 37 Wn.App. 539 (1984)

Statutory defense to minor consuming alcohol, RCW 66.44.270, that defendant had permission to drink by his parents is an affirmative defense, not an element to be disproved by state; I.

State v. Fellers, 37 Wn.App. 613 (1984)

Juvenile court judge must enter written findings sufficiently specific to permit meaningful appellate review, RCW 13.40.130(4), JuCR 7.11(c), State v. Witherspoon, 60 Wn.App. 569 (1991), State v. Peña, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992), see: State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998).

State v. Freeman, 38 Wn.App. 665 (1984)

A conflict in defense counsel's trial schedule is good cause for continuance, JuCR 7.8(d); CrR 3.3(f) requiring objection to trial date within ten days of trial setting applies to juvenile proceedings; I.

State v. Bushnell, 38 Wn.App. 809 (1984)

Defendant commits crime at 17 years, is charged as an adult at 19 years, Superior Court remands to juvenile court for trial, as defendant was on probation to age 21 for an unrelated offense; held: juvenile court has no jurisdiction to try a person who is more than 18 years old unless jurisdiction was extended in that case; III.

State v. Toomey, 38 Wn.App. 831 (1984)

Court may consider best interests of the public in deciding whether or not to decline jurisdiction, RCW 13.40.110(2), State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440 (1993); II.

State v. Marshall, 39 Wn.App. 180 (1984)

Manslaughter 1° and 2° are not void for vagueness when applied to juveniles as definitions of reckless and negligence set standard of reasonable man “in the same situation”, RCW 9A.08.010(1)(c), thus permitting court to view acts in terms of respondent's age; III.

State v. Steinbach, 101 Wn.2d 460 (1984)

Juvenile files alternative residential placement petition, RCW 13.32A.150, is placed by court in alternative residence; parent tells respondent she could not live at home, but could visit; ARP order does not order respondent out of home; held: no unlawful entry, thus no burglary of parent's home is possible, but see: State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819 (2006); reverses State v. Steinbach, 35 Wn.App. 473 (1983); see: State v. Walsh, 57 Wn.App. 488 (1990); but see: State v. Jensen, 57 Wn.App. 501 (1990); 5-4.

State v. McDowell, 102 Wn.2d 341 (1984)

Juvenile accused of reckless endangerment rejects diversion, whereupon prosecutor files assault 2° for same incident; held: no presumption of vindictiveness or abuse of discretion, United States v. Goodwin, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Sandomingo, 39 Wn.App. 709 (1985)

Defendant claimed he did not know how old he was, moves for remand to juvenile court; held: where there is reasonable basis for believing defendant to be adult and state has no means of verifying his claims, defendant has burden of proving his minority, State v. Mendoza-Lopez, 105 Wn.App. 382 (2001); II.

State v. Cirkovich, 41 Wn.App. 275 (1985)

Juvenile's commitment is stayed pending appeal, during which time he turns 18 years of age, argues that, in absence of a written order, juvenile court lacks jurisdiction upon appeal being affirmed, RCW 13.40.300(1)(c); held: stay pending appeal tolls age requirement and, if affirmed, court retains jurisdiction until offender's 21st birthday; I.

State v. Mershon, 43 Wn.App. 132 (1986)

State is barred by the double jeopardy clause from seeking revision from a commissioner's acquittal, RCW 2.24.050; II.

State v. Royster, 43 Wn.App. 613 (1986)

Where juvenile is being detained on new offense and also is being held on a prior commitment, 60-day rule applies, JuCR 7.8, as shorter time period only applies when defendant's pretrial detention is due solely to current charges, State v. Brown, 33 Wn.App. 843, 845-46 (1983), State v. Nelson, 26 Wn.App. 612, 616 (1980), State v. Worland, 20 Wn.App. 559, 564 (1978); I.

Power of prosecutor to divert a juvenile offender, RCW 13.40.070, does not violate separation of powers doctrine, due process or equal protection; III.

State v. Main, 46 Wn.App. 356 (1986)

Defendant is charged in juvenile court while on escape status, turns 18 before warrant is served, charges filed in Superior Court; held: because defendant was on escape status, "presumably" knew that warrant had been issued, authorities had little or no information concerning his whereabouts, then state made a good faith and diligent effort to arrest defendant, and delay was justified. State v. Perry 25, Wn.App. 621 (1980), distinguishing State v. Wirth, 39 Wn.App. 550 (1985); I.

State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120 (1986)

Police lack probable cause to arrest a juvenile for the crime of minor consuming or possessing alcohol, RCW 66.44.270, where the only evidence is respondent's obvious intoxication and an odor of alcohol; presence of alcohol in the bloodstream is not possession or consumption, State v. A.T.P.-R., 132 Wn.App. 181 (2006), *State v. State v. Day, 46 Wn.App. 882 (1987)

An available juvenile respondent must be arraigned within 14 days after information is filed; if the 14-day arraignment time plus the 60-day speedy trial time, JuCrR 7.8(b) is exceeded, charge must be dismissed, State v. Chandler, 143 Wn.2d 485 (2001); where juvenile keeps police, prosecutor or court advised of his address, but notice of arraignment is sent to wrong address, then speedy arraignment requirements may be violated, see: State v. Hackett, 122 Wn.2d 165 (1993), State v. Hilderbrandt, 109 Wn.App. 46 (2001); III.

State v. Curwood, 50 Wn.App. 228 (1987)

Where juvenile court has extended jurisdiction to a date beyond respondent's 18th birthday, and disposition occurs within the extended jurisdictional period, then state may retain custody over respondent during the full term of his confinement; I; see also: State v. Forhan, 59 Wn.App. 486 (1990).

State v. Chavez, 111 Wn.2d 548 (1988)

Local court rule permitting court to dismiss juvenile court case if there is more than 30-day delay between completion of police investigation and filing of information is valid, however trial court may only dismiss under rule if actual prejudice is established; 5-3.

State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574 (1988)

A mailed subpoena is a nullity, as it does not conform with JuCR 1.4, CR 45(c), CrR 4.8, and thus is not grounds for due diligence; a continuance beyond the expiration date, JuCR 7.8(b), to obtain a witness who was not properly served is an abuse of discretion, State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998), reversing State v. Adamski, 49 Wn.App. 371 (1987); 5-3.

State v. Cooley, 53 Wn.App. 163 (1989)

Filing information in county where offense occurred amounts to "request" by prosecutor that charge be filed in county other than county where respondent resides, RCW 13.40.060(1); II.

State v. Merz, 54 Wn.App. 23 (1989)

A juvenile respondent's plea bargain with the prosecutor does not bind the probation counselor; see: State v. Harris, 57 Wn.2d 383 (1960); I.

State v. Espinoza, 112 Wn.2d 819 (1989)

A juvenile court commissioner is not disqualified by the filing of an affidavit of prejudice, since the ruling of a commissioner is subject to a de novo revision hearing, RCW 2.24.050, 13.04.021, reversing State v. Espinoza, 51 Wn.App. 719 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Poupart, 54 Wn.App. 440 (1989)

Probation counselors and caseworkers are not bound by a plea agreement and may make recommendations independent of the prosecutor, see: State v. Harris, 146 Wn.2d 339 (2002); I.

State v. Getty, 55 Wn.App. 152 (1989)

Police serve juvenile with municipal court citation but file it with county prosecutor in juvenile court, juvenile court judge orders state to obtain dismissal in municipal court (although citation never filed there), state fails to comply, trial court dismisses; held: municipal court lacked jurisdiction over juvenile, so no constitutional rights violation existed; no prejudice to respondent, thus trial court abused its discretion; I.

State v. Witherspoon, 60 Wn.App. 569 (1991)

Juvenile court fails to enter any written findings and conclusions following trial, JuCR 7.11(d), through oral argument on appeal; held: reversed and dismissed, as respondent's custody is prejudice plus permitting findings entered after appellant has framed issues in his brief has an appearance of unfairness, State v. McGary, 37 Wn.App. 856 (1984), State v. Naranjo, 83 Wn.App. 300 (1996), see: State v. Commodore, 38 Wn.App. 244 (1984), State v. Fellers, 37 Wn.App. 613 (1984), State v. Charlie, 62 Wn.App. 729 (1991), State v. Bennett, 62 Wn.App. 702 (1991), State v. Royster, 43 Wn.App. 613 (1986), State v. Peña, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992), but see: State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998), State v. Pray, 96 Wn.App. 25, 30-31 (1999); II.

State v. Howe, 116 Wn.2d 466 (1991)

A parental order prohibiting minor child from entering parent's home is sufficient to revoke privilege for purposes of unlawful entry element of burglary where parents have provided some alternative means of assuring that the parents' statutory duty of care is met, State v. Steinbach, 101 Wn.2d 460 (1984), see: State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 619 (2006); affirms State v. Walsh, 57 Wn.App. 488 (1990), State v. Jensen, 57 Wn.App. 501 (1990), reverses State v. Howe, 57 Wn.App. 63 (1990); 9-0; see: State v. Woods, 63 Wn.App. 588 (1991).

State v. Truong, 117 Wn.2d 63 (1991)

County ordinance which prohibits minors from appearing in a public place after having consumed alcohol unconstitutionally conflicts with RCW 70.96A.190, which preempts regulation of alcoholic beverage subject matter except, inter alia, for use of alcohol, since, once alcohol is consumed, the power to use it is at an end, State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120 (1986); 7-2.

State may seek revision of any order or judgment entered by a juvenile court commissioner, RCW 2.24.050, 13.04.020(1), during which time speedy trial provisions are tolled, JuCR 7.8(d)(5), see: State v. Lawley, 32 Wn.App. 337 (1982), State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Charlie, 62 Wn.App. 729 (1991)

Following conviction by commissioner, respondent moves for revision, RCW 2.24.050, commissioner fails to enter findings; Superior Court judge remands to commissioner, who makes a verbal finding, from which respondent appeals; following submission of appellant's brief, commissioner enters written findings; held: commissioner must enter written findings and conclusions in cases that are appealed through revision, JuCR 7.11(c); Superior Court revision is de novo, and should not be remanded to commissioner; entry of written findings for appeal should have been by judge, not commissioner; filing of findings after respondent framed issues in brief, and errors committed throughout, compels reversal cf.: State v. Bennett, 62 Wn.App. 702 (1991), State v. Royster, 43 Wn.App. 613 (1986), State v. McGary, 37 Wn.App. 856 (1984), State v. Fellers, 38 Wn.App. 613 (1984), State v. Harris, 66 Wn.App. 636 (1992), State v. Cowgill, 67 Wn.App. 239 (1992), accord: State v. Litts, 64 Wn.App. 831 (1992), see: State v. Peña, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992), State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998), but see: State v. Pray, 96 Wn.App. 25, 30-31 (1999); I.

State v. Woods, 63 Wn.App. 588 (1991)

Mother arranges for son to live with another family, grants permission to enter home only when mother is present; defendant and son break door and enter home, act surprised that mother is home from work ill, run off; held: manner of entry supports sufficient evidence of unlawful entry; I.

State v. Austin, 65 Wn.App. 759 (1992)

Where trial court fails to enter finding regarding mens rea element, and where record supports missing element, then remand is remedy, State v. Royal, 122 Wn.2d 413 (1993), but see: State v. PeBa, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992); double jeopardy clause precludes remand only where record is devoid of any evidence to support omitted finding; I, 2-1.

State v. Preston, 66 Wn.App. 494 (1992)

Odor of alcohol plus observing defendant dispose of beer bottles plus confession is sufficient to convict of minor consumption, RCW 66.44.270(2), State v. Walton, 67 Wn.App. 127, 131 (1992), State v. Little, 116 Wn.2d 488, 491 (1991), State v. Dalton, 72 Wn.App. 674 (1994), State v. Fager, 73 Wn.App. 617 (1994), cf.: State v. A.T.P.-R., 132 Wn.App. 181 (2006), State v. Francisco, 148 Wn.App. 168, 175-76 (2009), which need not be committed in presence of officer for conviction in light of 1987 amendment to RCW 10.31.100(1), State v. Roth, 131 Wn.App. 556, 563-66 (2006), distinguishing State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120 (1986); II.

State v. Decker, 68 Wn.App. 246 (1992)

Trial court may order predisposition psychological evaluation of respondent, State v. Escoto, 108 Wn.2d 1 (1987), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967 (1999), and may preclude counsel from attending, cf.: State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992), State v. Diaz-Cardona, 123 Wn.App. 477 (2004); trial court has authority to grant use immunity absent prosecutor's motion, CrR 6.14; I.

State v. Halstien, 122 Wn.2d 109 (1993)

Entering victim's home, taking vibrator and condoms, not taking valuable personal property is sufficient to establish burglary with a sexual motivation, RCW 13.40.135; juvenile sexual motivation statute is not vague or overbroad; affirms State v. Halstien, 65 Wn.App. 845 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Royal, 122 Wn.2d 413 (1993)

Where state fails to file findings of fact within 21 days of a notice of appeal, JuCR 7.11(d), dismissal is not a remedy unless petitioner shows prejudice resulting from late filing, State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998); prejudice includes additional incarceration; see: State v. Bennett, 62 Wn.App. 702 (1991), State v. McGary, 37 Wn.App. 856, 861 (1984), State v. Cowgill, 67 Wn.App. 239 (1992), State v. Alvarez, 128 Wn.2d 1 (1995), State v. Naranjo, 83 Wn.App. 300 (1996), see: State v. Pray, 96 Wn.App. 25, 30-31 (1999); 5-4.

State v. Wilcox, 71 Wn.App. 116 (1993)

Following an interlocutory stay, upon remand the juvenile time for trial rule does not start over with a new 60 days, but rather was tolled during the appellate review, applying CrR 3.3(g)(5) to JuCR 7.8, rather than the inconsistent CrR 3.3(d)(4); I.

State v. Dalton, 72 Wn.App. 674 (1994)

Evidence is sufficient to establish minor in possession of liquor, RCW 66.44.270(2), where officer observes defendant in house close to a keg and cups of beer, kegger in progress, signs of intoxication on defendant, smells of alcohol, distinguishing State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120 (1986), cf.: State v. Roth, 131 Wn.App. 556, 563-66 (2006), State v. A.T.P.-R., 132 Wn.App. 181 (2006) State v. Francisco, 148 Wn.App. 168, 175-76 (2009); III.

State v. Schatmeier, 72 Wn.App. 711 (1994)

Following a DUI arrest, police advise 16 and 17-year-old suspects, inter alia, that any statement they make may be used against them in juvenile court unless declined; district court has exclusive jurisdiction in criminal traffic cases, RCW 13.04.030(5); held: while advice was inaccurate, the warnings were sufficient to apprise suspects of the right to remain silent and that anything they say could be used in court, thus suppression reversed, Dutil v. State, 93 Wn.2d 84, 90 (1980); III.

State v. Fager, 73 Wn.App. 617 (1994)

Odor of beer plus watery, bloodshot eyes, coated tongue plus beer bottles in vehicle is sufficient to convict of minor in possession, RCW 66.44.270, State v. Preston, 66 Wn.App. 494 (1992), State v. Dalton, 72 Wn.App. 674 (1994), cf.: State v. A.T.P.-R., 132 Wn.App. 181 (2006); where defendant testifies to consuming no beer but that he had taken cold medicine, and officer testifies on rebuttal that the odor was beer, not cold medicine, evidence is sufficient; III.

State v. Oreiro, 73 Wn.App. 868 (1994)

Respondent is charged in juvenile court with six counts, requests three charges be continued pending decline hearing on other three; juvenile court declines, three continued charges are dismissed, then refiled in superior court; held: once juvenile court declines jurisdiction, it loses jurisdiction over challenged charges by dismissing them; delay in filing was due, in part, to defendant's request, thus no due process violation; II.

State v. Linares, 75 Wn.App. 404 (1994)

Statements obtained in violation of Miranda and RCW 13.40.140(10), while not admissible at trial, are admissible at a hearing to determine whether juvenile respondents are capable of committing the crimes charged; after-the-fact acknowledgment that a respondent understood that the conduct was wrong is insufficient, standing alone, to overcome a presumption of incapacity by clear and convincing evidence, see: State v. K.R.L., 67 Wn.App. 721, 725 (1992), State v. J.P.S., 135 Wn.2d 34 (1998), State v. J.F., 87 Wn.App. 787 (1997), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); I.

State v. Bastas, 75 Wn.App. 882 (1994)

Counsel's motion to withdraw on appeal pursuant to Anders v. California, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967), will be denied where the appeal concerns a motion for accelerated review from a manifest injustice disposition; I.

State v. W.W., 76 Wn.App. 754 (1995)

When respondent appeals both a manifest injustice sentence and conviction, appeal is bifurcated, RAP 18.13, and respondent should be released pending appeal upon completion of standard range disposition; JuCR 7.13 takes precedence over conflicting provision's of RCW 13.40.230, but JuCR violates equal protection clause by creating two classes of juvenile appellants without a rational basis; I.

State v. Alvarez, 128 Wn.2d 1 (1995)

Where evidence is sufficient but trial court's findings are not, proper remedy is remand, not dismissal, State v. Souza, 60 Wn.App. 534 (1991), State v. Royal, 122 Wn.2d 413 (1993), overruling State v. PeBa, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992), State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368 (1994); affirms State v. Alvarez, 74 Wn.App. 250 (1994), see: State v. Naranjo, 83 Wn.App. 300 (1996), State v. Mewes, 84 Wn.App. 620 (1997); 6-3.

State v. Werner, 129 Wn.2d 485 (1996)

Superior court judge may issue arrest warrant for a juvenile, reversing State v. Werner, 79 Wn.App. 872 (1995); 9-0.

In re Boot, 130 Wn.2d 553 (1996)

Statute mandating adult criminal court jurisdiction for certain juveniles charged with violent offenses, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(iv), without a decline hearing does not violate due process or equal protection clauses, State v. Stackhouse, 88 Wn.App. 963 (1997), State v. Gilmer, 96 Wn.App. 875, 880-83 (1999), see: State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1 (2017), State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Parker, 81 Wn.App. 731 (1996)

Respondent is convicted of assault committed with sexual motivation, RCW 13.40.135, trial court does not enter oral or written findings of fact addressing special finding; held: because appellate courts may not weigh evidence or enter findings, special allegation must be dismissed, State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368, 372-3 (1994), State v. PeBa, 65 Wn.App. 711, 715-6 (1992), State v. Naranjo, 83 Wn.App. 300 (1996), but see: State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998); III.

State v. Anderson, 83 Wn.App. 515 (1996)

At arrest, defendant gives birthdate to police establishing that she is 18, during voir dire defense discloses defendant is 17, trial proceeds, defendant is convicted; held: disclosure of age before jury is sworn is timely, State v. Mendoza-Lopez, 105 Wn.App. 382 (2001), distinguishing Nelson v. Seattle Municipal Court, 29 Wn.App. 7 (1981); because defendant is now an adult, Superior Court must hold a hearing to determine whether she should have been tried as a juvenile and, if so, defendant must be retried in adult court, Dillenburg v. Maxwell, 70 Wn.2d 331, 355-6 (1967), Sheppard v. Rhay, 73 Wn.2d 734 (1968), Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 152 Wn.2d 772 (2004), State v. Quijas, 12 Wn.App.2d 363 (2020). if not, original conviction should be reinstated; I.

State v. E.C., 83 Wn.App. 523 (1996)

Juvenile court may dismiss with prejudice a case against an incompetent juvenile respondent in order to adequately respond to the needs of that offender as long as such dismissal poses no substantial danger to others; in general, RCW 10.77 should be followed for juveniles, although the Juvenile Justice Act takes precedence when a conflict arises; I.

State v. Nicholson, 84 Wn.App. 75 (1996)

With decline hearing pending, defendant turns 18, state obtains ex parte order of dismissal, juvenile court later determines state acted in bad faith and enters nun pro tunc order extending juvenile jurisdiction; held: juvenile court loses jurisdiction when defendant turns 18 unless juvenile court extends jurisdiction before that day, State v. Calderon, 102 Wn.2d 348, 352 (1984), State v. Rosenbaum, 56 Wn.App. 407 (1990), but see: State v. Dion, 160 Wn.2d 605 (2007); a nunc pro tunc order records some prior act of the court which was actually performed but not entered into the record, cannot correct something which was not done, State v. Hendrickson, 165 Wn.2d 473 (2009); II.

In re Weaver, 84 Wn.App. 290 (1996)

A juvenile acquitted by reason of insanity may not be committed pursuant to RCW 10.77, as a juvenile offense is not a felony, In re Frederick, 93 Wn.2d 28, 30 (1980); II.

State v. D.R., 84 Wn.App. 832 (1997)

Fourteen-year old is summoned to principal's office, told by plainclothed detective that he did not have to answer questions, but not advised of Miranda rights, questioned and makes inculpatory statement; held: considering respondent's youth, naturally coercive nature of school and principal's office environment, accusatory nature of the interrogation and fact that respondent was not told he was free to go, he was in custody, thus trial court erred in admitting statements absent Miranda warnings, as a 14-year old in respondent's position would have reasonably supposed his freedom of action was curtailed to a degree associated with formal arrest, Berkemer v. McCarty, 82 L.Ed.2d 317 (1984), State v. Short, 113 Wn.2d 35, 41 (1989),

State v. E.D.W., 85 Wn.App. 601 (1997)

To establish capacity of an 11-year old who is presumed incapable of committing child molestation, state must prove respondent understood that touching private parts was done for the purpose of gratifying sexual desire of either party, RCW 9A.44.010(2), state has a greater burden when it has to prove a child appreciates the illegality of certain sexual acts, State v. Linares, 75 Wn.App. 404, 414 n.12 (1994), see: State v. J.P.S., 85 Wn.App. 586 (1997), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); III.

State v. Murrin, 85 Wn.App. 754 (1997)

Respondent on community supervision commits new offense, prosecutor files modification petition, court modifies and sanctions respondent, prosecutor files information charging same new offense, trial court dismisses; held: where prosecutor seeks modification of community supervision for a new crime, RCW 13.40.070(3) directs that prosecutor may not file an information based on the same conduct, State v. Tinh Quoc Tran, 117 Wn.App. 126 (2003), State v. Brestoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 923 (2018), cf.: State v. Whisenhunt, 96 Wn.App. 18 (1999), In re J.J., 96 Wn.App. 452 (1999), *State v. State v. Kells, 134 Wn.2d 309 (1998)

Following guilty plea in adult court, declined juvenile retains right to appeal decline order, State v. Pritchard, 79 Wn.App. 14 (1995), state must demonstrate knowing, voluntary and intelligent waiver of right to appeal, cf.: State v. Cater, 186 Wn.App. 384 (2015); 9-0.

State v. J.P.S., 135 Wn.2d 34 (1998)

To establish capacity of an 11-year old who is presumed incapable of committing rape, RCW 9A.04.050, state must prove that child knew the act was wrong, but not that the act was illegal or understand the legal consequences of the act, disapproving, in part, State v. J.P.S., 85 Wn.App. 586 (1997); factors include (1) nature of crime, (2) age and maturity, (3) whether child showed a desire for secrecy, (4) whether child admonished victim not to tell, (5) prior conduct similar to that charged, (6) consequences that attached to the conduct, (7) acknowledgment that behavior was wrong and could lead to detention, State v. Linares, 75 Wn.App. 404 (1994), (8) expert testimony, and (9) testimony of acquaintances; developmentally disabled respondent's acknowledging his conduct was "bad" after repeated Miranda warnings, interrogation, being shunned by neighbors and classmates is insufficient to overcome presumption of incapacity by clear and convincing evidence, see: State v. E.D.W., 85 Wn.App. 601 (1997), State v. K.R.L., 67 Wn.App. 721, 725 (1992), State v. T.E.H., 91 Wn.App. 908 (1998), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Mora, 138 Wn.2d 43 (1999)

Seventeen-year-old is charged in adult court with assault 2° pursuant to automatic decline statute, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v), after which, pursuant to a plea agreement, court allows amendment to assault 3° and possession of firearm, which are not automatic decline offenses, defense motion to transfer to juvenile court is denied; held: nature of the charge dictates jurisdiction and, where the charge no longer comes within automatic decline statute, case must be remanded to juvenile court, Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 152 Wn.2d 772 (2004), State v. Posey, 161 Wn.2d 638, 643-47 (2007), 174 Wn.2d 131 (2012), distinguishing State v. Sharon, 100 Wn.2d 230 (1983), see also: State v. Carpenter, 117 Wn.App. 673 (2003), but see: State v. Manro, 125 Wn.App. 165 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Whisenhunt, 96 Wn.App. 18, 20-22 (1999)

Respondent, on special sex offender disposition alternative (SSODA), has inappropriate contact with females, at revocation hearing court finds he failed to make progress in treatment and is revoked, prosecutor subsequently charges respondent with child molestation based upon an incident considered at revocation hearing, defense seeks dismissal; held: while prosecutor may not charge a new crime that was the subject of a previous modification hearing, RCW 13.40.070(3), State v. Murrin, 85 Wn.App. 754 (1997), State v. Brestoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 923 (2018), revocation of SSODA is not a modification of community supervision, thus statutory prohibition does not apply; revocation for failure to make progress in treatment, even if based in part upon a new offense, is not a revocation based upon the new offense, see also: State v. J.J., 96 Wn.App. 452 (1999), State v. Zimmerman, 130 Wn.App. 122 (2005);, III.

State v. J.J., 96 Wn.App. 452 (1999)

When a juvenile on a deferred disposition commits a new crime, state is not required to elect between revocation of deferred disposition and charging the new crime, RCW

13.40.070(3), see: State v. Whisenhunt, 96 Wn.App. 18 (1999), State v. Zimmerman, 130 Wn.App. 122 (2005), distinguishing State v. Murrin, 85 Wn.App. 754 (1997); I.

State v. Graves, 97 Wn.App. 55 (1999)

A juvenile charged with assaulting a parent may employ a claim of lawful force irrespective of the parent's right to use reasonable force for discipline; I.

State v. B.P.M., 97 Wn.App. 294 (1999)

Failure to hold a capacity hearing within 14 days, JuCR 7.6(e), is not jurisdictional, and dismissal is not warranted absent proof of prejudice; I.

State v. B.A.S., 103 Wn.App. 549 (2000)

Student in high school with closed campus policy is seen off-campus, is searched by attendance officer, drugs seized; held: while school authorities may search a student without a warrant if the search is justified at its inception and is reasonably related in scope to the circumstances that justified the interference in the first place, New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985), here there was no nexus between the violation (off-campus) and the search, thus evidence must be suppressed, cf.: State v. Slattery, 56 Wn.App. 820 (1990), State v. A.S., 6 Wn.App.2d 264 (2018); I.

State v. Chandler, 143 Wn.2d 485 (2001)

Respondent requests trial date within 60 days of proper date of arraignment, court sets trial outside 60 days, finding that because no judge sits in the county within the time period, a date outside the 60 days is permitted "in the due administration of justice," and because no prejudice was shown, JuCR 7.8(e)(3); held: JuCR 7.8(e)(3) permits a continuance in the due administration of justice, but not an original case setting beyond the 60-day rule, court could have obtained a visiting judge, judge pro tempore, court commissioner or, possibly, continued the case if all of those avenues were unavailable, but original setting outside the rule violates the rule, thus dismissed, see: State v. Day, 46 Wn.App. 882 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Gilman, 105 Wn.App. 366 (2001)

Where capacity determination is required, RCW 9A.04.050, a hearing must he held within 14 days of juvenile's first appearance, JuCR 7.6(e), which includes a detention hearing, even if charges are not filed; dismissal should be the remedy only if other lesser sanctions will not remedy prejudice to respondent; III.

State v. M.A., 106 Wn.App. 493 (2001)

Court may consider prior diversions and referrals in decline hearing, distinguishing State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63, 72 (1991); I.

State v. Garcia, 107 Wn.App. 545 (2001)

Respondent using force against an officer in a juvenile facility must show that s/he was in actual, imminent danger of serious injury, State v. Bradley, 141 Wn.2d 731 (2000); II.

State v. A.L.H., 116 Wn.App. 158 (2003)

A juvenile accused of violating an At Risk Youth order, ch. 13.32A, RCW, may only be charged with civil contempt, RCW 7.21.030, 13.32A.250(2), Interest of M.B., 101 Wn.App. 425, 443-44 (2000), but see: Dependency of A.K., 162 Wn.2d 632 (2007), which must contain a purge clause, Interest of Rebecca K., 101 Wn.App. 309 (2000); state may not file criminal contempt charge; II.

State v. Lown, 116 Wn.App. 402 (2003)

When the superior court reviews a juvenile court commissioner's ruling, it must determine if the findings of fact are supported by substantial evidence, and reviews the conclusions of law de novo, RCW 2.24.050, but see: State v. Wicker, 105 Wn.App. 428 (2001); III.

State v. H.O., 119 Wn.App. 549, 552-56 (2003)

Burden of proof for decline hearing is preponderance, State v. Jacobson, 33 Wn.App. 529 (1982), Pers. Restraint of Hegney, 138 Wn.App. 511, 528-31 (2007), State v. Childress, 169 Wn.App. 523 (2012), distinguishing Apprendi v. New Jersey, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000); I.

State v. Ramer, 151 Wn.2d 106 (2004)

Appellate review of a trial court capacity decision is one of substantial evidence, not de novo, State v. J.P.S., 135 Wn.2d 34, 37 (1998); while actual knowledge of the legal consequences of a sex offense is not necessary, when a juvenile is charged with a sex crime, the state carries a greater burden of proving capacity, and must present a higher degree of proof that the child understood the illegality of the act, State v. J.P.S., supra. at 38; 9-0.

State v. Salavea, 151 Wn.2d 133 (2004)

To invoke an automatic decline of jurisdiction, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v), the age of the individual at the time of the proceedings controls, not the age at the time of the crime, Sweet v. Porter, 75 Wn.2d 869, 870 (1969), legislatively overruled, LAWS OF 2005, §1, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v) (2005); affirms State v. Salavea, 115 Wn.App. 52 (2003); 9-0.

State v. R.J., 121 Wn.App. 215 (2004)

Juvenile commits alcohol offense when he is 17, is adjudicated guilty at 18 years, court notifies Department of Licensing, RCW 66.44.365(1); held: juvenile's age on date of offense determines whether notification is required; I.

Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 152 Wn.2d 772 (2004)

Juvenile is charged as an adult with a serious violent offense resulting in automatic decline, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v)(A), plea bargains to a less serious offense which, by law, requires a decline hearing, no party requests one, defendant is sentenced as an adult; held: superior court erred when it failed to remand to juvenile court for decline hearing after charge was amended, State v. Mora, 138 Wn.2d 43 (1999), State v. Posey, 161 Wn.2d 638, 643-47 (2007), 174 Wn.2d 131 (2012), but see: State v. Manro, 125 Wn.App. 165 (2005); remedy is remand for a hearing on whether decline would have been appropriate and, if court finds it would not, defendant is entitled to a new trial in adult court, Dillenburg v. Maxwell, 70 Wn.2d 331, 354-56 (1967), State v. Mendoza-Lopez, 105 Wn.App. 382 (2001), *State v. State v. K.N., 124 Wn.App. 875 (2004)

In minor in possession of alcohol case, juvenile court cannot take judicial notice, infer or presume age of respondent from the fact that the court is a juvenile court, nor is birth date on arraignment documents sufficient to establish age, see: State v. Roth, 131 Wn.App. 556 (2006), distinguishing In re Welfare of Ward, 22 Wn.App. 774 (1979); I.

State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 77 (2005)

A juvenile burglary conviction does not "wash" for purposes of serving as a predicate offense for an unlawful possession of a firearm 1° conviction, RCW 9.41.040(1)(a) even if it washes for purposes of the offender score; fact that at the time of the juvenile conviction it was not a crime to possess a firearm thereafter does not excuse to the crime enacted later and does not violate due process; III.

State v. J.R., 127 Wn.App. 293 (2005)

A 10 inch dagger is sufficient to establish the offense of possession of a dangerous weapon on school grounds, RCW 9.41.280, which includes all weapons described in RCW 9.41.250, not limited to RCW 9.41.250(1); I.

State v. Roth, 131 Wn.App. 556 (2006)

In minor in possession of alcohol case, RCW 66.44.270(2)(a), testimony that there were no adults at a party plus officer's issuing citation after checking respondent's license plus respondent's not disputing that he was under the age of 21 is sufficient to prove element that respondent is a minor even absent evidence of date of birth, distinguishing State v. K.N., 124 Wn.App. 875 (2004); absent proof that respondent consumed alcohol, presence in a roiom with a refrigerator full of beer is insufficient to prove constructive possession, distinguishing State v. Dalton, 72 Wn.App. 674, 675-77 (1994); III.

State v. Dion, 131 Wn.App. 729 (2006)

Three days before she turned 18, juvenile is arrested, court finds probable cause, releases her and extends juvenile court jurisdiction, later state files information charging her as an adult, trial court dismisses; held: because no information was filed in juvenile court prior to defendant's 18th birthday, juvenile court lacked authority to extend jurisdiction, RCW 13.40.300; probable cause determination, County of Riverside v. McLaughlin, 114 L.Ed.2d 49 (1991), does not confer jurisdiction to extend, release of juvenile establishes that there was no proceeding pending; I.

State v. V.J., 132 Wn.App. 380 (2006)

Authority of court to enforce a disposition order is tolled when a warrant is outstanding, Spokane v. Marquette, 146 Wn.2d 124 (2002), State v. D.D.-H., 196 Wn.App. 948 (2016); I.

State v. Chavez, 134 Wn.App.657, 662-65 (2006)

Juveniles are not entitled to a jury trial in juvenile court, State v. J.H., 96 Wn.App.167 (1999), State v. Schaaf, 109 Wn.2d 1, 4 (1987), McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 29 L.Ed.2d 647 (1971), State v. Tai, 127 Wn.App.733 (2005), State v. Meade, 129 Wn.App.918 (2005), RCW 13.04.021(2); II.

State v. Dion, 160 Wn.2d 605 (2007)

Following arrest at detention review hearing, court finds probable cause, extends jurisdiction for six months beyond 18th birthday, sets information filing deadline for 72 hours later, state does not file charges by deadline, court vacates conditions and release respondent unconditionally, state charges her as an adult, trial court dismisses adult charge, state appeals; held: juvenile court may extend jurisdiction beyond juvenile's 18th birthday if proceedings are pending, RCW 13.40.300(1)(a), where charges are not filed proceedings are not pending thus trial court lacked authority to extend jurisdiction; affirms State v. Dion, 131 Wn.App. 729 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Posey, 161 Wn.2d 638, 643-47 (2007)

Defendant is charged with assault 1°, automatically declined, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v)(A), jury acquits but convicts of a lesser not specifically enumerated as an automatic decline offense, trial court sentences as an adult; held: any juvenile properly charged in adult court of an enumerated offense must be returned to juvenile court for a decline hearing or disposition as a juvenile if convicted of a nonenumerated offense, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v)(E)(II), State v. Mora, 138 Wn.2d 43 (1999), State v. Meridieth, 144 Wn.App. 47 (2008), State v. Posey, 174 Wn.2d 131 (2012); reverses, in part, State v. Posey, 130 Wn.App. 262 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Ramirez, 140 Wn.App. 278 (2007)

Automatic decline statute amendment, LAWS OF 2005, ch. 290, § 1, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v), making automatic decline applicable when juvenile is 16 or 17 years old on the date the alleged offense is committed, legislatively overruling State v. Salavea, 151 Wn.2d 133 (2004), is not retroactive; II.

Pers. Restraint of Hegney, 138 Wn.App. 511 (2007)

Evidence inadmissible at trial is admissible at a decline hearing, In re Welfare of Harbert, 85 Wn.2d 719 (1975); II.

State v. Chavez, 163 Wn.2d 262, 267-72 (2008)

Juveniles are not entitled to a jury trial in juvenile court; affirms State v. Chavez, 134 Wn.App. 657 (2006); 6-3.

State v. Meridieth, 144 Wn.App. 47 (2008)

Seventeen year old is charged with mandatory decline offenses, juvenile court enters automatic decline order absent probable cause that any of the offenses occurred after defendant turned 16, RCW 13.04.030(1)(e)(v) (2005); held: statute requires that there be probable cause that an automatic decline offense was committed after offender turned 16, thus automatic decline was faulty, remedy is to remand for a decline hearing and, if court declines then conviction stands, if court denies decline, then defendant is entitled to a new trial in adult court, as he has turned 18, Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 152 Wn.2d 772 (2004); 2-1.

State v. Ramos, 152 Wn.App. 684, 690-93 (2009)

Fourteen year old may waive decline hearing, RCW 13.34.110(1) (1990), and pursuant to a plea bargain agree to transfer to adult court; III.

State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49 (2010)

School resource officer observes respondent asleep in a car during school hours, observes a knife on the floor, removes respondent, respondent agrees to officer removing the knife, officer searches car finds guns; held: weapon in a car on campus is an emergency under the school search exception, New Jersey v. T.L.O., 469 U.S. 325, 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985), State v. Slatterty, 56 Wn.App. 8209 (1990), justifying search without a warrant, search beyond seizing the knife was linked to the initial intrusion; III.

J.D.B. v. North Carolina, 564 U.S. 261. 131 S.Ct. 2394, 180 L.Ed.2d 310 (2011)

In determining whether a juvenile is in custody requiring Miranda warnings prior to questioning, police and trial court must apply an objective standard, i.e., would a reasonable person perceive that he or she is in custody, which includes consideration of the suspect's age, cf.: Yarborough v. Alvarado, 541 U.S. 652, 158 L.Ed.2d 938 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Posey, 174 Wn.2d 131 (2012)

Respondent is charged with rape and assault 1°, is auto-declined because assault 1° is a serious violent offense, RCW 13.04.030 (2009), jury acquits of assault, is sentenced under SRA, Supreme Court reverses and remands to juvenile court for disposition, State v. Posey, 161 Wn.2d 638 (2007), before disposition on remand respondent turns 21, court treats defendant as an adult in superior court but imposes juvenile sentence range, respondent appeals claiming neither juvenile nor superior court had jurisdiction; held: superior court always retains jurisdiction over felony cases, CONST. art. IV, § 6, legislation cannot alter constitutional jurisdiction, see also: State v. Maynard, 183 Wn.2d 253 (2015); 7-2.

State v. Miller, 165 Wn.App. 385 (2011)

Failure of police to advise a juvenile of the juvenile-specific language is not grounds for suppression, State v. Prater, 77 Wn.2d 526 (1970), State v. Luoma, 88 Wn.2d 28 (1977); III.

State v. Childress, 169 Wn.App. 523 (2012)

Decline standard is preponderance, not beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. H.O., 119 Wn.App. 549, 552-56 (2003), respondent is not entitled to a jury determination of decline; I.

State v. Bailey, 179 Wn.App. 433 (2014)

To use an agreed declined juvenile conviction in offender score as an adult state must show defendant was informed, at time of the decline, that he was advised of the "rights and protections" available in juvenile court and that an adult strike conviction could be used in the future, see: State v. Saenz, 175 Wn.2d 167 (2012), State v. Knippling, 166 Wn.2d 93 (2009), but see: State v. Inocencio, 187 Wn.App. 765 (2015), *State v. State v. S.J.C., 183 Wn.2d 408 (2015)

Where juvenile offender has met all the requirements of RCW 13.50.050 (2011) to seal the record court must seal and need not apply Seattle Times Co. v. Ishikawa, 97 Wn.2d 30 (1982) factors, see: State v. Webster, 69 Wn.App. 376 (1993), see also: State v. J.C., 192 Wn.App. 122 (2016); 7-2.

State v. Jimenez, 200 Wn.App. 48 (2017)

In minor in possession of marijuana case, state need not prove that the marijuana had greater than 0.3% THC, RCW 69.50.4014 (2003), as a juvenile may not possess any concentration of marijuana, regardless of RCW 69.50.101(2)(w) (2017); III.

State v. A.S., 6 Wn.App.2d 264 (2018)

Vice-principal of school searches non-student's backpack, finds drugs; held: school search exception, State v. Brooks, 43 Wn.App. 560 (1986), New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1983), State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49 (2010), State v. E.K.P., 162 Wn.App. 675 (2011), applies only to students absent some emergency; I.

State v. A.X.K., 12 Wn.App.2d 287 (2020)

Evidence at fact finding establishes that offense occurred prior to respondent's twelfth birthday, juvenile court fails to hold a capacity hearing, RCW 9A.04.050; held: capacity is not an element of a crime, State v. Q.D., 102 Wn.2d 19, 24 (1984), but a capacity hearing is mandatory for respondents younger than twelve, thus remanded for capacity hearing; II.

State v. Quijas, 12 Wn.App.2d 363 (2020)

At discretionary decline hearing defense offers evidence that Hispanic youth are declined in Washington and in Skagit County at a rate disproportionate to their percentage of population, juvenile court declines without addressing disproportionality issue; held: vigilance is required when racial bias is alleged to undermine a criminal defendant's constitutional rights at any stage of a proceeding, where such a claim, supported by some evidence in the record, the trial court must rule, thus remanded for juvenile court to consider and rule on racial bias evidence; because defendant is now older than eighteen, if court determines that decline was not appropriate, remedy is a new trial in adult court, Dillenburg v. Maxwell, 70 Wn.2d 331 (1967), Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 152 Wn.2d 772, 785-86 (2004); I.

State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020)

To prove juvenile capacity to commit a crime, although the state is not required to prove that the child had actual knowledge of the legal consequences of her conduct, the state must show that the child is able to entertain criminal intent. State v. Ramer, 151 Wn.2d 106, 115 (2004), RCW 9A.04.050 (2011), State v. J.P.S., 135 Wn.2d 34 (1998), the state must demonstrate, by clear and convincing evidence, that a child not only knew the act was wrong in a moral sense, but in a legal sense as well; II.

JUVENILES
Delay in Filing

State v. Hodges, 28 Wn.App. 902 (1981)

State delays three months before filing information in juvenile court, during which time defendant turned 18, whereupon case filed in Superior Court, which dismissed due to delay denying due process; held: remanded for evidentiary hearing to see if state can meet burden to justify delay; deliberate or negligent delay in filing violates due process; see: State v. Lidge, 49 Wn.App. 311 (1987); II.

State v. McAllaster, 31 Wn.App. 554 (1982)

Trial court has discretion to dismiss an information for delay in referral to prosecutor, per King County LJuCR 7.14(b); I.

State v. Keller, 32 Wn.App. 135 (1982)

Where court dismissed felony information for delay in referral, King County LJuCR 7.14(b), it is without prejudice and state may refile; I.

State v. Jacobson, 36 Wn.App. 446 (1983)

March 6, juvenile commits burglary; March 26, commits robbery; April 13, juvenile court declines jurisdiction on robbery; April 15, defendant turns 18 years of age; thereafter, burglary charge filed in Superior Court; defendant moves to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b); held: defendant was not prejudiced by delay; I.

State v. Terrell, 38 Wn.App. 187 (1984)

Trial court's decision not to dismiss, King County LJuCr 7.14(b), for delay in referral is within court's discretion where case was referred to prosecutor within two weeks but was returned to police for filing of a face sheet, referred back 28 days later; I.

State v. Calderon, 102 Wn.2d 348 (1984)

Five months prior to respondent's 18th birthday, burglary is committed, due to delay in lab, fingerprints are not compared until after respondent turns 18, information filed in Superior Court; held: while delay beyond 18th birthday establishes prejudice, State v. Hodges, 28 Wn.App. 902 (1981), court must balance prejudice with reason for state's delay, United States v. Lovasco, 52 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977), State v. Oppelt, 172 Wn.2d 285 (2011); here, police needed prints to charge, lab backlog excused investigatory delay, State v. Salavea, 151 Wn.2d 133, 146-47 (2004), see: State v. Lidge, 111 Wn.2d 845 (1989), State v. Brandt, 99 Wn.App. 184 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Boseck, 45 Wn.App. 62 (1986)

Delay of 21 months in charging defendant, resulting in juvenile court losing jurisdiction, was justified as state was proceeding sequentially against numerous defendants to obtain each defendant's testimony, State v. Calderon, 102 Wn.2d 348 (1984); I.

State v. Robbers, 46 Wn.App. 558 (1987)

Two-month delay in filing charges, resulting in juvenile court losing jurisdiction, does not mandate dismissal, State v. Calderon, 102 Wn.2d 348 (1984), where more arrests needed to be made in investigation, lab reports had not been received on some counts which were joined, it was not unreasonable to delay referral to police until sufficient evidence had been obtained for all counts; special procedures for juvenile suspects are not required; I.

State v. Anderson, 46 Wn.App. 565 (1987)

Prosecutor's established procedures for processing cases can justify delay in charging beyond respondent's 18th birthday; prosecutor need not expedite filing for a juvenile whose 18th birthday is imminent; see: State v. Lidge, 111 Wn.2d 845 (1989); I.

State v. Cantrell, 49 Wn.App. 917 (1987)

Juvenile court dismisses escape information for six-week delay in referral to court, King County LJuCR 7.14(b); held: state's justification for delay, obtaining evidence, is sufficient to establish no arbitrary action or governmental misconduct, CrR 8.3(b), State v. Burri, 87 Wn.2d 175 (1976), thus reversed; I.

State v. Alvin, 109 Wn.2d 602 (1987)

Police complete investigation into crime five weeks before defendant's 18th birthday but, due to vacation and training of detective, do not obtain criminal record or refer to prosecutor until after 18th birthday; held: police and prosecutor need not give special treatment to juvenile to assure juvenile court jurisdiction, State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876, 891 (1995); sick leave, comp time, vacation and training courses are part of normal routine and are legitimate reasons for delay, distinguishing State v. Calderon, 102 Wn.2d 348 (1984); accord: State v. Lidge, 111 Wn.2d 845 (1989) , see: State v. Oppelt, 172 Wn.2d 285 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Schifferl, 51 Wn.App. 268 (1988)

Where state negligently fails to process a case resulting in loss of juvenile court jurisdiction, the negligent delay will weigh against the state in balancing the reasons for the delay vs. prejudicial effect on defendant; the prejudice must be more than mere loss of jurisdiction; here, the negligence was less culpable than the "routine" delays in State v. Alvin, 109 Wn.2d 601 (1987), thus dismissal reversed, see: State v. Gidley, 79 Wn.App. 205 (1995), State v. Brandt, 99 Wn.App. 184 (2000), but see: State v. Frazier, 82 Wn.App. 576 (1996); I.

State v. Chavez, 111 Wn.2d 548 (1988)

Local court rule permitting court to dismiss juvenile court case if there is more than 30-day delay between completion of police investigation and filing of information is valid, however trial court may only dismiss under rule if actual prejudice is established; 5-3.

State v. Lidge, 111 Wn.2d 845 (1989)

Eight-day delay in filing charges in juvenile court due to a need for further investigation, resulting in loss of juvenile court jurisdiction as defendant turned 18, does not deprive defendant of due process, State v. Salavea, 151 Wn.2d 133, 146-47 (2004), where defense never inquired on cross-examination of prosecutor as to what investigation was necessary; the fact that one prosecutor filed charges against co-defendant yet other prosecutor delayed for further investigation does not establish negligence; reverses State v. Lidge, 49 Wn.App. 311 (1987); see: State v. Frazier, 82 Wn.App. 576 (1996), State v. Brandt, 99 Wn.App. 184 (2000), see: State v. Oppelt, 172 Wn.2d 285 (2011); 5-3.

State v. Dixon, 114 Wn.2d 857 (1990)

Delay in filing due to sequential prosecution to get testimony of co-defendants will justify juvenile court losing jurisdiction; only intentional or negligent delay by prosecution will justify dismissal, State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876, 889-91 (1995), State v. Gidley, 79 Wn.App. 205 (1995), State v. Frazier, 82 Wn.App. 576 (1991); appellate court cannot substitute judgment or weigh strength of prosecutor's case in determining whether delay was justified, reversing State v. Dixon, 55 Wn.App. 221 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876, 889-91 (1995)

Juvenile sex offender, in state institution, while undergoing sex offender treatment, confesses to therapists to several offenses, authorities delay reporting offenses such that defendant turns 18 and is charged as an adult, seeks dismissal for delay; held: delay in reporting, even in violation of mandatory reporting provision's of RCW 26.44.030, does not establish negligence to justify dismissal State v. Dixon, 114 Wn.2d 857 (1990), as negligence per se has been largely abolished, RCW 5.40.050, and class of persons reporting statute was designed to protect was victims, not abusers; see: State v. Frazier, 82 Wn.App. 576 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Frazier, 82 Wn.App. 576 (1996)

Negligent delay in filing charges, resulting in juvenile court losing jurisdiction, is grounds for dismissal where court finds no credible reason for state's delay, State v. Dixon, 114 Wn.2d 857 (1990), State v. Lidge, 111 Wn.2d 845, 848 (1989), State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876, 890 (1995); where no justification is provided for the negligent delay, trial court need not balance the interests of the state and defendant, State v. Warner, supra, at 889; II.

State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998)

Prosecutor arranges for defense counsel to interview complainant, does not subpoena complainant who moves out of state, prosecutor obtains continuance beyond expiration date; held: a continuance may be granted if state's evidence is unavailable, prosecutor has exercised due diligence, and there are reasonable grounds to believe evidence will be available within reasonable time, JuCR 7.8(e)(2)(ii), due diligence requires proper issuance of subpoenas, State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574, 578 (1988), State v. Duggins, 121 Wn.2d 524, 525 (1993), cf.: State v. Bible, 77 Wn.App. 470 (1995), thus continuance was improperly granted; per curiam.

State v. Brandt, 99 Wn.App. 184 (2000)

Analysis of time period of delay halts with defendant's 18th birthday, since juvenile court loses jurisdiction at that point, after which defendant is not further prejudiced; defendant's confession to child molestation provides police with a lead to find victim, whose last name is unknown, police await contact from victim resulting in delay beyond defendant's 18th birthday, held: investigative delay was reasonable, within trial court's discretion, State v. Gidley, 79

Wn.App. 205, 210 (1995), State v. Lidge, 111 Wn.2d 845, 850 (1989), State v. Dixon, 114 Wn.2d 857, 866 (1990); trial court may consider likelihood of decline, State v. Schifferl, 51 Wn.App. 268, 273 (1988); II.

State v. Francisco, 148 Wn.App. 168, 175-77 (2009)

Police find respondent passed out in driveway, strong odor of alcohol, incoherent, difficult to rouse, convicted of minor possession/consumption of liquor, RCW 66.44.270(2)(a); held: evidence of assimilation of alcohol is circumstantial evidence of prior possession and, when corroborated, may support a conviction, State v. Dalton, 72 Wn.App. 674 (1994), State v. Preston, 66 Wn.App. 494 (1992), see: State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120, 126 (1986), but absent nearby alcohol containers or confession, evidence is insufficient that respondent exercised any dominion and control over alcohol; III.

State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 80-83 (2015)

Nine years after guilty plea respondent files PRP with new evidence showing state may have intentionally delayed filing until after he turned 18; held: respondent failed to show he acted with reasonable diligence, has not shown he could not have raised the delay claim at time he was charged, respondent knew his date of birth; 9-0.

State v. Maynard, 183 Wn.2d 253 (2015)

Charge filed before respondent turns 18, defense fails to seek extension of jurisdiction, court dismisses after respondent's birthday, charge is refiled in adult court which dismisses for ineffective assistance of counsel; held: because juvenile court did not lose jurisdiction because of pre-accusatorial delay, State v. Dixon, 114 Wn.2d 857, 860-61 (1990), here the charge was filed affording respondent opportunity to seek extension, thus delay is not a basis to dismiss; counsel was ineffective, defendant was prejudiced, remedy is to remand for further proceedings in accordance with Juvenile Justice Act, state is ordered to reoffer plea proposal of deferred disposition, trial court may impose a juvenile disposition, State v. Posey, 174 Wn.2d 131 (2012), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 152 Wn.2d 772 (2004); reverses, in part, State v. Maynard, 178 Wn.App. 413 (2013); 5-4.

JUVENILES
Dispositions

In re Trambitas, 96 Wn.2d 324 (1981)

Juvenile respondents are entitled to credit for pretrial detention against the maximum term of confinement imposed under the standard range; 5-4.

State v. Chatham, 28 Wn.App. 580 (1981)

Diversion unit may reject a referral as long as the rejection is based on standardized safeguards and the decision to reject is fair and reasoned; fact that rejection is not in writing does not deny defendant due process; I.

State v. Rice, 98 Wn.2d 384 (1982)

Juveniles can be sentenced to more than maximum punishment for adults, overruling, in part, State v. Rhodes, 92 Wn.2d 755 (1979); 8-1.

State v. Smith, 33 Wn.App. 791 (1983)

Standard for establishing restitution in a juvenile proceeding is "evidence sufficient to afford a reasonable basis for estimating the loss"; see: State v. Fambrough, 66 Wn.App. 223 (1992); only tangible damages, such as those for injury to or loss of property, are allowed, 79 ALR 3d 976 (1977); juvenile restitution provisions, RCW 13.40.020(17), 13.40.190, are not vague; I.

In re Hoffer, 34 Wn.App. 82 (1983)

Juvenile court can commit to DSHS, extend jurisdiction to 21 and retain jurisdiction for purposes of enforcing restitution order; III.

State v. Bush, 34 Wn.App. 121 (1983)

RCW 12.40.020(17) requires court to set restitution that is "easily ascertainable"; fact that restitution is disputed does not prohibit court from setting restitution where "sufficient evidence" exists; co-defendants who are ordered to pay different amounts do not have equal protection claim; I.

State v. Murphy, 35 Wn.App. 658 (1983)

Manifest injustice finding is not limited to cases where defendant poses a clear threat of bodily harm; I.

State v. Elmore, 36 Wn.App. 38 (1983)

Without a plea bargain, respondent pleads guilty, but is misinformed as to the standard range, seeks specific performance; held: no right to specific performance in the absence of a plea bargain that is breached; sole remedy is withdrawal of plea; II.

State v. Sargent, 36 Wn.App. 463 (1984)

Crime victim penalty, RCW 7.68.010 et seq., is mandatory in juvenile convictions; I.

State v. Adcock, 36 Wn.App. 699 (1984)

Failure of court to write in standard range in disposition order prior to imposing disposition is harmless error as long as respondent understands plea form; three offenses committed on one day count as three separate convictions for purposes of criminal history unless they are intimately related as part of a sequential plan; fact that there was no opportunity for reform or that respondent was sentenced on same day is not dispositive of issue of whether convictions are separate or from same course of conduct; I.

State v. Cook, 37 Wn.App. 269 (1984)

Juvenile respondent is constitutionally entitled to pre-trial detention credit against community service hours; I.

State v. Fellers, 37 Wn.App. 613 (1984)

At disposition hearing, respondent has the right to show he lacks ability to pay restitution, RCW 13.40.190(1); see: State v. Commodore, 38 Wn.App. 244 (1984), reversing State v. Brown, 30 Wn.App. 344 (1981); I.

State v. P., 37 Wn.App. 773 (1984)

Once a finding of manifest injustice is made, court has broad discretion to determine the proper sentence, State v. E.J.H., 65 Wn.App. 771 (1992), but merely following the probation counselor's recommendation, without more, is a clearly excessive sentence since it cannot be justified by any reasonable review of the record; but see: State v. B.E.W., 65 Wn.App. 370 (1992); III.

State v. Gutierrez, 37 Wn.App. 910 (1984)

Court finds manifest injustice and increases disposition based upon respondent's criminal history alone, last conviction was more than a year prior to disposition; held: trial court abused its discretion; here, respondent's criminal history alone does not support a finding that respondent is a clear danger to society beyond a reasonable doubt; accord: State v. S.S., 67 Wn.App. 800 (1992); III.

State v. Martin, 102 Wn.2d 300 (1984)

Where respondent is detained for failure to complete community service hours, court need not reduce the community service obligation by eight hours per day of confinement, RCW 13.40.200(3)(b); reverses State v. Martin, 36 Wn.App. 1 (1983).

State v. McDowell, 102 Wn.2d 341 (1984)

Disposition may exceed that allowed in a diversion agreement, distinguishing RCW 13.40.160(3), unless defense proves actual vindictiveness; 9-0.

State v. Smith, 40 Wn.App. 477 (1985)

In determining criminal history for disposition, each separate charge not arising out of the same course of conduct is a separate conviction even if respondent's disposition on each is contained in the same disposition order; I.

State v. WS, 40 Wn.App. 835 (1985)

Juvenile diversion may not categorically reject all prostitutes from acceptance into diversion, RCW 13.40.010(2)(g), cf.: State v. Pulfrey, 120 Wn.App. 270 (2004); I.

State v. Ashley, 40 Wn.App. 877 (1985)

Defendant assaults and injures victim, later assaults victim, no injuries; defendant is charged and convicted only with second assault, restitution ordered for first assault; held: restitution may only be ordered for the crimes charged and proved at trial, RCW 13.40.190(1), State v. Mark, 36 Wn.App. 428 (1984); I.

State v. Malychewski, 41 Wn.App. 488 (1985)

Where juvenile is sentenced for two crimes, one of which qualifies him as a serious offender, RCW 13.40.020(1), respondent may be sentenced for both crimes within the range for serious offenders; II.

State v. Taylor, 42 Wn.App. 74 (1985)

To exceed standard range, state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that juvenile would present a serious and clear danger to society if standard range were imposed; one need not be a "serious offender," RCW 13.30.020(1), to pose a serious danger to society; II.

State v. Cirkovich, 42 Wn.App. 403 (1985)

A serious offender or a juvenile sentenced to greater than 30 days may not thereafter have his sentence modified by the trial court; I.

State v. Calloway, 42 Wn.App. 420 (1985)

To determine criminal history, RCW 13.40.020(6)(a), "two or more charges arising out of the same course of conduct" means that there was no substantial change in the nature of the criminal objective; here, two burglaries committed in one hour to buy drugs did not arise from the same course of conduct; but see: State v. Adcock, 36 Wn.App. 699 (1984); II.

State v. Morse, 45 Wn.App. 197 (1986)

Restitution following juvenile court conviction of negligent driving may not include travel, telephone expenses or attorney fees, RCW 13.40.190(17); trial court need not consider comparative negligence in determining restitution amount; I.

State v. Huff, 45 Wn.App. 479 (1986)

In computing criminal history, prior convictions of reckless burning and burglary, committed at the same residence within a brief time span are not within the "same course of conduct,"RCW 13.40.020(6)(a), as there was not an objectively discernible relationship between the crimes such that they arose from a single criminal objective, and one of the crimes did not merely facilitate the other, State v. Adcock, 36 Wn.App. 699 (1984), State v. Calloway, 42 Wn.App. 420 (1985), thus for purposes of disposition, the priors were distinct offenses; I.

In re Latson, 45 Wn.App. 716 (1986)

Recent extensive criminal history is a proper aggravating factor, RCW 13.40.150(3)(i)(iv) to permit a manifest injustice finding; II.

State v. Wall, 46 Wn.App. 218 (1986)

Respondent placed his hand on crotches of 14 and 17-year-old females, convicted of simple assault; trial court sentenced respondent as middle offender to detention, RCW 13.40.160(4), finding victims were particularly vulnerable, RCW 13.40.150(3)(i)(iii); held: to confine a juvenile middle offender beyond standard range without finding a manifest injustice, court must find an aggravating factor; to find victim particularly vulnerable, court must use same definition as under Sentencing Reform Act, RCW 9.94A.309, to include age, disability, thus remanded for resentencing; I.

State v. Quiroz, 107 Wn.2d 791 (1987)

A diversion agreement, RCW 13.40.080, may be used to enhance sentence in a subsequent proceeding where the agreement stated the crimes charged, the respondent was given written notice of his right to counsel; juvenile need not be notified of all of the constitutional rights which would apply if he were to plead guilty; 9-0.

State v. Brown, 47 Wn.App. 729 (1987)

RCW 13.40.181(2), limiting court to a disposition of not more than 300% of term imposed for the most serious offense, applies to offenses contained in a single information and not to all offenses heard at a single disposition hearing; accord: State v. Dodd, 56 Wn.App. 257 (1989); I.

State v. Escoto, 108 Wn.2d 1 (1987)

Juvenile court may order a psychological evaluation of respondent for use in disposition where the court permits counsel to be present at the evaluation and where the respondent is aware of his right to remain silent; see: State v. Decker, 68 Wn.App. 246 (1992), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967 (1999), State v. Diaz-Cardona, 123 Wn.App. 477 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Perez, 49 Wn.App. 45 (1987)

At disposition where standard range calls for community supervision but state is seeking manifest injustice finding and commitment, there is a right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, State v. Whittington, 27 Wn.App. 422 (1980); where respondent is middle offender, and confinement is within standard range, court may consider hearsay reports at disposition; I.

State v. Curwood, 50 Wn.App. 228 (1987)

Where juvenile court has extended jurisdiction to a date beyond respondent's 18th birthday, and disposition occurs within the extended jurisdictional period, then state may retain custody over respondent during the full term of his confinement; I; see also: State v. Forhan, 59 Wn.App. 486 (1990).

State v. S.P., 110 Wn.2d 886 (1988)

At disposition hearing, juvenile has statutory right to confront author of a report that is relevant and material to the disposition if the author is reasonably available, RCW 13.40.151(1), reversing State v. S.P., 49 Wn.App. 45 (1986); 8-0.

State v. Bryant, 51 Wn.App. 258 (1988)

Court may confine for up to 30 days for violation of an order of community supervision, RCW 13.40.200(3)(a); III.

State v. Haaby, 51 Wn.App. 771 (1988)

Juvenile court may not enhance penalty by use of diversion agreements signed before respondent was 12 unless it rebuts the statutory presumption of incapacity, RCW 9A.04.050, distinguishing State v. Quiroz, 107 Wn.2d 791 (1987); III.

State v. Steward, 52 Wn.App. 413 (1988)

Respondent is convicted of taking a motor vehicle without permission, RCW 9A.56.070; juvenile court finds that respondent abandoned vehicle, which was stripped, orders restitution for damages; held: RCW 13.40.190 authorizes restitution as the damages resulted from the respondent's offense, distinguishing State v. Ashley, 40 Wn.App. 877 (1985); I.

State v. Yadon, 53 Wn.App. 489 (1989)

A minor/first offender may be sentenced to community supervision of up to one year; I.

State v. Horner, 53 Wn.App. 806 (1989)

The value of a victim's labor in making repairs to property damaged by respondent may be included in a restitution order, RCW 13.40.020(17); court may base restitution order upon an estimate of the cost a professional would have charged; I.

State v. Merz, 54 Wn.App. 23 (1989)

A juvenile respondent's plea bargain with the prosecutor does not bind the probation counselor; see: State v. Harris, 57 Wn.2d 383 (1960); I.

State v. Tauala, 54 Wn.App. 81 (1989)

Where the record supports an exceptional disposition (here, an aggravated assault), a probation counselor's recommendation that the standard range would provide sufficient treatment is not binding on the court, distinguishing State v. P., 37 Wn.App. 733 (1984); I.

State v. Barrett, 54 Wn.App. 178 (1989)

Juvenile passenger in stolen vehicle, convicted of taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070, may be ordered to make restitution for damages to the vehicle pursuant to RCW 13.40.190(1); I.

State v. Poupart, 54 Wn.App. 440 (1989)

Probation counselors and caseworkers are not bound by a plea agreement and may make recommendations independent of the prosecutor, see: State v. Harris, 146 Wn.2d 339 (2002); I.

State v. Miller, 54 Wn.App. 763 (1989)

Juvenile offender may be sentenced to longer than an adult would receive for same crime under SRA; II.

State v. Anderson, 58 Wn.App. 107 (1990)

The aggregate of consecutive terms imposed for two or more offenses in the same information shall not exceed 300% of the actual term imposed by the judge, not the most serious term which could be imposed, RCW 13.40.180(2); I.

State v. Richard, 58 Wn.App. 357 (1990)

Where court does not expressly delegate to juvenile probation counselor authority to set a curfew, respondent's violation of curfew set by counselor is not a violation of the terms of community supervision, RCW 13.40.200, former RCW 13.40.020(3), see also: State v. Clark, 91 Wn.App. 581 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999); II.

State v. Payne, 58 Wn.App. 215 (1990)

Inflicting serious bodily injury cannot be an aggravating factor justifying a manifest injustice for murder as it inheres in the crime charged; where victim dies instantly, then heinous, cruel or depraved manner is not an aggravating factor, State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63 (1991); victim is not "particularly vulnerable" where she is shot in the back at home, off guard, State v. Wall, 46 Wn.App. 218 (1986); I.

State v. Radcliff, 58 Wn.App. 717 (1990)

Written findings are not required for disposition hearings, JuCR 7.12; court is not limited to express statutory aggravating and mitigating factors in RCW 13.40.150, State v. Strong, 23 Wn.App. 789, 793 (1979); assaulting a staff member of a rehabilitation facility is an aggravating factor; I.

State v. Forhan, 59 Wn.App. 486 (1990)

Where disposition is imposed prior to a respondent's 18th birthday, jurisdiction is automatically extended to allow for execution and enforcement of the disposition order, RCW 13.40.300(1)(c), cf.: State v. Curwood, 50 Wn.App. 228 (1987), State v. Dion, 160 Wn.2d 605 (2007); I.

State v. Melton, 63 Wn.App. 63 (1991)

Pending criminal charges is not aggravating factor to support manifest injustice finding; recent criminal history, previous failure to comply with disposition orders, need of long-term residential treatment, danger to community are aggravating factors, State v. Tuala, 54 Wn.App. 81, 88 (1989), see: State v. Halstien, 122 Wn.2d 109 (1993); I.

State v. Bennett, 63 Wn.App. 530 (1991)

Juvenile on social security with representative payee is ordered to ask guardian for money to pay restitution; held: no abuse of discretion in ordering restitution and ordering respondent to ask payee for funds from social security checks; defendant has burden of establishing that she had proprietary interest in some of the property for which she is ordered to pay restitution, RCW 13.30.020(17); I.

State v. J.N., 64 Wn.App. 112 (1992)

In child rape 1°, finding of a high risk to reoffend based upon evidence of denial, projection of responsibility on victim, planning of offense, is sufficient to support manifest injustice, State v. S.H., 75 Wn.App. 1 (1994), State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967, 981-83 (1999), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 163 (2003); SRA cases on future dangerousness, e.g., State v. Pryor, 115 Wn.2d 445 (1990), State v. Barnes, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991), do not apply to juvenile dispositions; I.

State v. B.E.W., 65 Wn.App. 370 (1992)

Where probation counselor recommends manifest injustice disposition, defense is on notice that one is possible; prosecutor need not seek manifest injustice and file supplemental information, distinguishing Specht v. Patterson, 18 L.Ed.2d 326 (1967), State v. Whittington, 27 Wn.App. 422 (1980).

State v. Bryant, 65 Wn.App. 547 (1992)

Judge makes oral findings, imposes exceptional sentence; after appeal filed, commissioner signs findings of fact; held: only judge who has heard evidence has authority to find facts, CR 63(b), CrR 6.11, thus remanded for entry of findings by disposition judge or for a new disposition hearing, cf.: State v. Ward, 182 Wn.App. 574 (2014); I.

State v. Howell, 119 Wn.2d 513 (1992)

Special Sex Offender Disposition Alternative (SSODA), RCW 13.40.0357, Schedule D-1, option C and RCW 13.40.160(2), authorize trial court to impose up to 30 days confinement upon minor/first offender without manifest injustice finding; 9-0.

State v. E.J.H., 65 Wn.App. 771 (1992)

Written findings are not required to support manifest injustice finding, see: State v. Bevins, 85 Wn.App. 280 (1997); manifest injustice disposition is not clearly excessive where imposed for rehabilitation purposes and to remove respondent from society, State v. F.T., 5 Wn.App,.2d 448 (2018), distinguishing State v. P, 37 Wn.App. 773 (1984); I.

State v. S.S., 67 Wn.App. 800 (1992)

Court imposes manifest injustice disposition, relying in part upon social worker's written report, over objection, social worker being on vacation, state having made no effort to compel his attendance; held: confrontation clause did not bar admission of letter into evidence where the letter merely sought to add weight to identical recommendations of other professionals which defendant had the opportunity to rebut, State v. Short, 12 Wn.App. 125, 132 (1974), ER 1101(c)(3), State v. Beard, 39 Wn.App. 601, 607-8 (1985), State v. S.P., 110 Wn.2d 886, 889 n. 1 (1988); cf.: *State v. Mandatory driving privilege revocation for minor in possession of alcohol or drug conviction of juveniles, RCW 13.40.265(1(a) does not violate equal protection clause; affirms State v. Preston, 66 Wn.App. 494 (1992); 5-2.

State v. Hayden, 72 Wn.App. 27 (1993)

Respondent-sex offender's community supervision conditions are modified to prohibit contact with juveniles when he moves to a home with young children, no evidence of a violation of previous conditions; held: court's authority to modify sex offender disposition can be implied from general structure of Juvenile Justice Act, State v. T.E.C., 122 Wn.App. 9, 25-31 (2004); I.

State v. Bourgeois, 72 Wn.App. 650, 656-8 (1994)

Juvenile court may impose a maximum term beyond offender's 21st birthday, although respondent must be released at 21 years of age; possible early release by Department of Juvenile Rehabilitation is not a basis for a manifest injustice finding, State v. Fisher, 108 Wn.2d 419 (1987), State v. S.H., 75 Wn.App. 1 (1994), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 163, 164-65 (2003), *see: State v. State v. M.L., 134 Wn.2d 657 (1997)

Ten-year-old pleads guilty to rape 1° and attempted rape 1°, prosecutor, defense and probation counselor recommend exceptional sentences, court sentences to ten times the longest recommended sentence, ordering confinement to age 21; held: sentence ten times as long as the longest sentence recommended is excessive when imposed upon a ten-year old boy, cf.: State v. Minor, 133 Wn.App. 636, 645-47 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 162 Wn.2d 796 (2008), remanded for resentencing before a different judge; per curiam.

State v. Duncan, 90 Wn.App. 809 (1998)

Juvenile court judge states that he cannot consider good time in disposition, then imposes manifest injustice sentence to include sufficient time beyond respondent's 21st birthday to keep him in custody until 21 years of age, adopting juvenile rehabilitation board's recommendation which expressly considered good time; held: length of sentence did consider good time, which is an improper factor, State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828 (1997), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151, 164-65 (2003), absent specific need for specific treatment program; III.

State v. Evans, 97 Wn.App. 273 (1999)

Where legislature sets standard range for a crime regardless of offender's criminal history, former RCW 13.40.0357, then lack of history is not a valid basis for manifest injustice disposition, cf.: State v. Lewis, 114 Wn.App. 205 (2002); juvenile court may find a manifest injustice and impose a downward exceptional sentence where it finds that standard range is not needed to rehabilitate the offender or protect the public, see: State v. M.L., 114 Wn.App. 358 (2002), and may consider a lack of criminal history; voluntary use of alcohol and drugs is not a mitigating factor; I.

State v. W.CF., 97 Wn.App. 401 (1999)

Upon finding violation of disposition, juvenile court may extend period of community supervision at a modification hearing beyond maximum statutory period without finding a manifest injustice, In re Welfare of Hoffer, 34 Wn.App. 82, 86-87 (1983), State v. Martin, 102 Wn.2d 300, 303 (1984); I.

State v. J.A.B., 98 Wn.App. 662 (2000)

State v. T.C., 99 Wn.App. 701 (2000)

In imposing a manifest injustice disposition, juvenile court may consider uncharged but admitted criminal conduct in support of a high risk to reoffend aggravating factor, State v. J.N., 64 Wn.App. 112 (1992); I.

State v. L.W., 101 Wn.App. 595 (2000)

Time spent pretrial in a group home pursuant to court order does not count as credit for time served even if restrictions are functionally equivalent to detention-type confinement; I.

State v. H.E.J., 102 Wn.2d 84 (2000)

Respondent, convicted of a nonsex offense felony (indecent liberties), may be ordered to have a sexual deviancy evaluation and may be ordered to have no unsupervised contact with minors younger than himself; I.

State v. D.H., 102 Wn.App. 620, 628-29 (2000)

Respondent is convicted of one count of sexual exploitation of a minor, acquitted of another, court orders respondent to have no contact with complainant of acquitted count; held: juvenile court could reasonably find that prohibiting contact with complainant of acquitted count would facilitate respondent's rehabilitation, thus no abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Lopez, 105 Wn.App. 688 (2001)

Trial court may not defer disposition, RCW 13.40.127, after trial, nor may a deferred disposition be granted pursuant to manifest injustice, State v. Mohamoud, 159 Wn.App. 753 (2011); III.

State v. J.A., 105 Wn.App. 879 (2001)

During period of deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127, respondent commits a new crime, juvenile court dismisses absent "full compliance," RCW 13.40.127(9), state appeals; held: juvenile court has discretion to determine what constitutes lack of compliance and, upon finding no lack of compliance, then court may find full compliance and dismiss; I.

State v. A.K.B., 107 Wn.App. 209 (2001)

Where juvenile court defers disposition, RCW 13.40.127, and orders that it will set restitution during the deferral period but fails to do so, it may not set a restitution amount after the deferral period and, if other conditions are met, must dismiss; II.

State v. A.M., 109 Wn.App. 325 (2001)

Juvenile court must impose a victim penalty assessment "for each case or cause of action," RCW 7.68.035 (1)(b), see: State v. Q.D., 102 Wn.2d. 19, 29 (1984); here, trial court "consolidated" three unrelated charges, brought under separate cause numbers, for disposition, but is still obliged to impose VPA for each; I.

State v. H.J., 111 Wn.App. 298 (2002)

Court sentences respondent to what it believes is a standard range sentence, state later moves to modify sentence on grounds that court erred as to length of community supervision, court imposes manifest injustice disposition over defense double jeopardy objection; held: except where a sentencing is more like a trial, as in death penalty, Bullington v. Missouri, 68 L.Ed.2d 270 (1981), or habitual criminal proceedings, State v. Hennings, 100 Wn.2d 379 (1983), double jeopardy clause does not bar the court from resentencing and finding manifest injustice, State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401, 410-12 (1992), at least where court rejects state's initial request for manifest injustice; I.

State v. Watson, 146 Wn.2d 947 (2002)

Juvenile court may not impose two deferred dispositions, RCW 13.40.127, for separate offenses, as once the first order is signed, respondent has a prior deferred disposition; affirms State v. Watson, 107 Wn.App. 540 (2001); 5-4.

State v. A.M.R., 147 Wn.2d 91 (2002)

Juvenile court must order restitution, including that owed insurers; affirms State v. A.M.R., 108 Wn.App. 9 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Beaver, 148 Wn.2d 338 (2002)

Trial court finds manifest injustice, commits respondent to confinement until age 21 without possibility of early release; held: while only DSHS is authorized to set a release date, former RCW 13.40.210 (1994), State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828 (1997), State v. S.H., 75 Wn.App. 1 (1994), State v. Bourgeois, 72 Wn.App. 650 (1994), it is the function of the juvenile court to set a minimum term, RCW 13.40.030, which may equal the maximum term; reverses State v. Beaver, 110 Wn.App. 519 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Lewis, 114 Wn.App. 205 (2002)

Escape 2° is amenable to manifest injustice disposition, cf.: State v. K.E. [Evans], 97 Wn.App. 273 (1999); III.

State v. M.L., 114 Wn.App. 358 (2002)

Juvenile court is not required to impose manifest injustice disposition downward when it finds that less time would adequately rehabilitate the offender, cf.: State v. K.E. [Evans], 97 Wn.App. 273 (1999); while court must consider on the record aggravating or mitigating circumstances, it need not impose a lesser disposition based upon them, RCW 13.40.150, State v. Malychewski, 41 Wn.App. 488, 489 (1985), State v. N.E., 70 Wn.App. 602, 607 (1993); respondent may appeal a standard range disposition on grounds that juvenile court failed to apply correct legal standard and procedure, State v. Mail, 121 Wn.2d 707, 712 (1993); I.

State v. Barker, 114 Wn.App. 504 (2002)

Juvenile court may not impose more than 30 days for multiple probation violations of a single disposition order, RCW 13.40.200(3), distinguishing State v. Edgley, 92 Wn.App. 478 (1998), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Nolan, 141 Wn.2d 620 (2000); II.

State v. O'Brien, 115 Wn.App. 599 (2003)

Juvenile court has authority to issue no-contact order as part of disposition order; III.

State v. J.P., 149 Wn.2d 444 (2003)

Restitution for counseling may only be ordered for sex offenses in juvenile court, RCW 13.40.020(22), see: State v. Landrum, 66 Wn.App. 791 (1992), reversing State v. J.P., 149 Wn.2d 444 (2003); 9-0.

Special Sex Offense Disposition Alternative, RCW 13.40.160(3), in not available for assault 4°, juvenile court may not suspend sentence, RCW 13.40.160(6), State v. Bacon, 190 Wn.2d 458 (2018); I.

State v. Lown, 116 Wn.App. 402, 408-11 (2003)

Respondent, on deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127, is found to have used drugs, juvenile court reinstates deferred disposition; held: court is not obliged to revoke deferred disposition even if new crime is found, RCW 13.40.020(4); III.

State v. Crabtree, 116 Wn.App. 536 (2003), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Bacon, 190 Wn.2d 458 (2018)

Extreme youth, absence of effective treatment in institutions, good progress in community, underlying purposes of juvenile justice act, negative effect on community of institutionalizing 12 year old are all tenable grounds for manifest injustice downward; suspended sentence under Chemical Dependency Disposition Alternative, RCW 13.40.165, is proper where court enters disposition outside standard range; rehabilitation is a proper factor, distinguishing State v. Bridges, 104 Wn.App. 98 (2001); III.

State v. E.A.J., 116 Wn.App. 777, 789-94 (2003)

Escalating pattern of criminal behavior justifies manifest injustice; as long as respondent is told at plea hearing that the court need not follow anyone's recommendation, then a sua sponte manifest injustice finding does not violate due process notice requirement, but see: State v. Gutierrez, 37 Wn.App. 910, 916 (1984), State v. Falling, 50 Wn.App. 47, 51-52 (1987); III.

State v. Haws, 118 Wn.App. 36 (2003)

Court may consider the facts of an offense in deciding to deny a deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127; II.

State v. T.E.C., 122 Wn.App. 9 (2004)

Court imposes manifest injustice sentence upward, suspends it on condition of SSODA, RCW 13.40.160, directing that respondent be placed within secure treatment facility, five months later when no placement was obtained, revokes; held: following an evaluation, a "moderate to high risk of reoffense" is a proper aggravating factor, see: State v. T.E.H., 91 Wn.App. 908, 917-18 (1998), State v. T.C., 99 Wn.App. 701, 707 (2000), State v. S.H., 75 Wn.App. 1, 7-8 (1994), *State v. Redmond v. Bagby, 155 Wn.2d 59 (2005)

Statutes which mandate suspension of drivers' licenses following convictions for reckless driving, RCW 46.61.500, driving while license invalidated, RCW 46.20.342, vehicular homicide, RCW 46.61.520 and minor in possession of alcohol, RCW 66.44.270(2), do not violate due process, distinguishing Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004), due to a heightened government interest in highway safety and a decreased likelihood of erroneous deprivation; 7-2.

State v. Tai N., 127 Wn.App. 733 (2005)

Respondent is convicted of possession with intent to deliver 108 pounds of marijuana, receives manifest injustice sentence; held: quantity alone is not a basis to impose an exceptional sentence on a juvenile, distinguishing State v. Hrycenko, 85 Wn.App. 543, 548 (1997), since a juvenile court must find, beyond a reasonable doubt (clear and convincing equals beyond a reasonable doubt in this context), State v. N.B., 127 Wn.App. 776 (2005), but see: State v. T.J.S.-M., 193 Wn.2d 450 (2019), that the standard range for this offense and this respondent presents a danger to society, State v. Rhodes, 92 Wn.2d 755, 760 (1979), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448 (2003); juvenile court's imposition of manifest injustice to "send a message" is not a valid basis; I.

State v. N.B., 127 Wn.App. 776 (2005)

Following guilty plea, respondent submits to deviancy evaluation and admits to other sex offenses, court imposes manifest injustice; held: respondent's failure to invoke his Fifth Amendment privilege is a waiver, State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967, 973-75 (1999), see: State v. Diaz-Cardona, 123 Wn.App. 477 (2004); I.

State v. Meade, 129 Wn.App. 918 (2005)

Juvenile court must focus on offender's circumstances and consider numerous factors not relevant to adult sentencing, State v. Tai N., 127 Wn.App. 733, 744 (2005); recent criminal history, failure to follow treatment programs, failure to comply with conditions of recent disposition or diversion order, offending while release pending, failure to follow probation, risk to reoffend are all aggravating factors justifying manifest injustice; respondent is not entitled to a jury trial on aggravating factors in juvenile court, State v. Minor, 133 Wn.App. 636, 647-48 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 162 Wn.2d 796 (2008), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004); proof of aggravating factors by clear and convincing evidence, RCW

13.40.160(2), is the equivalent of beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Rhodes, 92 Wn.2d 755, 760 (1979), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 461 (2003), but see: State v. T.J.S.-M., 193 Wn.2d 450 (2019); II.

State v. Zimmerman, 130 Wn.App. 122 (2005)

State files modification petition alleging new theft, withdraws it over objection and files new charge, defense motion to dismiss is denied; held: while state must elect between a modification based upon a new crime and a new charge, RCW 13.40.070(3), State v. Tinh Quoc Tran, 117 Wn.App. 126 (2003), State v. Murrin, 85 Wn.App. 754 (1997), respondent has no right to plead to a modification petition, state's initial decision to file a motion for a violation hearing does not bar it from withdrawing the allegation and separately prosecuting; III.

State v. Linssen, 131 Wn.App. 292 (2006)

When imposing a special sex offender disposition alternative (SSODA), RCW 13.40.160, trial court must impose a determinate sentence within the standard range and suspend it; III.

State v. J.V., 132 Wn.App. 533 (2006)

Respondent signs contract with state to enter treatment court, setting forth treatment conditions and agreement that court may impose sanctions including termination and sentence, upon revocation juvenile court imposes manifest injustice disposition; held: treatment court contract need not expressly advise respondent that minifest injustice disposition was a possibility as statutes provide notice that satisfies due process; need for treatment is a proper aggravating factor, State v. S.H., 75 Wn.App. 1, 12 (1994); poor performance in treatment prior to revocation is a basis for manifest injustice disposition; where contract provides that what respondent says in treatment about drug and alcohol use cannot be used in court, it is error to use it for manifest injustice; failing to meet statutory mitigating factor of more than one year between current offense and a prior offense, RCW 13.40.150(3)(h)(v), cannot be considered an aggravating factor; I.

Following filing of charge, juvenile probation counselor files notice of intent to seek manifest injustice, respondent pleads guilty to standard range recommendation by prosecutor, court imposes manifest injustice disposition; held: notice was sufficient, probation counselor was not obliged to include basis of manifest injustice in notice in juvenile court; II.

State v. G.A.H., 133 Wn.App. 567 (2006)

In a juvenile offender proceeding, court may not order DSHS to place respondent in foster care, as DSHS is not a party; I.

State v. C.D.C., 145 Wn.App. 621 (2008)

Maximum community supervision for assault 4º with sexual motivation is 12 months, as it is not a felony sex offense, RCW 9.94A.030; II.

State v. M.C., 148 Wn.App. 968 (2009)

Trial court may not impose victim penalty assessment, RCW 7.68.035(1)(b), as a condition of a deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127, see: State v. C.R.H., 107 Wn.App. 591 (2001); I.

State v. S.S.Y., 150 Wn.App. 325, 329-32 (2009), 170 Wn.2d 322 (2010)

Juvenile offenses of robbery and assault do not merge as legislature expressed its intent to punish the offenses separately, RCW 13.40.180, distinguishing State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005); to apply 150% rule, disposition court must determine if offenses constitute same criminal conduct, State v. Contreras, 124 Wn.2d 741 (1994), and if one offense is an element of the other; II.

Eighth Amendment precludes sentence of life without parole of a juvenile tried in adult court for a non-homicide offense, Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460, 183 L.Ed.2d 407 (2012), Montgomery v. Louisiana, 577 U.S. 190, 136 S.Ct. 718, 193 L.Ed.2d 599 (2016), see: State v. Ramos, 189 Wn.App. 431 (2015), 187 Wn.2d 420 (2017), State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1 (2017), *Virginia v. Pers. Restraint of Brady, 154 Wn.App. 189 (2010)

In 1996 Juvenile Court enters restitution order, in 2007 court, by ex parte order, State v. Hotrum, 120 Wn.App. 681 (2004), extends jurisdiction for an additional ten years and imposes a $200 "extension fee;" held: because state waited more than ten years to apply for extension, judgments were unenforceable even though respondent had not turned 28 years old, RCW 13.40.190(1), -192, 6.17.020; extension of judgment fee, RCW 36.18.016(15), does not apply to juvenile court; generally, no right to counsel for post-conviction proceedings, State v. Winston, 105 Wn.App. 318, 321 (2001); III.

State v. Tucker, 171 Wn.2d 50 (2011)

Before end of deferred disposition, probation officer files a report which recommends that revocation hearing be set if defendant doesn't prove payment of LFOs, after end of deferred disposition period prosecutor notes revocation hearing and court revokes; held: while a juvenile court maintains jurisdiction to enforce conditions if a violation proceeding is instituted before termination of the period of community custody, State v. Todd, 103 Wn.App. 783, 789-90 (2000), see also: State v. J.O., 165 Wn.App. 570 (2011), report by probation officer did not seek current relief and state the basis for relief, CR 7(b), thus there was no timely written motion and court therefore lost jurisdiction when period of supervision expired; reverses, in part, State v. N.S.T., 156 Wn.App. 444 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Mohamoud, 159 Wn.App. 753 (2011)

Parties negotiate reduction of charge on condition defendant does not seek a deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127, trial court sua sponte defers disposition, state appeals; held: statute which requires a motion for deferred disposition be made at least fourteen days before commencement of trial precludes a deferred disposition after a plea or trial where no timely motion was made, State v. Lopez, 105 Wn.App. 688 (2001); because statute requires parental consultation, consideration of benefit to community and respondent, absence of these findings precludes deferred disposition; juvenile court judge lacks authority to order deferred disposition on its own initiative; I.

State v. I.K.C., 160 Wn.App. 660 (2011)

Juvenile court may not impose detention as a condition of a deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127; II.

State v. J.O., 165 Wn.App. 570 (2011)

Respondent receives deferred disposition on condition of pay restitution and provide DNA sample, RCW 43.43.754, before end of deferral period state files motion to revoke for failure to pay, court continues hearing beyond deferral period, at the hearing state withdraws motion to revoke as respondent would pay restitution that day, defense asks to strike DNA sample requirement, court later denies and orders respondent to supply DNA sample; held: court loses authority to enforce a condition of community supervision when a violation of the condition is not alleged by written motion prior to the end of the deferral period, State v. Tucker, 171 Wn.2d 50, 53 (2011), State v. Y.I., 94 Wn.App. 919, 923-24 (1999), State v. May, 80 Wn.App. 711 (1996), even if condition is mandatory; here, state's motion to revoke filed within the deferral period did not allege failure to provide DNA sample, thus court lacked authority to order it after the deferral period; I.

State v. Kinchen, 92 Wn.App. 442 (1998)

A parent can be guilty of unlawful imprisonment, RCW 9A.40.040(1), of his own children where the restrictions on the child's movements, viewed objectively, are excessive, immoderate or unreasonable, but where the victim has and uses a means of escape, here a window and a sliding glass door, evidence is insufficient, c.f: State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019), but see: State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App.2d 133 (2020); I.

State v. Simms, 95 Wn.App. 910 (1999)

Defendant drives 93-year-old man away over man's daughter's objection, state offers no evidence that defendant was incompetent; held: to convict of kidnapping 2°, RCW 9A.40.030, state must prove victim was incompetent at the time of the crime to consent to a car ride, statute requires that if incompetency exists, then a legal guardian having lawful control capable of giving consent must have been appointed and have failed to give consent; here, no guardian was appointed, thus there was no kidnapping; II.

State v. Ayala, 108 Wn.App. 480 (2001)

Defendant is accused of kidnapping for ransom, offers evidence that 14-year old victim was part of extortion plot against his father, trial court precludes defense and cross-examination; held: acquiescence of a kidnap victim less than 16 years old is statutorily excluded as a defense, RCW 9A.40.020(2)(b); confrontation clause does not oblige a court to allow cross-examination on irrelevant issues: 2-1, III.

State v. Liden, 118 Wn.App. 734 (2003)

Defendant's conviction in 1996 of unlawful imprisonment does not oblige him to register as a kidnapping offender, RCW 9A.44.130, where he was only on monetary supervision when legislature created the failure to register offense, RCW 9.94A.130; II.

State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, 700-07 (2004), reversed, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006)

During home invasion robberies, victims are restrained with duct tape, moved into another room and robbed, state charges robbery and kidnapping; held: kidnapping charges were incidental to the robberies because restraints were for the sole purpose of facilitating the robberies, forcible restraint of victims was inherent in the robberies, victims were not transported away from their homes to some remote spot where they were not likely to be found, duration of restraint was not substantially longer than that required for commission of the robberies, restraints did not create a significant danger independent of that posed by the robberies themselves, State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216, 227 (1980), State v. Ingham, 26 Wn.App. 45, 49 (1980), see: State v. Allen, 94 Wn.2d 860 (1980), State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014), but see: State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983), State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563 (2005), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 503-42 (2013), cf.: State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885, 901-03 (2010), Whitfield v. United States, 574 U.S. 265, 135 S.Ct. 785, 190 L.Ed.2d. 656 (2015), thus kidnapping charges are dismissed; III.

State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 815-19 (2004)

Victim voluntarily enters defendant's home, is then bound, gagged and killed, defendant is convicted, inter alia, of kidnapping; held: initial voluntary action by victim does not preclude a successful kidnapping claim, see: State v. Harris, 36 Wn.App. 746, 753 (1984), State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671 (1979); fact that victim's car was outside does not defeat proof that she was secreted in a place where she was not likely to be found, RCW 9A.40.020, distinguishing

State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980); kidnapping was not incidental to rape, State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 503-42 (2013), see: State v. Harris, supra. at 752, State v. Whitney, 44 Wn.App. 17, 20-21 (1986), State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 166 (1995), State v. Johnson, supra. at 676, State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885, 901-03 (2010); here, predicate crimes are not sufficiently intertwined to apply merger doctrine, State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701, 720 (1981); 2-1, II.

Kidnapping and robbery convictions for robbing victim and binding him up in bathroom of store do not violate double jeopardy nor do they merge, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983), Pers. Restraint of Fletcher, 113 Wn.2d 42, 50 (1989), State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.2d 926 (1982), State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 66-69 (1994), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), see: State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, reversed, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); 5-4.

State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 424-25 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008)

Adult grabs a child's arm, pulls her to the ground, tells her to sit in a room, she testifies she was afraid to leave, satisfies definition of restraint, RCW 9A.40.040(1),where there are no alternative ways to leave, State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019), distinguishing State v. Kinchen, 92 Wn.App. 442, 452 (1998); III.

State v. Washington, 135 Wn.2d 42, 49-50 (2006)

Defendant orders victim into car, victim leaves door open, defendant orders victim to shut door, she tries to leave, defendant grabs her and punches her, is convicted of unlawful imprisonment, RCW 9A.40.040(1); held: restraint was not incidental to the assault, see: State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 503-42 (2013), rather the assault was a reaction to victim's resistance to the restraint; by physically forcing victim back inside, defendant defeated any means of escape, distinguishing State v. Kinchen, 92 Wn.App. 442, 452 n. 16 (1998); I.

State v. Lopez, 142 Wn.App. 341, 348-51 (2007)

A parent can be convicted of kidnapping 2º of his own child, even where his parental rights have not been limited, where the parent engages in misconduct affecting the child's well-being, State v. La Caze, 95 Wn.2d 760, 761 (1981), State v. Tuitasi, 46 Wn.App. 206 (1986); where a parent threatens to take the child with the sole intent to compel the other parent to do something against her will, the statutory right to equal custody does not give a parent legal authority to engage in such conduct; I.

State v. Boss, 167 Wn.2d 710 (2009)

In custodial interference case, RCW 9A.40.060 (1988), validity of a court order giving Child Protective Services temporary custody is an issue of law, not one for the jury, see: State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005), Seattle v. May, 171 Wn.2d 847 (2011), State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019); defendant's knowledge of the custody order's validity is not an element of the crime; whether CPS had a lawful right to physical custody is a matter for the jury; defendant's knowledge of CPS' right to custody is not an element of the offense; affirms State v. Boss, 144 Wn.App. 878 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885, 901-03 (2010)

Kidnapping is never incidental to a conviction for conspiracy to commit robbery, as the conspiracy is completed before the actual robbery; kidnapping is not incidental to burglary where burglary was completed when defendants entered the victims' home with intent to commit a crime, distinguishing State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, 700-07 (2004), reversed, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013); II.

State v. Dillon, 163 Wn.App. 101 (2011)

Defendant meets 13 year old in a chat service, picks him up in his car, takes him to his home, has sex and, upon complainant's request, drives him home, is convicted of kidnapping 1°; held: state proved the "without consent" element of restraint, RCW 9A.40.010(1) (1975) [amended in 2011 to add gender neutral language] due to complainant's age, but absent evidence that complainant's liberty was compromised or that defendant intended to restrict his movements, evidence is insufficient, distinguishing State v. Billups, 62 Wn.App. 122 (1991), State v. Ong, 88 Wn.App. 572, 576-77 (1997); II.

State v. Kirwin, 166 Wn.App. 659 (2012)

Defendant-mother removes children from jurisdiction, depriving father of court-ordered visitation, is charged with custodial interference under prong prohibiting denying access to parent having physical custody, RCW 9A.40.060(1) (1998), to convict instruction addresses only depriving parent of visitation, RCW 9A.40.060(2); held: where state presents sufficient evidence of the offense in the to convict instruction but not the crime charged in the information, remedy is dismissal with prejudice; 2-1, III.

State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012)

Defendant pushes into victim's home with gun, ties her up, drags her downstairs, ransacks house, is convicted of robbery and kidnapping; held: separate convictions for robbery 1° and kidnapping 1° do not violate double jeopardy or merge, state does not have to prove that one crime was not incidental to the other, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 422-23 (1983), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), but see: State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004), rev'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); 2-1, I.

State v. Veliz, 176 Wn.2d 849 (2013)

A domestic violence protection order with a child visitation provision is not a "court-ordered parenting plan" required to prove custodial interference 1°, RCW 9A.40.060(2) (1998), see: State v. Pesta, 87 Wn.App. 515 (1997); only a document created under ch. 26.09 RCW qualifies; reverses State v. Veliz, 160 Wn.App. 396 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494, 403-45 (2013)

Defendant drags victim upstairs, attempts to rape her, is convicted of unlawful imprisonment and attempted rape, maintains on appeal that unlawful imprisonment was incidental to the attempted rape; held: "a defendant's conviction of a restraint-based offense is not subject to reversal on…due process grounds based upon a claim that the restraint in the offense was 'incidental' to another charged offense;" kidnapping does not merge into rape, defendant may be punished for both, State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), but see: State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885 (2010), Pers. Restraint of Bybee, 142 Wn.App. 260 (2007), State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800 (2004), State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, reversed, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014*)*; 2-1, I.

State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 835-44 (2014)

Defendant enters an occupied mobile home, awakens resident, remains for two hours, complainant frightened, talks to complainant, briefly picks up a knife and holds it two feet from complainant but does not threaten her, leaves, is convicted of kidnapping 1°, RCW 9A.40.020 (2011), by modes of holding her as a hostage or shield and to inflict extreme mental distress; held: hostage/shield mode requires proof of intent to use victim as security for performance of some action by another or prevention of action by another, neither present here; extreme mental distress prong requires intent to cause mental distress above that of an abduction, otherwise there would be no difference between that mode and kidnapping 2°, evidence was thus insufficient for both modes, cf.: State v. Harrington, 181 Wn.App. 805 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 300-04 (2014)

Unlawful imprisonment information which alleges that defendant knowingly restrained victim need not include definition of "restrain" in the information, as the definition of "restrain" defines and limits the scope of the essential elements but is not itself an essential element, State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611, 626-27 (2013), distinguishing State v. Warfield, 103 Wn.App. 152 (2000), see: State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App.2d 133 (2020); reverses, in part, State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014)

Whether or not a kidnapping is incidental to another crime does not impact sufficiency of the evidence for the kidnapping; if the elements of kidnapping are established prima facie, then there is sufficient evidence regardless of merger analysis, State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820 (2012); reverses State v. Berg, 177 Wn.App. 119 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Cline, 180 Wn.App. 644 (2014)

Taking child from custodial parent without authority for a weekend is sufficient to prove "a protracted period" for purposes of custodial interference 1°, RCW 9A.40.060(3) (1998); III.

State v. Harrington, 181 Wn.App. 805 (2014)

Defendant displays gun, shuts victim in bedroom, commands she sit on the floor and drink alcohol, shoves her and holds her at gunpoint; held: evidence is sufficient to prove kidnapping 1º, RCW 9A.40.020 (2011), "with intent…to inflict bodily injury" and "to inflict extreme mental distress," distinguishing State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 835-44 (2014); "extreme mental distress" is not vague; III.

State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 531-34 (2018)

Kidnapping 1°, RCW 9A.40.020 (1)(c), (d), is a continuing course of conduct crime that continues until the victim's liberty is restored; here, defendant restrained victim in her car and, after she escaped, pursued her and tried to kidnap her again, is convicted of kidnapping and attempted kidnapping, because there were two separate course of conduct the convictions do not violate double jeopardy clause; II.

State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App.2d 133 (2020)

In unlawful imprisonment case, RCW 9A.40.040 (2011), trial court need not instruct jury that defendant acted knowingly without legal authority, RCW 9A.40.010(6) (2014), State v. Warfield, 103 Wn.App. 152 (2000), unless there is some evidence that defendant had a good faith belief that s/he had legal authority, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 300-04 (2014); having a means of escape is a defense to unlawful imprisonment, not an element of the offense, see: State v. Kinchen, 92 Wn.App. 442 (1998); I.

LAWFUL USE OF FORCE/SELF-DEFENSE

(see: INSTRUCTIONS/Self-Defense)

State v. Manuel, 94 Wn.2d 695 (1980)

In self-defense case, where seeking attorneys fees and costs pursuant to RCW 9.01.200, procedure is to bifurcate trial; following acquittal, jury should be instructed to answer interrogatories as to whether defendant proved, by a preponderance, his/her acts were reasonably necessary to defend him/herself against an attack s/he did not provoke or invite; see: State v. Huntley, 99 Wn.2d 27 (1983).

State v. Huntley, 99 Wn.2d 27 (1983)

Former RCW 9.01.200 [now RCW 9.16.110], providing for attorney's fees where a defendant is acquitted in self-defense cases, is constitutional, State v. Manuel, 94 Wn.2d 695 (1980); 9-0.

State v. Negrin, 37 Wn.App. 516 (1984)

After shooting, defendant learns victim had previously stated he was going to "cause someone to shoot him," excluded by trial court; held: properly excluded because, at time of shooting, defendant did not know who he was shooting at, thus statement of decedent was not relevant to defendant's apprehension of danger; but see: State v. Cloud, 7 Wn.App. 211, 217-18 (1972), Evans v. United States, 277 F.2d 354, 1 ALR 3d 566 (D.C. Cir. 1960); I.

State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984)

Battered woman syndrome may be proved by expert testimony where appropriate, but see: State v. Hanson, 58 Wn.App. 504 (1990), State v. Riker, 123 Wn.2d 351, 358-66 (1994), see also: State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Kelly, 102 Wn.2d 188 (1984)

Where battered woman syndrome is offered to explain lawful use of force, state may not then use prior aggressive acts by defendant, even against decedent, to rebut, as character is not an essential element of the self-defense claim, thus evidence of defendant's aggressive acts was irrelevant character evidence, ER 405(b), State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 565-66 (2014), reversing State v. Kelly, 33 Wn.App. 541 (1982); 8-1.

State v. Ekkelkamp, 42 Wn.App. 375 (1985)

When a police officer executes a facially valid warrant, there should be no justification to assault the arresting officer, State v. Belleman, 70 Wn.App. 778 (1993); "[a] person may use only reasonable force to resist an unlawful arrest. State v. Rousseau, 40 Wn.2d 92 (1952). It is unreasonable to use any force to resist an unlawful arrest, when the only apparent threat to the arrestee is the loss of freedom. Rousseau. State v. Goree, 36 Wn.App. 205, 209 (1983)," see: State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 837, 840-3 (1993), State v. Valentine, 75 Wn.App. 611 (1994); I.

State v. Alexander, 52 Wn.App. 897 (1988)

In self-defense case, victim's reputation for violence is admissible, ER 405(a), while specific acts of violence are not admissible, ER 405(b), see: State v. LeFaber, 77 Wn.App. 765 (1995), rev'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 896 (1996), State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 565-66 (2014), as victim's character trait of violence is not an essential element of claim of self-defense; thus, while victim's claim of peaceful character could be impeached by cross-examination regarding specific acts of violence, they are collateral to the principal issues being tried, State v. Oswalt, 62 Wn.2d 118, 121 (1963), and the examiner is bound by the denial and cannot offer independent evidence to impeach; I.

Seattle v. Cadigan, 55 Wn.App. 30 (1989)

An individual who is illegally arrested may resist arrest with an amount of force that is reasonable and proportioned to the injury about to be received, State v. Rousseau, 40 Wn.2d 92 (1952), State v. Crider, 72 Wn.App. 815, 820 (1994); the use of force to prevent even an unlawful arrest which threatens only a loss of freedom is not reasonable, State v. Goree, 36 Wn.App. 205, 209 (1983), State v. Crider, supra, State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460, 478-9 (1995); in a lawful arrest, the arrestee may not use force unless the use of excessive force by the officer places the arrestee in actual danger of serious injury, State v. Valentine, 75 Wn.App. 611, 616 (1994) whereupon the force used cannot exceed that reasonably necessary to protect the arrestee, State v. Westlund, 13 Wn.App. 460, 77 A.L.R.3d 270 (1975), State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 837, 840-3 (1993); see also: State v. Belleman, 70 Wn.App. 778 (1993); I.

State v. Watson, 55 Wn.App. 320 (1989)

When seeking attorneys fees following acquittal, former RCW 9.01.200 [now RCW 9A.16.110], jury must be instructed that burden is on defense to prove by a preponderance that the acts were in self-defense and justified, and the parties must have the opportunity to present further evidence, see: State v. Park, 88 Wn.App. 910 (1997); II.

State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990)

Defendant, during burglary in which he was armed, confronts homeowner who is armed, defendant flees when gunfire ensues, homeowner is killed; held: lawful use of force is not available as a defense to felony murder 1° (burglary), State v. Bolar, 118 Wn.App. 490, 506-10 (2003); self-defense is not revived, State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777 (1973), cf.: State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023), absent good faith intention to withdraw from burglary removing decedent's fear; even while fleeing from burglary scene, burglary is still in progress; affirms State v. Dennison, 54 Wn.App. 577 (1989); 7-2.

State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561 (1991)

In murder case, defense offers reputation evidence that victim was homosexual to support claim that defendant killed victim after victim grabbed defendant's crotch and tried to kiss him; held: while evidence of victim's reputation as a homosexual may tend to prove he grabbed defendant's crotch, it is not "of consequence to the determination of the action," ER 401, because self-defense to murder is only available to a defendant who is responding to perceived threat of great bodily harm or to victim's commission of violent felony, State v. Griffith, 91 Wn.2d 572, 576 (1979), which is not present here, State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506 (2005); evidence of specific instances of homosexual behavior clearly inadmissible, ER 404(b), 405(a), State v. Munguia, 107 Wn.App. 328, 335-36 (2001); II.

State v. Jones, 63 Wn.App. 703 (1992)

Where shoplifter is charged with assault on security guards, instruction that detention by merchant is lawful if merchant has reasonable grounds to believe detainee committed theft, RCW 9A.16.080, is proper as consistent with common law citizen arrest; instruction regarding right to resist unlawful arrest must be qualified that amount of force used to resist "must be reasonable and proportioned to the injury about to be received," State v. Rousseau, 40 Wn.2d 92, 95 (1952), and force may not be used to resist unlawful arrest "which threatens only a loss of freedom," State v. Goree, 36 Wn.App. 205, 209 (1983); I.

State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220 (1993)

Battered child syndrome is admissible to support a claim of self-defense so trier of fact can evaluate reasonableness of defendant's perception that s/he was in imminent danger at time of homicide, State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984), cf.: State v. Riker, 123 Wn.2d 351, 358-66 (1994); imminence does not require actual physical assault, State v. Walker, 40 Wn.App. 658 (1985) and is not the same as immediate; a threat, or its equivalent, can support self-defense when there is a reasonable belief that the threat will be carried out; "that the triggering behavior and the abusive episode are divided by time does not necessarily negate the reasonableness of defendant's perception of imminent harm"; reverses State v. Janes, 64 Wn.App. 134 (1992); 7-0.

State v. Belleman, 70 Wn.App. 778 (1993)

In assault 3° on police officer, where arrest is lawful but defendant does not know he is being lawfully arrested, he does not have right to self-defense nor to such an instruction, see: State v. Goree, 36 Wn.App. 205 (1983), Seattle v. Cadigan, 55 Wn.App. 30, 37 (1989), State v. Lile, 193 Wn.App. 179, 210-13 (2016), affirmed, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 766 (2017); I.

State v. Joswick, 71 Wn.App. 311 (1993)

Attorney fee reimbursement statute, RCW 9A.16.110, does not apply where charge is dismissed on motion of state, rather only applies to an acquittal on the merits, Rismon v. State, 75 Wn.App. 289 (1994); II.

State v. Ross, 71 Wn.App. 837, 840-3 (1993)

In assault 3° on police officer, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(g), lawful use of force instruction should read, "[t]he use of force upon or toward a uniformed police officer performing his official duties is only lawful when used by a person who is actually about to be seriously injured," see: State v. Westlund, 13 Wn.App. 460, 466-7, 77 A.L.R.3d 270 (1975), State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426, 430 (1985), Seattle v. Cadigan, 55 Wn.App. 30 (1989); instruction allowing use of force when defendant has a reasonable belief that he is about to be injured, WPIC 17.04 (Supp. 1986) is not proper when dealing with uniformed officers; see: State v. Valentine, 132

Wn.2d 1 (1997), State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995), State v. Lile, 193 Wn.App. 179, 210-13 (2016), affirmed, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 766 (2017); I.

State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 253 (1993)

Compensation for "loss of time" following self-defense acquittal, RCW 9.16.110, is limited to earnings defendant would actually have received but for prosecution, and not for loss of earning capacity; attorney fees are limited to those defendant has paid or is legally obliged to pay, thus where counsel is paid by government, no legal fees may be awarded; II.

State v. LeFaber, 77 Wn.App. 766 (1995), rev'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 896 (1996)

Evidence of specific instances of violence of homicide victim is not admissible in support of self-defense claim absent evidence defendant knew of the conduct, State v. Alexander, 52 Wn.App. 897 (1988), State v. Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925, 934-5 (1997), State v. Kelly, 102 Wn.2d 188, 197 (1984), ER 405(b); III.

Seattle v. Fontanilla, 128 Wn.2d 492 (1996)

RCW 9A.16.110 authorizing attorneys fees following acquittal on self-defense grounds applies to municipal prosecutions, State v. Lee, 96 Wn.App. 336 (1999), but authorizes reimbursement from the state, not the city, municipal court lacks authority to order reimbursement from the state, defendant must seek fees through sundry claims process, RCW 4.92.040; 9-0.

State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1 (1997)

In assault on police officer, arrestee may not use force against arresting officers if s/he is faced only with a loss of freedom, even if arrest is unlawful, State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426 (1985), State v. Kolesnik, 146 Wn.App. 790, 809-10 (2008), overruling State v. Rousseau, 40 Wn.2d 92 (1952); 7-2.

State v. Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925, 929-34 (1997)

In assault 2° case, victim testifies defendant pointed gun at him, victim attempted to grab gun, it discharged and shot him; defendant testifies he displayed gun in fear of assault but did not point it, and it discharged accidentally, trial court declines to instruct on self-defense; defendant denies knowing victim before the shooting, offers police testimony as to victim's reputation acquired from past encounters with criminal justice system and testimony of a person who knew victim two years before, both excluded; defendant offers evidence of his own reputation for peacefulness in his workplace; held: accident and self-defense are not necessarily mutually exclusive, State v. Werner, 170 Wn.2d 333 (2010), see: State v. Slaughter, 143 Wn.App. 936 (2008); evidence which comes from prosecution and which is based upon facts inconsistent with defendant's own testimony may support a self-defense instruction, State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640, 643 (1986), State v. Fondren, 41 Wn.App. 17 (1985), see: State v. Brightman, 112 Wn.App. 260 (2002), rev'd, on other grounds, 155 Wn.2d 506 (2005); reputation evidence must be based upon witness's personal knowledge of victim's reputation in community, defendant's lack of knowledge supports exclusion, State v. Negrin, 37 Wn.App. 516, 526 (1984); II.

State v. Thiessen, 88 Wn.App. 827 (1997)

When ordering attorney fees following acquittal, RCW 9A.16.110(2), trial court may not award interest, State v. Lee, 96 Wn.App. 336, 345 (1999), see also: State v. Villanueva, 177 Wn.App. 251 (2013); II.

State v. Park, 88 Wn.App. 910 (1997)

In proceedings for attorney fees, RCW 9A.16.110, the same jury which acquitted must enter the special verdict, or counsel must seek reimbursement from the legislature under the sundry claims process, State v. Sims, 92 Wn.App. 125 (1998), see: State v. Watson, 55 Wn.App. 320, 323 (1989).

State v. Jones, 92 Wn.App. 555 (1998)

Following hung jury, defendant is acquitted at retrial, jury returns self-defense special verdict, trial court denies attorney fees for first trial; held: RCW 9A.16.110 entitled defendant to fees and costs related to the entire prosecution process if, after the last trial, trier of fact acquitted and entered the required finding; defendant is also entitled to fees for prevailing on appeal of the denial of attorneys' fees, State v. Lee, 96 Wn.App. 336, 345-46 (1999),; II.

State v. Graves, 97 Wn.App. 55 (1999)

A juvenile charged with assaulting a parent may employ a claim of lawful force irrespective of the parent's right to use reasonable force for discipline; I.

State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776, 783-89 (2000), remanded, 142 Wn.2d 1007, reaffirmed, 106 Wn.App. 138 (2001), aff'd, on different grounds, 147 Wn.2d 238 (2002)

Lay witness may not testify that defendant did not need to defend himself, as it is an opinion of defendant's guilt, harmless here; I.

State v. Munguia, 107 Wn.App. 328, 335-36 (2001)

In murder case where defendant claims self-defense from homosexual advance, evidence of victim's homosexual internet sites on his computer does not tend to prove that he attempted to sexually assault defendant, and is thus inadmissible character evidence, State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561, 564 (1991), ER 404(b), 405(a); III.

State v. Garcia, 107 Wn.App. 545 (2001)

Respondent using force against an officer in a juvenile facility must show that s/he was in actual, imminent danger of serious injury, State v. Bradley, 141 Wn.2d 731 (2000); II.

State v. Read,147 Wn.2d 238 (2002)

At bench trial, defendant testifies that unarmed victim, during argument, verbally threatened defendant, jumped off a bed and rushed him, defendant shoots and kills victim, other witnesses testify that defendant had no reason to defend himself and no reason to pull out gun; held: even if defendant reasonably believed he could get hurt, it does not authorize deadly force; defendant failed to produce evidence demonstrating he reasonably believed he was in imminent danger of death or great personal injury, thus failing to satisfy subjective element of self defense; while lay opinion of the need to defend oneself is inadmissible, see: State v. Read, 100 Wn.App.

776, 106 Wn.App. 138 (2001), it is presumed trial court, in bench trial, did not consider the erroneously admitted evidence, State v. Miles, 77 Wn.2d 593 (1970); 7-2.

State v. Walther, 114 Wn.App. 189 (2002)

Complainant borrows defendant's car, does not return it when promised, defendant finds complainant sleeping in the car, shoots into the car several times, complainant drives towards defendant who shoots again, complainant is injured by bullet fragments, trial court declines to instruct on lawful use of force; held: defendant was not "about to be injured" when he found victim sleeping, thus he was not entitled to use force to prevent her from driving away, car was not "in his…possession," rather it was in victim's possession at the time he fired; even if defendant met the "about to be injured" element of RCW 9A.16.020, "firing a gun multiple times at close range through the glass into the car was far more force than was necessary, see: State v. Madry, 12 Wn.App. 178, 181 (1974), State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 767 (1998), State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506, 523-24 (2005), cf.: State v. George, 161 Wn.App. 86 (2011), but see: State v. Collins, 30 Wn.App. 1 (1981); II.

State v. Arth, 121 Wn.App. 205 (2004)

Lawful use of force statute may apply to a charge of malicious mischief where the property damaged was used to threaten the accused with bodily harm; I.

State v. Haydel, 122 Wn.App. 365 (2004)

Trial court grants defendant's motion to withdraw guilty plea to attempted assault 1° because he was not told, at the time of plea, that state had burden to disprove self defense beyond a reasonable doubt; held: because defendant presented no evidence of self defense, state had no obligation to inform him of its burden of proof on his "purely hypothetical claim at the time" of the plea, even though defense had disclosed self defense in omnibus application; I.

State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506, 518-27 (2005)

Defendant gives money to victim for marijuana, victim does not provide drugs, defendant fights victim, defendant's gun discharges accidentally, killing victim, court refuses defense offer of justifiable homicide instructions, RCW 9A.16.050; held: while victim's attempt to retain money may have been a robbery, at 521 n. 9, trial court's decision that, as a matter of law, the use of deadly force was unreasonable where defendant was attempting to recover a small amount of money from someone whom defendant did not fear was proper, see: State v. Madry, 12 Wn.App. 178, 181 (1974), State v. Brenner, 53 Wn.App. 367 (1989), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Wentz, 149 Wn.2d 342 (2003) State v. Castro, 30 Wn.App. 586, 588-89 (1981), State v. Nyland, 47 Wn.2d 240 (1955), State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022); on remand, defendant may be entitled to excusable homicide instruction, RCW 9A.16.030, but see: State v. Henderson, 192 Wn.2d 508 (2018), cf.: State v. Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925, 932-33 (1997); reverses, on other grounds, State v. Brightman, 112 Wn.App. 260 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Werner, 170 Wn.2d 333 (2010)

Defendant is being menaced by dogs, asks dog owner to call them off, owner declines, defendant points gun, then lowers it, it discharges into ground, court declines to give self defense instructions; held: self defense and accident are not necessarily mutually exclusive, State v.

Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925. 931-33 (1997), State v. Fondren, 41 as17 (1985); here, evidence that complainant refused to call off dogs could reasonably have led defendant to believe that complainant personally posed a threat to him through the dogs, leads to sufficient evidence of both accident and self defense; per curiam.

State v. Lewis, 156 Wn.App. 230, 238-39 (2010)

In robbery case, state does not have the burden to prove the absence of self- defense; II.

State v. George, 161 Wn.App. 86 (2011)

To get self defense instructions in homicide case, defendant must produce some evidence that (1) the killing occurred in circumstances amounting to defense of life and (2) defendant had a reasonable apprehension of great bodily harm and imminent danger; imminent threat need not actually be present so long as a reasonable person in defendant's position would have believed threat was present; imminent threat does not require any actual physical assault or attempted lethal assault, need not be immediate, State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220, 241 (1993); trial court should deny self defense instructions only where defense theory is completely unsupported by evidence, State v. Barnes, 153 Wn.2d 378, 382 (2005), State v. Thysell, 194 Wn.App. 422 (2016); 2-1, II.

State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724 (2011)

In defense of other case, prosecutor arguing that the standard would be met if the jury would have taken the same action in defense of another is error, as test is not for jury to substitute its subjective belief about how a juror would respond, rather test is objective, State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220, 238 (1993); II.

State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 468-71 (2012)

Where court gives self defense instructions, prosecutor's argument that defense has a burden to prove self defense to the jury is burden-shifting error; II.

State v. Villanueva, 177 Wn.App. 251 (2013)

Self defense reimbursement, RCW 9A.16.110 (1995), includes lost wages from the time of arrest; III.

State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017)

In homicide case with lawful use of force defense, defendant offers evidence that defendant was told that deceased had threatened to kill defendant's family, that deceased had abducted defendant's sister and defendant was aware of it, and that deceased had beaten his wife, defendant's sister, also known to defendant, trial court excludes it based upon relevance, remoteness, hearsay; held: evidence offered was not hearsay as it was offered to establish defendant's state of mind, not offered to prove the truth but to show reasonableness of defendant's fear of deceased, State v. Cloud, 7 Wn.App. 211, 218 (1972), State v. Walker, 13 Wn.App. 545, 549 (1975); "ER 403 balancing of probative value versus unfair prejudice is weighed differently when the defense seeks to admit evidence that is central to its defense, at 320," weak or false evidence is not a basis to exclude such evidence as it can be tested on cross, but see: State v. Burnam, 4 Wn.App.2d 368 (2018); evidence central to the defense should be admitted regardless of remoteness, distinguishing State v. Adamo, 120 Wash. 268 (1922); 2-1, III.

State v. Yelovich, 191 Wn.2d 774 (2018)

No contact order issued, defendant assaults victim, is charged with felony violation of a no contact order enhanced by the assault, claims she stole his phone from his car and he chased her to recover it, court declines to instruct on defense of property, RCW 9A.16.020(3) (1986); held: a no contact order must be followed, State v. Dejarlais, 136 Wn.2d 939, 969 (1998), defense of property is not available as a defense regardless of the fact that assault is an element of the crime; affirms State v. Yelovich, 1 Wn.App.2d 38 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Burnam, 4 Wn.App.2d 368 (2018)

Defense proffer that defendant knew that homicide victim had previously assisted a boyfriend in hiding a homicide weapon is refused; held: mere fact that victim dated a man accused of murder and hid the weapon does not "strongly imply" that victim was violent, prejudice from excluding this "questionable evidence" is minimal, trial court did not violate defendant's right to present a defense, distinguishing State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017); III.

State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677, 702-03 (2020)

In a bench trial judge need not sua sponte consider self-defense; II.

State v. Jennings, 199 Wn.2d 53 (2022)

In murder/self-defense case defendant testifies he recognized that victim was high, court precludes defense toxicologist from testifying that victim had methamphetamine in his system; held: evidentiary ruling is reviewed for abuse of discretion but appellate court must consider de novo whether defendant was deprived of his 6th Amendment right to present a defense, State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 797-98 (2019); here, defendant's detailed testimony about his observations of victim being high was sufficient for defense to argue self-defense, thus exclusion of toxicology evidence did not violate right to present a defense, State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367 (2007). cf.: State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306, 326 (2017), State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713, 721 (2010), State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 797-98 (2019); affirms State v. Jennings, 14 Wn.App.2d 779 (2020); 7-2.

State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023)

Defendant initiates a fight, arguably withdraws and disengages from it, victim follows defendant who has backed up against a wall, victim throws a "hard punch," defendant shoots and kills victim, court gives first aggressor instruction, defense counsel does not offer instruction on revived self-defense; held: "the right of self-defense is revived as to the aggressor if that person in good faith withdraws from the aggression in such time and manner as to clearly apprise the other person that they intend to disengage in further aggression," State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990), State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777 (1973), counsel was ineffective for failing to propose such an instruction; I.

MANDATORY JOINDER*

State v. Mitchell, 30 Wn.App. 49 (1981)

Defendant charged with six burglaries several months after being arrested but not charged in a seventh burglary; speedy-trial rule does not commence for six counts at arrest for seventh permissibly joined offense, CrR 4.3(a) unless offenses are related arising from the same criminal conduct and thus required to be joined, CrR 4.3(c); I.

State v. Anderson, 96 Wn.2d 739 (1982)

Defendant is convicted in 1977 of murder 1° by "extreme indifference," RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b); conviction is reversed on appeal by Supreme Court; defendant is then charged with murder 1° by premeditation; Supreme Court orders information dismissed without prejudice, as state failed to join related offenses of premeditated murder 1° with murder 1° by extreme indifference, CrR 4.3(c)(3), but see: State v. Havens, 70 Wn.App. 251 (1993); Supreme Court holds state is not barred by double jeopardy clause from charging defendant with any lesser included offense (murder 2°, manslaughter), as original reversal was not based upon insufficiency of evidence, but rather upon inapplicability of statute [extreme indifference does not apply where defendant intended death of particular victim, State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.2d 176 (1980)]; 6-3.

State v. Holt, 36 Wn.App. 224 (1983)

Where offenses are intimately related under the mandatory joinder rule, CrR 4.3(c), defendant does not waive his right to joinder by failing to so move if he was unaware of the charges at such a time as to afford him a reasonable opportunity to evaluate the situation; remedy is dismissal of second set of charges; II.

State v. Thompson, 36 Wn.App. 249 (1983)

Defendant is convicted of two counts of VUCSA on 4 May 1981; on 28 May 1981 state files information charging four more counts, alleging that crimes occurred before crimes that were subject of the 4 May conviction; held: while the charges were subject to permissive joinder, CrR 4.3(a), as they were of the "same or similar character," they were not "related offenses" requiring mandatory joinder, CrR 4.3(c), State v. Mitchell, 30 Wn.App. 49 (1981), State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997), distinguishing State v. Dailey, 18 Wn.App. 525 (1977); I.

State v. Bradley, 38 Wn.App. 597 (1984)

Following a chase, defendant is cited for misdemeanor marijuana, which charge is dismissed in district court; later, felony flight charge is filed; held: marijuana and felony flight do not arise from same conduct, thus charges are not subject to mandatory joinder, CrR 4.3(c), State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 488 (2003), see: State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185 (2004), distinguishing State v. Erickson, 22 Wn.App. 38 (1978), but see: State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35 (1996), State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997); I.

* See also: JOINDER, SEVERANCE AND CONSOLIDATION

State v. Dixon, 42 Wn.App. 315 (1985)

Defendant is charged in district court with aiming or discharging a firearm, on day of trial state could not prove the charge, and it was dismissed; later, state charged defendant in Superior Court with felon in possession of firearm, RCW 9.41.040 for identical incident; held: the offenses were related, were within the jurisdiction and venue of the Superior Court, were based on the same conduct, thus defendant was harassed by successive prosecutions, and the felon in possession charge must be dismissed, CrR 4.3(c), State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35 (1996); the fact that jeopardy had not attached to first trial is inconsequential, since state had initiated legal proceedings, was unable to proceed because it had not subpoenaed a witness, defendant was present and ready to defend; I.

State v. Fladebo, 53 Wn.App. 116 (1988), aff'd on different grounds, 113 Wn.2d 388 (1989)

At DUI arrest, police find drugs on defendant; defendant is charged with DUI immediately in municipal court, VUCSA charge filed in superior court four months later, seeks dismissal of VUCSA arguing both offenses arose from same conduct, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423 (1978); held: because municipal court had exclusive jurisdiction over DUI as violation of municipal ordinance and had no jurisdiction over felony charge, and because conduct proscribed by each offense was unrelated, offenses were not within the jurisdiction and venue of the same court and were not based upon the same conduct, CrR 4.3(c), State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003), but see: RCW 35.20.250, State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35 (1996), cf.: State v. Duffy, 86 Wn.App. 334, 344-6 (1997), State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997); further, it was reasonable for prosecutor to wait for crime lab tests on drugs before filing charges, distinguishing State v. Erickson, 22 Wn.App. 38 (1978); I.

State v. Carter, 56 Wn.App. 217 (1989)

Following hung jury on robbery 1° charge, state is allowed to amend to assault 1°, defense counsel neglects to raise mandatory joinder objection, CrR 4.3(c)(3); held: robbery and assault are based upon same conduct and are thus related, CrR 4.3(c)(1), hung jury is a trial for purposes of CrR 4.3, State v. Russell, 101 Wn.2d 349 (1984); failure to join assault before first trial mandates dismissal; because amendment after trial invoked an uncharged, not joined related offense, then a "substantial right of the defendant" was prejudiced, irrespective of trial court's granting of state's motion to amend, CrR 2.2(e); "ends of justice" exception, CrR 4.3(c)(3), is inapplicable, as state has not shown "extraordinary circumstances" warranting its application, see: State v. Ramos, 124 Wn.App. 334 (2004), State v. Wright, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009); defense counsel's failure to move to dismiss was ineffective assistance, depriving defendant of fair trial; I, 2-1.

State v. Havens, 70 Wn.App. 251 (1993)

Conviction of rape of a child alleged to have occurred on a specific date is reversed on appeal, information is then amended to allege that the offense occurred over a seven month period, defendant maintains the amendment violates mandatory joinder, CrR 4.3(c)(3); held: because amendment did not charge defendant with a different offense or a higher degree, State v. Anderson, 96 Wn.2d 739, 742 (1982), nor increase the number of counts, State v. Courville, 63 Wn.2d 498, 500 (1963), nor charge an alternative means of committing the crime, State v.

Russell, 101 Wn.2d 348. 352 (1984), no mandatory joinder violation occurred; the amendment affected only the date, a matter of form rather than substance, State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58, 62 (1991), State v. Goss, 189 Wn.App. 571, 576-77 (2015), affirmed, on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 372 (2016); III.

State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324 (1995)

Where trial court erroneously allows state to amend information to a different crime at the close of state's case, State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782 (1995), proper remedy is dismissal with prejudice under mandatory joinder analysis, CrR 4.3(c), see: State v. Ramos, 124 Wn.App. 334 (2004); theft and PSP based on same conduct are related charges, see: State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185 (2004), State v. Canfield, 13 Wn.App.2d 410 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Harris, 130 Wn.2d 35 (1996)

Defendant is arrested in stolen car, cited in district court for driving without a license, pleads guilty, 139 days later is charged with taking and riding in juvenile court, motion to dismiss is denied; held: offenses arose from same criminal conduct, thus under 2 American Bar Ass'n, Standards for Criminal Justice Std. 12-2.2 (2d ed. 1980), which is applicable in juvenile court, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423, 431 (1978), when multiple charges stem from the same criminal conduct or criminal episode, state must prosecute all related charges within the speedy trial time limits, even when the charges were split between district and juvenile or superior courts, Peterson, supra., see: State v. Bradley, 38 Wn.App. 597, 599 (1984), State v. Wilke, 28 Wn.App. 590, 594 (1981), distinguishing State v. Fladebo, 53 Wn.App. 116 (1988), aff'd on different grounds, 113 Wn.2d 388 (1989), where charges were prosecuted by different prosecutorial authorities in different courts with exclusive jurisdictions; accord: State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997), , but see: State v. Keltner, 102 Wn.App. 396 (2000) re: infractions; 9-0.

State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498 (1997)

Defendant is convicted of theft for obtaining money from another as rent for a residence he did not own, is later charged with theft for same scheme from a different victim, trial court dismisses, holding that crimes part of a common scheme or plan are related offenses subject to mandatory joinder, CrR 4.3(A)(b); held: offenses are "related" for purposes of mandatory joinder if they are based on the same conduct, but not a common scheme, as occurred here, which is subject to permissive joinder, CrR 4.3(a)(2), State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185 (2004); whether state is aware of additional charges is not the dispositive inquiry, at 505, see: State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003), State v. Canfield, 13 Wn.App.2d 410 (2020); reverses State v. Lee, 81 Wn.App. 609 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Duffy, 86 Wn.App. 334, 341-6 (1997)

Police book defendant and file citation charging DUI, city declines to prosecute but does not seek order of dismissal, defendant is charged with DUI and hit-and-run in superior court four months later; held: dismissal of DUI was necessary to toll speedy trial period, CrRLJ 3.3(g)(4), defendant had no obligation to assert right to speedy trial when city has indicated it will not prosecute and state has not filed charge, distinguishing State v. Rock, 65 Wn.App. 654 (1992), State v. Carson, 128 Wn.2d 805 (1996), disavowed, on other grounds, State v. Walker, ___ Wn.2d ___, 99813-2 (2022); hit-and-run charge arose from same criminal episode and transaction, State v. Erickson, 22 Wn.App. 38, 44 (1978), thus speedy-trial period must begin from time defendant was held to answer any charge with respect to that conduct or episode, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423, 431 (1978), where all evidence was available to the prosecutor at the time the first charge was filed, but see: State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477 (2003); III.

State v. Guttierrez, 92 Wn.App. 343 (1998)

Following hung jury mistrial, State v. Carter, 56 Wn.App. 217 (1989), court allows amendment to add allegation that drug delivery occurred within 1000 feet of school bus stop zone, defense seeks dismissal for failure to join prior to first trial; held: enhancements are not offenses for purposes of CrR 4.3A(b)(3), thus amendment was proper; I.

State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185 (2004)

Defendant bounces checks, is charged in district court and superior court with UIBC for different checks, thus joinder was not mandatory, State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498, 501 (1997), distinguishing State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324, 329 (1995); II.

State v. Kenyon, 150 Wn.App. 826 (2009)

Defendant is convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm in 2004, state charges him with unlawful possession of the same firearm in 2005, maintaining that it withheld the second charge for tactical reasons; held: offenses were related and should have been charged at the same time, CrR 4.3(a)(1), -(2), 4.3.1, and thus dismissal is mandated as state was aware of the facts constituting the second "artificially separated" prosecution, see also: State v. Mata, 180 Wn.App. 108 (2014); II.

State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 167-75 (2010)

In consolidated cases, defendants' convictions for felony murder 2°/assault are reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), on remand trial court permits amendments to different homicide charges; held: "ends of justice" exception to the mandatory joinder rule, CrR 4.3.1(b)(3), applies where there are reasons extraneous to the action of the court, out of the ordinary and not within the control of the state, State v. Ramos, 124 Wn.App. 334 (2004), State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324, 333 (1995), State v. Carter, 56 Wn.App. 217, 223 (1989), see: State v. Wright, 131 Wn.App. 474, 487-88 (2006), 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009); here, because the Supreme Court abandoned an unbroken line of precedent after 25 years, extraneous to the prosecutions, state filed charges and sought instructions in accordance with long-standing interpretations of state law, state may try defendant for other homicides, see: State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654 (2008); affirms State v. Gamble, 137 Wn.App. 892 (2007); 8-1.

State v. Canfield, 13 Wn.App.2d 410 (2020)

Defendant is convicted of obstructing a public servant, reversed and remanded on direct appeal, at retrial state adds, without objection, two counts arising from the same conduct; held: while different offenses arising at the same time are not subject to the mandatory joinder rule, CrR 4.3.1(b)(3), where new charges arise from the same conduct as the original charge and the prosecutor was aware of the facts then the mandatory joinder rule bars a second prosecution, State v. Peterson, 90 Wn.2d 423 (1978), State v. Anderson, 96 Wn.2d 739 (1982), State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324 (1995) State v. Holt, 36 Wn.App. 224 (1983). State v. Kindsvogel, 149 Wn.2d 477, 482-83 (2003) State v. McNeil, 20 Wn.App. 527, 532 (1978), State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498, 503 (1997); III.

MANDATORY SEVERANCE
Bruton

State v. Vannoy, 25 Wn.App. 464 (1980)

Where co-defendant's confessions are redacted, "we" does not cure Bruton error where confession clearly refers to defendant, Gray v. Maryland, 149 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998), State v. Vincent, 131 Wn.App. 147 (2005), State v. Fisher, 186 Wn.2d 836, 841-48 (2016), cf.: State v. Medina, 112 Wn.App. 40 (2002), ; I.

State v. Samsel, 39 Wn.App. 564 (1985)

Unless co-defendant's statement expressly or by direct inference refers to or incriminates defendant, severance is not mandatory, CrR 4.4(c); discretionary severance may require an offer of proof as to defendant's testimony; III.

State v. Anderson, 41 Wn.App. 85 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 107 Wn.2d 745 (1987)

Trial court admits statement of co-defendant in joint trial as a co-conspirator's statement, ER 801(d)(2)(v); appellate court determines statement was not admissible as exception to hearsay; held: severance is mandated, CrR 4.4(c)(1), Bruton v. United States, 20 L.Ed.2d 476 (1968), Gray v. Maryland, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998) cf.: State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016); II.

Richardson v. Marsh, 95 L.Ed. 176 (1987)

Confrontation clause is not violated where, at a joint trial, co-defendant's confession is admitted, even though the defendant is linked to the confession by other evidence as long as the co-defendant's confession is redacted to eliminate not only the defendant's name and any reference to the defendant's existence, see: State v. Marsh, 112 Wn.App. 40 (2002), but also the jury is instructed not to use the co-defendant's confession against the defendant, State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171, 206-13 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016), State v. Moses, 193 Wn.App. 341 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Mitchell, 117 Wn.2d 521 (1991), overruled, in part, State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 484-6 (1994)

Co-defendants need not be severed under mandatory severance rule, CrR 4.4(c)(1), where unredacted confession is admissible as declaration against penal interest, see also: State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016); statement of defendant, offered by co-defendant, may be improperly admitted in joint trial even if it would have been admissible if offered by state; harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Alsup, 75 Wn.App. 128 (1994)

To avoid mandatory severance of co-defendant, CrR 4.4(c)(1), trial court redacts defendant's statement to replace "we" with "I," defendant objects claiming emendation deprived him of a "mere presence" defense and violates the "rule of completeness;" held: under these facts, changes to statement were no more prejudicial than original; rule of completeness: where part of written or recorded statement has been introduced, party is entitled to seek admission of remainder of the statement, ER 106; rule of completeness is violated, and severance is required, only where admission of the statement in its edited form distorts meaning of the statement or excludes information substantially exculpatory to declarant, United States v. Kaminski, 692 F.2d 505, 522 (8th Cir. 1982), State v. Larry, 108 Wn.App. 894, 908-10 (2001); I.

State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669, 690-2 (1994)

Where co-defendant's statement does not name or acknowledge existence of defendant as accomplice but defendant is implicated by out-of-court statements through linkage with other evidence, severance is not required, Richardson v. Marsh, 95 L.Ed.2d 176 (1987), State v. Moses, 193 Wn.App. 341 (2016), distinguishing Bruton v. United States, 20 L.Ed.2d 476 (1968), cf.: Gray v. Maryland, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998), State v. Marsh, 112 Wn.App. 40 (2002), State v. Fisher, 186 Wn.2d 836, 841-48 (2016); II.

State v. Campbell, 78 Wn.App. 813, 818-20 (1995)

Severance of co-defendants should be required only when testimony includes powerfully incriminating extrajudicial statements of a co-defendant, State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 486 (1994), State v. Jones, 93 Wn.App. 166, 170-72 (1998), cf.: State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016); II.

Gray v. Maryland, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998)

Where a redacted confession substitutes blank spaces where the confession refers to the co-defendant, protective rule of Bruton v. United States, 20 L.Ed.2d 476 (1968), applies, and case must be severed, State v. Vincent, 131 Wn.App. 147 (2005), see: State v. Larry, 108 Wn.App. 894 (2001), State v. Medina, 112 Wn.App. 40 (2002), State v. Fisher, 186 Wn.2d 836, 841-48 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Vincent, 131 Wn.App. 147 (2005)

Where the only reasonable inference from a redacted confession is that the "other guy" is the joined co-defendant, then the redaction failed in its purpose and the admission of the confession violates co-defendant's confrontation rights, State v. Vannoy, 25 Wn.App. 464 (1980), Gray v. Maryland, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998), State v. Fisher, 186 Wn.2d 836, 841-48 (2016), cf.: State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016), distinguishing State v. Medina, 112 Wn.App. 40 (2002), State v. Herd, 14 Wn.App. 959, 964 (1976), State v. Ferguson, 3 Wn.App. 898, 905-06 (1970), harmless here; I.

State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016)

In joint trial civilian testifies that codefendant bragged that he and "a friend" burglarized a business, motion to sever denied but not renewed, no objection made to statement; held: because statement was not testimonial Bruton doctrine was not violated as statement is outside the scope of the confrontation clause, trial court apparently instructed jury not to use statement of codefendant against defendant, severance was not required; affirms State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.App. 534 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Fisher, 186 Wn.2d 836, 841-48 (2016)

unidentified, court admits redacted confession substituting "first guy" for name of defendant, evidence extrinsic of confession makes it obvious that "first guy" is defendant; held: where a redacted co-defendant's statement obviously refers to defendant and only reasonable inference jury could have drawn is that "first guy" is the defendant, severance is mandatory regardless of limiting instruction, Gray v. Maryland, 523 U.S. 185, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998), State v. Vincent, 131 Wn.App. 147 (2005), State v. Vannoy, 25 Wn.App. 464 (1980), cf.: State v. Cotton, 75 Wn.App. 669, 690-02 (1994), see: Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200 95 L.Ed.2d 176 (1987), harmless here; affirms State v. Fisher, 184 Wn.App. 766 (2014); 6-3.

MERGER*

State v. Ticeson, 26 Wn.App. 876 (1980)

Assault 2° (with intent to commit indecent liberties) and indecent liberties merge; I.

Whalen v. United States, 63 L.Ed.2d 715 (1980)

While holding that, in this case, felony-murder (rape) and rape of same victim merge, majority leaves open possibility that legislatures could permit double punishment; 7-2.

State v. Regan, 28 Wn.App. 680 (1981)

Assault 1° and kidnap 1° merge into rape 1°.

State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701 (1981)

Robbery and felony-murder based upon same robbery do not merge, State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164, 175-7 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), but see: State v. Fagundes, 26 Wn.App. 477 (1980), State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019), cf.: State v. Heng, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 83280-8-I (2022); II,

State v. Prater, 30 Wn.App. 512 (1981)

During a robbery, one defendant shoots a victim, other defendant jabs at a victim with a gun; held: the shooting was no part of the robbery, thus an assault charge does not merge into the robbery, State v. Freeman, 118 Wn.App. 365 (2003), State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 950-56 (2013), the jabbing was not separate and distinct from the robbery, thus that assault charge merges with the robbery; I.

State v. Birgen, 33 Wn.App. 1 (1982)

Rape and statutory rape statutes define a single crime of rape, see: State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), cf.: State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016); I.

State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.2d 926 (1982), overruled, in part, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995)

Statutory rape and indecent liberties do not merge where the evidence establishes separate incidents, see: State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466 (1999), State v. Lynch, 93 Wn.App. 716, 723-27 (1999); extensive discussion of merger and remedies; 9-0.

State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982), overruled, in part, sub nom., State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995)

Rape 1° and burglary 1° do not merge, RCW 9A.52.050; State v. Hoyt, 29 Wn.App. 372 (1981).

State v. Schneider, 36 Wn.App. 237 (1983)

* See also: DOUBLE JEOPARDY/COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL

Solicitation to commit murder, RCW 9A.08.020(3), and attempted murder of same victim do not merge; I.

State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983)

Kidnapping does not merge into robbery 1°, State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.2d 926 (1982), State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57, 66-9 (1994), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), cf., State v. Allen, 94 Wn.2d 860, 864 (1980) (dicta to contrary reversed), see: State v. Rivera, 85 Wn.App. 296, 301-3 (1997), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014), but see: State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004), 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); double jeopardy does not prohibit consecutive sentences for robbery 1° and kidnapping; 5-4.

State v. Hudlow, 36 Wn.App. 630 (1984)

Kidnapping and assault merge into rape 1° where all are based on same incident, same victim; but see: State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993); II.

State v. Arnett, 38 Wn.App. 527 (1984)

Kidnap 1° (with intent to commit indecent liberties) and indecent liberties do not merge as indecent liberties is not a lesser of kidnap 2°; II.

State v. Davis, 47 Wn.App. 91 (1987)

When an offense is proven which elevates another crime to a higher degree, an additional conviction for that offense cannot be allowed to stand unless it involves a separate and distinct injury not merely incidental to crime of which it forms an element; here, assault 1° merges into robbery 1°, State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671 (1979), but see: State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 873-78 (2003), State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 365 (2005), State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 820-24 (2004), State v. Wade, 133 Wn.App. 855, 870-72 (2006), State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006); I.

Pers. Restraint of Fletcher, 113 Wn.2d 42 (1989)

Double jeopardy clause does not prohibit consecutive sentences unless the offenses are the same in law and in fact; if there is an element in each offense which is not included in the other, and proof of one offense would not necessarily prove the other, then the offenses are not constitutionally the same, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983), State v. Jones, 155 Wn.2d 563 (2005), In re Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 824-6 (1993); doctrine of merger does not prohibit consecutive sentences for crimes arising from a single act unless one of the crimes is an element of the other; here, robbery and kidnapping do not merge since kidnapping does not require proof of robbery but only an intent to commit robbery, State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57, 66-9 (1994), State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669, 681 (1996); 7-2.

State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300 (1989)

Vehicle prowl 1°, RCW 9A.52.100, and taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070, merge, but see: State v. L.U., 137 Wn.App. 410, 415-17 (2007), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 95 (2008); III.

State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992)

Defendant is convicted of delivery of drugs and possession with intent to deliver, evidence having established that defendant delivered drugs, possessed more drugs upon arrest; held: because jury was not instructed that the possession with intent to deliver charge could only apply to the drugs still in defendant's possession at arrest and not to the actual delivery, the offenses merge, see: State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 421 (1983), State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314, 319 (1990), but see: State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 320, 333-4 (1994), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995), State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 816-8 (1994), thus remanded for new trial on possession with intent charge; concurrent sentences doctrine does not apply since SRA offender score on delivery increased due to possession with intent conviction, sentence imposed was not within standard range for delivery alone; I.

State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993)

Defendants commit residential robbery, stealing property of both husband and wife, charged with two counts; held: no double jeopardy violation where defendant robs from husband and wife; deprivation of any ownership interest, including an undivided share, will support a robbery conviction, as will a taking from one having custody or possession, State v. Turner, 31 Wn.App. 843 (1982), State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987); doctrine of merger only applies where one offense is a statutory lesser of the other, State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 677 n. 4 (1979); crimes against multiple victims are not subject to doctrine of merger, State v. Hudlow, 36 Wn.App. 630, 633 (1984), State v. Clapp, 67 Wn.App. 263, 275 (1992); I.

State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 824-6 (1993)

Child molestation 1°, RCW 9A.44.083, and rape of a child 1°, RCW 9A.44.073, are not the same offense, since each requires the state to prove an element that the other does not, In re Fletcher, 113 Wn.2d 42, 47 (1989), and do not merge, as the latter is not a lesser of the former, State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360, 362 (1990); where two offenses are legally and factually distinct, even though both may have occurred during the same incident, failure to provide a unanimity instruction does not violate double jeopardy clause or doctrine of merger; I.

State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57, 66-9 (1994)

Attempted robbery and kidnapping do not merge and do not violate double jeopardy clause where tried together, as the offenses are not the same in law and in fact, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 423-3 (1983), State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563 (2005), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), see: State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013); II.

State v. Bartlett, 74 Wn.App. 580, 588 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 323 (1995)

Assault and homicide do not merge for purposes of felony murder, State v. Crane, 116 Wn.2d 315 (1991), State v. Wanrow, 91 Wn.2d 301 (1978), State v. Goodrich, 72 Wn.App. 71, 77 (1993), State v. Leonard, 183 Wn.App. 532 (2014), remanded, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 505 (2015); I.

State v. Worl, 74 Wn.App. 605, 611-3 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, 129 Wn.2d 416 (1996)

Attempted murder 2° and malicious harassment do not merge; no modified merger test will apply merely because one of the offenses is an anticipatory offense, see: State v. Harris, 121 Wn.2d 317, 322 (1993); III.

State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164, 167-71 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), Felony murder (assault) and assault 2° are the same in law, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 423 (1983), but here are not the same in fact even though they arise from same transaction, Vladovic, supra, at 423, thus double jeopardy clause does not bar conviction and punishment for both, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 (1995), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987), assault is not a lesser included offense of felony murder, State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1, 6 (1993); charges do not merge, State v. Wanrow, 91 Wn.2d 301, 312 (1978), State v. Goodrich, 72 Wn.App. 71, 78-9 (1993), State v. Leonard, 183 Wn.App. 532 (2014) , remanded, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 505 (2015); I.

State v. Eaton, 82 Wn.App. 723, 727-32 (1996)

Felony harassment and rape 1° do not merge, as legislature did not clearly indicate that in order to prove rape 1°, state must prove not only rape but also that the rape was accompanied by the harassment, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 420-1 (1983); I.

State v. Vaughn, 83 Wn.App. 669, 681-2 (1996)

Kidnapping and rape do not merge, In re Fletcher, 113 Wn.2d 42, 52-3 (1989), see: State v. Contreras, 124 Wn.2d 741, 745 (1994); I.

State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 237-9 (1997)

Merger doctrine is inapplicable pretrial, can only apply where defendant is convicted of multiple counts; 9-0.

State v. Rivera, 85 Wn.App. 296 (1997)

Assault and reckless endangerment do not merge as assault does not require proof of reckless endangerment, see: State v. Vladovic, 88 Wn.2d 413, 421 (1983), State v. Eaton, 82 Wn.App. 723, 729 (1996), State v. Aronhalt, 99 Wn.App. 302, 311-12 (2000); III.

State v. Taylor,90 Wn.App. 312, 319-20 (1998)

Kidnapping 2° and assault 2° do not merge as the crimes arise in different chapters of the penal code, their purposes are different, and neither statute contains language indicating that the legislature clearly intended one crime to be an element of the other, but see: State v. Davis, 177 Wn.App. 454 (2013); II.

State v. Lynch, 93 Wn.App. 716, 723-27 (1999)

Malicious harassment and assault 4° merge in spite of malicious harassment's antimerger clause, as legislature did not intend to punish twice for malicious harassment and misdemeanor assault, which is an element of malicious harassment, distinguishing State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), State v. Worl, 74 Wn.App. 605, 611-12 (1994), State v. Robertson, 88 Wn.App. 836, 847-49 (1997); I.

State v. Sweet, 138 Wn.2d 466 (1999)

Assault does not merge in burglary 1º, State v. Frohs, 83 Wn.App. 803 (1996), State v. Davison, 56 Wn.App. 554 (1990), State v. Fryer, 36 Wn.App. 312 (1983), State v. Hunter, 35 Wn.App. 708 (1983), State v. Hoyt, 29 Wn.App. 372, 378 (1981); effectively overrules State v. Ortiz, 77 Wn.App. 790, 794 (1995), State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 677 (1979), see: State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 873-78 (2003); affirms State v. Sweet, 91 Wn.App. 612 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 125-26 (1999)

Defendant is convicted of rape and, based upon same evidence, assault as well as burglary; held: rape and assault merge, burglary and assault do not merge, State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649, 657-58 (1992), see: State v. Lee, 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020); assault may not be counted in offender score for rape, but may be counted in offender score for burglary; 9-0.

State v. Johnston, 100 Wn.App. 126, 137-39 (2000)

Attempted murder 2° and robbery 1° do not merge; III.

State v. Beals, 100 Wn.App. 189, 193-95 (2000)

Assault 2° and attempted robbery 1° of same victim do not merge, State v. Tauberg, 121 Wn.App. 134 (2004), State v. Wade, 133 Wn.App. 855, 870-72 (2006), State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798 (2008); I.

State v. Parmelee, 108 Wn.App. 702, 709-11 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of felony stalking, RCW 9A.46.110 for repetitive protection order violations and three counts of misdemeanor violation of protection orders; held: violation of a protection order is an element of felony stalking which merges; because stalking requires repetitive behavior, State v. Johnson, 185 Wn.App. 655, 666-70 (2015), two of the three protection order violations must be dismissed, State v. DeRyke, 110 Wn.App. 815 (2002), aff'd, on different grounds, 149 Wn.2d 906 (2003), see: State v. Haines, 151 Wn.App. 428, 440-44 (2009), State v. Whittaker, 192 Wn.App. 395, 409-17 (2016); I.

State v. DeRyke, 110 Wn.App. 815 (2002), aff'd, on different grounds, 149 Wn.2d 906 (2003)

Instruction defines rape 1˚ as rape where perpetrator uses or threatens to use a deadly weapon or kidnaps victim, defendant is also convicted of kidnapping; held: because no separate instruction required jury to specify which act it chose to reach its verdict on the rape charge, principle of lenity requires that rape and kidnap merge, as kidnap is an element of rape, see: State v. Parmelee, 108 Wn.App. 702, 710 (2001), cf.: State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), see: State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798, 808-14 (2008), Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020), *State v. State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 873-78 (2003)

Defendant robs with a knife, cuts victim, is convicted of assault 2° and attempted robbery 1°; held: because the legislature did not clearly indicate it is necessary to prove one of the crimes in order to prove the other and the assault was not incidental to the attempted robbery, the crimes do not merge, State v. Tauberg, 121 Wn.App. 134 (2004), State v. Wade, 133 Wn.App. 855, 870-72 (2006), see: State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 679-80, disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798 (2008); I.

State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 820-24 (2004)

Victim is bound, raped and killed in defendant's home, defendant is convicted of murder, rape, robbery, kidnapping; held: here, robbery occurred after murder, evidence established that the defendant did not commit robbery to facilitate the murder, State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701, 720 (1981); kidnapping was separate and distinct from the murder, distinguishing State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 681 (1979), rape was not merely incidental to the murder, thus no offense merged, see: State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019), State v. Heng, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 83280-8-I (2022), cf.: State v. Williams, 131 Wn.App. 488, 497-500 (2006); 2-1, II.

State v. Tanberg, 121 Wn.App. 134 (2004)

Robbery 1° and assault 2° do not merge, State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870 (2003), State v. S.S.Y., 150 Wn.App. 325, 329-32 (2009), 170 Wn.2d 322 (2010), see: Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020), but see: State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005); I.

Identify theft, former RCW 9.35.020 (2000) and possessing stolen property of same credit card do not merge; I.

State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005)

To determine if different crimes based on the same conduct violate double jeopardy clause, court must see if (1) statutes authorize separate punishments, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777-78 (1995), State v. S.S.Y., 150 Wn.App. 325, 329-32 (2009), 170 Wn.2d 322 (2010), (2) are the two crimes, as charged and proved, the same in law and in fact, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), (3) do the crimes merge, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 419 (1983), and (4) did the commission of the "included" crime have an independent purpose or effect from the other crime?, State v. Frohs, 83 Wn.App. 803 (1996); legislature intended to punish assault 1° and robbery 1° separately, but not robbery 1° and assault 2°; assault 2° and robbery 1° will generally merge unless the offenses have an independent purpose or effect, State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006), State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798 (2008), see: State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814 (2013), Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020), *cf.: State v. State v. Atkins, 130 Wn.App. 395 (2005)

Rape by forcible compulsion and unlawful imprisonment for the same incident do not merge, even if the unlawful imprisonment was incidental to and an aid in effecting the rape, State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013); III.

State v. Williams, 131 Wn.App. 488, 497-500 (2006)

Defendant robs and shoots victim, is convicted of murder and robbery; held: robbery was integral to the killing, shooting had no purpose or intent outside of accomplishing the robbery and facilitating defendant's departure from the scene, thus crimes merge, distinguishing State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983); III.

State v. Esparza, 135 Wn.App. 54, 64-67 (2006)

When a firearm is used to commit an attempted robbery 1º, it does not merge into an assault 2º, distinguishing State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), see: State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798, 807 (2008); I.

State v. L.U., 137 Wn.App. 410, 415-17 (2007), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 95 (2008)

Vehicle prowl and taking a motor vehicle without permission do not merge, but see: State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300 (1989); I.

State v. S.S.Y., 150 Wn.App. 325, 329-32 (2009), 170 Wn.2d 322 (2010)

Juvenile offenses of robbery and assault do not merge as legislature expressed its intent to punish the offenses separately, RCW 13.40.180, distinguishing State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005); II.

State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885, 899-901 (2010)

Burglary and felony murder/burglary may be punished separately even where the burglary is the predicate offense, per burglary antimerger statute, RCW 9A.52.050; II.

State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012)

Defendant pushes into victim's home with gun, ties her up, drags her downstairs, ransacks house, is convicted of robbery and kidnapping; held: separate convictions for robbery 1° and kidnapping 1° do not violate double jeopardy or merge, state does not have to prove that one crime was not incidental to the other, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 422-23 (1983), but see: State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004), rev'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); 2-1, I.

State v. Moreno, 173 Wn.App. 479, 497-99 (2013)

Unlawful possession of a firearm and assault 1° with a firearm do not merge; III.

State v. Denny, 173 Wn.App. 805 (2013)

Defendant steals drugs, is convicted of theft of the drugs and possession of the same drugs; held: theft and possession of the same drugs do not merge; II.

State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014)

Whether or not a kidnapping is incidental to another crime does not impact sufficiency of the evidence for the kidnapping; if the elements of kidnapping are established prima facie, then there is sufficient evidence regardless of merger analysis, State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820 (2012); reverses State v. Berg, 177 Wn.App. 119 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Davis, 177 Wn.App. 454 (2014)

Defendant points gun at victims, same act threatened use of deadly force, thus, here, assault 2º and kidnapping merge, distinguishing State v. Taylor, 90 Wn.App. 312 (1998), see: State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020); I.

State v. Whittaker, 192 Wn.App. 395, 409-17 (2016)

Defendant is convicted of felony violation of a court order and felony stalking, RCW 9A.46.110 (2013), verdict is ambiguous as to which improper contacts supported the stalking conviction and prosecutor did not elect thus violation of court order merges into stalking, State v. Parmelee, 108 Wn.App. 702 (2001), State v. DeRyke, 110 Wn.App. 815 (2002), aff'd, on different grounds, 149 Wn.2d 906 (2003), State v. Kier, 164 2798 (2008); I.

State v. Thompson, 192 Wn.App. 733 (2016)

Defendant makes false statements to Medicaid and obtains money, is convicted of Medicaid false statement, RCW 74.09.230, and theft 1°, argues that they merge; held: intent of Medicaid false statement offense is to protect public health while intent of theft is to protect property, thus they do not merge; I.

Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020)

Two robberies do not merge here as there were separate forcible takings from the same victim, distinguishing State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705, 714 (2005), State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005); while jury instructions did not distinguish between crimes, prosecutor's election in closing argument was adequate, State v. Carson, 184 Wn.2d 207, 227 (2015), State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345, 350-2 (1993) State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 146 (2021); 5-4.

State v. Hancock, 17 Wn.App.2d 113 (2021)

Defendant is convicted of rape of a child 1° and child molestation 1° over the same time period, prosecutor in closing explains that rape involves instances of penetration, molestation doesn't rise to the level of sexual intercourse; held: where it is clear that two convictions of different crimes over the same period are not based upon the same evidence, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), and where the merger doctrine does not apply there is no double jeopardy violation; even when two statutory violations appear to merge on an abstract level they may be punished separately if defendant's conduct demonstrations an independent purpose or effect of each offense, State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798, 804 (2008); III.

State v. Heng*,* 22 Wn.App.2d 717 (2022)

Defendant is charged with intentional murder and felony murder/arson, jury returns general verdicts of guilty of murder and arson, defense argues that double jeopardy precludes punishment for both crimes; held: the rule of lenity requires that the court must assume defendant was convicted of felony murder, State v. Deryke, 110 Wn.App. 815, 824 (2002), aff'd, on different grounds, 149 Wn.2d 906 (2003), but here the arson had an effect independent of the murder as the owners of the building were victims in addition to the deceased, so the two offenses do not merge, State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784 (2019), distinguishing State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019); I.

State v. Booth, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 196 (2022)

Defendant is convicted of felony violation of a no contact order, elevated to a felony due to reckless conduct, RCW 26.50.110 (2006) [repealed and re-enacted, LAWS OF 2021, ch. 215, § 170], and attempting to elude a police vehicle, RCW 46.61.024, argues offenses merge since both require reckless conduct; held: legislature intended that the offenses be punished separately even when arising from the same underlying acts, see: State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 663, 667-68 (2006); I.

State v. Gonzalez*,* ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL365507 (2023)

DUI and vehicular assault from the same incident merge; in a subsequent DUI sentencing court must merge the two in determining offender score even though original trial court did not; III.

MURDER/MANSLAUGHTER/HOMICIDE*

State v. Fagundes, 26 Wn.App. 477 (1980)

Kidnap and rape merges with first degree felony murder, but see: State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019); I.

State v. Von Zante, 26 Wn.App. 739 (1980)

Provocation defense is not available in homicide prosecution; I.

State v. Parr, 93 Wn.2d 95 (1980)

State must prove knowing infliction of grievous harm for felony murder-assault; 9-0.

State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.2d 176 (1980)

Murder 1° "under circumstances manifesting an extreme indifference to human life," RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b) does not apply where the act was aimed at a specific individual and no other, see: State v. Dunbar, 117 Wn.2d 587 (1991) ; 9-0.

State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980)

Kidnap, as an element of aggravated murder 1°, must involve more than the mere incidental restraint and movement of the victim which would occur in the course of the homicide to meet a challenge to sufficiency of the evidence, State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004), 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Collins, 30 Wn.App. 1 (1981)

Manslaughter 2° is a lesser of murder 2°, but see: State v. Red, 105 Wn.App. 62 (2001); III.

State v. Dudrey, 30 Wn.App. 447 (1981)

Felony-murder is proved if the homicide is within the res gestae of the felony, i.e., if there is a close proximity in terms of time and distance between the felony and the homicide, State v. Golladay, 78 Wn.2d 121 (1970), State v. Meza, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 512 P.3d 608 (2022)see: State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700 (1990); abandonment is not available as defense to felony-murder if death occurred during the commission of the felony, some phase of which defendant participated in; III.

State v. Hansen, 30 Wn.App. 702 (1981)

Where physical evidence conclusively establishes defendant held cocked gun to victim's head, then defendant knowingly accepted risk that conduct might result in injury, and thus defendant was properly convicted of manslaughter 1°, not entitled to manslaughter 2° instructions.

State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981)

Manslaughter 1° is a lesser of intentional murder 2°, State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541 (1997); jury could find that a defendant used self-defense but recklessly or negligently used more force than was necessary; but see: State v. Bergeson, 64 Wn.App. 366 (1992); generally approves WPIC 16.02; see also: State v. Warden, 80 Wn.App. 448 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Anderson, 96 Wn.2d 739 (1982)

Defendant is convicted in 1977 of murder 1° by "extreme indifference," RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), conviction is reversed on appeal by Supreme Court; defendant is then charged with murder 1° by premeditation; Supreme Court orders information dismissed without prejudice, as state failed to join the related offenses of premeditated murder 1° with murder 1° by extreme indifference, CrR 4.3(c)(3); Supreme Court holds that state is not barred by double jeopardy clause from charging defendant with any lesser included offense (murder 2°, manslaughter), as the original reversal was not based upon insufficiency of the evidence, but rather upon inapplicability of the statute [extreme indifference does not apply where the defendant intended the death of the particular victim, State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.2d 176 (1980)]; 6-3.

State v. Smith, 31 Wn.App. 226 (1982)

Definitions of reckless and criminal negligence (manslaughter 1° and manslaughter 2°) are clearly distinguishable, State v. Burley, 23 Wn.App. 881 (1979); III.

State v. Beel, 32 Wn.App. 437 (1982)

Negligent homicide, former RCW 46.61.520, is a lesser of murder 2°; III.

State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484 (1983)

State has burden of proving beyond reasonable doubt the absence of self-defense in murder case, modifying State v. Savage, 94 Wn.2d 569 (1980); State v. Hanton, 94 Wn.2d 129 (1980); State v. Burt, 94 Wn.2d 108 (1980); State v. King, 92 Wn.2d 541 (1979); 5-3.

State v. Powell, 34 Wn.App. 791 (1983)

Defendant is charged with felony-murder 1°, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c)(5), pleads guilty, on appeal plea is reversed; upon remand state amends to charge premeditated murder 1°, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(a); defendant seeks dismissal for speedy-trial violation because of failure to join a related offense, CrR 4.3(c); held: information may be amended to include an alternate means of committing a crime formerly charged without violating joinder or speedy-trial rules; I.

State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501 (1983)

State elicits evidence that defendant conspired to burn building and knew that a janitor would die in fire, no direct evidence adduced that defendant intended to kill janitor; held: intent to kill may be inferred from defendant's knowledge that a death would occur; 9-0.

Kreck v. Spalding, 721 F.2d 1229 (9th Cir. 1983)

For information to properly charge felony-murder, must specify underlying felony, but see: State v. Hartz, 65 Wn.App. 351 (1992), State v. Medlock, 86 Wn.App. 89, 101-2 (1997), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 842 (1991).

State v. Ellison, 36 Wn.App. 564 (1984)

The time required for premeditation may be very short, provided that it is an "appreciable" period of time within which the defendant may form an intent, State v. Griffith, 91 Wn.2d 572, 577 (1979), State v. Allen, 159 Wn.2d 1 (2006), State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 35-37 (2007), State v. Sherrill, 145 Wn.App. 473, 483-87 (2008), State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 314-15 (2015); jury need not be unanimous where defendant is charged alternatively with premeditated murder 1° and felony-murder 1°, State v. Arndt, 87 Wn.2d 374 (1976), distinguishing State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980); I.

State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984)

Statutory defense to felony murder as set forth in WPIC 19.01 does not relieve state of burden of proving each element, distinguishing State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484 (1984); I.

State v. Commodore, 38 Wn.App. 244 (1984)

Diminished capacity is defense to both intent and premeditation elements in murder 1°; I.

State v. Gamboa, 38 Wn.App. 409 (1984)

Statutory defense to felony-murder, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c) does not shift the burden of proof of any element of the crime of felony-murder to the defense, see also: State v. Fisher, 185 Wn.2d 836, 848-52 (2016); an accomplice may be obliged to prove lack of knowledge as to a principal being armed when such knowledge is not an element of the underlying charge; I.

State v. Haley, 39 Wn.App. 164 (1984)

Where facts support either manslaughter or negligent homicide charge, state must charge negligent homicide where an automobile is involved; III.

State v. Sellers, 39 Wn.App. 799 (1985)

Corpus delicti for homicide is (1) fact of death and (2) responsibility of a criminal agency for death; causal connection between defendant and crime is not required; no body need be found; II.

State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984)

In capital case penalty phase, state introduced evidence that defendant legally owned numerous firearms; held: state may not comment on defendant's exercise of a constitutionally protected right, thus remanded for a new penalty phase; 9-0.

State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277 (1984)

Mandatory life without parole for noncapital aggravated murder, RCW 10.95.030(1), is constitutional; 9-0.

State v. Edwards, 104 Wn.2d 63 (1985)

That death occur within a year and a day of the offense is a common law element of murder; statute which expands that to three years is an ex post facto enactment as to acts which occurred prior to the effective date; 9-0.

State v. Bingham, 40 Wn.App. 553 (1985), affirmed, 105 Wn.2d 820 (1986)

Manual strangulation which took at least three minutes is not, by itself, sufficient evidence to prove premeditation; evidence must be sufficient to support inference that defendant not only had the time to deliberate, but that he actually did so; cf.: State v. Bushey, 46 Wn.App. 570 (1987), State v. Gibson, 47 Wn.App. 309 (1987), State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131, 145 (1991), State v. Rehak, 67 Wn.App. 157 (1992), State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 573, 596-604 (1995), State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 769-70 (2001), State v. Allen, 159 Wn.2d 1 (2006), State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App.24, 35-37 (2007), State v. Sherrill, 145 Wn.App. 473, 483-87 (2008), State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App. 654, 670-73 (2011), State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 314-15 (2015); II.

State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 729 (1985)

Circumstantial evidence alone is sufficient to prove who killed victim, when and where he was killed, State v. Fasick, 149 Wash. 92, 95 (1928); III.

State v. Martin, 41 Wn.App. 133 (1985)

Where state seeks to prove burglary as the aggravating factor to enhance penalty in aggravated murder case, jury must be instructed regarding the crime the defendant intended to commit within the premises; harmless here; III.

State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985)

To prove aggravated murder 1° by common scheme, RCW 10.95.020(8), state must prove nexus between the killings, not the killers, State v. Grisby, 97 Wn.2d 493 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Carey, 42 Wn.App. 840 (1986)

Aggravated murder statute, Ch. 10.95, RCW, does not violate equal protection clause; aggravating factors, RCW 10.95.020, are constitutional, State v. Bartholomew, 101 Wn.2d 631, 635-6 (1984), and do not violate separation of powers doctrine; I.

State v. Ollens, 107 Wn.2d 848 (1987)

Multiple stabbings with a knife, where victim was struck from behind and evidence of motive are sufficient to submit the issue of premeditation to the jury, distinguishing State v. Bingham, 105 Wn.2d 820 (1986); see: State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988), State v. Longworth, 52 Wn.App. 453 (1988), State v. Woldegiorgis, 50 Wn.App. 92 (1988), State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131, 145 (1991), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991), State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307 (2015), State v. Rehak, 67 Wn.App. 157 (1992), State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 573, 596-604 (1995), State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 643-8 (1995), State v. Millante, 80 Wn.App. 237, 248 (1995), State v.Clark, 143 Wn.2d 701, 769-70 (2001), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 816-18 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Allen, 159 Wn.2d 1 (2006), .State v. Elmi, 138 Wn.App. 306, 313-14 (2007), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 209 (2009), State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 35-37 (2007), State v. Sherrill, 145 Wn.App. 473 (2008), State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App. 654, 670-73 (2011), State v. Monaghan, 166 Wn.App. 521, 535-36 (2012), State v. Cortes Aguilar, 176 Wn.App. 264, 272-74 (2013), State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 314-15 (2015), State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019), c;f.: State v. Hummel, 196 Wn.App. 329 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Anderson, 108 Wn.2d 188 (1987)

Aggravated murder 1° defendant is not entitled to 12 peremptory challenges where state does not seek death penalty, CrR 6.4(e); 7-2.

Martin v. Ohio, 94 L.Ed.2d 267 (1987)

State may properly place burden of proving self-defense on defendant; 5-4.

State v. Brigham, 52 Wn.App. 208, 210 (1988)

In felony murder 2° case, where victim and defendant were in a fight, victim was not a participant in the crime, thus the exclusion in RCW 9A.32.050(1)(b) is not available as a defense, State v. Goodrich, 72 Wn.App. 71, 75-6 (1993); see: State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572 (1992); I.

State v. Longworth, 52 Wn.App. 453 (1988)

In aggravated murder 1° case, where aggravating factor is concealment of a crime, RCW 10.95.020, state need not specify the crime, State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 419 (1986), nor need jury be so instructed, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, (2015), State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 196-99 (2014); I.

State v. Irizarry, 111 Wn.2d 592 (1988)

Felony murder is not a lesser included offense of aggravated murder 1°, State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 658-60 (1995); for retroactivity and harmless error analysis, see: Pers. Restraint of St. Pierre, 118 Wn.2d 321 (1992), *State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); 5-3.

State v. Woldegiorgis, 53 Wn.App. 92 (1988)

In defining premeditation, a proposed instruction adding to WPIC 26.01, "[h]owever, time alone is not enough. The evidence must be sufficient to support the inference that the defendant not only had time to deliberate, but that he actually did so," is a comment on the evidence; I.

State v. Creekmore, 55 Wn.App. 852 (1989)

Felony murder 2° can be established by proof of criminal mistreatment, RCW 9A.42.030(2), plus causing death of another; I.

State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700 (1990)

A death that is caused by an arson fire before it is extinguished occurs "in furtherance of" the arson, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c), and renders the arsonist liable of felony murder, reversing State v. Leech, 54 Wn.App. 597 (1989), see: State v. Millante, 80 Wn.App. 237, 249-50 (1995); foreseeability is not an element of proximate cause, approving WPIC 25.02; 9-0.

State v. Entz, 58 Wn.App. 112 (1990)

Where defendant expresses a wish that victim were dead, following which person to whom defendant expressed wish kills victim, is insufficient to establish manslaughter 1°, thus manslaughter would not be a factual lesser of murder, since the evidence fails to support an inference that only manslaughter was committed, State v. Robinson, 12 Wash. 349 (1895); I.

State v. Baker, 58 Wn.App. 222 (1990)

In manslaughter 1° case, where "to convict" instruction requires state to prove recklessness, then failure to instruct that state must prove lack of excuse beyond a reasonable doubt is not error, as lack of excuse is proved by proof of recklessness; I.

State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990)

Defendant, during burglary in which he was armed, confronts homeowner who is armed, defendant flees when gunfire ensues, homeowner is killed; held: lawful use of force is not available as a defense to felony-murder 1° (burglary), State v. Bolar, 118 Wn.App. 490, 506-10 (2003); self-defense is not revived, State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777 (1973), absent good faith intention to withdraw from burglary removing decedent's fear, cf.: State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023); even while fleeing from burglary scene, burglary is still in progress; affirms State v. Dennison, 54 Wn.App. 577 (1989); 7-2.

State v. Bowerman, 115 Wn.2d 794 (1990)

Murder 2° is not a lesser of aggravated murder 1° where defendant asserts she did not intend to kill, see: State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131 (1991)

Planned presence of weapon necessary to facilitate a killing is sufficient to prove premeditation, State v. Bingham, 105 Wn.2d 820, 827 (1986), State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 643-8 (1995), State v. Allen, 159 Wn.2d 1 (2006), State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688, 702-04 (2008), State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App. 654, 670-73 (2011), State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 314-15 (2015), see: State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 831-35 (1999); II.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

In aggravated murder (police victims) case, trial court instructs jury that victims were law enforcement officers and determines lawfulness of arrest without submitting issues to jury; held: harmless as to instruction that victims were police (7-2), validity of arrest or search are determinations for the court to make, State v. John Doe, 6 Wn.App. 978, 982 (1972), unless the information makes it an element of the crime, as in resisting arrest (8-1).

State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662 (1991)

Aggravated murder 1° and felony murder are alternative ways of committing first degree murder, State v. Ellison, 36 Wn.App. 564, 565 (1984), and not a greater and lesser, State v. Irizarry, 111 Wn.2d 591, 594-95 (1988); dicta that a defendant charged alternatively with both may plead guilty to felony murder but will not escape trial on aggravated murder; II.

State v. Norman, 61 Wn.App. 16 (1991)

Failure to procure medical care for sick son is not protected by freedom of religion provisions of First Amendment or CONST. Art. 1, § 11, State v. Baxter, 134 Wn.App. 587 (2006); III.

State v. Peerson, 62 Wn.App. 755 (1991)

In two-count aggravated murder case, jury enters special verdicts in count I that there was not more than one victim and in count II that there was more than one victim, RCW 10.95.020(8); held: because verdicts, on these facts, could be logically reconciled, affirmed; I.

State v. Dunbar, 117 Wn.2d 587 (1991)

Murder 1° by creation of a grave risk of death, former RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), lacks element of intent, thus attempted murder is not a lesser, as attempted murder requires the specific intent to cause the death of another person, see: Pers. Restraint of Knight,4 Wn.App.2d 248 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Maupin, 63 Wn.App. 887 (1992)

In felony murder (rape or kidnap) case, absent special verdict, where there is insufficient evidence to establish one of the alternative methods, verdict must be set aside; III, 2-1.

State v. Yates, 64 Wn.App. 345 (1992)

Homicide defendant lacks standing to challenge removal of life supports from victim; removing life supports, including food and water, is not an intervening cause of death, independent of the homicide, requiring an instruction to jury, see: State v. Perez-Cervantes, 141 Wn.2d ; II.

State v. Bergeson, 64 Wn.App. 366 (1992)

Murder 2° defendant is not entitled to manslaughter instructions if the only inferences available from evidence are that s/he (1) subjectively believed there was imminent danger of great personal injury, (2) subjectively intended to kill in self-defense, and (3) recklessly or negligently used more force than objectively reasonable under the circumstances, but see: State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981); inference needed to support manslaughter instruction is that without intent to kill, but with recklessness, defendant caused death of another; see also: State v. Warden, 80 Wn.App. 448 (1996); II.

State v. Hale, 65 Wn.App. 752 (1992)

Defendant gives children 40 times sleeping pill dose, states she did it so they would go to sleep and never wake up; held: sufficient to establish substantial step for attempted murder 1° as it is no defense that true facts render commission of a completed crime legally or factually impossible, RCW 9A.28.020(2), State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666, 679-80 (2002), physician testified that dose could have been lethal; III.

State v. Howland, 66 Wn.App. 586 (1992)

To prove aggravated murder 1°, RCW 10.95.020(9)(c), state need not prove an intent to murder plus an independent intent to commit the aggravating felony, State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 277-280 (2012),; II.

State v. Rehak, 67 Wn.App. 157 (1992)

Proposed instruction requiring "substantial" circumstantial evidence to support a finding of premeditation need not be given; II.

State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572 (1992)

In felony murder 2° case, RCW 9A.32.050(1)(b), victim's participation in a fistfight prior to his stabbing does not entitle defendant to a participation-exclusion instruction, as it was the stabbing, not the fistfight, that caused victim's death, State v. Brigham, 52 Wn.App. 208 (1988), State v. Goodrich, 72 Wn.App. 71, 75-6 (1993); further, "participant" does not encompass a victim who was acting in self-defense, at 579; accomplice may be convicted of felony-murder 2° (assault) even if he did not know means by which principal intended to accomplish the assault or that principal was armed, State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654, 658-9 (1984); III.

State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1 (1993), overruled, in part, State v. Tamalini, 134 Wn.2d 725, 729 n. 1 (1998)

Manslaughter 1° and 2° are not lessers of felony murder 2°, State v. Gilmer, 96 Wn.App. 875, 885-89 (1999), reversing State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992), cf.: State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541, 550 (1997), State v. Lyon, 96 Wn.App. 447 (1999), State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457 (2005), 137 Wn.App. 892 (2007); 7-0.

State v. Harris, 121 Wn.2d 317 (1993)

Assault 1° is not a lesser of attempted murder 1°, State v. Turner, 143 Wn.2d 715, 729-30 (2001), State v. Boswell, 185 Wn.App. 321, 332-35 (2014), although state may charge in the alternative, but see: State v. Lyon, 96 Wn.App. 447 (1999); 7-0.

State v. Vangerpen, 71 Wn.App. 94 (1993), overruled on other grounds, 125 Wn.2d 782 (1995)

Detained driver with a loaded, cocked revolver hidden under leg which he attempted to reach when questioned by police establishes corpus for attempted murder 1°, State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775, 780 (1990); assuming that there must be corroborative evidence of each element of the crime to establish the corpus, Smith v. United States, 99 L.Ed.192 (1954), the cocked gun is sufficient to establish premeditation, State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688, 702-04 (2008), State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 35-37 (2007), State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 314-15 (2015); failure to allege premeditation in information is fatal to attempted murder 1° charge where brought to court's attention during trial; I.

State v. Goodrich, 72 Wn.App. 71, 75-6 (1993)

Victim is not an excluded participant for purposes of the felony murder rule, RCW 9A.32.050(1)(b), State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572, 579 (1992), State v. Brigham, 52 Wn.App. 208, 210 (1988), even if victim started the fight which led to his death; I.

State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 615-19 (1993) Defendant is charged with two counts of aggravated murder, is acquitted of one of the counts, special verdict finds that both victims died as a result of a common scheme or plan, an aggravating factor, RCW 10.95.020(8), defense claims verdicts are inconsistent; held: defendant cannot attack a conviction based on an acquittal on another count, Dunn v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 356, 80 A.L.R. 161 (1932); here, verdicts were not truly inconsistent; I.

State v. Thompson, 73 Wn.App. 654 (1994)

To prove corpus in murder case where no body is found, state may offer evidence of victim's habit and character to establish circumstantial evidence of the fact of death by a criminal agency, as it is not being introduced to show that victim acted in conformity with a particular character or habit trait on a particular occasion, ER 404(a); where character and habit evidence established that victim never missed appointments, never had been gone for more than 24 hours, was a good housekeeper, took care of her pets, and other evidence established that she was missing, did not feed her cat, house was messy, a strong inference is raised that she died and that her death was sudden and caused by criminal means; see: State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988), State v. Lung, 70 Wn.2d 365, 371 (1967); I.

State v. Smith, 74 Wn.App. 844 (1994)

Neither information charging felony murder-assault nor plea statement contain a mens rea element, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: assault itself indicates an intentional act, State v. Osborne, 102 Wn.2d 87, 94 (1984); II.

State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 601-4 (1995)

In aggravated murder 1° case, aggravating factor that crime was committed to protect or conceal identity of person committing a crime is proved by evidence that victim was struck in head numerous times, shirt pulled over face, final blow was a place where body was found behind log in dense underbrush; while the crime which motivates the killing to conceal identity cannot be the murder itself, the predicate crime need not be identified by the jury, State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398, 419-20 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Burnette, 78 Wn.App. 952 (1995)

In felony murder case, proof of underlying robbery is not part of the corpus to admit confession, State v. Medlock, 86 Wn.App. 89, 100-1 (1997), see: State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 41, 48 (1982); even if robbery is an element of corpus, evidence that victim had money and had purchased items an hour before he was stabbed and had no money on his body establishes that money was lost through criminal agency; I.

State v. Millante, 80 Wn.App. 237, 249-50 (1995)

To prove felony murder/robbery, mere lack of intent to rob at the moment of killing is not a defense, State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777, 782-3 (1973); the fact that the final act of robbery is preceded by the homicide does no fragment the transaction, State v. Temple, 5 Wn.App. 1, 708 (1971); I.

State v. Fortune, 128 Wn.2d 464 (1996)

Felony murder/robbery and premeditated murder are alternative means of committing murder 1°, jury need not be unanimous, Schad v. Arizona, 115 L.Ed.2d 555 (1991); affirms State v. Fortune, 77 Wn.App. 628 (1995); I.

State v. Warden, 80 Wn.App. 448 (1996)

In murder trial, where there is sufficient evidence that defendant had diminished capacity to intend to cause death of victim, then defendant is entitled to instructions on lesser included offenses of manslaughter 1° and manslaughter 2°, State v. Colwash, 15 Wn.App. 530 (1976), aff'd, 88 Wn.2d 468 (1977), State v. Berge, 25 Wn.App. 433 (1980), State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981); I.

State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541 (1997)

Manslaughter is a lesser included offense of intentional murder 2°, but is not a lesser of felony murder, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457 (2005), 137 Wn.App. 892 (2007), State v. Gilmer, 96 Wn.App. 875, 885-89 (1999); where evidence establishes murder defendant's drinking potentially impaired ability to form intent to kill, then factual test is satisfied, State v. Warden, 133 Wn.2d 559 (1997); to establish that an offense is a lesser, (1) each element of the lesser must be a necessary element of the charged offense, and (2) the evidence must support an inference that the lesser crime was committed, State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 447-8 (1978); a lesser is not precluded whenever a crime may be statutorily committed by alternative means, overruling State v. Lucky, 128 Wn.2d 727 (1996), reversing State v. Berlin, 80 Wn.App. 734 (1996), see: State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), *State v. State v. Morgan, 86 Wn.App. 74 (1997)

Failure to provide medical care and summon medical aid for spouse whom defendant assisted use dangerous quantity of cocaine is manslaughter 1°, see: State v. Norman, 61 Wn.App. 16 (1997), controlled substances homicide is not an obligatory more specific crime under these circumstances, see: State v. Sill, 47 Wn.2d 647 (1955); III.

State v. Medlock, 86 Wn.App. 89, 100-1 (1997)

To prove felony murder, corpus delicti rule does not require that underlying felony be established independent of a confession, State v. Burnette, 78 Wn.App. 952, 957 (1995); information charging felony murder need not set out all elements of the predicate felony, State v. Bryant, 65 Wn.App. 428, 438 (1992), State v. Hartz, 65 Wn.App. 351, 354 (1992), but see: Kreck v. Spalding, 721 F.2d 1229 (9th Cir. 1983); III.

State v. Tamalini, 134 Wn.2d 725 (1998)

Manslaughters are not inferior degrees of felony murder 1° or 2°, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457 (2005), State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164, 171-73 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), cf.: State v. Lyon, 96 Wn.App. 447 (1999); 6-3.

State v. Schaffer, 135 Wn.2d 355 (1998)

Defendant is charged with premeditated murder 1° and felony murder 2°, is acquitted of murder 1°, convicted of murder 2°, trial court declines to give manslaughter instructions as lessers; held: a defendant who reasonably believes he is in imminent danger and needs to act in self-defense, but recklessly or negligently uses more force than necessary is entitled to instructions on manslaughter, State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616, 628 (1981); State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 119-22 (2016), although manslaughter is not a lesser of felony murder, it is a lesser of murder 1° and, although defendant was acquitted of that charge, he is still entitled to have the jury so instructed on retrial; per curiam.

State v. McDonald, 90 Wn.App. 604, 612-7 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999)

Victim is fatally shot in head by co-defendant, defendant shoots him again "to put him out of his misery," claims his shooting could not have been proximate cause of death as victim would have died anyway; held: factual causation is proved not by a "but for" test but by the "substantial factor" test: where either one of two causes would have produced the identical harm, thus making it impossible for plaintiff to prove the "but for" test, all parties whose actions contributed to the outcome are liable, Allison v. Housing Auth., 118 Wn.2d 79 (1991), Daugert v. Pappas, 104 Wn.2d 254, 262 (1985), State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609, 624 n.15 (1990); II.

State v. Edwards, 92 Wn.App. 156 (1998)

In homicide by abuse, RCW 9A.32.055(1), "extreme indifference to human life" pertains to a specific victim, trial court should not define it pursuant to the murder 1º "extreme indifference" standard, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), which applies to indifference to life generally; I.

State v. Barstad, 93 Wn.App. 553 (1999)

Intoxicated defendant kills two women speeding through red light at busy intersection, is convicted of murder 1° by extreme indifference to human life, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), contends vehicular homicide supersedes murder statute when homicide occurs through reckless or impaired driving; held: because prosecutor chose to increase his proof requirement, general/specific analysis is inapplicable, distinguishing State v. Collins, 55 Wn.2d 469 (1960), which precludes prosecutor from charging manslaughter under these circumstances, see: State v. Aamold, 60 Wn.App. 175 (1991); court need not define "extreme indifference" for jury; III.

State v. Newbern, 95 Wn.App. 277, 285-88 (1999)

Reckless endangerment, RCW 9A.36.050(1), is not a lesser of attempted murder, see: State v. Prado, 144 Wn.App. 227, 242 (2008); II.

State v. Lyon, 96 Wn.App. 447 (1999)

In felony murder/assault case, where there is evidence that defendant assaulted victim but another person independently caused victim's death, defendant is entitled to lesser included offense instruction for assault 2°, State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541, 548 (1997), distinguishing State v. Tamalini, 134 Wn.2d 725 (1998), State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1 (1993), see also: State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457 (2005); I.

State v. Gilmer, 96 Wn.App. 875 (1999)

In felony murder, the term "in furtherance of" requires that the death be sufficiently close in time and place of the felony to be part of the res gestae of the felony, State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700, 706 (1990), State v. Meza, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 512 P.3d 608 (2022), instruction that "it is not required that death furthered a crime, but rather that the crime itself was being furthered and this furtherance itself is a proximate cause of a death" is correct, at 883-84; court need not instruct that death was a foreseeable consequence of the predicate felony, at 885; manslaughter 1° is not a lesser of felony murder 2° by reckless endangerment or any other predicate felony, at 888, State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541 (1997), State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1 (1993); III.

State v. Schwab, 98 Wn.App. 179 (1999)

Convictions for both felony murder 2° and manslaughter 1° for a single homicide violate double jeopardy clauses, see: State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 138 (2005), State v. Schwab, 134 Wn.App. 635 (2006), 163 Wn.2d 664 (2008); I.

State v. Hernandez, 99 Wn.App. 312 (1999)

In murder trial, state offers defendant's statement that death was an accident, that he had not touched the gun when victim, who was holding the gun, was shot, defense objects to court's refusal to instruct on lesser manslaughters; held: because manslaughter requires that the accused caused the death of another, factual test fails, thus defense is not entitled to lessers, cf.: State v. Guilliot, 106 Wn.App. 355, 366-69 (2001), State v. Hunter, 152 Wn.App. 30 (2009); I.

State v. Perez-Cervantes, 141 Wn.2d 468 (2000)

Defendant stabs victim who is treated and released, later uses cocaine, dies of internal bleeding, medical examiner testifies cause of death was the stabbing, drug use and emphysema were "contributing factors," trial court prohibits defense from arguing that drug use was the cause of death; held: even if drug use or failure to seek medical attention was an intervening proximate cause of death, absent evidence of a superseding cause of death, there was insufficient evidence that death was proximately caused by drug use, thus trial court properly restricted defense closing argument; 5-4.

State v. Townsend, 142 Wn.2d 838 (2001), overruled, State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

In noncapital murder case, jury may not be informed that the case does not involve the death penalty, State v. Murphy, 86 Wn.App. 667 (1997), State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 928-31 (2007), State v. Hicks, 163 Wn.2d 477, 486-89 (2008), reversing State v. Townsend, 97 Wn.App. 25 (1999), but see: State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 774-81 (2012), State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641 (2017), harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845, 851-54 (2000)

Firing a gun once into a vehicle with two people in it is sufficient to prove two counts of attempted murder, even if there is no evidence that defendant knew the car was occupied by more than one person, State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 807-08 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); II.

State v. Red, 105 Wn.App. 51 (2001)

Because manslaughter is not a specific intent crime, then attempted manslaughter is not a lesser of attempted murder; II.

Rogers v. Tennessee, 149 L.Ed.2d 697 (2001)

State supreme court's abolishing common law rule that time between act and death is limited to a year and a day does not violate ex post facto clause; 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Howerton, 109 Wn.App. 494, 498-505 (2001)

In aggravated murder case, instruction on aggravating factor that "defendant or an accomplice committed the murder to conceal commission of a crime" is improper, as a sentence enhancement must depend on defendant's own misconduct, see: *State v. State v. Hughes, 118 Wn.App. 713, 730-34 (2003)

Following vacation of felony murder assault conviction, Pers. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457 (2005), State v. Schwab, 134 Wn.App. 635 (2006), 163 Wn.2d 664 (2008); II.

State v. DeRosia, 124 Wn.App. 138 (2004)

Defendant pleads guilty, North Carolina v. Alford, 27 L.Ed.2d 162 (1970), as charged to felony murder 2°/assault, seeks vacation and withdrawal of plea, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002); held: because defendant received no plea bargain benefit, having pled as charged, state could not hold him to his plea, distinguishing State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354(1980); because an Alford plea provides no factual basis for any crime, but see: State v. Smith, 40 Wn.App. 67 (1985), and because defendant did not know, at plea, that assault could not serve as predicate felony for murder, he could not have knowingly and intelligently appraised the state's evidence, and thus his plea was not valid; because there were no "guilty admissions of fact," court cannot sentence defendant for manslaughter, see: State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457

(2005), 137 Wn.App. 892 (2007), cf.: State v. Ramos, 124 Wn.App. 334 (2004), 163 Wn.2d 654 (2008); II.

State v. Ramos, 124 Wn.App. 334 (2004)

Defendant's conviction for felony murder 2°/assault is reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), on remand trial court permits amendment to manslaughter 1°; held: "ends of justice" exception to the mandatory joinder rule, CrR 4.3.1(b)(3), applies where there are reasons extraneous to the action of the court or go to the regularity of its proceedings, State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324, 333 (1995), State v. Carter, 56 Wn.App. 217, 223 (1989), State v. Gamble, 137 Wn.App. 892 (2007), aff'd, 168 Wn.2d 161 (2010), see: State v. Wright, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009); here, because the Supreme Court abandoned an unbroken line of precedent after 25 years was extraneous to the prosecutions, state filed charges and sought instructions in accordance with long-standing interpretations of state law, state may try defendant for manslaughter, see: State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654 (2008); I.

State v. Musgrave, 124 Wn.App. 733 (2004)

State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 138, 141-47 (2005)

Defendant is convicted of felony murder/assault and, alternatively, manslaughter, trial court does not sentence on manslaughter, State v. Johnson, 113 Wn.App. 482 (2002), upon reversal of felony murder, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 606 (2002), defense argues double jeopardy precludes conviction of manslaughter because absence of a finding equates to a negative finding, In re Marriage of Olivares, 69 Wn.App. 324, 334 (1993); held: jury verdict of manslaughter is a finding of fact, State v. Willoughby, 29 Wn.App. 828, 835 (1981), thus remedy is to enter judgment on manslaughter, see: State v. Schwab, 134 Wn.App. 635 (2006), 163 Wn.2d 664 (2008); I.

State v. Carter, 154 Wn.2d 71 (2005)

Defendant plans, with others, a robbery but is not present at the robbery where the victim is slain, is convicted as an accomplice of felony murder after trial court erroneously instructs jurors that defendant is an accomplice in "the commission of a crime," State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000); held: where a defendant is charged with felony murder and has participated in the predicate felony, the co-participant clause of the felony murder statute, RCW 9A.32.030(1), imputes criminal liability for the homicide; where defendant has not participated directly in the commission of the predicate felony, state must establish accomplice liability; here, the accomplice liability instruction was harmless, see: State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002), see also: State v. Stovall, 115 Wn.App. 650 (2003); affirms State v. Carter, 119 Wn.App. 221 (2003); 8-1.

State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 645-48 (2005)

Where multiple incidents are offered in support of aggravating factors for purposes of proving aggravated murder, jury should be instructed that it had to be unanimous as to which of the five alleged acts constituted the aggravating circumstance, *State v. State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457 (2005)

Manslaughter 1° is not a lesser included offense of felony murder 2° where assault 2°, as defined in RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a) is the predicate felony, *State v. Pers. Restraint of Mayer, 128 Wn.App. 694 (2005)

Defendant pleads guilty to a single charge of murder 2° under intent and felony murder/assault alternatives, seeks to withdraw plea pursuant to Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 606 (2002); held: because defendant pled to two separate crimes in the alternative rather than alternative ways of committing a single crime, State v. Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001), and because the factual basis for plea was sufficient to support intentional murder, defendant's plea is valid, *Pers. Pers. Restraint of Candelario, 129 Wn.App. 1 (2005)

Defendant is charged with alternative counts of murder 2°, jury returns special verdict that it is hung on intentional murder, guilty of felony murder/assault, latter is reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 606 (2002), defense argues implied acquittal of intentional murder, State v. Ramos, 124 Wn.App. 334 (2004), State v. Hescock, 98 Wn.App. 600, 611 (1999); held: while conviction on a lesser included offense is an implied acquittal of the greater, State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006), but see: State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009), here the jury did not find petitioner guilty of a lesser nor did it find the state failed to prove an element of the alternative intentional murder charge, and jury was not silent as to why it failed to convict on the alternative, thus defendant can be retried on intentional murder, as jury was hung, State v. Despenza, 38 Wn.App. 645, 654 (1984), see also: State v. Wright, 131 Wn.App. 474 (2006), 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009), State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654 (2008); II.

State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 230-31 (2006)

In murder 1º case, to convict instruction that defendant or an accomplice acted with intent to kill is adequate, whereas it is not proper to prove an aggravating factor in a capital case, Pers. Restraint of Howerton, 109 Wn.App. 494, 498-505, State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 505 (2000); I.

State v. Monschke, 133 Wn.App. 313 (2006)

White supremacy is an identifiable group as an aggravating circumstance that murder was committed "to obtain or maintain his membership…in the hierarchy of an organization, association or identifiable group," RCW 10.95.020(6); aggravating circumstance is not overbroad, distinguishing Wisconsin v. Mitchell, 124 L.Ed.2d 436 (1993), or vague; bifurcation of the aggravated circumstance is not required, within discretion of trial court, State v. Kelley, 64 Wn.App. 755, 762 (1992); II.

State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006)

Defendant is charged with aggravated murder 1º, jury is instruction to first consider crime charged and, if it acquits or is unable to agree on greater, can move to lesser, jury leaves verdict form for aggravated murder blank, convicts of lesser felony murder/assault which is later vacated, Pers Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), state refiles aggravated murder; held: jurors leaving verdict form blank means on its face that the jury was unable to agree which is not an implied acquittal, thus jeopardy is not terminated and state may re-try defendant on the greater offense, State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009), State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777, 789 (2006)(Sanders, J., concurring), State v. Scott, 145 Wn.App. 884 (2008), *State v. State v. Schwab, 134 Wn.App. 635 (2006), 163 Wn.2d 664 (2008)

Defendant is convicted of felony murder/assault and manslaughter for same homicide, Court of Appeals vacates manslaughter conviction, State v. Schwab, 98 Wn.App.179 (1999), murder conviction is later vacated, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), on remand trial court reinstates manslaughter conviction; held: validity of jury's verdict on manslaughter remains unimpaired, original vacation was to avoid double punishment, thus trial court properly reinstated manslaughter conviction when the erroneous charge of felony murder was set aside, see: State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 138 (2005); I.

State v. Gamble, 137 Wn.App. 892 (2007), 168 Wn.2d 161 (2010)

Defendant admits to kicking and intentionally punching homicide victim in head, is convicted of manslaughter 1º, excepts to failure to instruct on lesser manslaughter 2º; held: no reasonable jury could conclude that someone would be unaware that beating a person to unconsciousness and then kicking him in the head would potentially kill victim, thus manslaughter 2º is not a factual lesser, State v. Burley, 23 Wn.App. 881, 885 (1979); II.

State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 506-20 (2007)

Victim is suffocated to death after which defendant burns house and her body, is convicted of aggravated murder in the course of arson; held: in order for a death to have occurred in the course of a felony, there must be a causal connection such that the death was a probable consequence of that felony, State v. Golladay, 78 Wn.2d 121, 131 (1970), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Arndt, 87 Wn.2d 374, 378 (1976), State v. Diebold, 152 Wash. 68, 72 (1929), State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 277-80 (2012), State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 199-203 (2015), State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12 (2018), thus evidence here is insufficient to establish that the murder was in the course of an arson; 7-2.

State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2007)

Where trial court finds by clear, cogent and convincing evidence that defendant was responsible for a declarant's unavailability, here by murder, doctrine of forfeiture by wrongdoing results in defendant forfeiting his right of confrontation of the declarant's testimonial hearsay, State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673 (1992), see: State v. Dobbs, 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014), but see: Giles v. California, 171 L.Ed.2d 488 (2008), State v. Fraser, 170 Wn.App. 13, 19-24 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Feeser, 138 Wn.App. 737 (2007)

While murder 2º is defined as "[w]ith intent to cause death of another person but without premeditation, he or she causes the death of such person," "without premeditation" is not an essential element, State v. Ward, 148 Wn.2d 803, 812 (2003); II.

Pers. Restraint of Bowman, 162 Wn.2d 325 (2007)

Drive-by shooting, RCW 9A.36.045, can serve as a predicate to felony murder 2°, distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 606 (2002); 7-2.

Giles v. California, 171 L.Ed.2d 488 (2008)

Where trial judge finds that defendant committed a wrongful act that resulted in unavailability of witness at trial, here homicide, doctrine of forfeiture by wrongdoing does not overcome confrontation clause preclusion of victim's unconfronted out of court testimony unless evidence establishes that defendant engaged in conduct designed to prevent the witness from testifying, State v. Fraser, 170 Wn.App. 13, 19-24 (2012), but see: State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2007); 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Richey, 162 Wn.2d 865 (2008)

Attempted felony murder is not a crime; 9-0.

State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654 (2008)

Defendant is tried for murder 1° with intentional murder 2° and felony murder 2°/assault as lessers, jury is silent as to murder 1°, answers interrogatories that jury is not unanimous as to intentional murder 2° but is unanimous guilty for felony murder/assault, which is reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002); on remand trial court permits amendment to manslaughter 1°; held: when a jury renders a guilty verdict as to a single crime, but one of the alternative means for committing that crime is later held invalid on appeal, even if for insufficient evidence, double jeopardy does not bar retrial on the remaining valid alternative mean, State v. Joy, 121 Wn.2d 333, 345-46 (1993); because intentional murder and felony murder are alternative means of committing murder 2° and jury was not unanimous as to intentional murder, and because manslaughter is a lesser of intentional murder, defendant may be retried for manslaughter, State v. Fuller, 185 Wn.2d 30 (2016), *see also: State v. Ramos,*124 Wn.App. 334 (2004); 8-1.

State v. Armstrong, 143 Wn.App. 333 (2008)

Felony murder/assault, RCW 9A.32.050 (2003), does not violate equal protection clause, State v. Wanrow, 91 Wn.2d 301, 311-12 (1978), State v. Gordon, 153 Wn.App. 516, 524-29 (2009), reversed, on other grounds, 172 Wn.2d 671 (2011), State v. Leonard, 183 Wn.App. 532 (2014) , remanded, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 505 (2015), State v. McDaniel, 185 Wn.app. 932 (2015); I.

State v. Scott, 145 Wn.App. 884 (2008)

Defendant is charged with murder 2º by alternative means of intentional or felony murder/assault, jury convicts, in special interrogatory jury checks box next to felony murder, leaves intentional murder box blank, conviction is reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), at retrial defendant is charged and convicted of manslaughter 1º, on appeal claims double jeopardy precludes conviction; held: failure to check box next to intentional murder is not an applied acquittal, State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), reversal was on legal grounds, State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541, 550-51 (1997), distinguishing State v. Hescock, 98 Wn.App. 600 (1999), thus defendant was properly charged and convicted of manslaughter; I.

State v. Wright, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009)

Defendants are charged with intentional murder and felony murder as alternatives, jury returns general verdict of guilt after receiving instructions only on felony murder which is later vacated, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), on remand trial court rules that renewed prosecution placed defendants in double jeopardy but permits retrial on lessers; held: because defendants' convictions were reversed because the conviction was on a non-existent invalid charge, they may be retried for the same offense, Montana v. Hall, 95 L.Ed.2d 354 (1987), State v. Gamble, 137 Wn.App. 892, 901 (2007), aff'd, 168 Wn.2d 161 (2010); because defendants were charged by alternative means and not separate offenses, failure to reach a verdict on one of the means is not an applied acquittal, State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654, 661 (2008), State v. Fuller, 185 Wn.2d 30 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Hunter, 152 Wn.App. 30, 43-48 (2009)

Defendant, accused of murder, testifies both that he didn't remember shooting victim and that he shot victim but it was an accident, trial court declines manslaughter lessers; held: testimony that shooting was an accident raised the inference that defendant was guilty only of manslaughter, thus court abused its discretion in declining lessers, distinguishing State v. Hernandez, 99 Wn.App. 312 (1999), see: State v. Guillot, 106 Wn.App. 355 (2001); II.

State v. Ramos, 152 Wn.App. 684, 693-96 (2009)

Unit of prosecution for felony murder/robbery where there was only one robbery but multiple homicides is each person killed, State v. Graham, 153 Wn.2d 400 ((2005), State v. Clark, 117 Wn.App. 281 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 614 (2005); III.

State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885, 899-901 (2010)

Burglary and felony murder/burglary may be punished separately even where the burglary is the predicate offense, per burglary antimerger statute, RCW 9A.52.050; II.

State v. Christman, 160 Wn.App. 741 (2011)

To prove controlled substances homicide, RCW 69.50.415(1), state must prove that defendant's delivery of a drug was a proximate cause of death, but not that it was the sole cause of death; a defendant's conduct is not a proximate cause if some other conduct is a sole or superseding cause, but it can be a proximate cause if another cause is "merely a concurrent cause," at 756 ¶ 11, State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390, 398-99 (2005); statute which uses language "resulting in" death is not vague; III.

State v. Peters, 163 Wn.App. 836 (2011)

Trial court instructs jury that in order to convict for manslaughter 1°, state must prove that defendant knew of and disregarded "a substantial risk that a wrongful act may occur;" held: the mens rea instruction defining reckless for manslaughter 1° must state that defendant disregarded a substantial risk of death, WPIC 10.03, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457 (2005); I.

State v. Kosewicz, 174 Wn.2d 683 (2012)

Defendants are charged with felony murder/kidnap and kidnapping 1°, Court of Appeals reverses kidnapping conviction because jury instruction contained a prong not charged in the kidnapping information, appellants argue that felony murder charge must be dismissed for the same reason even though jury instruction on felony murder only referred to the felony as kidnapping 1°, did not set out separate elements to include the uncharged prong, and no objection was made at trial; held: liberal construction of the information, to which no objection was made, was adequate to advise defendants of the elements of felony murder, state need not set out all of the elements of an underlying felony to convict of felony murder, State v. Whitfield, 129 Wash. 134, 139 (1924), just as state need not set forth aggravating circumstances in an information, State v. Siers, 174 Wn.2d 269 (2012), information does not need to specify the alternative means of committing the underlying felony, State v. Hartz, 65 Wn.App. 351, 354 (1992), State v. Brewczynski, 173 Wn.App. 541 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Besabe, 166 Wn.App. 872, 875-79 (2012)

Defendant shoots woman in the head, at hospital woman delivers a child who lives two days, dies, woman dies, defendant is convicted of two counts of murder; held: status of a murder victim is time of death not the time defendant commits homicidal act, thus child was a person, distinguishing State v. Dunn, 82 Wn.App. 122 (1996); I.

State v. Allen, 178 Wn.App. 893, 912-14 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 182 Wn.2d 364 (2015)

Rendering criminal assistance, RCW 9A.76.050, is not a lesser of accomplice to murder; II.

State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307 (2015)

Defendant enters home with loaded gun intending to rob, is convicted of murder 1º as alternative to felony murder 1º, claims evidence is insufficient to prove premeditation, trial court denies murder 2º lesser instruction; held: a person can form a premeditated design to kill for the purpose of better enabling him to rob the person, at 314-15, State v. Miller, 164 Wash. 441, 447 (1931), State v. Evans, 145 Wash. 4, 11 (1927), State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 713 (1995); a lesser included offense instruction need only satisfy the legal prong as to one of multiple charged offenses, State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 447-48 (1978), State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541, 545 (1997); while evidence was sufficient for jury to infer premeditation, it could have inferred that it was lacking, at 319-21; a defendant charged with both intentional murder and felony murder is entitled to a lesser instruction if it satisfies legal and factual test as to intentional murder, at 321-26, State v. Berlin, supra. at 551-52, State v. Warden, 133 Wn.2d 559, 561-64 (1997), disapproving, in part, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), State v. Bowerman, 115 Wn.2d 794 (1990); 5-4.

State v. Henderson, 182 Wn.2d 734 (2015)

Defendant is convicted of murder 1° with extreme indifference to human life, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), for shooting into a party as a gang retaliation, argues at trial that another was the shooter, trial court refuses manslaughter 1° and 2° lessers; held: manslaughter 1° meets the legal prong justifying a lesser, because manslaughter 1°'s recklessness element requires that defendant disregard a substantial risk of homicide rather than just a substantial risk of a wrongful act, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.2d 457, 467-68 (2005), a rational jury could find that defendant shot into a crowd but that he did so with a disregard for a substantial risk of homicide rather than an extreme indifference that caused a grave risk of death, thus manslaughter 1° meets factual test, Pers. Restraint of Sandoval, 189 Wn.2d 811 (2018); State v. Pettus, 89 Wn.App. 688 (1998) and State v. Pastrana, 94 Wn.App. 463 (1999) no longer control due to State v. Gamble, supra.; affirms State v. Henderson, 180 Wn.App. 138 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Boswell, 185 Wn.App. 321, 332-35 (2014)

Assault 3º is not a lesser of attempted murder, State v. Harris, 121 Wn.2d 317 (1993); to convict instruction for attempted murder 1º need not include premeditation as an element, State v. Reed, 150 Wn.App. 761, 772-75 (2009); II.

State v. Elkins, 188 Wn.App. 386, 408-11 (2015)

Felony murder/assault, RCW 9A.32.050(1)(b) (2003), is not vague; II.

State v. Lizarraga, 191 Wn.App. 530, 563-65 (2015)

Murder 2° is an alternative means crime, jury need not be unanimous where there is sufficient evidence to support each of the alternative means; III.

State v. Fisher, 185 Wn.2d 836, 848-52 (2016)

Statutory defense to felony murder, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c), puts burden of proof by a preponderance on defendant to establish she did not commit the homicide, was not armed, had no reason to believe that other participant was armed and no reasonable grounds to believe that no participant intended to engage in conduct likely to result in death, defense need not call witnesses to be entitled to an instruction if there is other evidence to support the defense, State v. Gabryschak, 83 Wn.App. 249, 253 (1996); here, defendant's statement to police which was offered by state was sufficient to entitle her to an instruction; because defense has burden defense may not point to the state's absence of evidence to satisfy that burden; 5-4.

State v. Hummel, 196 Wn.App. 329 (2016)

At defendant's first premeditated murder trial jailhouse informer testifies defendant admitted premeditation, conviction is reversed for open court violation, at second trial state does not call informer, evidence establishes motive and that defendant killed victim, defense motion to dismiss at end of state's case is denied, trial court does not give lesser murder ° instruction; held: circumstantial evidence was insufficient to establish premeditation, cf.: State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 656-68 (1995); evidence that defendant concealed victim's death and disposed of her body is insufficient to prove premeditation; because no lessers were submitted to jury remedy is dismissal with prejudice, Pers. Restraint of Heidari, 174 Wn.2d 288 (2012); I.

Pers. Restraint of Caldellis, 187 Wn.2d 127, 132-40 (2016)

In murder by extreme indifference case, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b) (1990), court need not instruct jury that defendant "knew of and disregarded the grave risk of death," distinguishing WPIC 26.06, at 373 (3d ed., 2008); 9-0.

State v. Lambert, 199 Wn.App. 51, 72-77 (2017)

Defendant is invited into home to visit victim, kills victim, goes to another home to steal gun, enters house then comes out, sees victim in driveway and demands keys to garage, victim refuses, defendant kills him in driveway, claims insufficient evidence to support felony murder/burglary 1° as he did not remain unlawfully; held: a jury could reasonably infer that defendant's license to remain was revoked when defendant attacked first victim in home, State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988); while, to prove felony murder, there must be evidence that the murder occurred in the course of or in furtherance of the burglary, RCW 10.95.020(11) (2003), there is insufficient evidence here that the second murder occurred in immediate flight from the burglary, State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 506-20 (2007), distinguishing State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 199-203 (2015); I.

State v. Harris, 199 Wn.App. 137 (2017)

Defendant shoots victim five times, ten weeks later victim dies, conflicting testimony is offered as to whether or not cause of death was homicide; held: while actual cause in fact ("but for") is the same in criminal and civil cases, legal causation is narrower than in tort cases, see: State v. Bauer, 180 Wn.2d 929 (2014); here, defendant committed an intentional act capable of causing harm which establishes legal causation, as opposed to Bauer, id., where defendant committed a negligent act; I.

State v. Sandoval, 189 Wn.2d 811 (2018)

Murder defendant, charged as an absent accomplice to a homicide where the shooter shot into a car killing an occupant, requests manslaughter lesser which is denied; held: sufficient evidence supported the reckless element of manslaughter 1°, thus court erred in refusing lesser, State v. Henderson, 182 Wn.2d 734 (2015); conspiracy to commit murder by extreme indifference, RCW 9A.32.030(l)(b), is a cognizable crime; 5-4.

State v. Schierman, 192 Wn.2d 577 ¶¶ 168-190 (2018)

In capital murder case defense presents evidence that defendant was in an alcoholic blackout, court gives voluntary intoxication instruction but declines to instruct on manslaughter as lesser; held: evidence of a lack of premeditation and intent due to voluntary intoxication or diminished capacity in a murder case establishes a factual basis to instruct the jury on the lesser offense of manslaughter, State v. Colwash, 88 Wn.2d 468 (1977), State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541, 549 (1997), harmless here.

State v. Gregory, 192 Wn.2d 1 427 P.3d 621 (2018)

Washington death penalty statute is unconstitutional; 9-0.

State v. Henderson, 192 Wn.2d 508 (2018)

In murder case where defense claims self defense and accident trial court instructs on lawful use of force but declines to instruct on excusable homicide; held: excusable homicide/accident, RCW 9A.16.030 (1979), is not an affirmative defense, defendant can argue accident by asserting that state has not proved mens rea element, thus an instruction of excusable homicide is not required, see: State v. Burt, 94 Wn.2d 108, 110-11 (1980), State v. Mercer, 34 Wn.App. 654 (1983); court doubts "usefulness" of WPIC 15.01 (2016); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Knight,4 Wn.App.2d 248 (2018)

Attempted manslaughter 1° is not a crime as one cannot attempt a non-intent crime, see: State v. Dunbar, 117 Wn.2d 587 (1991); even though defendant entered a negotiated plea the judgment is invalid on its face; II.

State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12 (2018)

Evidence was sufficient to prove felony murder/robbery where state proves that defendant was broke, at murder scene items were stolen from victim-prostitute, property was strewn around her stabbed body, defendant attempted to pawn her property and a witness testified that he could target prostitutes who were unlikely to call police, State v. Stearns, 61 Wn.App. 224 (1991), evidence was sufficient to prove an "intimate connection" between the murder and the robbery, at 18-23, State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 607-08 (1997), cf.: State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 506-20 (2007), State v. Jennings, 14 Wn.App.2d 779 (2020), affirmed, on other grounds, State v. Jennings, ___ Wn.2d ___, 502 P.3d 1255 (2022); jury instruction stating "The taking constitutes robbery, even if death precedes the taking, whenever the taking and a homicide are part of the same transaction," WPIC 37.50 (2016), is confusing, as "'[t]he State must present evidence that the death was a probable consequence of the felony and must specifically prove that the felony began before the killing," State v. Irby, 187 Wn.app. 183 (2015), but not manifest constitutional error here, at 23-26; I.

State v. Fluker, 5 Wn.App.2d 374 (2018)

In murder case with lawful use of force defense defendant testifies he shot victim (8 times) intending to stop him, not to kill him, trial court instructs on lesser of manslaughter 1°, declines to instruct on manslaughter 2°; held: while evidence supports claim that defendant killed victim recklessly, no evidence exists to support a claim that defendant was unaware of the risk and thus acted negligently, thus court properly declined to instruct on manslaughter 2°; I.

State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of aggravated murder with arson 1° as aggravator and substantive crime of arson 1°; held: while an aggravating factor involves multiple prosecutions and thus is affected by the double jeopardy clause, State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018), enhancing murder to aggravated murder involves multiple punishments and thus is not a violation of double jeopardy, see: State v. Heng, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 83280-8-I (2022); 6-3.

State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019)

Four characteristics or factors that are particularly relevant to establish premeditation: motive, procurement of a weapon, stealth, and the method of killing. State v. Hummel, 196 Wn.App. 329, 355 (2016); I.

State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

In a murder case it is not error for the jury to be told that it is not a death penalty case, overruling State v. Townsend, 142 Wn.2d 838, 846-49 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Canela, 199 Wn.2d 321 (2022)

Attempted murder 1° information alleges that defendant did an act that was a substantial step toward the commission of murder 1° and that the act was done with intent to commit murder 1°, jury also instructed on the definition of murder 1° including premeditation, defense argues for the first time on appeal that premeditation is an essential element that must be included in the charging document; held: premeditation is not an essential element that must be included in the charging document for attempted first degree murder, State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021), overruling, in part, State v. Murry, 13 Wn.App.2d 542 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022)

In felony murder/kidnap case victim is kidnapped, beaten and shot, left in a park after which accomplice returns in ten minutes and kills him, defense maintains kidnapping was complete before the murder; held: kidnapping is a continuing course of conduct crime, a killing that occurs before the victim reaches safety is "in the course of" the kidnapping, State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700 (1990), State v. Gilmer, 96 Wn.App. 875 (1999), State v. Dudrey, 30 Wn.App. 447 (1981); here, a reasonable juror could find that victim was not in a place of safety; I.

State v. Heng, 22 Wn.App.2d 717 (2022)

Defendant is charged with intentional murder and felony murder/arson, jury returns general verdicts of guilty of murder and arson, defense argues that double jeopardy precludes punishment for both crimes; held: the rule of lenity requires that the court must assume defendant was convicted of felony murder, State v. Deryke, 110 Wn.App. 815, 824 (2002), aff'd, on different grounds, 149 Wn.2d 906 (2003), but here the arson had an effect independent of the murder as the owners of the building were victims in addition to the deceased, so the two offenses do not merge, State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784 (2019), distinguishing State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019); I.

In murder by extreme indifference, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b) (1990), evidence shows defendant shooting towards a bar entrance where victims were gathered, court refuses lesser instruction on manslaughter 1°, RCW 9A.32.060(1)(a) (2011); held: no reasonable jury would rationally find that defendant was acting recklessly as required for manslaughter rather than with extreme indifference; in order for defendant to be entitled to an instruction on a lesser included offense there must be some evidence which affirmatively establishes defendant's theory of the crime, State v. Coryell, 197 Wn.2d 397 (2021), State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443 (1978); II.

NECESSITY DEFENSE

State v. Diana, 24 Wn.App. 908 (1979)

Necessity is available as a defense when physical forces of nature or the pressure of circumstances cause defendant to take unlawful action to avoid a harm which social policy deems greater than the harm resulting from violation of law, State v. Kurtz, 178 Wn.2d 466 (2013), see also: State v. Pittman, 88 Wn.App. 188 (1997); must be proved by preponderance of evidence.

State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982)

Defendant, charged with escape, is not entitled to necessity defense instructions where defendant did not make a bona fide effort to return to custody or surrender as soon as he reached a position of safety; II.

State v. Turner, 42 Wn.App. 242 (1985)

In order to instruct on the necessity defense, the evidence must show that the pressure came from the physical forces of nature rather than from other human beings, W. LaFave & A. Scott, Criminal Law ' 50, at 381 (1972); III.

Necessity defense and international law have no bearing in prosecution of nuclear war protesters blocking a train carrying nuclear warheads, Pennsylvania v. Berrigan, 501 A.2d 226 (1987), but see: State, ex rel. Haskell, v. Spokane County District Court, 198 Wn.2d 1 (2021); 7-2.

State v. Gallegos, 73 Wn.App. 644, 650-1 (1994)

In felony flight case, defendant's need to flee from police to help a friend who was being harassed does not support a necessity defense instruction, as the "pressure" to take the unlawful act must come from physical forces of nature, not from other human beings, State v. Diana, 24 Wn.App. 908, 913-4 (1979), State v. Turner, 42 Wn.App. 242, 247 (1985), cf.: State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982); I.

State v. Cole, 74 Wn.App. 571 (1994)

In marijuana case, to establish necessity, defendant must prove by a preponderance that (1) defendant reasonably believed his use of marijuana was necessary to minimize the effects of a specific disease, (2) the benefits derived from its use are greater than the harm sought to be prevented by the controlled substances law, and (3) no drug is as effective in minimizing the effects of the disease, State v. Diana, 24 Wn.App. 908, 916 (1979), State v. Kurtz, 178 Wn.2d 466 (2013), see also: State v. Pittman, 88 Wn.App. 188 (1997), State v. Ruelas, 7 Wn.App.2d 887 (2019); where defense presents some admissible evidence to support each of the elements of necessity defense, trial court may not weigh the evidence and preclude it, as such analysis usurps the jury's function; II.

State v. Jeffrey, 77 Wn.App. 222 (1995)

Necessity is a defense to felon in possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.040(1), where defendant demonstrates (1) he reasonably believed he was under unlawful and present threat of death or serious injury, (2) he did not recklessly place himself in a situation where he would be forced to engage in criminal conduct, (3) he had no reasonable alternative, and (4) there was a direct causal relationship between criminal action and avoidance of the threatened harm; here, defendant had possession of the gun before the perceived threat, no evidence that defendant was threatened with death or injury, phone call to police was, by itself, an adequate remedy due to an earlier quick police response, thus instruction properly refused by trial court, accord: State v. Stockton, 91 Wn.App. 35, 41-43 (1998), State v. Parker, 127 Wn.App. 352 (2005); III.

State v. Bailey, 77 Wn.App. 732 (1995)

Necessity defense not available for violation of game animal laws for killing of wildlife, even in mercy killing context, but see: State v. Vander Houwen, 163 Wn.2d 25 (2008); III.

State v. Pittman, 87 Wn.App. 188, 193-7 (1997)

In necessity defense to marijuana delivery, defense must prove, and jury must be instructed, that "no legal alternative is available which is as effective as marijuana" in minimizing effects of the disease in question, State v. Diana, 24 Wn.App. 908 (1979), State v. Kurtz, 178 Wn.2d 466 (2013), State v. Ruelas, 7 Wn.App.2d 887 (2019); I.

State v. Parker, 127 Wn.App. 352 (2005)

In felon in possession of firearm case, defendant testifies that he had been shot 9 months previously, shooter was not apprehended, carried gun for self defense, trial court refuses necessity instruction; held: absent evidence of present threat of death or serious bodily injury, State v. Stockton, 91 Wn.App. 35, 38 (1998), and that defendant tried reasonable legal alternative to carrying a gun, defendant is not entitled to necessity instruction, see: State v. Gallegos, 73 Wn.App. 644, 650 (1994), State v. Jeffrey, 77 Wn.App. 222, 224-25 (1995); II.

State v. White, 137 Wn.App. 227 (2007)

Affirmative defense of "uncontrollable circumstances," RCW 9A.76.170(2), to bail jumping displaces the need to give a general necessity defense instruction; defendant's failing to report to jail because he feared he would have back pain does not support necessity instructions; III.

State v. Vander Houwen, 163 Wn.2d 25 (2008)

Where defense to killing wildlife that is damaging defendant's property may be necessity, a specialized necessity instruction rather than WPIC 18.02 (2005) is required, State v. Burk, 114 Wash. 370, 376 (1921), reversing State v. Vander Houwen, 128 Wn.App. 806 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Kurtz, 178 Wn.2d 466 (2013)

Common law medical necessity defense, State v. Diana, 24 Wn.App. 908, 916 (1979), remains available and has not been pre-empted by the medical marijuana act, ch. 69.51A RCW, overruling State v. Butler, 126 Wn.App. 741 (2005), overruling, in part, State v. Williams, 93 Wn.App. 340 (1998); 5-4.

State v. Ruelas, 7 Wn.App.2d 887 (2019)

Common law marijuana necessity defense, State v. Kurtz, 178 Wn.2d 466 (2013), requires a medical witness, State v. Pittman, 87 Wn.App. 188, 193-7 (1997); III.

State v. Ward, 8 Wn.App.2d 365 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of burglary for breaking into a facility and turning off a pipe stopping the flow of tar sands oil, trial court denies necessity defense; held: trial court erred in precluding defendant from offering evidence that his actions were reasonably calculated to be effective in averting imminent harm of climate change, were reasonable; for purposes of necessity defense, it is question for jury in prosecution of defendant for burglary after defendant broke into pipeline facility and turned off a valve, which stopped the flow of Canadian tar sands oil to refineries, State, ex rel. Haskell, v. Spokane County District Court, 198 Wn.2d 1 (2021); I.

State, ex rel. Haskell, v. Spokane County District Court, 198 Wn.2d 1 (2021)

Defendant blocks train to protest climate change, having protested, sought legislation to mitigate risks of coal and oil trains, is convicted of trespass and obstruction of a train after trial court allows necessity defense, state seeks writ of review; held: necessity defense is available where defense proffers enough evidence that the harm he sought to avoid is "far greater" than the harm caused by the acts of the defendant, jury can determine if there were reasonable effective alternatives in avoiding the purported harm, State v. Ward, 8 Wn.App.2d 365 (2019), but see: State v. Aver, 109 Wn.2d 303 (1987); reverses State, ex rel. Haskell, v. Spokane County Dist. Court, 13 Wn.App.2d 573 (2020); 7-2.

NEW TRIAL

State v. Hayden, 28 Wn.App. 935 (1981)

State's witness breaking defendant's alibi recants after trial, trial court determines it would not have changed result; held: no abuse of discretion, State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); I.

State v. Castro, 30 Wn.App. 586 (1981)

Cumulative new evidence which is unlikely to change the result of a trial is not grounds for a new trial, cf.: State v. Slanaker, 58 Wn.App. 161 (1990), Pers. Restraint of Fero, 190 Wn.2d 1 (2018); I,.

State v. Cummings, 31 Wn.App. 427 (1982)

Following conviction, jurors submitted conflicting affidavits as to whether or not jurors knew that defendant had a criminal record; outlines law on jury misconduct; held: where jury considered matters not admitted into evidence, a new trial should be granted where there is reasonable ground to believe defendant may have been prejudiced; where jury considered defendant's record not in evidence, doubt should be resolved in favor of defendant; remanded for hearing to determine whether in fact jury misconduct occurred; III.

State v. Keller, 32 Wn.App. 135 (1982)

Judgment of dismissal may not be vacated simply because judge decides to reconsider; CR 60(b) does not authorize vacation of judgments except for reasons extraneous to the action of the court or for matters affecting the regularity of the proceedings; I.

State v. Hentz, 32 Wn.App. 193 (1982)

State's failure to volunteer information about an impeachment witness favorable to defense is not error where defendant failed to move for a new trial, CrR 7.6(a)(2); II.

State v. Castro, 32 Wn.App. 559 (1982)

Co-defendant, arrested after defendant is convicted of murder, confesses to crime and absolves defendant, new trial motion denied; held: statement of co-defendant would not have been admissible as a statement against penal interest, as co-defendant had subsequently repudiated his confession; trial court is vested with broad discretion in ruling on motion for new trial based upon newly discovered evidence; I.

State v. Goforth, 33 Wn.App. 405 (1982)

Trial court may weigh credibility of newly-discovered evidence to determine whether the evidence will probably change the result if a new trial is granted, cf.: State v. West, 139 Wn.2d 37 (1999); accord: State v. Barry, 25 Wn.App. 751 (1980), State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352 (1995), see: State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462, 469-73 (1996); I.

State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889 (1984)

After robbery conviction, defendant moves for new trial alleging he obtained a police report which asserted that another person had been arrested near the scene with a gun; held: new evidence would not probably have changed the result, as victim knew defendant, State v. Williams, 96 Wn.2d 215 (1981); see: State v. Harris, 106 Wn.2d 784 (1986); 9-0.

State v. York, 41 Wn.App. 538 (1985)

Where defendant is convicted solely on testimony of a witness who later recants, new trial is mandatory; see also: State v. Landon, 69 Wn.App. 83 (1993), but see: State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352 (1995), State v. D.T.M., 78 Wn.App. 216 (1995), State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462 (1996), cf.: State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); no abuse of discretion by allowing motion for new trial beyond CrR 7.6(b) time limits if motion is based upon evidence not discovered until after the time limit expired; II.

State v. Evans, 45 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

Following conviction, arson defendant hires a new expert who evaluates the physical evidence and submits an affidavit stating that the fire was caused by an electrical system defect and not arson; trial court grants new trial, CrR 7.6(a)(3) and (8), state appeals; held: trial court erred in determining that the new evidence would probably change the result of the trial, State v. Williams, 96 Wn.2d 215, 223 (1981), cf.: State v. Hawkins, 181 Wn.2d 170 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Fero, 190 Wn.2d 1 (2018), and that there were no objectively assessable reasons or facts to establish that defendant did not get a fair trial, State v. Harper, 64 Wn.App. 283 (1992); 2-1, II.

State v. Standifer, 48 Wn.App. 121 (1987)

A juror's letter to the judge stating that she changed her mind after conviction is not grounds for a new trial; I.

State v. Jackman, 113 Wn.2d 772 (1989)

Defense counsel mailed subpoena to defense witness, obtained material witness warrant but did not request continuance; following conviction, witness is found; held: service by mail is not authorized by Criminal Rules [cf.: CrRLJ 4.8(c)], failure to request continuance to obtain witness's appearance establishes lack of due diligence,; new trial should be granted only when new evidence (1) will probably change the result of the trial, (2) was discovered since trial, (3) could not have been discovered before trial by the exercise of due diligence, (4) is material, and (5) is not merely cumulative or impeaching, State v. Williams, 96 Wn.2d 215, 223 (1981), State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990), but see: State v. Slanaker, 58 Wn.App. 161 (1990); 5-4.

State v. Slanaker, 58 Wn.App. 161 (1990)

After conviction, defense locates two alibi witnesses, trial court grants new trial, finding that defense exercised due diligence, state appeals; held: where a witness probably cannot be found prior to trial, it is not necessary for defense to seek a continuance to preserve new trial motion, distinguishing State v. Jackman, 113 Wn.2d 772 (1989); a previously known witness's testimony is "newly discovered" when the witness cannot be located before trial with due diligence; an order granting a new trial should be upheld where additional apparently impartial alibi witnesses are located, State v. Dinas, 129 Wash. 75, 83 (1924), distinguishing State v. Fellers, 37 Wn.App. 613, 617 (1984), State v. Edwards, 23 Wn.App. 893, 898 (1979); I.

State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865 (1991)

General objection to hearsay testimony waives error and is not grounds for a new trial, State v. Bauers, 23 Wn.2d 462, 466-7 (1945), overruled on other grounds, Larson v. Seattle, 25 Wn.2d 291 (1946); but see: In re Lee, 95 Wn.2d 357, 363 (1980), cf.: State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 807 n.2 (1993).

State v. Hutcheson, 62 Wn.App. 282 (1991)

Severed co-defendant claims Fifth Amendment privilege at defendant's trial, later testifies at her own trial exculpating defendant; held: while co-defendant's testimony was material and newly discovered, trial judge's weighing of her credibility and determining that it would not have changed result due to her inconsistencies, plus co-defendant's jury having necessarily disbelieved her since it convicted, supports trial court's ruling denying motion for new trial, State v. Williams, 96 Wn.2d 215 (1981), State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352 (1995), see: State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462, 469-73 (1996); when state's evidence is strong, should not grant new trial based on uncorroborated testimony of co-defendant or accomplice, State v. Peele, 67 Wn.2d 724 (1966); new trial should not be granted when the only purpose of new evidence is to impeach, State v. Sellers, 39 Wn.App. 799, 807 (1985), State v. Pierce, 155 Wn.App. 701, 712 (2010), overruled, on other grounds, , State v. Olsen, 10 Wn.App.2d 731 (2019), but see: *State v. State v. Brand, 120 Wn.2d 365 (1992)

Trial court may not consider a CrR 7.8(b) motion if defendant has previously brought a collateral attack on similar grounds, RCW 10.73.140; in the context of newly discovered evidence, a collateral attack is based upon similar grounds unless the current evidence is significantly different in either quantum or quality from the evidence presented in a previous collateral attack; affirms, in part, State v. Brand, 65 Wn.App. 166 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Landon, 69 Wn.App. 83 (1993)

Where a defendant is convicted solely on testimony that is later recanted in a written statement, then remand for a hearing in trial court to see if victim will recant in open court is proper remedy, State v. D.T.M., 78 Wn.App. 216 (1995), State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462, 469-73 (1996), cf.: State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); II.

State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352 (1995)

Where defendant is convicted solely on testimony of witness who later recants, trial court may weigh credibility of recanting witness in determining whether or not to grant new trial, State v. Rolax, 84 Wn.2d 836 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Wright v. Morris, 85 Wn.2d 899 (1975), State v. Davis, 25 Wn.App. 134 (1980), State v. Macon, 128 Wn.2d 784 (1996), *State v. (Division II), State v. Landon, 69 Wn.App. 83 (1993) (Division II), State v. D.T.M., 78 Wn.App. 216 (1995)(Division III), State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462, 469-73 (1996); I.

State v. Macon, 128 Wn.2d 784 (1996)

When defendant is convicted upon testimony of a witness who later recants, trial court must first determine whether recantation is reliable before considering motion for new trial, independent corroborating evidence to support recanting witness' original testimony is not a controlling factor, as recantations are inherently suspect; when defendant's conviction is based solely upon the testimony of a recanting witness, trial court does not abuse discretion if it determines recantation is unreliable and denies motion for new trial, but if trial court determines recantation is reliable, it must grant new trial, State v. Rolax, 84 Wn.2d 836, 838 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Wright v. Morris, 85 Wn.2d 899 (1975), State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352 (1995), State v. Ieng, 87 Wn.App. 873 (1997), *State v. State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462, 469-73 (1996), rev'd, on other grounds, 131 Wn.2d 258 (1997)

After trial, witness recants and pleads guilty to perjury; held: where defendant is convicted solely on basis of a recanting witness, new trial is mandatory, State v. Rolax, 84 Wn.2d 836, 838 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Wright v. Morris, 85 Wn.2d 899 (1975), but see: State v. West, 139 Wn.2d 37 (1999), but where there is corroborating evidence, decision to grant a new trial is discretionary, State v. Rhinehart, 70 Wn.App. 649 (1967); test for trial court at reference hearing is whether recantation evidence would probably cause the trier of fact at a new trial to reach a different outcome, State v. D.T.M., 78 Wn.App. 216 (1995), State v. Scott, 150 Wn.App. 281 (2009), cf.: State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); trial court must consider recantation in context of the other evidence of the crime and in light of the circumstances surrounding the recantation, State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352, 361 (1995); trial court should not subjectively determine credibility of recanting witness, rather should decide whether recantation would be persuasive to a reasonable juror in light of all of the evidence, cf.: State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352 (1995), State v. York, 41 Wn.App. 538, 543-5 (1985), but see: State v. Macon, 128 Wn.2d 784 (1996), State v. Ieng, 87 Wn.App. 873 (1997); II.

Trial court abuses discretion in denying new trial for newly discovered evidence where the evidence "devastates a witness's uncorroborated testimony establishing an element of the offense," as the new evidence is not merely impeaching but critical, State v. Roche, 114 Wn.App. 424 (2002), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Delmarter, 124 Wn.App. 154 (2004), distinguishing State v. Hutcheson, 62 Wn.App. 282, 300 (1991), State v. Sellers, 39 Wn.App. 799, 807 (1985); I.

State v. Ieng, 87 Wn.App. 873 (1997)

Where witness recants, trial court is to make its own determination of the credibility of the witness, whether or not there is corroborating evidence and without regard to whether a jury might find the witness credible, State v. Eder, 78 Wn.App. 352 (1995), State v. West, 139 Wn.2d 37 (1999), cf.: State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); Division I declines to follow Division II, State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462, 469-70 (1996), rev'd, on other grounds, 131 Wn.2d 258 (1997).

State v. Marks, 90 Wn.App. 980 (1998)

After speaking with jurors after verdict, trial court grants new trial based upon its perception that jurors were confused about the application of a missing witness instruction to both a defense and state's witness; held: the instruction was correct, how the jury interpreted the instruction can only be discovered by probing into the jurors' mental processes, which is improper as mental processes of jurors inhere in the verdict, Ayers v. Johnson & Johnson Baby Prods. Co., 117 Wn.2d 747, 768-9 (1991); 2-1, III.

State v. Corn, 95 Wn.App. 41, 51-56 (1999)

Trial court gives an erroneous self-defense instruction, state discovers error during deliberations, court substitutes erroneous instruction with correct instruction, defense counsel states that he may move for a mistrial upon consultation with his client, jury convicts, trial court grants new trial; held: original instruction created error of constitutional magnitude, court's conclusion that the erroneous instruction may have affected the verdict in spite of the change and grant of new trial was not an abuse of discretion; III.

State v. West, 139 Wn.2d 37 (1999)

Defendant does not testify at trial, counsel fails to move to exclude prior murder conviction, ER 609, Court of Appeals remands, trial court at reference hearing finds defendant's testimony was not credible, would not have been believed by a jury, thus there was not a reasonable probability that verdict would have been different; held: in deciding whether or not to grant a new trial based upon new evidence not offered at trial due to ineffective assistance, where trial court finds new evidence is not credible and thus would not have effected outcome of trial, no abuse of discretion, see: State v. Maurice, 79 Wn.App. 544 (1995), Dorsey v. King County, 51 Wn.App. 664 (1988), State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 80 (1996); 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Crabtree, 141 Wn.2d 577, 588-89 (2000)

Witness's recantation following a non-Alford guilty plea does not justify withdrawal of plea and new trial, State v. Macon, 128 Wn.2d 784, 803 (1996), State v. Arnold, 81 Wn.App. 379, 386-87 (1996), see also: State v. Ice, 138 Wn.App. 744 (2007); 7-2.

State v. Roche, 114 Wn.App. 424, 436-38 (2002)

After drug trial, defense discovers that chemist at crime lab who tested drugs in these cases had been using heroin stolen from test samples and lied to police about it, new trial denied; held: chemist's malfeasance is more than merely impeaching, it is critical with respect to his credibility, validity of testing and chain of custody, thus denial of new trial was abuse of discretion, State v. Savaria, 82 Wn.App. 832, 837-39 (1996), overruled, in part, on other grounds, State v. C.G., 150 Wn.2d 611 (2003), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Brennan, 117 Wn.App. 797

Pers. Restraint of Brennan, 117 Wn.App. 797 (2003)

Two years after petitioner pleaded guilty to possession of methamphetamine, state chemist who tested his drugs was exposed as a drug user and convicted of evidence tampering, defendant seeks to withdraw plea claiming he had no reason to contest lab reports; held: because defendant pled guilty, drugs defendant possessed were field tested positive, defendant confessed and defendant failed to provide temporal connection between malfeasance of chemist and the testing of defendant's drugs, PRP is denied, Pers. Restraint of Delmarter, 124 Wn.App. 154 (2004), distinguishing State v. Roche, 114 Wn.App. 424 (2002); I.

State v. Boling, 131 Wn.App. 329 (2006)

In manslaughter case, juror does independent internet research on cause of death, trial court grants new trial; held: trial court's inability to rule out juror's misconduct impacting verdict establishes a proper exercise of discretion in granting new trial, see: State v. Arndt, 5 Wn.App.2d 341 (2018); III.

State v. Larson, 160 Wn.App. 577, 586-90 (2011)

Co-defendant pleads guilty, implicating defendant in plea statement, is not called to testify, after conviction co-defendant provides a statement exculpating defendant, defense moves for a new trial alleging new evidence; held: co-defendant was an available witness, as he was in jail during defendant's trial, failure to call him was not an absence of diligence as co-defendant's attorney prohibited defense counsel from speaking with him, co-defendant's inculpatory statements were not used at trial, thus trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying new trial; 2-1, III.

State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600, 608-13 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012)

Before trial, co-defendant inculpates defendant, pleads guilty, apparently recants, counsel advises counsel for defendant that co-defendant will not testify based on Fifth Amendment, co-defendant is not called, after conviction co-defendant recants by affidavit, trial court denies new trial; held: test for newly discovered evidence: (1) will evidence probably change result, (2) was it discovered since the trial, (3) could it have been discovered by due diligence, (4) is it material, (5) is it merely cumulative or impeachment?, State v. Williams, 96 Wn.2d 215, 223 (1981), Pers. Restraint of Fero, 190 Wn.2d 1 (2018); here, trial court found that co-defendant could easily have been impeached, thus outcome of new trial would not be different, State v. Statler, 160 Wn.App. 622 (2011), defense was aware of co-defendant's testimony before trial but chose not to call him, trial court would likely not have sustained privilege because he was no longer in jeopardy, thus trial court did not abuse discretion; counsel's decision not to call co-defendant was likely tactical and would not have changed result, thus not ineffective assistance; 2-1, III.

Pers. Restraint of Copland, 176 Wn.App. 432, 450-51 (2003)

"A new expert opinion, based on facts available to the trial experts, does not constitute newly discovered evidence that could not, with due diligence, have been discovered before trial.

State v. Harper, 64 Wn.App. 283, 293 (1992)," at 451 ¶ 16, State v. Davis, 25 Wn.App. 134, 138 (1980), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Fero, 190 Wn.2d 1 (2018); III.

Pers. Restraint of Faircloth*,* 177 Wn.App. 161 (2013)

Petitioner's claim of recovered memory of self defense 17 years after conviction would not change result thus does not meet requirement for newly discovered evidence; II.

State v. Hawkins*,* 181 Wn.2d 170, 179-82 (2014)

Defense witness testifies at trial, after conviction defense submits declaration from the witness with exculpatory evidence, trial court finds that there was no reason for defense to have known when the witness testified that the exculpatory evidence existed nor was the witness aware that it was exculpatory, grants new trial, state appeals; held: trial court granting of a new trial is entitled to a "heightened level of deference," much stronger showing of an abuse of discretion will ordinarily be required to set aside an order granting a new trial than one denying a new trial, State v. Brent, 30 Wn.2d 286, 290 (1948), see: State v. Lopez, 190 Wn.2d 104, 116-18 (2018); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Fero*,* 190 Wn.2d 1 (2018)

Newly discovered medical evidence regarding shaken baby syndrome would not probably change the outcome, Matter of Reyes, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 505 P.3d 1234 (2022), State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 600, 609 (2011), State v. Williams, 96 Wn.2d 215, 223 (1981); reverses Pers. Restraint of Fero, 192 Wn.App. 138 (2016); 4-3-2 (four justices join lead opinion, three justices dissent, two justices dissent on a different issue, not addressing the lead).

Matter of Reyes*,* 21 Wn.App.2d 353 (2022)

In shaken baby syndrome/abusive head trauma case medical evidence raising questions about the diagnosis was available to the defense, could have been discovered with reasonable diligence before trial, thus PRP was untimely, Pers. Restraint of Fero, 190 Wn.2d 1 (2018); II.

PERJURY

State v. Olson, 92 Wn.2d 134 (1979)

Literal truth controls even if response is misleading, cf.: State v. Miller, 179 Wn.App. 91, 105-06 (2014); reverses State v. Olson, 19 Wn.App. 885 (1978); 5-4.

Nessman v. Sumpter, 27 Wn.App. 18 (1980)

Court must instruct that to convict there must be direct testimony plus corroborating circumstances, State v. Rutledge, 37 Wash. 523, 528, (1905); II .

State v. White, 31 Wn.App. 655 (1982)

In order to prove perjury, state must present (1) the testimony of at least one credible witness which is positive and directly contradictory of the defendant's oath and (2) another such direct witness or independent evidence of corroborating circumstances of such a character as clearly could turn the scale and overcome the oath of the defendant and the legal presumption of innocence; where there is no testimony presented that directly and positively contradicts the defendant's testimony, the information must be dismissed; I, 2-1.

State v. Dial, 44 Wn.App. 11 (1986)

Even though judge and prosecutor disbelieved defendant's testimony that became the subject of perjury prosecution, it still "could have affected the course or outcome of the proceeding," RCW 9A.72.010(1); credibility of witnesses in perjury case is for jury to determine; I.

State v. Hovrud, 60 Wn.App. 573 (1991)

Defendant lies in statement given under oath required by a fire insurance policy; held: false swearing, RCW 9A.72.040, does not apply as the statement under oath was not required by "statute or regulatory provision," RCW 9A.72.010(3); 2-1, II.

State v. Stump, 73 Wn.App. 625 (1994)

Defendant is asked under oath, "have you ever been involved in drugs?," answers no, soon thereafter pleads guilty to delivery of drugs, is convicted later of perjury; held: question was unclear whether it was intended to cover use or any contact with drugs; in order to sustain a perjury conviction, questions and answers must demonstrate both that the defendant was fully aware of the actual meaning and that defendant knew his answers were not the truth, and must be interpreted in the context of what immediately preceded and succeeded them, see: State v. Olson, 92 Wn.2d 134, 136 (1979), State v. Singh, 167 Wn.App. 971 (2012); here, questions before dealt with usage or addiction; III.

State v. Jacobson, 74 Wn.App. 715, 724-6 (1994)

An affidavit submitted for litigation will support a perjury 1° conviction, RCW 9A.72.020(1), as an "official proceeding" does not require live testimony in open court; false swearing, RCW 9A.72.040(1) is not a lesser of perjury 1° where the false statement was made in an official proceeding, since no rational trier of fact could conclude the evidence supported an inference that the lesser but not the greater offense was committed, State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 447-8 (1978), State v. Rodriguez, 48 Wn.App. 815, 818-9 (1987); I.

State v. Abrams, 163 Wn.2d 277 (2008)

That portion of perjury statute, RCW 9A.72.010(1), which declares that the materiality of a false statement must be determined by the judge is unconstitutional, United States v. Gaudin, 132 L.Ed.2d 444 (1995), Johnson v. United States, 137 L.Ed.2d 718 (1997), materiality is a jury question; 9-0.

State v. Singh, 167 Wn.App. 971 (2012)

While common law requires heightened proof for a perjury conviction and testimony of one witness or circumstantial evidence alone is insufficient, State v. Wallis, 50 Wn.2d 350, 353 (1957), a single witness' testimony plus a tape recording of the defendant's statement corroborating that she knew she was lying is sufficient to convict; III.

State v. Arquette, 178 Wn.App. 273 (2013)

To prove perjury, state must present testimony of at least one witness which is positive and directly contradictory of the defendant's oath and there must be corroborating evidence, State v. Olson, 92 Wn.2d 134, 136 (1979), that is inconsistent with defendant's innocence, and may not merely support the direct witness' testimony; II.

PERSISTENT OFFENDER/HABITUAL CRIMINAL

State v. Murdock, 91 Wn.2d 336 (1979)

Institutional packets are admissible only to prove identity, not the conviction, see: State v. Clark, 18 Wn.App. 831 (1977).

State v. Holsworth, 93 Wn.2d 148 (1980)

State has burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that pre-Boykin pleas were valid, cf.: Parke v. Raley, 121 L.Ed.2d 391 (1992), but see: Custis v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 517 (1994), State v. Manussier, 129 Wn.2d 652 (1996), State v. Thorne, 129 Wn.2d 736 (1996), Daniels v. United States, 149 L.Ed.2d 590 (2000), see: Lackawanna County Dist. Attorney v. Coss, 149 L.Ed.2d 608 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Fain, 94 Wn.2d 387 (1980)

Life sentence following habitual criminal determination where defendant's prior crimes amounted to nonviolent thefts, totaling $470 is cruel punishment, per CONST. Art. I, § 9, see: State v. Whitfield, 132 Wn.App.878, 900-02 (2006), cf.: State v. Witherspoon, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014), State v. Hart, 188 Wn.App. 453, 460-65 (2015), State v. Moen, 4 Wn.App.2d 589 (2018), State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022); 5-4.

Rummel v. Estelle, 63 L.Ed.2d 382 (1980)

Not cruel and unusual to sentence defendant to life for three property-related felonies, Ewing v. California,155 L.Ed.2d 108 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Ross, 30 Wn.App. 324 (1981)

Use of a rubber stamp for clerk's certification of a judgment and sentence is adequate, ER 901, 902.

State v. Johnson, 33 Wn.App. 534 (1982)

Photographs in prison packet are enough to establish identity for purposes of habitual criminal statute; I.

State v. Chervenell, 99 Wn.2d 309 (1983)

State must establish at habitual criminal trial that defendant had been aware of his right not to testify when entering prior plea of guilty, reversing State v. Chervenell, 28 Wn.App. 805; dicta that extrinsic evidence of defendant's awareness of Fifth Amendment privilege is admissible, including defense counsel's testimony as to advice; 5-4.

State v. Warriner, 100 Wn.2d 459 (1983)

Failure of state to prove defendant was aware of his privilege not to testify when plea was entered is fatal to habitual criminal allegation; state may prove defendant's knowledge of 5th Amendment privilege by prior trial in which defendant did not testify; 9-0.

State v. Bowman, 36 Wn.App. 798 (1984)

Failure to advise defendant of 5th Amendment privileges precludes use of prior; reversal on this ground goes to sufficiency requiring dismissal; I.

State v. Lujan, 38 Wn.App. 735 (1984)

Where defendant challenges validity of prior plea, burden shifts to state, cf.: Parke v. Raley, 121 L.Ed.2d 391 (1992); state meets its burden by offering a facially valid plea statement, need not offer colloquy; written plea statement is sufficient for court to accept plea, In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203 (1980); II.

State v. LeFever, 102 Wn.2d 777 (1984)

Dismissal of habitual criminal proceedings for insufficiency may not be reconsidered unless it was initially tentative or subject to further consideration, Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013); 8-1.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.2d 338 (1985)

Defendant's stipulation to facts from which he is found guilty is not the equivalent to a guilty plea, and trial court need not ensure defendant understands the nature of the crime and the consequences of the stipulation; I.

State v. Rigsby, 49 Wn.App. 912 (1987)

State's failure to prove that defendant was advised of elements of the offense, In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203, 209 (1980), or factual basis for the plea, State v. Hystad, 36 Wn.App. 42 (1983), is fatal to prosecution; state need not prove that defendant was advised that state had burden of proof beyond reasonable doubt; I.

Parke v. Raley, 121 L.Ed.2d 391 (1992)

Kentucky law which places burden of production on habitual criminal defendant to show prior pleas were invalid does not violate due process clause, cf.: State v. Chervenell, 99 Wn.2d 309 (1983); where no transcripts of prior plea exist, government's burden of proof by preponderance meets due process requirements; 9-0.

State v. Summers, 120 Wn.2d 801 (1993)

In VUFA trial, defense may challenge present use of prior conviction, State v. Gore, 101 Wn.2d 481 (1984); initial defense burden is to offer a colorable, fact-specific argument supporting the claim of constitutional error in prior conviction, after which state bears burden of proving that predicate conviction is constitutionally sound, even where prior conviction was based upon a jury verdict affirmed on appeal; 9-0.

State v. Manussier, 129 Wn.2d 652 (1996)

"Three strikes" law, Initiative 593, does not require prosecutor to file a separate information alleging the status, defendant is not entitled to jury trial on issue, State v. Smith, 150 Wn.2d 135 (2003), State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367, 391-97 (2007), State v. Witherspoon, 180 Wn.2d 875, 891-94 (2014), State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022), status need not be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Vickers, 148 Wn.2d 91, 119-21 (2002), see: State v. Carpenter, 117 Wn.App.

673 (2003), State v. Ben, 114 Wn.App. 148 (2002), State v. Ortega, 120 Wn.App. 165 (2004), vacated, on other grounds, 131 Wn.App. 591 (2006), *State v. State v. Mutch, 87 Wn.App. 433 (1997)

Test for consideration of foreign convictions in three strikes sentence, RCW 9.94A.120, is same as for any SRA prior, i.e., compare elements to Washington statutes and, if they are the same, the prior conviction is included, State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 439-52 (2001), see: State v. Robinson, 114 Wn.App. 800 (2003), but see: State v. Delgado, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003); if they are not or the foreign statute is broader, sentencing court may look at defendant's conduct as evidenced by the indictment to determine whether the conduct would have violated a Washington statute, State v. Duke, 77 Wn.App. 532, 535 (1995), State v. Bunting, 115 Wn.App. 135 (2003), State v. Freeburg, 120 Wn.App. 192 (2004); I.

State v. Ollens, 89 Wn.App. 437 (1998)

Out-of-state adult conviction obtained before defendant turned 18 is not a conviction, RCW 9.94A.030(27), absent a decline hearing, RCW 13.40.110, 9.94A.030(25), for purposes of persistent offender statute; III.

State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588 (1998)

General courts-martial are prior convictions for Persistent Offender Accountability Act; 5-4.

State v. Angehrn, 90 Wn.App. 339 (1998)

Persistent Offender Accountability Act (POAA/Three Strikes does not constitute ex post facto punishment where it was enacted effective prior to defendant's current offense, State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171, 191-93 (2002); I.

State v. Bridges, 91 Wn.App. 102 (1998)

POAA is narrowly drawn, serves a compelling state interest, does not violate due process; I.

State v. Burton, 92 Wn.App. 114 (1998)

Once state establishes two prior convictions by a preponderance, it must prove the constitutional validity of only those convictions previously declared constitutionally invalid on their face, State v. Manussier, 129 Wn.2d 652, 682 (1996); here, although prior plea forms did not include express waiver of right to testify, trial court's conclusion that pleas were not facially invalid is affirmed, In re Pers. Restraint of Runyan, 121 Wn.2d 432, 449-50 (1993), State v. Ammons, 105 Wn.2d 175, 188-89 (1986), but see: State v. Carpenter, 117 Wn.App. 673 (2003); III.

State v. Russ, 93 Wn.App. 241, 247-48 (1998)

POAA does not violate International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; I.

State v. Cloud, 95 Wn.App. 606, 616-18 (1999)

Those portions of Persistent Offender Accountability Act that apply to first-time offenders (here, no good time for murder) are void as violative of the one-subject requirement of CONST. Art. II § 19; I.

State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999)

Washout provisions to SRA apply prospectively only and 1990 amendments do not revive a previously washed out conviction; reverses State v. Cruz, 91 Wn.App. 389 (1998); see also: State v. Aronhalt, 99 Wn.App. 302 (2000), accord: State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 670-75 (2001), State v. Deon, 113 Wn.App. 691 (2002), but see: State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179 (2004), cf.: State v. Swecker, 154 Wn.2d 660 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Aronhalt, 99 Wn.App. 302 (2000)

To determine if prior sex offenses have washed out, State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999), trial court must accurately determine the classification and parole date for each prior offense, see: State v. McCorkle, 137 Wn.2d 490, 498 (1999); III.

State v. Morin, 100 Wn.App. 25 (2000)

Life without parole for second strike indecent liberties by forcible compulsion is not cruel punishment under these facts, State v. Gimarelli, 105 Wn.App. 370, 380-82 (2001), State v. Flores, 114 Wn.App. 218 (2002), State v. Hart, 188 Wn.App. 453, 460-65 (2015); I.

State v. Berry, 141 Wn.2d 121 (2000)

A "stayed" California conviction counts as a strike, as it remains a valid conviction; 7-1.

State v. Keller, 143 Wn.2d 267 (2001)

Prior "most serious offenses" served concurrently "count" in the offender score, former RCW 9.94A.360(6)(c) [RCW 9.94A.525 (2013)], and thus are strikes for purposes of POAA, RCW 9.94A.030(25); affirms State v. Keller, 98 Wn.App. 381 (1999); 5-4.

State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 439-52 (2001)

Detailed analysis determining sentencing consequences of an out-of-state conviction; II.

State v. Wheeler, 145 Wn.2d 116 (2001)

To prove that a defendant is a persistent offender, state need not charge, submit to jury and prove beyond a reasonable doubt prior convictions, State v. Vickers, 148 Wn.2d 91, 119-21 (2002), State v. Smith, 150 Wn.2d 135 (2003), State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367, 391-97 (2007), *State v. State v. Lawrence, 108 Wn.App. 226, 239-42 (2001)

"Two strikes" statute, RCW 9.94A.030(29)(b), requires state to prove that prior offense be the equivalent of a named Washington sex offense, see: State v. Delgado, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003), see: RCW 9.94A.030(31)(b)(ii) as amended in 2001, does not violate ex post facto or bill of attainder clauses; I.

State v. Lopez, 147 Wn.2d 515 (2002)

At sentencing, defense counsel objects to failure of state to prove priors, state offers to obtain copies of judgments and sentences, trial court declines and sentences defendant to life without parole; held: upon objection, state was obliged to prove prior convictions, State v. Ford, 137 Wn.2d 472, 480-82 (1999), State v. Rivers, 130 Wn.App. 689 (2005), State v. Mendoza, 165 Wn.2d 913 (2009), State v. Hunley, 175 Wn.2d 901 (2012), failure to do so, even where trial court stated it would proceed anyway, precludes remand to allow state a further opportunity to meet its burden, State v. McCorkle, 137 Wn.2d 490, 497 (1999), see: State v. Thiefault, 160 Wn.2d 409, 417 n.4 (2007), State v. Bergstrom, 162 Wn.2d 87 (2007), but see: RCW 9.94A.530(2) (2008), *State v. State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171, 190-93 (2002)

Clarifying amendments to POAA which direct that court treat anticipatory priors the same as completed offenses apply retroactively, as courts will apply curative amendments that clarify or technically correct an ambiguous statute, In re F.D. Processing, Inc. 119 Wn.2d 461 (1992), distinguishing State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186, 191-92 (1999); II.

State v. Delgado, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003)

Even though elements of the crimes are identical, where legislature changes the name of a crime (here, rape of a child from statutory rape) but does not change the name as a strike for purposes of persistent offender statute, then it is not a strike, reversing, in part, State v. Delgado, 109 Wn.App. 61 (2001), see: State v. Ortega, 120 Wn.App. 165 (2004), vacated, on other grounds, 131 Wn.App. 591 (2006), State v. Stockwell, 159 Wn.2d 394 (2007); 6-3.

State v. Robinson, 114 Wn.App. 800 (2003)

Trial court finds that California offense proscribing "lewd and lascivious acts with a child" is equivalent to rape of a child, and is thus a strike; held: where factual inquiry into the elements of a crime shows that the underlying conduct would be a strike in Washington, then the offense is indeed a strike, State v. Lawrence, 108 Wn.App. 226 (2001), cf.: State v. Delgado, 148 Wn.2d 723 (2003); here, defendant's out-of-state conviction involved performing fellatio on a child; II.

State v. Bunting, 115 Wn.App. 135 (2003)

Illinois robbery that does not require specific intent to steal or deprive is not equivalent to Washington robbery, thus is not a strike, at 140-41; while court should look to the record to see if the conduct would have violated the comparable Washington statute, see: State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588, 606 (1998), State v. Mutch, 87 Wn.App. 433 (1997), the complaint and "official statement of facts" cannot be considered, as they are allegations never proven at trial because defendant pled guilty, State v. Freeburg, 120 Wn.App. 192 (2004), State v. Thomas, 135 Wn.App. 474 (2006); while the indictment may be considered, here it does not establish intent to deprive as an element, at 142-43; I.

State v. Carpenter, 117 Wn.App. 673 (2003)

Defendant is sentenced as a persistent offender, one 1996 strike was originally charged as assault 1°, resulting in automatic decline of the defendant who was under 18, but defendant pleaded to assault 2°, not an automatic decline offense, prior to sentencing here, court holds a decline hearing for the 1996 case and declines "nunc pro tunc," thus using the prior as a strike; held: while a decline hearing may be held after a conviction in adult court, State v. Mora, 138 Wn.2d 43 (1999), because the decline hearing did not actually occur until after defendant committed the new crime, he was not properly convicted twice before of crimes of violence; because state bears burden of proving by preponderance that two applicable prior convictions exist when seeking a POAA sentence, State v. Manussier, 129 Wn.2d 652, 681-82 (1996), State v. Powell, 172 Wn.App. 455, 459 (2012), defendant may challenge the prior, as it is the present use of a prior conviction and not a collateral attack, State v. Holsworth, 93 Wn.2d 148 (1980), State v. Knippling, 166 Wn.2d 93 (2009); II.

State v. Smith, 150 Wn.2d 135 (2003)

Following child molestation 1° conviction, state introduces out-of-state indictment and judgment and sentence establishing that defendant was convicted of indecency with a child under 17, calls a witness to testify that police files show victim was under 12, to which defense objects, trial court finds state has not proved a prior strike; held: while existence of a prior conviction need not be determined beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Smith, 150 Wn.2d 135, 141-35 (2003), underlying facts of a prior conviction cannot be considered unless proved to trier of fact beyond a reasonable doubt, *Apprendi v. State v. Freeburg, 120 Wn.App. 192 (2004)

Federal bank robbery, 18 USC. § 2113(a), is not comparable to robbery 2° because robbery requires proof of intent to steal while federal offense is a general intent crime, see: State v. Bunting, 115 Wn.App. 135 (2003); I.

Pers. Restraint of Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249 (2005)

Federal bank robbery, 18 USC § 2113, is not comparable to robbery 2° as the federal statute requires only general intent, state robbery requires specific intent, State v. Freeburg, 120 Wn.App. 192 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Ball, 127 Wn.App. 956 (2005)

Persistent offender priors need not be submitted to a jury, distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), as it is not a sentence enhancement, *State v. Defendant pleads guilty, not pursuant to a plea agreement, to an apparent third strike offense, does not object to priors, later files PRP alleging that one prior washed, Court of Appeals allows state to reopen and prove an out-of-state prior that was not previously included that would unwash the other prior; held: unless a defendant is convicted pursuant to a plea agreement, he has no obligation to disclose priors and no obligation to object to state's failure to include priors, as state has full burden, and state is not permitted to prove a prior on collateral review that it failed to allege at sentencing; 6-3.

State v. Rivers, 130 Wn.App. 689 (2005)

Where defendant objects and state does not offer a court certified judgment and sentence to prove a strike offense nor does state offer an explanation why it failed to do so, *State v. State v. Webb, 183 Wn.App. 242, 247-52 (2014)

1982 assault 2º conviction is not a valid strike: prior to 1986 injury element was "substantial bodily harm," current version, RCW 9A.36.020(1)(b), requires grievous bodily harm which is broader, thus not legally comparable, only facts in the record from 1982 conviction were in the information which is insufficient, State v. Failey, 165 Wn.2d 673, 677 (2009), State v. Morley, 134 Wn.2d 588, 605-06 (1998); 1992 assault 2º conviction is invalid on its face as

State v. Latham, 183 Wn.App. 390 (2014)

Nevada battery statute is not legally comparable to assault 2° because Nevada defines substantial bodily harm as substantial risk of death or serious permanent disfigurement or prolonged physical pain, plea colloquy for prior establishes only that defendant hit victim and cause substantial bodily harm, Washington statute does not include prolonged physical pain, thus factual comparability fails; to prove manslaughter in Nevada a defendant who committed a misdemeanor assault that caused a death is guilty, Washington felony murder requires proof of a predicate felony, thus the two are not legally comparable; II.

State v. Bluford, 195 Wn.App. 570, 586-91 (2016)

Where elements of out-of-state conviction are not substantially similar, court may look at the record to see if conduct was identical to what is required for a comparable Washington conviction, but court can only look at charging document, cannot consider facts that were neither admitted or stipulated to nor proved beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Jones, 183 Wn.2d 327, 345-46 (2005); here, New Jersey robbery statute contains a prong broader than Washington's robbery, state failed to produce the information for the charge defendant pleaded to in New Jersey and failed to present any facts admitted or stipulated or proved; where defendant pleaded guilty to two counts on the same day Washington may only consider one of them, RCW 9.94A.030(38)(a)(ii) (2016); I.

Test for admissibility of gruesome photos is whether probative value outweighs probable prejudicial effect; within discretion of court; see: State v. Adams, 76 Wn.2d 650, 655 (1969), State v. Oughton, 26 Wn.App. 74 (1980), State v. Toennis, 52 Wn.App. 176 (1988), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991), State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 607-9 (1995), State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 653-5 (1995), State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 812-13 (1999), State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199 (2006), State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 767-69 (2007), State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Crenshaw, 98 Wn.2d 789 (1983)

Admissibility of gruesome photographs within court's discretion, but Supreme Court "warns" prosecutors to avoid admission of repetitious, inflammatory photographs; "where proof of the criminal act may be amply proven through testimony and uninflammatory evidence," prosecutors must use restraint; see: State v. Daniels, 56 Wn.App. 646 (1990), State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 812-13 (1999), Auburn v. Hedlund, 165 Wn.2d 645, 655-57 (2009), State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); 6-3.

State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340 (1985)

Gruesome autopsy photographs should be excluded where diagrams reveal same information, ER 403, State v. Crenshaw, 98 Wn.2d 789, 807 (1983), State v. Adams, 76 Wn.2d 650, 681 (1969) (Rosellini, J., dissenting), see also: Auburn v. Hedlund, 165 Wn.2d 645, 654-57 (2009), State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); I.

State v. Newton, 42 Wn.App. 718 (1986)

Mug shots should be avoided to establish identity due to potential for prejudice; even clipping off identification numbers and not using phrase "mug shot" will not necessarily disguise the fact that the photograph is, in fact, a mug shot, State v. Butler, 9 Wn.App. 347 (1973), State v. Tate, 74 Wn.2d 261 (1968), see: State v. Rivers, 129 Wn.2d 697, 711-2 (1996), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 485 (2012), harmless here; II.

State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577 (1988)

"In-life" photographs of murder victims are admissible to prove identity, State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440, 452 (1993), State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 159-60 (1995), State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 653-5 (1995), State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 812-13 (1999), State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 769-71 (2007), State v. Brown, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 37645-1-III, 37718-1-III (2022); 9-0.

State v. Ahlquist, 67 Wn.App. 442 (1992)

In a trial in absentia, arresting officer can identify booking photo with name as that of person he arrested, distinguishing State v. Hunter, 29 Wn.App. 218 (1981); I.

State v. Salamanca, 69 Wn.App. 817 (1993)

Within court's discretion to exclude a photograph where there is a variance between lighting and weather conditions between victim's testimony and that portrayed in photograph, see: Fabio v. Diesel Oil Sales Co., 1 Wn.2d 234, 238 (1939), as photo was not adequate for purpose for which it was being offered, i.e., to show whether a driver could be seen at night by occupants of victim's vehicle; III.

State v. Hardy, 76 Wn.App. 188 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996)

Lay witness may testify that person pictured in a videotape is defendant where the witness has known the defendant before, ER 701, see: State v. George, 150 Wn.App. 110 (2009), State v. Collins, 152 Wn.App. 429, 436-38 (2009), distinguishing State v. Jamison, 93 Wn.2d 794 (1980), but see: State v. Sanjurjo-Bloom, 16 Wn.App.2d 120 (2021); I.

State v. Stockmyer, 83 Wn.App. 77, 82-5 (1996)

In homicide self-defense case, defense videotape reenactment is excluded by trial court because "film speed is not subject to cross-examination,… actual events were faster than the video,… the gun was not dropped, as she testified it was, and the people were very, very different"; held: trial court raised justifiable concerns over factual inaccuracies and potential prejudicial effect, admissibility is within sound discretion of trial court, State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 812-13 (1999), see, e.g., State v. Strandy, 49 Wn.App. 537, 541 (1987); II.

State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 813-19 (1999)

Videos admitted for demonstrative purposes need not exactly portray the event in question and are admissible subject to abuse of discretion standard, Jenkins v. Snohomish County Pub. Util. Dist. No.1, 105 Wn.2d 99, 107 (1986), DiPangrazio v. Salamonsen, 64 Wn.2d 720, 727 (1964), lack of similarity goes to weight, State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626, 633 (1993); video reenactments may be held to a higher standard, State v. Stockmyer, 83 Wn.App. 77, 82-85 (1996), see: State v. Hultenschmidt, 125 Wn.App. 259, 268-69 (2004); 7-2.

State v. Iverson, 126 Wn.App. 329 (2005)

In no contact order violation case, victim does not appear at trial, court admits victim's booking photo on officer's testimony that although he does not work for the jail and has no control over the accuracy of entries by other officers, he regularly uses the booking records system, enters pictures into the system and routinely relies upon the photos; held: a photograph is not an oral or written assertion, and is thus not hearsay; I.

State v. George, 150 Wn.App. 110 (2009)

Police officer testifies, over objection, that defendants are the people shown in a surveillance photograph; held: a lay witness may not express an opinion that a photographic likeness is the defendant unless "the witness has had sufficient contacts with the person or when the person's appearance before the jury differs from his or her appearance in the photograph," ¶ 23 at 118, , State v. Jamison, 93 Wn.2d 794 (1980), see: State v. Hardy, 76 Wn.App. 188, 190 (1994), affirmed, on other grounds, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996), State v. Collins, 152 Wn.App. 429, 436-38 (2009), State v. Sanjurjo-Bloom, 16 Wn.App.2d 120 (2021); II.

State v. Collins, 152 Wn.App. 429 (2009)

Defendant is accused of killing a taxicab driver, camera in cab shows a person in back seat, family and friends of defendant identify him as the man in the photo, defense seeks suppression due to unduly suggestive procedures; held: suppression is not a remedy for suggestive procedures where a witness recognizes someone in a photograph, distinguishing situations where a person identifies a suspect whom the person has seen under the stress of a crime in progress, State v. Hardy, 76 Wn.App. 188 (1994), aff'd, on other grounds, State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996), distinguishing State v. Jamison, 93 Wn.2d 794 (1980), State v. Sanjurjo-Bloom, 16 Wn.App.2d 210 (2021); I.

State v. Sapp, 182 Wn.App. 910 (2014)

"An authenticating witness does not necessarily have to have been present at the recording of the exhibit in order to know 'when, where, and under what circumstances the recording was made.' A witness with prior knowledge of the people and places depicted in the exhibit could still establish when the exhibit was created based on the age of people in the exhibit or things depicted in the background," at ¶11, distinguishing Saldivar v. Momah, 145 Wn.App. 365 (2008); "silent witness theory" of photographic admissibility dispenses with the requirement that a verifying witness be present when the picture is taken, see; State v. Tatum, 58 Wn.2d 73, 75 (1961); III.

State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541, 566-67 (2022)

In murder case in-life photograph of victim with her minor child is not an abuse of discretion, State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 812-13 (1999); III.

PLEA BARGAINS

(see also: GUILTY PLEAS)

State v. Giebler, 22 Wn.App. 640 (1979)

Change in circumstances (new offense) may justify state changing recommendation at sentencing; I.

State v. Wheeler, 95 Wn.2d 799 (1981)

State may withdraw a plea "proposal" any time before a guilty plea or some other detrimental reliance occurs; 8-0.

State v. Haner, 95 Wn.2d 858 (1981)

Pursuant to a plea bargain, state moves to amend information from assault 2° to assault 3° and to delete firearm allegation, trial court denies motion to amend; held: no abuse of discretion for trial court to deny state's motion to amend, as a motion to amend is not part of state's initial decision to prosecute but "implicates" the court, State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 130-32 (2012), see: State v. Agustin, 1 Wn.App.2d 911 (2018), but see: State v. Westwood, 10 Wn.App.2d 543 (2019); 6-3.

In re James, 96 Wn.2d 847 (1982)

Defendant pleads guilty to felony, with probation recommendation by state, prior to sentencing, defendant is arrested for two misdemeanors, based upon these arrests, state recommends prison; held: remanded for withdrawal of plea or specific performance of plea bargain, as state did not prove misdemeanors, State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Peterson, 97 Wn.2d 864 (1982)

At plea, state agrees to recommend no jail time, at sentencing, defense counsel asks prosecutor to speak in support of state's recommendation, court refuses to permit prosecutor to speak, although court acknowledges state's recommendation and sentences defendant to jail; held: court abused discretion by refusing to grant defendant's request to allow prosecutor to explain the recommendation and remands for resentencing before a different trial judge; but see: United States v. Benchimol, 85 L.Ed.2d 462 (1985), State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866 (1990), State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862 (1999); 5-4.

State v. Hall, 32 Wn.App. 108 (1982)

Defendant pleaded guilty to probation recommendation by state, receives deferred sentence, after sentencing, state determines that defendant gave false name and had a record, sentence is vacated and defendant is sent to prison; held: defendant's giving false name to induce a plea bargain is fraud justifying rescission of plea agreement and vacation of original sentence, CR60(b), and/or revocation of probation, RCW 9.95.230, see: State v. Hardesty, 129 Wn.2d 303 (1996); I.

State v. Perez, 33 Wn.App. 258 (1982)

Prior to entry of plea, prosecutor agrees not to oppose intensive parole; at plea hearing, no record is made of this agreement; held: harmless here but prospectively noncompliance with CR 4.2(d) is grounds, ipso facto, for setting plea aside; II.

State v. Morley, 35 Wn.App. 45 (1983)

Defendant pleads guilty to probation recommendation, prior to sentencing is arrested for two misdemeanors; at sentencing prosecutor equivocates; court, at sentencing, states that defendant "committed two more crimes," sentences to prison, motion to withdraw plea is denied; held: court failed to hold evidentiary hearing to permit defense to call witnesses and require state to prove defendant's alleged breach by a preponderance, In re James, 96 Wn.2d 847 (1982), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151 (2003), remanded for a determination whether to allow withdrawal of plea or specific performance "with the defendant's preference to be accorded considerable weight"; court defines specific performance as resentencing before different judge with state bound to make an unequivocal recommendation, State v. E.A.J., 116 Wn.App. 777, 786 n.5 (2003), see: State v. Barber, 179 Wn.2d 854 (2011); III.

State v. Peterson, 37 Wn.App. 309 (1984)

Defendant pleads guilty on state's no jail recommendation, at sentencing, defendant demands that prosecutor state reason for recommendation; prosecutor states that co-defendants were only charged with obstructing, but that this defendant was the "star," and that county lacked a jail; held: no breach of plea bargain, prosecutor adequately advocated his agreement, State v. Peterson, 97 Wn.2d 865 (1982), see: State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 838-43 (1997); III, 2-1.

State v. Jollo, 38 Wn.App. 469 (1984)

Pursuant to plea negotiations, statutory rape defendant obtains psychological evaluation, a copy of which is provided the state; when no plea is entered, state uses defendant's admissions to psychologist in its case-in-chief; held: statements to psychologist made at state's request during plea negotiations are inadmissible even if defendant "breaches" plea bargain, ER 410, State v. Hatch, 165 Wn.App. 212 (2011); I.

State v. Dibley, 38 Wn.App. 824 (1984)

Division II cautions against plea bargains wherein state agrees not to call defendant as a witness against co-defendant as likely to be against public policy.

Mabry v. Johnson, 81 L.Ed.2d 437 (1984)

Acceptance of a plea offer which is withdrawn by prosecutor before plea is entered does not create a constitutional right to have the bargain specifically enforced; 9-0.

State v. Hall, 104 Wn.2d 486 (1985)

Defendant pleads guilty on prosecutor's promise, inter alia, to inform press defendant is not part of certain drug ring, months later, but before defendant moved to withdraw plea, prosecutor writes to press as agreed; held: while full and wholehearted compliance with a plea bargain is required, In re Palodichuk, 22 Wn.App. 107 (1978), State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 838-43 (1997), fact that prosecutor complied prior to filing of motion to withdraw plea establishes no breach; 9-0.

State v. Perkins, 108 Wn.2d 212 (1987)

As part of a plea bargain, a defendant can waive the right to appeal if done knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently; 9-0.

State v. Balkin, 48 Wn.App. 1 (1987)

Where a defendant plea bargains to submit to specific treatment, then an evaluation by the organization intended to provide that treatment is not privileged; I.

State v. Schaupp, 111 Wn.2d 34 (1988)

Court grants state's motion to amend from murder 1° to manslaughter 2°, to which defendant pleads guilty, court later vacates plea, over defendant's objection, when it learns that state misled court into believing that a crucial witness was not available; held: where defendant pleads guilty, s/he is entitled to specific enforcement of the plea agreement to the extent that the guilty plea may not be set aside unless there is fraud or wrongdoing by the defense, State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Arko, 52 Wn.App. 130 (1988)

It is not a breach of a plea bargain for the state to support, on appeal, an exceptional sentence even though the state recommended a sentence within the standard range, unless the parties so agreed as part of the initial plea bargain; I.

State v. Merz, 54 Wn.App. 23 (1989)

A juvenile respondent's plea bargain with the prosecutor does not bind the probation counselor, see: State v. Harris, 57 Wn.2d 383 (1960), State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 843 (1997); I.

State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421 (1989)

Confessions to a police officer are not excludable as plea negotiations, ER 410, unless officer has express plea bargaining authority, see: State v. Nowinski,124 Wn.App. 617 (2004); I.

State v. Bogart, 57 Wn.App. 353 (1990)

Counsel, representing defendant charged with robbery 2°, is informed by prosecutor that if defendant doesn't plead by pretrial hearing, charge will be amended to robbery 1°; at time of pretrial hearing, counsel is on vacation, substitute counsel enters plea of not guilty; later, defendant tenders plea to robbery 2°, which is rejected, defendant is convicted of robbery 1°; held: in absence of detrimental reliance, state can revoke plea offer at any time, State v. Wheeler, 95 Wn.2d 799 (1981), State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 740-41 (2007); defense must show that defendant relied on the bargain in such a way that a fair trial is no longer possible, State v. Budge, 125 Wn.App. 341 (2005); here, fair trial was not impeded; "'[t]he Due Process Clause is not a code of ethics for prosecutors; its concern is with the manner in which persons are deprived of their liberty,'" at 358; III.

State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866 (1990)

A prosecutor fulfills his or her duty under a plea agreement by simply making the promised recommendation, and need not advocate it, State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313 (2007); Division II holds that United States v. Benchimol, 85 L.Ed.2d 462 (1985) repudiates State v. Peterson, 97 Wn.2d 864 (1982); here, prosecutor recommended, in accordance with plea bargain, maximum end of standard range and referred to prior bad acts of defendant to support recommendation, following which court imposed exceptional sentence; prosecutor's argument did not cross the line in derogation of plea agreement, In re Palodichuk, 22 Wn.App. 107 (1978), State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774 (1999), State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862 (1999), State v. Julian, 102 Wn.App. 296 (2000), State v. Blakely, 111 Wn.App. 851, 862-67 (2002), State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1 (2002), cf.: State v. Correno-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77 (2006), State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015), but see: State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015); where prosecutor responds with candor to questions of the judge, no breach of plea agreement occurs, RPC 3.3, accord: State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), State v. Ramos, 187 Wn.2d 420, 455-58 (2017), State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021), see: State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 838-43 (1997), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206 (2000), State v. Williams, 103 Wn.App. 231 (2000), Pers. Restraint of Lord, 152 Wn.2d 182 (2004); II.

Pers. Restraint of Moore, 116 Wn.2d 30 (1991)

The sentence imposed pursuant to a plea bargain must be statutorily authorized; a defendant cannot agree to be punished more than the legislature has allowed; 9-0

State v. Hilyard, 63 Wn.App. 413 (1991)

Defendant pleads guilty to lesser charge, as part of plea bargain stipulates to exceptional sentence, then appeals, arguing exceptional sentence was not supported by record or justified by law; held: stipulation to a sentence outside SRA standard range is an adequate reason for exceptional sentence by itself, RCW 9.94A.080(3), plea agreement is a waiver of defendant's right to argue for a sentence within sentence range; see: State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354 (1980); II.

State v. Watson, 63 Wn.App. 854 (1992)

"Credit for time served" in a standard SRA plea bargain means credit for time served solely on the offense for which defendant is being sentenced, RCW 9.94A.120(13) [recodified RCW 9.94A.505(6) (2010)]; while defendant's misunderstanding of plea agreement, caused by significant mutual mistake between prosecutor and defense, would be grounds for withdrawal of plea, State v. Miller, 110 Wn.2d 528 (1988), defendant's misunderstanding of "concurrent" is unreasonable; I.

State v. Koivu, 68 Wn.App. 869 (1993)

Defendant pleads to reduced charge on prosecutor's agreement to recommend sex offender sentencing option if presentence report indicates he is amenable to treatment and to obtain agreement not to file charges in another jurisdiction; defendant found not amenable to treatment, prosecutor recommends sentence greater than sentence range on original charge, prosecutor does get agreement not to file in other jurisdiction; held: no breach by state, as court was not bound by any recommendation, plea agreement was not illusory; III.

State v. Crider, 78 Wn.App. 849 (1995)

At plea, state recommends six months followed by sexual deviancy treatment (SSOSA), RCW 9.94A.670, at sentencing state offers testimony, without objection, of probation counselor that defendant had had other sex offenses and uncharged involvement with other juveniles, state argues that in case before the court, it was victim's first sexual experience the fear and coercion of which she will have to live for the rest of her life; court imposes prison sentence; held: in context, state's argument focused on length of jail sentence rather than a breach of plea bargain, State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 873-4 (1990), distinguishing In re Palodichuk, 22 Wn.App. 107 (1978); 2-1, III.

State v. Thomas, 79 Wn.App. 32, 35-41 (1995)

Defendant pleads guilty to rendering criminal assistance, defendant agrees to testify against co-defendant, state agrees to file no other charges, defendant refuses to testify, state submits defendant breached, defendant seeks to withdraw plea, state objects, insists upon enforcement of agreement and files robbery charge; held: where defendant breaches plea agreement, he has no right to have the agreement enforced, In re James, 96 Wn.2d 847, 850 (1982), State v. Hall, 32 Wn.App. 108, 110 (1982), State v. Gilchrest, 25 Wn.App. 427, 428 (1980): state may elect to enforce or rescind; here, because state chose to enforce the agreement in spite of defendant's breach, state could not properly charge robbery, which must be dismissed, see: State v. Armstrong, 109 Wn.App. 458 (2001); II.

State v. Wakefield, 130 Wn.2d 464, 471-5 (1996)

In colloquy prior to entry of plea to reduced charge, trial court tells defendant that, in her opinion, she would be sentenced within standard range, at sentencing court imposes exceptional sentence greater than standard range, defense moves for specific performance; held: where trial court promises a sentence and then reneges, plea is involuntary and defendant may withdraw it; specific performance is not a remedy, as prosecutor did not breach the plea agreement, Pers. Restraint of Murillo, 134 Wn.App. 521 (2006), see: State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); 6-3.

State v. Halgren, 87 Wn.App. 525 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 341 (1999)

State agrees to recommend standard range sentence in exchange for guilty plea, defendant instead waives jury and proceeds with stipulated facts trial, is found guilty, state recommends exceptional sentence; held: defendant did not keep his part of the bargain by pleading guilty, thus lost any right to require state to recommend standard range sentence, jury waiver was valid following full colloquy with court; I.

State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 838-43 (1997)

Respondent pleads guilty to standard range recommendation, prosecutor convenes disposition hearing, calls witnesses, elaborates during examination and argument aggravating factors, calls parole officer who recommends exceptional sentence, then tells court state recommends standard range; held: while state need not advocate its recommendation "enthusiastically," State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 874 (1990), United States v. Benchimol, 85 L.Ed.2d 462 (1985), State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862 (1999), State v. Julian, 102 Wn.App. 296 (2000), prosecutor may not undercut terms of agreement explicitly or by conduct evidencing an intent to circumvent the terms, In re Palodichuk, 22 Wn.App. 107 (1978), although prosecutor may participate in a fact-finding hearing at sentencing to help the court make its decision, State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176, 186 (1998), State v. Blakely, 111 Wn.App. 851, 862-67 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Lord, 152 Wn.2d 182 (2004); here, prosecutor violated its duty of good faith and fair dealing, thereby breaching plea agreement, State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774 (1999), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206 (2000), State v. Williams, 103 Wn.App. 231 (2000), State v. Carreno-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77 (2006), remanded, 142 P.3d 172 and reconsidered, on other grounds, 135 Wn.App. 880 (2006), see: State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1 (2002), *State v. State v. Kissee, 88 Wn.App. 817 (1997)

Defendant pleads guilty to luring, RCW 9A.40.090, state agrees as part of bargain to recommend SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670, if defendant is amenable to treatment, at sentencing court determines that luring is not a sex offense, thus defendant ineligible for SSOSA, denies motion to withdraw plea; held: SSOSA is a direct sentencing consequence, where all parties erred as to eligibility, plea was not knowing and voluntary, thus defendant is entitled to withdraw plea; II.

State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998)

Pursuant to Alford plea agreement, state recommends standard range, court indicates its intent to impose exceptional sentence, prosecutor proposes to participate in evidentiary hearing; held: state's participating in evidentiary hearing to "help the court make its decision" is not a breach of plea agreement, see: State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 871-4 (1990), State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774 (1999), State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862 (1999), State v. Van Buren, 112 Wn.App. 585 (2002), *State v. State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774 (1999)

Prosecutor agrees to recommend standard range sentence, CCO files report recommending exceptional sentence, at sentencing prosecutor unnecessarily comments on PSI, underscores aggravating factors and, while maintaining that state was adhering to plea agreement, clearly behaved otherwise, breaching plea agreement, State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828 (1997), In re Palodichuk, 22 Wn.App. 107, 109-10 (1978), State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866 (1990), State v. Julian, 102 Wn.App. 296 (2000), State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015), distinguishing State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), cf.: State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015), State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021); remedy is remand for defendant to choose whether to withdraw plea or "specifically enforce the State's agreement," State v. Miller, 110 Wn.2d 528, 535 (1988), State v. Henderson, 99 Wn.App. 369 (2000), see: State v. Morley, 35 Wn.App. 45 (1983), State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); II.

State v. Shineman, 94 Wn.App. 57 (1999)

Plea agreement provides that if defendant complies with probation, state would recommend dismissal of the charge and expungement; at end of probation period, charge is dismissed but state objects to an order of expungement as court lacks authority to order state agencies to expunge, RCW 10.97.060, State v. Gilkinson, 57 Wn.App. 861 (1990); held: where due process dictates, specific terms of a plea agreement may be enforced despite explicit conflicting terms of a statute, State v. Miller, 110 Wn.2d 528, 532 (1988), thus trial court may order state to expunge in spite of statute, see: State v. McRae, 96 Wn.App. 298 (1999), although court records are not expunged; records need not be destroyed, merely kept from public view; II.

State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862, 868-69 (1999)

State agrees to recommend exceptional sentence based upon mitigating factors that victim was the "initiator, aggressor or provoker," and that defendant was "under duress, coercion or threat which affected his conduct," at sentencing defendant claims he was in danger, prosecutor argues defendant was not in danger, defense claims prosecutor undercut plea agreement; held: if a prosecutor in good faith perceives defendant misrepresenting the record, s/he has an obligation not to hold back a relevant correction, see: State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 840 (1998); III.

State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901 (2000)

Defendant is charged with manslaughter in district court, negotiates an agreement with prosecutor that he would be charged in superior court with two misdemeanors and, upon a plea of guilty, state would recommend 90-day concurrent sentences; at arraignment, superior court judge refuses to accept plea agreement, arraigns defendant on the two misdemeanors, court enters pleas of not guilty without objection, state subsequently is allowed to amend to manslaughter, defendant files interlocutory appeal; held: court had authority at arraignment to reject a plea agreement that is not "consistent with the interests of justice and with the prosecuting standards," RCW 9.94A.090, see: State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919 (1995), distinguishing State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1 (1980), however once court rejected plea agreement, it was obliged to give defendant opportunity to withdraw or maintain plea, entry of not guilty pleas sua sponte was error, reversing State v. Conwell, 96 Wn.App. 457 (1999), see: State v. Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001), Pers. Restraint of Burlingame, 3 Wn.App.2d 600 (2018), State v. Westwood, 10 Wn.App.2d 543 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Nason, 96 Wn.App. 686, 690-92 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty to property and drug crimes, plea agreement states, "[n]o other charges will be filed," defendant is later charged with a pre-existing child molestation case, seeks specific performance and dismissal; held: under contract law, where there is no mutual assent as to a material term, the court may find that no contract was formed; where there is uncertainty of meaning, the contract is fatally ambiguous and void; court may look to parol evidence to explain ambiguity and, if meaning remains unclear, no contract is formed; state's position that the promise of no other charges applied solely to those cases that related to the present charges conflicts with defendant's plausible claim that "no other charges" is literal; because there was no mutual intent or assent to the terms, there was no contract, thus defendant is not entitled to specific performance; III.

State v. Henderson, 99 Wn.App. 369 (2000)

At plea, state agrees to recommend 26 months, low end of standard range, which court imposes; DOC requests resentencing due to error of law, parties determine that low end of range is 41 months, state recommends exceptional sentence of 26 months, court imposes 41 months, defendant demands specific performance sentence of 26 months; held: where defendant is not misled by the state and state is not responsible for the mistake, then trial court need not impose the recommended sentence in spite of a statute, State v. Barber, 170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); II.

Pers. Restraint of McCready, 100 Wn.App. 259 (2000)

Defendant rejects plea offer to a lesser charge, is convicted of greater, proves that counsel did not advise him that mandatory minimum sentence after trial would be ten years, although he was advised that standard range would be more than ten years; held: because defendant might have accepted the plea offer had he known that he could not have obtained an exceptional sentence less than ten years, he was prejudiced by the insufficient advice of counsel, thus remanded for retrial; 2-1, III.

State v. Hahn, 100 Wn.App. 391, 394-97 (2000)

Defendant pleads guilty to assault with deadly weapon enhancement, to wit: hands and feet, at sentencing defendant argues he cannot be sentenced to the enhancement because, under these facts, hands and feet do not meet the statutory definition of a deadly weapon, RCW 9.94A.125; held: where a guilty plea is entered knowingly and voluntarily, factual deficiencies underlying the agreement will not invalidate it, In re Pers. Restraint of Barr, 102 Wn.2d 265, 269-71 (1984), State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354, 357-58 (1980), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450, 458 (2001), where defendant receives some benefit from the bargain, State v. Bao Sheng Zhao, 157 Wn.2d 188 (2006), see also: State v. Zumwalt, 79 Wn.App. 124 (1995), , disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 520 n. 5 (2006), but see: Pers. Restr. Of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001), State v. Robinson, 8 Wn.App.2d 629 (2019); II.

State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206 (2000)

A breach of a plea agreement is a due process violation which may be raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Walsh, 143 Wn.2d 1 (2001); apply objective standard in determining whether state breached, irrespective of prosecutorial motivations or justifications, State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774, 780 (1999); here, state downplayed its bargain, focused the court's attention on aggravating factors contained in the presentence report, proposed an aggravating factor not specifically cited within the report and argued the validity of an aggravating factor, thus undermining the plea agreement and breaching the bargain, distinguishing State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 875 (1990), State v. Williams, 103 Wn.App. 231 (2000), State v. Xavier, 117 Wn.App. 196 (2003), State v. Carrero-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77 (2006), see: State v. Van Buren, 112 Wn.App. 585 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Lord, 152 Wn.2d 182 (2004), State v. Monroe, 126 Wn.App. 435, 439-40 (2005), remanded, 142 P.3d 172 and reconsidered, on other grounds, 135 Wn.App. 880 (2006), State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313 (2007), State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015), cf.: State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015), State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021); II.

State v. Julian, 102 Wn.App. 296, 301-04 (2000)

Prosecutor's mere acquiescence to defense argument in favor of a plea bargain ("I don't have an awful lot to add") is not a breach where state's recommendation is presented in writing and court is aware of it, State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 874 (1990); 2-1, III.

State v. Williams, 103 Wn.App. 231 (2000)

In plea agreement, state recommends high end of standard range, at sentencing makes unsolicited references to statutory aggravating factors, argued for "at least" the high end as "the minimum" that should be imposed, that high end is "the most leniency" that should be afforded, court adopts all proposed aggravating factors and imposes statutory maximum sentence; held: while prosecutor may reference prior bad acts in support of an argument that defendant should get high end of standard range, State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866, 875 (1990), here prosecutor advocated factors beyond what was necessary in dispute over standard range, thereby undercutting plea agreement "in a transparent attempt to sustain an exceptional sentence," State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774, 782 (1999), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206 (2000), State v. Xavier, 117 Wn.App. 196 (2003), Pers. Restraint of Lord, 152 Wn.2d 182 (2004), State v. Carrero-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77 (2006), see also: State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015), cf.: State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015), State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021), thus remanded for withdrawal of plea or sentencing before a different judge at which state must present agreed recommendation without equivocation, although new judge need not accept the recommendation; II.

State v. Lake, 107 Wn.App. 227 (2001)

After state breaches plea agreement and defendant is sentenced and files notice of appeal, state offers to seek leave from appellate court, RAP 7.3, to agree to withdrawal of plea or specific performance, defense declines offer insisting that it will continue with its appeal; held: because defense had the opportunity to withdraw plea shortly after sentencing and declined, defense may have waived that remedy, remanded for a hearing on whether state lost significant evidence due to time between offer and appellate decision, State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206, 212 n.2 (2000); II.

State v. Armstrong, 109 Wn.App. 458 (2001)

In plea agreement, state agrees not to file other charges, defendant specifically agrees that if he fails to appear for sentencing, state is released from agreement but defendant is bound by plea; defendant fails to appear, court denies state's motion to add charges unless defendant is allowed to withdraw plea; held: where plea agreement is unambiguous and state proves defendant breached, then state is no longer bound by its obligations to forgo additional charges, defendant may not withdraw plea, distinguishing State v. Thomas, 79 Wn.App. 32 (1995); 2-1, II.

Pers. Restraint of Sarausad, 109 Wn.App. 824, 846-48 (2001)

Offering leniency to witnesses in exchange for their testimony is not bribery, United States v. Singleton, 165 F.3d 1297 (10th Cir., 1999); I.

State v. Sanchez, 146 Wn.2d 339 (2002)

Prosecutor agrees to standard range recommendations, investigating police officer and CCO recommends higher sentence; held: investigating police officer, as investigating arm of prosecutor, is bound by prosecutor's recommendation, State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015); CCO, as an agent of the court, may make an independent recommendation; 5-4.

State v. Cox, 109 Wn.App. 937 (2002)

Defendant rejects offer to plead to assault 4˚, is convicted of assault 3˚, claims that counsel failed to advise him that community placement for assault 3˚ was mandatory and, if he knew, he would have pled guilty to the gross misdemeanor; held: defendant's bare assertion is insufficient to establish prejudice; III.

State v. Moen, 110 Wn.App. 125, 131-33 (2002)

Prosecutor's refusing to plea bargain where defendant demands disclosure of confidential informant at a civil forfeiture hearing is arguably unethical but, because defendant has no right to a plea bargain, State v. Wheeler, 95 Wn.2d 799, 804 (1981), State v. Shelmidine, 166 Wn.App. 107 (2012), failure of trial court to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b), is not an abuse of discretion; III.

State v. Lindahl, 114 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2002)

State agrees to make standard range recommendation and to oppose an exceptional sentence if court sua sponte considers an exceptional sentence, trial court, with prosecutor's approval, allows attorney for homicide victim's family to present written and oral argument in support of exceptional sentence, defense raises breach issue for first time on appeal; held: failure to adhere to a plea bargain implicates due process and may be raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Sanchez, 146 Wn.2d 339, 346 (2002); prosecutor's declining to argue against victim's attorney's appearance and asking court to hear from victim's attorney did not breach plea bargain or establish that prosecutor deliberately set up the scenario whereby a third party would recommend an exceptional sentence, State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313 (2007), see: State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862, 866 (1999), State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015); II.

State v. Harrison, 148 Wn.2d 550 (2003)

Defendant receives exceptional sentence, on appeal Court of Appeals reverses, holding that state breached plea bargain and orders specific performance; on remand, different judge holds that he is bound by the exceptional sentence previously imposed, although he reduces offender score in accordance with mandate; held: when state breaches, neither collateral estoppel nor "law of the case" doctrine prevent trial court from independently determining whether an exceptional sentence is warranted, see: State v. White, 123 Wn.App. 106 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Turley, 149 Wn.2d 395 (2003)

Where defendant pleads guilty to multiple counts at the same time in the same document, the plea agreement is indivisible and, where there are grounds to withdraw plea to one count, he may withdraw his plea to all counts, Pers. Restraint of Bradley, 165 Wn.2d 934 (2009), State v. King, 162 Wn.App. 234, 240-42 (2011), State v. Charles, 163 Wn.App. 54 (2011), see: State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507 (2006), State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 431, 438 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Shale, 160 Wn.2d 489, 492-94 (2007), but see: Pers. Restraint of Francis, 170 Wn.2d 517, 532 n.7 (2010), State v. Coombes, 191 Wn.App. 241, 255-58 (2015); 9-0.

State v. E.A.J., 116 Wn.App. 777, 781-86 (2003)

Where plea agreement is ambiguous and interpretation depends on credibility of extrinsic evidence or a choice among reasonable inferences to be drawn from extrinsic evidence, and is raised for first time on appeal, remand is necessary for evidentiary hearing, Berg v. Hudesman, 115 Wn.2d 657, 668 (1990); I.

State v. Williams, 117 Wn.App. 390 (2003)

A plea is not invalid if entered pursuant to a plea agreement that includes leniency for a third party or in response to a prosecutor's justifiable threat to prosecute a third party if the plea is not entered, State v. Cameron, 30 Wn.App. 229 (1981); prosecutor is obliged to inform the court that a plea bargain is a "package deal," whereupon court must specifically inquire whether defendant was pressured by co-defendant; mere fact that defendant felt pressure to plead guilty to assist the co-defendant is not a basis to withdraw the plea as long as the plea was voluntary and of defendant's own volition; I.

State v. Oliva, 117 Wn.App. 773 (2003)

State agrees to recommend special sex offender sentencing alternative if defendant is amenable, court orders presentence investigation and evaluation at Eastern State Hospital, PSI reflects that defendant is not amenable, defense requests evaluation by certified sex offender treatment provider, state opposes, court sentences to prison; held: trial court properly exercised discretion in denying SSOSA evaluation, State v. Koivu, 68 Wn.App. 869 (1993), state did not breach plea agreement even though RCW 18.155.030(2)(a) provides that question of amenability is necessarily determined by certified provider; 2-1, I.

State v. Moen, 150 Wn.2d 221 (2003)

Defendant contests civil forfeiture and, in discovery, demands name of confidential informant, prosecutor advises that if the name is disclosed prosecutor's policy is to refuse to plea bargain the criminal case, defense persists, name is disclosed and prosecutor refuses to bargain; held: because the state has a legitimate interest in protecting confidential informants, state's policy which requires a defendant to forgo the right of disclosure does not violate due process; 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Lord, 152 Wn.2d 182 (2004)

On plea to sex offenses, state agrees to recommend suspended sentence "on condition...successfully [sic] treatment per SSOSA," RCW 9.94A.670(2), defendant obtains three evaluations only third of which finds amenability to treatment, prosecutor at sentencing recommends prison; held: neither statute nor plea agreement specified number of unfavorable evaluations defendant could receive before state could revoke recommendation, thus prosecutor breached plea agreement; remedy is remand for withdrawal of plea or specific performance requiring state to present agreed-upon recommendation without equivocation, although court may hear from all evaluators and need not impose SSOSA, State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 838-43 (1997), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Budge, 125 Wn.App. 341 (2005)

State offers plea to six counts, calculates offender score at 6, informs defense that if defendant does not plead it will add charges, defense counsel advises state that offender score is actually 7, state still insists on plea to six counts, defense objects, trial court finds detrimental reliance and orders specific performance, state appeals; held: fact that defendant may face more charges if he goes to trial does not affect his ability to receive a fair trial, only reliance defendant has shown is psychological which is insufficient to compel specific performance, State v. Wheeler, 95 Wn.2d 799, 805 (1981), State v. Bogart, 57 Wn.App. 353, 357 (1990); II.

State v. Lathrop, 125 Wn.App. 353 (2005)

Defendant is charged with murder, agrees to plead to manslaughter, state's recommendation is "90 months...which is 5 months below the low end," court follows plea bargain, later defendant moves for resentencing because, due to a miscalculation, the 90 month sentence is actually within the standard range, not below it; held: because the agreement was 90 months, not 5 months below the range, defendant may not withdraw plea, see: State v. Walsh, 143 Wn.2d 1 (2001); III.

State v. McInally, 125 Wn.App. 854 (2005)

In plea agreement, defendant agrees that the attached criminal history is accurate and complete, state agrees to recommend suspended sentence, prior to sentencing DOC discovers a juvenile felony in another state, prosecutor recommends prison, defendant alleges breach by state; held: defendant's agreement as to his criminal history was a condition precedent to state's agreement which defendant breached by failing to disclose a conviction, thus state was not bound by the agreement; I.

State v. Monroe, 126 Wn.App. 435, 439-40 (2005), remanded, 142 P.3d 172, and reconsidered, on other grounds, 135 Wn.App. 580 (2006)

Plea agreement is for top of range, at sentencing prosecutor argues that facts would have supported additional counts if case had gone to trial, crimes committed were one of the most significant crime sprees prosecutor had seen, murder cases have less victim impact; held: state's argument did not undercut bargain, distinguishing State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 838-43 (1997), State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774 (1999), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206 (2000), State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015), as argument advocated top of range, presentation was "not unduly inflammatory," cf.: State v. Carrero-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77 (2006), State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015), State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021); II.

State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507 (2006)

Defendant pleads guilty to robberies and 5 weapon enhancements, plea statement advises that enhancements will be consecutive to any other sentence but is silent as to running consecutive to each other, after sentencing court follows statute and runs enhancements consecutively to each other, defendant seeks specific enforcement to have them run concurrently or, alternatively, to withdraw plea to enhancements only; held: a defendant may only withdraw a plea to the entire plea agreement, not enhancement only, Pers. Restraint of Bradley, 165 Wn.2d 934 (2009), State v. Turley, 149 Wn.2d 394 (2003), State v. Kinnamin, 180 Wn.2d 197 (2014), disapproving, in part, State v. Zumwalt, 79 Wn.App. 124 (1995); where a plea agreement is ambiguous as opposed to erroneous, specific performance is not available as a remedy, Pers.

Restraint of Murillo, 134 Wn.App. 521 (2006), State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 734-41 (2007); 7-2.

State v. Ermels, 156 Wn.2d 528 (2006)

Defendant pleads guilty, stipulates to facts supporting an exceptional sentence based on victim vulnerability, stipulates that there is a legal basis for exceptional sentence, waives right to appeal, then appeals after Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), is decided and seeks standard range sentence; held: because stipulation to facts supporting exceptional sentence and agreement that there was a legal basis for the exceptional sentence are indivisible parts of the plea agreement, defendant cannot challenge the exceptional sentence without challenging the entire plea, State v. Turley, 149 Wn.2d 395 (2003), State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507 (2006), State v. Steele, 134 Wn.App. 844 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Shale, 160 Wn.2d 489, 492-94 (2007), *State v. State v. Hagar, 158 Wn.2d 369 (2006)

Defendant pleads guilty, stipulates to certification for determination of probable cause as real facts, trial court considers facts and imposes exceptional sentence, finding major economic offense; held: even assuming that defendant's stipulation was an integral part of the plea agreement and not divisible, a Blakely violation occurrred, requiring resentencing within standard range, State v. Suleiman, 158 Wn.2d 280 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Beito, 167 Wn.2d 497 (2009); reverses State v. Hagar, 126 Wn.App. 320 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Carreno-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77 (2006)

State agrees to recommend low end on some counts, mid-range on some, high end on others, at sentencing prosecutor, purporting to speak on behalf of victims, argues, over objection, that crimes are heinous and violent, trial court sentences to high end on all counts; held: because plea bargain was for low end on counts which carried the highest sentences, there was no need for prosecutor to recite potentially aggravating facts; when prosecutor is recommending mid-range, it may be necessary to recount aggravating facts to safeguard against a lower sentence, but prosecutor must use great care and facts presented must not be of the type that make the crime more egregious than a typical crime of the same class; here, state went beyond what was necessary to support mid-point recommendation, see: State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774 (1999), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206 (2000), State v. Williams, 103 Wn.App. 231 (2000), cf.: State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021); while a prosecutor may help a victim exercise her right to communicate information to sentencing court, CONST., Art. I, § 35, RCW 7.69.030, without breaching a plea bargain, State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313 (2007), here the remarks were unsolicited advocacy, victims were present and able to speak or ask for assistance if they so desired, State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2015); breach of plea bargain is not subject to harmless error review, Pers. Restraint of James, 96 Wn.2d 847, 849-50 (1982), Santobello v. New York, 30 L.Ed.2d 427 (1971), cf.: State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015); II.

State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 734-41 (2007)

Defense claims state offered plea to aggravated murder in lieu of death penalty, then withdrew offer; held: a plea proposal is unenforceable absent detrimental reliance by defendant, State v. Wheeler, 95 Wn.2d 799 (1981); doctrine of fundamental fairness is inapplicable to proposals made in the context of plea negotiations; doctrine of equitable estoppel is inapplicable in criminal prosecutions; 8-1.

Pers. Restraint of Bradley, 165 Wn.2d 934 (2009)

Defendant pleads guilty to two counts, later learns that offender score for one count was miscalculated, seeks withdrawal of plea as to both counts; held: length of sentence is a direct consequence of a plea, see: Pers. Restraint of Stockwell, 161 Wn.App. 329 (2011), affirmed, on different grounds, 179 Wn.2d 588 (2014), State v. Mendoza, 157 Wn.2d 582, 590 (2006), court may not speculate as to what defendant would have done had he been correctly advised, Pers. Restraint of Isadore, 151 Wn.2d 294, 302 (2004), overruling, in part, State v. Osequero Acevedo, 137 Wn.2d 179 (1999); withdrawal of a plea is available where, as part of a package deal, the defendant was correctly informed of the consequences of one charge but not of another charge, State v. Turley, 149 Wn.2d 395, 399-401 (2003), State v. King, 162 Wn.App. 234, 240-42 (2011); here, while there were separate plea agreements which might support divisibility, each document referenced the other, Pers. Restraint of Shale, 160 Wn.2d 489, 493-94 (2007), one charge was reduced on the day of sentencing evidencing a package deal, thus defendant may withdraw pleas to both charges, State v. Chambers, 176 Wn.2d 573 (2013), cf.: State v. Coombes, 191 Wn.App. 241, 255-58 (2015); 7-2.

Missouri v. Frye, 566 U.S. 134, 132 S.Ct.1399, 182 L.Ed.2d 379 (2012)

Where prosecutor makes a formal plea offer, favorable to the defendant, with a fixed expiration date, counsel's failure to communicate the offer to the client is ineffective assistance; to get relief, defendant must show a reasonable probability he would have accepted the plea offer and that there is a reasonable probability that the prosecutor would not have withdrawn it and that the trial court would have accepted the offer; formal plea offers may be made part of the record; 6-3.

Lafler v. Cooper, 566 U.S. 156, 163, 132 S.Ct. 1376, 182 L.Ed.2d 398 (2012)

Counsel communicates a favorable plea offer to client and advises client to reject it, defendant is convicted and receives a harsher sentence, parties conced on appeal that counsel's advice to reject the plea offer was based upon an erroneous reading of the law and thus was ineffective; held: where ineffective advice leads to a plea offer's rejection, conviction at trial and a harsher sentence, defendant must show that there is a reasonable probability that defendant would have pleaded guilty and that the sentence would have been less; remedy may be resentencing or, if the plea offer was to a lesser charge, court may order prosecutor to reoffer the plea proposal; court leaves open the scenario that, after the plea is rejected, prosecutor learns of new information about defendant's culpability; 5-4.

State v. MacDonald, 183 Wn.2d 1 (2105)

State agrees to recommend suspended sentence in 1978 cold case homicide plea, at sentencing advises court that detective wishes to speak on behalf of victim's family, RCW 9.94A.500 (2008), prosecutor says she doesn't know what detective will say, defense objection overruled, detective attacks plea agreement, judge imposes maximum sentence; held: investigating officers cannot make sentence recommendations contrary to a plea agreement, State v. Sanchez, 146 Wn.2d 339 (2002), victims' rights laws, CONST. art. I, § 35, ch. 7.69, RCW, do not permit investigating officer acting as a victim's advocate to undermine plea agreement, State v. Carreno-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77, 86-87 (2006), cf.: State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Neisler, 191 Wn.App. 259 (2015)

In plea bargain defendant pleads guilty to vehicular assault and an aggravating factor, prosecutor agrees to defer to court as to sentence, at sentencing victim makes strong statement without recommending a sentence, prosecutor states, inter alia, "how much time is enough?," and that this is more severe than vehicular homicide, defense recommends sentence 2-4 years above standard range, court imposes sentence six times standard range; held: applying objective standard of whether state's words contradict state's recommendation state did not breach, state was not prohibited from arguing facts in support of exceptional sentence where defendant agreed to an exceptional sentence, distinguishing State v. Carreno-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77, 83-85 (2006), State v. Xavier, 117 Wn.App. 196, 200-02 (2003), State v. Williams, 103 Wn.App. 231, 236-39 (2000), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206, 217 (2000), State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774,782 (1999), State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828 (1997); III.

State v. Ramos, 187 Wn.2d 420, 455-58 (2017)

State agrees to recommend low end of standard range, argues at sentencing that the crime would have a basis for an exceptional aggravated sentence because defendant knew victim was particularly vulnerable, standard range sentence is imposed, defense argues on appeal that state undercut the possibility of a mitigated sentence; held: in context state's argument "had both the intention and effect of providing the court a full picture of the facts," State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176 (1998), State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021), cf.: State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774 (1999), distinguishing State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450 (2017)

Defense counsel, unaware that conviction of any felony with a deadly weapon enhancement is a strike offense, RCW 9.94A.030(33)(t) (2000), -.570 (2016), does not plea bargain, defendant is convicted of lesser assault 3° with a deadly weapon, sentenced to life without parole; held: where failure to plea bargain is based on ignorance of the law and failure to advise of the potential consequences of failing to negotiate, prejudice is demonstrated and counsel is ineffective, State v. James, 48 Wn.App. 353 (1987), cf.: State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379 (2012), State v. Crawford, 159 Wn.2d 86, 100 (2006), Pers. Restraint of James, 190 Wn.2d 686 (2018), see: State v. Drath, 7 Wn.App.2d 255 (2018); affirms State v. Estes, 193 Wn.App. 479 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Robinson, 8 Wn.App.2d 629 (2019)

While a defendant may plead guilty to an amended charge if there is no factual basis as long as there is a factual basis for the original charge, State v. Bao Sheng Zhao, 157 Wn.2d 188 (2006), State v. Wilson, 16 Wn.App.2d 537 (2021), a defendant cannot be convicted of two crimes based on a single act and a single original charge as it violates the double jeopardy clause, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 662 (2011); while a guilty plea precludes a collateral attack unless there is a double jeopardy violation; I.

State v. Westwood, 10 Wn.App.2d 543 (2019)

Defendant agrees to plead guilty to negotiated reduced charges, trial court declines to accept plea ruling that it does not comport with prosecution standards, RCW 9.94A.401 et seq., defendant is convicted of original charges at trial, both parties appeal claiming court abused discretion; held: trial court is not authorized to reject a plea based upon disagreement with the terms of the plea agreement, distinguishing State v. Haner, 95 Wn.2d 858 (1981), see: State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901 (2000); state articulated a tenable justification for the plea agreement, court cannot reject a plea agreement as inconsistent with prosecutorial standards; 2-1.

State v. Wiatt, 11 Wn.App.2d 107 (2019)

In exchange for reduction of charges to gross misdemeanors defendant agrees that court can enter lifetime anti-harassment orders, seven years later defendant moves to vacate anti-harassment orders; held: by moving to vacate the orders defendant breached plea agreement, thus trial court properly ordered specific performance of the anti-harassment orders; I.

State v. Salazar, 13 Wn.App.2d 880 (2020)

Defendant's standard range is 22-29 months, prosecutor, pursuant to plea bargain, recommends prison-based DOSA of 25.5 months with 12.25 months in prison and 12.25 months community custody, defendant violates conditions of community custody, prosecutor recommends 29 months, court revokes, RCW 9.94A.660(7)(c) (2020), and imposes 29 months, defendant maintains state violated plea agreement; held: plea agreement did not address possible sanction state would recommend upon revocation, prosecutor cannot violate an agreement it didn't make; III.

State v. D.L.W., 14 Wn.App.2d 649 (2020)

In plea agreement respondent agrees to pay full restitution, at restitution hearing argues that he should not be obliged to pay restitution to the insurer of the victim, state argues breach of plea agreement; held: respondent did not waive his right to argue for lesser restitution, plus agreement is ambiguous as it did not address restitution to insurance company, ambiguities in plea agreement are construed against the state, State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 521-22 (2006); I.

State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021)

Plea agreement states that state will recommend mid-range and that defense doesn't agree, at sentencing state submits a presentence report setting out stipulated facts and that the recommendation is "appropriate given the egregious nature of this offense and the victim's obvious vulnerability," and that the vulnerable victim aggravator and domestic violence designation were dismissed as part of the plea agreement, and informed the court that "[h]ad this case gone to trial, the State would have added an additional sentencing aggravator of abuse of trust and an additional count of Rape in the Second Degree," court imposes high end of the range, defendant moves trial court for resentencing four years after judgment and sentence became final, claiming state breached the plea agreement by arguing aggravating sentencing factors, trial court denies motion, defendant appeals; held: motion for resentencing was an untimely collateral attack, RCW 10.73.090, thus superior court should have transferred it to the court of appeals, CrR 7.8(c)(2); because court of appeals ruled on the merits State v. Molnar, 13 Wn.App.2d 1072 (2020)(unpublished), supreme court grants review on the merits, holding that state did not breach the plea agreement, it was entitled to file a report which properly summarized the original charge and the plea negotiations, State v. Ramos, 187 Wn.2d 420, 455-58 (2017), distinguishing State v. Talley, 134 Wn.2d 176, 186 (1998), State v. Sledge, 133 Wn.2d 828, 840 (1997), State v. Correno-Maldonado, 135 Wn.App. 77, 83 (2006), State v. Van Buren, 101 Wn.App. 206, 216 (2000), State v. Jerde, 93 Wn.App. 774, 782 (1999); 9-0.

Defendant pleads guilty to reduced charge to avoid third strike sentence, stipulates to offender score which includes drug possession conviction, plea agreement states that defendant agrees not to file a CrR 7.8 motion, files PRP due to invalidity of drug possession State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021), state maintains that defendant breached plea agreement; held: state may seek a hearing in superior court on remand to have court decide if defendant breached; II.

POLYGRAPH

State v. Boileau, 21 Wn.App. 259 (1978)

Unstipulated polygraph is inadmissible to impeach a stipulated polygraph; I.

State v. Agren, 28 Wn.App. 1 (1980)

Prosecutor asks defense witness on stand if he would take a polygraph, objection sustained, mistrial denied; held: within court's discretion to deny mistrial; II.

State v. Descoteaux, 94 Wn.2d 31 (1980), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982)

Evidence that defendant took polygraph should be admitted only when clearly relevant and unmistakably nonprejudicial; II.

State v. Sutherland, 94 Wn.2d 527 (1980)

No mention of polygraph taken by a witness is permissible unless defense opens door; here, defense cross of police did not open door; reverses State v. Sutherland, 24 Wn.App. 719 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982)

Court need not appoint polygraph expert where state declines to stipulate to admissibility of results and defense fails to lay any foundation on reliability of polygraph evidence; II.

State v. Griggs, 33 Wn.App. 496 (1982)

Limiting instruction regarding stipulated polygraph must be given, State v. Renfro, 96 Wn.2d 902 (1982); State v. Ross, 7 Wn.App. 62, 53 ALR 3d 997 (1972); II.

State v. Renfro, 96 Wn.2d 902 (1982)

Stipulated polygraph is admissible; court must instruct jury that polygraph does not prove or disprove element of offense but at most indicates that, at time of examination, defendant was not telling the truth; but, if defense fails to request instruction, no error; see: State v. Trader, 54 Wn.App. 479 (1989); 7-2.

State v. Ahlfinger, 50 Wn.App. 466 (1988)

Polygraph does not meet Frye standard; no due process violation for failure to admit unstipulated polygraph, distinguishing Rock v. Arkansas, 97 L.Ed.2d 37 (1987); I.

United States v. Scheffer, 140 L.Ed.2d 413 (1998)

Per se rule excluding polygraph evidence from court martial proceedings does not violate Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights to present evidence; 5-4.

State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326 (1998) , abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010)

Requiring polygraph testing to monitor compliance with other conditions of community placement, RCW 9.94A.120(9)(c), is valid, affirming, in part, State v. Riles, 86 Wn.App. 10 (1997), overruling State v. Holland, 80 Wn.App. 1 (1995); accord: State v. Combs, 102 Wn.App. 949 (2000), State v. Castro, 141 Wn.App. 485, 493-94 (2007), State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 603 (2008); 7-2.

State v. Jacobsen, 95 Wn.App. 967, 975-77 (1999)

Court orders juvenile to attend psychosexual evaluation prior to disposition, admits polygraph results; held: trial court was authorized to order unstipulated polygraph testing of a juvenile as part of psychological evaluation, see: State v. Cherry, 61 Wn.App. 301 (1991), State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326, 342 (1998) , abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010); II.

State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 749-50 (2001)

Polygraph evidence may be considered in a magistrate's probable cause determination, State v. Cherry, 61 Wn.App. 301, 305 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Justesen, 121 Wn.App. 83 (2004)

Defendant-mother believes father sexually abused 3-year old, CPS and police investigate, father passes polygraph, no charges filed, temporary parenting plan orders shared custody, mother leaves state with child, is arrested 18 months later in another state, charged with custodial interference, RCW 9A.40.060(2); at trial, defense raises affirmative defense that defendant reasonably believed that child was in danger, RCW 9A.40.080, trial court admits fact that defendant knew of polygraph results, gave limiting instruction that polygraph goes only to reasonable belief of defendant and not to whether father committed abuse; held: polygraph evidence is inadmissible irrespective of limiting instruction, State v. Sutherland, 94 Wn.2d 527, 530 (1980), distinguishing State ex rel. Taylor v. Reay, 61 Wn.App. 141 (1991); I.

PREEMPTION

State v. Mason, 34 Wn.App. 514 (1983)

Defendant challenges felony promoting prostitution conviction, argues there is a municipal ordinance making identical offense a misdemeanor; held: where a statute and ordinance define the same elements, but former is a felony and latter a misdemeanor, defendant's right to equal protection is violated, but see: State v. Kirwin, 165 Wn.2d 818 (2009); however, the legislature intended to make the punishment of "serious criminal offenses" a matter of state control, thus state statute conflicts with and preempts ordinance; I.

Pasco v. Ross, 39 Wn.App. 480 (1985)

A municipal ordinance which permits what a state statute forbids or prohibits what a statute permits is in conflict with the state statute and is preempted; city ordinance prohibiting willful use of force or violence against another not in self-defense conflicts with state assault statute which prohibits unlawful force; III.

State v. Rabon, 45 Wn.App. 832 (1986)

Where a statute expressly prohibits an act but does not expressly permit a similar act, then a municipal ordinance prohibiting the similar act is not in conflict with the statute; SMC § 12A.14.080, prohibiting possession of chako sticks does not conflict with RCW 9.41.270 which only prohibits display of such weapons in certain circumstances; review of law of preemptpreemption; I.

Seattle v. Shin, 50 Wn.App. 218 (1988)

Contributing to dependency of minor, SMC § 12A.18.020, is not preempted by state law; I.

Seattle v. Taylor, 50 Wn.App. 384 (1988)

Simple assault ordinance, SMC § 12A.06.015(A), is not preempted and does not conflict with state law; I.

Brown v. Yakima, 116 Wn.2d 556 (1991)

PreemptPreemption occurs when legislature states its intention either expressly or by necessary implication to preempt the field; if legislature is silent as to intent, court may look to purposes of statute and to facts and circumstances upon which statute was intended to operate; absent legislative intent, ordinance may violate CONST. Art. 11, § 11 if it directly and irreconcilably conflicts with the statute; ordinance does not conflict with statute merely because ordinance prohibits a wider scope of activity; 9-0.

Seattle v. Wandler, 60 Wn.App. 309 (1991)

Seattle hit and run ordinance, SMC § 11.56.420, does not unconstitutionally conflict with state statute, RCW 46.52.020, as variances are insignificant; RCW 46.08.020, 030 do not require local ordinances be identical to state traffic laws, Bellingham v. Schampera, 57 Wn.2d 106, 110 (1960); I.

Tacoma v. Luvene, 118 Wn.2d 826 (1992)

Tacoma drug loitering ordinance, TMC § 8.72.010, is not preempted by Uniform Controlled Substances Act, State v. Fisher, 132 Wn.App. 26, 30-32 (2006); absent evidence of falsehood or dissimulation, an emergency clause is valid, State ex rel. Hamilton v. Martin, 173 Wash. 249 (1933); 8-0.

Seattle v. Lewis, 70 Wn.App. 715 (1993)

Obstructing a public officer ordinance, SMC § 12A.16.010, does not conflict with state obstructing statute, RCW 9A.76.020, since both prohibit the same behavior regardless of whether judge or jury determine lawfulness of police conduct; I.

Seattle v. Ballsmider, 71 Wn.App. 159 (1993)

Ordinance prohibiting discharging a firearm, SMC § 12A.28.050, may set maximum penalty of one year in jail, RCW 9.41.290, 9.41.300(2)(a); I.

Seattle v. Williams, 128 Wn.2d 341 (1995)

City ordinance prohibiting driving with a breath alcohol level of 0.08 grams/210 liters of breath is in contravention of RCW 46.08.020, .030 which requires traffic laws to be "uniform throughout this state"; 6-3.

State v. Greene, 97 Wn.App. 473 (1999)

Seattle pedestrian interference ordinance, SMC § 12A.12.015, prohibiting intentional obstructing vehicular traffic, does not conflict with state jaywalking statute; I.

Spokane v. White, 102 Wn.App. 955 (2000)

Assault ordinance which reads "no person may willfully use or threaten to use…unlawful physical force" is not preempted, as willful equates with knowingly, thus ordinance does not conflict with state assault statute; III.

State v. Fisher, 132 Wn.App. 26, 30-32 (2006)

Snohomish County drug paraphernalia ordinance, SCC 10.48.020, is not preempted by Uniform Controlled Substances Act, which contemplates local ordinances consistent with the act, Tacoma v. Luvene, 118 Wn.2d 826, 834 (1992), RCW 69.50.608; I.

State v. Kirwin, 165 Wn.2d 818 (2009)

An ordinance which is virtually identical to a state statute but which imposes a harsher penalty (here, a misdemeanor vs. an infraction), does not unconstitutionally conflict, CONST., Art. XI, § 11; affirms State v. Kirwin, 137 Wn.App. 387 (2007); 8-1.

Seattle v. Wilson, 151 Wn.App. 624 (2009)

City ordinance criminalizing negligently causing death or substantial bodily harm by operating a motor vehicle negligently is void as it conflicts with RCW 46.63.020 decriminalizing most traffic offenses; I.

State v. Finch, 181 Wn.App. 387 (2014), State v. A.W., 181 Wn.App. 400 (2014)

Trial court grants defense motion to order a juvenile who is on probation for a sex offense to take a polygraph, state seeks interlocutory relief; held: court lacks authority to order a polygraph in the context of the pending criminal case, ordering juvenile to take polygraph where it was not designed to ensure compliance with treatment, State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509 (1993), exceeded scope of juvenile's SSODA probation conditions; II.

PRESENCE OF DEFENDANT

State v. Jury, 19 Wn.App. 256 (1978)

Presence of defendant during supplemental instructions not required, cf.: State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874 (2011); II.

State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369 (1991)

Removal of defendant from courtroom for disruptive behavior is within discretion of trial court, Illinois v. Allen, 25 L.Ed.2d 353 (1970), State v. Davis, 195 Wn.2d 571 (2020), CrR 3.4(b), least severe remedy to maintain order is preferable, Burgess v. Towne, 13 Wn.App. 954, 960 (1975); 9-0.

State v. Ahern, 64 Wn.App. 731 (1992)

Defendant does not have constitutional right to be present at all meetings between court and counsel, "unless his presence has a relation, reasonably substantial, to the fullness of his opportunity to defend against the charge," State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577, 616 (1988), Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 483-84 (1998), Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 432-33 (2005), State v. Wilson, 141 Wn.App. 597, 604-04 (2007), State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 68-70 (2012); III.

State v. Hammond, 121 Wn.2d 585 (1993)

Trial may not commence in defendant's absence, CrR 3.4, Crosby v. United States, 122 L.Ed.2d 25 (1993), cf.: State v. Brown, 178 Wn.App. 70, 75-78 (2013); affirms State v. Hammond, 65 Wn.App. 585 (1992), accord: State v. Jackson, 124 Wn.2d 359 (1994); 8-0.

State v. Crafton, 72 Wn.App. 98 (1993)

Where defendant is present when jury is sworn at the beginning of voir dire, and later absents herself, then trial may continue, CrR. 3.4, State v. Thomson, 123 Wn.2d 877 (1994), State v. Hammond, 65 Wn.App. 585 (1992), aff'd, 121 Wn.2d 787 (1993); Division II establishes a bright line rule when trial may commence in defendant's absence, see: , State v. Brown, 178 Wn.App. 70, 75-78 (2013).

Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 305-07 (1994)

Defendant's right to be present extends only to times when evidence is presented and "whenever his presence has a relation, reasonably substantial, to the fulness of his opportunity to defend against the charge," United States v. Gagnon, 84 L.Ed.2d 486 (1985), Snyder v. Massachusetts, 78 L.Ed. 674, 90 A.L.R. 575 (1934); defendant does not have the right to be present during in-chambers or bench conferences on legal matters which do not require a resolution of disputed facts, State v. Bremer, 98 Wn.App. 832 (2000), Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 483-84 (1998), Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 432-33 (2005), *State v. State v. Thomson, 123 Wn.2d 877 (1994)

Where defendant has failed to appear after trial has commenced, trial court may determine, from totality of circumstances, whether waiver of presence was voluntary, CrR 3.4(b); "complex of issues" approach, weighing public interest vs. voluntary absence, is expressly rejected, see: State v. Hammond, 65 Wn.App. 585 (1992), aff'd, 121 Wn.2d 787 (1993), Crosby v. United States, 122 L.Ed.2d 25 (1993), State v. Garza, 150 Wn.2d 360 (2003), State v. Cobarruvias, 179 Wn.App. 523 (2014); state constitutional issues not addressed, at 884; here, upon apprehension defendant made no attempt to explain reason for absence, thus trial court did not abuse discretion in denying motion for new trial, see: State v. Thurlby, 184 Wn.App. 918 (2014), 184 Wn.2d 618 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Corbin, 79 Wn.App. 446 (1995)

Defendant has no right to be present at presentation of findings and conclusions that formalize court's decision that was announced in defendant's presence, cf.: State v. Pruitt, 145 Wn.App. 784, 797-801 (2008); I.

State v. Krause, 82 Wn.App. 688, 698 (1996)

Defendant does not have right to be present for consideration of a motion to extend speedy trial expiration date, Pers. Restraint of Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 920-1 (1998); I.

State v. Berrysmith, 87 Wn.App. 268 (1997)

Trial court holds in camera hearing with defense counsel, following which court allows counsel to withdraw because counsel believed that defendant would commit perjury at trial; held: because the question for the court is whether the lawyer reasonably believes defendant will commit perjury and not whether client in fact intends to commit perjury, defendant's presence is not required at such a hearing, see: State v. Rooks, 130 Wn.App. 787, 795-801 (2005); I.

State v. Atherton, 106 Wn.App. 783 (2001)

Defendant fails to appear on last day of trial, court finds voluntary absence and concludes trial, during closing argument court learns defendant is incarcerated on unrelated matter, after conviction defendant claims he asked the jail to call the court, trial court denies new trial; held: while incarcerated defendant has a duty to make reasonable efforts to inform court of his situation, State v. Garza, 150 Wn.2d 360 (2003), here there is unrefuted evidence that defendant tried to call but failed, thus trial court should have retracted its proper preliminary finding of voluntary waiver and grant mistrial, see: State v. Thurlby, 184 Wn.App. 918 (2014), 184 Wn.2d 618 (2015); I.

State v. Francisco, 107 Wn.App. 247, 255-56 (2001)

Defendant does not have right to be present at a jury view, State v. Perkins, 32 Wn.2d 810, 861 (1949), as a jury view is not part of the trial and has no evidentiary value, State v. Much, 156 Wash. 403, 413-14 (1930); I.

State v. Chapple, 145 Wn.2d 310 (2001)

Disruptive defendant may be excluded from courtroom at trial and sentencing where trial court warns that continued behavior would lead to removal, disruption warrants removal, trial court considers alternatives to complete removal; court may rely upon counsel to convey to defendant that he can reclaim his right to be present upon assurances of proper behavior and that he may waive his right to testify by refusing to properly conduct himself during trial, Illinois v. Allen, 25 L.Ed.2d 353 (1970), State v. Hemenway, 122 Wn.App. 787, 797 (2004); affirms State v. Chapple, 103 Wn.App. 299 (2000), State v. Thompson, 190 Wn.App. 838 (2015), State v. Davis, 195 Wn.2d 571 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Garza, 150 Wn.2d 360 (2003)

Defendant fails to appear during trial, calls to say he was on his way, court waits five minutes then makes preliminary determination of voluntary absence and proceeds to trial, after verdict court learns defendant was incarcerated, defendant claims he asked arresting officer to advise court he "can't make it in;" held: trial court's preliminary determination of voluntary absence was an abuse of discretion as defendant's telephone call and subsequent failure to appear established that "the judge could reasonably have presumed that something outside [defendant's] control was delaying him," at 369; incarceration does not establish a per se involuntary absence; where an incarcerated defendant establishes that s/he "genuinely tried but failed to contact the court," and defendant's efforts were reasonable, court must retract its preliminary finding of voluntary waiver and grant a mistrial (dicta), State v. Atherton, 106 Wn.App. 783 (2001), State v. Cobarruvias, 179 Wn.App. 523 (2014), State v. Thurlby, 184 Wn.App. 918 (2014), 184 Wn.2d 618 (2015); where preliminary determination of voluntary absence was in error, subsequent determination of failure to make reasonable efforts to contact the court does not cure error; reverses State v. Garza, 112 Wn.App. 312 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Rooks, 130 Wn.App. 787, 795-801 (2005)

Ex parte chambers conference for defense counsel to seek withdrawal due to conflict of interest is not a critical stage requiring defendant's presence, see: State v. Berrysmith, 87 Wn.App. 268 (1997); I.

State v. Wilson, 141 Wn.App. 597, 603-06 (2007)

Chambers conference with counsel and a juror to inquire about her impartiality does not require defendant's presence, United States v. Gagnon, 84 L.Ed.2d 486 (1985), State v. Bremer, 98 Wn.App. 832, 834-35 (2000), State v. Berrysmith, 87 Wn.App. 268, 273 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 306 (1994), *but see: State v. State v. Pruitt, 145 Wn.App. 784 (2008)

Drug court defendant waives jury, confrontation, right to call witnesses, right to challenge admissibility of evidence, following termination trial court, in defendant's absence, conducts bench trial; held: finding defendant guilty is not a mere formalization of a decision, distinguishing State v. Corbin, 79 Wn.App. 446 (1995), procedure in absence of defendant is "simply unfair," at 800 ¶ 47; I.

State v. Anene, 149 Wn.App. 944 (2009)

During trial recess, defendant attempts suicide, is comatose, trial court resumes trial claiming defendant voluntarily absented himself; held: trial court was not obliged to order competency evaluation since comatose person is clearly incompetent, but continuing with trial of an incompetent person was a due process violation, Drope v. Missouri, 43 L.Ed.2d 103 (1975); II.

State v. Rodriguez Ramos, 171 Wn.2d 46 (2011)

Where appellate court remands for sentencing court to state the specific term of community placement, remand hearing is ministerial since length of community placement is dictated by statute and defendant need not be present, but where sentencing court is directed to specify the "special terms" of community placement, then court is to exercise discretion and defendant has right to be present and to be heard; 9-0.

State v. Jasper, 158 Wn.App. 518, 538-43 (2010)

Trial court answers jury inquiry with instruction to reread instructions without notifying parties and in defendant's absence; held: because the questions did not raise issues involving disputed facts, court's response did not involve a critical stage, and thus defendant's Sixth Amendment right was not violated, Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 306 (1994), State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 96-102 (2013), cf.: State v. Koss, 158 Wn.App. 8, 16-19 (2010), 181 Wn.2d 493 (2014), but CrR 6.15(f)(1) requires defendant's presence during any communication between the court and the jury, State v. Langdon, 42 Wn.App. 715, 717 (1986); where the trial court's response is '"negative in nature and conveys no affirmative information,'" State v. Russell, 25 Wn.App. 933, 948 (1980), State v. Safford, 24 Wn.App. 783, 794 (1979), State v. Johnson, 56 Wn.2d 700 (1960), State v. Burdette, 178 Wn.App. 183, 198-202 (2013), then error is harmless, State v. Miller, 184 Wn.App. 637, 646-48 (2014); I.

State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874 (2011)

Trial court communicates with counsel by e-mail regarding hardship excuses of jurors, defense agrees, by e-mail, to excuse jurors without questioning them, no evidence established that counsel consulted with defendant, trial court excuses jurors; held: jury selection is a critical stage, Gomez v. United States, 490 U.S. 858, 873, 104 L.Ed.2d 923 (1989), questioning jurors whom the court excused might have revealed that one or more were not prevented by reasons of hardship from participating, defendant had a right to consult with counsel regarding jury selection, cf.: State v. Slert, 181 Wn.2d 598 (2014), State v. Miller, 184 Wn.App. 637 (2014), State v. Jones, 185 Wn.2d 412, 426-27 (2016), but see: State v. Wilson, 174 Wn.App. 328, 347-50 (2013), State v. Slert, 186 Wn.2d 869 (2016), error was not harmless; 5-4.

State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 253-55 (2011)

Potential juror 25 arrives late and is sworn for voir dire in absence of defendant, no objection is taken, juror is seated, at end of testimony an alternate is excused; held: failure to swear a juror is trial error to which defense must object, defense could have requested that alternate juror replace juror 25, thus even if all peremptories were used defense waived issue, State v. Tharp, 42 Wn.2d 494, 499-51 (1953), see: State v. Lloyd, 138 Wash. 8 (1926); II.

Det. of Morgan, 161 Wn.App. 66 (2011), 180 Wn.2d 312 (2014)

Two years before SVP trial, court holds chambers conference, on the record, in absence of defendant to discuss the process of deciding a forced medication hearing; held: respondent does not have the right to be present at a chambers meeting in which only legal matters are discussed; II.

State v. Applegate, 163 Wn.App. 460 (2011), 181 Wn.2d 452 (2014)

Trial court proposes to conduct individual voir dire in chambers, defense counsel states he has no objection, court asks if his client agrees, counsel says he's speaking for himself as counsel, counsel then speaks with defendant and states defendant has no objection, on appeal argues that court is still obliged to engage in Boneclub analysis on the record; held: defendant's statement, through counsel, that he personally had no objection to the closure after discussion with counsel constitutes a knowing, voluntary and intelligent waiver of defendant's right to public proceeding; I.

State v. Bennett, 168 Wn.App. 197, 201-07 (2012)

At close of evidence, judge and counsel meet in chambers to finalize instructions, after which court states on record that parties went over instructions, defense takes no objections to instructions; held: defendant's right to be present exists where s/he may actively contribute to his or her defense, State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874, 883 (2011), Snyder v. Massachusetts, 291 U.S. 97, 105-07, 78 L.Ed. 674 (1934), overruled on other grounds, Malloy v. Hogan, 378 U.S. 1, 12 L.Ed.2d 653 (1964), right to a public trial exists so that public's mere presence passively contributes to the fairness of the proceedings; while a defendant's right to be present may not be necessary for ministerial or administrative matters, State v. Irby, supra. at 881, public's presence may insure the fairness of such proceedings, but see: Det. Of Ticeson, 159 Wn.App. 374, 383-86 (2011); some chambers conferences may be ministerial, others may involve disputed issues including asking the court to rule on instructions; here, sparse record indicates that the chambers conference was merely ministerial that did not give rise to defendant's or public's right to open proceedings, see: State v. Wilson, 174 Wn.App. 328, 347-50 (2013); II.

State v. Wilson, 174 Wn.App. 328, 333-47 (2013)

Before being brought to court, jurors fill out questionnaire which, apparently, includes hardship queries, two jurors report illnesses and injuries, bailiff, pursuant to trial court's written policy allowing administrative staff to excuse jurors pretrial for illness, excuses them, trial court offers to bring them into court for voir dire, defense "did not pursue this offer;" held: applying the State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 70-78 (2012) "experience and logic test," the public trial right historically has not attached to statutory hardship excuses, RCW 2.36.100(1), public access does not play a significant positive role in hardship excuses, openness during pre-voir-dire juror excusal proceedings would not enhance the basic fairness and the appearance of fairness essential to public confidence in the system; II.

State v. Frawley, 181 Wn.2d 452 (2014)

Consolidated cases: defendant Frawley waives right to be present for individual voir dire in chambers and waives right to have public present during general voir dire in courtroom, no Boneclub analysis; in State v. Applegate, court asks courtroom if any party or member of the public objects to some juror questioning in chambers, no one objects, counsel asserts that defendant himself does not object, judge announces that public can come to chambers and leaves outer door open, questions one juror in chambers, no Boneclub analysis; in lead opinion, two justices rule that defendant can waive both right to be present and public trial right if it's in writing and court engages in Boneclub analysis, thus trial court is reversed in both cases; two justices concur, writing that defendant can waive without Boneclub analysis if waiver is knowing, voluntary and intelligent and, apparently, need not be written; three justices would hold that defendant can waive without Boneclub analysis; one justice dissents and would hold that failure to object to closure is a waiver; affirms State v. Frawley, 140 Wn.App. 713 (2007) and State v. Applegate, 163 Wn.App. 460 (2011), but see: State v. Hernandez, 6 Wn.App.2d 422 (2018).

State v. Brown, 178 Wn.App. 70, 75-78 (2013)

Defendant is present when jurors are sworn to answer questions, case is then continued to a date certain and venire is stricken, three weeks later defendant fails to appear for trial, court swears and seats a new venire which convicts defendant in absentia, nine years later defendant is apprehended and sentenced; held: trial may be held without defendant's presence as long as defendant was present when the jury panel is sworn for voir dire, State v. Crafton, 72 Wn.App. 98, 103 (1993) so that defendant "is given an unambiguous and readily discernible sign that trial is beginning," which need not refer to the same panel; defendant witnesses the swearing of the first venire and received notice that a new panel would be called on a date certain, thus trial had commenced, CrR 3.4; 2-1, II.

State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 96-102 (2013)

During deliberations, jury asks for masking tape and a tape measure, trial court provides them without consulting counsel; held: responding to a jury request for non-evidentiary materials is not a critical stage of a trial at which defendant must be present, State v. Jasper, 158 Wn.App. 518, 538-39, aff'd, 174 Wn.2d 96, 121-24 (2012), see: State v. Fehr, 185 Wn.App. 505, 512-13 (2015), but see: State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501, 508-09 (1983); II.

State v. Burdette, 178 Wn.App. 183, 198-202 (2013)

Jury reports it is deadlocked, judge sends note telling them to continue deliberations, apparently in the absence of defendant and counsel; held: while defendant had the right to be present to consider whether or not to move for a mistrial, the jury note did not say it was hopelessly deadlocked, thus error was harmless; II.

State v. Cobarruvias, 179 Wn.App. 523 (2014)

Chronically late defendant fails to appear for morning session, court waits 28 minutes and concludes defendant was voluntarily absent and trial proceeds, later man in audience says defendant took his son to the hospital, after conviction defendant is arrested on warrant, documents that he was at hospital, moves for a new trial, court concludes he made no effort to contact counsel or court, confirms absence was voluntary; held: court must apply a presumption against waiver of presence, State v. Garza, 150 Wn.2d 360, 367-68 (2003), to each of three factors: (1) sufficient inquiry to justify finding voluntary absence, (2) preliminary finding of voluntariness, (3) afford defendant adequate opportunity to explain before sentencing, State v. Thomson, 123 Wn.2d 877, 881 (1994), State v. Washington, 34 Wn.App. 410, 414 (1984), but see: State v. Thurlby, 184 Wn.App. 918 (2014), 184 Wn.2d 618 (2015); here, trial court had sufficient basis for initial finding of voluntary absence as it was unexplained, but because trial court erred in not expressly considering defendant's showing "in light of the 'overarching' presumption against waiver," court abused discretion in denying new trial; III.

State v. Miller, 184 Wn.App. 637, 646-48 (2014)

Judge discovers that a juror had inadvertently sat through the preceding legal argument and, before voir dire, excuses the juror during recess in absence of defendant; held: no chance court would have allowed juror to remain on this jury, both counsel agreed, even if defendant had right to be present it was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874, 885 (2011); II.

State v. Thurlby, 184 Wn.2d 618 (2015)

Defendant fails to appear on second day of trial, court issues warrant, officers search, court checks with hospitals and jails, after waiting a half day court makes preliminary finding that defendant was voluntarily absent and proceeds, after conviction defendant is arrested, at sentencing she explains that her mother had surgery, she tried to call the clerk, judge finds voluntary waiver of right to be present; held: court properly inquired into circumstances of defendant's nonappearance and made preliminary finding of voluntariness, provided defendant opportunity to explain, indulged "every reasonable presumption against waiver" when performing each step, determined that reason for failure to appear was a "product of choice" and thus voluntary, trial court need not expressly state that it is considering the presumption against waiver, State v. Garza, 150 Wn.2d 360 (2003), State v. Thomson, 123 Wn.2d 877, 881 (1994), but see: State v. Cobarruvias, 179 Wn.App. 523 (2014); affirms State v. Thurlby, 184 Wn.App. 918 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Love, 183 Wn.2d 598 (2015)

Exercise of for cause challenges orally on the record at the bench and peremptory challenges silently by exchanging a list and striking names in open court with defendant at counsel table does not violate defendant's right to be present, State v. Anderson, 194 Wn.App. 547 (2016), State v. Effinger, 194 Wn.App. 554, 564-65 (2016), see also: State v. Marks, 185 Wn.2d 143 (2016); affirms State v. Love, 176 Wn.App. 911 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Fehr, 185 Wn.App. 505, 512-13 (2015)

Jury asks to rehear audio that had been admitted and heard during trial, counsel but not defendant are present when court agrees, without objection, to allow jury to rehear it; held: where audio evidence was admitted at trial and played to the jury with defendant present a subsequent proceeding to determine whether to replay it during deliberations is not a time where defendant's substantial rights may be affected so right to be present is not violated; II.

State v. Fort, 190 Wn.App. 202, 225-26 (2015)

Waiver of right to be present during chambers voir dire is not a waiver of public trial right, State v. Frawley, 181 Wn.2d 452 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Morris, 176 Wn.2d 157 (2012); III.

State v. Thompson, 190 Wn.App. 838 (2015)

Where defendant is removed from courtroom due to disruptive behavior and has been informed he may return if he agrees that conduct will improve, State v. Chapple, 145 Wn.2d 310 (2001), trial court need not inform him at the beginning of each trial day that he may return upon a promise of appropriate behavior, see: State v. Davis, 195 Wn.2d 571 (2020); II.

State v. Jones, 185 Wn.2d 412 (2016)

Selection of alternates off the record does not violate defendant's right to be present where defense does not object, State v. Slert, 186 Wn.2d 869 (2016), distinguishing State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874 (2011); reverses, on other grounds, State v. Jones, 187 Wn.App. 87 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Slert, 186 Wn.2d 869 (2016)

During voir dire of defendant's third trial counsel and court go over jury questionnaire regarding pretrial publicity and excuse some jurors in chambers without defendant's presence, defendant raises issue for first time on appeal; held: defendant waived error by not objecting in the trial court, distinguishing State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874 (2011); since the excused jurors would have been disqualified anyway error, if any, was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt; reverses State v. Slert, 189 Wn.App. 821 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Effinger, 194 Wn.App. 554 (2016)

Sidebar peremptory and for cause challenges not on the record do not violate defendant's right to be present, State v. Love, 183 Wn.2d 598 (2016), State v. Anderson, 194 Wn.App. 547 (2016); 2-1, II.

State v. Schierman, 192 Wn.2d 577 (2018)

For cause challenges in chambers without defendant is constitutional error, harmless here as defendant was present during questioning of the jurors, did not object to chambers conference, although one juror challenged by defense actually sat on the jury defense does not show prejudice, at ¶¶ 38-41, State v. Slert, 181 Wn.2d 598 (2014), distinguishing, State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874 (2011).

State v. Hernandez, 6 Wn.App.2d 422 (2018)

Defense counsel sends sealed ex parte motion to withdraw which is granted by trial court in camera, defense does not include letter in clerk's papers on appeal; held: "gap in the record" is a litigation strategy, and thus there is an inadequate record to establish error; dicta: not all motions to withdraw require the client's consultation and opportunity to object, defendant's presence is not requied when trial counsel is obliged to withdraw under rules of professional conduct, State v. Rooks, 130 Wn.App. 787, 799-800 (2005); III.

State v. Davis, 195 Wn.2d 571 (2020)

At trial, after court denies pro se defendant's motions for continuance and standby counsel, defendant becomes extremely disruptive, demands to leave, after court cautions defendant and informs him that if he leaves he will not be able to cross-examine state's witnesses defendant continues to disrupt and leaves courtroom, trial proceeds, on appeal defendant claims right to be present was violated and he was denied right to counsel to cross-examine witnesses; held: " trial judges who are confronted with disruptive, 'contumacious, stubbornly defiant defendants must be given sufficient discretion to meet the circumstances of each case. No one formula for maintaining the appropriate courtroom atmosphere will be best in all situations,'" Illinois v. Allen, 397 U.S. 337, 343, 90 S. Ct. 1057, 25 L. Ed. 2d 353 (1970), State v. Chapple, 145 Wn.2d 310, 318 (2001); while court would have been justified in removing defendant due to his disruptive behavior, here defendant's repeated demands to absent himself amounts to a waiver of the right to be present, see: State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 381 (1991); reverses State v. Davis, 6 Wn.App. 43 (2018); 6-3.

State v. Wright, 18 Wn.App.2d 725 (2021)

During deliberations jury inquired "if we are unable to reach a verdict on a count, what happens," court meets with counsel, absent defendant, who agree to tell the jury to read two instructions; held: because the jury question did not amount to a declaration of deadlock, the parties did not discuss how long the court will allow deliberations before declaring a mistrial, State v. Burdette, 178 Wn.App. 183, 198-202 (2013), defendant's presence "had no relation. reasonably substantial, to his opportunity to defend," thus court did not violate right to be present, Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 305-07 (1994); 2-1, I.

State v. Anderson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 497 P.3d 880 (2021)

Defendant appears by video at sentencing, does not object, raises constitutional right to be present for the first time on appeal; held: failure to object waives right to be physically present, State v. Jones, 185 Wn.2d 412 (2016); III.

PRESUMPTIONS/INFERENCES*

State v. Burt, 24 Wn.App. 867 (1979)

Instruction that speeding equals reckless driving is approved as long as it is permissive because presumed fact follows proven fact beyond a reasonable doubt in this case, State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 709-13 (1994); but see: State v. Holcomb, 31 Wn.App. 398 (1982), Schwendeman v. Wallenstein, 971 F.2d 313 (9th Cir. 1992), see: State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98 (1995), : State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016).

In re Gilbert, 27 Wn.App. 286 (1980)

Statutory presumption in RCW 9.41.030 that being armed without a concealed weapons permit is prima facie evidence of intent to commit crime of violence is unconstitutional, State v. Rogers, 83 Wn.2d 553 (1974), retroactively.

State v. Simmons, 28 Wn.App. 243 (1980)

Malice instruction, as defined in statute, may be constitutional presumption; distinguishes State v. Johnson, 23 Wn.App. 506 (1979).

State v. Savage, 94 Wn.2d 569 (1980)

Whenever a presumption is employed in a criminal case, jury must be instructed (1) defendant has no more than a burden of producing "some evidence" to rebut, (2) ultimate burden of proving every element is on state, thus jury is free to reject the presumption of intent to kill from proof of assault with a weapon if jury is properly instructed as to the workings of a presumption, but see: State v. Washington, 66 Wn.App. 228 (1992).

Bellevue v. Kinsman, 34 Wn.App. 786 (1983)

Malice instruction with inference is improper, State v. Johnson, 23 Wn.App. 605 (1979); I.

Seattle v. Smiley, 41 Wn.App. 189 (1985)

Jury is instructed, pursuant to Seattle prostitution loitering ordinance, SMC § 12A.10.010, that it may consider whether the actor repeatedly beckoned to passersby, stopped motor vehicles, etc.; held: not a comment on the evidence, and is a permissive presumption which does not unconstitutionally shift burden to city, County Court of Ulster Cy. v. Allen, 60 L.Ed.2d 777 (1979); I.

Seattle v. Gellein, 112 Wn.2d 58 (1989)

DUI jury instruction that city must prove that defendant "had 0.10 percent . . . alcohol in his blood as shown by chemical analysis of his breath" creates an unconstitutional mandatory presumption, reversing Seattle v. Gellein, 48 Wn.App. 341 (1987); 7-2.

---

* See: BURGLARY for "inference of intent" cases

Carella v. California, 105 L.Ed.2d 865 (1989)

Jury instructions that intent to commit theft is presumed if one who has leased property fails to return it within 20 days violate due process, In re Winship, 25 L.Ed.2d 368 (1970), Sandstrom v. Montana, 61 L.Ed.2d 39 (1979), see: State v. Fleming, 155 Wn.App. 489, 503-05 (2010); 9-0.

Seattle v. Slack, 113 Wn.2d 850 (1989)

Circumstances set forth in Seattle prostitution loitering ordinance, SMC § 12A.10.010(B), which trier of fact may consider (beckoning, waving, circling area in motor vehicle, is known prostitute) do not create mandatory presumption, as nothing required defendant to explain conduct, State v. VJW, 37 Wn.App. 428 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Washington, 64 Wn.App. 118 (1992)

In reckless endangerment 1°/drive-by shooting case, RCW 9A.36.045, inference of reckless conduct from unlawful discharge of a firearm from moving vehicle is rationally related to unlawful discharge of a firearm, distinguishing State v. Jackson, 112 Wn.2d 867 (1989); I.

State v. Washington, 66 Wn.App. 228 (1992)

Inference instruction which states (1) that inference may be rebutted by evidence satisfactory to the trier of fact and (2) that with or without such evidence, the jury is free to disregard the inference, is proper, State v. Handran, 113 Wn.2d 11, 19 (1989), distinguishing State v. Savage, 94 Wn.2d 569 (1980); I.

State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 709-13 (1994)

Inference that speeding equals reckless driving does not violate due process where state's evidence established speed of 80-100 m.p.h., tailgating, racing, State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 468-70 (1999), but see: Schwendeman v. Wallenstein, 971 F.2d 313 (9th Cir. 1992), Hanna v. Riveland, 87 F.3d 1034 (9th Cir. 1996), cf.: State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997), see also: State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016); where an inference is not the sole and sufficient basis for finding of guilt, test is whether presumed fact flows from proven fact by a preponderance, whether inference meets this standard must be determined on a case-by-case basis, see: County Court of Ulster Cy. v. Allen, 60 L.Ed.2d 777 (1979) State v. Reid, 74 Wn.App. 281, 284-9 (1994), State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Kenyon, 123 Wn.2d 720 (1994)

Inference that speeding equals reckless driving does not violate due process where state's evidence established speed of 43-60 m.p.h. in a 30 m.p.h. zone on wet road with a flat tire and two over-inflated tires plus loss of control, swaying, State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 709-13 (1994), State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 468-70 (1999), cf.: State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997), see also: State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Reid, 74 Wn.App. 281, 284-9 (1994)

Complainant gives defendant money to pay expenses, defendant pays some back, is charged with theft after four years; at trial, court instructs, "fraudulent intent may be inferred from the retention for a long period of time of property to which one has no right"; held: because the instruction allowed the jury to infer, as the sole source of evidence, that defendant had a fraudulent intent, state was relieved of its burden of proving an element, thus inference, under these facts, was improper, distinguishing State v. Bryant, 73 Wn.2d 168 (1968), State v. Sullivan, 129 Wash. 42, 51 (1924); III.

State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997)

Inference that speeding equals reckless driving is improper where evidence establishes that defendant traveling 10-20 mph over speed limit of 50 mph, distinguishing State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 709-13 (1994), State v. Kenyon, 123 Wn.2d 720 (1994); "it will . . . be the rare case where speed alone will justify the giving of the permissive inference instruction," but see: State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 468-70 (1999), see: State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 871-3 (1998)

Knowledge instruction with permissive inference, WPIC 10.02, may be given, State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700, 710 (1990), but trial court must determine that inferred fact (knowledge) flows from proven fact (in bail jumping case, notice) by a preponderance unless the only basis for finding an element is the inference, State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98, 108-9 (1995), determined on a case-by-case basis, State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 712 (1994), State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 739-42 (2009); I.

State v. Bencivenga, 137 Wn.2d 703 (1999)

Defendant is observed in dark clothing at 3:30 am in snowstorm prying open door of restaurant, tells police he sought to win a bet that he could remove a pin on the door, is convicted of attempted burglary; held: if finder of fact concludes there is an alternative reasonable explanation for defendant's actions, then evidence is insufficient, but here trial court discarded one possible inference when it concluded that the inference was unreasonable under the circumstances; nothing forbids a court from logically inferring intent from proven facts as long as it is satisfied the state has proved intent; trial court's finding that defendant's story was not believable and that defendant acted with intent was a rational inference based on the evidence, State v. Chacky, 177 Wash. 694, 696 (1934), State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98, 102 (1995), State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1, 10-11 (1985), see: State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 468-70 (1999)

Instruction that jury may infer recklessness from speeding was proper where evidence established that defendant traveled twice the speed limit, drove erratically, ran a four-way stop and cut across lanes to negotiate a corner, distinguishing State v. Delmarter, 68 Wn.App. 770 (1993), State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997), see: State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016); II.

State v. Mertens, 148 Wn.2d 820 (2003)

Commercial fishing statute, former RCW 77.15.500, prohibits taking shellfish while acting for commercial purposes without a license, "commercial purposes" is defined as exceeding bag limit by possession of more than three times the amount of fish allowed, former RCW 77.15.110, appellant claims this creates an impermissible presumption; held: because statute merely equates conduct (possession of more than three times limit) with an element (commercial purposes), no presumption is created, rather the offense is a strict liability crime; the statute does not presume, it defines, State v. Franco, 96 Wn.2d 816, 823 (1982), State v. Crediford, 130 Wn.2d 747 (1996); reverses State v. Mertens, 109 Wn.App. 291 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819 (2006)

Juvenile, who sometimes lives at mother's home but was not living there on day in question, is seen breaking mother's locked bedroom door, items are found to be missing from bedroom, no evidence produced that mother expressly forbade son from entering bedroom, trial court finds respondent "failed to rebut the statutory presumption that he broke into his mother's bedroom with the intent to commit some crime;" held: trial court treated the statutory inference of intent, RCW 9A.52.040, as mandatory, shifting burden to respondent, State v. Deal, 128 Wn.2d 693 (1996), thus reversed; reverses State v. Cantu, 123 Wn.App. 404 (2004); 8-1.

State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306, 315-17 (2010)

In drug delivery case, instruction that acting knowingly is also established by acting intentionally, WPIC 10.02, does not create a conclusive presumption, State v. Gerdts, 136 Wn.App. 720, 728 (2007), acknowledging that State v. Goble, 131 Wn.App. 194, 202-04 (2005) is limited to its particular facts, at 317 n. 7, see: State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799, 807-17 (2010); 5-4.

State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799, 807-17 (2010)

In assault 3° case where to convict instruction requires state to prove that defendant knew victim was a police officer, but see: State v. Brown, 140 Wn.2d 456, 470 (2000), and court defines assault as an intentional act, then the knowledge instruction that reads "acting knowingly…is established if a person acts intentionally" creates an impermissible mandatory presumption, but see: State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306 (2010); harmless here, see: Yates v. Evatt, 500 US 391, 403-06, 114 L.Ed.2d 432 (1991); I

PRETRIAL RELEASE/BAIL/BOND

Westerman v. Cary, 125 Wn.2d 277 (1994)

Superior court general order directing that all domestic violence arrestees be detained without bail until a first appearance does not violate CONST. art. I, § 20; 8-0.

State v. Paul, 95 Wn.App. 775 (1999)

Defendant posts cash bail, appears at revocation hearing, court forfeits bail and applies it to restitution; held: an appearance discharges bail; when a defendant satisfies bail conditions by appearing, the bail may not be forfeited; "if the state wants bail to serve a dual purpose, it must express such purpose on the record," State v. Ransom, 34 Wn.App. 819, 824 (1983); III.

Matter of Marriage of Bralley, 70 Wn.App. 646 (1993)

Court issues civil contempt warrant for failure to appear at child support hearing, cash bail is posted by third party, respondent fails to appear again, trial court forfeits bail without notice to the poster; held: cash bail is conclusively presumed to be the property of the accused and thus may be forfeited without notice; I.

Butler v. Kato, 137 Wn.App. 515 (2007)

Trial court cannot require AA meetings and alcohol treatment as conditions of release in DUI case absent evidence that defendant would fail to appear, CrRLJ 3.2(b)(7), or commit a violent crime, CrRLJ 3.2(a)(2), -(e), see also: State v. Rose, 146 Wn.App. 439 (2008); I.

State v. Rose, 146 Wn.App. 439 (2008)

Trial court imposes urinalysis as condition of pretrial release; held: absent evidence that drug use is a good indicator that defendant would fail to appear, court may not require a UA as a condition of release, see: Butler v. Kato, 137 Wn.App. 515 (2007), cf.: State v. Olsen, 189 Wn.2d 118 (2017); II.

State v. Barton, 181 Wn.2d 148 (2014)

For purposes of pretrial release court may not set cash-only bail, must provide option of surety bond, CONST., art. 1, § 20; 9-0.

State v. Huckins, 5 Wn.App.2d 457 (2018)

In domestic violence case, trial court sets bond at $1000 finding that there is a prior domestic violence case and thus there is a danger defendant will commit a violent crime but has no reason to believe defendant won't appear; held: court properly exercised discretion by concluding that there was a substantial danger defendant would commit a violent crime if released but erred in not making a finding that less-restrictive conditions, other than monetary bail, would not protect the safety of the community, CrR 3.2(d); money bail may only be imposed if no less restrictive condition or combination of conditions would reasonably assure the safety of the community, CrR 3.2(d)(6), see: State v. Smith, 84 Wn.2d 498, 505 (1974), State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019); II.

State v. Stevens County District Court Judge, 194 Wn.2d 898 (2019)

Superior Court may conduct preliminary appearance hearings for misdemeanors filed in District Court regardless of District Court's objection, CrR 3.2.1(d)(1); 9-0.

State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019)

Court need not enter written findings regarding pretrial release but must make a record that it considered less restrictive alternatives and defendant's financial resources, CrR 3.2(b)(7), (d)(6), State v. Huckins, 5 Wn.App.2d 457 (2018); here, victim's statement that defendant had held a gun to her head, defendant's escape history, lack of employment and "mental health issues" support denial of personal recognizance and finding of dangerousness; II.

State v. Jeglum, 8 Wn.App.2d 960 (2019)

Court has discretion to forfeit cash bail upon a failure to appear even after entry of judgment and sentence; III.

State v. Reisert, 16 Wn.App.2d 321 (2021)

CrR 3.2.1 requiring a preliminary appearance within 48 hours after arrest only applies to an accused arrested without a warrant; I.

Pers. Restraint of Sargent, 20 Wn.App.2d 186 (2021)

Court may detain a defendant without bail if charged with any class A felony regardless of SRA sentence range as maximum penalty is life, CONST. art. I, § 20, RCW 10.21.040; facts of the alleged crime itself may be sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence a propensity for violence; II.

PRIOR CONVICTIONS/ER609

State v. Eaton, 24 Wn.App. 143 (1979)

Convictions for a subsequent crime can be used to impeach if defendant is brought to trial in the order in which the offenses were committed; II.

State v. Safford, 24 Wn.App. 783 (1979)

Can't impeach witness with prior where it was deferred and dismissed, see: Blevins v. Department of Labor and Industries, 21 Wn.App. 366 (1978); I.

State v. Roberts, 25 Wn.App. 830, 837-38 (1980)

Where prior conviction is a burglary reduced to trespass, cannot impeach with burglary; I.

State v. Meyer, 26 Wn.App. 119 (1980)

Canadian convictions are admissible unless defendant can show he was sentenced to jail and that counsel was required under Canadian law; II.

State v. Alexis, 95 Wn.2d 15 (1980)

In ruling on the admissibility of a prior conviction, court must weigh length of record, remoteness of prior, nature of prior, age and circumstances of defendant, centrality of the credibility issue, impeachment value of the prior crime; 8-0.

State v. Coles, 28 Wn.App. 563 (1981)

Details of crimes of which defendant has been previously convicted are not admissible; limited to fact of convictions, type of crime, and punishment imposed, State v. McBride, 192 Wn.App. 859 (2016); II.

State v. Thompson, 95 Wn.2d 888 (1981) , overruled, on other grounds, State v. Calegar, 133 Wn.2d 718 (1997)

State need not prove validity of guilty plea to use conviction to impeach, distinguishing State v. Holsworth, 93 Wn.2d 148 (1980); a conviction is improper impeachment where the offering party does not produce the record of conviction showing on its face that the witness had counsel, State v. Weygandt, 20 Wn.App. 599 (1978), see: State v. Phillips, 94 Wn.App. 313 (1999), Lackawanna County Dist. Attorney v. Coss, 149 L.Ed. 2d 608 (2001), Daniels v. United States, 149 L.Ed.2d 590 (2001), but see: State v. Perrett, 86 Wn.App. 312, 320-1 (1997), State v. Gimarelli, 105 Wn.App. 370, 375 n. 3 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Tharp, 96 Wn.2d 591 (1981)

Evidence of a prior conviction as Goebel evidence is admissible, but trial court must make a record of weighing probative vs. prejudicial value; harmless here.

State v. Anderson, 31 Wn.App. 352 (1982)

Murder 1° defendant may be impeached by prior murder 2° convictions; I.

State v. White, 31 Wn.App. 655 (1982)

At defendant's theft trial, defendant is impeached with prior perjury conviction which is subsequently reversed and dismissed; held: it is error to impeach the defendant by evidence of a prior conviction which is subsequently reversed because of insufficient evidence, error was not harmless; I, 2-1.

State v. Gibson, 32 Wn.App. 217 (1982)

Within court's discretion to permit impeachment by prior burglary and taking and riding convictions, and that defendant had previously been determined to be an habitual criminal; I.

State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445 (1982)

Fourteen-year-old felony conviction held admissible where defendant offered testimony of his good character, ER 404(a)(1); extensive discussion of "open door" policy and character evidence; III.

State v. Moore, 33 Wn.App. 55 (1982)

On remand per State v. Moore, 29 Wn.App. 354 (1981), the trial court reaffirmed its earlier conclusion that defendant's prior robbery conviction was admissible to impeach his testimony in the present robbery trial; held: pre-trial motion in limine leading to final ruling that robbery conviction would be admissible at trial and offer of proof as to what defendant's testimony would have been at trial if the prior had been excluded properly preserved record; trial court abused its discretion because no tenable ground exists for allowing impeachment; three factors weigh against impeachment: (1) identity of present and prior offenses, (2) robbery has slight probative value re: truthfulness of defendant, and (3) defendant's defense could be presented only through his testimony; on remand, trial court may consider permitting impeachment of defendant by unnamed prior, cf.: State v. King, 75 Wn.App. 899, 904-13 (1994); I.

State v. Renfro, 96 Wn.2d 902 (1982)

Where defense opens door to prior conviction on direct of defendant, further inquiry is proper on cross.

State v. Davenport, 33 Wn.App. 704 (1983)

Burglary conviction may be used to impeach in burglary case; court may instruct jury that prior conviction may be considered to determine credibility, even over defendant's objection, see also: State v. Dow, 162 Wn.App. 324, 332-35 (2011); I.

State v. Harvey, 34 Wn.App. 737 (1983)

Within discretion of court to permit impeachment by prior robbery conviction in robbery trial; I.

State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865 (1983)

Prior burglary may be used to impeach in robbery trial; III.

State v. Turner, 35 Wn.App. 192 (1983)

Robbery is a crime involving dishonesty, and is thus admissible to impeach under ER 609(a)(2); declines to follow State v. Zibell, 32 Wn.App. 158 (1982); I.

State v. Delker, 35 Wn.App. 346 (1983)

Intimidating a witness is a crime involving dishonesty, admissible to impeach, ER 609(a)(2); I.

State v. Johnson, 35 Wn.App. 380 (1983)

Grand larceny involves dishonesty, ER 609(a)(2); I.

State v. Hunter, 35 Wn.App. 708 (1983)

Promoting prostitution may be admitted to impeach defendant in burglary trial; I.

State v. Gerard, 36 Wn.App. 7 (1983)

Juvenile convictions, ER 609(d), are admissible only if party seeking their admission presents reasons other than impeachment; I.

State v. Kidd, 36 Wn.App. 503 (1983)

Arson defendant is impeached with prior reckless burning; held: trial court failed to make any record to establish how prior conviction is probative of defendant's credibility; further, similarity of offenses is prejudicial, State v. Renfro, 96 Wn.2d 902, 908 (1982); harmless here; I.

State v. Pam, 98 Wn.2d 748 (1983)

There is a "strong presumption" against the admissibility of a prior conviction identical to that for which defendant is on trial; 5-4.

State v. Latham, 100 Wn.2d 59 (1983)

Trial court grants motion in limine to preclude impeachment of defendant by prior drug conviction, after voir dire, court reverses itself to permit impeachment, defense moves for mistrial, arguing defendant was precluded from questioning jurors on bias re: drug use; held: error for court to reverse its final ruling, harmless here; 7-2.

Luce v. United States, 83 L.Ed.2d 443 (1984)

Pursuant to Fed. R. Evid. 609(a), defendant must testify at trial to preserve issue; accord: State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), see: State v. Phillips, 160 Wn.App. 36 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Saldano, 36 Wn.App. 344 (1984)

Robbery is a crime of dishonesty, ER 609(a)(2), distinguishing State v. Moore, 33 Wn.App. 55, 60 (1982), State v. Zibell, 32 Wn.App. 158, 164 (1982), and is admissible to impeach defendant charged with assault 2°; I; but see: State v. Burton, 101 Wn.2d 1 (1984).

State v. Porter, 36 Wn.App. 451 (1984)

At trial, defendant moves in limine to prohibit impeachment by prior conviction, ER 609; trial court refuses to rule until it hears defendant's testimony; defendant testifies, is impeached without objection; held: defendant is entitled to a ruling on priors before he takes the stand, State v. Hill, 83 Wn.2d 558 (1974), State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 843 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004), waived here, State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 646-49 (2002), see: Ohler v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 826 (2000); I.

State v. Bonefield, 37 Wn.App. 878 (1984)

Forgery is a crimen falsi offense, ER 609(a)(2); accord: State v. McLean, 58 Wn.App. 422 (1990); III.

State v. Martinez, 38 Wn.App. 421 (1984)

Trial court prohibits defense from impeaching assault victim's testimony with 18-year-old UIBC conviction; held: excluding impeachment evidence of a prosecution witness's stale prior conviction does not violate defendant's right of confrontation; Division I creates a balancing test, permitting court to consider state's interest in ensuring that witnesses are not discouraged from testifying for fear of having a prior conviction brought forward, cf.: State v. Perrett, 86 Wn.App. 312, 320-1 (1997).

State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889 (1984)

A pre-trial motion in limine seeking to preclude impeachment by prior convictions, ER 609, is preserved for appellate purposes, reversing State v. Austin, 34 Wn.App. 625 (1983), State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 646-49 (2002), see: Ohler v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 826 (2000), but see: State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 843 (2003) aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004); issue may be determined by trial court and need not be determined at omnibus hearing, disapproving State v. Koloske, 34 Wn.App. 882 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 101 Wn.2d 113 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989)

Court must weigh probative vs. prejudicial effect of priors on the record, specifying factors considered, reversing contrary language in State v. Thompson, 95 Wn.2d 888 (1981); factors to be weighed are: (1) necessity of hearing defendant's side of the story; (2) type of crime, (3) remoteness, (4) similarity, (5) age and circumstances of defendant, (6) whether defendant testified at prior trial, and (7) length of defendant's record; state has burden to show probative value exceeds inherent prejudicial effect; reverses State v. Jones, 33 Wn.App. 372 (1982); 9-0; see: State v. Begin, 59 Wn.App. 755 (1990), State v. King, 75 Wn.App. 899, 904-13 (1994), State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701 (1997).

State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984)

Where prior conviction is deemed admissible, inquiry is limited to fact of conviction, type of crime and punishment, State v. Coles, 28 Wn.App. 563 (1981), cross-examination exceeding these bounds is irrelevant and prejudicial, State v. McBride, 192 Wn.App. 859 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 42 Wn.App. 425 (1985)

Felony marijuana conviction is not admissible under ER 609(a)(2) as it does not qualify as crimen falsi, but may be admissible under ER 609(a)(1); II.

State v. Pfeifer, 42 Wn.App. 459 (1985)

Filing fraudulent proof of insurance claim, RCW 48.30.230, is crimen falsi offense, admissible to impeach, ER 609(a)(2), State v. Burton, 101 Wn.2d 1, 4-5 (1984); I.

State v. Burgess, 43 Wn. App 253 (1986)

Where evidence of prior offense is admissible pursuant to ER 404, there is little additional prejudice from allowing admission of the convictions to impeach, ER 609; see: State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989); II.

State v. Harris, 44 Wn.App. 401 (1986)

Trial court should balance, on the record, probative value vs. prejudicial effect of prior convictions to impeach a defense witness, ER 609, harmless here; I.

State v. Newton, 109 Wn.2d 69 (1987)

Trial court may not look to facts of prior crime to determine if it is admissible as impeachment, ER 609(a)(2), but may only consider statutory elements to determine if offense involved dishonesty, but see: State v. Schroeder, 67 Wn.App. 110 (1992), State v. Black, 86 Wn.App. 791 (1997), State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 846-50 (2014); 5-4.

State v. Allen, 50 Wn.App. 412 (1988)

Where defendant seeks to impeach state's witness with prior conviction, court may not consider prejudice to state, ER 609; trial court may exclude reference to the specific crime; I.

State v. Hopson, 113 Wn.2d 273 (1989)

Where witness testifies as to prior convictions and said testimony is stricken, within discretion of trial court to deny mistrial if irregularity was not serious enough to materially affect the result, State v. Garcia, 177 Wn.App. 769 (2013), see: State v. Mathes, 22 Wn.App. 33 (1978), cf.: State v. Young, 129 Wn.App. 468 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989)

Not all convictions admissible under ER 404(b) are also automatically admissible under ER 609, overruling, in part, State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745, 766 (1984); to preserve an ER 609 issue, defendant must testify, Luce v. United States, 83 L.Ed.2d 443 (1984), see: State v. Phillips, 160 Wn.App. 36 (2011), overruling, in part, State v. Pam, 98 Wn.2d 748 (1983), State v. Lefever, 102 Wn.2d 777, 35 Wn.App. 729 (1984), State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889 (1984), see also: State v. Kimp, 87 Wn.App. 281 (1997); harmless error standard for ER 609(a) issues is nonconstitutional, overruling State v. Jones, 101 Wn.2d 113 (1984), State v. Harris, 102 Wn.2d 148 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 909 (1990), aff'd, on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 51 (1993)

UIBC is a theft offense, and therefore is per se admissible for impeachment, ER 609(a)(2), citing State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989); see: State v. McLean, 58 Wn.App. 422 (1990), State v. Gomez, 75 Wn.App. 648 (1994); III.

State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531 (1991)

Crimes of theft involve dishonesty and are per se admissible for impeachment, ER 609(a)(2), overruling State v. Burton, 101 Wn.2d 1 (1984), and overruling, in part, State v. Newton, 109 Wn.2d 69 (1987); 6-3; retroactive, State v. Eisenman, 62 Wn.App. 640 (1991).

State v. McKinsey, 116 Wn.2d 911 (1991)

Possessing stolen property is a crime of dishonesty, ER 609(a)(2), overruling State v. Harris, 102 Wn.2d 148 (1984), State v. Zibell, 32 Wn.App. 158 (1982); but see: State v. Mitchell, 117 Wn.2d 521, 536 (1991); 7-2.

State v. Watkins, 61 Wn.App. 552 (1991)

Burglary 2° is not per se admissible to impeach, State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531 (1991), unless the information or judgment and sentence unambiguously reveal that defendant's criminal intent was to commit theft, State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 846-50 (2014), cf.: State v. Schroeder, 67 Wn.App. 110 (1992); fact that defendant testified on direct about the prior conviction, after trial court ruled that the burglary is admissible, does not invoke invited error doctrine; harmless here; I.

State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992)

Admission of nine-year-old burglary convictions to impeach in burglary case is not error where defendant's credibility was crucial, state had no direct evidence to impeach it, and priors were introduced as unnamed felonies; I.

State v. Schroeder, 67 Wn.App. 110 (1992)

A prior burglary is admissible to impeach as a crimen falsi offense, ER 609(a)(2), where crime intended to be committed following unlawful entry or remaining was theft, State v. Watkins, 61 Wn.App. 552, 557 (1991); trial court may look to underlying facts in a prior burglary case to determine if underlying crime was theft, State v. Black, 86 Wn.App. 791 (1997), distinguishing State v. Newton, 109 Wn.2d 69, 71 (1987), but see: State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 846-50 (2014); II.

State v. O'Dell, 70 Wn.App. 560 (1993)

Parole revocation is "confinement imposed for that conviction" for purposes of the ten-year washout provision of ER 609(a); I.

State v. Hettich, 70 Wn.App. 586 (1993)

Forgery convictions which were subsequently dismissed (presumably following deferred sentence) are admissible to impeach absent an express "pardon, annulment, certificate of rehabilitation, or other equivalent procedure," ER 609(c), but see: State v. Safford, 24 Wn.App. 783 (1979); I.

State v. Trepanier, 71 Wn.App. 372 (1993)

Taking and riding a motor vehicle, RCW 9A.56.070, is a crimen falsi offense, whether committed by the taker or the rider; I.

State v. Roche, 75 Wn.App. 505-9 (1994)

Trial court must weigh all factors, State v. Alexis, 95 Wn.2d 15, 19 (1980), to admit priors under ER 609(a)(1); failure to balance prejudice vs. probative value is error; unnecessarily cumulative prior convictions are more prejudicial, State v. Jones, 101 Wn.2d 113, 121-2 (1984); harmless here; I.

State v. Gomez, 75 Wn.App. 648 (1994)

Analysis of Alexis factors: (1) a long record favors exclusion, as "unnecessarily cumulative" priors could lead jury to convict based on history rather than charge, State v. Jones, 101 Wn.2d 113, 120-2 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State v. Brown, 111 Wn.2d 124, adhered to on reh'g, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), (2) the older a conviction, the less probative it is of defendant's credibility, Jones, supra, at 121; court should evaluate each prior conviction and examine its remoteness in time from the current charge and the other convictions to determine its bearing on credibility, (3) greater the similarity of crimes to charge, greater the prejudice, (4) the younger the defendant was at prior convictions, the more likely it is that prejudicial effect will outweigh probative value or that there may be extenuating circumstances the trial court should consider; defendant should present extenuating circumstances, (5) centrality of credibility is an unclear factor, and (6) impeachment value of prior: defendant's character may not be considered; limiting state to using unnamed priors to impeach may reduce prejudice, State v. White, 43 Wn.App. 580 (1986), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992), aff'd on other grounds, 123 Wn.2d 51 (1993), State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 843 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004), but is not a substitute for Alexis balancing, State v. Jones, 75 Wn.App. 899, 904-13 (1994), State v. Gonzales, 83 Wn.App. 587, 592-6 (1996), State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701, 712 (1997); I.

State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 283-35 (1996)

Under ER 609(1), cross-examination regarding prior convictions is limited to the fact of conviction, type of crime and punishment, State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772, 776 (1984), cross exceeding these bounds is irrelevant and likely to be unduly prejudicial, State v. McBride, 192 Wn.App. 859 (2016), harmless here in light of curative instruction; 9-0.

State v. Wilson, 83 Wn.App. 546 (1996)

The fact that prior convictions will increase the sentence range on the current offense is not a factor to be considered in admitting priors to impeach, ER 609(a)(1); here, VUCSA prior should not have been admitted as there was a theft conviction, ER 609(a)(2), and eyewitness testimony as sufficient alternative bases to impeach, State v. Millante, 80 Wn.App. 237, 246 n.3 (1995), State v. Stockton, 91 Wn.App. 35, 42 (1998), but see: State v. Thompson, 95 Wn.2d 888, 892 (1981); 2-1, I.

State v. Gonzales, 83 Wn.App. 587 (1996)

Once court has balanced Alexis factors in favor of admissibility of a prior conviction to impeach, then court may consider unnaming the convictions as a means to lessen the prejudice arising from the similarity of the prior and current crimes, State v. King, 75 Wn.App. 899, 908 (1994), State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 843 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004), but see: State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701, 712 (1997); I.

Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997)

In federal felon in possession of firearm trial, defense offers to stipulate that defendant was convicted of a felony, moves to exclude name of the crime, government declines to stipulate, trial court admits the name of the prior felony to prove the prior crime element; held: under Fed. R. Evid. 403 analysis, unfair prejudice of nature of prior conviction outweighs probative value, thus trial court abused discretion in not excluding the nature of the prior, even though the evidence was relevant; accord: State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 61-3 (1998), State v. Rivera, 95 Wn.App. 132 (1999), cf.: State v. Gladden, 116 Wn.App. 56 (2003), State v. Ortega, 134 Wn.App. 617, 623-25 (2006), State v. Taylor, 193 Wn.2d 691 (2019), s*ee: State v. Humphries*, 181 Wn.2d 708 (2014); 5-4.

State v. Perrett, 86 Wn.App. 312, 320-1 (1997)

During interview with defense and prosecutor, state's witness admits to a prior shoplift conviction in another state, trial court excludes it absent certified copy of conviction, ER 609(a)(2); held: where nonparty witness admits to a prior crimen falsi conviction, trial court may not exclude it even without record of conviction, as there can be no prejudice to defendant, distinguishing State v. Martz, 8 Wn.App. 192, 195-6 (1973); see: State v. Thompson, 95 Wn.2d 888 (1981), cf.: State v. Martinez, 38 Wn.App. 421 (1984); II.

State v. Clarke, 86 Wn.App. 447 (1997)

Defendant is charged with murder in 1986, flees, is apprehended and tried in 1995, seeks suppression of 1983 robbery conviction as it is more than ten years old, ER 609(b); held: a defendant who has been a fugitive should receive no benefit from fleeing, fugitive status tolls the time limitation; I.

State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701, 706-13 (1997)

VUCSA convictions are not crimes of dishonesty, thus ER 609(a)(2) does not apply, State v. Jones, 101 Wn.2d 113, 122-23 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 546 (1991), and, in general, are not probative of a witness's veracity under ER 609(a)(1), at 710, State v. Calegar, 133 Wn.2d 718 (1997), State v. Saunders, 91 Wn.App. 575 (1998); to admit prior convictions under ER 609(a)(1), trial court must state, for the record, the factors to assess whether probative value outweighs prejudice and how the proffered evidence is probative of veracity, State v. King, 75 Wn.App. 899, 913 (1994); unnaming the felony is not a substitute for the balancing process, State v. Rivers, 129 Wn.2d 697, 706 (1996), courts should not admit unnamed felonies unless the court can articulate how unnaming the felony still renders it probative of veracity, at 712, State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 843 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Jackson, 91 Wn.App. 488 (1998)

A guilty plea or verdict of guilty is a conviction, RCW 9A.46.100, for purposes of enhancement of a willful violation of a court order from a misdemeanor to a felony, RCW 10.99.040(4), even before judgment and sentence is entered; I.

Ohler v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 826 (2000)

Trial court rules in limine that prior conviction is admissible, defendant testifies and, on direct, admits the prior, seeks review of order in limine; held: where a defendant tactically offers a prior conviction in direct examination, she cannot challenge the admission of such evidence on appeal, but see: State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 646-49 (2002), State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 843 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Bankston, 99 Wn.App. 266 (2000)

Witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120, is a crime of dishonesty; III.

State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 430-39 (2001)

Where prior convictions are more than ten years old, trial court must make specific findings on the record as to the particular facts and circumstances it has considered in determining that probative value substantially outweighs prejudicial impact, ER 609(b), even if convictions were for crimes of dishonesty; II.

Seattle v. Patu, 108 Wn.App. 364, 376-78 (2001), aff'd, on other grounds, 147 Wn.2d 717 (2002)

Where defendant is impeached with a prior conviction, limiting instruction, WPIC 5.05, must be given if requested, State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), State v. Newton, 109 Wn.2d 69, 74 (1987), see also: State v. Dow, 162 Wn.App. 324, 332-35 (2011); I.

State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221, 231-34 (2003)

Trial court denies defense request to impeach state's witness with 20-year old forgery, ER 609, defense maintains on appeal that ruling violates right to confront; held: prior conviction more than ten years old is presumed irrelevant absent specific facts or circumstances from which trial court can determine that the conviction has probative value that outweighs its prejudicial effect, State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1, 15 (1983), cf.: State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179, 186 (1996), alleged constitutional error was not manifest as not "unmistakable, evident or indisputable" State v. Lynn, 67 Wn.App. 339, 345 (1992); I.

State v. Teal, 117 Wn.App. 831, 843-44 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004)

Where the prior conviction is the same as the current offense, referring to the prior as an unnamed crime of dishonesty will be sufficient to render it probative on the issue of defendant's veracity, State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701, 711-12 (1997), State v. Rivers, 129 Wn.2d 697, 707 (1996), but it is within the trial court's discretion; I.

State v. Young, 129 Wn.App. 468, 471-79 (2005)

In murder and VUFA trial, court agrees to stipulation that jury would not be told that defendant had been previously convicted of a violent crime, Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997), trial court reads information to jury which includes language that defendant was convicted of assault 2º, denies mistrial; held: disclosure of a prior conviction of a violent crime in a violent crime trial is inherently prejudicial, failure of court to offer curative instruction was error, State v. Hopson, 113 Wn.2d 273, 284 (1989), see: State v. Garcia, 177 Wn.App. 769 (2013); I.

State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 116-17 (2006)

State must give advanced written notice of intent to use a prior more than ten years old to impeach a witness, harmless here; III.

State v. Ortega, 134 Wn.App. 617 (2006)

In felony violation of protection order case, trial court declines defendant's stipulation that, if he is convicted, the conviction will be a felony in an attempt to keep from the jury the two prior no contact order convictions; when defendant testifies, trial court instructs that priors are admissible solely to determine credibility; defendant testifies briefly on direct, in response to open ended question on cross, defendant asserts he had been falsely arrested for assault, trial court admits conviction of assault; held: statutory language requiring proof of two prior no contact order convictions to enhance to a felony cannot be unfairly prejudicial, thus neither State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63 (1998) nor Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997) require the trial court to accept a stipulation to avoid statutory language, State v. Gladden, 116 Wn.App. 561 (2003), see: State v. Taylor, 193 Wn.2d 691 (2019), while the limiting instruction here was not wholly accurate, the prior convictions were considered by the jury for purpose of proving the predicate offenses, so evidence was sufficient to convict; open-door rule may apply where defendant makes statements on cross that are not directly responsive to question, see: State v. Avendano-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706, 714 (1995); I.

State v. Roswell, 165 Wn.2d 186 (2008)

Where a crime is raised to a felony due to a prior conviction, here communicating with a minor for immoral purposes, RCW 9.68.090, trial court does not abuse its discretion by refusing to bifurcate and permit a jury waiver on the prior conviction element, State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020), distinguishing Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997), State v. Gladden, 116 Wash.App. 561, 566, 66 P.3d 1095 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Dow, 162 Wn.App. 324, 332-36 (2011)

Trial court need not sua sponte give limiting instruction when priors are admitted to impeach, see also: State v. Davenport, 33 Wn.App. 704 (1983), Seattle v. Patu, 108 Wn.App. 364, 376-78 (2001), aff'd, on other grounds, 147 Wn.2d 717 (2002); defense counsel's failure to request limiting instruction may be tactical and thus not ineffective assistance, State v. Embry, 171 wn.App. 714, 762-63 (2012), State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708, 719-21 (2014); II.

State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 846-50 (2014)

Trial court admits prior burglary 2° to impeach as a crime of dishonesty, finding crime defendant intended to commit was theft based upon police report as information, certification for determination of probable cause, statement of defendant on plea of guilty and judgment and sentence are silent as to defendant's intent; held: court may not go beyond the court file when determining the predicate crime of a prior burglary conviction and may not rely upon hearsay, State v. Watkins, 61 Wn.App. 552 (1991), State v. Black, 86 Wn.App. 791 (1987), State v. Newton, 109 Wn.2d 69 (1987), cf.: State v. Schroeder, 67 Wn.App. 110 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708 (2014)

Failure of defense counsel to request a limiting instruction regarding a prior conviction is presumed to be a reasonable tactical decision; 6-3.

State v. McBride, 192 Wn.App. 859 (2016)

Where a prior conviction is admissible to impeach a witness, ER 609(a), the witness may not be questioned regarding the facts leading to the prior conviction, ER 608(b), State v. Coles, 28 Wn.App. 563 (1981), State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 283-35 (1996), even if the facts might have been admissible as impeachment had there been no prior conviction; III.

State v. Jones, 12 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020)

Trial judge permits state to impeach defendant's testimony with two prior unlawful possession of firearms (VUFA) convictions; held: state did not prove that VUFA convictions are probative of truthfulness, trial court failed to state why the priors were probative of truthfulness or how priors outweighed prejudicial effect, " State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701, 706 (1997); few convictions not involving dishonesty have probative value, State v. Jones, 101 Wn.2d 113, 118-19 (1984), overruled on other grounds by State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520, 554 (1989); II.

PRIVILEGES

State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.2d 176 (1980)

No physician-patient or psychotherapist-patient privilege applies where child abuse is involved; see: State v. Fagalde, 95 Wn.2d 730 (1975), RCW 5.60.060(4), State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876, 892 (1995), State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 485-7 (1998), State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Eaton, 30 Wn.App. 288 (1981)

Court required defendant to testify before psychiatrist could testify as to intoxication defense as opinion was based upon defendant's recounting of incident; held: reversed, as violates intent of ER 703 and possibly defendant's Fifth Amendment rights; II.

State v. Dorman, 30 Wn.App. 351 (1981)

No attorney-client privilege where no legal advice was sought or given, no fee was paid, attorney merely acting as co-signer; test is client's belief that s/he is consulting with a lawyer in that capacity and his manifested intention to seek professional legal advice.

State v. Holland, 30 Wn.App. 366 (1981)

Statements made to a psychiatrist for a juvenile decline hearing may not be used against defendant at trial, but waived by defense here; "governmental information privilege," RCW 5.60.060(5), applies to defendants in criminal cases; I.

State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009)

Marital privilege/spousal testimonial privilege, RCW 5.60.060(1) does not apply where wife is testifying about crimes committed by husband against a child of which wife is parent or guardian; wife acting as babysitter, even briefly, meets tests of guardianship, State v. Waleczek, 90 Wn.2d 746 (1978), State v. McKinney, 50 Wn.2d 56 (1987), State v. Wood, 52 Wn. 159 (1988), see: State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 72-75 (2018); II.

State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982)

Juvenile retains court-appointed psychiatrist for decline hearing, JuCR 9.3(a); after decline, defendant raises insanity defense; held: where defendant raises insanity defense, statements uttered by defendant in the context of a psychiatric examination are removed from the reach of the Fifth Amendment and the attorney-client privilege, State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457 (1990), see concurring opinion at 29, State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004), Kansas v. Cheever, 571 U.S. 87, 187 L.Ed.2d 519 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Bonaparte, 34 Wn.App. 285 (1983)

Marital privilege does not bar a spouse's statements offered to demonstrate probable cause; II.

State v. Mines, 35 Wn.App. 932 (1983)

Defense moved for production of psychiatric records of a state's witness who was committed to a mental hospital before trial; court reviewed records in camera and ruled they did not justify disclosure and that there was nothing therein inconsistent with the witness's testimony; held: physician-patient privilege, RCW 5.60.060(4), protects the records; I.

State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983)

Communications between a defendant and a defense psychiatrist are protected by the attorney-client privilege, which is waived when an insanity defense is raised, State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457 (1990); disclosure of defense psychiatrist's report to the prosecutor does not waive the privilege at trial, and testimony is still excludable.

State v. Jollo, 38 Wn.App. 469 (1984)

Pursuant to plea negotiations, statutory rape defendant obtains psychological evaluation, a copy of which is provided the state; when no plea is entered, state uses defendant's admissions to psychologist in its case-in-chief; held: statements to psychologist made at state's request during plea negotiations are inadmissible even if defendant "breaches" plea bargain, ER 410; I.

State v. Davis, 38 Wn.App. 600 (1984)

Trial court's reliance upon defendant's post-arrest silence as evidence of guilt or to impeach defendant's testimony violates defendant's right to due process; Division I declines to follow Fletcher v. Weir, 61 L.Ed.2d 490 (1982) on state due process grounds; 2-1.

State v. Rinaldo, 102 Wn.2d 749 (1984)

Qualified journalist-source privilege exists in criminal cases; 5-4.

United States v. Doe, 79 L.Ed.2d 552 (1984)

Grand jury subpoenas business records of sole proprietorship; held: while the contents of voluntarily-prepared records are not privileged under the Fifth Amendment, the act of producing documents may be privileged and can only be compelled pursuant to grant of use immunity; 6-3.

State v. Espinosa, 47 Wn.App. 85 (1987)

Denial of discovery of rape crisis center's interviewing notes with victim following in camera review will only be reversed for abuse of discretion, RCW 70.125.065; presence of a police officer during the interview does not waive the privilege, State v. Gibson, 3 Wn.App. 596 (1970), RCW 70.125.060, distinguishing State v. Wilder, 12 Wn.App. 296 (1975); I.

State v. Kilponen, 47 Wn.App. 912 (1987)

In burglary case, victim-wife may testify against defendant-husband if state proves that the underlying crime intended by defendant was a crime of personal violence against wife; III.

State v. Balkin, 48 Wn.App. 1 (1987)

Where a defendant plea bargains to submit to specific treatment, then an evaluation by the organization intended to provide that treatment is not privileged; I.

State v. Lougin, 50 Wn.App. 376, 381 (1988)

Where nonparty witness expresses intent to claim Fifth Amendment privilege, trial court may not permit the witness to refuse to testify altogether; proper procedure is to allow questioning, and for court to rule on each claim of privilege to individual questions, State v. Levy, 156 Wn.App. 709, 731-33 (2006), see: State v. Delgado, 105 Wn.App. 839 (2001); I.

State v. Ahlfinger, 50 Wn.App. 466 (1988)

Where rape crisis center employee uses notes to refresh recollection while testifying, ER 612 does not mandate disclosure to defense counsel absent in camera review, RCW 70.125.065, nor does failure to disclose violate confrontation clause; I.

State v. Coe, 109 Wn.2d 832 (1988)

Where defendant makes admissions to a psychiatrist for purposes of sentencing, anticipating that the communication will be revealed in court, it is not privileged, State v. Sullivan, 60 Wn.2d 214, 223-24 (1962).

State v. Maxon, 110 Wn.2d 564 (1988)

No parent-child testimonial privilege for confidential communications exists, see: State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 878 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Harris, 51 Wn.App. 807 (1988)

There is no mental health counselor-client privilege conferred by RCW 71.24.035(4)(h), at least where client was expressly informed that statements were not confidential, and client does not claim that he believed that they were confidential, State v. Side, 105 Wn.App. 787 (2001); I.

State v. Sheppard, 52 Wn.App. 707 (1988)

Identity of client and fee arrangements are generally not protected by attorney-client privilege, RCW 5.60.060(2), unless the person invoking the privilege can show that a strong probability exists that disclosure would implicate the client in the very criminal activity for which legal advice was sought, Baird v. Koerner, 279 F.2d 623, 95 A.L.R.2d 303 (9th Cir., 1960), Seventh Elect Church v. Rogers, 102 Wn.2d 527 (1984); I.

State v. Nuss, 52 Wn.App. 735 (1988)

As soon as defendant asserts diminished capacity as a defense, state is entitled to psychiatric reports from defense, court may order defendant to be interviewed by a state's expert; see also: Pers. Restraint of Rice, 118 Wn.2d 876, 894 (1992); defense counsel may be present at the interview, but see: State v. Cochran, 102 Wn.App. 480, 483-86 (2000), but may not participate; defendant may not claim Fifth Amendment privilege at interview as it is waived by raising the defense, although may be reclaimed if defense withdraws diminished capacity defense and does not call experts; but see: State v. Hutchinson, 111 Wn.2d 879 (1989); III.

State v. Hartley, 56 Wn.App. 562 (1990)

Defendant entered NGI plea, withdrew it, was convicted, then argued that he did not validly waive NGI plea; at hearing, state calls defense counsel regarding counsel's advice;

attorney-client privilege does not apply to calling defense counsel, as disclosure of the fact that counsel has advised a client of the advantages and disadvantages of an NGI plea is unlikely to indirectly disclose client communications, State v. Chervenell, 99 Wn.2d 309 (1983); I.

State v. Cahoon, 59 Wn.App. 606 (1990)

Emergency medical technician (EMT) is informed by defendant, during examination for overdose, that drugs are in her kitchen, EMT calls police who seize drugs; held: information provided to EMTs and paramedics, in the absence of a physician, is not privileged, distinguishing State v. Gibson, 3 Wn.App. 596 (1970), RCW 5.60.060(4); see: State v. McCoy, 70 Wn.2d 964 (1967); physician-patient privilege of a statement does not preclude its use in furnishing probable cause for issuance of warrant, State v. Bonaparte, 34 Wn.App. 285, 289 (1983); III.

State v. Post, 118 Wn.2d 598 (1992)

Where psychologist advised defendant that interview was not confidential, and only one interview occurred, then the psychologist-patient privilege, RCW 18.83.110, is inapplicable, as defendant's subjective belief that he might receive treatment from psychologist was unrealistic, distinguishing State v. Sullivan, 60 Wn.2d 214, 222-26 (1962); accord: State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 531-3 (1996), cf.: State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002) ; 9-0.

State v. Stark, 66 Wn.App. 423 (1992)

County Health Officer, learning from HIV-positive defendant that he was engaging in unsafe sex, issues cease and desist order, RCW 70.24.024(3)(b), and, when defendant did not cease and desist, sought judicial enforcement through prosecutor, who filed criminal charges of assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.020(1)(e); defense motion to suppress physician's testimony and all information learned by prosecutor from physician is denied; held: RCW 70.24.034(1) authorizes public health officer to inform prosecutor of a person infected with a sexually transmitted disease who violates cease and desist order, distinguishing RCW 70.24.105, which prosecutor may use to enforce the civil order or to file criminal charges; II.

State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 878 (1992)

Spousal privileges, RCW 5.60.060(1), do not apply in a witness tampering case where the purpose of the tampering was to frustrate effective prosecution of a child sexual abuse case, see: State v. Maxon, 110 Wn.2d 564, 576 (1988); I.

State v. Hansen, 122 Wn.2d 712, 719-21 (1993)

Defendant calls an attorney to sue a judge, attorney tells defendant he won't represent him, defendant tells counsel he will "blow away" judge, attorney reports it, defendant is convicted of intimidating a judge, RCW 9A.72.160; held: no attorney-client relationship existed after counsel told defendant to find another lawyer, In re McGlothlen, 99 Wn.2d 515. 522 (1983); even if there was a relationship, privilege does not apply to client's remarks concerning the furtherance of a crime, fraud or contemplation of a future crime, State v. Richards, 97 Wash. 587 (1917), State v. Metcalf, 14 Wn.App. 232 (1975); counsel has an affirmative duty to warn judges of "true threats" made by clients, distinguishing Hawkins v. King Cy., 24 Wn.App. 338 (1979); affirms, in part, State v. Hansen, 67 Wn.App. 511 (1992); 7-2.

State v. Berkley, 72 Wn.App. 12 (1993)

Defendant may not be forced to testify to indigency to determine if breath test is admissible in DUI case; Fifth Amendment applies not only to the discovery of evidence but also to the admission of evidence already at hand; I.

State v. Tinkham, 74 Wn.App. 102 (1994)

Fifth Amendment privilege applies in presentence interview with sexual deviancy expert to determine future dangerousness, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002); I.

State v. Lopez, 74 Wn.App. 456 (1994)

Testifying defendant may be impeached with prior inconsistent statements he made to a psychiatrist in anticipation of a diminished capacity defense even if the defense is not ultimately raised at trial; III.

State v. Buss, 76 Wn.App. 760, 784-7 (1995)

Confession to a nonordained Catholic counselor is not privileged, RCW 5.60.060(3); confession outside a definitive confessional procedure, where the church has such a procedure, is not privileged, but see: State v. Martin, 91 Wn.App. 621 (1998); I.

State v. Hobble, 126 Wn.2d 283, 290-1 (1995)

To sustain a witness's claim of Fifth Amendment privilege, court must determine that danger of incrimination is substantial and real, not speculative; unless the answer would obviously and clearly incriminate the witness, the witness must establish a factual predicate from which the court can, by use of reasonable judicial imagination, conceive of a sound basis for the claim, Eastham v. Arndt, 28 Wn.App. 524, 531-32 (1981), State v. Lougin, 50 Wn.App. 376 (1988), see: Ohio v. Reiner, 149 L.Ed.2d 158 (2001); the answer need only furnish a link in the chain of evidence needed to prosecute, Seventh Elect Church v. Rogers (Gerald Rogers), 34 Wn.App. 96, 100 (1983), Hoffman v. United States, 95 L.Ed. 1118 (1951), see: State v. Fish, 86 Wn.App. 86-92 (1999); vague and speculative claims of counsel in camera that an admission on the use of an alias could be brought back to haunt defendant down the road if some possible unspecified crime were uncovered at some unspecified time in the future do not support the claim of privilege, Mason v. United States, 61 L.Ed. 1198 (1917); 7-2.

Jaffee v. Redmond, 135 L.Ed.2d 337 (1996)

Common law psychotherapist-patient privilege applies in federal court to a licensed social worker-counselor, Fed. R.Evid. 501; 7-2.

State v. Smith, 84 Wn.App. 813 (1997)

Following injury collision, defendant goes to hospital on his own for medical treatment where blood is drawn, prosecutor seeks to compel production of blood sample and medical records; held: physician-patient privilege, RCW 5.60.060(4), applies in civil actions and, here, public's interest outweighs benefits of the privilege, thus privilege does not apply to blood sample nor report of its alcohol content, State v. Stark, 66 Wn.App. 423, 438 (1992), In re

Juveniles A, B, C, D, E, 121 Wn.2d 80, 92 (1993); because defendant testified about how much he drank, injuries received and denied impairment at first trial (hung jury), he waived his privilege to conceal the records that could disprove his claims that he was not intoxicated; once a privilege is waived at a first trial, it cannot be regained on retrial; I.

State v. Modest, 88 Wn.App. 239, 246-8 (1997)

Defendant's wife testifies that defendant called her from jail and directed her to prostitute juveniles living in her home, defendant objects claiming marital privilege; held: an exception for the marital privilege is an action for a crime committed by a spouse against any child for whom the spouse is guardian, RCW 5.60.060(1), State v. Waleczek, 90 Wn.2d 746, 749 (1978), see: State v. Chenoweth, 188 Wn.App. 521, 525-31 (2015), State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 72-75 (2018), "guardian" should be interpreted liberally to include acts in loco parentis, assuming parental character or discharging parental duties, even for a short period of time to protect children from further mistreatment, thus exception applies here; III.

State v. Aquino-Cervantes, 88 Wn.App. 699 (1997)

During CrR 3.5 hearing, interpreter testifies, over objection, that, based upon her observations of defendant during attorney-client interviews and in open court, defendant understands both Spanish and English; held: language interpreters may not testify about communications or observations made during confidential attorney-client interviews, but may testify about observations made during open court, independent of interpreting privileged communications, GR 11(e), RCW 2.43.080, harmless here; II.

State v. Linden, 89 Wn.App. 184 (1997)

During defendant's testimony in which he denied using cocaine, state informs court it received a police report one day before confirming defendant was arrested for possession of cocaine, defense motion for suppression and mistrial denied; held: in spite of prosecutor's discovery violation, defendant's decision to testify was voluntary and intelligent, fact that he was unaware of the risk of impeachment does not invalidate the waiver of his Fifth Amendment privilege, Dutil v. State, 93 Wn.2d 84, 90 (1980); I.

State v. Ross, 89 Wn.App. 302 (1997)

Statement to paramedic in aid car is not privileged, as paramedic is not covered by RCW 5.60.060(4), State v. Vietz, 94 Wn.App. 870 (1999), see: RCW 10.58.010, and was not acting as agent of physician at time defendant made admission; I.

Swidler & Berlin v. United States, 141 L.Ed.2d 379 (1998)

Attorney-client privilege survives client's death; 6-3.

United States v. Balsys, 141 L.Ed.2d 575 (1998)

Fear of prosecution by a foreign government is not a basis to claim Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination; 7-2.

Mitchell v. United States, 143 L.Ed.2d 424 (1999)

Defendant pleads guilty, at sentencing co-defendant testifies for government, defendant does not testify, court notes defendant's failure to testify as a factor persuading court to rely upon testimony of co-defendant; held: guilty plea is not a waiver of the right not to testify at sentencing, as under the Fifth Amendment, incrimination is not complete until sentence is imposed and judgment is final, thus court may not draw adverse inference from defendant's silence at sentencing; 5-4.

State v. Martin, 137 Wn.2d 774 (1999)

Confession to an ordained minister is privileged, RCW 5.60.060(3), where the clergyman considers the statement to be confession within the meaning of the member of the clergy's religion and the member of the clergy feels enjoined by religion to receive defendant's penitential communications, irrespective of whether or not the communicant is a member of the faith, State v. Glenn, 115 Wn.App. 540 (2003), cf.: State v. Buss, 76 Wn.App. 780, 784-87 (1995); presence of a third party (here, defendant's mother) during confession will defeat the privilege (unless the person present is another member of the clergy or the person's presence is necessary for the communication), remanded to trial court to determine which statements were made when defendant and pastor were alone; fact that pastor discussed portions of defendant's confession does not vitiate the privilege, as only the communicant can waive it; affirms State v. Martin, 91 Wn.App. 621 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Vietz, 94 Wn.App. 870 (1999)

Statements to a licensed practical nurse are not privileged under the nurse-patient privilege statute, RCW 5.62.020, as privilege statutes should be strictly construed, State v. Ross, 89 Wn.App. 302 (1997); II.

Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 139 Wn.2d 166 (1999)

In a pre-SRA case, parole board may consider denial of guilt in denying parole, does not violate prisoner's privilege against self-incrimination, as criminal proceedings were terminated, State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 529 (1996), distinguishing State v. Garibay, 67 Wn.App. 773 (1992); reverses Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 91 Wn.App. 440 (1998); 8-1.

State v. Denton, 97 Wn.App. 267 (1999)

Marital privilege may be invoked where spouses were married in a church ceremony but never obtained a marriage license, absent a statute which declares a marriage invalid without a license; I.

Ohio v. Reiner, 149 L.Ed.2d 158 (2001)

Even though a witness denies all culpability, she may still have a valid Fifth Amendment privilege, Hoffman v. United States, 95 L.Ed. 1118 (1951), as one of the Fifth Amendment's "basic functions . . . is to protect innocent men . . . who otherwise might be ensnared by ambiguous circumstances," Grunewald v. United States, 1 L.Ed.2d 931 (1957), see: State v. Hobble, 126 Wn.2d 283, 290-1 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Donahue, 105 Wn.App. 67, 70-72 (2001)

Vehicular homicide defendant has collision in Washington but blood is drawn in Oregon hospital, physician-patient privilege is inapplicable in Oregon criminal proceedings; held: because Oregon was the state with the most significant relation to the communication, then Oregon's privilege law controls; II.

State v. Side, 105 Wn.App. 787 (2001)

At court-ordered anger management intake interview, defendant threatens judge; held: mental health program confidentiality provisions, RCW 71.05.390, do not create a testimonial privilege, State v. Harris, 51 Wn.App. 807, 813 (1988); statute provides for exception to report threats to law enforcement agencies; III.

State v. Delgado, 105 Wn.App. 839 (2001)

Defense calls severed co-defendant, who claims Fifth Amendment privilege, trial court does not require witness to claim privilege to each question, rather accepts witness's claim that he will refuse to answer all questions; held: while nonparty witness must normally claim privilege to each question, State v. Lougin, 50 Wn.App. 376, 381 (1988), but see: State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709, 731-33 (2006), where trial court has sufficient knowledge of the case and anticipated testimony, it may conclude that the witness could legitimately refuse to answer all relevant questions; II.

State v. Darden, 145 Wn.2d 612 (2002)

In drug case, surveillance officer testifies to his height from street and location relative to transaction observed but court overrules defendant's objection to the specific location; held: there is no surveillance location privilege, court's restriction violated defendant's right to confront, see: State v. Reed, 101 Wn.App. 704 (2000); reverses State v. Darden, 103 Wn.App. 368 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Crawford, 147 Wn.2d 424 (2002), rev'd, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004)

Where defendant invokes marital testimonial privilege, RCW 5.60.060(1), his spouse's hearsay statements may still be admitted against him, State v. Burden, 120 Wn.2d 371 (1992), see: State v. Kosanke, 23 Wn.2d 211 (1945), but see: State v. Clark, 26 Wn.2d 160, 168 (1946); 9-0.

State v. Glenn, 115 Wn.App. 540 (2003)

Defendant confesses to child molestation to church elder, who passes information on to pastor, then defendant attends meeting with church Council of Elders with both ordained and nonordained individuals, at their advice, defendant writes apology letters; held: for clergy-penitent privilege to apply, trial court must determine preliminarily, ER 104(a), if statements were made to a member of the clergy as a confession, RCW 5.60.060(3), State v. Martin, 91 Wn.App. 621, 632 (1998), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 774 (1999); where evidence shows that elder had performed a marriage ceremony, trial court's determination that he is clergy is supported by a preponderance; if religious organization considers statement to be a confession, then trial court can reasonably so find; even if defendant knows that church reports child abuse, if statement was given as a confession, it is inadmissible; if defendant authorized his attorney to depose the elder in presence of prosecutor, then he waived any privilege, Martin v. Shaen, 22 Wn.2d 505, 513 (1945); letters which defendant wrote and sent were not confessions, thus privilege does not attach, Dietz v. Doe, 131 Wn.2d 835, 844 (1997); II.

McKune v. Lili, 153 L.Ed.2d 47 (2002)

Prison sex treatment program, which obliges prisoners to accept responsibility for the crime for which they were sentenced and to complete a sexual history form detailing prior uncharged criminal offenses on pain of losing privileges and being transferred to a maximum security facility but does not extend sentence or deny good time does not violate Fifth Amendment, cf.: State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876 (1995), State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 523-29 (1996), but see: State v. Powell, 193 Wn.App. 112 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Wheat, 118 Wn.App. 435 (2003)

Drug court defendant's case is dismissed, trial court is informed that defendant had flunked a urine test, sets aside dismissal and convicts; held: confidentiality statutes, RCW 70.96A.150, 42 U.S.C. § 290dd, and regulations, 42 CF.R. § 2.35, preclude admissibility of treatment information absent a waiver; here, defendant waived for period of drug court involvement, upon dismissal that waiver expired, thus treatment records were inadmissible, dismissal must be reinstated; II.

State v. Godsey, 131 Wn.App. 278, 284-86 (2006)

Defendant, under arrest, is taken to hospital where medical personnel ask about drug use, defendant acknowledges using drugs; held: response to medical personnel was within physician-patient privilege, law officers present "were effectively hospital agents," admission of those statements to support possession of drug paraphernalia charge was error, State v. Gibson, 3 Wn.App. 596, 598-600 (1970); III.

State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244, 257-59 (2009)

In violation of no contact order case, trial court upholds wife's claim of marital privilege against her husband; held: spousal incompetency rule does not apply to a criminal action for a crime committed by one spouse against the other, RCW 5.60.060(1), State v. Thornton, 119 Wn.2d 578 (1992), no contact order violation is a crime committed by one spouse against another even if protected party consented to the contact; I.

State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378, 384-89 (2010)

Defendant testifies in defense case-in-chief, on cross court sustains objection to question as beyond the scope, permits prosecutor to call defendant in rebuttal; held: waiver of Fifth Amendment privilege extends only to cross-examination, see: State v. Robideau, 70 Wn.2d 994, 1001 (1967), State v. Hart, 180Wn.App. 297 (2014), error for court to allow state to call defendant, harmless here; III.

State v. Hyder, 159 Wn.App. 234, 245-53 (2011)

An admission to a sex offense treatment provider is admissible at trial, mandatory reporting statute, RCW 26.44.030, trumps client-psychologist privilege statute, RCW 18.83.110; privileges are disfavored in criminal cases, particularly in child sex abuse cases, State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876, 892-93 n.8 (1995); court should conduct an in camera review of complainant's CPS records before disclosing, Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 480 U.S. 39, 94 L.Ed.2d 40 (1987), but harmless where defense agrees that the parties may read the records without court view; obtaining a search warrant for counseling records without notice is not an abuse of process, Uniform Health Care Information Act, ch. 70.02, RCW, is not the exclusive means of obtaining medical records; II.

State v. Hart, 180 Wn.App. 297 (2014)

Defendant, charged with assault on police and harassment for sending threatening texts, testifies on direct about the assault but says nothing about texts, state is permitted to cross-examine about texts over objection that the cross was beyond the scope of direct, ER 611(b), does not object on Fifth Amendment grounds; held: allowing cross-examination on a joined count about which defendant does not testify on direct violates defendant's right to remain silent, see: State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378, 388 (2010); here, text messages were not relevant to the assault on the police; II.

Kansas v. Cheever, 571 U.S. 87, 187 L.Ed.2d 519 (2013)

Pursuant to statute court orders psychiatric evaluation, defense raises voluntary intoxication defense and calls expert, state calls court-ordered expert to rebut; held: where defendant puts his mental state at issue state may call a court-ordered expert to rebut which does not violated defendant's Fifth Amendment privilege, Buchanan v. Kentucky, 483 U.S. 402, 423–424, 97 L.Ed.2d 336 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Chenoweth, 188 Wn.App. 521, 525-31 (2015)

Spousal privilege exception, RCW 5.60.060(1) (2012), permitting testimony in proceedings involving a crime against "any child" of either spouse is not limited to minor children; II.

State v. Powell, 193 Wn.App. 112 (2016)

A condition of sentence requires defendant to enter sexual deviancy treatment, provider demands defendant's sexual history, defendant refuses claiming Fifth Amendment privilege, court sanctions with jail; held: penalty imposed in an effort to compel disclosure of incriminating information is a violation of defendant's Fifth Amendment rights where parties do not dispute that the disclosure would incriminate defendant, see: McKune v. Lili, 153 L.Ed.2d 47 (2002), : State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876 (1995), State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 523-29 (1996); II.

State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 72-75 (2018)

Teenage child sex victim sometimes babysat defendant and his wife's child, sometimes stayed overnight, trial court admits defendant's statement to his wife under guardian exception to spousal privilege statute, RCW 5.60.060(1); held: "guardian" is liberally construed under the marital privilege statute, State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009), State v. Waleczek, 90 Wn.2d 746 (1978), State v. Wood, 52 Wn. 159 (1988), State v. Modest, 88 Wn.App. 239, 246-68 (1997), even with older children or defendants who act as guardians for a short period of time, State v. Waleczek, 90 Wn.2d 746, 749 (1978); I.

State v. Rogers, 3 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018)

Defendant sends letter of apology and offer to pay her to drop charges to complainant's daughter who gives letter to complainant who gives the letter to defense counsel and tells prosecutor that she did so, counsel is then removed from case, court serves that lawyer with a subpoena duces tecum to produce the letter, lawyer moves to quash arguing that he learned of the letter from his client and thus the letter is privileged and that it is a confidence or secret, RPC 1.6, refuses to comply with subpoena, is held in contempt; held: lawyer did not obtain the letter as a result of direct or confidential communication with his client, even if client had some discussion with counsel about the letter it is not privileged, is not a confidence and even if it is a secret RPC 1.6(b) authorizes disclosure pursuant to a court order, distinguishing State ex. rel. Sowers v. Olwell, 64 Wn.2d 828 (1964); because the claim of privilege was made in good faith contempt is vacated, Seventh Elect Church in Israel v. Roger, 102 Wn.2d 527 (1984), Dike v. Dike, 75 Wn.2d 1, 448 (1968); I.

State v. Roach, 18 Wn.App.2d 98 (2021)

Husband and wife are co-defendants in severed trial, husband declines to invoke marital testimonial privilege, RCW 5.60.060(1) (2020), then, immediately before trial husband seeks to reassert the privilege, trial court allows wife to testify based upon state's detrimental reliance, having offered wife a plea bargain; held: the purpose of the privilege is marital harmony, nothing in the record indicates that there was a change in the spouses' marital harmony, nothing husband argues suggests that the reason for seeking to revoke the waiver had anything to do with the marital relationship, wife testified that they were separated, thus not allowing revocation of the waiver was not an abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514, 527-28 (2022)

A witness who has pleaded guilty and been sentenced generally gives up his or her privilege against self-incrimination, however a pending timely personal restraint petition that objectively gives rise to a good faith argument for postconviction relief extends the Fifth Amendment privilege; I.

PROBATION AND PAROLE/COMMUNITY CUSTODY

State v. Cyganowski, 21 Wn.App. 119 (1978)

No right to have trial before revocation hearing; II.

State v. Hultman, 92 Wn.2d 736 (1979)

If petition for revocation is filed within probation period, revocation hearing may be beyond probation period if it is pursued diligently, see: State v. Tucker, 171 Wn.2d 50 (2011); no credit for probation time is permitted; for SRA application, see: State v. Johnson, 54 Wn.App. 489 (1989), State v. Beer, 93 Wn.App. 539, 541-45 (1999); 5-4.

State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268 (1980)

Parole Board finding of not guilty does not bar prosecution in court, see: State v. Vasquez, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002).

State v. Lawrence, 28 Wn.App. 435 (1981)

Court cannot consider unproved allegation at revocation hearing and must permit defendant to present evidence at both fact-finding and disposition stages, see: State v. Dahl, 139 Wn.2d 678 (1999); I.

State v. Murray, 28 Wn.App. 897 (1981)

Where probation is revoked, court must enter written findings or an oral opinion indicating the evidence relied upon as well as the reasons for the revocation, but see: State v. Dahl, 139 Wn.2d 678 (1999); II.

State v. Campbell, 95 Wn.2d 954 (1981)

Defendant, pending revocation hearing, is committed for competency determination, during which probation appears to expire; state obtains extension of probation ex parte; held: probation period is tolled pending competency determination, thus it did not have to be extended; absent exigent circumstances, probationer must be given notice of a proposed extension of probation and of his/her right to a hearing with counsel; 9-0.

Avlonitis v. Seattle District Court, 97 Wn.2d 131 (1982)

District Court's jurisdiction is limited to the term of sentence actually imposed; where court sentences defendant to 30 days suspended, court cannot revoke probation after 30 days; district court can defer for one year and revoke and impose a jail term within that year; municipal courts may not impose probation for more than six months; overridden, RCW 3.66; see: State v. Alberts, 51 Wn.App. 450 (1988), State v. Holmberg, 53 Wn.App. 609 (1989); 8-0.

In re Phelan, 97 Wn.2d 590 (1982)

Where defendant is sentenced to prison, s/he is entitled to credit for time served against maximum sentence for all time served prior to imposition of sentence, including pre-trial detention, presentence detention and time served in jail as a condition of probation, State v. Poston, 117 Wn.App. 925 (2003), see: Pers. Restraint of King, 146 Wn.2d 658 (2002); overrules in part

State v. Wills, 68 Wn.2d 903 (1966) and State v. Monday, 12 Wn.App. 429, aff'd on other grounds, 85 Wn.2d 906 (1975); court should specify on judgment and sentence amount of credit to which defendant is entitled, but see: Postsentence Review of Combs, 176 Wn.App. 112 (2013); defendant is not entitled to credit against maximum sentence for nondetention probation time; parole board may not rewrite a sentence because it believes it was erroneous; 9-0.

State v. Hall, 35 Wn.App. 302 (1983)

Three-hour deferred sentence for robbery 2° conviction is invalid, as too short to permit rehabilitation; when probation is granted court must order defendant to report to probation officer, RCW 9.95.210; I.

Bearden v. Georgia, 76 L.Ed.2d 221 (1983)

In revocation proceedings for failure to pay fine or restitution, court must inquire into reasons for failure to pay and, if probationer made bona fide efforts to acquire resources to pay, court must consider alternative measures of punishment other than imprisonment; 9-0.

State v. Mahoney, 36 Wn.App. 499 (1984)

In 1976, defendant is sentenced to three years probation and appeals; 1978, conviction is affirmed; 1981, state files petition to revoke probation, trial court determines it lost jurisdiction in 1979; held: an appeal tolls the commencement of a probationary period until the mandate is issued, thus trial court had jurisdiction to revoke, State v. Robinson, 142 Wn.App. 649 (2008); II.

State v. Gann, 36 Wn.App. 516 (1984)

A defendant who has been committed as a sexual psychopath, RCW 71.06, pursuant to a petition, is entitled to due process protections, including counsel, in an extension of probation proceeding, distinguishing State v. Campbell, 95 Wn.2d 954 (1981); trial court maintains jurisdiction to civilly commit even after criminal jurisdiction lapses, RCW 71.06.030, 71.06.091; I.

State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1 (1984)

Parole officers may search a parolee's vehicle without a warrant to the extent necessitated by the legitimate demands of the parole process, see: State v. Rainford, 86 Wn.App. 431 (1997), PA. Bd. Of Parole v. Scott, 141 L.Ed.2d 344 (1998); 9-0.

In Re Boone, 103 Wn.2d 224 (1984)

Court cannot consider secret probation report, as defendant is entitled to notice and confrontation; court must enter findings of the evidence relied upon and the reasons for its decision; 7-0.

State v. Nelson, 103 Wn.2d 760 (1985)

In probation revocation hearing, probationer's right to confront and cross-examine is balanced against any good cause for not allowing confrontation, which may include official reports, probation reports, or other clearly reliable hearsay, State v. Badger, 64 Wn.App. 904 (1992), State v. Anderson, 88 Wn.App. 541 (1997), see: State v. Riddell, 75 Wn.2d 85 (1968), State v. S.S., 67 Wn.App. 800 (1992), State v. Dahl, 139 Wn.2d 678 (1999), State v. Abd-

Rahmaan, 154 Wn.2d 280 (2005), defense, at revocation hearing, does not object to hearsay, defense may not later claim a due process violation; failure of trial court to enter written findings is not error where trial court states findings on the record; 9-0.

State v. Davis, 43 Wn.App. 832 (1986)

Court reinstates defendant's probation believing he was to be extradited to another state, which subsequently declined to extradite, whereupon court revokes; held: extradition was an implied condition of probation, the nonoccurrence of which constitutes grounds for revocation; III.

Kelly v. Robinson, 93 L.Ed.2d 216 (1986)

Conditions imposed as part of a criminal sentence, including restitution, are not dischargeable in bankruptcy; 7-2; see: State v. Eyre, 39 Wn.App. 141 (1984).

State v. Lampman, 45 Wn.App. 228 (1986)

Exclusionary rule applies in probation revocation proceedings, CONST. Art. 1, § 7; probationer may be searched without a warrant where the police or probation officer has a well-founded suspicion that a probation violation has occurred, but see: State v. Winterstein, 168 Wn.2d 620 (2010), cf.: Samson v. California, 165 L.Ed.2d 250 (2006); flight from pursuing probation officer plus P.O.'s knowledge of defendant's drug problems equals a well-founded suspicion to search, but see: State v. Proctor, 16 Wn.App. 228 (1986); see: Griffin v. Wisconsin, 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987), PA. Bd. Of Parole v. Scott, 141 L.Ed.2d 344 (1998), United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001); II.

State v. Johnson, 105 Wn.2d 92 (1986)

Where probation is a condition of defendant's release pending appeal, trial court may hold a revocation hearing pending appeal and, if defendant is revoked, defendant will remain in the county jail until the outcome of appeal, RCW 9.95.062, and will not be transported to prison, In re Norris, 26 Wash. 323 (1901); where trial court does not impose conditions of release pending appeal, the court is without power to order defendant to appear at a revocation hearing, although he "still is subject to the trial court's jurisdiction to revoke," (?); 9-0.

State v. Conlin, 49 Wn.App. 593 (1987)

Probationer has a procedural, not a constitutional, right to counsel at revocation hearing, CrR 7.5(b), thus need not knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently waive counsel; trial court should hold a brief colloquy regarding right to counsel, risks of self-representation and penalty; II.

Griffin v. Wisconsin, 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987)

Where probationer, by statute, is in legal custody of state, then probation officer may search probationer's home without a warrant on "reasonable grounds," less than probable cause, cf.: State v. Winterstein, 168 Wn.2d 620 (2010); tip from police that there "were or might be," guns in probationer's home establishes reasonable grounds; see also: PA. Bd. Of Parole v. Scott, 141 L.Ed.2d 344 (1998), United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Patterson, 51 Wn.App. 202 (1988)

Warrantless search of a parolee's vehicle, while the parolee is in custody, by a parole officer acting in a supervisory capacity (although assisting police in their investigative capacity) is valid upon a reasonable suspicion, see: Samson v. California, 165 L.Ed.2d 250 (2006); III.

State v. Alberts, 51 Wn.App. 450 (1988)

Defendant sentenced to a one-year deferred sentence; one year plus two weeks later, state files notice of revocation, court revokes thereafter; held: trial court maintains jurisdiction to revoke at any time prior to entry of an order terminating probation irrespective of the period of probation set forth in the original sentence, RCW 9.95.230, State v. Hoffman, 67 Wn.App. 132 (1992), legislatively overruling State v. Mortrud, 89 Wn.2d 720 (1978); see also: RCW 9.95.210, State v. Ludwig, 92 Wn.2d 109 (1979), State v. Robinson, 142 Wn.App. 649 (2008); I.

In re George, 52 Wn.App. 135 (1988)

At revocation for pre-SRA conviction, trial court may consider uncharged crimes in determining minimum term; insufficient rehabilitation is grounds for exceptional sentence for pre-SRA offense; I.

State v. Holmberg, 53 Wn.App. 609 (1989)

Trial court may not revoke probation for misconduct that occurred after the expiration of the probation period although court has jurisdiction to entertain petitions to revoke until an order terminating probation is granted, RCW 9.95.230; accord: State v. Hoffman, 67 Wn.App. 132 (1992); see: State v. Ludwig, 92 Wn.2d 109 (1979), State v. Robinson, 142 Wn.App. 649 (2008); II.

Seattle v. Lea, 56 Wn.App. 859 (1990)

An arrest by itself is not grounds for revocation of probation; probationer must be given the opportunity to contest the allegations of the underlying charge; I.

State v. Bower, 64 Wn.App. 227 (1992)

Defendant's burden to show inability to pay costs and V.P.A. due to poverty, RCW 9.94A.200(2), is constitutional, Bearden v. Georgia, 76 L.Ed.2d 221 (1983), State v. Sleater, 194 Wn.App. 470, 474 (2016); a defendant who claims indigency as a defense to incarceration for failure to pay must show income, expenses, efforts to find employment, efforts to acquire resources to pay court-ordered obligations; plea of poverty alone is insufficient, see: Smith v. District Court, 147 Wn.2d 981 (2002); accord: State v. Gropper, 76 Wn.App. 882 (1995); I.

State v. Badger, 64 Wn.App. 904 (1992)

Probationer is ordered to have no unsupervised contact with minors; at revocation hearing, state offers report of probation officer that P.O. spoke with a minor who said defendant had contact with her, defendant cross-examines P.O., objects to hearsay of minor; held: good cause for admitting hearsay at revocation hearing includes difficulty and expense of procuring witnesses in combination with demonstrably or clearly reliable evidence; hearsay evidence from state probation reports is sufficiently reliable, United States v. Miller, 514 F.2d 41, 42 (9th Cir.

State v. Hoffman, 67 Wn.App. 132 (1992)

Court retains jurisdiction to revoke or modify a pre-SRA probation until an express order terminating probation is entered, RCW 9.95.230, State v. Holmberg, 53 Wn.App. 609, 611 (1989), State v. Alberts, 51 Wn.App. 450 (1988), see: State v. Robinson, 142 Wn.App. 649 (2008); III.

State v. Peterson, 69 Wn.App. 143 (1993)

Sex offender is sentenced to prison followed by community supervision, to include crime-related treatment; upon release, defendant is sent to only treatment provider in the area, which rejects defendant as not amenable to treatment, court imposes 60 days for noncompliance; held: RCW 9.94A.120(5) permits a sentence condition of "available outpatient treatment," since counselor determined defendant was not amenable, treatment was not available to defendant; where corrections officer directs defendant to a particular program which will not accept offender, no volitional act of noncompliance occurs, thus no failure to comply was proved; III.

State v. Parsley, 73 Wn.App. 666 (1994)

In pre-SRA case, probation period cannot exceed maximum term of sentence, former RCW 9.95.210, distinguishing Pitts v. Rhay, 64 Wn.2d 481 (1964), State v. Alberts, 51 Wn.App. 450 (1988); thus, where a deferred sentence is imposed and subsequently revoked, court cannot then stack a suspended sentence such that total period of probation exceeds maximum sentence; I.

State v. Kessler, 75 Wn.App. 634, 636-41 (1994)

In a pre-prosecution diversion supervised by the prosecutor, court's role in reviewing prosecutor's decision to terminate and prosecute is to determine whether state has proved a breach of the agreement by a preponderance, and whether the decision by the prosecutor to terminate was reasonable, State v. Marino, 100 Wn.2d 719, 723-7 (1984), State v. Varnell, 137 Wn.App. 925 (2007). State v. Harrison, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL10225188 (2022), deliberately choosing to make treatment payments a low priority is a willful violation, as distinguished from hardship and inability; violation of no-contact provision is not a breach where there were previous contacts which had been approved by the treatment provider, a subsequent deceptive, secret contact was a breach of the treatment regimen; I.

State v. Gropper, 76 Wn.App. 882 (1995)

Defendant, following sentencing, signs "Conditions of Supervision" form requiring him to notify Department of Corrections (DOC) prior to address change, pay legal financial obligations, report to DOC; defendant moves for more than a week, fails to report, fails to pay; held: court need not consider willfulness before incarcerating for violation of nonfinancial condition, RCW 9.94A.200(2)(c); where state proves by preponderance defendant has not paid a financial obligation, burden shifts to defendant to prove a "real effort" to pay, State v. Bower, 64 Wn.App. 227, 231 (1992), counsel's statement that defendant has not been employed is insufficient to establish a nonwillful inability to pay, thus trial court need not consider alternatives to incarceration, see: Smith v. District Court, 147 Wn.2d 981 (2002); I.

State v. Massey, 81 Wn.App. 198 (1996)

Probation condition that defendant submit to searches by probation officer is lawful, although searches themselves must be based upon a well-founded suspicion, State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 22 (1984), State v. Lucas, 56 Wn.App. 236, 243-5 (1989), State v. Jardinez, 184 Wn.App. 518 (2014), ), State v. Livingston, 197 Wn.App. 590 (2017), see: Samson v. California, 165 L.Ed.2d 250 (2006), see also: State v. Fisher, 145 Wn.2d 209 (2001), but see: PA. Bd. Of Parole v. Scott, 141 L.Ed.2d 344 (1998), State v. Winterstein, 168 Wn.2d 620 (2010); probationer can't appeal a condition of probation as unconstitutional until harmfully affected, State v. Langland, 42 Wn.App. 287, 292 (1985), State v. Phillips, 65 Wn.App. 239, 244 (1992), State v. J.B., 102 Wn.App. 583 (2000), State v. Autrey, 136 Wn.App. 460, 470-71 (2006), State v. Zimmer, 146 Wn.App. 405, 414-17 (2008), State v. Cates, 183 Wn.2d 531 (2015), but see: State v. Armstrong, 91 Wn.App. 635 (1998), see: State v. Jones, 118 Wn.App. 199 (2003), State v. Motter, 139 Wn.App. 797 (2007), *but see: State v. State v. Monson, 84 Wn.App. 703, 712 (1997)

Probation period is tolled where defendant fails to report to probation officer and leaves jurisdiction without permission, Gillespie v. State, 17 Wn.App. 363, 366 (1977), Spokane v. Marquette, 146 Wn.2d 124 (2002), State v. Robinson, 142 Wn.App. 649 (2008), State v. D.D.-H., 196 Wn.App. 948 (2016); probation revocation hearing may be heard after trial on criminal charges, apparently beyond probation jurisdiction period, State v. Valentine, 20 Wn.App. 511, 514-5 (1978); III.

State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997)

Defendant, on SRA community supervision with condition of no new crimes, is charged with a felony and admits to the community supervision violation, which is later stricken; held: a community supervision violation is not a criminal prosecution for double jeopardy purposes, State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98, 111 (1996), distinguishing United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993), see: State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268, 276 (1980), Standlee v. Smith, 83 Wn.2d 405, 407 (1974), State v. Collins, 121 Wn.App. 16 (2004); I.

State v. Guy, 87 Wn.App. 238 (1997), aff'd, 136 Wn.2d 453 (1998)

Defendant is sentenced to partial confinement to report to a work crew, fails to report, court "converts" his partial confinement to total confinement, defendant is later prosecuted for escape; held: double jeopardy is not implicated as the converted sentence was not punishment for the later events but was punishment owed for the earlier crime, see: Standlee v. Smith, 83 Wn.App. 405, 407 (1974); II.

State v. Anderson, 88 Wn.App. 541 (1997)

Urinalysis lab report showing cocaine and letter from lab stating that none of the prescription drugs defendant claimed to have used would test positive for cocaine are admissible at a revocation hearing as reliable hearsay, where trial court determines that expense of live testimony is outweighed by neutral role of laboratory, State v. Nelson, 103 Wn.2d 760, 763-5 (1985), State v. Badger, 64 Wn.App. 904, 907-8 (1992); II.

PA. Bd. Of Parole v. Scott, 141 L.Ed.2d 344 (1998)

Federal exclusionary rule does not apply at parole revocation hearings, only applies at criminal trials, United States v. Janis, 49 L.Ed.2d 1046 (1976), United States v. Calandra, 38 L.Ed.2d 561 (1974), INS v. Lopez-Mendoza, 82 L.Ed.2d 778 (1984), cf.: State v. Proctor, 16 Wn.App. 865 (1977), State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1 (1984), State v. Lampman, 45 Wn.App. 228 (1986); 5-4.

State v. Armstrong, 91 Wn.App. 635 (1998)

Defendant does not waive right to appeal conditions of community placement by failing to object in trial court, State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873, 884 (1993), State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535, 547 (1996), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), but see: State v. Massey, 81 Wn.App. 198 (1996), State v. Langland, 42 Wn.App. 287, 292 (1985), *State v. Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 139 Wn.2d 166 (1999)

In a pre-SRA case, parole board may consider denial of guilt in denying parole, Pers. Restraint of Dyer, 175 Wn.2d 186 (2012), does not violate prisoner's privilege against self-incrimination, as criminal proceedings were terminated, State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 529 (1996), distinguishing State v. Garibay, 67 Wn.App. 773 (1992); reverses Pers. Restraint of Ecklund, 91 Wn.App. 440 (1998); 8-1.

State v. Dahl, 139 Wn.2d 678 (1999)

Notice to defendant that alleges failure to make progress in sexual deviancy treatment plus defendant receiving violation report detailing incidents of indecent exposure is sufficient to meet due process notice requirement; evidence of exposure reported to police who report it to CCO who reports it to treatment provider who includes incident in a treatment report considered by the court is insufficient to establish good cause for admissibility of hearsay at revocation hearing, absent proof of difficulty or expense in obtaining victims' testimony or sworn affidavits, State v. Nelson, 103 Wn.2d 760, 765 (1985), State v. Abd-Rahmaan, 154 Wn.2d 280 (2005), cf.: State v. Badger, 64 Wn.App. 904 (1992), Pers. Restraint of Price, 157 Wn.App. 889 (2010); trial courts are encouraged but not required to enter written findings at revocation, see: State v. Lawrence, 28 Wn.App. 435 (1981), State v. Murray, 28 Wn.App. 897 (1981); 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Addleman, 139 Wn.2d 751 (2000)

ISRB may not deny parole because a prisoner litigates and grieves; 9-0.

State v. Williams, 97 Wn.App. 257, 262-63 (1999)

Ordering an 18-year old to abstain from alcohol and drugs is merely an extension of the requirement that a probationer commit no crimes, even if alcohol and drugs were not directly related to his crimes, see: State v. Summers, 60 Wn.2d 702, 707 (1962); where probation officer sets treatment conditions not stated at sentencing, providing probationer the opportunity to object, and court later ratifies the terms, there is no due process violation or improper delegation of judicial function, see: State v. Wilkerson, 107 Wn.App. 748 (2001), but see: CrRLJ 7.2(a), 7.3, cf.: State v. Sansome, 127 Wn.App. 630, 641-43 (2005); I.

State v. Harris, 97 Wn.App. 647 (1999)

Deaf probationer is not entitled to an interpreter at meetings with his probation counselor where he can communicate in writing; RCW 2.42.120(3), which requires interpreters at court ordered treatment programs, unconstitutionally violates the one-subject rule, CONST. Art. II, § 19; I.

State v. Johnson, 97 Wn.App. 679 (1999)

When defendant is sentenced under first-time offender option, RCW 9.94A.030(22), he may be ordered to enter treatment even if it is not related to the offense; II.

State v. Kistner, 105 Wn.App. 967 (2001)

Department of Corrections administratively sanctions, RCW 9.94A.205(2)(a), sex offender on SSOSA suspended sentence, RCW 9.94A.505, for violating condition, later trial court revokes sentence based upon same violation, RCW 9.94A.120(8)(a)(vi); held: trial court has statutory authority to revoke even after administrative sanction is imposed; I.

Pers. Restraint of Capello, 106 Wn.App. 576 (2001)

At sentencing, trial court did not impose "special condition" of community placement that defendant get prior approval of residence from Community Corrections Officer, DOC refuses to release defendant without pre-approved address; held: because statute provided that sentencing court could order special conditions, former RCW 9.94A.120(8)(b), DOC cannot impose those conditions where court did not; I.

State v. Wilkerson, 107 Wn.App. 748 (2001)

District court may, at time of sentencing, delegate to probation department authority to set evaluation and treatment conditions so long as probationer has a right to a hearing if he disagrees, court need not state all conditions at time of sentencing, State v. Williams, 97 Wn.App. 257, 262-63 (1999), see: State v. Sansome, 127 Wn.App. 630, 641-43 (2005); sentencing court may impose new conditions even where defendant has not violated a condition originally imposed; I.

United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001)

Condition of probation obliges defendant to submit to searches without a warrant or reasonable cause, police search defendant's home without a warrant with reasonable cause; held: probationer may be searched without a warrant on reasonable cause, Griffin v. Wisconsin, 97 L.Ed.2d 709 (1987), State v. Lampman, 45 Wn.App. 228 (1986), cf.: Samson v. California, 165

L.Ed.2d 250 (2006), but see: State v. Winterstein, 168 Wn.2d 620 (2010), search need not relate to a "probationary purpose;" 9-0.

Spokane v. Marquette, 146 Wn.2d 124 (2002)

Defendant is sentenced to two years probation on gross misdemeanor, former RCW 3.66.068, during which warrant is issued, more than two years after sentencing probation is revoked; held: probationary period is tolled while a probationer is sought on a warrant, State v. V.J., 132 Wn.App. 380 (2006), State v. Robinson, 142 Wn.App. 649 (2008), State v. D.D.-H., 196 Wn.App. 948 (2016), see: State v. Campbell, 95 Wn.2d 954, 957 (1981), *State v. State v. Poston, 117 Wn.App. 925 (2003)

A revoked drug court offender is entitled to credit for time served in jail and electronic home detention pursuant to the drug court's order, RCW 9.94A.505(6); II.

State v. Robinson, 120 Wn.App. 294 (2004)

Failure to object at sentence modification hearing to hearsay and lack of notice waives appellate review; I.

State v. Collins, 121 Wn.App. 16 (2004)

Defendant, while on community custody, commits new crimes, DOC sanctions defendant to jail, RCW 9.94A.737, after which prosecutor moves to modify sentence, trial court imposes more jail time, RCW 9.94A.634(3)(c) based upon same violations; held: neither double jeopardy clause nor collateral estoppel preclude trial court from imposing a sanction for acts already punished by DOC, see: State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997), In re Pers. Restraint of Mayner, 107 Wn.2d 512, 521 (1986), Standlee v. Smith, 83 Wn.2d 405, 407 (1974); II.

State v. Cassill-Skilton, 122 Wn.App. 652 (2004)

Trial court terminates defendant from drug court without a record that she had notice of violations and a hearing to resolve disputed facts and findings; held: to terminate drug court, RCW 2.28.170, defendant must be given notice of allegations, a hearing at which she may contest alleged violations and trial court must state evidence it relied upon, State v. Harrison, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL10225188 (2022), see: State v. Marino, 100 Wn.2d 719 (1984), State v. Varnell, 137 Wn.App. 925 (2007); II.

State v. Abd-Rahmaan, 154 Wn.2d 280 (2005)

At SRA sentence modification hearing, right to confront witnesses exists unless good cause as to both reliability and necessity for hearsay is found and articulated by the trial court, State v. Dahl, 139 Wn.2d 678 (1999), see: Pers. Restraint of Price, 157 Wn.App. 889 (2010) ; Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), does not apply to sentence modification hearings; reverses State v. Abd-Rahmaan, 120 Wn.App. 284 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Canfield, 154 Wn.2d 698 (2005)

At a SSOSA revocation hearing, defendant has a limited right to allocution but denial of that right must be raised at the revocation hearing to preserve the issue for appeal, reversing State v. Canfield, 120 Wn.App. 729 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630 (2005)

Community custody condition that defendant may not possess pornography as defined by CCO is both vague and an improper delegation, State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), see: State v. Williams, 97 Wn.App. 257, 262-63 (1999), State v. Wilkerson, 107 Wn.App. 748 (2001), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), *State v. State v. Smith, 130 Wn.App. 721, 724-28 (2005)

Following sex offense conviction, defendant is ordered by DOC not to "possess…any pornography, catalogs or material which can be read or viewed for sexual gratification" and which "involved children," defendant is sanctioned for possessing Brooke Shield film Blue Lagoon; held: because an ordinary person would know, without having to consult a specialist, that the film was prohibited, then the restriction was not vague, distinguishing State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630 (2005), but see: State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), *State v. State v. J.V., 132 Wn.App. 533 (2006)

Respondent signs contract with state to enter treatment court, setting forth treatment conditions and agreement that court may impose sanctions including termination and sentence, upon revocation juvenile court imposes manifest injustice disposition; held: treatment court contract need not expressly advise respondent that manifest injustice disposition was a possibility as statutes provide notice that satisfies due process; poor performance in treatment prior to revocation is a basis for manifest injustice disposition; where contract provides that what respondent says in treatment about drug and alcohol use cannot be used in court, it is error to use it for manifest injustice; I.

Samson v. California, 165 L.Ed.2d 250 (2006)

State statute that requires parolees to agree, in writing, to be subject to search or seizure with or without a warrant and with or without cause does not violate Fourth Amendment, as a parolee's status is a variation on imprisonment and state's interests in supervising parolees, who are more likely than members of the general public to commit crimes, is substantial, distinguishing United States v. Knights, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001)(probationers); 6-3.

State v. Acrey, 135 Wn.App. 938 (2006)

Defendant, convicted of theft for draining the retirement account of an elderly man, is ordered as a condition of sentence not to work as a caretaker for the elderly or disabled; held: sentencing court has authority to impose crime-related prohibitions, RCW 9.94A.505(8), even if not specifically authorized by some other provision of ch. 9.94A RCW; prohibition here was directly related to the crime; court is authorized to impose crime-related prohibitions even if no community custody is authorized or ordered, RCW 9.94A.634(1), State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007); I.

State v. Varnell, 137 Wn.App. 925 (2007)

In response to trial court's stating to drug court defendant that a termination hearing would be set, defendant states he wants out, counsel states that defendant waives "any rights that he might have to a termination hearing," trial court conducts bench trial on record, terminates and sentences, defendant appeals; held: drug court agreement granted defendant a unilateral right to terminate participation which defendant knowingly and voluntarily invoked, distinguishing State v. Cassill-Skilton, 122 Wn.App. 652 (2004), see: State v. Kessler, 75 Wn.App. 634 (1994); defense counsel has implied authority to waive procedural matters on client's behalf; II.

State v. Motter, 139 Wn.App. 797 (2007)

Court may order drug treatment as a condition of community custody, RCW 9.94A.030(13), 9.94A.715(2)(a), see: State v. Powell, 139 Wn.App. 808, 818-20 (2007), reversed, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 72 (2009), where evidence establishes that defendant used heroin the night of the crime, counsel argues at sentencing that defendant's problems revolve around drugs and burglary of a doctor's office "is often motivated by a desire to steal drugs," at, ¶12; court may order that defendant notify his community corrections officer when a drug has been prescribed, as affirmative conduct may be ordered for a crime against a person, violent offense, sex offense or drug offense, RCW 9.94A.715(2)(a), State v. Kolesnik,146 Wn.App. 790, 806-08 (2008); 2-1, II.

Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 162 Wn.2d 814 (2008)

Defendant, on community custody, is arrested and in jail commits a crime, Department of Corrections imposes sanction; held: while community custody is statutorily tolled during incarceration, RCW 9.94A.625(3), DOC may still enforce community custody conditions during confinement and tolling; 6-3.

State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008)

As condition of community custody, defendant is ordered not to possess pornography, appeals; held: vagueness challenges to conditions of community custody may be raised for the first time on appeal, at 745, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782, 786-91 (2010); restriction on accessing or possessing pornographic materials is unconstitutionally vague, State v. Alcocer, 2 Wn.App.2d 918 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), State v. Johnson, 4 Wn.App.2d 352 (2018); condition that defendant not enter a place whose primary business pertains to sexually explicit material is not vague; condition that defendant "not possess or control sexual stimulus material for your particular deviancy as defined" by CCO is vague, but see: State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Alphonse, 142 Wn.App. 417, 439 (2008), 147 Wn.App. 891, 909-11 (2008)

An order banishing defendant from Everett does not survive strict scrutiny absent repeated offenses or previous violations of orders restricting contact, State v. Schimelpfenig, 128 Wn.App. 224 (2005), State v. Sims, 152 Wn.App. 526 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 171 Wn.2d 436 (2011), see: Pers. Restraint of Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 904 (2018); I.

State v. Brooks, 142 Wn.App. 842, 849-52 (2008)

Court holds competency hearing, finds defendant competent, at sentencing court imposes mental health treatment as condition of community custody; held: to order mental health treatment, court must find that reasonable grounds exist that defendant is mentally ill and that the condition most likely influenced the offense, RCW 9.94A.505(9), State v. Shelton, 194 Wn.App. 660, 675-76 (2016), State v. Jones, 118 Wn.App. 199, 208-11 (2003); where the trial court does not find defendant is a mentally ill person, it may not order treatment; II.

State v. O'Cain, 144 Wn.App. 772 (2008)

Community custody provision following rape conviction prohibited internet access; held: absent evidence that defendant accessed the internet before the rape or that the internet contributed to the crime, prohibiting internet access is not crime-related, RCW 9.94B.050(5)(e), internet access is not affirmative conduct reasonably related to the circumstances of the offense, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.App. 318, 330-31 (2014), thus RCW 9.94A.712(6)(a) (2006) [recodified as 9.94A.507 (2008)] is inapplicable; I.

State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592 (2008)

Community placement condition that defendant not possess or consume drugs is mandatory unless waived, RCW 9.94A.700(4)(c) (2003) [recodified, effective August 2009, as RCW 9.94B.050], which implies that court may order urinalysis to assure compliance, at 603-04; II.

State v. C.D.C., 145 Wn.App. 621, 626-28 (2008)

At sentencing, court orders twelve months community supervision and a psychosexual evaluation without setting time limit, respondent obtains evaluation shortly before expiration of supervision, trial court finds violation and extends supervision; held: respondent did not violate conditions, as he complied within probation period, thus court erroneously found a violation; II.

State v. Zimmer, 146 Wn.App. 405 (2008)

Absent evidence that defendant used a cell phone to facilitate drug possession, trial court cannot prohibit possession of a cell phone as a condition of community custody; II.

State v. Kolesnik, 146 Wn.App. 790, 807-08 (2008)

Ordering, as a condition of community custody, that defendant notify his CCO when he is prescribed a controlled substance is a permissible condition of affirmative conduct reasonably related to the offense, the offender's risk of reoffending or the safety of the community, State v. Motter, 139 Wn.App. 797, 805 (2007) following conviction of a serious violent offense, former RCW 9.94A.715(2); II.

State v. Gamble, 146 Wn.App. 813 (2008)

State v. Erickson, 168 Wn.2d 41 (2010)

Defendant is on probation, fails to appear for a hearing, bench warrant issued, upon arrest drugs found; held: returned summons establishes a well-founded suspicion that defendant did not notify court of address change, thus warrant was valid; court must find a well-founded suspicion that a probation violation occurred for warrant to be valid, distinguishing State v. Parks, 136 Wn.App. 232 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010)

Condition of community custody that defendant "shall not possess or use any paraphernalia that can be used for…controlled substances" is vague as it is broader than "drug paraphernalia;" reverses State v. Valencia, 148 Wn.App. 302 (2009); 9-0.

Aberdeen v. Regan, 170 Wn.2d 103 (2010)

Condition of probation is "no criminal violations of the law," defendant is charged with new crimes, is acquitted, same judge finds that they were proved by preponderance and revokes; held: standard for revocation of probation is preponderance of the evidence, not beyond a reasonable doubt, even when the violation is a new crime, Habeas Corpus of Standlee, 83 Wn.2d 405 (1974); affirms Aberdeen v. Regan, 147 Wn.App. 538 (2008); 8-1.

State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374 (2010)

Police, acting on tip that probationer was selling drugs, ask CCO to see if probationer was in violation of community custody by not living where he had reported he lived, accompany CCO to residence where probationer was believed to be living, CCO arrests outside, opens door, smells marijuana, police obtain warrant, defendant claims unlawful pretext; held: probation officer warrantless search is valid even if based upon a tip from law enforcement as long as CCO had probable cause to believe probationer lived at the residence searched, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009), but see: United States v. Knights, 534 U.S. 112, 151 L.Ed.2d 497 (2001); II.

State v. Acevedo, 159 Wn.App. 221, 231-34 (2010)

When sentenced to a first time offender waiver, RCW 9.94A.650 (2006), court can order as conditions of community custody that defendant maintain employment, former RCW 9.94A.650(2), 9.94A.700(4)(b), not associate with persons on probation or parole, former RCW 9.94A.700(5)(b), not possess drugs, former RCW 9.94A. 700(5)(d), not consume alcohol in excess, participate in drug treatment, take polygraph to monitor compliance, State v. Combs, 102 Wn.App. 949, 952 (2000), former RCW 9.94A.715(2), but may not order him not to possess deadly weapons other than firearms; III.

State v. Barker, 162 Wn.App. 858 (2011)

Defendant is arrested pursuant to DOC warrant, drugs found; held: an administrative warrant issued by the Department of Corrections pursuant to RCW 9.94A.740 (1999) [recodified as 9.94A.716 (2008)] need not be issued by a neutral magistrate based upon oath, State v. Olson, 164 Wn.App. 187 (2011); II.

State v. Parris, 163 Wn.App. 110 (2011)

Defendant is on community custody for failure to register as a sex offender, conditions include no contact with minors, no alcohol, no possession of sexually explicit materials, CCO learns he was seen by a police officer with an underage woman, goes to his home, knocks, no answer, looks in window, sees defendant and young female hiding, orders them to exit, arrests defendant, searches room, observes syringes, alcohol, pornography, seizes storage media, later views it and observes defendant having sex with 17 year old, defendant is convicted of child porn; held: probationers and sex offenders have reduced privacy rights, Det. Of Campbell, 139 Wn.2d 341, 355-56 (1999), State v. Lucas, 56 Wn.App. 236, 239-40 (1989); CCO may search an offender's personal property without a warrant, RCW 9.94A.631(1) (2009), thus search of memory cards was lawful as CCO had reasonable suspicion that they contained evidence of additional violations based upon defendant's mother's report that he was out of control and threatened to shoot CCO, cf.: State v. Jardinez, 184 Wn.App. 518 (2014) ), State v. Livingston, 197 Wn.App. 590 (2017); because memory card was apparently not password-protected, it was not a locked container; II.

State v. Mahone, 164 Wn.App. 146 (2011)

Defendant is sentenced to community custody on two cases, violates terms, is sentenced to consecutive terms; held: community custody on multiple sentences must run consecutively, RCW 9.94A.589(2)(a), violations are limited to sixty days for each violation, RCW 9.94A.200 (1994), 9.94B.040(1), -(3)(c) (2002), thus court may only impose terms for violation on the current community custody; II.

State v. Parent, 164 Wn.App. 210 (2011)

Court may not impose consecutive gross misdemeanor probationary sentences, State v. Rice, 180 Wn.App. 308 (2014), but see: Mortell v. State, 118 Wn.App. 846 (2003), State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 431 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), as RCW 9.95.210(1) is ambiguous; I.

State v. Pannell, 173 Wn.2d 222 (2011)

Defendant whose SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670, is revoked is not entitled to credit against his maximum prison sentence for non-custodial time spent while sentence was suspended; 9-0.

State v. Winborne, 167 Wn.App. 320 (2012)

To ensure that a sentence of confinement plus community custody does not exceed the maximum sentence, sentencing court must impose the term of confinement, the term of community custody, then reduce the term of community custody if necessary, RCW 9.94A.701(9) (2010), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664, 675 (2009), State v. Franklin, 172 Wn.2d 831 (2011), State v. Winkle, 158 Wn.App. 323 (2011); III.

Pers. Restraint of Golden*,* 172 Wn.App. 426 (2012)

Defendant is convicted of robbery, having previously been convicted of rape, DOC imposes sex offender conditions of community custody; held: while a court is limited to imposing crime related prohibitions, RCW 9.94A.030(10) (2012), DOC may impose additional conditions based upon the risk to community safety, RCW 9.94A.704(2)(b) (2012), State v. Ortega, ___ Wn.App.2d. ___, 506 P.3d 1287 (2022); III.

State v. Land*,* 172 Wn.App. 593, 604-06 (2013)

Following conviction of child rape, condition that defendant not possess drug paraphernalia is not crime related, is not a monitoring tool; plethysmograph testing at discretion of CCO is an improper condition, although it can be ordered incident to crime-related treatment, see: Matter of Brettell, 6 Wn.App.2d 161 (2018); I.

State v. Johnson*,* 180 Wn.App. 318 (2014)

Following child molestation conviction, trial court imposes community custody condition that defendant have no contact with "vulnerable individuals," and not use internet; held: "vulnerable" is vague, State v. Sanchez Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782, 793-95 (2010), State v. Irwin, 191 Wn.App. 644 (2015); internet prohibition lacks a nexus to the crime and must be stricken, State v. O'Cain, 144 Wn.App. 772, 774-75 (2008), cf.: State v. Johnson, 12 Wn.App.2d 201 (2020), rev. granted, 196 Wn.2d 1001 (2020); II.

State v. Kinzle*,* 181 Wn.App. 774, 785 (2014)

In child molestation case where defendant came into contact with victim through a social contact with parents, condition of community custody that defendant not date women who have minor children is reasonably crime related; where evidence at trial "suggested" that defendant had been drinking alcohol before the charged incidents, trial court may order alcohol evaluation and treatment but not chemical dependency evaluation and treatment, State v. Warnock, 174 Wn.App. 608 (2013): I.

State v. Jardinez*,* 184 Wn.App. 518 (2014)

Defendant misses meeting with CCO, two weeks later they meet, defendant admits he used marijuana, CCO orders defendant to empty pockets, seizes and searches iPod, finds video from that day showing defendant with shotgun, search his home, find shotgun, at felon in possession trial court suppresses, state appeals; held: while a CCO is authorized to search a probationer's person and property without a warrant if there is reasonable cause or a well-founded suspicion, RCW 9.94A.631(1) (2012), State v. Masey, 81 Wn.App. 198, 200 (1996), the suspicion must relate to the suspected violation of a condition of community custody, State v. Reichert, 158 Wn.App. 374 (2010), State v. Livingston, 197 Wn.App. 590 (2017), distinguishing State v. Parris, 163 Wn.App. 110 (2011); here there was no relationship between the failure to report and the device, trial court affirmed; III.

State v. Bruch, 182 Wn.2d 854 (2015)

To avoid a sentence that exceeds the maximum, court may impose a standard range sentence plus community custody of at least x months plus all accrued earned early release time, which does not create an indeterminate sentence, Pers. Restraint of Brooks, 166 Wn.2d 664, 668 (2009), State v. Winkle, 159 Wn.App. 323 (2001), State v. LaBounty, 17 Wn.App.2d 576 (2021), distinguishing State v. Boyd, 174 Wn.2d 470 (2012); 7-2.

State v. McClinton, 186 Wn.App. 826 (2015)

Where court imposes a geographical limitation as a condition of a sex offender's sentence DOC may require that the offender submit to GPS monitoring; I.

State v. Irwin, 191 Wn.App. 644 (2015)

Community custody conditions that require further definition from CCOs are unconstitutionally vague, State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), State v. Sansone, 127 Wn.App. 630, 638 (2005), see: State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018); here, "do not frequent areas where minor children are known to congregate, as defined by" CCO is vague; following child pornography conviction where defendant possessed depictions on a digital camera, condition that defendant not access a computer unless authorized by CCO is related to the offense and is thus valid, cf.: State v. Charlton, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 515 P.3d 537 (2022); I.

State v. Powell, 193 Wn.App. 112 (2016)

A condition of sentence requires defendant to enter sexual deviancy treatment, provider demands defendant's sexual history, defendant refuses claiming Fifth Amendment privilege, court sanctions with jail; held: penalty imposed in an effort to compel disclosure of incriminating information is a violation of defendant's Fifth Amendment rights where parties do not dispute that the disclosure would incriminate defendant, see: McKune v. Lili, 153 L.Ed.2d 47 (2002), State v. Warner, 125 Wn.2d 876 (1995), State v. King, 130 Wn.2d 517, 523-29 (1996); II.

State v. Weatherwax, 193 Wn.App. 667, 676-81 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 139 (2017)

State v. Shelton, 194 Wn.App. 660, 675-76 (2016)

To order a mental health evaluation as a condition of community custody court must find that defendant is a mentally ill person, RCW 9.94B.080) (2008) as defined in RCW 71.24.025, and that mental illness likely influenced the offense; I.

State v. Hood, 196 Wn.App. 127, 138-41 (2016)

Where a crime is both a violent offense that is not a serious violent offense and is a crime against persons (here, burglary 1°) community custody term is 18 months, RCW 9.94A.701 (2010), statute is not ambiguous; I.

State v. Bigsby, 189 Wn.2d 210 (2017)

Courts do not have authority to punish an offender with sentence modifications concurrent with DOC's statutory enforcement powers, RCW 9.94B040(1) (2008), except for crimes committed before 2000, cf.: State v. Gamble, 146 Wn.App. 813, 820 (2008), RCW 9.94A.6332 (2008), State v. Petterson, 190 Wn.2d 92 (2018), State v. Hubbard, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 55584-1-II (2022); reverses State v. Bigsby, 196 Wn.App. 803 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Weller, 197 Wn.App. 731 (2017)

With consecutive exceptional sentences court may impose no contact orders for the maximum of each crime consecutively; II.

State v. Nguyen, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018)

Following child molestation conviction, community custody provisions that defendant not possess sexually explicit material is not vague, State v. Frederick, 20 Wn.App. 1081, 506 P.3d 690 (2022), and is crime related as defendant had sent complainant a scantily-clad photo, ; provision that defendant inform CCO of any "dating relationship" is not unconstitutionally vague; order that defendant not enter sex-related businesses is reasonably related to the offense, State v. Magana, 197 Wn.App. 189, 201 (2016); reverses, in part, State v. Norris, 1 Wash. App. 2d 87, 404 P.3d 83 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Dailey, 93 Wn.2d 454 (1980)

CrR 8.3(b) motion may be granted for simple mismanagement by plaintiff, even if not evil or dishonest, State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); trial court dismissed for failure to provide witness list until three days before trial and for failure to provide bill of particulars; cf.: State v. Cantrell, 111 Wn.2d 385, 390 (1988); see: State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 753 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980)

To sustain a claim of discriminatory prosecution defendant must prove that the prosecutor's conduct was without reasonable justification and constituted intentional or purposeful systematic discrimination in the enforcement of the law; see: State v. Johnson, 78 Wn.2d 491, 499 (1970), State v. Alonzo, 45 Wn.App. 256 (1986), State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 753 (1990), State v. Ramos, 83 Wn.App. 622, 634-9 (1996); 8-0.

State v. Coles, 28 Wn.App. 563 (1981)

Examining defendant on details of prior crimes is misconduct; questioning defendant about political and religious beliefs is misconduct; II.

State v. Brown, 29 Wn.App. 770 (1981)

Co-defendant agrees to testify for state in exchange for reduction in charge; at defense counsel's request, co-defendant does not plead until after he testifies so that his plea agreement is only good if there is a conviction; held: if state had withheld benefits of bargain until after witness performed, it might be contrary to public policy and due process, but here defense requested delayed plea, thus no error; I.

State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981)

Prosecutor should not read probable cause affidavit to press, but harmless here; I.

State v. Evans, 96 Wn.2d 1 (1981)

Police twice testify that defendant declined to make a statement after advice of rights, held to be harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt; 9-0.

Oregon v. Kennedy, 72 L.Ed.2d 416 (1982)

Where defendant's motion for mistrial is granted for prosecutorial or judicial misconduct, retrial is not barred by double jeopardy clause except where the conduct was intended to provoke the defendant into moving for mistrial; accord: State v. Sargent, 49 Wn.App. 64 (1987), see: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); 9-0.

United States v. Goodwin*, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982)

Defendant, charged with misdemeanor, demands a jury trial, whereupon United States Attorney indicts and convicts him of felony arising from same fact situation; held: a presumption of prosecutorial vindictiveness, Blackledge v. Perry, 40 L.Ed.2d 628, (1974), is not warranted, as the nature of the right asserted by defendant (jury trial) is unlikely to lead to the possibility that a prosecutor would respond by bringing charges not in the public interest, State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); defendant has burden of showing improper prosecutorial motive; 7-2.

State v. Bartholomew, 98 Wn.2d 173 (1982)

Defense discovers after trial that state's star witness took and flunked a polygraph; held: where undisclosed evidence demonstrates that the state's case included perjury and that the prosecution knew or should have known of the perjury, reversal should be granted if there is any reasonable likelihood that the perjured testimony could have affected the verdict, United States v.

Agurs, 49 L.Ed.2d 342 (1976), however polygraph evidence is not reliable, so this test was not met here; where a pretrial request is made for "specific evidence" which was not disclosed, test is whether the evidence withheld "could have affected the outcome," Agurs, supra; here, no request was made, thus test is whether defendant can establish if new evidence would establish a reasonable doubt which did not otherwise exist; 8-1.

State v. McKenzie, 31 Wn.App. 450 (1982)

Following a motion to suppress drugs, state amends and adds a VUFA charge; held: test for prosecutorial vindictiveness is "reasonable likelihood of vindictiveness," not "appearance of vindictiveness," State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998), State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004), cf.: State v. Lee, 69 Wn.App. 31 (1993), see: State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); I.

State v. Montague, 31 Wn.App. 688 (1982)

Defendant, charged with rape, is cross-examined regarding investigation of another rape incident with which he was not charged and with which he was cleared; held: prosecutor's questioning was prejudicial mandating a mistrial; III.

State v. Hentz, 32 Wn.App. 193 (1982)

State's failure to volunteer information about an impeachment witness favorable to defense is not error where defendant failed to move for a new trial, CrR 7.6(a)(2), see: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); II.

State v. Penn, 32 Wn.App. 911 (1982)

Prosecutor adds additional counts of robbery 1° on the day of trial, but since no proof was presented of vindictiveness, no misconduct existed, State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998), see: State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); I.

State v. Vavra, 33 Wn.App. 142 (1982)

Prosecutor fails to reveal to defense that a witness had informal immunity and that prosecutor would appear at witness' sentencing in another county and speak on his behalf is prejudicial error; III.

State v. Price, 33 Wn.App. 472 (1982)

Prosecutor's stating in front of jury that victim was "upset" and would not be called in rebuttal due to her "condition" is misconduct but harmless here; I.

State v. Russell, 33 Wn.App. 579 (1982), rev'd, on other grounds, 101 Wn.2d 349 (1984)

"[A]rgument based on what juries in other cases have done when confronted with similar facts or comparable instructions tends to needlessly inject collateral matters in a case. Such argument is subject to abuse and should be discouraged," at 589 n. 8; I.

State v. Ortiz, 34 Wn.App. 694 (1982)

In murder case, defense presents evidence of defendant's develop[mental disability to establish defendant's inability to plan crime; in rebuttal, state elicits testimony that defendant had threatened other people, court gives cautionary instruction; held: prejudicial effect of rebuttal evidence outweighed probative value, disapproved cautionary instruction; I, 2-1.

State v. Underwood, 33 Wn.App. 833 (1983)

After state re-notes case for trial following a hung jury, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(b), ruling that state's action was arbitrary since defendant would be acquitted or jury would be hung anew; held: trial court's belief that retrial would not result in conviction is not grounds for dismissal; in order to dismiss pursuant to CrR 8.3(b), there must be evidence of arbitrary prosecutorial action or governmental misconduct, including mismanagement of the case; see: State v. Cantrell, 111 Wn.2d 385, 390 (1988); III.

State v. Jones, 33 Wn.App. 865 (1983)

Court grants mistrial, with consent of defense, for failure of state to provide discovery; held: where defendant consents to mistrial, jeopardy will not bar a second trial unless prosecutor's conduct was motivated in bad faith in order to goad defense into requesting mistrial or to prejudice his prospects for acquittal, United States v. Dmitz, 47 L.Ed.2d 267 (1976), see: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); I.

State v. Papadopoulos, 34 Wn.App. 397 (1983)

Prosecutor may not argue questions of law not covered by the instructions, State v. Estill, 80 Wn.2d 196 (1972), State v. Brown, 35 Wn.2d 397 (1949); comment on marital privilege, where no instructions cover it, is improper; arguing that an accomplice's plea bargain was fair for a first offense was error as not in evidence, State v. Rose, 62 Wn.2d 309 (1983), State v. Reeder, 46 Wn.2d 888 (1983); both harmless; I.

State v. Serr, 35 Wn.App. 5 (1983)

Threat to file habitual criminal allegation if defendant does not plead to underlying charge is not vindictive, United States v. Goodwin, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982), see also: State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 702-3 (1998), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); I.

State v. Hunter, 35 Wn.App. 708 (1983)

Where burglary defendant is impeached with prior promoting prostitution charge, it is not misconduct to call defendant a pimp in closing, as a reasonable inference from the evidence; I.

State v. Jacobson, 36 Wn.App. 446 (1983)

March 6, juvenile commits burglary; March 26, commits robbery; April 13, juvenile court declines jurisdiction on robbery; April 15, defendant turns 18 years of age; thereafter, burglary charge filed in Superior Court; defendant moves to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b); held: defendant was not prejudiced by delay; I.

United States v. Hasting, 76 L.Ed.2d 96 (1983)

Prosecutor's comment in argument "I'm going to tell you what the defendants did not do" in trial held harmless error.

Thigpen v. Roberts, 82 L.Ed.2d 23 (1984)

Defendant is convicted by Justice of the Peace of DUI and reckless driving, appeals de novo, whereupon defendant is indicted for manslaughter for same incident; held: "presumption of vindictiveness" prohibits trial on greater charge as punishment of defendant's exercise of right to appeal, but see: State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998), State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 702-3 (1998),; 6-3.

State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984)

Prosecutor's charging decisions to charge defendant-driver with negligent homicide but not her companion-passenger who purchased the alcohol is not discriminatory prosecution as the decision was not deliberately based upon race, religion or other arbitrary classification, Oyler v. Boler, 7 L.Ed.2d 446 (1962), State v. Terrovonia, 64 Wn.App. 417 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757 (1984)

Witnesses testify that burglary defendant carried property to a car from a residence that was burglarized, but no one saw him enter or exit the residence; prosecutor does not offer accomplice instructions but argued, over objection, that accomplice is as liable as principal; held: prosecutor may not argue law which conflicts with the court's instructions, State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); reversal is necessary where there is substantial likelihood that the argument affected the verdict; see: State v. Scott, 48 Wn.App. 561 (1987), State v. Rice, 110 Wn.2d 577 (1988), State v. Huckins, 66 Wn.App. 213 (1992), State v. Classen, 143 Wn.App. 45, 63-65 (2008); reverses State v. Davenport, 33 Wn.App. 704 (1983);9-0.

State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984)

Cross-examination of a rape defendant about the details of a book he wrote regarding sexual matters was irrelevant, ER 611(b) and prejudicial; 9-0.

State v. McDowell, 102 Wn.2d 341 (1984)

Juvenile accused of reckless endangerment rejects diversion, whereupon prosecutor files assault 2° for same incident; held: no presumption of vindictiveness or abuse of discretion, United States v. Goodwin, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982), State v. Soderholm, 68 Wn.App. 363 (1993), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); disposition may exceed that allowed in a diversion agreement, distinguishing RCW 13.40.160(3), unless defense proves actual vindictiveness, see: State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1 (1984)

Burden of showing bad faith of state in making opening statement is on defendant; 9-0.

State v. Claflin, 38 Wn.App. 847 (1984)

In rape case, prosecutor's reading a poem to jury, during closing, which described the effect of rape on its victims was so prejudicial as to require reversal; II.

State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985)

Rebuttal evidence is admissible if not cumulative and if it answers new points raised by the defense, State v. White, 74 Wn.2d 386, 394-95 (1968); I.

State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340 (1985), rev'd, on other grounds, 111 Wn.2d 641 (1988)

Prosecutor, in closing, stated he believed testimony of state's witness; held: test is not whether remarks were invited by defense argument, but whether taken in context the remarks unfairly prejudiced defendant, United States v. Young, 84 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985); vouching for credibility of witness is error, State v. Reed, 102 Wn.2d 140 (1984), State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909, 921 (2003), cf.: State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 175 (1995) , State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 18-19 (2013), State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877, 892-95 (2015); comment in closing that defendant did not tell anyone about what happened is misconduct, but see: State v. Scott, 58 Wn.App. 50 (1990); I.

State v. Boldt, 40 Wn.App. 798 (1985)

Trial court may not dismiss case "in the furtherance of justice", CrR 8.3(b), because court finds that a police officer assaulted the defendant who was charged with assault 3°; to dismiss, there must be governmental misconduct or arbitrary action, State v. Starrish, 86 Wn.2d 200 (1975), State v. Whitney, 96 Wn.2d 578 (1981); State v. Burri, 87 Wn.2d 175 (1976), State v. Cantrell, 111 Wn.2d 385, 390 (1988); II.

State v. Martin, 41 Wn.App. 133 (1985)

Prosecutor's impugning defense witness's credibility in closing argument is misconduct, even if qualified by "the evidence shows," United States v. Bess, 593 F.2d 749 (1985); prosecutor may not term defense testimony "lie" or "fabrication, State v. Riley, 69 Wn.App. 349 (1993); III.

United States v. Young, 84 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985)

Prosecutor's expression of his personal opinion of defendant's guilt and exhorting jury to "do its job" is improper, cf.: State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 839-42 (1999), but where not objected to is not "plain error" such that appellate court can overlook failure of defense to object; 5-4.

Wayte v. United States, 84 L.Ed.2d 547 (1985)

Government's decision to prosecute only those who fail to register with Selective Service and who report themselves as nonregistrants held not to violate equal protection clause as defense failed to show that passive enforcement policy had a discriminatory effect and that it was motivated by a discriminatory purpose, nor does it violate First Amendment; 7-2.

United States v. Bagley, 87 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985)

Prosecutor fails to provide exculpatory impeachment evidence to defense; held: there is no distinction between impeachment evidence and substantive evidence where government fails to disclose it, see: Banks v. Dretke, 157 L.Ed.2d 1166 (2004); test for appellate court is whether there is a reasonable probability that had the evidence been disclosed, the result of the trial would have been different, State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631 (1993); case is not subject to automatic reversal for violation of confrontation clause; 5-3.

State v. Traweek, 43 Wn.App. 99 (1986), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479 (1991)

Comment in closing that defense could put on other witnesses if they have explanations for the evidence improperly shifts burden of proof to defense where defense called no witnesses, State v. Fleming, 83 Wn.App. 209 (1996), State v. Dixon, 150 Wn.App. 46 (2009), cf.: State v. Contreras, 57 Wn.App. 471 (1990), State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 652-55 (2003), State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869 (1991), State v. Sundberg, 185 Wn.2d 147 (2016), but see: State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479 (1991), State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 400 (2006), State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 421-22 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 845-46 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.App. 877, 885-86 (2009); prosecutor should not refer to the fact that defendant did not testify in closing; harmless here; II.

Darden v. Wainwright, 91 L.Ed.2d 144 (1986)

Prosecutor commenting in closing that the death penalty is only guarantee against future similar acts, calling defendant an animal, and expressing the opinion that he wished someone had blown defendant's face off were misconduct, but were harmless; 5-4.

State v. Stephans, 47 Wn.App. 600 (1987)

Prosecutor's encouragement to victim to disobey a court order permitting the victim to be interviewed by a defense expert, thereby frustrating the defense in its attempt to evaluate credibility of the victim, is grounds for dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), for prosecution mismanagement; II.

State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 332 (1987)

Prosecutor's "hypothetical" comment in closing that defendant didn't testify because he's guilty is misconduct and not invited even though defense counsel argued reasons why a defendant might not testify, harmless here; I.

State v. Strandy, 49 Wn.App. 537 (1987)

Prosecutor inviting jury to conduct memory experiments during deliberations is misconduct, may be cured by admonition; II.

State v. Cochran, 51 Wn.App. 116 (1988)

Following conviction, state concedes that police intentionally withheld exculpatory evidence from defense, new trial is ordered; defense motion to dismiss is denied; held: in order to invoke the protections of the double jeopardy clause under the Fifth Amendment and CONST. art. 1, § 9, defense must show that misconduct was committed with the intent to provoke or goad a mistrial request, Oregon v. Kennedy, 72 L.Ed.2d 416 (1982); because there was no misconduct regarding the trial itself, the Kennedy test is not met; denial of motion to dismiss under CrR 8.3(b) was not an abuse of discretion, since defendant can receive a fair trial on remand, cf.: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); I.

State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263 (1988)

Where defendant denies having threatened rape victim, state may call, in rebuttal, a witness to whom defendant communicated such threats; 8-1.

State v. Belgarde, 110 Wn.2d 504 (1988)

At murder trial, two state's witnesses explain that they did not tell police their stories for three weeks because defendant had threatened to use American Indian Movement (AIM) against them, defendant testifies that he had some affiliation with AIM, in closing, prosecutor argued that AIM is violent, referring to Wounded Knee, no objection by defense; held: prosecutor testified in the guise of argument; the argument was highly inflammatory, flagrant, ill intentioned and not harmless, irrespective of defense failure to object or request a curative instruction, reversing State v. Belgarde, 46 Wn.App. 441 (1986); accord: State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991), State v. Stith, 71 Wn.App. 14 (1993), see: State v. Klok, 99 Wn.App. 81 (2000), State v. Dhahwal, 150 Wn.2d 559, 576-81 (2003); 7-2.

State v. Day, 51 Wn.App. 544 (1988)

Prosecutor's referring in closing to defendant's testimony as a "pack of lies" and "preposterous" and referring to state's witness as "believable" are not prohibited expressions of personal belief where context establishes that the argument asked the jury to draw inferences from the evidence; cf.: State v. Riley, 69 Wn.App. 349 (1993); III.

State v. Stenger, 111 Wn.2d 516 (1988)

In aggravated murder case, where prosecuting attorney had previously given legal advice to defendant about defendant's antisocial behavior and other criminal activity, then the prosecuting attorney and deputies are disqualified from prosecuting the murder charge, RPC 1.9(a), see: State v. Tolias, 135 Wn.2d 133 (1998), State v. Bland, 90 Wn.App. 677 (1998), State v. Schmitt, 124 Wn.App. 662 (2004), State v. Nickels, 195 Wn.2d 132 (2020); "[w]here the previous case is not the same case (or one closely interwoven therewith) that is being prosecuted, and where, for some other ethical reason the prosecuting attorney may be totally disqualified from the case, if that prosecuting attorney separates himself or herself from all connection with the case and delegates full authority and control over the case to a deputy prosecuting attorney, we perceive no persuasive reason why such a complete delegation of authority and control and screening should not be honored if scrupulously maintained," at 522-23; 8-0.

State v. Hopson, 113 Wn.2d 273 (1989)

Double jeopardy clauses of state and federal constitutions do not bar retrial following mistrial granted where a government investigator, who was not an officer of the court, twice violated an order in limine prohibiting testimony about defendant's prior record, as the misconduct was inadvertent and not consciously designed to prejudice defendant, Oregon v. Kennedy, 72 L.Ed.2d 416 (1982); cf.: Oregon v. Rathbun, 600 P.2d 392 (1979); see: State v. Lewis, 78 Wn.App. 739 (1995); where witness testifies as to prior convictions and said testimony is stricken, within discretion of trial court to deny mistrial if irregularity was not serious enough to materially affect the result; 9-0.

State v. Coleman, 54 Wn.App. 742 (1989)

Prosecutor's providing telephone numbers for witnesses on the day of trial is not grounds for dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), as a continuance was still a possible remedy; while state is obligated to fulfill its discovery responsibilities, the defendant also has a responsibility to investigate and prepare, State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003), but see: State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 763 (1990); I.

State v. Getty, 55 Wn.App. 152 (1989)

Police serve a juvenile with a municipal court citation but file it with county prosecutor in juvenile court; juvenile court judge orders state to obtain dismissal in municipal court (although citation never filed there), state fails to comply, trial court dismisses; held: municipal court lacked jurisdiction over juvenile, so no constitutional rights violation existed; no prejudice to respondent, thus trial court abused its discretion; I.

State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300 (1989)

Prosecutor's filing a more serious charge after defendant sets case for trial does not violate due process clause unless prosecutor acts with intent of retaliating, State v. Soderholm, 68 Wn.App. 363 (1993), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); appearance of vindictiveness is insufficient to establish due process violation, State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984), State v. McKenzie, 31 Wn.App. 450 (1981), State v. Lee, 69 Wn.App. 31 (1993), State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998), State v. Aguilar, 153 Wn.App. 265, 279-80 (2009); III.

State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 923 (1989)

State examines recanting victim as to alleged threats from defendant and asks whether victim told police about threats; victim denies threats, prosecutor does not call police to establish threats; held: misconduct, as prosecutor has duty to refrain from using statements which are not supported by evidence and which tend to prejudice defendant, State v. Hamilton, 47 Wn.App. 15, 18 (1987); because defense failed to object, and because prosecutor's comments were not so flagrant and ill intentioned that no curative instruction would have been effective, deemed harmless; I.

State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 186 (1989)

Exhorting jury in closing to send a message to society about the problem of child sex abuse is misconduct, State v. Perez-Mejia, 134 Wn.App. 907 (2006), State v. Ramos, 164 Wn.App. 327 (2011), but see: State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 839-42 (1999), State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417, 430-31 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Gauthier, 189 Wn.App. 30 (2015); urging jury to enforce the law on behalf of victim is misconduct; because prejudice could have been neutralized by a curative instruction, and because defense failed to object, harmless, see: State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 807-8 (1993); I.

State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990)

Prosecutor's argument that "anyone can call and subpoena witnesses if defendant's story is true and if he had a friend in his car where is that person?" is misconduct, see: State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 652-55 (2003), State v. Dixon, 150 Wn.App. 46 (2009), but see: State v. Contreras, 57 Wn.App. 471 (1990), State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 421-22 (2006),

Sundberg*, 185 Wn.2d 147 (2016), but not so flagrant and ill-intentioned to warrant a mistrial, at least in absence of a motion for one; could be cured by an instruction had one been requested in a timely fashion; accord: State v. Perez-Arellano, 60 Wn.App. 781 (1991); but see: State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Bogart, 57 Wn.App. 353 (1990)

Counsel, representing defendant charged with robbery 2°, is informed by prosecutor that if defendant doesn't plead by pretrial hearing, charge will be amended to robbery 1°; at time of pretrial hearing, counsel is on vacation, substitute counsel enters plea of not guilty; later, defendant tenders plea to robbery 2°, which is rejected, defendant is convicted of robbery 1°; held: in absence of detrimental reliance, state can revoke plea offer at any time, State v. Wheeler, 95 Wn.2d 799 (1981), State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 740-41 (2007); defense must show defendant relied on bargain in such a way that fair trial is no longer possible, State v. Budge, 125 Wn.App. 341 (2005); here, fair trial was not impeded; "'[t]he Due Process Clause is not a code of ethics for prosecutors; its concern is with the manner in which persons are deprived of their liberty,'" at 358; III.

State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990)

Rebuttal evidence, while not a reiteration of evidence in chief, will frequently overlap or coalesce with evidence in chief; error can be predicated only upon a manifest abuse of discretion, State v. White, 74 Wn.2d 386, 394-5 (1968), State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 641-42 (2005); while prosecutor may not express a personal opinion about credibility of witnesses during closing argument, State v. Reed, 102 Wn.2d 140, 145 (1984), State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611, 624 (1986), State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 437-38 (2014), prejudicial error does not occur until it is clear that the prosecutor is not arguing an inference from the evidence but is expressing a personal opinion, State v. Papadopoulos, 34 Wn.App. 397, 399 (1983), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 290-2 (1996), State v. McKenzie, 157 Wn.2d 44 (2006), see: State v. Millante, 80 Wn.App. 237, 250-1 (1995) ; 9-0.

State v. Marks, 114 Wn.2d 724 (1990)

Dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), is unwarranted where suppression of evidence may eliminate whatever prejudice is caused by governmental misconduct, Seattle v. Orwick, 113 Wn.2d 823 (1989), Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230, 236-39 (2010); dismissal is inappropriate when there is credible and admissible evidence obtained that is untainted by governmental misconduct, State v. Prok, 107 Wn.2d 153, 157 (1986), even where misconduct involved a reckless disregard for defendant's rights or gross mismanagement, cf.: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 212 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Contreras, 57 Wn.App. 471 (1990)

Assault defendant testifies to alibi, says he was with a third party during the assault, alibi witness not called; in cross-examination and closing, prosecutor comments about defendant's failure to call witness; held: in cross-examination, prosecutor may establish close relationship between defendant and uncalled witness to avoid being faulted by jury for witness's absence; in closing, prosecutor may comment on defendant's failure to call an alibi witness so long as it is clear that defendant was able to produce the witness and the defendant's testimony unequivocally implies the uncalled witness's ability to corroborate his theory of the case, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479 (1991), State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 421-22 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), distinguishing State v. Traweek, 43 Wn.App. 99 (1986), *State v. In statutory rape case, not improper for prosecutor to cross-examine defendant as to lack of reasons for victim to lie ("why would [victim] say something that is not true? does [she] have any reason to lie?") where defense repeatedly portrayed victim as untruthful, State v. Stith, 71 Wn.App. 14 (1993); cf.: State v. Stover, 67 Wn.App. 228 (1992), State v. Ramos, 164 Wn.App. 327 (2011); I.

State v. Delarosa-Flores, 59 Wn.App. 514 (1990)

Rape victim, on direct, denied "any other kind of sex act"; prosecution request for recess and consultation granted, following which victim testifies to forced oral sex; held: no evidence prosecutor did anything more than refresh victim's recollection; no evidence prosecutor improperly influenced testimony; defense could have cross-examined as to "coaching" during recess, Geders v. United States, 47 L.Ed.2d 592 (1976), failed to do so; leading questions are prohibited except "as may be necessary to develop [witness's] testimony," ER 611(c), within discretion of trial court; III.

State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 763 (1990)

State agrees in omnibus order to provide defense IRS records in victim's possession; after expiration date is extended seven times, state still had not provided records, trial court dismisses; held: dismissal was appropriate, CrR 8.3(b), as defendant had to choose between right to speedy trial or prepared defense, State v. Klok, 99 Wn.App. 81 (2000), harmless here, at 809-12; prosecutor's reference in closing to general societal problem of concern for children and how the judicial system can be frightening is misconduct, but is not flagrant requiring reversal absent objection, at 807-8, State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 186, 195 (1989); failure to object to misconduct precludes appellate review even if raised in motion for new trial, at 807 n.2, distinguishing State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 540 (1991), In re Lee, 95 Wn.2d 357, 363 (1980), State v. Fagalde, 85 Wn.2d 730, 731 (1975); I.

State v. Negrete, 72 Wn.App. 62, 67 (1993)

Closing argument that defense counsel "is being paid [by defendant] to twist the words of the witnesses" is misconduct, State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 438, 450-52 (2011), State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014), see: State v. Lile, 193 Wn.App. 179, 205-09 (2016), affirmed, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 766 (2017); defense objection was sustained but, absent mistrial motion or request for curative instruction, misconduct did not deprive defendant of fair trial, State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 16-18 (2013); III.

State v. Suarez-Bravo, 72 Wn.App. 359 (1994)

Prosecutor's questions to drug defendant as to whether he lived in high crime area sought irrelevant profile evidence; questions as to whether farmworkers see cocaine in fields were improper; prosecutor's misrepresenting testimony in cross-examining defendant to create conflict that did not exist, plus asking defendant to judge whether another witness is lying, State v. Casteñeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354, 362 (1991), State v. Ramos, 164 Wn.App. 327 (2011), State v. Stevens, 127 Wn.App. 269, 275-76 (2005), is misconduct, requiring reversal even absent objections, State v. Jerrels, 83 Wn.App. 503 (1996), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 89 (2003), but see: State v. Rodriguez, 103 Wn.App. 693, 702-03 (2000) , aff'd, on other grounds, 146 Wn.2d 260 (2002), State v. Cook, 17 Wn.App.2d 96 (2021); III.

State v. Carlisle, 73 Wn.App. 678 (1994)

Prosecutor tells counsel for defense witness, a potential accomplice, if he testifies and incriminates himself, she would relay information to her office for appropriate action, witness takes the Fifth; held: where defense witness is threatened and those threats keep witness off stand, defense is deprived of due process, Webb v. Texas, 34 L.Ed.2d 330 (1972); here, however, prosecutor merely advised witness, through counsel, to an accurate warning, thus no misconduct, State v. Larson, 160 Wn.App. 577, 590-91 (2011), State v. Statler, 160 Wn.App. 622, 636-38 (2011); I.

State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 320, 330-2 (1994), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995)

Defendant's general denial on stand does not invite prosecutor's argument that defendant is characterizing officers as liars and conspirators, which is misconduct, see: State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869, 875 (1991), State v. Wright, 76 Wn.App. 811, 821-6 (1995), State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 652-55 (2003), cf.: State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 421-22 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008); where defense has satisfactorily explained a witness's absence by seeking continuances and a material witness warrant, state may not refer to witness's absence in closing, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 488 (1991); harmless here; I.

State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 90-1 (1994)

State establishes that murder victim's ring was given by defendant to another, on cross-defense brings out that defendant had told donee that he got the ring in Canada, defendant does not testify, state argues in closing that defense could have called a witness from Canada to show where defendant got the ring; held: because the comments were based on testimony elicited by defense and pointed to logical support of the defense theory that was missing, the comments were justifiable under the missing witness doctrine, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 485-6 (1991), State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 652-55 (2003), State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 421-22 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), *State v. State v. Coleman, 74 Wn.App. 835 (1994)

Arguing that in order to accept the defense theory of the case the jury would have to violate their oath as jurors is misconduct, State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 839-42 (1999), harmless here; 2-1, I.

State v. Hofstetter, 75 Wn.App. 390 (1994)

It is misconduct for counsel to instruct or advise a witness not to speak with opposing counsel except when counsel is present; it is improper for a prosecutor to plea bargain in such a way as to impose such instructions or advice on a witness; prosecutor may inform a witness of the right to choose whether to be interviewed or who shall be present at an interview; absent prejudice, reversal is not warranted, see: State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003); II.

State v. Reed, 75 Wn.App. 742 (1994)

Defendant is arrested for selling drugs, signs agreement with police to assist in making narcotics arrests, police would "drop charges"; defendant sets up one transaction which fails, defendant refuses to assist further, claiming his safety was compromised, defendant is charged, moves to dismiss on contract theory; held: because prosecutor was not a party to the agreement, it cannot be binding on the prosecutor absent detrimental reliance which would no longer make a fair trial possible, or police misconduct or arbitrary action, CrR 8.3(b), see: State v. Hull, 78 Wn.2d 984, 989 (1971), State v. Bogart, 57 Wn.App. 353, 357 (1990); I.

State v. Wright, 76 Wn.App. 811, 821-6 (1995)

Asking witness on cross-examination whether another witness "got it wrong" or is mistaken, where no conflict exists, is objectionable, State v. Castañeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354, 362 (1991), but is not misconduct, see: State v. Neidigh, 78 Wn.App. 71, 74-80 (1995), but see: State v. Walden, 69 Wn.App. 183 (1993), distinguishing asking witness whether another witness is lying, which is misconduct, State v. Ramos, 164 Wn.App. 327 (2011), cf.: State v. Vassar, 188 Wn.App. 251 (2015); questions of one witness whether she believes another is mistaken, where discrepancies exist, is proper; closing argument that to believe defendant jury would need to believe prosecution witnesses were mistaken (as opposed to lying) is not objectionable and does not constitute misconduct, State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 835-37 (2012), distinguishing State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869, 875-6 (1991); it is misconduct to argue that, in order to acquit, jury must find prosecution witnesses are either lying or mistaken, State v. Fleming, 130 Wn.2d 244, 290-2 (1996), State v. Miles, 139 Wn.App. 879, 889-90 (2007), *State v. State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 175-180 (1995)

Arguing why jury should believe a witness, based upon facts and inferences of the case, is not vouching for credibility, State v. Millante, 80 Wn.App. 237, 250-1 (1995), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 290-2 (1996), State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.App. 877, 883-85 (2009), State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877, 892-95 (2015), see: State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340, 344 (1985); prosecutor's stating that there is no evidence to support a defense argument is not an improper comment on defendant's failure to testify where there were other potential witnesses who could have testified in support of the defense argument, see: State v. Ashby, 77 Wn.2d 33, 38 (1969), State v. Crawford, 21 Wn.App. 146 (1978), State v. Jackson, supra., at 887-88, State v. Morris, 150 Wn.App. 927 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Perez, 77 Wn.App. 372 (1995)

Deputy prosecutor's personal relationship with a relative of victim, absent "improper conduct," does not violate appearance of fairness doctrine, see: State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 808-10 (1999); 2-1, III.

State v. Fortune, 77 Wn.App. 628, 635-6 (1995), aff'd, on other grounds, 128 Wn.2d 464 (1996)

Closing argument that jury should acquit rather than convict of lesser is not misconduct; I.

State v. Neidigh, 78 Wn.App. 71 (1995)

Argument that state was "relying on truth," and that defendant had concocted a fairy tale is a permissible comment on the credibility of witnesses, State v. Kwan Fair Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 726 (1986), and not a personal opinion of witness's veracity, State v. Stith, 71 Wn.App. 14, 19 (1993); while questioning defendant as to whether a state's witness is lying is generally harmless error where no objection is taken, State v. Stover, 67 Wn.App. 228, 231 (1992), State v. Casteñeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354, 362-3 (1991), State v. Vassar, 188 Wn.App. 251 (2015), trial court should consider interrupting and admonishing sua sponte, calling counsel to the bench to inquire if defense wishes an instruction, or entering an order in limine, followed by contempt, RCW 7.21.050; I.

State v. Fiallo-Lopez, 78 Wn.App. 717 (1995)

Comment that defendant is an experienced drug dealer is not improper where defendant's actions in the charged transaction plus other evidence the jury considered permitted them to draw inference that he was experienced, at 728, distinguishing State v. Stith, 71 Wn.App. 14 (1993); argument that the facts indicated that police were truthful is not a personal statement about prosecutor's belief that officers were telling the truth, not misconduct, Stith, supra, at 21; I.

State v. Lewis, 78 Wn.App. 739 (1995)

Following mistrial, in ruling on a motion to dismiss for intentional misconduct, State v. Hopson, 113 Wn.2d 273 (1989), trial court may infer findings as to the intent of the prosecutor from the objective facts and circumstances, which will not be disturbed by appellate court if supported by substantial evidence, State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); here, misconduct neither meets the federal intentional provocation of mistrial test, Oregon v. Kennedy, 72 L.Ed.2d 416 (1982), nor the Oregon standard of indifference, Oregon v. Kennedy, 666 P.2d 1316 (1983); I.

State v. Kassahun, 78 Wn.App. 938, 952 (1995)

Where court denies defense discovery motion for victim's gang membership evidence, it is misconduct for prosecutor to argue that defendant's testimony about his belief in victim's gang membership is untruthful because he failed to offer evidence to support it; I.

State v. Binkin, 79 Wn.App. 284, 293-4 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Kilgore, 147 Wn.2d 288 (2002)

Prosecutor's argument that it's easy for defendant to deny the charge on the stand but it wasn't easy for victim to do so is a proper comment on credibility rather than a burden-shifting remark in light of victim's detailed testimony and defendant's flat denial; failure of defense to request a curative instruction waives error; I.

State v. Avendano-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706, 712-23 (1995)

Prosecutor's cross-examination question of defendant in drug case, "you have on occasion sold heroin haven't you?" is misconduct, door not opened as defendant did not testify to a trait of character or paint a picture of a person unlikely to commit the crime, State v. Stockton, 91 Wn.App. 35, 40 (1998), State v. Jones, 144 Wn.App. 284, 297-99 (2008), see: State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445 (1982), State v. Renneberg, 83 Wn.2d 735, 736-8 (1974); asking defendant if he is "legal in this country" is misconduct, door not opened by defendant's direct testimony that he was born in Mexico, harmless; II.

State v. Simonson, 82 Wn.App. 226, 231-4 (1996)

Prosecutor subpoenas officer, defense counsel informs prosecutor he wants to call the officer, officer arrives outside court, prosecutor sees officer and tells officer he won't be calling her, defense is unaware she leaves, trial court denies continuance to obtain the witness; held: prosecutor had an obligation to advise the court and counsel of the witness's presence because he knew defense wanted to call her, trial court erred in denying continuance, harmless here; II.

State v. Smith, 82 Wn.App. 327 (1996)

Where defendant testifies to an alibi involving his wife, state may not cross-examine or argue about the failure to call the spouse as a witness, at 336-37, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 489 (1991), State v. Charlton, 90 Wn.2d 657, 663 (1978), State v. Swan, 25 Wn.2d 319, 327 (1946), State v. Gant, 6 Wn.App. 263 (1971), *cf.: State v. State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 290-4 (1996)

Prosecutor's argument that defendant lied or was a liar, when the comments relate to evidence contradicting defendant's testimony and statements, is not misconduct, as prosecutor is not merely calling defendant a liar or expressing a personal opinion, State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 664 (1990), State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 175-80 (1995), State v. Adams, 76 Wn.2d 650, 660, rev'd on other grounds, 29 L.Ed.2d 855 (1971), State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 18-19 (2013); product rule, assigning probabilities to events or inviting jury to consider the possible rarity of each of the circumstances and then multiply them together, where the events are not shown to be independent, is misconduct, as it suggests an infallibility, particularly inappropriate where eyewitness testimony is concerned, waived here absent objection and request for curative instruction; 9-0.

State v. Savaria, 82 Wn.App. 832, 841-2 (1996), disapproved, in part, State v. C.G., 150 Wn.2d 604, 611 (2003)

While evidence of prior abuse is relevant to establish victim's reasonable fear in harassment case, prosecutor's argument that the acts were typical of defendant's behavior and characterization of the parties' relationship as a cycle of violence was improper; I.

State v. Fleming, 83 Wn.App. 209 (1996)

Argument that to convict jury would have to find that complainant lied or was confused is misconduct, State v. Castañeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354, 362-3 (1991), State v. Wright, 76 Wn.App. 811, 826 (1995), State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869, 874-5 (1991), *State v. State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997)

Defendant is accused of stealing items and pawning them, is charged with theft, three days before trial state adds charges of trafficking in stolen property, trial court dismisses; held:

state's delay in adding new charges when it had all the evidence necessary to file those charges months earlier, forcing defendant to waive speedy trial to answer the new charges, justifies dismissal in the interests of justice, CrR 8.3(b), State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980), State v. Teems, 89 Wn.App. 385 (1997), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); 5-4.

State v. Koerber, 85 Wn.App. 1 (1997)

Before trial begins, prosecutor tells judge that a witness is ill, unknown when witness will be available, judge dismisses with prejudice for "want of prosecution"; held: dismissal is unwarranted for minor acts of negligence by third parties beyond state's direct control absent prejudice, State v. Duggins, 68 Wn.App. 396, 402, aff'd, 121 Wn.2d 524 (1993), State v. Marks, 114 Wn.2d 724, 731 (1990), State v. McPherson, 64 Wn.App. 705, 709-10 (1992), *State v. State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 566 (1997)

Referring to a defense argument as "ludicrous" is not misconduct; 9-0.

State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389 (1997)

Prosecutor asks state's witnesses, over objection, if they wanted to be in court, elicits that a witness had to be arrested on material witness warrant, witnesses testified they were in fear of being injured; held: absent an attack on credibility from opposing counsel, evidence intended to fortify or corroborate credibility of a witness is inadmissible, at 319, State v. Kosanke, 23 Wn.2d 211, 215 (1945), State v. McGhee, 57 Wn.App. 457, 460-1 (1990), State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301 (1981), cf.: State v. Hakimi, 124 Wn.App. 15, 24-26 (2004); fears and threats to witnesses, where not linked to defendant, is irrelevant; reverses State v. Bourgeois, 82 Wn.App. 314 (1996) as harmless error; I.

State v. Teems, 89 Wn.App. 385 (1997)

Forty days after mistrial, state "refiles" and notifies a lawyer who had withdrawn, notifies defendant 12 days before time for trial expiration date, trial court dismisses; held: state caused delay through simple mismanagement, within trial court's discretion to find that defendant was impermissibly forced into choosing between speedy trial and a fair trial with adequately prepared counsel, State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997), State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810, 814 (1980), State v. Ralph G., 90 Wn.App. 16 (1998), State v. Earl, 97 Wn.App. 408 (1999), *State v. State v. Copeland, 89 Wn.App. 492, 496-9 (1998)

Prosecutor fails to disclose local impeachable conviction of witness; held: where conviction record is in prosecutor's office, accessible to all members of the staff, then deputy's failure to disclose is misconduct, regardless of inadvertence, State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 728, 733 (1992), see: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004), distinguishing State v. Frederick, 32 Wn.App. 624 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 100 Wn.2d 550 (1983); II.

State v. Granacki, 90 Wn.App. 598 (1998)

During trial recess, detective who is permitted to remain in court as part of witness exclusion order, ER 615, is observed reading top page of defense counsel's notes on counsel table, trial court dismisses following hearing in which court determines that detective's testimony that he had only read his own name was not credible; held: dismissal is a proper discretionary remedy for eavesdropping on privileged communication between attorney and client, State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371, 5 A.L.R.3d 1352 (1963), State v. Perrow, 156 Wn.App. 322 (2010), see: State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808 (2014), CrR 8.3(b), State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018), cf.: State v. Hunter, 100 Wn.App. 198 (2000), State v. Koeller, 15 Wn.App.2d 245 (2020); lesser remedies of excluding detective's testimony, banning him from courtroom and prohibiting him from discussing case would also have been within court's discretion; I.

State v. Bland, 90 Wn.App. 677 (1998)

Deputy prosecutor who also works as a hospital social worker testifies in rape trial about her observations of victim, over objection that entire prosecutor's office should have been disqualified, RPC 3.7; held: because prosecutors do not represent clients, a more flexible approach is appropriate; trial court should consider if witness can be objective, whether dual positions artificially bolster witness's credibility, and whether dual role raises an appearance of unfairness; here, witness testified only in her capacity as a social worker, had no personal interest, thus disqualification was unnecessary, see also: State v. Stenger, 111 Wn.2d 516 (1988), State v. Schmitt, 124 Wn.App. 662 (2004); I.

State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 702-3 (1998)

After defendant declines plea offer, state moves to amend to more serious charge, trial court denies motion, finding vindictiveness, defense motion to dismiss all charges denied; held: court's denial of motion to amend results in no prejudice to defendant, thus denial of motion to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b), was not an abuse of discretion, see: Thigpen v. Roberts, 82 L.Ed.2d 23 (1984), State v. Marks, 114 Wn.2d 724, 730-32 (1990); II.

State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998)

Defendant, charged with one count, declines to plead, state moves to add ten additional counts, defense demands hearing, alleging vindictiveness, court denies motion; held: there is no presumption of vindictiveness in pretrial setting, United States v. Goodwin, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982), *State v. Korum,*157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), defendant has burden to prove either actual vindictiveness or realistic likelihood of vindictiveness which will give rise to a presumption of vindictiveness, State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); defense counsel's claim that he had never seen charges this severe when no one was harmed is insufficient to require discovery, United States v. Armstrong, 134 L.Ed.2d 687 (1996), or to require a fact-finding hearing, see: State v. McKenzie, 31 Wn.App. 450 (1981), State v. Penn, 32 Wn.App. 911 (1982), State v. McDowell, 102 Wn.2d 341 (1984), State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300 (1989), State v. Soderholm, 68 Wn.App. 363 (1993), State v. Lee, 69 Wn.App. 31 (1993); II.

State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 470-71 (1999)

In attempt to elude case, defense argues defendant doesn't fit profile of eluder, state, over objection, responds in rebuttal argument that Ted Bundy didn't fit profile of a killer; held: in context, jury would see the remark as a "rhetorical overreaction to a defense argument," thus did not deprive defendant of fair trial; II.

State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792 (1999)

Following killing of police officer, prosecutor states that lawyers in prosecutor's office are taking the death as hard as the sheriff's, defense moves to disqualify prosecutor's office; held: appearance of fairness doctrine is only applicable to judges or quasi-judicial decisionmakers, at 808-10, Carrick v. Locke, 125 Wn.2d 129, 143 n.8 (1994), cf.: State v. Perez, 77 Wn.App. 372, 376 (1995), State v. Ladenburg, 67 Wn.App. 749, 754 (1992); appeals to the jury to act as the conscience of the community do not rise to the level of misconduct unless specifically designed to inflame the jury, at 839-42, but see: State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 186, 193 (1989), State v. Coleman, 74 Wn.App. 835, 838 (1994), United States v. Young, 84 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985), State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417, 430-41 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Ramos, 164 Wn.App. 327, 337-41 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Rivers, 96 Wn.App. 672 (1999)

In assault trial, defense character witnesses appear in jail garb, prosecutor in closing argues that defendant and his friends are "predators," "jackals," that jailed witnesses are the "pajama crowd" and that they would be assaulted in the shower if they did not testify for defendant, defense objections overruled; held: highly inflammatory, unprofessional comments aimed squarely at jury's passions were misconduct mandating reversal, cf.: State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 39-41 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Richmond, 16 Wn.App.2d 751 (2021); I.

Portuondo v. Agard, 146 L.Ed.2d 47 (2000)

Argument that defendant, unlike other witnesses, gets to sit through trial, hear witnesses and "think what am I going to say and how am I going to say it" does not violate Fifth or Sixth Amendment or due process clause, State v. Miller, 110 Wn.App. 283 (2002), State v. Martin, 171 Wn.2d 521 (2011), but see: State v. Wallin, 166 Wn.App. 364 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Klok, 99 Wn.App. 81 (2000)

Without objection, prosecutor argues that defendant "has been laughing through about half of this trial;" held: while commenting on defendant's demeanor and inviting jury to draw a negative inference about defendant's character is improper, see: State v. Barry, 183 Wn.2d 297 (2015), reversal despite a lack of objection is not required because the statement was not so flagrant and ill-intentioned that a curative instruction from the court could not have obviated the prejudice, State v. Belgarde, 110 Wn.2d 504, 507 (1988), State v. French, 101 Wn.App. 380 (2000), State v. Jordan, 106 Wn.App. 291, 295-99 (2001), State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 678-80 (2001), distinguishing State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 809-12 (1993); I.

State v. Garza, 99 Wn.App. 291 (2000)

Following escape attempt, jail guards seize legal materials from inmates, trial court concludes that documents were read, finds no prejudice and that state acted in good faith, denies dismissal; held: remanded for trial court to enter findings as to whether security concerns justified reading legal materials, precise articulation of what guards were looking for and why it might have been contained in legal materials and why reading was required; if security concerns did not justify specific level of intrusion, there is a presumption of prejudice State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808 (2014), State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018); even if there is no presumption of prejudice, defense may prove prejudice by demonstrating that evidence gained will be used at trial or that prosecution is using confidential information pertaining to defense strategies or that intrusions destroyed defendants' confidence in counsel or that intrusion will otherwise give state unfair advantage; even if prejudice is established, dismissal is not necessarily the appropriate remedy, e.g., suppression may resolve the prejudice; see: State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371, 373-74, 5 A.L.R.3rd 1352 (1963), State v. Granacki, 90 Wn.App. 598, 601-2 (1998), State v. Perrow, 156 Wn.App. 322 (2010), cf.: State v. Blizzard, 195 Wn.App. 717, 732-33 (2016); III.

Pers. Restraint of McNeal, 99 Wn.App. 617 (2000)

At a community custody revocation hearing, respondent is entitled to due process rights provided in a parole revocation hearing, Morrissey v. Brewer, 33 L.Ed.2d 484 (1972), State v. Abd-Rahmaan, 154 Wn.2d 280 (2005), but is not entitled to appointed counsel; 2-1, I.

State v. French, 101 Wn.App. 380 (2000)

Defense argues to jury that state failed to call witnesses, prosecutor rebuts that defense can call them as well, defense objects, prosecutor abandons argument; held: because missing witnesses here were cumulative or unimportant, defense invocation of the missing witness doctrine was improper, see: State v. Frazier, 55 Wn.App. 204, 211-12 (1989), State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 490 (1991), thus prosecutor's response was provoked or invited and prosecutor's reply was properly pertinent, State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757, 760 (1984), State v. LaPorte, 58 Wn.2d 816, 822 (1961), see: State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 403, 414 (2006); in companion case, prosecutor argued that defense has given no reason to conclude that defendant didn't commit crime, defense sought mistrial after verdict; held: shifting burden argument, while touching on a constitutional right, can still be curable by a timely instruction, State v. Klok, 99 Wn.App. 81, 84 (2000), untimely objection precludes mistrial, but see: State v. Dixon, 150 Wn.App. 46, 57 n. 4 (2009); III.

State v. Beliz, 104 Wn.App. 206, 211-12 (2001)

State notifies defense of witnesses just before trial, defense motion to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b), is denied but court excludes witnesses' testimony; held: remedy short of dismissal was not an abuse of discretion, Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230, 236-39 (2010), cf.: State v. Thacker, 94 Wn.2d 276 (1980), State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 879-84 (1998), State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003); III.

State v. Smith, 144 Wn.2d 665, 678-80 (2001)

In closing, prosecutor argues that defendant looked like he "has an attitude," and a "chip on his shoulder," defense does not object but argues back that state's comments were "character assassination;" held: while comments about defendant's demeanor are "likely improper," see: State v. Barry, 183 Wn.2d 297 (2015), failure to object and defense argument was apparently tactical, comments by prosecutor were curable, State v. Klok, 99 Wn.App. 81, 85 (2000).

State v. Mendoza-Solorio, 108 Wn.App. 823, 834-35 (2001)

Officer testifies that another witness is a "reliable informant," and has been honest and never lied to him, no objection by defense; held: witness' testimony was improper vouching, State v. Camarillo, 115 Wn.2d 60, 71 (1990), see: State v. Perez-Valdez, 172 Wn.2d 808, 817-19 (2011), harmless here; III.

State v. Gonzales, 111 Wn.App. 276, 282-84 (2002)

Over objection, prosecutor argues that she does not have a client, that she does not have an obligation to convict, but that she took an oath and an obligation to see that justice is done; held: prosecutor invoking cloak of righteousness is misconduct; impugning integrity of defense counsel is misconduct; I.

State v. Mitchell, 114 Wn.App. 713 (2002)

Sentence which provides for community custody for 9 to 12 months or amount of early earned release time, whichever is longer, is sufficiently precise, distinguishing State v. Broadaway, 133 Wn.2d 118, 135-36 (1997), State v. Nelson, 100 Wn.App. 226, 230-31 (2000), State v. Pharris, 120 Wn.App. 661 (2004); I.

State v. Soh, 115 Wn.App. 290 (2003)

Failure to disclose promises of leniency to a witness is misconduct, whether or not the promise was memorialized in writing or made by a police officer rather than a prosecutor; an offer of leniency that has any impeachment value must be disclosed; "it is difficult to imagine an offer of leniency in exchange for testimony that would not have impeachment value," at 295; where defense learns of the promise before trial, then dismissal is not a remedy, as defendant is not prejudiced, State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); I.

State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003)

Defense obtains court order, shortly before expiration date, for prosecutor to arrange for interview with state's witnesses, interviews do not occur prior to deadline, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(b); held: while defense has the right to interview a witness in advance of trial, State v. Burri, 87 Wn.2d 175, 181 (1976), here no misconduct occurred due to short time period for prosecutor to seek deposition or material witness warrant, State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91 (2003), see: State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91 (2003); trial court ignored "intermediate remedial steps," State v. Koerber, 85 Wn.App. 1, 4 (1996) of releasing defendant to extend time for trial expiration date or suppression of evidence, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 880-84 (1998), aff'd, 147 Wn.2d 197, 202-06 (2002), Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230, 236-39 (2010), see also: State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); affirms State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003); 8-1.

State v. Rohrich, 149 Wn.2d 647 (2003)

A long delay in filing a charge is not grounds for dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), absent proof of actual prejudice to defendant, State v. Stein, 140 Wn.App. 43, 56-60 (2007); speculation that witnesses' memories could have faded is insufficient, reversing State v. Rohrich, 110 Wn.App. 832 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 118 Wn.App. 199 (2003)

As a condition of community custody, court may order that offender obey all laws, RCW 9A.94A.715(2)(b), overuling State v. Barclay, 51 Wn.App. 404 (1988) and overruling, in part, State v. Raines, 83 Wn.App. 312, 315-16 (1996), abstain from alcohol even if the case is not alcohol-related, former RCW 9.94A.120(8)(a) [may have been repealed, see: RCW 9.94A.505 and this case, at n. 19], cf.: State v. Norris, 1 Wn.App.2d 87 (2017), rev., in part, 191 Wn.2d 671 (2018), may not order alcohol treatment if alcohol did not relate to the crime, State v. Warnock, 174 Wn.App. 608 (2013), State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 786 (2014), may not order mental health counseling if not crime-related, State v. Brooks, 142 Wn.App. 842, 849-52 (2008), see: State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870, 890-94 (2015); II.

State v. Moran, 119 Wn.App. 197, 219-20 (2003)

In homicide case, prosecutor's closing that victim's spirit awaits verdict in order to be quieted is misconduct as it appeals to emotion, but was not flagrant and ill-intentioned and, absent objection, was not reversible error; I.

State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 652-54 (2003)

Prosecutor's comment in closing that defense could have called a witness who was referred to by another defense witness as someone who could have provided a partial alibi to defendant was not misconduct, as the witness was peculiarly available to defendant who, evidence established, was a good friend of defendants; availability is to be determined by the witness' relationship to the parties, not mere physical presence or accessibility, State v. Davis, 133 Wn.App. 415, 421-22 (2006), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.2d 606 (2008), State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 490 (1991); while satisfactory explanation of absence will preclude prosecutor arguing absence, State v. Blair, supra. at 488, State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 320, 330-32 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995), here defense explanation that the missing witness had day care issues but could be called the next day, but defense did not call her was not satisfactory, as defense did not seek a recess to allow the witness to testify; 8-0.

State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004)

During trial, state discloses to defense exculpatory evidence that defendant did not possess the firearm in question at the time of the crime; even after disclosure, state cross-examines defendant to infer that he is lying about the time of possession; jury hangs, court declares mistrial, state re-notes case for trial, amends information to allege more serious charges from same incident, trial court finds prejudicial misconduct and dismisses, state appeals; held: trial court's finding that untimely revelation of exculpatory evidence constituted misconduct and a due process violation, In re Pers. Restraint of Gentry, 137 Wn.2d 378, 396 (1999) was not an abuse of discretion; government misconduct may be so outrageous that it exceeds the bounds of fundamental fairness, barring subsequent prosecution, State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 18 (1996), State v. Solomon, 3 Wn.App.2d 895 (2018), see: State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 347-52 (2014); had defendant moved for a mistrial when the exculpatory evidence was revealed, he could not have argued that retrial would be barred by double jeopardy unless he could have proved state intended to provoke a mistrial, Oregon v. Kennedy, 72 L.Ed.2d 416 (1982), State v. Juarez, 115 Wn.App. 881, 888 (2003), thus dismissal was appropriate; III.

State v. Schmitt, 124 Wn.App. 662 (2004)

Deputy prosecuting attorney's investigation and discussion with complainant results in deputy having material information useful to defense, trial court disqualifies entire prosecutor's office, RPC 3.7; held: where a deputy prosecutor can be effectively screened and separated from participation and discussion of matters concerning which the deputy is disqualified then disqualification of the entire prosecutor's office "is neither necessary nor wise," State v. Stenger, 111 Wn.2d 516, 523 (1988), distinguishing State v. Bland, 90 Wn.App. 677 (1998); II.

State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 408-10 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007)

Defense counsel inquires of state's witness whether detective didn't believe him, witness agrees then explains he changed his testimony, prosecutor then calls detective and elicits that detective did tell witness he didn't believe him; held: while a witness may not give an opinion as to credibility, State v. Casteñeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354, 360 (1991), here defense opened the door, placing the detective's opinion of the witness' veracity at issue, State v. Vassar, 188 Wn.App. 251 (2015), see: State v. Gallagher, 112 Wn.App. 601, 609-10 (2002); II.

State v. Dykstra, 127 Wn.App. 1, 7-8 (2005)

Co-defendants plead guilty and testify against defendant, in closing defense counsel argues that numerous people were involved in the crime but only defendant was charged, prosecutor rebuts that all of the people were charged, trial court overrules defense objection; held: defendant's argument that the jury should not convict because other culpable people were not charged was improper, state's rebuttal was appropriate, State v. La Porte, 58 Wn.2d 816, 822 (1961), as state may reply to defense arguments even if the remarks might otherwise be improper if they do not go beyond what is necessary to respond and do not bring before the jury matters not in the record, State v. Francisco, 148 Wn.App. 168, 178-89 (2009), or be so prejudicial that an instruction cannot cure them; III.

State v. Stevens, 127 Wn.App. 269, 275-76 (2005)

Asking a witness whether two victims' statements were consistent is relevant only on the issue of the truthfulness of the victims, equivalent to asking whether another witness is truthful, State v. Jerrels, 83 Wn.App. 503, 507 (1996), State v. Suarez-Bravo, 72 Wn.App. 359, 366 (1994), State v. Casteñeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354 (1991), which is misconduct; allowing a witness to review her prior statements before testifying is not misconduct; II.

State v. Boehning, 127 Wn.App. 511 (2005)

In child molestation case, arguing that victim's inadmissible statements to police were consistent with her testimony is flagrant misconduct, cf.: State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 4348 (2011); arguing that victim had disclosed more serious allegations, not admitted at trial, is flagrant misconduct; drawing attention to dismissed charges and arguing that victim's statements, not admitted, would have supported them, is flagrant misconduct; asking defendant on cross if the victim made it all up is misconduct; II.

State v. McKenzie, 157 Wn.2d 44 (2006)

Calling defendant "guilty" in closing is not a "clear and unmistakable" expression of the prosecutor's personal opinion, at 56-57. State v. Papadopoulos, 34 Wn.App. 397, 400 (1983);

"[i]f the evidence indicates that the defendant is a murderer or killer [or rapist], it is not prejudicial to so designate him," State v. Buttry, 199 Wash. 228, 250 (1939); referring to child rape victim's "lost innocence" is improper but, absent objection, is not flagrant and ill-intentioned; 6-3.

State v. Borboa, 157 Wn.2d 108, 122-24 (2006)

Prosecutor calling a crime "horrible" in closing, when the crime was horrible, is not misconduct, State v. Fleetwood, 75 Wn.2d 80, 84 (1968); prosecutor's passing reference to the lack of defense evidence is not a comment on the defendant's failure to testify, State v. Pavelich, 150 Wash. 411, 420 (1928); 8-1.

State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 663, 671-74 (2006)

Prosecutor states in closing that proof of defendant's controlling behavior is established by his representing himself, no objection; held: prosecutor may not comment on defendant's Sixth Amendment right to represent himself, harmless here; I.

State v. Slone, 133 Wn.App. 120, 129-30 (2006)

District court suppresses evidence of field tests in DUI case, trooper testifies he asked defendant to take some physical tests, objection sustain, mistrial denied; held: trial court properly exercised discretion in denying mistrial for violation of an order in limine after finding there was no prejudice; II.

State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006)

Prosecutor writes to defense offering a plea to robberies with ten year recommendation but stating that if case goes to trial, state will add kidnappings and recommend 100 years, defendant pleads guilty, is later granted leave to withdraw pleas, state amends to add kidnappings, defendant is convicted and sentenced to 117 years, claims vindictiveness; held: mere filing of additional charges and the consequent increase in sentence, regardless of the magnitude, cannot support a presumption of vindictiveness without proving additional facts, State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998), State v. Lee, 69 Wn.App. 31, 35-38 (1993), State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300, 306 (1989), United States v. Goodwin, 73 L.Ed.2d 74 (1982), State v. Aguilar, 153 Wn.App. 265, 279-80 (2009), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); mere fact that co-defendants, who pleaded guilty, received much shorter sentences is not vindictive or cruel and unusual; reverses State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Perez-Mejia, 134 Wn.App. 907 (2006)

In gang shooting case, argument that jurors should send a message is misconduct, State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991), State v. Ramos, 64 Wn.App. 327 (2011), State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 186 (1989), cf.: State v. Gauthier, 189 Wn.App. 30 (2015); I.

State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014)

Asking rape victim how she feels about testifying and being cross-examined is not misconduct or an appeal to sympathy, at 805-11; arguing in closing that defense could have called a witness whom defense suggested had actually committed the crime is misconduct, as the witness' testimony would necessarily be self-incriminatory, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 489-90 (1991) but, absent request for curative instruction is harmless here, at 845-46, see: State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 26 n. 3 (2008); 8-1.

State v. Weber, 159 Wn.2d 252, 270-79 (2006)

Where a motion in limine to exclude evidence is granted and the other party appears to violate the order, counsel must object to preserve the error, State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 819-21 (1999), State v. Sullivan, 69 Wn.App. 167 (1993), State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244, 256 (1995), State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889, 895-96 (1984), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Brown, 111 Wn.2d 124 (1988), 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), cf.: State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688, 700-02 (2008); where a party's motion in limine is denied, the party need not object to preserve error, State v. Smith, 189 Wash. 422 (1937); 5-4.

State v. Sandoval, 138 Wn.App. 532, 540-45 (2007)

In domestic violence case in which victim did not appear and court admitted hearsay naming defendant under medical exception, prosecutor argues in closing, over objection, that exceptions to the hearsay rules are allowed because they have been deemed reliable; held: while argument about points of law that are not included in instructions may be error and could be viewed as vouching, it is not prejudicial here; 2-1, III.

State v. Miles, 139 Wn.App. 879 (2007)

State offers evidence that defendant drove to a drug deal, defendant claims he was incapacitated and disabled, state cross-examines about defendant participating in boxing matches during disability which defendant denies, state fails to offer evidence in support of impeachment; held: where a prosecutor's questions refer to extrinsic evidence that is never introduced and imparts evidence within the prosecutor's personal knowledge, then failure to prove the statements in rebuttal is misconduct, State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 855 (1999), State v. Babich, 68 Wn.App. 438, 445-46 (1993); defense counsel's failure to object is excused as defense could not have known state would not prove claim in rebuttal; arguing in closing that jury could find defendant not guilty only if they believed his evidence is flagrant misconduct, State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869 (1991); II.

State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 344-46 (2007)

Arguing that jury should consider totality of the circumstances in determining whether state has proved its case beyond a reasonable doubt is not misconduct where instructions properly define reasonable doubt; III.

State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 39-41 (2007)

Analogy in closing that Hispanic defendant is like a "mangie [sic] mongrel mutt is improper, State v. Rivers, 96 Wn.App. 672, 673 (1999) but, absent objection, is not reversible error, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Richmond, 16 Wn.App.2d 751 (2021); III.

State v. Classen, 143 Wn.App. 45, 63-65 (2008)

Prosecutor argues, without objection, that "manslaughter is an accident;" held: assuming prosecutor's misstatement of law was misconduct, State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757, 758-59

(1984), it was not so flagrant and ill-intentioned that a curative instruction could not have remedied it's prejudicial effect; 2-1, II.

State v. Orozco, 144 Wn.App. 17 (2008)

Where prosecutor's office assists a victim in obtaining an anti-harassment order, it is not precluded from prosecuting the defendant for violation of that order, but see: RCW 36.27.050; I.

State v. Puapuaga, 164 Wn.2d 515 (2008)

Defendant is sent to state hospital for competency evaluation, hospital staff inventory his possessions upon arrival, find unredacted discovery and note containing possible threat to a witness, advise prosecutor who obtains ex parte seizure order, trial court holds hearing and appoints special master to view documents denies CrR 8.3(b) motion to dismiss; held: by appointing a special master and allowing defendant to challenge state's action in a hearing, trial court acted within its authority to regulate discovery, dismissal is not an appropriate remedy; 9-0.

State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 23-31 (2008)

State concedes on appeal that prosecutor's argument that beyond a reasonable doubt doesn't mean give defendant benefit of the doubt is error, curative instruction obviated prejudice; state concedes that prosecutor's derogatory comment in closing that defense counsel's argument is "an example of what people go through…when they deal with defense attorneys" and "a classic example of taking these facts and completely twisting them to their own benefit" is improper, State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 438, 450-52 (2011), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 472-73 (2012), State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 431-34 (2014), but, absent objection, was not flagrant and ill-intentioned, State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 16-18 (2013); prosecutor's arguing that details in victim's testimony gave it a "badge of truth" is not misconduct where defense attacked credibility as not an explicit statement of personal opinion of credibility and a reasonable inference from the facts, State v. Lewis, 156 Wn.App. 230, 239-42 (2010), State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611 (2013); affirms State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44 (2006); 5-4.

State v. Jones, 144 Wn.App. 284 (2008)

Closing argument that police would suffer professional repercussions if they used an untrustworthy informant, would have discontinued using an informant if they doubted his trustworthiness, that informants can be trusted, that when "police say something happens, it happens," is improper bolstering; "it is generally improper for prosecutors to bolster a police witness's good character even if the record supports such argument," at 293, State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 838, 844-45 (1992); speculation during closing that an informant didn't testify because he was frightened, in the hospital, defendant was a threat, informant was a friend of the police, all not supported by evidence, is misconduct; defense counsel's eliciting from officer that informant had a warrant outstanding, while arguably relevant to consideration of a missing witness instruction, did not open the door to prosecutor seizing the opportunity to admit inadmissible and inflammatory hearsay evidence, State v. Avendano-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706, 712-23 (1995), see also: State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445 (1982),); II.

State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 744-49 (2009)

In sex abuse case, trial court orders that prior acts by defendant upon victim's siblings known to victim are admissible if defense raises delay in reporting, state refers to abuse in opening, cross and closing, defense never raises issue, enters a standing objection which is overruled; held: while trial court properly found that the physical abuse was proved by a preponderance had had a proper purpose, court's limiting admission to rebut delayed reporting was correct, prosecutor's misconduct in offering the evidence in its case in chief was reversible misconduct; 9-0.

State v. Francisco, 148 Wn.App. 168, 178-80 (2009)

In drug possession case, defense counsel argues to jury that state failed to produce a dirty urinalysis from the jail, state responds in closing that jail must have a court order before it can produce a urinalysis, defense objection is overruled, judge in overruling objection states that jail must have an order; held: even if improper, a prosecutor's remarks that are in direct response to a defense argument are not grounds for reversal as long as the remarks do not go beyond what is necessary to respond to the defense and do not bring before the jury matters not in the record, State v. Dykstra, 127 Wn.App. 1, 8 (2005), State v. La Porte, 58 Wn.2d 816, 822 (1961); III.

State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009)

Dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), is a remedy where state inexcusably fails to provide discovery, trial court grants continuances as an alternative to dismissal but discovery is still not forthcoming, state has burden of considering other alternatives besides continuances before trial court dismisses, State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007); II.

State v. Dixon, 150 Wn.App. 46 (2009)

Police arrest defendant in car for possession of drugs, do not get name of passenger, only evidence at trial as to who passenger is was officer's testimony that he "gathered" he was defendant' friend, defendant does not testify, defense counsel argues that there is doubt because there was an unknown person in car, prosecutor rebuts that defense could have called the witness, defendant did not make statements or testify that passenger put drugs in her purse, no objection; held: prosecutor may only comment on defendant's failure to call a witness where "it is clear the defendant was able to produce the witness and the defendant's testimony unequivocally implies the uncalled witness' ability to corroborate his theory of the case," at 55, State v. Contreras, 57 Wn.App. 471, 476 (1990); prosecutor shifted burden when he implied she should have presented evidence to support her defense; test is (1) whether prosecutor's conduct was improper and (2) whether there is a substantial likelihood that the misconduct affected the verdict, State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 26 n.3 (2008), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 809 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), not harmless error analysis; II. 2-1.

State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 587-98 (2009)

During closing, prosecutor uses slides to "explain the law," some of which arguably mis-state the instructions and add law not instructed, defense objects to two slides but not others; held: as to the slides objected to, because both parties repeatedly reminded the jury to rely upon the court's instructions, and trial court instructed jury that argument is not the law, the arguable error was harmless; as to slides shown without objection, error, if any, was not flagrant and ill-intentioned, could have been neutralized by an admonition to the jury; II.

State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.App. 877 (2009)

Argument that police accurately reported what they observed and police testimony was "accurate and true" is not vouching where prosecutor reminds jury that jury is the judge of credibility and context of the entire argument was that evidence supported credibility of police, at 883-85, State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 175 (1995), State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877, 892-95 (2015); arguing that there is no evidence to corroborate defense witness' story and that jury should compare defendant's evidence with state's evidence to determine credibility of defense witness does not shift burden, at 885-86, State v. Osman, 192 Wn.App. 355 (2016), distinguishing State v. Fleming, 83 Wn.App. 209, 215 (1996), State v. Traweek, 43 Wn.App. 99, 106-07 (1986), overruled on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479 (1991), and is not a comment on privilege against self-incrimination where argument focuses on the fact that police testimony contradicts testimony of defense witness, State v. Brett, supra.; arguing "what possible reason would [t]rooper…have to lie" is not misconduct, as it is not saying that the jury could acquit only if it disbelieves the officers; prosecutor arguing "I think" witness may have ulterior motives, while "highly problematic," at 889, is not misconduct where no objection was taken, see: State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 94-95 (1991); II.

State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010)

Evidence that an immunized witness has agreed to testify truthfully should not be admitted in state's case-in-chief, State v. Green, 119 Wn.App. 15 (2003), but may be elicited by the state if the defense has attacked the witness' credibility on cross-examination; reverses State v. Ish, 150 Wn.App. 775 (2009), cf.: State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Anderson, 153 Wn.App. 417 (2009)

Closing argument that jury should return a "just verdict" is not misconduct; argument, over objection, that jury should "declare the truth" from the Latin word "veredictum" is misconduct as jury's job is not to solve the case, State v. Evans, 163 Wn.App. 635 (2011), State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724 (2011), harmless here; "in order to find the defendant not guilty, you have to say 'I don't believe the defendant is guilty because" and then you have to fill in the blank" is improper as jury need not "find a reason" to acquit, at 431 ¶ 14, State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 523-25 (2010), State v. Johnson, 158 Wn.App. 677 (2010), State v. Sakellis, 164 Wn.App. 170 (2011), State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 759-65 (2012; discussing the reasonable doubt standard in the context of everyday decision making (leaving children with babysitter, changing lanes on freeway, dental surgery) is misconduct as it trivializes and ultimately fails to convey gravity of state's burden, at 431 ¶ 15, State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014), harmless absent objection; discussing "common decisions in which one might choose to act or refrain from acting, focusing on the degree of certainty the jurors would have to have to be willing to act, rather than that which would cause them to hesitate to act" is misconduct because it confuses jury's duty to acquit unless state proves it's case with the idea it should convict unless jury finds a reason not to, at 432 ¶ 16, harmless absent objection; II.

State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 288-90 (2010)

During drug and harassment trial, jurors observe display set out by prosecutor's office outside courthouse of shoes in memory of violent crime victims, trial judge questions jurors, dismisses one juror who says seeing empty children's shoes affected her, denies mistrial; held: display here was not improper contact with jurors, distinguishing Remmer v. United States, 98 L.Ed.2d 654 (1954), nor was it prosecution misconduct; III.

State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 523-326 (2010)

Arguing that jury should fill in the blank with the reason for doubt is misconduct, State v. Anderson, 153 Wn.App. 417, 431 (2009), State v. Johnson, 158 Wn.App. 677 (2010), State v. Sakellis, 164 Wn.App. 170 (2011), State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724 (2011), State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 759-65 (2012); argument that presumption of innocence erodes every time state offers evidence against defendant is a misstatement of the law and flagrant misconduct, as presumption of innocence continues and may be overcome, if at all, during deliberations;, State v. Evans, 163 Wn.App. 635 (2011) II.

State v. Coleman, 155 Wn.App. 951, 956-60 (2010)

Without objection, prosecutor offers co-defendant's plea agreement which obliges co-defendant to testify truthfully and agrees state can terminate agreement if testimony is deceptive, untruthful or incomplete; held: while plea agreement requiring witness to testify truthfully may be improper vouching, it is vouching because "the State knew the witness's testimony and entered the agreement to 'secure' it," at 959 ¶ 14, State v. Green, 119 Wn.App. 15, 24 (2003), State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011), but where the witness' promise to testify truthfully stands alone it is not vouching, see: State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010), admission of plea statement is improper until witness' credibility is attacked, harmless here; I.

State v. Lewis, 156 Wn.App. 230, 239-42 (2010)

Prosecutor, in closing, asking jurors whom they believed, victim or defendant, is not misconduct, State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 30 (2009); II.

State v. Larios-Lopez, 156 Wn.App. 257 (2010)

Arguing that jury must have an abiding belief in a vote of guilty or not guilty is a misstatement of law [dicta], as jury does not need an abiding belief in innocence to acquit, see: State v. Osman, 192 Wn.App. 355 (2016); II.

State v. Perrow, 156 Wn.App. 322 (2010)

Defendant consults with counsel who asks him to prepare a narrative for counsel, police serve search warrant on defendant's home, seize narrative, defendant informs police that it is privileged, police take narrative to precinct, read and analyze, give it to prosecutor who charges defendant with child molestation, trial court dismisses; held: seized writings were privileged, RCW 5.60.060(2)(a), regardless of whether defendant was charged or not when prepared, Dietz v. John Doe, 131 Wn.2d 835, 843 (1997), thus seizure was a violation of the privilege and dismissal was a proper remedy, State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371 (1963), in light of egregious violation, police were informed that the materials were privileged but seized and analyzed them anyway, trial court's conclusion that suppression is inadequate is properly within its discretion, see: State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808 (2014), State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018), cf.: State v. Koeller, 15 Wn.App.2d 245 (2020); 2-1, III.

State v. Epefanio, 156 Wn.App. 378, 384-89 (2010)

Defendant testifies in defense case-in-chief, on cross court sustains objection to question as beyond the scope, permits prosecutor to call defendant in rebuttal; held: waiver of Fifth Amendment privilege extends only to cross-examination, see: State v. Robideau, 70 Wn.2d 994, 1001 (1967), State v. Hart, 180 Wn.App. 297 (2014), error for court to allow state to call defendant, harmless here; III.

State v. Hartzell, 156 Wn.App. 918, 941-43 (2010)

In closing, pro se defendant argues that state did not call certain witnesses because their testimony would have contradicted the state's evidence, prosecutor rebuts that the witnesses could have been called by the defense, although defendants don't have to; held: "prosecutor may encourage the jury to draw an unfavorable inference from a defendant's failure to produce evidence that is properly part of the case and is within the control of the defendant in whose interest it would be to produce it, unless the prosecutor's comments infringe on the defendant's constitutional rights," State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 485-91 (1991), but see: State v. Traweek, 43 Wn.App. 99 (1986), State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990); I.

State v. Edvalds, 157 Wn.App. 517 (2010)

Asking defendant questions that begin, "You expect the jury to believe…" is not misconduct absent an objection or request for a limiting instruction after an objection was sustained; violating an order in limine prohibiting the use of the word "surveillance" was not prejudicial misconduct; II.

State v. Koss, 158 Wn.App. 8, 20-22 (2010), affirmed, on other grounds, 181 Wn.2d 493 (2014)

Closing argument that jury was brought here "to determine whether or not the defendant violated [complainant's] right to be secure in her home" is not misconduct where prosecutor also argues that state has the burden of proving each element; arguing "a reasonable doubt [is] not beyond all possible doubt; it's okay if there are some questions that are unanswered so long as the information you have…leads you to believe that the defendant committed this crime" is not burden shifting, at least absent an objection, as it is not flagrent or ill intentioned; III.

State v. Martin, 171 Wn.2d 521 (2011)

During cross-examination of defendant, prosecutor asks if he has had the advantage of reading discovery, watching witnesses testify, tailor his testimony; held: asking a defendant on cross if he had tailored his testimony to conform to the testimony of other witnesses does not violate state confrontation clause, CONST. art. I, § 22, overruling, in part, State v. Smith, 82 Wn.App. 327 (1996) and State v. Johnson, 80 Wn.App. 337 (1996), although art. I, § 22 is not co-extensive with Sixth Amendment, but see: State v. Wallin, 166 Wn.App. 364 (2012); affirms State v. Martin, 151 Wn.App. 98 (2009); accord: State v. Hilton, 164 Wn.Ap. 81, 93-98 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011)

Prosecutor states to jury that "black folk don't testify against black folk," pronounces, police "po-leese," argues that "the word of a criminal defendant is inherently unreliable,...proven time and time again;" held: appeal to racial bias is flagrant misconduct, requiring reversal unless state establishes on appeal beyond a reasonable doubt that the impropriety did not affect verdict, State v. McKenzie, 21 Wn.App.2d 722 (2022), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Gentry, 179 Wn.2d 614 (2014), State v. Sandoval, 189 Wn.2d 811 (2018), State v. Bagby, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2023WL309012 (2023); 7-1.

State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 438 (2011)

Prosecutor's opening statement that jury won't hear all of what child victim told a witness "because the rules don't allow it" is disapproved, State v. Monaghan, 166 Wn.App. 521, 540 (2012), but not misconduct, State v. Teas, 10 Wn.App.2d 111 (2019); where defense theory and cross-examination of victim addresses inconsistency and credibility, prosecutor's reference to other witnesses who were not called but to whom victim possibly made consistent statements was possibly bolstering but harmless, distinguishing State v. Boehning, 127 Wn.App. 511 (2005); closing argument that defense counsel used "slight of hand" and defense counsel's presentation was "bogus" is improper disparaging of defense counsel, State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 29-30 (2008), State v. Negrete, 72 Wn.App. 62, 67 (1993), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 472-73 (2012), State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 431-34 (2014), cf.: State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022), see: State v. Lile, 193 Wn.App. 179, 205-09 (2016), affirmed, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 766 (2017), but, absent objection, might have been cured by an instruction thus not preserved, State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 16-18 (2013); arguing that if jury believes victim it must find defendant guilty unless there is a reason to doubt her based upon the evidence is not burden shifting; 5-4.

State v. Corbett, 158 Wn.App. 576, 594-97 (2010)

In child sex abuse case, argument, over objection, to rebut defense counsel's argument that it's a strange set of facts that "you guys haven't read hundreds of police reports about sexual assaults," that "it's not uncommon for a child…to wait to tell what happened," and "it's not uncommon for that child to give different facts along the way" was proper rebuttal argument; argument that "[y]ou have to be able to sleep with that decision at night for both the [d]efendant and" victim is not misconduct absent objection; II.

State v. Johnson, 158 Wn.App. 677 (2010)

In unwitting possession defense, prosecutor's argument that to convict you have to believe the defendant's testimony that he didn't know the cocaine was in the borrowed sweatshirt was proper because burden is on defendant, but see: McFadden v. United States, 576 U.S. 186, 135 S.Ct. 2298, 192 L.Ed.2d 260 (2015), and defendant was only witness to support unwitting possession; argument that to find reasonable doubt, you have to fill in the blank is flagrant and ill intentioned misconduct, overcoming failure to object, as it trivializes the state's burden, implies jury had a duty to convict without a reason not to do so, State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 523-26 (2010), State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724 (2011), cf.: State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 759-65 (2012); Division II holds that it is always flagrant and ill intentioned and incurable even by an objection and instruction if the argument undercuts the presumption of innocence but further concludes that in State v. Fleming, 83 Wn.App. 209 (1996), where Division I held that any argument that is covered by a published opinion is flagrant and ill intentioned, goes too far.

State v. Larson, 160 Wn.App. 577, 590-91 (2011)

Co-defendant pleads guilty, states in plea statement that defendant committed crime with him, later recants, police caution him against perjury and advise him of the consequences of perjury, defense contends that threat deprived him of a fair trial; held: when a defense witness is threatened which keeps the witness from testifying, accused is deprived of due process, Webb v. Texas, 409 U.S. 95, 98, 34 L.Ed.2d 330 (1972), but providing a witness with a "truthful warning" does not violate constitution, State v. Carlisle, 73 Wn.App. 678, 679 (1994), State v. Statler, 160 Wn.App. 636-38 (2011); 2-1, III.

State v. Curtiss, 161 Wn.App. 673, 698-702 (2011)

Prosecutor stating in closing that reasonable doubt is not magic, that jurors should imagine a jigsaw puzzle where even with pieces missing you can say what the puzzle depicts is not misconduct, State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 823-28 (2012), cf.: State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 434-36 (2014), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 153 Wn.App. 417 (2009); referring to a trial as a "search for truth," and defining verdict as "to speak the truth" is not misconduct, but see: State v. Anderson, supra. at 424, State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012), State v. Lindsay, supra. at 436-37; telling jurors that they know in their gut that defendant is guilty is not misconduct, but see: State v. Craven, 15 Wn.App.2d 380 (2020),at least where no objection is taken; II.

State v. Allen, 161 Wn.App. 727 (2011), 176 Wn.2d 611, 630-32 (2013)

Arguing that harassment victim is "not a flake...not some derelict," as he is a special education teacher is not vouching for credibility, State v. Jackson, 150 Wn.App. 877, 884 (2009), State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 30 (2008), as victim testified about his job, argument was properly inferred from the evidence, even where court excluded victim's attempted vehicular assault conviction; I.

State v. Bea, 162 Wn.App. 585, 579-85 (2011)

Closing argument that the jury can presume intent from the assault itself is misconduct, as there is a difference between a legitimate inference or permissive presumption and an unconstitutional conclusive presumption but, absent objection, is not reversible error; III.

State v. Smith, 162 Wn.App. 833, 848-51 (2011)

At outset of trial, defense counsel announces his intent to attack immunized witness' credibility based upon his plea bargain requiring him to testify truthfully, prosecutor refers in opening and direct of the witness that he is obliged to testify truthfully without objection; held: while evidence that immunized witness agrees to testify truthfully should not be admitted until defense has attacked credibility, State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189 (2010), it is not improper where there is "little doubt" that defendant will attack veracity during cross-examination; III.

State v. Evans, 163 Wn.App. 635 (2011)

Arguing that the presumption of innocence "kind of stops once you start deliberating" is misconduct as the presumption persists until the jury is satisfied the state has proved the charge beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 524 (2010); exhorting jury to "peel back different layers of the onion to get to the truth" is misconduct, State v. Anderson, 153

Wn.App. 417 (2009); arguing that the jury will always wish it had more evidence is misconduct as it suggests that jurors disregard weaknesses in the state's case; arguing that jurors should fill in the blank with the reason for doubt is misconduct, State v. Anderson, infra. At 431, State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 759-65 (2012), even where the closing "cleverly mixed requests for the jury to" hold the state to its burden of proof; while "fill in the blank" and "declare the truth" arguments are not inherently flagrant and ill-intentioned, State v. Sakellis, 164 Wn.App. 170 (2011), but see: State v. Fleming, 83 Wn.App. 209 (1996), several errors plus questionable strength of state's case require reversal, State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724 (2011); II.

State v. Sakellis, 164 Wn.App. 170 (2011)

"Fill in the blank" argument asking jury to find a reason to doubt is misconduct, State v. Anderson, 153 Wn.App. 417 (2009), State v. Vanegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 523-26 (2010), State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724 (2011); where defense objects to misconduct, appellate court determines whether prejudice had a substantial likelihood of affecting the verdict, State v. Anderson, supra. At 417; if defense fails to object, appellate court determines whether misconduct was so flagrant and ill intentioned that it caused an enduring and resulting prejudice incurable by an instruction, State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 841 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 759-65 (2012), State v. Espey, 184 Wn.App. 360 (2014); II.

State v. Ramos, 164 Wn.App. 327 (2011)

In drug case, prosecutor asking defendant if acquaintances to whom defendant referred on direct examination have drug problems and convictions is misconduct; closing argument that jury should convict to protect the community from drug dealing is misconduct, State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 186 (1989); argument that police witnesses "were just telling you what they saw and they are not being anything less than 100 percent candid" is improper vouching, at 341 n.4, see: State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877, 892-95 (2015); I

Smith v. Cain, 565 U.S. 73, 132 S.Ct. 627, 181 L.Ed.2d 571 (2012)

Single eyewitness testifies defendant committed crime, after conviction defense discovers police notes that eyewitness had said he could not identify anyone and would not know them if he saw them; held: while impeachment evidence may not be material if state's other evidence is strong enough to sustain confidence in verdict, United States v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97, 112-113 and n. 21, 49 L.Ed.2d 342 (1976), here eyewitness' testimony was the only evidence linking defendant to the crime, thus undisclosed evidence requires Brady reversal; 8-1.

State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 756-65 (2012)

Prosecutor's argument that "verdictum" [sic] is the Latin root for verdict and that the translation is to speak the truth, that jury's verdict should "speak the truth," is misconduct, State v. Anderson, 153 Wn.App. 417, 424-49 (2009), because jury's job is not to solve the crime; prosecutor's argument that in order to convict jurors should "fill in the blank" with a reason is improper, State v. Anderson, supra., at 432, State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 523-26 (2010), State v. Johnson, 158 Wn.App. 677, 679-81 (2010); here defense failed to establish prejudice, State v. Berube, 171 Wn.App. 103, 120-21 (2012), cf.: State v. Espey, 184 Wn.App. 360 (2014); affirms State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Gassman, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012)

Two months after learning that police believed the offense date was two days after the charge in the original information, state moves to amend, knowing that defense had planned an alibi defense for the original date, trial court denies motion to dismiss but imposes $2000 sanction on prosecutor, state appeals; held: while trial court need not make a specific finding of bad faith, State v. S.H., 102 Wn.App. 468, 479 (2000), a finding that state's conduct was "careless and not purposeful," plus concessions of defense at oral argument that defendant was aware of possible amendment, did not need a continuance, is insufficient to impose sanction, see: In re Firestorm 1991, 129 Wn.2d 130, 139 (1996), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); reverses, in part, State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 12 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724 (2011)

In defense of other case, prosecutor arguing that the standard would be met if the jury would have taken the same action in defense of another is error, as test is not for jury to substitute its subjective belief about how a juror would respond, rather test is objective, State v. Janes, 121 Wn.2d 220, 238 (1993); II.

Pers. Restraint of Glasmann, 175 Wn.2d 696 (2012)

Showing jury during closing a booking photo of defendant looking unkempt and bloody with captions that read "do you believe him?," "why should you believe anything he says?," "guilty," and "guilty, guilty, guilty" is flagrant misconduct, State v. Hecht, 179 Wn.App. 497 (2014), State v. Fedoruk, 184 Wn.App. 866, 884-90 (2014), State v. Walker, 182 Wn.2d 463, 475-81 (2015), cf.: State v. Rodriguez-Perez, 1 Wn.App.2d 448, 457-67 (2017), State v. Salas, 1 Wn.App.2d 931 (2018), State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541 (2022); prosecutor's argument that in order to reach a verdict jury must decide whether defendant told the truth is misconduct but not egregious, State v. Fleming, 83 Wn.App. 209, 213-14 (1996); 5-4.

State v. Killingsworth, 166 Wn.App. 283, 290-92 (2012)

Argument that there is no reasonable explanation for events other than defendant's guilt is not improper as prosecutor did not argue or imply that the defense had failed to offer other reasonable explanations, at least absent objection; I.

State v. Wallin, 166 Wn.App. 364 (2012)

Prosecutor's cross-examination of defendant that he tailored his testimony to conform to other evidence he heard in court, where there was no evidence from defendant that he did tailor his testimony, violates defendant's right "to appear and defend in person," CONST., art. I, § 22, distinguishing State v. Martin, 171 Wn.2d 521, 536-38 (2011), wherein defendant testified that he relied on prior testimony, but see: Portuondo v. Agard, 529 U.S. 61, 146 L.Ed.2d 47 (2000), State v. Miller, 110 Wn.App. 283 (2010); III.

State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 577-80 (2012)

Argument that the presumption of innocence lasts "all the way until you walk into that [jury] room and start deliberation" is incorrect as it continues during deliberations, it was curable by an instruction, thus failure to object waives the error; I.

State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 551-58 (2012)

In closing, prosecutor uses first person singular, imagines what defendant was thinking at the time of the crime, what the murder victims were thinking, State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020), invites jury to imagine themselves in the position of being murdered in their own homes, all inflammatory appeals to jury's passion and prejudice and arguments outside the evidence; analogy between jurors' oath and oath of marriage or oath not to overthrow the government was improper implication that jurors' oath was akin to adultery or treason; argument that the case was brought on behalf of the victims, victims' family and police was improper as prosecutor does not represent victims or police; II.

State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797 (2012)

It is not misconduct for prosecutor to ask jury to return a "just verdict," State v. Anderson, 153 Wn.App. 417 (2009), distinguished from asking jury to "send a message to society," State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 186, 194-95 (1989), at 820-23; using jigsaw puzzle analogy is not misconduct where it does not minimize or quantify state's burden of proof, State v. Curtiss, 161 Wn.App. 673, 700-01 (2011), cf.: State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 434-36 (2014), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 158 Wn.App. 677, 682-86 (2010), at 823-38; II.

State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 468-76 (2012)

Where court gives self defense instructions, prosecutor's argument that defense has a burden to prove self defense to the jury is burden-shifting error; argument that jury "must determine if it has an abiding belief in the truth of the charge" is error as jury is not deciding the truth, State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724, 733 (2011), see: State v. Osman, 192 Wn.App. 355 (2016); argument that "truth doesn't involve game play or loopholes or trickery" is improper impugning of defense counsel, State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 438 (2011); II.

State v. Berube, 171 Wn.App. 103 (2012)

Where evidence establishes a lack of witness cooperation, prosecutor's argument about a "snitch code" not accompanied by racial comments is not misconduct, even where the witnesses are black, distinguishing State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011); prosecutor's argument that defendant's testimony conforming to that of other witnesses is because he sat throughout the trial and listened is not impermissible tailoring, State v. Martin, 171 Wn.2d 521, 534-36 (2011); where defendant testifies that he knows people who could corroborate his testimony but refuses to name them, prosecutor may argue that defendant could have provided the names, does not shift burden; arguing that jury should search for the truth because "verdict" means to speak the truth is misconduct, State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 751 (2012), but not flagrant, so absent objection, not reversible error; argument that the trial is like a puzzle but the pieces all fit together does not trivialize the state's burden, distinguishing State v. Johnson, 158 Wn.App. 677, 682 (2010), cf.: State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 434-36 (2014); I.

State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 750-51 (2012)

After advice of rights and making some statements and after being shown crime video, defendant states "that is what it is…can't do anything but go to trial with that," detective testifies that defendant made it clear that the code would not allow him to cooperate or testify against others, prosecutor argues to jury "code of the street: don't cooperate with the police…don't talk to the police…;" held: defendant never clearly and unequivocally invoked his right to remain silent, see: State v. Hodges, 118 Wn.App. 668 (2003); failure to object to prosecutor's argument waived error as statement was not flagrant and ill intentioned, distinguishing State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011); prosecutor's argument that law enforcement did a great job is not improper vouching, at least absent objection; calling defendants a "pack of wolves" may be ill intentioned and flagrant, State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 863-64 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), Darden v. Wainwright, 91 L.Ed.2d 144 (1986), but here a single characterization within a lengthy trial is curable by an instruction, had defense objected, Pers. Restraint of Richmond, 16 Wn.App.2d 751 (2021); 2-1, II.

State v. Gauthier*,* 174 Wn.App. 257 (2013)

Comment on defendant's refusal to consent to a DNA swab as evidence of guilt or impeachment violates defendant's right to refuse to consent to a warrantless search, manifest constitutional error; I.

State v. Ruiz*,* 176 Wn.App. 623 (2013)

Co-defendant pleads guilty without an agreement to testify, is sentenced, does not appeal, at defendant's trial state calls co-defendant who claims a Fifth Amendment privilege, trial court declines to sustain the privilege and orders co-defendant to testify, prosecutor asks many questions in front of the jury, all of which co-defendant refuses to answer; held: allowing the state to call a witness who asserts a non-existent privilege is not error and is not misconduct, distinguishing State v. Nelson, 72 Wn.2d 269 (1967), State v. Charlton, 90 Wn.2d 657 (1978), State v. Jackson, 83 Wash. 514 (1915), wherein witnesses had valid privileges, as a witness has a duty to testify; where a prosecutor's questions imply the existence of prejudicial facts, the prosecutor must be able to prove the facts, State v. Miles, 139 Wn.App. 879, 886 (2007), but here there was a factual basis in the record for the questions, and those questions that lacked a factual basis were "not significant," at 641-643; Division III criticizes the repetitive and argumentative questioning, defense did not make an ER 403 objection, thus no relief is available on appeal.

State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 818-23 (2014)

After conviction victim recants and then recants the recantation, motion for new trial pending, detective records and listens to defendant's jail phone calls to his lawyer, prosecutor refuses to listen, removes detective from case, notifies defense counsel who moves to dismiss, trial court denies motion to dismiss because the misconduct could not have affected the trial, which had concluded, or the motion for a new trial after which defense moves for discovery of the recording; held: eavesdropping on a conversation between counsel and client is presumptively prejudicial, State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371 (1963), state may rebut by showing an absence of prejudice beyond a reasonable doubt, see: Weatherford v. Bursey, 429 U.S. 545, 557-58, 51 L.Ed.2d 30 (1977), State v. Blizzard, 195 Wn.App. 717, 732-33 (2016), State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018), State v. Koeller, 15 Wn.App.2d 245 (2020), remanded for trial court to consider whether state has proved absence of prejudice and discovery; 9-0.

State v. Lindsay*,* 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014)

Calling defense counsel's argument and defendant's testimony "a crock" is improper impugning, State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 438, 451-52 (2011), State v. Boyd, 1 Wn.App.2d 501, 517-21 (2017), cf.: State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022); argument that reasonable doubt is akin to a jigsaw puzzle, if picture is "halfway done…you know beyond a reasonable doubt" is improper misstatement of burden of proof, State v. Johnson, 158 Wn.App. 677, 682 (2010), distinguishing State v. Curtiss, 161 Wn.App. 673 (2011), see: State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 825-28 (2012); arguing that reasonable doubt is comparable to safely crossing in a crosswalk improperly compares reasonable doubt to everyday decision making, minimizes and trivializes the gravity; telling jury that its job is to "speak the truth" or "find the truth" misstates the burden of proof, State v. Anderson, 135 Wn.App. 417, 429 (2009), State v. Walker, 164 Wn.App. 724, 733 (2011), disapproving, in part, State v. Curtiss, supra. at 701-02; stating that defendant's testimony is a lie and "the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard" is an improper expression of personal opinion as to credibility; whispering to jury is improper; 9-0.

State v. Davila*,* 183 Wn.App. 154, 173-76 (2014)

At co-defendant's separate trial prosecutor argues that co-defendant hit deceased victim with a baseball bat, subsequently DNA evidence links defendant to bat, at defendant's trial state argues inconsistently that defendant killed victim with bat; held: while the use of inconsistent theories to obtain convictions against separate defendants for the same crime violate due process clause if prosecutor uses false evidence or acts in bad faith, where new evidence between the trials result in different arguments, no misconduct occurs; III.

State v. Espey*,* 184 Wn.App. 360 (2014)

Argument that defendant consulted with counsel and thus had time to figure out a story is an improper comment on the right to counsel; because the error was incurable by an instruction, defendant's failure to object is excused; in determining whether misconduct is flagrant and ill-intentioned, court should focus on whether the prejudice could have been cured, State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 762 (2012); II.

State v. Fedoruk*,* 184 Wn.App. 866, 884-90 (2014)

In murder case, showing photograph of deceased's body with "Murder 2" in red letters during closing is misconduct; stating defendant is "guilty guilty guilty" while flashing the word "guilty" in large red letters on a screen that says "Murder 2" is misconduct, Pers. Restraint of Glasmann, 175 Wn.2d 696 (2012), cf.: State v. Salas, 1 Wn.App.2d 931 (2018), State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541 (2022); discussing deceased's virtues invites jury to decide case on sympathy and effectively expresses prosecutor's personal opinion and is, thus, misconduct; telling jury that defendant's family members' intuition led them to believe defendant is guilty is misconduct as it is urging the jury to decide not based upon "probative evidence and sound reason," State v. Castañeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354 (1991); characterizing the parties to be in "agreement" about facts because defense presented no evidence to rebut them is comment on defense lack of evidence and, thus, improper, State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.App. 626, 652 (2003); II.

State v. Allen*,* 182 Wn.2d 364, 374-82 (2015)

Court gives knowledge instruction including "If a person has information that would lead a reasonable person in the same situation to believe that a fact exists, the jury is permitted but not required to find that he or she acted with knowledge of that fact," prosecutor argues, over objection, that defendant-accomplice "should have known" what principal had done, during deliberations jury asks if they find defendant "should have known," does that make him an accomplice, trial court instructs jury to reread instructions; held: arguing that "should have known" as a shortcut for "knowledge" is improper as it unconstitutionally subjects a defendant to accomplice liability under a theory of constructive knowledge, State v. Shipp, 93 Wn.2d 510, 516-17 (1980), State v. Jones, 13 Wn.App.2d 386 (2020); defendant was prejudiced because prosecutor misstated a key issue in the case, repeated it multiple times and used a slide show, court overruled objection in jury's presence, jury query shows it was influenced by the error, misstating the law is "particularly egregious," see: State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021); reverses State v. Allen, 178 Wn.2d 893 (2014); 9-0

Slides showing exhibits that were altered with inflammatory captions, superimposed text suggesting that defendant should be convicted because he is callous and greedy who spent robbery proceeds on games and lobster, juxtaposed photographs of victim with those of defendant and his family, some altered with racially inflammatory text is egregious misconduct; slide of photo of money seized by police with the heading "money is more important than human life" when no evidence showed anyone actually said the words is misconduct; slides depicting statements of the prosecutor's belief as to defendant's guilt is misconduct, Pers. Restraint of Glasmann, 175 Wn.2d 696 (2012), cf.: State v. Rodriguez-Perez, 1 Wn.App.2d 448, 457-67 (2017), State v. Salas, 1 Wn.App.2d 931 (2018), State v. State v. Vassar,* 188 Wn.App. 251 (2015)

Defendant, on stand, non-responsively calls a police witness and a civilian witness liars, prosecutor follows up; held: follow-up questions where defendant raises issue of credibility of witnesses is not misconduct, distinguishing State v. Casteñeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354 (1991), State v. Padilla, 69 Wn.App. 295, 299 (1993), State v. Suarez-Bravo, 72 Wn.App. 359, 367 (1994); prosecutor arguing in closing that to believe defendant jury would need to believe that state's witnesses were "mistaken" is not misconduct as it was provoked by defendant's testimony, distinguishing State v. Fleming, 83 Wn.App. 209, 214 (1996); where defendant testifies, prosecutor's comment on whether defendant's version of events was supported is not misconduct, distinguishing State v. Fleming, supra; III.

State v. Lozcano*,* 188 Wn.App. 338, 368-70 (2015)

While state may not vouch for a witness by referencing promises the witness made with the state to testify truthfully, State v. Ish, 170 Wn.2d 189, 199 (2010), failure to object waives the issue; III.

State v. Gauthier*,* 189 Wn.App. 30, 35-40 (2015)

In rape case prosecutor argues, in response to defense counsel's argument that victim was a prostitute, "[t]his is why people don't report, because they are called sluts, whores, and prostitutes," no objection; held: while "send a message" comments may be improper, State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914, 918-19 (1991), here the argument was in answer to a defense argument and thus was not flagrant or ill intentioned, could have been cured, State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 186 (1989), cf.: State v. Perez-Mejia, 134 Wn.App. 907 (2006); I.

State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877, 892-95 (2015)

State v. Thierry, 190 Wn.App. 680 (2015)

In child rape case arguing that if only direct evidence was permitted or if more was required than complainant's testimony the state could never prosecute these types of cases is an appeal to passion or prejudice, State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991), akin to exhorting jury to send a message, State v. Bautista-Caldera, 56 Wn.App. 185, 195 (1989), see: State v. Smiley, 195 Wn.App. 185, 191-97 (2016), requiring reversal; II.

State v. Sundberg, 185 Wn.2d 147 (2016)

In drug case defendant testifies he did not know the drugs were in his pants which were worn by another person earlier, prosecutor argued in closing why didn't defense call the other person; held: prosecutor may properly comment on defendant's failure to call a witness where the defense has the burden of proof, here unwitting possession of drugs, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479 (1991), State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869 (1991), or where defendant testifies and fails to present corroborating testimony, State v. Contreras, 57 Wn.App. 471 (1990), but see: State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 845-46 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Osman, 192 Wn.App. 355 (2016)

During closing prosecutor states "how did she break those fingernails if…a struggle did not occur?" is not burden shifting, rather it is a proper argument that the evidence did not support any other reasonable explanation, State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 87 (1994); I.

State v. Feely, 192 Wn.App. 751, 762-68 (2016)

Argument that it "can be very frustrating to have a juror come back and say we all knew he was guilty, but you didn't prove it beyond a reasonable doubt. Those are inconsistent" trivializes the burden of proof but absent objection and in light of the rest of the prosecutor's explanation of reasonable doubt there is insufficient prejudice to warrant reversal; in felony DUI case court gave a limiting instruction about prior DUIs that evidence is only to be considered to determine if defendant has the requisite priors, state's argument to jury that defendant fled because of the prior DUIs was improper as state did not seek a ruling from the trial court to allow other reasons for the priors, no prejudice here; I.

State v. Williams, 193 Wn.App. 906 (2016)

Charges involving a high speed chase in two counties are filed in one county, defendant gets appointed counsel, prosecutors decide to change venue because events began in first county where charges were refiled, which results in defendant obtain a different appointed counsel who could not prepare within 60-day time for trial, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(b), concluding arbitrary action forcing defendant to choose between speedy trial and competently prepared counsel; held: prosecutor's explanation was reasoned and thus not arbitrary, thus dismissal is reversed; III.

State v. Cardenas-Flores, 194 Wn.App. 496, 515-16 (2016), affirmed, on other grounds, 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017)

In assault on child case, where defendant testifies, prosecutor's argument that defense never gave a plausible explanation for how victim was injured was not burden shifting; III.

State v. Smiley, 195 Wn.App. 185, 191-97 (2016)

In child sex case prosecutor's argument that the fact that if corroboration and physical evidence was required children wouldn't be believed and abusers would be prosecuted is misconduct, an improper emotional appeal inviting the jury to rely on a threatened impact on other cases rather than the merits of the case at bar, State v. Thierry, 190 Wn.App. 680 (2015), State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991), but lack of objection waived the issue as an instruction could have cured it; 2-1, I.

Pers. Restraint of Caldellis, 187 Wn.2d 127, 142-44 (2016)

In closing defense counsel suggests a number of reasons why defendant did not testify including immaturity, nervousness, prosecutor in rebuttal argues that defense counsel "forgot a big reason," and that he could "think of one more," defense objects and then withdraws objection; held: defense argument invited the fair response thus it was not an unconstitutional comment on failure to testify; 9-0.

State v. Sandoval, 189 Wn.2d 811 (2018)

Defendant is properly identified as a gang member, detective testifies that old gang members (OGs) have elevated status, trial court rules that defendant's longevity is sufficient to establish he is an OG, which prosecutor argues; held: no evidence identified the defendant as an OG, thus evidence was insufficient to so identify him, harmless here; referring to defendant's race to support the argument that defendant was a member of a specific gang was not misconduct, distinguishing State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011), cf.: State v. McKenzie, 21 Wn.App.2d 722 (2022); 5-4.

State v. Rodriguez-Perez, 1 Wn.App.2d 448, 457-67 (2017)

In closing slide showing photograph of defendant slumped in a chair looking dazed with caption "GOOD TIMES" is improper, see: Pers. Restraint of Glasmann, 175 Wn.2d 696 (2012), see: State v. Salas, 1 Wn.App.2d 931 (2018), State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541 (2022), but harmless here; other slides generally reflected the evidence or reasonable inferences and were thus proper; III.

State v. Boyd, 1 Wn.App.2d 501, 517-21 (2017)

Arguing "[c]ounsel talks about chaos in [defendant's] life, barriers, bla, bla, bla. No evidence of that" is improper impugning, State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 433-34 (2014), harmless here; 2-1, I.

State v. Salas, 1 Wn.App.2d 931 (2018)

Defendant is charged with murder, jury is instructed on manslaughter lessers, in closing prosecutor argues that to convict of manslaughter would be "a cop-out;" prosecutor uses PowerPoint slides showing a photograph of smiling victim surrounded by Smurfs under the words "bandleader, saxophone player, customer service representative" next mug shot of defendant under the words "football player, fighter, outdoorsman;" another slide shows victim on a Ferris wheel ride, photo had been admitted for in-life identification; held: "[w]hen there is evidence that the homicide was neither premeditated nor intentional and the trial court has properly put the issue of manslaughter before the jury, it is improper to argue that manslaughter is a 'cop-out,'" at 939; juxtaposing a happy photograph of the victim with an unappealing one of defendant is intended to inflame the passion of the jury and is thus misconduct, at 940-47, Pers. Restraint of Glasmann, 175 Wn.2d 696 (2012), State v. Walker, 182 Wn.2d 463, 476-77 (2015), State v. Rodriguez-Perez, 1 Wn.App.2d 448, 457-67 (2017); I.

State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018)

Jail guards read letters defendant wrote to counsel, trial court denies motion to dismiss placing burden of proving prejudice on defendant, distinguishing between investigating state actors and custodial state actors; held: misconduct by law enforcement and misconduct by jail guards is an artificial distinction, where any state actor eavesdrops on attorney-client communication there is a presumption of prejudice which state must overcome beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371, 378 (1963), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 811 (2014), State v. Perrow, 156 Wn. App. 322, 332 (2010), State v. Garza, 99 Wn. App. 291, 301 (2000), State v. Granacki, 90 Wn.App. 598, 603-04 (1998), on remand if court finds prejudice then remedy may be dismissal, suppression of evidence, disqualification of specific prosecutors or entire office or exclusions of witnesses tainted by the misconduct; I.

State v. Solomon, 3 Wn.App.2d 895 (2018)

Police officer publishes anonymous advertisement saying she is a young female seeking sex, defendant responds, officer then assumes the guise of a 14 year old, sends more than 100 messages with graphic sexualized language, defendant rejects solicitations seven times, officer persists, defendant finally agrees, is arrested at address given by officer, charged with attempted rape of a child, trial court dismisses for outrageous government misconduct, State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 18-28 (1996); held: factors to be considered by trial court: whether the police conduct instigated a crime or merely infiltrated ongoing criminal activity, whether the defendant's reluctance to commit a crime was overcome by pleas of sympathy, promises of excessive profits, or persistent solicitation, whether the government controls the criminal activity or simply allows for the criminal activity to occur, whether the police motive was to prevent crime or protect the public, and whether the government conduct itself amounted to criminal activity or conduct repugnant to a sense of justice, cf.: State v. Glant, 16 Wn.App.2d 356 (2020); here, trial court properly exercised discretion by dismissing for violation of defendant's due process rights; I.

Detention of Urlacher, 6 Wn.App.2d 725, 745-46 (2018)

In sexually violent predator case where evidence at trial showed that respondent groomed victims argument that "you should not be subject to his grooming" is misconduct as arguing that jurors should not be victims appeals to passion and prejudice, Pers Restraint of Glasmann, 175 Wn.2d 696, 704 (2012), but, absent objection, error is waived; II.

State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12, 30 (2018)

Prosecutor's argument that "I'm confident you will do the right thing" may be misconduct but not flagrant and ill-intentioned; I.

State v. Whitaker*,* 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020)

In murder case prosecutor argues to jury that they should imagine what victim was thinking and feeling in the hours before her death; in defense closing counsel argues that defendant did not intend the crime because he was afraid of the co-defendant, prosecutor then rebuts that duress is not a defense to murder; held: invitation to jury to imagine feelings of victim was an improper appeal to passion and prejudice, State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 552 (2012); prosecutor's arguing law that is not included in the instructions is misconduct, State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757 (1984); defense counsel did not object to either instance which were not flagrant and ill-intentioned thus issue is waived, although defense did move for a mistrial and a new trial, see: In re Lee, 95 Wn.2d 357, 363 (1980), State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 430-31 (2014); I.

State v. Gorman-Lykken, 9 Wn.App.2d 687 (2019)

Defense counsel argues a fact from testimony, in rebuttal argument prosecutor falsely states that defense counsel made an inaccurate statement in argument, defense counsel argues that victim was not credible due to drug use, prosecutor in rebuttal states that according to defense a drug addict cannot be raped; Judge Melnik, in concurring opinion, would hold that prosecutor improperly impugned defense counsel and misrepresented defense counsel's argument, mischaracterizing what defense counsel said, cumulative error would require reversal even if the prosecutor's arguments were not flagrant and ill-intentioned; II.

State v. Teas*,* 10 Wn.App.2d 111 (2019)

Prosecutor argues that defendant testified because he saw the overwhelming evidence against him, that he tailored his testimony to explain away the evidence, that the weapon defendant used was like those that were used by the 9/11 terrorists, that complainant's testimony was consistent where defense maintained it was not, in opening prosecutor said that a stain was blood although evidence at trial showed it was not blood; held: (1) it is misconduct for prosecutor to speculate why a defendant testified, State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 705 (1984), but there was no objection and it was not flagrant and ill-intentioned; (2) while a general tailoring argument may be improper, see: State v. Martin, 171 Wn.2d 521, 535-36 (2011), Portuondo v. Agard, 529 U.S. 61, 120 S. Ct. 1119, 146 L. Ed. 2d 47 (2000), State v. Berube, 171 Wn.App. 103, 116 (2012), here the context of the closing is that defendant's testimony differed from the statements he made to police, thus the argument was proper; (3) referencing 9/11 was an improper appeal to passion but absent objection it is not reversible; (4) while prosecutor's statement regarding blood stain in opening was wrong, a witness' anticipated testimony is a permissible subject for opening statement, State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 438, 455 (2011); II.

State v. Nickels*,* 195 Wn.2d 132 (2020)

Counsel is retained to represent defendant in murder case which, after conviction, is reversed, counsel is elected county prosecuting attorney who disqualifies himself, defense moves to disqualify entire prosecutor's office; held: where, as here, the elected prosecutor has represented defendant in the same case and has been privy to confidential information then ordinarily the entire prosecutor's office must be disqualified, State v. Stenger, 111 Wn.2d 516 (1988); there may be extraordinary circumstances which allow the elected prosecutor to be screened; affirms State v. Nickels, 7 Wn.App. 491 (2019); 5-4.

State v. Loughbom, 194 Wn.2d 64 (2020)

Prosecutor's referring to "war on drugs" during voir dire, opening statement and closing argument is flagrant and ill-intentioned misconduct, State v. Echevarria, 71 Wn.App. 595 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Jieta, 12 Wn.App.2d 227 (2020)

Court fails to provide an interpreter fifteen times over fifteen months, trial court dismisses for governmental misconduct, CrRLJ 8.3(b); held: CrRLJ 8.3(b) applies where court administration mismanages a case; I.

State v. Lang, 12 Wn.App.2d 481 (2020)

Defendant testifies at trial recanting a confession, on cross prosecutor asks if he has been diagnosed as a malingerer which defendant denies, on rebuttal state calls psychologist who evaluated defendant for competency, elicits opinion that defendant is a malingerer and that his testimony is consistent with antisocial personality disorder; held: substance of defendant's testimony did not open door or invite error to opinion testimony about credibility which is generally inadmissible, cf.: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918, 929-30, 932-33 (2007), State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301, 306-07 (1981), and is prohibited vouching, invading the province of the jury; harmless here; III.

State v. Jones, 13 Wn.App.2d 386 (2020)

Defendant is arrested in stolen vehicle, ignition removed, no license plate, shaved keys in car, is charged with possessing a stolen vehicle, prosecutor argues in closing, without objection, that jury can convict if it finds that defendant "should have known" that car was stolen; held: while jury was instructed as to actual and constructive knowledge, RCW 9A.08.010(1)(ii), a jury cannot convict based solely on constructive knowledge, "confusingly a jury cannot convict the accused based on constructive knowledge, but may determine constructive knowledge to be evidence of subjective knowledge," State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 374-82 (2015), thus argument was misconduct; in determining whether or not an argument is flagrant and ill-intentioned, the court "should not focus on the prosecutor's subjective intent in committing misconduct, but instead on whether the defendant received a fair trial in light of the prejudice caused by the violation of existing prosecutorial standards and whether that prejudice could have been cured with a timely objection," State v. Walker, 182 Wn.2d 463, 478 (2015), State v. Emery, 174 Wn.2d 741, 762 (2012); where a court, in a published opinion, has held a similar argument to be misconduct, here State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364 (2015), the failure to object is not fatal to the determination of prejudice; III.

State v. Glant, 13 Wn.App.2d 356 (2020)

Police department accepts money from a private non-profit to help fund child-sex sting operations, defendant is convicted, claims outrageous government misconduct; held: absent a direct link between the private funding and defendant's arrest and prosecution there is no outrageous conduct, see: State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 18-28 (1996); II.

State v. Hawkins, 14 Wn.App.2d 182 (2020)

Prosecutor elicits from police officer that he would not refer a case for prosecution or make an arrest if he did not believe the complainant is an improper elicitation of the witness' opinion on the credibility of another witness; I.

State v. Mansour, 14 Wn.App.2d 323 (2020)

In child molestation case use of victim's initials in information and to convict instruction does not amount to a court closure; I.

State v. Craven, 15 Wn.App.2d 380 (2020)

Prosecutor's argument that a verdict should "feel right" or "make sense emotionally and morally" and viscerally is an improper appeal to emotional as opposed to intellectual consideration, but is harmless as trial court, in overruling defense objection, instructed the jury to reach the decision based upon facts and law and not sympathy, prejudice or personal preference; Division I disagrees, in part, with State v. Curtiss, 161 Wn.App. 673, 698-702 (2011).

State v. Koeller, 15 Wn.App.2d 245 (2020)

Prosecutor's argument to jury that victim was credible because she testified under penalty of perjury and that she recalled the crime very well is not improper vouching; I.

State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021)

In an attempt to moot pending discretionary review state moves to amend, trial court grants motion but imposes sanctions on state; held: trial court has discretion to impose sanctions, cf.: State v. Gassman, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Cook, 17 Wn.App.2d 96 (2021)

Having detective "clearly imply" that he believes victim is misconduct, State v. Chavez, 76 Wn.App. 293, 299 (1994); having forensic examiner testify that the procedure she uses has been extensively tested to produce truthful and accurate information, and that children who disclose sexual abuse are truthful is misconduct; asking defendant on cross to explain why victim would lie is misconduct, State v. Vassar, 188 Wn.App. 251, 257 (2015), State v. Casteneda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354, 363 (1991); eliciting from police officer that, post-arrest, he did not speak to the police is misconduct, State v. Curtis, 110 Wn.App. 6, 11-12 (2002), State v. Palmer, 18 Wn.App.2d 825 (2021), reconsideration granted, 2022WL2965811; prosecutor's argument that "[t]he defense counsel interview is not looking for the truth, because that's not what defense lawyers need to know to do their ethical duty to represent their client" disparages counsel and is misconduct, State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014); the cumulative effect of repetitive prosecutorial misconduct may be so flagrant that no instruction or series of instructions could erase their combined prejudicial effect regardless of whether or not defense objects; III.

State v. Wood, 19 Wn.App.2d 743 (2021)

In trial in which defendant testifies prosecutor argues to jury that if defendant is telling the truth then several witnesses must be lying, defense does not object; held: while it is a false choice to argue that to acquit the jury must find that defendant is truthful and that witnesses are lying, State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869 (1991), State v. Brown, 35 Wn.2d 379 (1949), State v. Stith, 71 Wn.App. 14 (1993), State v. Rich, 186 Wn.App. 632, 648-50 (2015), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016), "when the parties present the jury 'with conflicting versions of the facts and the credibility of witnesses is a central issue, there is nothing misleading or unfair in stating the obvious: that if the jury accepts one version of the facts, it must necessarily reject the other'" State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 837 (2012); I.

State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022)

Prosecutor's argument that it is jurors' job to determine who was lying and who was telling the truth is misconduct, State v. Barrow, 60 Wn.App. 869 (1991), State v. Brown, 35 Wn.2d 379 (1949), State v. Stith, 71 Wn.App. 14 (1993), State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 323, 330-2 (1994), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995), State v. Rich, 186 Wn.App. 632, 648-50 (2015), reversed, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016), but absent objection here it is not reversible error; 8-1.

State v. Zamora, 199 Wn.2d 698 (2022)

In assault 3° of a police officer case, during voir dire prosecutor asks jurors their opinions about border security, illegal immigration, crimes committed by undocumented immigrants, no objection by defense; held: an objective observer could understand that the prosecutor's questions were a flagrant or apparently intentional appeal to jurors' potential racial or ethnic bias, race based misconduct is incurable and requires reversal, State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011), State v. Ibarra-Erives, 22 Wn.App.2d 596 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Bagby, 198 Wn.2d 1031 (2023)

During trial of Black defendant claiming self-defense, prosecutor repeatedly refers to defendant's "nationality" but refers to white witnesses as "citizens," refers to defendant punching "the white guy," states that white guy did not hit the Black guy, in closing refers to white witnesses who intervened as "Good Samaritans" but does not identify a Black witness who intervened as a Good Samaritan, no objections by defense; held: "when a prosecutor flagrantly or apparently intentionally appeals to racial bias in a way that undermines the defendant's credibility or the presumption of innocence, their improper conduct is considered per se prejudicial, and reversal of the defendant's convictions is required;" when alleged misconduct involves race court need not determine if unobjected-to conduct is so flagrant and ill-intentioned such that no instruction could cure it, State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011); an objective observer would find that use of word "nationality' in reference to a Black citizen and calling white witnesses Good Samaritans are racial tropes; 9-0.

State v. Lucas-Vicente, 22 Wn.App.2d 212 (2022)

In assault case, arguing that defendant could have killed victim is not misconduct inflaming the jury where defendant bit, punched, choked, strangled victim and told her to hurry up and die; arguing that victim was truthful is not vouching where pointing out that her testimony at trial is consistent with what he told 911 operator; I.

State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022)

In murder case, during opening statement, prosecutor shows video of defendant holding a pistol and pointing it at the camera, with caption by defendant "yeah am crazy…bitch," during trial court finds state has laid foundation for the video but finds that the caption is unduly prejudicial, defense motion for mistrial denied; held: during opening a prosecutor may present anticipated evidence in good faith, video was admitted in part, a good faith presentation of anticipated evidence does not become improper because it was later not introduced, distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Glasmann, 175 Wn.2d 696 (2012) and State v. Pete, 152 Wn.2d 546 (2004) which deal with extrinsic evidence offered during closing argument; I.

In drug case with Hispanic defendant officer testifies that 25 grams is called a "Mexican ounce," in closing prosecutor twice refers to "Mexican ounce" without objection; held: an objective observer could view prosecutor's statements as an appeal to jury's prejudice, *State v. State v. McKenzie, 21 Wn.App.2d 722 (2022)

In attempted rape of a child case of an African American defendant, prosecutor elicits from detective, without objection, that a "gorilla pimp" is an aggressive one; held: use of animal analogies often operate as a racist code, Pers. Restraint of Richmond, 16 Wn.App.2d 751, 752 (2021), analogizing Black people to primates has an odious historical context, state failed its burden of proving that this did not improperly infect the trial, thus reversed, State v. Monday, 171 Wn.2d 667 (2011); III.

State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022)

Prosecutor's argument that defense counsel mistakenly argued facts that, she claimed, did not occur is not misconduct, as she did not claim that counsel deliberately misstated facts; argument that defense counsel "lawyers" language is not misconduct, unlike using words like "crock," "bogus," and "sleight of hand" that imply defense counsel is lying, see: State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 433-34 (2014), State v. Thorgerson, 172 Wn.2d 438, 451-52 (2011); I.

State v. Bone-Club, 128 Wn.2d 254 (1995)

Where state moves to close a CrR 3.5 hearing to protect an undercover officer's identity, trial court must perform a weighing test: (1) proponent of closure must make a showing of a compelling interest and, where that need is based on something other than defendant's right to a fair trial, must show a serious and imminent threat to fair trial, (2) anyone present when closure motion is made must be given opportunity to object, (3) method of closure must be least restrictive, (4) court must weigh competing interests of proponent of closure and public, and (5) order must be no broader in application or duration than necessary, Allied Daily Newspapers v. Eikenberry, 121 Wn.2d 205, 210 (1993), lacking such a record, remedy is reversal for new trial, Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795 (2004), *State v. State v. Momah, 167 Wn.2d 140 (2009)

In high publicity case, defense requests individual voir dire, court and both counsel question jurors in chambers, no specific findings entered; held: defendant "affirmatively assented to the closure, argued for its expansion, had the opportunity to object but did not, actively participated in it, and benefited from it. Moreover, the trial judge in this case not only sought input from the defendant, but he closed the courtroom after consultation with the defense and the prosecution. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, the trial judge closed the courtroom to safeguard Momah's constitutional right to a fair trial by an impartial jury, not to protect any other interests. Where, as here, a defendant's other constitutional rights are implicated, the trial court is required to give due consideration to those rights in determining whether closure is appropriate," at 151-52 ¶ 20, thus reversal not required, *State v. At close of evidence, judge and counsel meet in chambers to finalize instructions, after which court states on record that parties went over instructions, defense takes no objections to instructions; held: defendant's right to be present exists where s/he may actively contribute to his or her defense, State v. Irby, 170 Wn.2d 874, 883 (2011), Snyder v. Massachusetts, 291 U.S. 97, 105-07, 78 L.Ed. 674 (1934), overruled on other grounds, Malloy v. Hogan, 378 U.S. 1, 12 L.Ed.2d 653 (1964), right to a public trial exists so that public's mere presence passively contributes to the fairness of the proceedings; while a defendant's right to be present may not be necessary for ministerial or administrative matters, State v. Irby, supra. at 881, public's presence may insure the fairness of such proceedings, but see: Det. Of Ticeson, 159 Wn.App. 374, 383-86 (2011); some chambers conferences may be ministerial, others may involve disputed issues including asking the court to rule on instructions; here, sparse record indicates that the chambers conference was merely ministerial that did not give rise to defendant's or public's right to open proceedings, see: State v. Wilson, 174 Wn.App. 328 (2013); II.

State v. Wise, 176 Wn.2d 1 (2012)

Voir dire in chambers is a closure that requires Bone-Club findings, defendant's failure to object is not a waiver, remedy is new trial, State v. Paumier, 176 Wn.2d 29 (2012), *Pers. State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 70-78 (2012)

Jury sends out a question regarding an instruction, counsel and court meet in chambers and agree that court will tell jury to reread instructions, no objection was taken; test to determine whether the public trial right attaches to a particular proceedings is whether the place and process have historically been open to the press and public and whether public access plays a significant positive role in the functioning of the particular process in question ("experience and logic test"), Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court, 478 U.S. 1, 8-10, 92 L.Ed.2d 1 (1986); test is not to draw a line with legal and ministerial issues on one side and resolution of disputed facts on the other, as resolution of legal issues is often accomplished in an adversarial proceeding, effectively overruling, in part, In re Det. of Morgan, 161 Wn.App. 66 (2011), 180 Wn.2d 312, 324-26 (2014), In re Det. of Ticeson, 159 Wn.App. 374, 386 (2011), *State v. State v. Beskurt, 176 Wn.2d 441 (2013)

Trial court seals jury questionnaire without Bone-Club analysis; lead opinion (4 justices) holds that sealing jury questionnaire is not a closure where it is used by the lawyers during voir dire as a screening tool and not as a substitute for oral voir dire, cf.: State v. Coleman, 151 Wn.App. 614 (2009); concurring opinion (4 justices) would hold that review is barred for lack of objection; concurring opinion (1 justice) would hold that because defendant only sought a new trial, and sealing a jury questionnaire is not a closure, no further analysis is necessary; affirms State v. Beskurt, 159 Wn.App. 819 (2010).

State v. Chao Chen, 178 Wn.2d 350 (2013)

Once a competency evaluation is filed it is presumed open to the public subject to individualized findings that the Ishikawa factors weigh in favor of sealing or redacting, State v. DeLauro, 163 Wn.App. 290 (2011), see also: John Doe G v. Department of Corrections, 197 Wn.App. 609 (2017); CONST. art. I, § 10 trumps RCW 10.77.210; 9-0.

State v. Wilson, 174 Wn.App. 328, 333-47 (2013)

Before being brought to court, jurors fill out questionnaire which, apparently, includes hardship queries, two jurors report illnesses and injuries, bailiff, pursuant to trial court's written policy allowing administrative staff to excuse jurors pretrial for illness, excuses them, trial court offers to bring them into court for voir dire, defense "did not pursue this offer;" held: applying the State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 70-78 (2012) "experience and logic test," the public trial right historically has not attached to statutory hardship excuses, RCW 2.36.100(1), State v. Russell, 183 Wn.2d 720 (2015), public access does not play a significant positive role in hardship excuses, openness during pre-voir dire juror excusal proceedings would not enhance the basic fairness and the appearance of fairness essential to public confidence in the system; II.

Pers. Restraint of Copland, 176 Wn.App. 432, 437-50 (2013)

Defense counsel moves to close courtroom for voir dire, trial court denies motion, both parties agree to private questioning of jurors in chambers, judge addresses certain factors, State v. Wise, 176 Wn.2d 1 (2012), without specifically using the words "right to public trial" or "Bone-Club," on direct appeal defense does not raise public trial issues, challenges them here on PRP; held: reviewing the record, appeals court can find that the Bone-Club factors were considered by the trial court even though specific findings are not entered, defendant's assent to chambers voir dire, active participation and benefits, plus fact that court discussed it with the press preclude reversal, State v. Momah, 167 Wn.2d 140 (2009), but see: Pers Restraint of D'Allesandro, 178 Wn.App. 457 (2013); III.

Det. of Reyes, 176 Wn.App. 821 (2013)

In a civil sexually violent predator proceeding, where court hears oral argument it must be in open court; structural error does not apply in a civil proceeding, defendant's failure to object to a hearing in chambers cannot be raised for first time on appeal, Det. of Ticeson, 159 Wn.App. 374, 383 (2011); in a civil case a party lacks standing to assert the public's right to attend a hearing, State v. Herron, 177 Wn.App. 96 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 737 (2015), where raised for the first time on appeal; III.

State v. Halverson, 176 Wn.App. 972 (2013)

Bailiff reports that a juror used a dictionary during deliberations, court questions juror in chambers with counsel present, later makes record of chambers conference and replaces juror with alternate; held: under experience prong, public trial right does not attach to "preliminary individual questioning" of a deliberating juror suspected of misconduct, State v. Wilson, 141 Wn.App. 597, 601-05 (2007), United States v. Gagnon, 470 U.S. 522, 527, 83 L.Ed.2d 486 (1985), State v. Rivera, 108 Wn.App. 645, 652-53 (2001), *but see: State v. State v. Berg, 177 Wn.App. 119, 125-30 (2013), reversed, on other grounds, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014)

Police and security officers order a spectator to leave court and "trespass" him from the courtroom, when brought to judge's attention by defense judge orders that spectator is free to return, although he declines fearing arrest; held: exclusion of a single spectator is not a closure, State v. Lormor, 172 Wn.2d 85, 92-93 (2011); police banning a spectator from a trial usurps trial court's authority over courtroom operations, nullifying the exercise of the trial court's discretion which is improper and erroneous but, because there was not prejudice, harmless; II.

State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 94-96 (2013)

During deliberations, jury asks for masking tape and a tape measure, trial court provides them without consulting counsel; held: experience prong of experience and logic test, State v. Sublett, 176 Wn.2d 58, 71 (2012), shows that court's response to a jury request for these types of materials has not historically been open to the public, cf.: State v. Koss, 181 Wn.2d 493 (2014); II.

State v. Sykes, 182 Wn.2d 168 (2014)

Closed adult drug court staffings do not violate CONST. art. I, § 10; 6-3.

Det. of Morgan, 180 Wn.2d 312, 324-27 (2014)

Counsel and judge meet in chambers, absent SVP respondent, to discuss procedure for hearing evidence regarding need for forced medication; held: status conference where no evidence or testimony is presented, no substantive decisions are made, no orders are entered does not require a public hearing under experience prong, public access would have made little difference to the function of the conference or the involuntary medication proceedings under logic prong, thus public trial rights were not violated; 6-3.

State v. Frawley, 181 Wn.2d 452 (2014)

Consolidated cases: defendant Frawley waives right to be present for individual voir dire in chambers and waives right to have public present during general voir dire in courtroom, no Boneclub analysis; in State v. Applegate, court asks courtroom if any party or member of the public objects to some juror questioning in chambers, no one objects, counsel asserts that defendant himself does not object, judge announces that public can come to chambers and leaves outer door open, questions one juror in chambers, no Boneclub analysis; in lead opinion, two justices rule that defendant can waive both right to be present and public trial right if it's in writing and court engages in Boneclub analysis, thus trial court is reversed in both cases; two justices concur, writing that defendant can waive without Boneclub analysis if waiver is knowing, voluntary and intelligent and, apparently, need not be written; three justices would hold that defendant can waive without Boneclub analysis; one justice dissents and would hold that failure to object to closure is a waiver, see: State v. Fort, 190 Wn.App. 202, 225-26 (2015); affirms State v. Frawley, 140 Wn.App. 713 (2007) and State v. Applegate, 163 Wn.App. 460 (2011), but see: State v. Hernandez, 6 Wn.App.2d 422 (2018).

State v. Koss, 181 Wn.2d 493 (2014)

State v. Smith, 181 Wn.2d 508 (2014)

State v. Njonge, 181 Wn.2d 546 (2014)

Excluding some members of the public from voir dire due to space limitations is not a closure (here the record was unclear but it appears there was room for some), State v. Gomez, 183 Wn.2d 29 (2015); excluding victim family members during voir dire is not a closure, State v. Lormor, 172 Wn.2d 85 (2011), cf.: ER 615, "a court should articulate reasons for the discretionary decision," at 559; exclusion of television camera crew from voir dire is not a closure as long as all press are not excluded; 9-0.

State v. Shearer, 181 Wn.2d 564 (2014)

Without objection or Boneclub findings, judge questions a juror in chambers with defendant present; in lead opinion, four justices decide that questioning a juror in private without findings is structural error; one justice would hold that a defendant can waive the public's right to be present when a juror is questioned in private, but that defendant did not waive here; three justices concurred, writing that if the court states a valid reason for questioning a juror in private and there is no objection, and the court gives the public the opportunity to object, then Boneclub findings are not necessary, but record here fails to show a reason for closure or that public could have objected; one justice dissents because defendant did not object.

State v. Slert, 181 Wn.2d 598 (2014)

Judge and counsel discuss jury questionnaire and agree to excuse four jurors due to knowledge about the case in chambers; lead opinion, with four justices, decides that because it is "pre-voir dire" no error occurred, State v. Miller, 184 Wn.App. 637 (2014), see also: State v. Marks, 185 Wn.2d 143 (2016), State v. Russell, 183 Wn.2d 720 (2015); one justice joins because there was no objection and thus the issue was waived; four dissenting justices would hold that excusing jurors and discussing juror questionnaires is voir dire and is thus structural error absent Boneclub findings; reverses State v. Slert, 169 Wn.App. 766 (2012).

Defendant waives his right to public trial, CONST. art. I, § 22, so that individual voir dire may take place in chambers, on appeal claims he did not waive public's right to public trial, CONST. art. I, § 10; held: waiver of the § 22 right to a public trial is also a waiver of § 10 public's right to public trial, defendant lacks standing to assert public's § 10 right, Detention of Reyes, 176 Wn.App. 821, 845 (2013), as he did not suffer "injury in fact," *Powers v. Judge announces "[w]e do not allow people to come into the courtroom after it is in session," no record is made as to whether or not the court took any action to enforce the statement, issue is raised for the first time on appeal; held: the record fails to establish the courtroom was actually closed, judge's comment is not a conclusive showing that spectators were totally excluded, State v. Njonge, 181 Wn.2d 546, 550 (2014), State v. Stark, 183 Wn.App. 893, 903 (2014); even if the comment was enforced the judge's rule does not constitute a closure, *see: State v. While violation of open courts doctrine is structural error, when raised in the context of ineffective assistance because it was not preserved defense must prove prejudice, State v. Salinas, 189 Wn.2d 747 (2018); 7-2.

State v. Whitlock, 188 Wn.2d 511 (2017)

State asks for sidebar to discuss evidentiary issue, court orders chambers conference with counsel, hears argument and rules in chambers, later making a record; held: chambers conference, as opposed to a sidebar, violates public trial right as evidentiary arguments and rulings have always occurred in open court, albeit sometimes at sidebar, State v. Smith, 181 Wn.2d 508 (2014), State v. Wise, 176 Wn.2d 1, 5 (2012); public cannot watch a chambers conference to ensure that the adversarial process is in fact adversarial, State v. Karas, 6 Wn.App.2d 610 (2018); affirms State v. Whitlock, 195 Wn.App. 745 (2016); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Salinas, 189 Wn.2d 747 (2018)

Trial counsel seeks some voir dire in chambers, court agrees, issue is not raised on direct appeal, defendant files timely PRP, raises ineffective assistance of appellate counsel; held: courtroom closure issues raised in the context of ineffective assistance in a PRP do not require reversal where there is invited error and defense does not establish prejudice, Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S. Ct. 1899, 1905, 198 L. Ed. 2d 420 (2017), State v. Momma, 167 Wn.2d 140 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Speight, 182 Wn.2d 103 (2014), see: Pers. Restraint of Morris, 176 Wn.2d 157, 165-68 (2012); structural error does not automatically result in a new trial; 6-3.

State v. Schierman, 192 Wn.2d 577 (2018)

Court holds a ten-minute chambers conference, on the record with counsel, ruling on challenges for cause, defendant does not object, court makes a record in open court as to what occurred; held: while a chambers conference in which the judge rules, on the record, on challenges for cause is a constitutional violation, where there was no questioning of jurors or presentation of evidence, the conference was recorded and the court memorializes the conference in open court the violation is "a limited de minimis exception," automatic reversal is not the remedy, at 608-15, cf.: State v. Karas, 6 Wn.App.2d 610 (/2018); fractured opinion.

Doe G v., Dep't of Corrections, 190 Wn.2d 185, (2018)

Unredacted SSOSA evaluations are not exempt from Public Disclosure Act per Uniform Health Care Information Act, RCW 70.02.020 (2014), cf.: State v. Chao Chen, 178 Wn.2d 350 (2013); reverses John Doe G v. Dep't of Corrections, 197 Wn.App. 609 (2017); 7-2.

State v. Small, 1 Wn.App.2d 254 (2017)

Peremptory challenges are taken on paper, State v. Love, 183 Wn.2d 598, 605-06 (2015), clerk misfiles document and informs appellate counsel that it is not on file, clerk later finds the document; held: a member of the public could have requested the document and it would eventually have been provided so no public trial violation occurred; III.

State v. Karas, 6 Wn.App.2d 610 (2018)

At unreported chambers conference court excludes witnesses and, after argument, rules in limine, that one witness' hearsay testimony is excluded and another witness' testimony about what a person said was not offered for the truth and thus denies the motion to exclude; Division III reverses, 3 Wn.App.2d 223, then withdraws opinion on reconsideration in light of State v. Schierman, 192 Wn.2d 577 (2018); on reconsideration, held: motion to exclude witnesses, ER 615, is "mundane," need not be in open court, , State v. Whitlock, 188 Wn.2d 511, 513-14 (2017), State v. Smith, 181 Wn.2d 508, 515 (2014); contested motions in limine, absent Bone-Club factors, must be in open court; here, at least one of the motions to exclude testimony was not de minimis as it was important evidence, thus reversed, see: Pers. Restraint of Speight, 182 Wn.2d 103, 106 (2014).

State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020)

During deliberations juror 2 leaves jury room, tells bailiff other jurors are hectoring him and he wants to be excused, then has a heart attack and is excused; held: conversation with bailiff in absence of defendant was not a violation of open courts doctrine or defendant's right to be present as there was no other way it could have been handled, distinguishing State v. Tinh Trinh Lam, 161 Wn.App. 299 (2011); I.

State v. Hernandez, 6 Wn.App.2d 422 (2018)

Defense counsel expressly declines to move for a mistrial following possible public trial violation; held: an attorney's decision to decline to seek a remedy for a public trial violation is tactical and thus precludes reversal; because this is not a waiver of the right to a public trial, rather is a decision to forfeit a remedy, defendant need not knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently waive, see: State v. Frawley, 181 Wn.2d 452 (2014); III.

RESTITUTION/LEGAL FINANCIAL OBLIGATIONS

In re Gardner, 94 Wn.2d 489 (1980)

Defendant can be sentenced to prison and ordered to pay restitution in lieu of a fine, RCW 9A.20.030, up to twice victim's loss, but limited to victims in convicted counts; 8-1.

State v. Rogers, 30 Wn.App. 653 (1981)

Court can set restitution at actual loss, and is not limited to the amount necessary for conviction ($9500 restitution for PSP 2°); accord: State v. Selland, 54 Wn.App. 122 (1989), State v. Mead, 67 Wn.App. 486, 490 (1992), State v. Griffith, 136 Wn.App. 885 (2007); I.

State v. Smith, 33 Wn.App. 791 (1983)

Standard for establishing restitution in a juvenile proceeding is "evidence sufficient to afford a reasonable basis for estimating the loss"; see: State v. Fambrough, 66 Wn.App. 223 (1992); only tangible damages, such as those for injury to or loss of property, are allowed, 79 ALR 3d 976 (1977); juvenile restitution provisions, RCW 13.40.020(17), 13.40.190, are not vague; I.

State v. Moreau, 35 Wn.App. 688 (1983)

Distinguishes restitution ordered pursuant to RCW 9A.20.030 from RCW 9.95.210; III.

State v. Barr, 99 Wn.2d 75 (1983)

A person convicted of negligent homicide can, as a condition of probation, be ordered to pay restitution to the victim's spouse and minor child, State v. Donahoe, 105 Wn.App. 97 (2001), see: State v. Young, 63 Wn.App. 324 (1991), State v. Cosgaya-Alvarez, 172 Wn.2d 785 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Mark, 36 Wn.App. 428 (1984)

Restitution may not exceed amount stolen for specific offense as charged, State v. Eilts, 94 Wn.2d 484 (1980), absent agreement by defendant at a plea of guilty, RCW 9.95.210; trial court does not have discretion to award restitution for general criminal conduct of the defendant; restitution in a criminal case need not be proven with specific accuracy; test is "reasonable basis for estimating loss"; see: State v. Fambrough, 66 Wn.App. 223 (1992); criminal defendant is not entitled to a civil jury trial to determine damages, State v. Barr, 99 Wn.2d 75 (1983); I.

State v. Barnett, 36 Wn.App. 560 (1984)

Court may order restitution paid to victim's insurer, State v. Sanchez, 73 Wn.App. 486, 488-90 (1994), cf.: State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 881-5 (1995), State v. Ewing, 102 Wn.App. 349 (2000); I.

State v. Hartwell, 38 Wn.App. 135 (1984), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Krall, 125 Wn.2d 146, 149 (1994)

Restitution for damage to vehicle may not be ordered following hit and run conviction since the conduct of leaving the scene of an accident is not a proximate cause of damages occurring in the accident itself, see also: State v. Mead, 67 Wn.App. 486 (1992), State v. Coe, 86

Wn.App. 841 (1997), cf.: State ex rel. Fitch v. Roxbury Dist. Court, 29 Wn.App. 591 (1981), State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999), State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.App. 78 (2007); I.

State v. Perdang, 38 Wn.App. 141 (1984)

Abuse of discretion for district court to refuse to grant compromise of misdemeanor, RCW 10.22.010-020, except under unique or extraordinary circumstances; court must consider a defendant's "individual circumstances"; see: State v. Cunningham, 96 Wn.2d 31, 35 (1981); I.

State v. Eyre, 39 Wn.App. 141 (1984)

Chapter 7 bankruptcy filing will not discharge criminal restitution, Kelly v. Robinson, 93 L.Ed.2d 216 (1986); III.

State v. Ashley, 40 Wn.App. 877 (1985)

Defendant assaults and injures victim, later assaults victim, no injuries; defendant is charged and convicted only with second assault, restitution ordered for first assault; held: restitution may only be ordered for the crimes charged and proved at trial, RCW 13.40.190(1), State v. Mark, 36 Wn.App. 428 (1984), but see: State v. Donahoe, 105 Wn.App. 97 (2001); I.

State v. Jeffries, 42 Wn.App. 142 (1985)

Assault defendant may be ordered to make restitution to Department of Labor and Industries for damages paid to victim under Crime Victims' Compensation Act, RCW 7.68.010 et seq., distinguishing State v. Theroff, 33 Wn.App. 741 (1983); III.

State v. Smith, 42 Wn.App. 399 (1985)

Court may order restitution in an amount greater than the fair market value, i.e., replacement value of used property with new property, see: State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 153-56 (2005),abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), ; I.

Seattle v. Stokes, 42 Wn.App. 498 (1986)

Compromise of misdemeanor statute, RCW 10.22, is inapplicable to a charge of reckless driving, since property damage or personal injury is not a necessary element of the charge, State ex rel. Fitch v. Roxbury Dist. Court, 29 Wn.App. 591 (1981), cf.: State v. Stalker, 152 Wn.App. 805 (2009); I.

State v. Forbes, 43 Wn.App. 793 (1986)

Sentence directed restitution be made in an amount set by prosecutor's office; held: trial court may not delegate the responsibility of setting the amount of restitution to another agency; I.

State v. Morse, 45 Wn.App. 197 (1986)

Restitution following juvenile court conviction of negligent driving may not include travel, telephone expenses or attorney fees, RCW 13.40.190(17); trial court need not consider comparative negligence in determining restitution amount; I.

State v. Goodrich, 47 Wn.App. 114 (1987)

Superior court may not order restitution for victim's medical expenses which have not yet been incurred, State v. C.A.E., 148 Wn.App. 720 (2009), although court maintains jurisdiction for ten years to modify restitution order, State v. Vinyard, 50 Wn.App. 888 (1988); I.

State v. Raleigh, 50 Wn.App. 248 (1988)

Defendant is entitled to a restitution hearing at which state must offer evidence to establish the amount of loss; where defendant pleads guilty, court may only order restitution for that to which defendant pleaded guilty unless defendant is informed prior to the plea that he could be ordered to pay more, State v. Osborne, 140 Wn.App. 38 (2007), see: State v. Tindal, 50 Wn.App. 401 (1988), State v. Pockert, 53 Wn.App. 491 (1989), State v. Miszak, 69 Wn.App. 426 (1993); I.

State v. Halsen, 111 Wn.2d 121 (1988)

In custodial interference case, restitution for travel expenses to recover a child is not "treatment," RCW 9.94A.140(1), reversing State v. Halsen, 50 Wn.App. 30 (1987), but may be awarded under RCW 9A.40.080(1); 9-0.

State v. Steward, 52 Wn.App. 413 (1988)

Respondent is convicted of taking a motor vehicle without permission, RCW 9A.56.070; juvenile court finds that respondent abandoned vehicle, which was stripped, orders restitution for damages; held: RCW 13.40.190 authorizes restitution as the damages resulted from the respondent's offense, distinguishing State v. Ashley, 40 Wn.App. 877 (1985); accord: State v. Blair, 56 Wn.App. 209 (1989), State v. Donahoe, 105 Wn.App. 97 (2001), cf.: State v. Woods, 90 Wn.App. 904 (1998), State v. Blanchfield, 126 Wn.App. 235 (2005); I.

State v. Nelson, 53 Wn.App. 128 (1988)

In the absence of statutory authority, court may not order sale of defendant's property in police custody to satisfy restitution order; I.

State v. Horner, 53 Wn.App. 806 (1989)

The value of a victim's labor in making repairs to property damage by respondent may be included in a restitution order, RCW 13.40.020(17); court may base restitution order upon an estimate of the cost a professional would have charged; I.

State v. Barrett, 54 Wn.App. 178 (1989)

Juvenile passenger in stolen vehicle, convicted of taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070, may be ordered to make restitution for damages to the vehicle pursuant to RCW 13.40.190(1); I.

State v. Harrington, 56 Wn.App. 176 (1989)

Defendant, convicted of possessing a stolen car, is ordered to pay restitution for damage to the car; held: because defendant admitted illegally possessing the vehicle during the entire period during which victim was out of possession, and because evidence established that damage occurred in that period, then restitution order was valid, see: State v. Blair, 56 Wn.App. 209 (1989), but see: State v. Tetters, 81 Wn.App. 478 (1996), State v. Woods, 90 Wn.App. 904

(1998), cf.: State v. Blanchfield, 126 Wn.App. 235 (2005), see: State v. S.T., 139 Wn.App. 915 (2007); I.

Pa. Welfare Dept. v. Davenport, 109 L.Ed.2d 588 (1990)

Criminal restitution is dischargeable under Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code, distinguishing Kelly v. Robinson, 93 L.Ed.2d 216 (1986); 7-2.

State v. Lewis, 57 Wn.App. 921 (1990)

Restitution, RCW 9.94A.142, may not be imposed for future earnings losses or the loss of future retirement, cf.: State v. Cosgaya-Alvarez, 172 Wn.2d 785 (2013); I.

State v. Johnson, 59 Wn.App. 867 (1990)

Trial court orders $700 recoupment where counsel is paid $4000 for 15 indigent defense cases (average $266.67 per case); held: because the negotiated fee for each defendant was not $266.67, it is reasonable to conclude that some cases would be disposed of summarily and others would take time; in light of the time spent on this case, as reflected in the record, apportioning $700 to this defendant was reasonable, RCW 10.01.160; III.

State v. Davison, 116 Wn.2d 917 (1991)

Defendant is ordered to pay, pursuant to restitution statute, RCW 9.94A.142, assault victim's employer for wages employer paid victim while victim was unable to work due to injuries caused by assault, absent proof that employer was legally obliged to pay said wages; held: employer is within statutory definition of victim, RCW 9.94A.030(28), as it sustained financial injury as a direct result of crime charged; if employer had not paid victim, then defendant would have owed victim lost wages, thus restitution to employer was proper, distinguishing State v. Vinyard, 50 Wn.App. 888 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Eisenman, 62 Wn.App. 640 (1991)

Trial court denies recoupment but imposes $70 costs and $100 victim assessment without determining ability to pay; held: by disallowing recoupment of attorney's fees, court impliedly concluded that defendant could pay $170 over ten years' jurisdiction, distinguishing State v. Earls, 87 Wn.2d 814 (1976), State v. Hayes, 56 Wn.App. 451 (1989), State v. Woodward, 116 Wn.App. 697 (2003); requiring formal findings for a "few hundred dollars" is unnecessary as long as defendant is not later incarcerated if unable to pay, State v. Barklind, 87 Wn.2d 814 (1976), State v. Ring, 134 Wn.App. 716, 720-21 (2006), see: State v. Curry, 118 Wn.2d 911 (1992), State v. Bower, 64 Wn.App. 808 (1992), State v. Crook, 146 Wn.App. 24 (2008), but see: State v. Bertrand, 165 Wn.App. 393, 403-05 (2011), State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 24-26 (2013), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430 (2016); I.

State v. Young, 63 Wn.App. 324 (1991)

Following vehicular homicide conviction, court may order defendant to pay, as restitution, child support to victim's child where said support has been previously reduced to a judgment, RCW 9.94A.140, State v. Barr, 99 Wn.2d 75 (1983), State v. Cosgaya-Alvarez, 172 Wn.2d 785 (2013); allocation of insurance payments against victim's loss is within discretion of trial court, and may be applied first against items of loss not recoverable as restitution to maximize victim's recovery; II.

State v. Bennett, 63 Wn.App. 530 (1991)

Juvenile on Social Security with representative payee is ordered to ask guardian for money to pay restitution; held: no abuse of discretion in ordering restitution and ordering respondent to ask payee for funds from social security checks; defendant has burden of establishing that she had proprietary interest in some of the property for which she is ordered to pay restitution, RCW 13.30.020(17); I.

Funds spent to develop film and to unload, reload and reset surveillance cameras following a burglary are property lost as a result of the burglary and thus compensable under restitution statute, former RCW 9.94A.142(1), State v. Davison, 116 Wn.2d 917 (1991), State v. Wilson, 100 Wn.App. 44 (2000), reversing State v. Smith, 61 Wn.App. 277 (1991); cf.: State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 881-5 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Fambrough, 66 Wn.App. 223 (1992)

Unsworn estimate of damages is sufficient to establish restitution in juvenile court, RCW 13.40.150(1), ER 1101(c)(3), State v. Smith, 33 Wn.App. 791 (1983), State v. Horner, 53 Wn.App. 806, 807 (1989), State v. Mark, 36 Wn.App. 428, 434 (1984), State v. Tobin, 132 Wn.App. 161, 174-77 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 161 Wn.2d 517 (2007); defense does not have the right to confront witnesses at restitution hearing; I.

State v. Pollard, 66 Wn.App. 779, rev. den., 120 Wn.2d 1015 (1992)

Rules of Evidence do not apply at a restitution hearing, ER 1101; due process requires that evidence be reliable and that defendant be given the opportunity to refute the evidence presented; police reports alone that record what banks say they lost in UIBC cases is insufficient to order restitution; accord: State v. Awawdeh, 72 Wn.App. 373, 378-9 (1994); I.

State v. Landrum, 66 Wn.App. 791 (1992)

Restitution for victim's counseling costs is proper under Juvenile Justice Act, RCW 13.40.190, State v. J.P., 149 Wn.2d 444 (2003); where underlying facts allege an assault of a sexual nature, medical examination restitution is proper even if respondent ultimately pleads guilty to a lesser offense; I.

State v. Clapp, 67 Wn.App. 263 (1992)

Restitution ordered against defendant is proper even though crime partner was granted immunity, as defendant may seek contribution through a separate proceeding; II.

State v. Kisor, 68 Wn.App. 610 (1993)

Affidavit which contains hearsay declarations establishing a rough estimate of costs, with no indication where affiant obtained figures is not substantial credible evidence, offending due process where court sets restitution based entirely upon said affidavit, cf. State v. Tobin, 132 Wn.App. 161, 174-77 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 161 Wn.2d 517 (2007); II.

State v. Johnson, 69 Wn.App. 189 (1993)

Defendant is charged with theft by embezzlement of checks and money, in guilty plea form defendant admits she stole cash, checks, "& other items," trial court orders restitution for tool and photographs and for costs of auditing and investigation; held: because plea form does not describe items taken with specificity, court cannot assume for restitution purposes that defendant admitted to stealing tool and photographs, see: State v. Miszak, 69 Wn.App. 426 (1993); investigating records was a reasonable consequence of the embezzlement, State v. Tobin, 161 Wn.2d 517 (2007), even though part of investigation was done by victim's friends, who were not proven to be qualified to review business records, and even though victim may not have been obliged to pay for their services, State v. Wilson, 100 Wn.App. 44 (2000), see: State v. Davison, 116 Wn.2d 917, 922-3 (1991), cf.: State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 881-5 (1995); I.

State v. Shannahan, 69 Wn.App. 512 (1993)

Misdemeanors outside RCW Title 9A are subject to restitution provisions of RCW 9A.20.030, State v. Stephan, 35 Wn.App. 889 (1983), cf.: State v. Kelley, 77 Wn.App. 66, 71-2 (1995); I.

State v. Hunotte, 69 Wn.App. 670 (1993)

Respondent breaks car window, steals speakers, flees as passenger in another vehicle which is pursued by car prowl victim, driver of respondent's vehicle rams victim's vehicle, trial court orders restitution for damage to victim's vehicle incurred during chase; held: but for the criminal act, damage would not have occurred, State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999), see: State v. Blair, 56 Wn.App. 209, 215 (1989), plus a reasonable person would foresee the loss as a consequence of the criminal act, State v. Harrington, 56 Wn.App. 176, 180 (1989), State v. Woods, 90 Wn.App. 904 (1998), State v. Keigan C., 120 Wn.App. 604 (2004), aff'd, State v. Hiett, 154 Wn.2d 560 (2005); it is highly likely that when a vehicle owner sees someone smashing a window, s/he will try to apprehend the offender; 2-1, II.

State v. Awawdeh, 72 Wn.App. 373, 378-9 (1994)

Trial court, absent a hearing, sets restitution, stating, "[t]hat's what I believe...to be probable out-of-pocket expenses for the investigation;" held: an evidentiary hearing is required where restitution amount is contested, State v. Pockert, 53 Wn.App. 491, 498 (1989); while damages need not be proved with certainty, evidence must be sufficient to afford a reasonable basis for estimating the loss and must not be mere speculation or conjecture, State v. Pollard, 66 Wn.App. 779, 785 (1992), cf.: State v. Tobin, 132 Wn.App. 161, 174-77 (2006), 161 Wn.2d 517 (2007); III.

State v. Tracy, 73 Wn.App. 386 (1994)

Sentencing court may not impose restitution upon a defendant who pleads guilty unless defendant is advised of that possibility prior to entering plea, State v. Cameron, 30 Wn.App. 229, 234 (1981), State v. Raleigh, 50 Wn.App. 248, 253 (1988); here, guilty plea form advised defendant that court will order restitution if crime resulted in injury, but court holds that "[p]rior to entering his plea, however, Mr. Tracy was neither advised of the possibility of restitution nor that restitution might be ordered," case involved a stabbing, defendant pled guilty to unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270; remedy is to strike restitution order, distinguishing State v. Cameron, supra, at 234; III.

State v. Sanchez, 73 Wn.App. 486 (1994)

Juvenile court may order restitution paid to a victim's insurer, at 488-90, State v. Barnett, 36 Wn.App. 560 (1984); burden of establishing inability to pay restitution rests with a juvenile respondent, hearing must be requested or issue is waived, at 490-1, State v. Fellers, 37 Wn.App. 613, 620 (1984), In re Erickson, 24 Wn.App. 808, 811 (1979), but see: State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430 (2016), see: State v. Bertrand, 165 Wn.App. 393, 403-05 (2011); III.

State v. Hefa, 73 Wn.App. 865 (1994)

Restitution is ordered by juvenile court to burglary victim for lost wages to secure home; held: juvenile court may only order restitution for lost wages due to physical injury, RCW 13.40.020(21), see: State v. Goodrich, 47 Wn.App. 114 (1987), cf.: State v. Gonce, 200 Wn.App. 847 (2017); I.

State v. Krall, 125 Wn.2d 146 (1994)

Failure of superior court to set restitution within 60 days of sentencing, RCW 9.94A.142(1) [amended, 1995, to 180 days, RCW 9.94A.753 (2003)], precludes a restitution order, overruling State v. Hartwell, 38 Wn.App. 135 (1984) insofar as it is inconsistent; accord: State v. Duback, 77 Wn.App. 330 (1995), State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.App. 813 (1999); see: State v. Ryan, 78 Wn.App. 758 (1995), State v. Hennings, 129 Wn.2d 512 (1996), but see: State v. Duvall, 84 Wn.App. 439, 441-5 (1996), State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 326-27 (2007), cf.: State v. Barbee, 193 Wn.2d 581 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Kuhn, 74 Wn.App. 787, 792-3 (1994)

Expenses of an indigent's appeal may not be imposed on defendant other than statutory attorney fees and expenses actually incurred by the prevailing party, RAP 14.3(a); II.

State v. Fleming, 75 Wn.App. 270 (1994)

Court may impose restitution for the appreciated value of the item stolen at the time of the restitution hearing, and is not bound by the value at the time of the theft, see: State v. Hughes, 154 Wn.2d 118, 153-56 (2005), abrogated, on other grounds, Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); failure to object to restitution and affirmatively admitting to theft of property for which restitution is ordered effectively agrees to restitution order; I.

State v. Wiens, 77 Wn.App. 651 (1995)

RCW 9.94A.145(4), which authorizes victims of crime to enforce criminal restitution orders as if they were civil judgments, is valid; I.

State v. Angulo, 77 Wn.App. 657 (1995)

After conviction, defendant moves for return of cash in evidence, which is denied; judgment and sentence requires restitution to be set at a subsequent hearing, which is held, defendant ordered to pay upon release from prison; while still in prison, court modifies payment schedule to require payment of restitution and authorizes payment from cash in evidence, from which defendant appeals; held: no statute authorizes modification of restitution payment schedule except for change in circumstances, RCW 9.94A.142(1), or upon a violation, RCW 9.94A.200(1), (2), neither of which occurred here, thus court's modification is vacated; defendant is entitled to return of exhibit, State v. Alaway, 64 Wn.App. 796, 798 (1992), CrR 2.3(e); I.

State v. Ryan, 78 Wn.App. 758 (1995)

Trial court enters ex parte restitution order, procedure advises defendant he may object and schedule restitution hearing but does not set deadline by which offender must object or be considered to have acknowledged the amount, no hearing is held within 60-day [now 180 day, RCW 9.94A.753 (2003)] statutory period, RCW 9.94A.142; held: where defendant objects to amount set in ex parte order, hearing must be set within statutory period or restitution is barred, State v. Krall, 125 Wn.2d 146 (1994), State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592, 608 (2006), cf.: State v. Duvall, 84 Wn.App. 439, 441-45 (1996), State v. Burmaster, 96 Wn.App. 36 (1999) State v. Barbee, 193 Wn.2d 581 (2019); I.

State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 881-85 (1995)

Insurance company's expenses in investigating fire are not recoverable as restitution, as insurer was not victim, nor did any victim get subrogated compensation, distinguishing State v. Davison, 116 Wn.2d 917 (1991), State v. Barnett, 36 Wn.App. 560 (1984), State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 385, 389 (1992), State v. Johnson, 69 Wn.App. 189 (1993), but see: State v. Wilson, 100 Wn.App. 44 (2000), State v. Tobin, 161 Wn.2d 517 (2007); insurer's attorneys fees and costs incurred in separate civil action brought by arson-defendant are not recoverable, State ex rel. Macri v. Bremerton, 8 Wn.2d 93, 102 (1941), State v. Vinyard, 50 Wn.App. 888, 894 (1988), but see: State v. Christenson, 100 Wn.App. 504 (2000), State v. Kinneman, 155 Wn.2d 272, 286-89 (2005); II.

State v. Hennings, 129 Wn.2d 512 (1996)

Statutory amendments expanding the time during which court may order restitution, RCW 9.94A.753, 9.94A.142, may apply retroactively, do not violate due process, ex post facto, bill of attainder or double jeopardy clauses; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Fleming, 129 Wn.2d 529 (1996)

Timeliness of restitution order may not be raised for the first time in a personal restraint petition; 9-0.

State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535 (1996)

Timeliness of restitution order may be raised for the first time on appeal; 5-4.

State v. Hunsicker, 129 Wn.2d 554 (1996)

Where plea agreement specifies an amount of restitution, entry of the restitution order after the statutory 60-day period [now 180 days, RCW 9.94A.753] does not preclude restitution; 7-2.

State v. Tetters, 81 Wn.App. 478 (1996)

Respondent pleads guilty to possessing stolen property, a vehicle, is ordered to pay restitution for loss of personal property taken from the vehicle; held: because no evidence was presented that respondent was in possession of the vehicle either from the time it was taken or when the items were taken from the vehicle, there is insufficient causal relationship between the crime proven and victim's damages, State v. Romish, 7 Wn.App.2d 510 (2019), distinguishing State v. Blair, 56 Wn.App. 209, 214-5 (1989), State v. Harrington, 56 Wn.App. 176, 179-80 (1989), State v. Mead, 67 Wn.App. 486, 491 (1992), but see: State v. Keigan C., 120 Wn.App. 604 (2004), aff'd, State v. Hiett, 154 Wn.2d 560 (2005), State v. S.T., 139 Wn.App. 915 (2007); I.

State v. Kisor, 82 Wn.App. 175 (1996), overruled, in part, State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999)

Defendant killed police dog, state seeks restitution for replacing fully trained police dog with wages for trainer; held: although officer-trainer would have been paid anyway, government was deprived of his services, thus his wages during training were compensable as restitution, State v. Davison, 116 Wn.2d 917, 921 (1991); officer's personal vehicle expenses used during training were properly awarded at rate-per-mile paid by county; officer's off-duty time caring for dog are not proper as he was not victim and this time did not have an "easily ascertainable value," at 183-4; citizen's donation of funds to replace the dead dog do not offset defendant's obligation, Wheeler v. Catholic Archdiocese, 124 Wn.2d 634, 640 (1994), State v. Davison, supra, at 922; II.

State v. Branch, 129 Wn.2d 635, 651 (1996)

Defendant cannot challenge the amount of restitution ordered where he failed to raise the issue at the trial court and agreed to pay restitution, see: State v. Young, 63 Wn.App. 324, 330 (1991), State v. Harrington, 56 Wn.App. 176, 181 (1989), State v. Osborne, 140 Wn.App. 38 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Duvall, 84 Wn.App. 439, 441-5 (1996) , 86 Wn.App 871 (1997)

Time limit for entering restitution order, RCW 9.94A.753, is not jurisdictional, but operates like a statute of limitations subject to equitable tolling; here, defense counsel signed a restitution order which was set aside on defendant's motion based upon lack of notice and authority, thus neither trial court nor prosecutor were negligent, there was no prejudice, but see: State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.App. 813 (1999); I.

State v. Campbell, 84 Wn.App. 596 (1997)

Where defendant fails to pay restitution, defendant has the burden of showing that a violation was not willful, State v. Gropper, 76 Wn.App. 882, 887 (1995), RCW 9.94A.200(2)(a), State v. Woodward, 116 Wn.App. 697 (2003), State v. N.S.T., 156 Wn.App. 444 (2010), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Tucker, 171 Wn.2d 50 (2011) State v. Sleater, 194 Wn.App. 470, 474 (2016); incarceration for failure to pay does not violate due process or equal protections clauses, State v. Barklind, 87 Wn.2d 814 (1976), State v. Curry, 118 Wn.2d 911 (1992), see: State v. Nason, 168 Wn.2d 936 (2010); II.

State v. Mollichi, 132 Wn.2d 80 (1997)

Juvenile court must determine restitution at disposition hearing, RCW 13.40.150(3)(f), unless waived by respondent, State v. Kerow, 192 Wn.App. 843 (2016), reversing State v. Mollichi, 81 Wn.App. 474 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Bunner, 86 Wn.App. 158 (1997)

Following rape of a child conviction, trial court sets restitution for medical services based upon a DSHS medical recovery report, without finding a causal connection; held: absent proof of why medical services were provided, restitution order was invalid as state must prove a causal connection between crime and damages, State v. Vinyard, 50 Wn.App. 888, 891 (1988), State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999), State v. Hahn, 100 Wn.App. 391, 397-400 (2000), see: State v. Blanchfield, 126 Wn.App. 235, 242 (2005), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), State v. Velezmoro, 196 Wn.App. 552 (2016), a presentence report which purports to establish the connection which is admitted at sentencing but not referenced at restitution hearing is insufficient to support restitution order as defense lacked opportunity to rebut or challenge it; I.

State v. Taylor, 86 Wn.App. 442 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999)

Defendant is charged with welfare fraud 1°, state alleges theft of $9074, jury convicts of lesser welfare fraud 2°, court imposes restitution of $9074; held: while court may impose restitution for actual loss proved irrespective of degree of crime, State v. Rogers, 30 Wn.App. 653 (1981), State v. Mead, 67 Wn.App. 486, 490 (1992), jury's verdict here does not establish an underlying criminal act that could serve as the basis for a restitution award greater than $1500, cf.: State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.App. 78 (2007), since jury must have found defendant eligible for some of the welfare benefits he received, thus remanded for order of restitution in an amount reflecting loss to state from crime of conviction; I.

State v. Coe, 86 Wn.App. 841 (1997)

Defendant pleads guilty to manufacturing marijuana, is ordered to pay restitution to homeowner for damage to house that occurred during grow operation; held: damage would not have occurred but for the marijuana grow operation, thus there is a causal connection between the crime charged and the victim's damage, distinguishing State v. Hartwell, 38 Wn.App. 135 (1984); II.

State v. Duvall, 86 Wn.App. 871, 874-76 (1997)

Court signs agreed restitution order within 60-day statutory period (now 180 days, RCW 9.94A.753), defendant later objects claiming counsel lacked authority, court sets aside original order and holds a restitution hearing after the 60-day period, signs second restitution order; held: 60-day period operates as a statute of limitations, not a jurisdictional period, State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535 (1996), thus doctrine of equitable tolling is applicable and second order is thus valid; I.

State v. Hartke, 89 Wn.App. 143 (1997)

Juvenile court's extending jurisdiction over juvenile sentenced in 1988 to collect restitution pursuant to RCW 13.40.190 which, as of 1994, allowed extension of jurisdiction over juveniles for restitution to age 28 did not violate ex post facto clause, as restitution is not punishment, RCW 13.40.010, State v. Rice, 98 Wn.2d 384, 391-4 (1982), even though punishment may be imposed later for failure to pay, see: In re Marriage of Haugh, 58 Wn.App. 1, 5-6 (1990), accord: State v. Bennett, 92 Wn.App. 637 (1998); III.

State v. Woods, 90 Wn.App. 904 (1998)

Defendant is convicted of possessing a stolen vehicle in September, trial court imposes restitution for loss of personalty in the truck when it was stolen in August based upon defendant's admission she stole the truck in August; held: absent plea agreement, State v. Miszak, 69 Wn.App. 426, 429 (1993), court cannot order restitution for losses which go beyond the crime charged, loss of personal property was not a foreseeable consequence of later possession of stolen truck, State v. Romish, 7 Wn.App.2d 510 (2019), State v. Tetters, 81 Wn.App. 478, 479 (1996), see: State v. Hunotte, 69 Wn.App. 670, 675-6 (1993), State v. Steward, 52 Wn.App. 413, 416 (1988), State v. Blanchfield, 126 Wn.App. 235 (2005), but see: State v. Harrington, 56 Wn.App. 176 (1989), State v. Keigan C., 120 Wn.App. 604 (2004), aff'd, State v. Hiett, 154 Wn.2d 560 (2005), *State v. State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999)

Lack of foreseeability of extent of injuries from an assault is not a factor to be determined in setting restitution; as long as there is a causal connection between the crime and the injuries, restitution is appropriate, State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.App. 78 (2007), affirming State v. Enstone, 89 Wn.App. 882 (1998), overruling Walla Walla v. Ashby, 90 Wn.App. 560, 565 (1998), State v. Taylor, 86 Wn.App. 442, 444-45 (1997), State v. Kisor, 82 Wn.App. 175, 180 (1996), State v. Velezmoro, 196 Wn. App. 552 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Tejada, 93 Wn.App. 907 (1999)

Juvenile court has jurisdiction to collect restitution until the offender is 28 years old, RCW 13.40.190(1); III.

Pers. Restraint of Sappenfield, 138 Wn.2d 588 (1999)

Court has authority to collect restitution for ten years following release from confinement for the crime for which restitution was ordered, RCW 9.94A.142, see: State v. Olson, 148 Wn.App. 238 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Spires, 151 Wn.App. 236 (2009), affirming Pers. Restraint of Sappenfield, 92 Wn.App. 729 (1998); 8-0.

State v. Shultz, 138 Wn.2d 638 (1999)

Legislation extending the period of time during which restitution may be collected, RCW 9.94A.753, is applicable retroactively to a defendant who had been sentenced prior to the amendment, does not violate ex post facto, see: State v. Morgan, 107 Wn.App. 153 (2001), due process, bill of attainder or double jeopardy clauses, State v. Serio, 97 Wn.App. 586 (1999); 8-0.

State v. Marks, 95 Wn.App. 537 (1999)

Statutory requirement that restitution be determined within 180 days of sentencing, RCW 9.94A.753, does not apply to misdemeanors; III.

State v. Paul, 95 Wn.App. 775 (1999)

Defendant posts cash bail, appears at revocation hearing, court forfeits bail and applies it to restitution; held: an appearance discharges bail; when a defendant satisfies bail conditions by appearing, the bail may not be forfeited; "if the state wants bail to serve a dual purpose, it must express such purpose on the record," State v. Ransom, 34 Wn.App. 819, 824 (1983); III.

State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.App. 813 (1999)

After 180-day time limit for setting restitution, RCW 9.94A.753, trial court may not exercise discretion and grant a continuance, State v. Tetreault, 99 Wn.App. 435 (2000), State v. Grantham, 174 Wn.App. 399 (2013), see: State v. Chipman, 176 Wn.App. 615 (2013), State v. Jones, 20 Wn.App.2d 552 (2021); failure to transport defendant from prison where it is not ordered within the 180-day time limit is not good cause; III.

State v. Edelman, 97 Wn.App. 161 (1999)

A restitution order may be modified upon death of victim to require payments to victim's estate; I.

State v. Serio, 97 Wn.App. 586 (1999)

Legislation allowing court to extend jurisdiction for collection of restitution, RCW 9.94A.753, does not violate ex post facto clause for a defendant sentenced before enactment, State v. Shultz, 138 Wn.2d 638 (1999); III.

State v. Dedonado, 99 Wn.App. 251 (2000)

To challenge causal connection between crime and damages alleged, State v. Bunner, 86 Wn.App. 158, 160 (1997), defense need not inform the state prior to restitution hearing that it would object, thus entry of a restitution order without proof of causal connection because defendant did not notify state of objection in advance is abuse of discretion, see also: State v. Osborne, 140 Wn.App. 38, 41 (2007); I.

State v. Wilson, 100 Wn.App. 44 (2000)

Victim's cost of investigating embezzlement may properly be ordered as restitution where causally connected and consequential to the crime, State v. Johnson, 69 Wn.App. 189 (1993), State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 385 (1992), State v. Tobin, 161 Wn.2d 517 (2007), but see: State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 882 (1995); victim's attorney's fees may be included as restitution where they are the direct result of embezzlement rather than a consequence of a separate action, State v. Kinneman, 155 Wn.App. 272, 286-89 (2005), distinguishing State v. Vinyard, 50 Wn.App. 888 (1988), see: State v. Christensen, 100 Wn.App. 534 (2000); III.

State v. Christensen, 100 Wn.App. 534 (2000)

Before sentencing, victim settles a civil suit against defendant based upon same facts as criminal case, sentencing judge orders defendant to pay victim's civil attorney's fees; held: restitution was proper because the attorney's fees were a direct result of the offense, see: State v. Wilson, 100 Wn.App. 44 (2000), State v. Kinneman, 155 Wn.2d 272, 286-89 (2005); I.

State v. Dennis, 101 Wn.App. 223 (2000)

Letter from prosecutor's victim assistance unit stating that victim was treated at hospital for injury and letter from workers compensation referencing amount of damages and that victim's injuries occurred on date of crime is sufficient to sustain restitution order; letter establishing that victim was treated at hospital on an unknown date is insufficient to establish causal connection; if state fails to establish causal connection, remedy is vacation of the order, State v. Dedonado, 99 Wn.App. 251 (2000), not remand; I.

State v. Ewing, 102 Wn.App. 349 (2000)

Court may order restitution to insurer, State v. Barnett, 36 Wn.App. 560, 562 (1984), even where insurer has waived civil subrogation interest against defendant, as civil doctrines such as subrogation have no place in interpretation of criminal statutes, see also: State v. Kinneman, 122 Wn.App. 850 (2004), aff'd, 155 Wn.2d 272 (2005); I.

State v. Reed, 103 Wn.App. 261 (2000)

Department of Labor and Industries may petition for restitution within a year of sentencing even if court fails to order restitution within initial 180 days, RCW 9.94A.753; I.

State v. Dauenhauer, 103 Wn.App. 373, 377-80 (2000)

Following burglaries, defendant is chased, car hits another car, defendant is charged and convicted only of burglaries, at sentencing defense counsel agrees that court can order restitution for collision; held: counsel's incorrect concession to liability for damages is not akin to a guilty plea, see: State v. Osborne, 140 Wn.App. 38, 41 (2007), and agreement to pay for uncharged acts; since there was no causal connection between the offenses charged and the damages from the collision, restitution is vacated, distinguishing State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999), but see: State v. S.T., 139 Wn.App. 915 (2007); III.

State v. Donahoe, 105 Wn.App. 97 (2001)

Twelve-year-old respondent pops ignition with screwdriver and joyrides, leaves car with his nine-year-old brother inside, engine running, brother takes wheel and hits a garage, respondent is convicted of possessing stolen property, court orders restitution for garage; held: where damage occurs as a direct result of respondent's conduct, is causally connected to the crime, State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675, 682 (1999), and is reasonably related to the crime, State v. Mark, 36 Wn.App. 428, 432 (1984), restitution may be ordered to collateral victims of the charged conduct even if not a named victim, State v. Barr, 99 Wn.2d 75, 78 (1983), distinguishing State v. Ashley, 40 Wn.App. 877 (1985); III.

State v. Pierson, 105 Wn.App. 160 (2001)

Where trial court orders that restitution hearing be within 60 days, it is authorized to continue the hearing as long as it is heard within the statutory 180-day limit, RCW 9.94A.753, see: State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.App. 813 (1999); II.

State v. Claypool, 111 Wn.App. 473 (2002)

Trial court may not defer interest on financial obligations, RCW 10.82.090; III.

State v. A.M.R., 147 Wn.2d 91 (2002)

Juvenile court must order restitution, including that owed insurers; state may appeal a restitution order, State v. Kinneman, 155 Wn.2d 272, 283-84 (2005); affirms State v. A.M.R., 108 Wn.App. 9 (2001); 9-0.

State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 298-300 (2002)

Where a defendant is convicted of conspiracy, he must be ordered to pay restitution to all victims of the conspiracy, regardless of the defendant's knowledge or complicity in the particular injury; I.

State v. Dorenbos, 113 Wn.App. 494 (2002)

Seven years after untimely restitution order is entered, defendant moves to vacate; held: statutory time limit on setting restitution is not jurisdictional, State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535, 545 (1996), thus collateral attack is barred if brought more than one year after judgment and sentence becomes final, RCW 10.73.090; I.

State v. Turner, 114 Wn.App. 653, 659-61 (2002)

State v. Lohr, 130 Wn.App. 904 (2005)

Defendant lights a candle in her hotel room which causes a fire burning two hotels and several vehicles, pleads guilty to reckless burning, is ordered to pay restitution for all damage; held: foreseeability is not required to be proved to order restitution, State v. Enstone, 137 Wn.2d 675 (1999), contributory negligence principles need not reduce restitution, here but for defendant's act the damage would not have occurred, thus more than $1,000,000 restitution is affirmed; by ordering defendant to pay $250 per month, trial court impliedly considered defendant's ability to pay, *see: State v. State v. S.T., 139 Wn.App. 915 (2007)

Two days after car is stolen, respondent is found in driver's seat, is charged with taking a motor vehicle, pleads guilty to attempted taking a motor vehicle, is ordered to pay restitution for personal property that disappeared from the vehicle after the taking; held: but for the taking, the property would not have been lost, thus there is a causal connection between the acts of respondent and the loss; crime charged was a completed taking, available proof, per certification of probable cause, supported the completed crime, conviction for the lesser occurred as a result of a plea bargain, the crime was not a mere possessory offense, distinguishing State v. Woods, 90 Wn.App. 904 (1998), State v. Tetters, 81 Wn.App. 478 (1996), restitution may be ordered for all damages arising from the crime as a whole, not just those directly caused by the respondent's individual conduct, *State v. State v. Osborne, 140 Wn.App. 38 (2007)

Pursuant to a plea agreement, court dismisses counts relating to a victim to whom court orders defendant to pay restitution, defense enters an objection to any restitution; held: a general objection to restitution is sufficient to preserve issue on appeal; absent specific agreement to pay, court cannot order restitution for acts that are only connected with the charged crime when those acts are not part of the charge, State v. Dauenhauer, 103 Wn.App. 373, 378 (2000); III.

State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 326-27 (2007)

Trial court sets restitution within 180 days of sentencing, after 180-day limit expires, court grants state's request for modification to include more restitution; held: a restitution order may be modified anytime within court's jurisdiction, including beyond the 180 day period, RCW 9.94A.753(4), but see: State v. Krall, 125 Wn.2d 146 (1994), cf.: State v. Duvall, 84 Wn.App. 439, 441-5 (1996), State v. Barbee, 193 Wn.2d 581 (2019); III.

State v. Gonzalez, 168 Wn.2d 256 (2010)

After restitution is set it may be modified by the court to pay for medical expenses accrued after the original amount was set, RCW 9.94A.753(4), amendment does not violate double jeopardy, State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313, 326-27 (2007), see also: State v. Goodrich, 47 Wn.App. 114 (1987), cf.: State v. C.A.E., 148 Wn.App. 720 (2009), State v. Burns, 159 Wn.App. 74 (2010); 7-2.

State v. Nason, 168 Wn.2d 936 (2010)

Court orders defendant to pay money monthly on LFOs and, if defendant has not paid nor filed a motion for a stay by a certain date, he is to serve 60 days in jail; held: before incarcerating for failure to pay, due process requires the court to inquire into the reason for nonpayment, thus "auto-jail" provision is invalid, see also: State v. Sleater, 194 Wn.App. 470, 474 (2016); jail sentence for nonpayment need not be credited against the amount owed as the imprisonment is for contempt, RCW 10.01.180 is inapplicable, jail sentence is a modification of the original sentence, State v. Watson, 160 Wn.2d 1, 8-9 (2007); reverses State v. Nason, 146 Wn.App. 744 (2008); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Brady, 154 Wn.App. 189 (2010)

In 1996 Juvenile Court enters restitution order, in 2007 court, by ex parte order, State v. Hotrum, 120 Wn.App. 681 (2004), extends jurisdiction for an additional ten years and imposes a $200 "extension fee;" held: because state waited more than ten years to apply for extension, judgments were unenforceable even though respondent had not turned 28 years old, RCW 13.40.190(1), -192, 6.17.020; extension of judgment fee, RCW 36.18.016(15), does not apply to juvenile court; generally, no right to counsel for post-conviction proceedings, *State v. State v. Bertrand, 165 Wn.App. 393, 403-05 (2011)

Sentencing court imposes LFOs, specifically finding, without inquiry, that defendant "has the ability or likely future ability to pay;" held: to enter a finding of ability to pay, record must reflect that court took into account defendant's resources and burden on defendant, issue is ripe for challenge even though state has not sought to collect, but see: State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430 (2016), thus remanded for trial court to strike the finding, which forecloses DOC's ability to collect until after a future determination of ability to pay, *State v. State v. Stone, 165 Wn.App. 796 (2012)

At a hearing addressing failure to pay LFOs that may result in incarceration, defendant is entitled to counsel and court may not impose jail time without inquiring into defendant's ability to pay and without finding a willful failure to pay; 2-1, II.

State v. Havens, 171 Wn.App. 220 (2012)

Defendant is sentenced to serve 12 months and pay restitution on 5 October 1992, warrant for failure to pay issued 1999, 31 December 2002 court extends jurisdiction for LFOs for ten years, defendant moves to strike extension order; held: warrant does not toll restitution as statute, RCW 9.94A.760(4) (2008), does not provide for tolling; LFO period can be extended if done within ten years of judgment and sentence or offenders release from confinement; here, record on appeal does not establish date of defendant's release, so counting from date of sentencing, extension was improper; 2-1, II.

State v. Ashenberner, 171 Wn.App. 237 (2012)

Clerk's office may require offender to provide income information to collect restitution, RCW 9.94A.760(7) (2011), and court may enforce the condition, RCW 9.94B.040 (2002), with incarceration if defendant refuses; I.

State v. Lundy, 176 Wn.App. 96 (2013)

Court imposes discretionary legal financial obligations (here, court costs, jury fees and witness costs) and finds an ability to pay absent a discussion at sentencing, record reflects that defendant earned more than $100,000 annually before becoming an addict, that defendant hoped to work after treatment and that his wife would pay; held: burden for establishing present or likely future ability to pay "is a low one," see: State v. Baldwin, 63 Wn.App. 303, 311 (1991) (self-described "employable" in presentence report suffices), showing of indigency is defendant's burden, nothing in the record here suggests defendant's indigency would extend indefinitely, distinguishing State v. Bertrand, 165 Wn.App. 393 (2011), see: State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827 (2015), *State v. State v. Chipman, 176 Wn.App. 615 (2013)

Sentencing court sets restitution for one victim within 180 days of sentencing and sets restitution for another victim beyond 180 days; held: while a court may modify a restitution order after the 180 day limit, RCW 9.94A.753(1) (2003), State v. Gray, 174 Wn.2d 920, 926-28 (2012), setting restitution for a different victim, even if part of the same general incident, is precluded, see: State v. Burns, 159 Wn.App. 74, 78-80 (2010); II.

State v. Deskins, 180 Wn.2d 68, 82-84 (2014)

Following animal cruelty conviction district court imposes restitution to reimburse government for caring for the animals based upon bills detailing the costs; held: rules of evidence do not apply at sentencing or restitution hearing, ER 1101(c)(3), actual amounts billed are not speculation or conjecture, distinguishing State v. Kisor, 68 Wn.App. 610 (1993); denial of continuance of restitution hearing is not an abuse of discretion where defendant was on notice months before trial that costs of caring for animals would be substantial and defense failed to object to restitution amount when it was presented to the court; 5-4.

State v. Quintanilla, 178 Wn.App. 173, 182 (2013)

Failure of sentencing judge to add up LFOs imposed, RCW 9.94A.760(1) (2011), is clerical, not manifest error; III.

State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 290 (2013)

Regardless of causal connection, trial court must order restitution to Department of Labor and Industry Crime Victim Compensation Fund, RCW 9.94A.753(7) (2003), 7.68.120 (1995); 2-1, II.

State v. Cawyer, 182 Wn.App. 610 (2014)

Sentencing court may order defendant to pay extradition expenses as a court cost, RCW 10.01.160, but not as restitution; II.

State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827 (2015)

Before imposing discretionary legal financial obligations, sentencing court must make an individualized inquiry into defendant's current and future ability to pay, including such factors as incarceration and other debts, see: Richland v. Wakefield, 186 Wn.2d 596 (2016), although failure to object at sentencing waives the issue, at 830; remedy on appeal is for remand to reconsider discretionary LFOs, but see: State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732, 749 (2018), State v. Leonard, 184 Wn.2d 505 (2015), State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App, 512, 536-38 (2015), aff'd, on other grounds, 188 Wn.2d 244 (2017), see: State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430 (2016), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Flippo, 187 Wn.2d 106 (2017), abrogating, in part, State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 24-26 (2013), State v. Gonzalez-Gonzalez, 193 Wn.App.. 683, 691-94 (2016); reverses, in part, State v. Blazina, 174 Wn.App. 906 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Hardtke, 183 Wn.2d 475 (2015)

Court may impose costs of SCRAM bracelet ordered pretrial, but limited to $150, RCW 10.01.160(2) (2010), but see: 2015 amendments; 9-0.

State v. Thornton, 188 Wn.App. 371 (2015)

$100 DNA fee, RCW 43.43.7541 (2011), is mandatory regardless of whether defendant had previously submitted a DNA sample for a prior conviction, State v. Johnson, 194 Wn.App. 304 (2016), State v. Lewis, 194 Wn.App. 709 (2016); III.

State v. Lyle, 188 Wn.App. 848 (2015)

Failure to object to imposition of LFOs at sentencing waives issue on appeal, State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827, 830 (2015), State v. Stoddard, 192 Wn.App. 222 (2016), but see: State v. Leonard, 184 Wn.2d 505 (2015), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430 (2016), State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732, 749 (2018) while defense counsel's failure to object is deficient, defense has not established prejudice; 2-1, II.

State v. Diaz-Farias, 191 Wn.App. 512 (2015)

Sentencing court may not impose juror costs, RCW 10.01.160(2) (2010), or interpreter costs, State v. Marintorres, 93 Wn.App. 443, 450 (1999); III.

Richland v. Wakefield, 186 Wn.2d 596 (2016)

In deciding a motion to remit discretionary legal financial obligations the court must consider whether payment of costs would cause defendant "manifest hardship," RCW 10.01.160(4) (2015), must consider whether defendant can meet her own basic needs, State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827 (2015), State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732, 749 (2018), GR 34; where social security disability (SSI) is a defendant's sole income states cannot order individuals to pay LFOs (apparently including mandatory LFOs), 42 U.S.C. § 407(a), Philpott v. Essex County Welfare Board, 409 U.S. 413, 417, 93 S.Ct. 590, 34 L.Ed.2d 608 (1973), see: State v. Catling, 2 Wn.App.2d 819 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Stoddard, 192 Wn.App. 222 (2016)

Where defendant agrees to restitution amount he is precluded from challenging it on appeal, State v. Young, 63 Wn.App. 324, 330 (1991); III.

State v. Kerow, 192 Wn.App. 843 (2016)

Court holds restitution hearing within 180 days of sentencing, RCW 9.94A.753(1), after making initial determination sets the hearing over to a date that counsel agree to which is beyond 180 period; held: where defense voluntarily accommodates a continuance beyond the limitation period when not obligated to do so defendant waives statutory requirement, State v. Mollichi, 132 Wn.App. 80, 90-94 (1997), see: State v. Jones, 20 Wn.App.2d 552 (2021); I.

State v. Sleater, 194 Wn.App. 470, 474 (2016)

Defendant is ordered to pay LFOs, enters "pay or appear" program requiring monthly payments or appear and schedule a hearing to explain why she could not pay, defendant misses payment, fails to schedule hearing, warrant is issued, upon arrest police find drugs; held: court cannot place onus on defendant to schedule her own hearing, State v. Klinker, 85 Wn.2d 509 (1975), State v. Fisher, 145 Wn.2d 209 (2001), State v. Nason, 168 Wn.2d 936 (2010), summons or prior court order requiring defendant to attend a specific hearing before a warrant can issue is necessary, thus drugs must be suppressed; III.

State v. Tedder, 194 Wn.App. 753 (2016)

Sentencing court must "fully inquire into … ability to pay" mandatory LFOs where defendant "suffers from a mental health condition," RCW 9.94A.777(1) (2010) [although statute states "other than restitution or the victim penalty assessment]; II.

State v. Shirts, 195 Wn.App. 849 (2016)

DOC prisoner moves to remit discretionary LFOs because he is denied classes and classification advances, state maintains defendant is not an aggrieved party as government is not attempting to collect, State v. Crook, 146 Wn.App. 24 (2008); held: denial of classification advances in prison is sufficient to establish that defendant is an aggrieved party, State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827, 830, 832 n.1 (2015), overruling sub nom. State v. Mahone, 98 Wn.App. 342 (1999); superior court must consider a motion to remit discretionary LFOs, RCW 10.01.160(4) (2015), see: State v. Wilson, 198 Wn.App. 632 (2017), but need not hold an evidentiary hearing; II.

State v. Clark, 195 Wn.App. 868 (2016)

$100 crime lab fee, RCW 43.43.690(1), where there was crime lab analysis, is a mandatory LFO, State v. Johns, 15 Wn.App.2d 775 (2020); III.

Pers. Restraint of Dove, 196 Wn.App. 148 (2016)

PRP challenging discretionary legal financial obligations more than a year after sentencing is untimely as judgment and sentence is valid on its face, RCW 10.73.090(1) (1989), where it expressly states that trial court considered financial circumstances and found defendant had ability to pay, and State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827 (2015) did not make a significant material change in the law, RCW 10.73.100(6) (1989); II.

State v. Velezmoro, 196 Wn.App. 552 (2016)

In child pornography case where defendant possessed depictions also possessed by others, known and unknown, court need not use a "but for" test for determining restitution amount, Paroline v. United States, 572 U.S. 434, 134 S.Ct. 1710, 188 L.Ed.2d 714 (2014), while a causal connection is necessary an alternative analysis to "but for" is proper; trial court may determine a reasonable apportionment, here $5000 where victim proved more than $1,000,000, need not limit apportionment to victimization in Washington alone; I.

Pers. Restraint of Flippo, 187 Wn.2d 106 (2016)

Failure of sentencing judge to make individualized inquiry before imposing discretionary LFOs does not invalidate the judgment and sentence and a PRP filed more than a year after finality is not timely, Pers. Restraint of Pang, 197 Wn.App. 576 (2017); 9-0.

Nelson v. Colorado, 581 U.S. 128, 137 S.Ct. 1249, 197 L.Ed.2d 611 (2017)

Defendant is convicted, LFOs imposed, reversed on appeal and acquitted, state law that obliges her to bring civil action and prove actual innocence by clear and convincing evidence violates due process clause; 8-1.

State v. Gonzales, 198 Wn.App. 151 (2017)

$200 criminal "filing fee," RCW 36.18.020(2)(h) (2015), is a mandatory legal financial obligation; II.

State v. Gonce, 200 Wn.App. 847 (2017)

Restitution may be ordered for lost wages due to emotional distress, not limited to wages lost due to physical injury, RCW 9.94A.750(3) (2003); I.

State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732, 749 (2018)

"Trial courts must meaningfully inquire into the mandatory factors established by [State v.] Blazina, [182 Wn.2d 827 (2015)] such as a defendant's incarceration and other debts, or whether a defendant meets the GR 34 standard for indigency. Trial courts must also consider other 'important factors' relating to a defendant's financial circumstances, including employment history, income, assets and other financial resources, monthly living expenses, and other debts. Under this framework, trial courts must conduct an on-the-record inquiry into the mandatory Blazina factors and other "important factors" before imposing discretionary LFOs," State v. Glover, 4 Wn.App.2d 690 (2016); RCW 10.01.160 (2018) applies prospectively, see: State v. Van Wolvelaere, 8 Wn.App.2d 705 (2019), reversed, on other grounds, 195 Wn.2d 597 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Catling, 2 Wn.App.2d 819 (2018), reversed, in part, 193 Wn.2d 252 (2019)

While mandatory LFOs can be imposed on a defendant whose sole income is Social Security disability, court should order that they cannot be satisfied from those funds, 42 U.S.C. § 407(a), see: City of Richland v. Wakefield, 186 Wn.2d 596 (2016); 2-1, III.

State v. Hill, 6 Wn.App.2d 629 (2018)

Court is not obliged to consider indigency and ability to pay mandatory LFOs; on review, remanded to trial court on DNA collection fee only, in light of State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732 (2018) and 2018 amendments to LFO statute, 193 Wn.2d 1002); I.

Timbs v. Indiana, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 682, 203 L.Ed.2d 11 (2019)

Eighth Amendment excessive fines clause applies to civil forfeitures in state courts; 9-0.

State v. Catling, 193 Wn.2d 252 (2019)

Mandatory LFOs should be imposed but judgment and sentence must reflect that repayment order to comport with RCW 10.01.180 (2018) and to indicate that this LFO may not be satisfied out of any funds subject to the Social Security Act's anti-attachment statute, 42 U.S.C. § 407(a), see: State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732, 749 (2018); reverses, in part, State v. Catling, 2 Wn.App.2d 819 (2018); 6-1.

State v. Barbee, 193 Wn.2d 581 (2019)

When a case is remanded for resentencing the 180 period for setting restitution begins anew at the resentencing date, not the original sentencing date, but see: State v. Jones, 20 Wn.App.2d 552 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Romish, 7 Wn.App.2d 510 (2019)

Defendant pleads guilty to possessing stolen property, court orders restitution for damage to the property; held: absent evidence that "but for" defendant's possession the property was damaged restitution cannot be ordered, State v. Acevedo, 159 Wn.App. 221, 229-31 (2010), State v. Griffith, 164 Wn.2d 960, 965 (2008); 2-1, III.

State v. Conway, 8 Wn.App.2d 538 (2019)

Prior to adoption of RCW 9.94A.6333 (2018) trial court lacked authority to remit mandatory LFOs, see: State v. Lacy, 9 Wn.App.2d 1003 (2019)(unpublished); II.

State v. Smith, 9 Wn.App.2d 122 (2019)

Domestic violence penalty assessment, RCW 10.99.080(1) (2015), is discretionary and not subject to indigency determination of defendant but may be subject to indigency determination of the victim which may include defendant's family; defendant's medical expenses while incarcerated pending sentencing, RCW 70.48.130(5) (2015), are discretionary but court must consider defendant's indigence; III.

State v. Vandervort, 11 Wn.App.2d 300 (2019)

One-year time period to seek review of LFOs begins at sentencing, not revocation; II.

State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App.2d 133 (2020)

Supervision fees are discretionary, RCW 9.94A.703(2), so court must determine ability to pay before ordering them, State v. Lundstrom, 6 Wn.App.2d 388, 396 n.3 (2018); I.

State v. Heutink*,* 12 Wn.App.2d 336 (2020)

Upon finding of indigency, jury demand fee and criminal filing fee may not be imposed, State v. Ramirez, 191 Wn.2d 732 (2018); domestic violence assessment, RCW 10.99.080(1) (2015), is discretionary; I.

State v. Gaines, 16 Wn.App.2d 50 (2021)

Court has authority to order clerk to remove a delinquent LFO account from a collection agency regardless of clerk's contract with the agency; II.

State v. Jones, 20 Wn.App.2d 552 (2021)

Upon remand the statutory time period for setting restitution, RCW 9.94A.753(1) (2018), commences on date mandate is issued; here, the state obtained numerous continuances beyond the 180th day which the defense did not "accommodate," thus restitution claims are dismissed, State v. Grantham, 174 Wn.App. 399 (2013), State v. Mollichi, 132 Wn.2d 80 (1997), State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535 (1996), cf.: State v. Kerow, 192 Wn.App. 843 (2016); III.

State v. Long, 21 Wn.App.2d 238 (2022)

Restitution for vacation and sick leave taken by the victim due to her injuries is proper; I.

State v. Kopperdahl, 22 Wn.App.2d 708 (2022)

In a court of limited jurisdiction where fines and penalties are not assessed the court cannot impose a public safety education assessment (PSEA), RCW 3.62.090; I.

State v. Tatum, 23 Wn.App.2d 123 (2022)

Victim penalty assessment, RCW 7.68.035(1)(a) (2018), is constitutional, State v. Curry, 118 Wn.2d 911 (1992), is constitutional as applied to indigent defendants; DNA fee, RCW 43.43.7541 (2018), is constitutional, State v. Brewster, 152 Wn.App. 856, 861 (2009); excessive fines clause, CONST. art. 1 § 14, is co-extensive with 8th Amendment, State v. Ramos, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL16734383 (2022), cf.: Seattle v. Long, 198 Wn.2d 136, 159 (2021); I.

State v. Ramos, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 65 (2022)

Interest on restitution is not punitive thus is not subject to excessive fines clause analysis under Eighth Amendment and CONST. art. I, §14, State v. Tatum, 23 Wn.App.2d 123 (2022); restitution and interest must be ordered "unless extraordinary circumstances exist which make restitution inappropriate in the court's judgment and the court sets forth such circumstances in the record," RCW 9.94A.753(5), restitution award based upon victim's actual losses is inherently proportional to the crime that caused the losses; 2-1, I.

ROBBERY

State v. Dowell, 26 Wn.App. 629 (1980)

Unlawfully carrying a weapon, RCW 9.41.270, is a lesser of robbery 1°.

State v. Corwin, 32 Wn.App. 493 (1982)

Robbery is a specific intent crime, as intent to deprive is an element, State v. Faucett, 22 Wn.App. 869 (1979); I.

State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865 (1983)

Robber puts hand in pocket and threatens "I have this" to get money from victim who believes pocket contains a firearm; held: evidence was sufficient to establish element "displays what appears to be a firearm," RCW 9A.56.200(1)(b), State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533 (2000), Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.App. 662, 674-77 (2000), but see.: State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001), State v. Jennings, 111 Wn.App. 54, 62-66 (2002); III.

State v. Hicks, 36 Wn.App. 244 (1983), 102 Wn.2d 184 (1984)

Defense of good faith claim of title, RCW 9A.56.020(2) is only available where defendant is seeking to recover the specific property in question, not to collect a debt out of another's money with no pretense of rights to the specific coins and bills, State v. Martin, 516 P.2d 753, 755 (Or.C.of.App., 1973); retaking specific property by force is a defense, State v. Larson, 23 Wn.App. 218 (1979); I; accord: State v. Self, 42 Wn.App. 654 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Blewitt, 37 Wn.App. 397 (1984)

Division I approves jury instruction, "[a] taking from the presence of another can occur . . . even though that person was not immediately present, where that person, by force or fear, had been removed from or prevented from approaching the place from which the taking occurred," State v. McDonald, 74 Wn.2d 141 (1968); I.

State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654 (1984)

Accomplice to robbery 1° may be convicted even if s/he did not know that the principal was armed, affirming State v. Davis, 35 Wn.App. 506 (1983), reversing State v. Plakke, 31 Wn.App. 262, 266 (1982) and State v. McKeown, 23 Wn.App. 582, 591-93 (1979); to enhance with special allegations, accomplice must know principal was armed; 5-4.

State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984)

Defendant is convicted of two bank robberies for forcibly taking bank money from two tellers at same time; held: possession or custody is the requirement, not ownership, thus no double jeopardy violations; see: Watkins v. Florida, 513 So.2d 1275 (Fla. D.C. App. 1982); 9-0.

State v. Mahoney, 40 Wn.App. 514 (1985)

Suspect assaults, injures wife, then robs husband by threatening wife; held: no double jeopardy violation, since assault and robbery were distinct acts; insufficient evidence to convict of robbery 1°, as no injury occurred during the commission of the robbery and no weapon was involved; I.

State v. Manchester, 57 Wn.App. 765 (1990)

Defendant shoplifts then, when apprehended outside store, menaces security guard with a weapon to escape; held: sufficient to prove robbery 1°, RCW 9A.56.190-200, State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284 (1992), cf.: State v. Robinson, 73 Wn.App. 851 (1994), State v. McIntyre, 112 Wn.App. 478 (2002), State v. Truong, 168 Wn.App. 529 (2012), State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.2d 609 (2005); I.

State v. Sly, 58 Wn.App. 740 (1990)

Robbery information that fails to allege the nonstatutory element of intent is still sufficient as long as facts in the information support the element of intent, State v. Strong, 56 Wn.App. 715, 717 (1990); see also: State v. Hernandez, 58 Wn.App. 793 (1990); I.

State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991)

Robbery information that does not allege "intent to steal" is sufficient, as information alleged that defendant unlawfully took money from cash register, against the will of victim by use of force while displaying a weapon, distinguishing State v. Hicks, 102 Wn.2d 182 (1984); see: State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Stearns, 61 Wn.App. 224 (1991)

Defendant attempts to rape victim, drags her 12 blocks, force causes her to lose property and leave vicinity of it, defendant goes back and takes same; held: sufficient evidence for robbery, as there is circumstantial evidence that rapist formed secondary intent to take property at some point before assault terminated, State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12 (2018), State v. Allen, 159 Wn.2d 1, 9-11 (2006); instruction that a taking can occur in the presence of victim even though victim was removed by force or fear is not a comment and is proper, State v. McDonald, 74 Wn.2d 141, 144-5 (1968); I.

State v. Graham, 64 Wn.App. 305 (1992)

Robbery 2° information that alleges defendant took property "unlawfully" but fails to allege common law element that defendant did not own property is sufficient where challenged for first time on appeal, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991), State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936 (2000), see: State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701 (1995); I.

State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284 (1992)

Respondent takes bicycle in absence of victim, demands money for return of bicycle, abandons bicycle and, when victim retrieves it, throws rocks at victim and assaults her; held: force necessary to support a robbery conviction need not be used in the initial acquisition of the property, rather the forcible retention of property initially taken peaceably or outside the presence of the property owner, is robbery, State v. Manchester, 57 Wn.App. 765 (1990), State v. McIntyre, 112 Wn.App. 478 (2002), reversing State v. Handburgh, 61 Wn.App. 763 (1991),

State v. Truong, 168 Wn.App. 529 (2012), State v. Thomas, 192 Wn.App. 721 (2016), see: State v. Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022), but see: State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.2d 609 (2005); any force or threat, no matter how slight, which induces an owner to part with property is sufficient to sustain robbery conviction, State v. Ammlung, 31 Wn.App. 696, 704 (1982), State v. Redmond, 122 Wash. 392 (1922); cf.: State v. Robinson, 73 Wn.App. 851 (1994), State v. Brightman, 112 Wn.App. 260, 266-67 (2002), 155 Wn.2d 521 n. 9 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Robinson, 73 Wn.App. 851 (1994)

Defendant-driver observes passenger leave vehicle, grab a purse from a pedestrian, struggle over the purse, passenger returns to vehicle, defendant drives off, is convicted of robbery under accomplice theory; held: once passenger possessed purse and returned to car, robbery was complete, see: State v. Manchester, 57 Wn.App. 765, 770 (1990), State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284, 288-94 (1992), State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.2d 609 (2005), thus defendant neither associated himself with the robbery, participated in it with the desire to bring it about, nor sought to make the crime succeed by any actions of his own, In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487, 491 (1979), State v. Galisia, 63 Wn.App. 833, 839 (1992), cf.: State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284 (1992), thus evidence is insufficient to convict of robbery; driving away did not aid and abet the passenger, as the crime was complete; I.

State v. Roche, 75 Wn.App. 500, 509-11 (1994)

Theft 1° is not a lesser of robbery, as alternative means of committing robbery is by taking property in presence of another, which is not element of theft 1°, State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1, 5-6 (1993), see also: State v. Todd, 200 Wn.App. 879 (2017), but see: State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541 (1997), and value in excess of $1500 is not element of robbery; I.

State v. Bacani, 79 Wn.App. 701 (1995)

Robbery information that alleges, inter alia, that defendant "did unlawfully attempt to take personal property...with intent to steal from the person" is insufficient, where challenged at the end of state's case, State v. Tang, 77 Wn.App. 644 (1995), as it fails to allege that the property belonged to another, "steal" fails to cure defect, State v. Morgan, 31 Wash. 226 (1903), State v. Dengel, 24 Wash. 49 (1901), see: State v. Graham, 64 Wn.App. 305 (1992), but see: State v. Phillips, 98 Wn.App. 936, 944-45 (2000); I.

State v. Molina, 83 Wn.App. 144 (1996)

Defendants order a cook, who has no money responsibility, to open cash registers and turn over money; held: an employee has implied responsibility for exercising control over the employer's property as against all others, thus sufficient to prove robbery, State v. Blewitt, 37 Wn.App. 397, 399 (1984); I.

State v. Collinsworth, 90 Wn.App. 546 (1997)

Defendant tells bank teller to "give me your hundreds, no dye packs," does not display a weapon, argues at trial that crime was theft, not robbery; held: an unequivocal demand for the immediate surrender of money, unsupported by a pretext of entitlement, is fraught with the implicit threat to use force, any force, no matter how slight, which induces owner to part with property is sufficient to sustain a robbery conviction, State v. Redmond, 122 Wash. 392, 393 (1922), State v. Parra, 96 Wn.App. 95, 100-102 (1999), State v. Shcherenkov, 146 Wn.App. 619 (2008), State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 298-99 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014), State v. Clark, 190 Wn.App. 736 (2015), State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768 (2016); I.

Holloway v. United States, 143 L.Ed.2d 1 (1999)

Carjacking, 18 USC §2119, requires government to prove "intent to cause death or serious bodily harm," government need not prove that defendant's intent to kill was unconditional, irrespective of the cooperation of the victim, rather government must prove only a deliberate threat of violence; 7-2.

State v. Herrera, 95 Wn.App. 328 (1999)

Assault 3° (resist lawful apprehension), RCW 9A.36.031(1)(a), is not a lesser of robbery; III.

State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533, (2000)

Instruction defining "what appears to be a firearm" as "exhibit or show what appears to be a firearm to the view of the victim or to otherwise manifest by words and actions the apparent presence of a firearm even though it is not actually seen by the victim" is accurate, at 537-39, State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865, 868-69 (1983), see: Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.App. 662, 674-77 (2000), and is not a comment on the evidence; stating "I have a gun" and patting hip is sufficient, at 540, cf.: State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001), State v. Jennings, 111 Wn.App. 54, 62-66 (2002); I.

Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.App. 662, 674-77 (2000)

"I have nitroglycerine in my coat…give me money or I'll blow up the bank" is insufficient to prove "displays what appeared to be a … deadly weapon" as a threat without any physical manifestation indicating a weapon is robbery 2°, not robbery 1°, State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001), State v. Jennings, 111 Wn.App. 54, 62-66 (2002), but see: State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533, (2000), State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865, 868-69 (1983); II.

State v. Holmes, 106 Wn.App. 775 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of robbery 1º (deadly weapon prong) but jury rejects deadly weapon special verdict, defense seeks dismissal for inconsistency; held: special finding will not control general verdict unless irreconcilably inconsistent, State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 616 (1993); where guilty verdict is supported by sufficient evidence, inconsistent acquittal on another count does not support reversal, State v. Wai-Chiu Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 48 (1988), Dunn v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 356 (1932); here, difference in definitions of deadly weapon for substantive offense and enhancement establish that verdicts are not irreconcilably inconsistent; II.

State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001)

Defendant tells teller "I have a hand grenade in my pocket and I need a thousand dollars," defendant is convicted of robbery 1° for "displaying what appeared to be a … deadly weapon;" held: verbal threat without any physical display is insufficient to prove "display," Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.App. 662, 674-77 (2000), cf.: State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533 (2000), State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865 (1983); III.

State v. Tvedt, 116 Wn.App. 316 (2003)

Defendant forces owner and cashier of store to get money contained in a deposit bag, also takes keys to owner's truck, is convicted of two counts of robbery; held: unit of prosecution for robbery is each forcible taking of property from the person or presence of the owner or possessor of the property, State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984), State v. Turner, 31 Wn.App. 843 (1982); test is number of forcible takings, not number of persons present, State v. Latham, 35 Wn.App. 862, 864-65 (1983), but see: State v. Molina, 83 Wn.App. 144 (1996), State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987), or number of items taken or characterization of the event as a single transaction; here, taking of store's money and owner's keys were distinct units of prosecution, thus separate counts are appropriate; II, 2-1.

State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, 708-20 (2004), reversed, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006)

During home invasion robberies, victims are restrained with duct tape, moved into another room and robbed, state charges robbery and kidnapping; held: kidnapping charges were incidental to the robberies because restraints were for the sole purpose of facilitating the robberies, forcible restraint of victims was inherent in the robberies, victims were not transported away from their homes to some remote spot where they were not likely to be found, duration of restraint was not substantially longer than that required for commission of the robberies, restraints did not create a significant danger independent of that posed by the robberies themselves, State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216, 227 (1980), State v. Ingham, 26 Wn.App. 45, 49 (1980), see: State v. Allen, 94 Wn.2d 860 (1980), State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014), but see: State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983), State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563 (2005), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), thus kidnapping charges are dismissed; III.

State v. Decker, 127 Wn.App. 427 (2005)

Defendant steals from convenience store, gets in car, clerk places arm on driver's window and asks for property back, defendant grabs clerk's arm, car begins rolling, clerk flails about to free himself and is injured, defendant is convicted of robbery 1°; held: intent to injure is not an element of robbery 1°, State v. McCorkle, 88 Wn.App. 486, 501 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 490 (1999), defendant's holding victim's arm was proximate cause of injury during flight, no intervening cause existed to relieve defendant of responsibility as defendant continued to hold victim's arm when car moved; I.

State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.2d 609 (2005)

Following shoplift and confrontation by security guards, defendant abandons stolen property, then struggles and punches guard, is convicted of robbery; held: robbery may include force used to either obtain or retain property or to overcome resistance to the taking, but once property is abandoned and thief is no longer attempting to retain property but is attempting to escape, no robbery occurs, see: State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284 (1992), State v. Robinson, 73 Wn.App. 851 (1994), State v. Manchester, 57 Wn.App. 765 (1990), State v. Truong, 168

State v. Chamroeum Nam, 136 Wn.App. 698 (2007)

Where court instructs jury defining robbery as taking property from the victim's person and omits the language prohibiting taking property in a victim's presence, evidence that defendant took victim's purse from a seat next to her is insufficient, see also: State v. O'Donnell, 142 Wn.App. 314, 321-24 (2007);; II.

State v. Liden, 138 Wn.App. 110 (2007)

Defendant robs bank using a counter check on back of which is printed "reserved for financial institution use," trial court dismisses after conviction, holding that evidence was insufficient to establish robbery 1º of a financial institution, RCW 9A.56.200(1)(b); held: circumstantial evidence was sufficient to establish that the bank was a financial institution as defined by statute; II.

State v. Sparling, 141 Wn.App. 542 (2007)

Defendant steals gasoline from station, when confronted by manager drives her car at and grazes manager's leg, is convicted of robbery 1° with a deadly weapon; held: a vehicle may be a deadly weapon by virtue of the manner of its use, RCW 9A.04.110(6); II.

State v. O'Donnell, 142 Wn.App. 314 (2007)

Where "to convict" instruction neglects to include "from the presence of" but evidence establishes that defendant took property from victim's person, there is no error, see also: State v. Chamroeum Nam, 136 Wn.App. 698, 705 (2007); "theft" is not a technical term which requires definition, State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32, 44 (1988); III.

State v. Shcherenkov, 146 Wn.App. 619 (2008)

Defendant hands bank tellers notes which state that this is a robbery, asking for money, "I will be watching you," keeps hands in pockets, trial court instructs jury that force may be "explicit or implied;" held: because a threat may be direct or indirect, RCW 9A.04.110(27) (2007), instruction was proper, State v. Collinsworth, 90 Wn.App. 546 (1997); rational trier of fact could find that defendant's notes were an indirect communication to use force, State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 298-99 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014), State v. Clark, 190 Wn.App. 736 (2015), State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768 (2016); II.

State v. Lewis, 156 Wn.App. 230, 238-39 (2010)

In robbery case, state does not have the burden to prove the absence of self- defense; II.

State v. Truong, 168 Wn.App. 529 (2012)

Respondent, along with others, grabs victim's MP3 player, passes it to another, then hits victim when victim tries to recover it, is convicted of robbery 1°; held: transactional view of robbery makes it an ongoing offense if force is used to take, retain or escape, State v.

Manchester, 57 Wn.App. 765 (1990), State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284 (1992), State v. Thomas, 192 Wn.App. 721 (2016), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.2d 609 (2005), where defendant had abandoned the stolen property and used force to try to escape, cf.: State . Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019), *overruled, on other grounds, State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022); I.

Pers. Restraint of Brocken*,* 178 Wn.2d 532, 538 (2013)

Robbery 1° by means of displaying what appears to be a weapon, RCW 9A.56.200(1)(a)(ii) (2002), is an alternative mean to robbery while actually armed with a weapon, RCW 9A.56.200(1)(a)(i); 9-0.

State v. Witherspoon*,* 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014)

Defendant breaks into home, victim drives up, sees defendant walking from the side of her home with his hand behind his back, victim asks what he has, defendant says a pistol and drives away, found with items belonging to victim, defendant is convicted of robbery; held: an "ordinary person" in victim's position could reasonably infer a threat of bodily harm from defendant's acts thus evidence was sufficient to convict of robbery, State v. Collinsworth, 90 Wn.App. 546 (1997), State v. Shcherenkov, 146 Wn.App. 619 (2008), even though victim did not know defendant had taken any of her property at the time she confronted defendant; 5-4.

State v. Berg*,* 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014)

Whether or not a kidnapping is incidental to another crime does not impact sufficiency of the evidence for the kidnapping; if the elements of kidnapping are established prima facie, then there is sufficient evidence regardless of merger analysis, State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820 (2012); reverses State v. Berg, 177 Wn.App. 119 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Clark*,* 190 Wn.App. 736 (2015)

Principal enters bank wearing dark sunglasses, mask, dressed all in black, orders teller not to push alarm buttons, hands note "no dye packs or transmitter," after teller gives him money demands more money, sufficient to convict of robbery, State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768 (2016); I.

State v. Richie*,* 191 Wn.App. 916 (2015)

Before her shift begins store clerk observes defendant stealing wine, attempts to stop defendant who hits her with the bottle, defendant is convicted of robbery; held: to convict of robbery the state must prove that the theft was from one with ownership, representative capacity or possession, State v. Latham, 35 Wn.App. 862 (1983), State v. Hall, 54 Wash. 142, 143-44 (1909), State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705 (2005), off-duty clerk was acting in her employee capacity thus evidence was sufficient, however failure to include the implied element that victim had an ownership, representative or possessory interest in the property was error even absent an objection; II.

State v. Farnsworth*,* 185 Wn.2d 768, 775-80 (2016)

Defendant, wearing wig, enters bank, hands teller a note "no die packs, no tracking devices, put the money in the bag," teller testifies she was frightened, Court of Appeals reverses robbery conviction for insufficiency, State v. Farnsworth, 184 Wn.App. 305 (2014); held: demand note for money at a bank can carry an implied threat of harm causing an ordinary person to reasonably infer threat of force, thus evidence is sufficient; 5-4.

State v. Thomas, 192 Wn.App. 721 (2016)

Defendant eats meal in restaurant, leaves without paying, when waiter seeks payment menaces waiter with knife, is convicted of robbery; held: transactional analysis of robbery holds that the taking of property is ongoing until assailant has effected an escape, State v. Truong, 168 Wn.App. 529, 535-36 (2012); where force is unrelated to the taking or retention or not used to prevent or overcome resistance to the taking then evidence is insufficient, State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.2d 609, 610-11 (2005); here, while the meal was consumed the food was converted and, when defendant displayed a knife to prevent resistance to the taking without paying the evidence is sufficient to prove robbery; II.

State v. Todd, 200 Wn.App. 879 (2017)

"Such force or fear must be used to obtain or retain possession of the property, or to prevent or overcome resistance to the taking," in robbery definition, RCW 9A.56.190 (2011), is an element of the crime that must be included in to convict instruction, State v. Allen, 159 Wn.2d 1, 9 (2006), but see: State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814, 824 (2013), State v. Truong, 168 Wn.App. 529, 537 (2012), State . Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019), *but see: State v. State v. Nelson, 191 Wn.2d 61 (2018)

Defendant enters pharmacy, at gunpoint demands drugs and money from pharmacist who says he lacks access to either, defendant leaves, is charged with attempted robbery, argues to trial court that an element of attempted robbery is that victim had ownership, representative, or possessory interest in the property, court declines to so instruct; held: elements in a prosecution of criminal attempt are (1) intent to commit a specific crime, and (2) any act which is a substantial step toward the commission of that crime, forcibly taking personal property from the person or his or her presence implies that that person, and not the defendant, has a superior possessory right to the item being taken, overruling State v. Richie, 191 Wn.App. 916 (2015); 9-0.

State . Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019)

Robbery information need not include language that defendant used force or fear to obtain or retain possession or control, RCW 9A.56.190 (2011), as that language is definitional, State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284, 293 (1992), State v. Truong, 168 Wn.App. 529, 535-36 (2012), but see: State v. Todd, 200 Wn.App. 879 (2017), State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022), at least when raised for the first time on appeal; trial court is not obliged to instruct jury as to good faith claim of title if not requested by a party; good faith claim of title is only available where defendant uses self-help to recover specific property, State v. Brown, 36 Wn.App. 549 (1984); I.

State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022)

That portion of robbery statute that states "[s]uch force or fear must be used to obtain or retain possession of the property, or to prevent or overcome resistance to the taking, RCW 9A.56.190, is an essential element of the crime, disapproving, in part, State v. Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019), but, where challenged after trial the element can be fairly implied by inclusion of the language "take…by…immediate force…and fear; affirms State v. Derri, 17 Wn.App.2d 376 (2021); 9-0.

SEARCH
Airport/Border

State v. Sweet, 23 Wn.App. 97 (1979)

Search by airline employees alone is private; anti-hijacking program does not provide link to government search.

United States v. Mendenhall, 64 L.Ed.2d 497 (1980)

Where defendant meets "drug courier profile" and voluntarily accompanies police and consents to search, evidence is admissible (5-4, but no majority opinion).

Reid v. Georgia, 65 L.Ed.2d 890 (1980)

Drug courier profile based upon (1) suspect arrived from Fort Lauderdale, known to be principal place of origin for drugs, (2) suspect arrived in early morning when police activity is diminished, (3) suspect's shoulder bag was similar to that of another passenger who appeared to be concealing fact that they were travelling together, and (4) they had no other luggage held insufficient to support a finding of reasonable, articulable suspicion of illegal activity; leaves open question of whether stop here was a "seizure"; 8-1.

State v. Rodriguez, 32 Wn.App. 758 (1982)

Defendant is observed by Drug Enforcement Administration agents at Sea-Tac Airport to meet drug courier profile; DEA calls Clallam County Sheriff to advise that defendant is flying to Port Angeles and meets profile; in Port Angeles, sheriff sees defendant use phone, observes that he is nervous, identifies himself and requests that defendant accompany him to police car; held: no probable cause nor articulable suspicion that defendant was engaged in criminal activity; II.

State v. Davis, 35 Wn.App. 724 (1983)

Police receive information from informant that suspect would arrive on flight from L.A. to Seattle on a date certain to deliver drugs to a man whom police confirm was involved in drugs; suspect arrives without luggage, has traffic warrant; held: (1) traffic warrant is enough to search incident to arrest, (2) even without warrant, totality of circumstances is enough to search on probable cause since informant's tip is corroborated, suspect had no luggage and came from a primary drug source city, Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983); absence of search warrant, as existed in Gates, does not affect validity of search as totality of circumstances test applies with or without warrant; I.

Florida v. Royer, 75 L.Ed.2d 229 (1983)

Suspect who fit drug courier profile is approached by police who request his ticket and license; without oral consent, suspect surrenders documents, whereupon police ask suspect to accompany them to a small room 40 feet away; suspect goes with police; without consent, police retrieve luggage; when asked if he would consent to search, suspect produced a key; plurality held that police action exceeded the permissible bounds of an investigative stop, and suspect's consent was tainted by the illegal detention; 6-3.

United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983)

Airline passenger's behavior arouses suspicion of police, who discover that tags on luggage do not match, addresses are false; police seize bags, hold for 90 minutes until dog sniffs outside of luggage, reacts positively for narcotics, police obtain warrant, find drugs; held: canine sniff is not a search, but see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L. Ed. 2d 492 (2015); where police have reasonable belief luggage contains drugs, they may detain luggage temporarily to investigate and permit dog to sniff outside; here, 90-minute detention exceeded permissible scope, see: Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005), exacerbated by fact that police lied about where luggage was to be taken; 9-0.

Florida v. Rodriguez, 83 L.Ed.2d 165 (1984)

Police, observing suspects at airport act suspiciously, show badges, ask if they might talk, request consent to search bags, get consent and find drugs; held: asking suspects if they would step aside and talk implicates no Fourth Amendment interest; strange movements and contradictory answers to trained narcotics officers provide articulable suspicion for a seizure; 6-3.

United States v. Montoya de Hernandez, 87 L.Ed.2d 381 (1985)

Defendant, upon arrival at airport from Columbia, is strip searched and found to have "firm fullness" in abdomen, is detained for 24 hours for bowel movement; ultimately magistrate issues order for rectal exam, drugs found; held: detention of traveler at border, beyond routine customs inspection, is justified if customs agents, considering all of the facts of traveler and her trip, reasonably suspect traveler is smuggling contraband in her alimentary canal; 7-2.

State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.2d 898 (1986)

Evidence lawfully obtained via a border search by federal officials is admissible in state court even if the search would have violated state law, cf.: State v. Escalante, 195 Wn.2d 526 (2020); 9-0.

United States v. Sokolow, 104 L.Ed.2d 1 (1989)

Airline passenger whom police know paid cash for ticket, traveled under a name that did not match telephone number which passenger gave, had an original destination of Miami, a drug source city, stayed in Miami for 48 hours even though flight took 20 hours, appeared nervous, checked no luggage is stopped by DEA, detained, after drug dog reacted positively is arrested, searched; held: irrespective of drug courier profile, all factors together lead to reasonable suspicion to believe that suspect was transporting drugs even though each factor alone is consistent with innocent travel; 7-2.

State v. Quick, 59 Wn.App. 228 (1990)

Defendant, in motor vehicle, boards Sydney, B.C.-Anacortes, WA ferry at intermediate stop of Friday Harbor, WA, at customs in Anacortes is searched, drugs found; held: customs officials can search at border without a warrant, 19 USC § 1467; if not at actual border, other legal justification is required, United States v. Ramsey, 52 L.Ed.2d 617 (1977), which include a showing of reasonable certainty that traffic was international in character and that no more than a negligible number of domestic travelers are intercepted; even if Anacortes is subject to extended border doctrine or is functional equivalent of border, state must show to a reasonable certainty that defendants or contraband crossed a border; Anacortes is not a "fixed checkpoint," United States v. Martinez-Fuerte, 49 L.Ed.2d 1116 (1976); I.

United States v. Flores-Montano, 158 L.Ed.2d 311 (2004)

Removal and search of automobile gas tank at border does not require reasonable suspicion; 9-0.

State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978)

If person signs citation for minor traffic offense, custodial arrest is impermissible; reverses State v. Hehman, 14 Wn.App. 770 (1976), see: State v. Johnson, 65 Wn.App. 716 (1992), State v. Terrazas, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1993), cf.: State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249, 256 (1996).

State v. Marcum, 24 Wn.App. 441 (1979)

If police take keys to vehicle, vehicle is no longer inherently mobile and thus no exigent circumstances.

State v. Silvernail, 25 Wn.App. 185 (1980), overruled, in part, on other grounds, State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982)

Roadblock and search of all vehicles is approved where crime is serious and there is probable cause to believe felony was committed, cf.: Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004); police may search trunk for other suspects, not contraband.

State v. Coahran, 27 Wn.App. 664 (1980)

Vehicle owned and operated by parolee is stopped and searched by police on less than probable cause; defendant, passenger in vehicle, is frisked; police find marijuana behind passenger's seat, arrest defendant, search him and find other drugs on his person; held: vehicle search approved as parolee's property may be searched by parole officer or police as agent of parole officer upon well-founded suspicion; finding marijuana in truck, in proximity of passenger, provided probable cause to search him.

State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980)

Police arrest suspect on unrelated felony warrant, determine that suspect's car is improperly licensed, open door, check VIN and determine car was stolen, impound car; held: individuals have limited privacy interest in VIN that is exposed to view; here, police seized key to car from jail property box and opened car to get VIN; court held this was an unlawful search, as (1) police did not have probable cause that car was stolen, (2) not within community caretaker function; no exigent circumstances as car was lawfully parked and immobile, see: State v. Zakel, 119 Wn.2d 563 (1992), State v. Lynch, 84 Wn.App. 467, 477-9 (1996), but see: State v. Cheatam, 112 Wn.App. 778 (2002), aff'd, on other grounds, 150 Wn.2d 626 (2003); 5-3.

Colorado v. Bannister, 66 L.Ed.2d 1 (1980)

Police observe vehicle speeding, lose sight of it, police then receive report of theft of lug nuts, police then spot same vehicle at gas station, approach it to cite driver, observe, from outside of vehicle, lug nuts in glove compartment, defendant meets description of thief, police arrest and seize lug nuts; held: no warrant needed per Carroll v. United States, 69 L.Ed.2d 543 (1925), Arkansas v. Sanders, 61 L.Ed.2d 255 (1979), automobile exception.

State v. Young, 28 Wn.App. 412 (1981)

Use of a flashlight to observe contents of a vacant car is not a search, see: State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996); seizure of evidence observed in car is reasonable where defendant is "at large," as an exigent circumstance.

State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981)

Juvenile defendant who evades police, speeds, and has no license may be arrested, distinguishing State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978); see: State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249, 256 (1996).

State v. Shoemaker, 28 Wn.App. 787 (1981)

Police, having probable cause but without a warrant, search car and seize closed suitcases from trunk, search suitcases, find drugs; held: once suitcases are seized, exigent circumstance of mobility no longer exists, and thus police needed a warrant to open suitcase; 2-1.

State v. Hayden, 28 Wn.App. 935 (1981)

Police stop vehicle for traffic infraction, see that license is wired on and see occupants place something in glove compartment; suspect consents to search of glove compartment, police find a purse, which they search; held: reasonable to search purse to find vehicle registration.

State v. Keyser, 29 Wn.App. 120 (1981)

Police stop suspect's vehicle, arrest defendant for suspicion of robbery, place him in patrol car, leaving passengers in suspect vehicle, police then search under driver's seat, find drugs; held: search beyond scope of search incident to arrest, as suspect in police car; search exceeded protective search for weapons as police officer testified that what he felt under seat was not a weapon, State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437 (1980); no probable cause to search vehicle, thus automobile exception does not apply.

State v. Davis, 29 Wn.App. 691 (1981)

Store security guard observes suspect remove toy car from vehicle and enter store where suspect seeks to return it for cash, store is aware toy car had been charged to a fraudulent account, arrest suspect who is taken to police station, police impound vehicle from store lot, vehicle had other items of merchandise in it, and it had no door handles or locks, police inventory vehicle and seize other evidence; held: impound was improper, per State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), as no probable cause existed to believe vehicle was stolen or used in commission of felony and there was a reasonable alternative to impoundment; however, search held lawful, as probable cause and exigent circumstances (car was accessible, as it did not have door handles) existed; interruption of initial search of car did not taint later search.

State v. Stroud, 30 Wn.App. 392 (1981)

"Unfamiliar" vehicle parked in high crime area, police put on lights, order suspect from car, smell marijuana, search, find cocaine; held: initial stop was a seizure as a reasonable person would have believed s/he was not free to go, State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011), insufficient objective facts that suspect was involved in criminal activity, fruits suppressed; III.

State v. Roth, 30 Wn.App. 740 (1981)

Following traffic stop on interstate highway, police smell marijuana and see roach clips in ash tray, search vehicle, find rifle used in a homicide; held: probable cause to arrest, lawful search incident to arrest, lawful impound as state established reasonable cause for impound, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980); I.

United States v. Ross, 72 L.Ed.2d 572 (1982)

Where police have probable cause to search a vehicle they may search every part of the vehicle, including compartments and containers, as if a warrant had been issued, Maryland v. Dyson, 144 L.Ed.2d 442 (1999); scope of search is defined by the object of the search and the places in which there is probable cause to believe it may be found, see: State v. Witkowski, 3 Wn.App.2d 318 (2018); overrules Robbins v. California, 69 L.Ed.2d 744; overrules, in part, Arkansas v. Sanders, 61 L.Ed.2d 235; 6-3.

Michigan v. Thomas, 73 L.Ed.2d 750 (1982)

Where police are justified in making an inventory search of a vehicle, they may search every part of the vehicle, and need not have exigent circumstances; fact that car was "immobilized" does not prohibit complete inventory search; per curiam.

United States v. Knotts, 75 L.Ed.2d 55 (1983)

Police secrete beeper in can of chloroform which was then purchased by defendant, police follow defendant's vehicle to a cabin, secure warrant based upon beeper and other information, and bust a drug laboratory; held: beeper merely served to scientifically enhance police visually tracking defendant's car, thus, there was no invasion of privacy, cf.: Carpenter v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2206, 2-1 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018); 9-0.

Texas v. Brown, 75 L.Ed.2d 502 (1983)

Police stop vehicle at routine license checkpoint, ask for license, shine flashlight in car, see knotted balloon fall from suspect's hand, observe vials and powder in glove compartment; after suspect stated that he had no license, officer seizes balloon which "seemed to contain a powdery substance"; plurality of four held initial stop valid, see: Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004), shining flashlight did not violate Fourth Amendment, State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996); the "immediately apparent" language in Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1971) does not require police to "know" that items are evidence or contraband, i.e., police may seize a suspicious object if the initial intrusion is lawful, see: State v Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609 (2007); 9-0.

Michigan v. Long, 77 L.Ed.2d 1201 (1983)

Police stop vehicle that was driving erratically, sole occupant gets out of car, police observe knife in car, search car, find drugs; held: where police, in roadside encounter, have a reasonable articulable belief that suspect poses a danger and may gain immediate control of weapons, they may conduct a Terry search of car's interior and may seize contraband found therein, Thornton v. United States, 158 L.Ed.2d 905 (2004), see: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), for state constitutional analysis; 6-3.

State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983)

Police stop defendant's van, order him out, arrest him on a felony warrant, observe that no one else is in van, smell marijuana, search van, which was lawfully parked, as inventory and for weapons, find drugs; in companion case, police stop defendant's car, arrest him on previously established probable cause, search car incident to arrest, find drugs; held: based upon CONST. Art. 1, § 7, when a lawful arrest is made, officers may search the person arrested and the area within his immediate control for weapons or to prevent destruction of evidence but may go no further; search of suspect's vehicle where suspect has been removed, is not permitted except where exigent circumstances are shown, see: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009); court must consider time to obtain a telephonic warrant, CrR 2.3(c), in determining whether exigent circumstances exist to justify an exception to the warrant requirement, State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), see: State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012); Washington will not follow United States v. Ross, 72 L.Ed.2d 572 (1982) and New York. v. Belton, 69 L.Ed.2d 768 (1981), see: Thornton v. United States, 158 L.Ed.2d 905 (2004); prior Washington caselaw is reversed; not retroactive, State v. Jordan, 39 Wn.App. 530 (1985), State v. Goodman, 42 Wn.App. 331 (1985), overruled, in part, State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144 (1986), see: Maryland v. Dyson, 144 L.Ed.2d 442 (1999); 7-2.

State v. Grinier, 34 Wn.App. 164 (1983)

Informants advise police that a shipment of drugs will arrive at a residence; police observe the suspected "delivery truck" arrive at residence, see luggage moved into residence, then see luggage moved from residence to defendant's vehicle, police stop vehicle, find drugs in luggage; held: police had no evidence to establish that drugs were in luggage, no exigent circumstances applied; where the suspected locus of contraband is luggage being transported at the time of the stop, and not the car in which it is being carried, the relationship between the car and the luggage is coincidental, and the automobile exception does not apply; 2-1; II.

State v. Claflin, 38 Wn.App. 847 (1984)

Where a warrant authorizes search of "premises", police may properly search defendant's car parked on the premises, State v. Huff, 33 Wn.App. 304 (1984), but see: State v. Rivera, 76 Wn.App. 519 (1995); II.

State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733 (1984)

Police, responding to burglar alarm, approach residence, observe vehicle parked in front, turn lights on and begin to move, block vehicle, remove and cuff driver, investigate and verify that a burglary occurred, question suspect, inventory vehicle and find parts; held: factors to determine if investigative stop exceeds permissible scope include degree of intrusion upon liberty, length of detention, and whether purpose of stop was related to suspect's detention, reversing State v. Williams, 34 Wn.App. 662 (1983), overruling in part State v. Byers, 88 Wn.2d

1 (1977); drawn guns and cuffs are permissible only when police have a legitimate articulable fear of danger (dicta), see: State v. Mitchell, 80 Wn.App. 143 (1995), State v. Pines, 17 Wn.App.2d 483 (2021); impoundment not authorized where suspect rejects it, but see: State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992), State v. Tyler, 177 Wn.2d 690 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Donohoe, 39 Wn.App. 778 (1985)

Report of theft plus description of suspect vehicle by color and make plus observations by officers of the tracks indicating snow tires plus observing suspect vehicle meeting description containing "numerous articles of property" justifies search of vehicle on probable cause; because defense cited Fourth Amendment and not Article I, § 7, defense has waived state constitutional issues, permitting the warrantless search of the vehicle to stand, United States v. Ross, 72 L.Ed.2d 572, 583 (1982); 2-1, II.

State v. Chisholm, 39 Wn.App. 864 (1985)

Police stop truck driver to tell him his hat may blow out of the bed of the truck, observe open beer in front seat, knows that driver and passenger are minors, search passenger, find drugs; held: where a stop is for noncriminal noninvestigatory purpose, court must determine whether stop is reasonable using balancing test of individual's interest in proceeding without police interference vs. public's interest in having police perform community caretaking functions in addition to traditional enforcement of laws, thus remanded to apply test, see: State v. Lynch, 84 Wn.App. 467, 477-9 (1996), State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000); 2-1, II.

State v. White, 40 Wn.App. 490 (1985)

Passenger in front seat of car does not have legitimate expectation of privacy in unoccupied rear passenger compartment of the car; II.

State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113 (1985)

Suspect is stopped by police for license plate infraction, lacks a drivers license, is arrested, requests that vehicle's owner remove vehicle; police call owner, who agrees to pick up vehicle; police decide to impound anyway, inventory vehicle, find drugs, discover VIN does not match registration; held: vehicle may be impounded if there is probable cause to believe it is stolen or used in felony, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980); here, no evidence vehicle was stolen, fact that VIN did not correspond to registration is only evidence of a licensing violation, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 189 (1980); vehicle may be impounded for community caretaking function if there is a threat to public safety or impeded traffic and no one is available to remove it, thus not justified here, Houser, supra, at 150, Simpson, supra, at 189, State v. Hardman, 17 Wn.App. 910 (1978); vehicle may be impounded if authorized by statute and there is reasonable cause to impound under the constitution, see: State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654, 658 (1989), State v. Clifford, 57 Wn.App. 124 (1990); State v. Johnson, 65 Wn.App. 716 (1992), State v. Coss, 87 Wn.App. 891, 898-900 (1997); III.

State v. Perez, 41 Wn.App. 481 (1985)

Police stop suspect for traffic infraction, detect odor of alcohol, give suspect field sobriety tests 18-20 feet from car, other officer looks in car window, sees unattached car speaker and what appears to be a gun barrel beneath a jacket, reaches in open door, seizes sawed-off rifle; held: observation of gun was lawful under open view doctrine, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981), as there was no intrusion of privacy into the interior of the car which can be viewed from outside the car, Texas v. Brown, 75 L.Ed.2d 502 (1983); entry into car and seizure of gun was lawful even in absence of a threatening gesture as suspect "might be dangerous" due to apparent attempt to conceal weapon under jacket by intoxicated suspect who could have made a move for the weapon from 18-20 feet away, but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); I.

State v. Marchand, 104 Wn.2d 434 (1985)

State patrol license and equipment roadblock checks, RCW 46.64.070, violate Fourth Amendment, Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000), see: Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004); reverses State v. Marchand, 37 Wn.App. 741 (1984); 6-3.

United States v. Johns, 83 L.Ed.2d 890 (1985)

Police seize vehicles on probable cause without a warrant, remove packages and place in warehouse, three days later search packages; held: police may search containers discovered in the course of a lawful vehicle search and need not search contemporaneous with the seizure, expanding United States v. Ross, 72 L.Ed.2d 572 (1982); 7-2.

New York v. Class, 89 L.Ed.2d 81 (1986)

Police stop suspect for minor traffic offense, suspect exits car; police open passenger door to record VIN on door jamb, can't find VIN, reach into vehicle to move papers on dashboard covering VIN, discover gun under seat, seize gun; held: no reasonable expectation of privacy in VIN since federal law requires that VIN be visible from outside of car, police authorized to enter to see VIN; 5-4.

State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986)

Police, while stopping a vehicle with driver and passenger on a well-founded suspicion observe defendant-driver make a furtive gesture; police remove defendant from vehicle, reach under seat, seize baggie of drugs; held: where suspect has been removed from a vehicle that was subject to a lawful investigative stop and officer has an objective reason for believing that a weapon is in vehicle (furtive gesture here), see: State v. Horace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), police may make a limited search of the passenger compartment for weapons within the area of control of suspect and passenger and, if contraband is observed, police may seize it as in plain view, State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144 (1986), State v. Watkins, 76 Wn.App. 726, 729-31 (1995), State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849 (1997), State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490, 494-98 (2008), *cf.: State v. State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986)

Police observe equipment violation, stop defendant's vehicle, defendant states he lacks a license or any identification; police arrest driver, pat him down, find fruits of burglary; other officer, while talking to passenger, observes possible weapon, removes passenger, searches vehicle, finds burglary tools, patdown passenger, finds fruits of burglary; held: absence of identification permits arrest for no valid license, distinguishing State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978); see also: State v. Johnson, 65 Wn.App. 716 (1992); full search of suspect's person, following arrest, is permissible, distinguishing Terry v. Ohio, 20 L.Ed.2d 889 (1968); because passenger was not yet arrested when officer searched vehicle, State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983), is inapposite, since passenger "could return to the car;" further, the early morning hour, fact that driver had a knife, appearance of a weapon in car justifies a Terry "quick check" of the vehicle for a weapon, but see: State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 1999), cf.: State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992), State v. Cole, 73 Wn.App. 844 (1994), State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009); I.

State v. Burgess, 43 Wn.App. 253 (1986)

Police, investigating a burglary, find suspect vehicle lawfully parked across from burglary, run registration and discover that owner had previously burglarized the same business, deflate tires; two hours later, police arrest suspect, seize incriminating evidence, impound and search vehicle; held: impound and inventory was improper as police had an affirmative duty to explore reasonable alternatives to impound, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733, 743 (184), State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 153 (1980); search of vehicle was, however, proper under automobile exception, State v. Davis, 29 Wn.App. 691, 699 (1981), since State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983) is not retroactive; accord: In re Taylor, 105 Wn.2d 683 (1986), superseded, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of St. Pierre, 118 Wn.2d 321 (1992); II.

State v. Niedergang, 43 Wn.App. 656 (1986)

Warrant authorizes search of residence and curtilage, police seize drugs from car parked in front of residence; held: curtilage is the area to which extends the intimate activity associated with the sanctity of the home, Oliver v. United States, 80 L.Ed.2d 214, 225 (1984), and depends upon the circumstances, including proximity to home, use and expectations of privacy; here, parked car was not within curtilage, as it was set off from residence by curb, and anyone could have parked there, thus evidence suppressed, State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44, 51-2 (1995), see: Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663 (2018); II.

State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989)

Police stop vehicle for speeding, driver lacks a license, officer, intending to cite and release, searches vehicle, finds drugs; held: a custodial arrest for driving without a license should not be made unless there are grounds to believe that arrestee will fail to appear in court; where a custodial arrest is not justified, no warrantless search pursuant to that arrest may be upheld, State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), see: State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981), State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), cf.: State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), State v. State v. Patterson, 112 Wn.2d 731 (1989)

Police, investigating burglary, observe vehicle going wrong way on one-way street two blocks from burgled store, five minutes later find vehicle parked six blocks from store, treads wet, observe possible proceeds of burglary in vehicle, search vehicle without warrant, find identification, arrest suspect who confesses; held: search of a parked, immobile, unoccupied vehicle must be authorized by a warrant or exigent circumstances other than the potential mobility of the vehicle, Oregon v. Kock, 725 P.2d 1285 (1986), State v. Kypreos, 110 Wn.App. 612, 624-28 (2002), 115 Wn.App. 207 (2002), State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 953-58 (2009), see: Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663 (2018); Supreme Court declines to follow California v. Carney, 85 L.Ed.2d 406 (1985); here, immediacy of time between crime and location of vehicle, evidence of recent flight from vehicle (wet treads, presence of evidence in vehicle) showing fresh pursuit establish exigent circumstances, see: State v. Ozuna, 80 Wn.App. 684, 688 (1996), State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 72-77 (1996), cf.: State v. Tibbs, 169 wn.2d 364 (2010), but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), *cf.: State v. State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990)

Police stop vehicle for speeding, determine driver is drunk, ask passenger if he wishes to drive vehicle from scene in lieu of impound, passenger agrees, officer orders passenger to return to and remain in vehicle, requests driver's license from passenger, runs computer check, finds warrant, arrests passenger, searches, finds drugs; held: directing passenger to remain in vehicle was not a detention, reversing State v. Mennegar, 53 Wn.App. 257 (1989), as a reasonable person would not have believed himself to be detained, State v. Mote, 129 Wn.App. 276 (2005), State v. Rathbun, 124 Wn.App. 372 (2004), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), Arizona v. Johnson, 172 L.Ed.2d 694 (2009), State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), cf.: State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), as passenger had agreed to drive the vehicle away; requesting passenger's license was reasonable, as passenger was free to refuse; within community caretaking function to call in to determine if license was valid, see: State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812 (1990)

Police, knowing driver lacked license, follow vehicle with emergency lights on, which does not immediately pull over, observe defendant-passenger move around considerably as though trying to hide something, begins patdown of defendant-passenger, who gives officer syringe with drugs; held: "an officer who properly stops a car may conduct a search for weapons within the immediate control of the driver and passengers when one of the persons in the car moves as if to hide a weapon," at 815, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986), State v. Watkins, 76 Wn.App. 726, 729-31 (1995), State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.App. 30, 36-38 (2001), cf.: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); I.

State v. Slattery, 56 Wn.App. 820 (1990)

School officials may search a student's car, locked trunk and a locked briefcase within that trunk without a warrant on reasonable suspicion, State v. Brown, 158 Wn.App. 49 (2010), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), State v. Brooks, 43 Wn.App. 560 (1986), New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1983); , cf.: State v. Meneese, 174 Wn.2d 937 (2012), State v. A.S., 6 Wn.App.2d 264 (2018), where car was parked in school parking lot; reliable student-informant's information of drug dealing plus discovery of large amount of cash on respondent plus pager provide reasonable grounds to search car; I.

State v. Sistrunk, 57 Wn.App. 210 (1990)

Police officer approaches vehicle parked with hood raised, driver and passengers state that there is no problem, officer observes numerous dirty beer cans in back seat, advise suspects of open container law, suspects reply they were collecting for recycling, police observe no drinking nor smell intoxicants, search vehicle for intoxicants, find that visible beer cans were empty, then find syringe under seat; held: search for cans in back seat was improper under open view doctrine as cans were dirty, no apparent wetness, consistent with suspects' explanation, thus it was not immediately apparent he had seizable evidence; a mere traffic stop is not grounds for a Terry weapons search, State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638 (1980); no evidence existed to lead officer to believe that suspects were armed and dangerous, thus seizure of syringe was unlawful; III.

State v. Barajas, 57 Wn.App. 556 (1990)

Impoundment and inventory search of vehicle improper based solely upon arrest for driving without a valid license, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980), State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113 (1985), State v. Greenway, 15 Wn.App. 216 (1976), State v. Bales, 15 Wn.App. 834 (1976), State v. Tarica, 59 Wn.App. 368 (1990), State v. Terrazas, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1993); cf.: State v. Johnson, 65 Wn.App. 716 (1992); RCW 46.20.435(1), which authorizes impoundment when police determine that driver lacked license, is discretionary, not mandatory, see: State v. Villela, 194 Wn.2d 451 (2019); III.

Florida v. Wells, 109 L.Ed.2d 1 (1990)

Absent police policies with respect to opening closed containers found during inventory search, the opening of such a container is insufficiently regulated, and thus evidence suppressed, State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.app. 652, 676-78 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775 (1990)

Police observe vehicle in closed park, see three men in car, no one in driver's seat, ask for identification, find concealed weapons permit on one suspect who says he has a gun in vehicle, all three removed from vehicle, patted down, knife found strapped to one suspect, police search passenger compartment for gun, find numerous weapons; held: whereas driver's seat was empty and police thus had reasonable suspicion that a fourth person was in the vicinity, one passenger was agitated and uncooperative, time of night, weapon found during patdown, police were reasonably suspicious that suspects were dangerous, might try to gain access to weapon in vehicle, thus search of passenger compartment was valid, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733, 738-30 (1984), State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987), but see: State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009), Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009); 6-3.

State v. Quintero-Quintero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991)

Police knowledge that defendant had revoked license 22 weeks earlier plus weaving is grounds for stop and search of vehicle, distinguishing State v. Strotroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989), see: State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339 (1997); III.

California v. Acevedo, 114 L.Ed.2d 619 (1991)

Police, with probable cause to search a container within a vehicle, may search the container without a warrant under automobile exception, overruling Arkansas v. Sanders, 61 L.Ed.2d 235 (1979), but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Zakel, 61 Wn.App. 805 (1991)

Police observe parked vehicle, run plates, discover plates are stolen, enter vehicle and open hood to find VIN, discover vehicle is stolen, arrest defendant when he gets in vehicle; held: defendant, by his wrongful presence in the stolen car, had no legitimate expectation of privacy in the area searched, and lacks standing to contest search; II.

State v. Klump, 61 Wn.App. 911 (1991)

Defendant is stopped for infraction, DOL records reflect a failure to respond two years earlier, defendant is arrested, car searched, drugs found; held: custodial arrest for failure to appear or respond, RCW 46.64.060(2)(k), 46.64.020(2), is not permitted absent filing of criminal complaint, RCW 10.31.100; further, statute of limitations had expired; III.

State v. Reeb, 63 Wn.App. 678 (1992)

Where police have probable cause to believe suspect has two or more failures to appear with DOL, former RCW 46.64.020(3), then custodial arrest, and search of vehicle incident to arrest, is proper, distinguishing State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989); III.

State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992)

Police receive anonymous phone tip that man in gold Maverick brandished shotgun, stop green Maverick, seize guns, drugs; held: because record is devoid of information whether informant was eyewitness, there is no basis of knowledge or reliability established, State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940 (1975), Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833 (1982), State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), nor other indicia of reliability, State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); although potential danger to public may be factor to consider, it cannot substitute for reliability of informant, State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), distinguishing State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985), see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013), but see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014); II.

State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992)

Probable cause to arrest the occupants of a car for possession of a controlled substance exists when a trained officer detects that the odor of a controlled substance is emanating from the vehicle, State v. Hammond, 24 Wn.App. 596, 600 (1979), irrespective of whether the smell emanates from the person or car, State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 814, 819 (1987), but see: State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135 (2008); when police have probable cause to believe that car contains evidence of a crime, police may secure or tow it to obtain a warrant; II.

State v. Johnson, 65 Wn.App. 716 (1992)

Police observe vehicle involved in what appears to be drug activity, follow it, vehicle commits infraction, upon stop driver states he has no license, no identification, gives false name, is arrested, vehicle searched, drugs found; held: lack of license plus false name plus respondent's claim to have a prior arrest under the false name which officer could not verify is grounds for arrest as officer had sufficient reason to believe respondent would not honor a promise to appear, State v. Jordan, 50 Wn.App. 170 (1987), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), see: State v. Weber, 159 Wn.App. 779, 787-91 (2011); distinguishes State v. Michaels, 60 Wn.2d 638, 645 (1962), wherein Supreme Court found a pretext stop because police can no longer search a vehicle incident to a minor traffic infraction absent circumstances justifying custodial arrest, State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978); see: State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 464-9 (1994), Whren v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996), State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999), State v. DeSantiago, 97 Wn.App. 446 (1999), State v. Montes-Malindas, 144 Wn.App. 254 (2008); III.

State v. Zakel, 119 Wn.2d 563 (1992)

Defendant's testimony that he lived in allegedly stolen vehicle is insufficient to establish defendant's possession of vehicle where it was found by police unattended, illegally parked, unlocked, window open, defendant had no relationship to businesses where vehicle found; defendant did not possess vehicle at time of search, thus he cannot invoke automatic standing doctrine; Supreme Court overrules portion of State v. Zakel, 61 Wn.App. 805 (1991), which purports to abandon automatic standing doctrine; see: State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980); 9-0.

State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992)

Passenger is stopped for open container violation, RCW 46.61.519(2), a traffic infraction, police demand identification, defendant hands officer a Costco card, officer asks for more identification, defendant denies he has any, acts furtively as if to stop officer from looking in wallet, officer asks defendant to place wallet on hood of car, observes bindle in wallet, seizes it, finds drugs; held: passenger has no obligation to carry identification, see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), defendant's concealing of contents of wallet does not support custodial arrest for an infraction where police lack a reasonable belief that suspect would fail to appear, thus drugs suppressed, distinguishing State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 579 (1986); accord: State v. Cole, 73 Wn.App. 844 (1994), State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544 (1995), see: Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), cf.: State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), but see: State v. Chelly, 94 Wn.App. 254 (1999); III.

Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992)

Statute authorizing stop of a vehicle which has tab on license plate indicating that owner had been cited for driving without a license, RCW 46.16.710(3), does not violate Fourth Amendment or CONST. Art. 1, § 7, where sole purpose of stop is to ascertain if driver has a valid license, State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), distinguishing Seattle v. Mesiani, 110 Wn.2d 454 (1988), Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), United States v. Brignoni-Ponce, 45 L.Ed.2d 607 (1975), see also: State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000); I.

State v. Thorp, 71 Wn.App. 175 (1993)

Police stop truck to check if it had a "specialized forest products permit," discover warrant, find marijuana; held: forest products industry is not a pervasively regulated industry, which would permit a search without a warrant, United States v. Biswell, 32 L.Ed.2d 87 (1972), Colonnade Catering Corp. v. United States, 25 L.Ed.2d 60 (1970), Washington Massage Found. v. Nelson, 87 Wn.2d 948 (1976), see: State v. Miles, 160 Wn.2d 236, 250 (2007), thus stop was invalid; II.

State v. Terrazas*, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1993)

Police stop vehicle for weaving, ask driver for license, defendant says he has none, trooper asks for name and birthdate, suspects false name, pats down driver, finds nothing, arrests driver for driving without license, observes passenger with blanket on lap, suspects weapon, removes passengers from car, searches, finds guns, drugs; held: an arrest solely for driving without a license, without other reasonable grounds, is improper, State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978), State v. Barajas, 57 Wn.App. 556 (1990), State v. Watson, 56 Wn.App. 665 (1990), see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992), State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005); mere suspicion that driver gave a false name is not enough; search of vehicle for officer safety was improper, as blanket on passenger's lap does not rise to an articulable suspicion that passenger was dangerous or armed, see: State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573, 578-9 (1986), State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544 (1995), Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019), cf.: State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011); III.

State v. Flores-Moreno, 72 Wn.App. 733, 740-42 (1994)

Detaining a vehicle for 45 minutes while obtaining a warrant is reasonable, United States v. Sharpe, 84 L.Ed.2d 605 (1985), State v. Lund, 70 Wn.App. 437, 446 (1993); II.

State v. Cole, 73 Wn.App. 844 (1994)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, observe passenger not wearing seat belt, ask passenger for identification, passenger lacks written identification but provides name and birthdate, police remove passenger from vehicle, patdown passenger, later observe passenger drop drugs while being detained outside of vehicle; held: passengers need only provide name and address and sign citation, RCW 46.61.020(3), need not carry identification, State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706, 709 (1992), cf.: State v. Chelly, 94 Wn.App. 254 (1999); removing passenger from car converted infraction investigation to an unwarranted Terry stop, as officer had no suspicions nor a reasonable belief that defendant was armed and presently dangerous, State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), State v. Adams, 144 Wn.App. 100 (2008), see: Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653 (2000), but see: Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), thus evidence obtained as result of seizure is suppressed; cf.: State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.App. 282 (2001), State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004); III.

State v. Cantrell*, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994)

Consent to search a motor vehicle given by passenger with common authority over it supports search of vehicle where driver does not object, and where driver is a permissive driver and not a mere passenger, distinguishing State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735 (1989), as privacy interest in automobile is less than in an office or home; overrules, in part, State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993); see: United States v. Matlock, 38 L.Ed.2d 242 (1974), Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973), State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 462-9 (1994)

Police stop vehicle for license plate infraction, passenger not wearing seat belt, ask for identification, find warrant, arrest passenger, search vehicle, find drugs; officer testifies that the traffic stop was made because he wanted to talk to passengers about why vehicle was behind a closed garage; held: but for the stop, the warrant would not have been found, no intervening events to dispel taint, State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 457 (1985); test to determine if stop was pretextual: would a reasonable officer have made the stop in the absence of an improper purpose, but see: State v. Ladsen, 86 Wn.App. 822 (1997), cf.: State v. Goodin, 67 Wn.App. 623 (1992), State v. Meckelson, 133 Wn.App. 431 (2006); here, the stop would have been made whether or not the officer wanted to investigate why the vehicle was behind the garage, thus no pretext; accord: State v. Blumenthal, 78 Wn.App. 82 (1995) (CONST. Art I, § 7), but see: State v. Coutier, 78 Wn.App. 239 (1995), Whren v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996), see: State v. Weber, 159 Wn.App. 779, 787-91 (2011); defendant has burden of proof as to invalidity of warrant; I.

State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44, 51-2 (1995)

Affidavit asserts that informants heard one suspect in a residence tell another suspect to "go out to the truck and get the 'weed,' which he did," no further reference to truck, warrant authorizes search of premises and a specific pickup truck parked next to and slightly in the public street at the house, which police find and search; held: vehicle parked in a space that lawfully could be used by anyone coming to the house is not within curtilage, State v. Niedergang, 43 Wn.App. 656, 661-2 (1986); II.

State v. Coutier, 78 Wn.App. 239 (1995)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, defendant doesn't produce registration, officer asks defendant to search glove box, defendant is hesitant, does so but tries to block officer's view of contents of glove compartment, officer, with flashlight, perseveres, sees drugs, testifies he was not in fear; held: because officer saw no cause for alarm, there is no basis for applying an objective test to conclude that a hypothetical reasonable officer would have reacted differently; defendant's blocking view of glove box was not a furtive gesture, rather it was communication of no consent, thus search was improper; see also: State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544 (1996); III.

State v. Mitzlaff, 80 Wn.App. 184 (1995)

Police arrest defendant for DUI, find drugs in cab of truck, find duct tape, search under hood, find more drugs; held: search incident to arrest does not extend to engine compartment as it is not within arrestee's immediate control from which he might obtain a weapon or destroy evidence, State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144, 152 (1986), see: State v. Johnson, 128 Wn.2d 431 (1996), State v. Vrieling, 144 Wn.2d 489 (2001); II.

State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544 (1995)

Police stop defendant for traffic infraction, obtain permission to search vehicle, observe scanner in car, defendant nervous, patdown defendant and seize drugs; held: while initial stop for infraction was lawful, defendant's nervousness did not justify further detention beyond what was necessary to cite, RCW 46.61.021, State v. Tijerina, 61 Wn.App. 626, 628-9 (1991), State v. Coutier, 78 Wn.App. 239 (1995), State v. Terrazas, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1993), State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992), *State v. Incident to arrest for driving while license suspended, police search sleeping area of Peterbilt semi-truck, find drugs; held: sleeping area is readily accessible from passenger compartment and is thus subject to a lawful search incident to arrest under 4th Amendment, New York v. Belton, 69 L.Ed.2d 768 (1981), and CONST. Art. 1, § 7, State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144, 152 (1986), State v. Vrieling, 144 Wn.2d 489 (2001), *see also: State v. State v. Ozuna, 80 Wn.App. 684 (1996)

Police receive report of car prowl, while searching neighborhood, officer observes car parked behind bushes near area of report, car registered to person whom officer knows has a record, officer looks into car with flashlight, sees expensive-looking briefcase, opens door, seizes briefcase with identification, calls owner of briefcase who reports it stolen; held: an unoccupied car is not subject to a Terry stop absent arrest of an occupant; search of a parked, unoccupied vehicle must be pursuant to a warrant or exigent circumstances, State v. Patterson, 112 Wn.2d 731 (1989), State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 953-58 (2009), cf.: State v. Barnes, 158 Wn.App. 602 (2010), here no probable cause existed to tie the car to the vehicle prowl, see: State v. Gwinner, 59 Wn.App. 119, 121-4 (1990), State v. Young, 28 Wn.App. 412 (1981), no exigencies exist as there was no evidence that connected any suspects to this car such that police would believe that evidence might be removed or car was mobile, Gwinner, supra, at 124, Patterson, supra, at 736, Young, supra, at 419; illegally parked car does not obviate a reasonable expectation of privacy absent a trespass, see: State v. Cleator, 71 Wn.App. 217 (1993), but see: State v. Pippin, 200 Wn.App. 826 (2017); III.

Whren v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996)

Police may stop vehicles upon probable cause that a traffic law has been violated irrespective of motive of officers, Arkansas v. Sullivan, 149 L.Ed.2d 994 (2001), or pretextual nature of the stop, but see: State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999); selective enforcement based on race may be challenged under the equal protection clause, not the Fourth Amendment; but see: State v. Michaels, 60 Wn.2d 638, 645 (1962), State v. Blumenthal, 78 Wn.App. 82 (1995); 9-0.

Ohio v. Robinette, 136 L.Ed.2d 347 (1996)

Police stop defendant for speeding, obtain license, warn him, return license, then ask permission to search car, defendant agrees, drugs found; held: police are not obliged to inform detainees that they are free to go before a consent to search may be deemed voluntary, Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973); 8-1.

State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249 (1996)

Police may make a custodial arrest, and search incident to that arrest, for negligent driving, a nonjailable misdemeanor, former RCW 46.61.525, where the driving was "truly dangerous," at 256, pursuant to RCW 10.31.100(3)(f), 46.64.015(2) and constitutions, see: State v. Walker, 157 Wn.2d 307 (2006); II.

State v. Lynch, 84 Wn.App. 467, 477-9 (1996)

Police receive report of car prowl, respond to vehicle, find it unlocked, open door, look for ownership documents, pick up checkbook, find drugs; held: search of van was reasonable under community caretaking function, State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990), State v. Hutchison, 56 Wn.App. 863 (1990), see: State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019); less intrusive alternative of checking ownership via license plate is "apparent from the advantage of hindsight, but is not necessarily a proper 'gauge by which to judge the officer's actions'"; III.

Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997)

Following stop for traffic infraction, police may order driver and passengers to exit vehicle, Pennsylvania v. Mimms, 54 L.Ed.2d 331 (1977), but see: State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), see: Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653 (2000), State v. Nelson, 108 Wn.App. 918 (2001), Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), see also: State v. Flores, 186 Wn.2d 506 (2016); 7-2.

State v. Rife, 133 Wn.2d 140 (1997)

Following a traffic stop (here, jaywalking), police may not detain for a warrant check as RCW 46.61.020 authorizes detention only for time necessary to identify, check license status and issue citation; reverses State v. Rife, 81 Wn.App. 258 (1996); legislatively overruled, RCW 46.61.020; 7-2.

State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 342 (1997)

Police observe defendant driving, know that his license was suspended from a records check seven days earlier, activate emergency lights, defendant exits, closes door and walks away, is ordered to return to vehicle, defendant refuses, is arrested, police confiscate keys, search car, find illegal gun; held: seven-day-old information about suspended license constitutes articulable facts to support a detention, State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591, 595 (1992), State v. Quintero-Qunitero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991), State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 531-33 (2003); custodial arrest for DWLS is proper, see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992); defendant was not seized before he locked his door because seizure does not occur until suspect submits to a show of authority or is touched by officer, California v. Hodari D., 113 L.Ed.2d (1991), Torres v. Madrid, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 989, 209 L.Ed.2d 190 (2021), but see: State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Patton, 167 Wn.2d 379, 387-88 (2009), locking of car was a lawful act, search of vehicle incident to arrest does not extend to a car locked before seizure of defendant, thus gun suppressed, State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144 (1986), State v. Johnston, 107 Wn.App. 280 (2001), State v. Turner, 114 Wn.App. 653 (2002), State v. Webb, 147 Wn.App. 264 (2008), State v. Quinlivin, 142 Wn.App. 960 (2008), State v. Adams,169 Wn.2d 487 (2010); II.

State v. Seitz, 86 Wn.App. 865 (1997)

Police observe defendant-passenger in vehicle speaking with a man on a sidewalk, do not observe drugs, money or anything else change hands, stop vehicle for traffic infraction, ask passenger to get out, she removes her purse, police tell her not to leave, police find drugs in driver's purse, ask passenger if she has drugs, she says she does, police look in passenger's purse; held: valid arrest of driver does not justify search of a purse known to belong to passenger where purse is not in the car but rather is on passenger's person outside the car, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Nelson, 89 Wn.App. 179 (1997), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), see also: State v. Flores, 186 Wn.2d 506 (2016), cf.: State v. Jackson, 107 Wn.App. 646 (2001), distinguishing State v. Fladebo, 113 Wn.2d 388 (1989); police telling passenger she could not leave is a seizure, here without any basis, Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007); II.

State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997)

Officer provides mechanical assistance to two men, asks to see identification, observes large amount of cash, asks where the money came from, is told by one he earned it on a ranch but doesn't remember where, other says he sold a car, lacks bill of sale but still has title, officer calls in names, discovers one has suspended license, other has no driving record at all, takes money and locks it in patrol car, obtains permission to search, finds drugs; held: request for identification and questioning relating to identity is not a seizure, State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), Immigration & Naturalization Serv. V. Delgado, 80 L.Ed.2d 247 (1984), State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Cerrillo, 122 Wn.App. 341 (2004), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), cf.: State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001); once police placed money in patrol car, defendants were seized; officer did not arrest driver for driving with suspended license, thus search was not incident to arrest, distinguishing State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685, 691 (1992), there was no hope of discovering information about the driving offense from the search, State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993), aff'd on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994), there was no articulable suspicion, State v. Tijeriña, 61 Wn.App. 626 (1991), consent occurred immediately after the seizure, thus not vitiated, State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998); reverses State v. Armenta, 83 Wn.App. 118 (1996); 6-3.

State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849 (1997)

While stopping vehicle for speeding, police observe driver/sole occupant leaning forward and making movements towards floorboard, have defendant get out, trooper puts head in cab through open door, sees and seizes drugs under driver's seat; held: furtive gestures justify search limited to the area defined by the suspicious movements for safety of the officer, as driver will ultimately have access to cab to look for documents for traffic stop, Michigan v. Long, 77 L.Ed.2d 1201 (1983), State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986), State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812 (1990), State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490, 499-98 (2008), see: State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.App. 30, 36-38 (2001), distinguishing State v. Terrazas, 71 Wn.App. 873, 879 (1993), cf.: State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); I.

State v. Nelson, 89 Wn.App. 179 (1997)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, passenger has warrant, order driver to exit car, leave purse, search purse, find drugs; held: police had no authority to order driver to leave purse in car, search of purse not in car was not justified absent articulable suspicion, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Seitz, 86 Wn.App. 865, 869 (1997), cf.: State v. Jackson, 107 Wn.App. 646 (2001), see also: State v. Flores, 186 Wn.2d 506 (2016), purse was not voluntarily in car thus suppression affirmed; III.

State v. White, 135 Wn.2d 761 (1998)

Police lawfully impound vehicle, open trunk by a trunk release button in unlocked glove compartment, find drugs; held: police may not examine the locked trunk of an impounded vehicle in the course of an inventory search, absent manifest necessity, whether a key or interior release button is used to unlock the trunk, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015), State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.App. 652 (2015), cf.: State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694 (2006), State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019), reversing State v. White, 83 Wn.App. 770 (1996); 7-2.

State v. Takesgun, 89 Wn.App. 608 (1998)

Trooper stops vehicle for infraction, illegally detains driver and searches trunk, finds drugs, arrests passenger, finds drugs on passenger's person, trial court holds passenger lacks standing to challenge search; held: unlawful stop or detention of driver and vehicle is an unlawful detention of the passenger, who can challenge the lawfulness of the stop, Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007); III.

Wyoming v. Houghton, 143 L.Ed.2d 408 (1999)

Where there is probable cause to search a readily-mobile vehicle, police may search containers belonging to passengers, but see: State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Jones, 146 Wn.2d 328 (2002), State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004); 6-3.

Florida v. White, 143 L.Ed.2d 748 (1999)

Police seize vehicle parked in public place without a warrant pursuant to civil forfeiture act, search vehicle, find drugs; held: where there is probable cause to seize a vehicle parked in public, no warrant is necessary, and the vehicle may be searched without a warrant; 7-2.

Maryland v. Dyson, 144 L.Ed.2d 442 (1999)

If a car is readily mobile and probable cause exists to believe it contains contraband, it may be searched without a separate exigency requirement, Pennsylvania v. Labron, 135 L.Ed.2d 1031 (1996), United States v. Ross, 72 L.Ed.2d 572 (1982), but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016), Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663 (2018); 7-2.

State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, order passenger to stay in vehicle, passenger runs away, is convicted of obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020(1); held: absent reasonable suspicion or danger to officer, police may not detain passenger by obliging him/her to remain in vehicle, CONST. art. I, § 7, distinguishing Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), reversing State v. Mendez, 88 Wn.App. 785 (1997), see: Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653 (2000), State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), overruled on other grounds, State v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), Arizona v. Johnson, 172 L.Ed.2d 694 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999)

Gang-unit officers who do not make routine traffic stops tail suspected gang member's car seeking justification to stop the car, observe infraction, pull over suspect vehicle, discover driver's license is suspended, arrest driver, search, find guns and drugs; held: pretextual traffic stops violate CONST. Art. I, § 7, but see: Whren v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996); in determining whether stop is pretextual, court should consider totality, including subjective intent of officer and objective reasonableness of the officer's behavior; reverses State v. Ladson, 86 Wn.App. 822 (1997); see: State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 462-69 (1994), State v. DeSantiago, 97 Wn.App. 446 (1999), State v. Rainey, 107 Wn.App. 129, 138-39 (2001), State v. Myers, 117 Wn.App. 93 (2003), State v. Meckelson, 133 Wn.App. 131 (2006), State v. Nichols, 161 Wn.2d 1 (2007), State v. Montes-Malindas, 144 Wn.App. 254 (2008), State v. Byrd, 162 Wn.App. 612 (2011), reversed, on other grounds, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. Weber, 159 Wn.App. 779, 787091 (2011), but see: State v. Hoang, 101 Wn.App. 732 (2000), State v. McLean, 178 Wn.App. 236 (2014), State v. Arreola, 176 Wn.2d 284 (2012), Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022); 5-4.

State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, lawfully arrest driver, passenger exits vehicle, police search purse they know belongs to passenger, find drugs; held: full-blown search incident to arrest does not apply to an unarrested passenger or to personal belongings which police know or should know belong to the passenger who is not independently suspected of criminal activity, reversing State v. Parker, 88 Wn.App. 273 (1997) and State v. Hunnel, 89 Wn.App. 638 (1998); accord: State v. Jones, 146 Wn.2d 328 (2002), State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004), State v. Flores, 186 Wn.2d 506 (2016), cf.: State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), State v. Jackson, 107 Wn.App. 646 (2001), State v. Bello, 142 Wn.App. 930 (2008), see: Pers. Restraint of Isadore, 151 Wn.2d 294, 302 (2004); (4 justices concur; 1 justice would hold that passenger's belongings may be searched for weapon only; 1 justice would hold that police may not search items that they actually know belong to passenger; 2 dissents).

State v. Chelly, 94 Wn.App. 254 (1999)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, passenger is not wearing seat belt, lacks identification and states he never had identification, officer testifies at suppression hearing that in his experience it is unusual for an adult to state he never had identification and that he was likely to give a false name to conceal his identity, probably due to warrants, passenger is removed from vehicle, gives false name, false birthdate, correct social security number, police run warrant information, discover warrants, arrest passenger, search vehicle, find drugs; held: police had specific articulable facts to detain to ascertain true identity, as one stopped for infraction (seat belt violation) must identify self, RCW 46.61.021, officer had reason to believe passenger would give a false name, thus detention was proper, State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001), distinguishing State v. Cole, 73 Wn.App. 844 (1994), State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992); I.

State v. DeSantiago, 97 Wn.App. 446 (1999)

Police suspect defendant was involved in a drug transaction, follow him until he commits a traffic violation, discover warrant, search, find drugs; held: even though officer does make routine traffic stops, here he was watching for narcotic activity, thus stop was a pretext and evidence must be suppressed, State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999), State v. Myers, 117 Wn.App. 93 (2003), State v. MeKelson, 133 Wn.App. 431 (2006), State v. Montes-Malindas, 144 Wn.App. 254 (2008), see: State v. Rainey, 107 Wn.App. 128, 138-39 (2001), State v. Nichols, 161 Wn.2d 1 (2007), State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 951-53 (2009), cf.: State v. Weber, 159 Wn.App. 779, 787-91 (2011), *State v. Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653 (2000)

Police stop car for infraction, observe passenger manipulating an article of clothing, order passenger to open window, which he refuses, pull passenger from car who then refuses to cooperate with search, is convicted of obstructing; held: whether it is reasonable to order a passenger to get out or remain in a car depends upon relative numbers of officers vs. vehicle occupants, behavior of occupants, time and place of stop, traffic at scene, officer's familiarity with occupants, State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208, 220-21 (1999), see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011); here, passenger's behavior justified ordering him out of car, State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); even if initial traffic stop was unjustified, obstructing charge is valid, as citizen must comply and rely on legal recourse, State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490, 496-97 (1990), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217, 224-25 (1999), State v. Valentine,132 Wn.2d 1, 19 (1997); III.

State v. Hoang, 101 Wn.App. 732 (2000)

Patrol officer observes likely drug transaction, then sees driver involved in transaction turn without a signal, stops vehicle, driver's license is suspended, officer arrests and finds drugs, trial court finds that officer would have stopped defendant for infraction even if he did not observe the transaction, defense does not challenge finding of fact; held: under totality of circumstances, the trial court's unchallenged finding of fact supports conclusion that stop was not an unconstitutional pretext, distinguishing State v. Ladson,138 Wn.2d 343 (1999), State v. DeSantiago, 97 Wn.App. 446 (1999), but see: State v. Myers, 117 Wn.App. 93 (2003), State v. Mekelson, 133 Wn.App. 431 (2006), State v. Montes-Malindas, 144 Wn.App. 254 (2008), see: State v. Nichols, 161 Wn.2d 1 (2007); fact that officer did not cite for turn signal violation or for DWLS is a nondispositive factor, police need not issue every conceivable citation as a hedge against pretext allegation; I.

City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000)

Police set up drug roadblock, stop a predetermined number of vehicles, ask for identification, look for signs of impairment, conduct open-view examination of cars, drug dog walks around vehicles, search if particularized suspicion develops; held: because primary purpose of stop is to detect evidence of ordinary criminal wrongdoing, as opposed to border, United States v. Martinez-Fuerte, 49 L.Ed.2d 1116 (1976), or sobriety checkpoints, Michigan Dept. of State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), drug roadblock violates Fourth Amendment, see: Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004), Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001)

Lone officer lawfully stops vehicle, observes coat in vehicle, lawfully arrests driver, passenger leaves car, officer asks passenger to stay in car, when officer returns to suspect's car and observes coat stuffed underneath car, searches it, finds drugs; held: police may order passenger into or out of vehicle only if officer has legitimate safety concerns, State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), factors include (1) number of officers vs. number of occupants, (2) time of day, (3) location of stop, (4) traffic at scene, (5) officer knowledge of occupants, and (6) whether officer arrested driver, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); here, passenger abandoned coat without a causal nexus to alleged unlawful conduct by police, thus seizure of drugs from coat was lawful, cf.: State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004), State v. Hamilton, 179 Wn.App. 870 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001)

Police stop vehicle for speeding, driver has suspended license, while doing radio check trooper observes driver "doing something between seats," arrests driver, pats down passenger, finds weapon and drugs; held: furtive gesture of driver, State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812 (1990), State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849 (1997), in close proximity to passenger wearing bulky closed jacket justified patdown of passenger, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1986), distinguishing State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004), *cf.: State v. State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001)

During traffic stop, police ask passenger for name, passenger gives a name which officer knows is wrong, demands identification, passenger opens cigarette box where he keeps his license, drugs fall out; held: an officer's request for passenger's identification is "unlikely to constitute a Fourth Amendment seizure," State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1997), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), officer placing himself outside the passenger door so passenger couldn't leave is not a seizure where passenger never testifies that he wanted to leave, thus his freedom of movement was not restrained, but see: State v. Byrd, 110 Wn.App. 259 (2002), Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), Arizona v. Johnson, 172 L.Ed.2d 694 (2009), officer was justified in demanding identification when passenger lied about his identity, State v. Chelly, 94 Wn.App. 254, 261 (1999), cf.: State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992); II.

State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001)

Officer runs license check, finds female owner's license is suspended, stops vehicle, discovers driver is male, asks for license, driver states his license is suspended, is arrested, searched, drugs found; held: while police may stop a vehicle when they learn owner's privilege to drive is suspended, RCW 46.20.349, Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 585 (2005), Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020), cf.: State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81-85 (2008), once police determine that driver is not the owner, they may not, absent more, continue to detain, State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); III.

State v. Jackson, 107 Wn.App. 646 (2001)

Police lawfully stop vehicle, arrest driver for warrant, passenger asks for his jacket on back seat, police ask driver who owns jacket, driver says it's his, police search jacket for identification, find drugs, arrest passenger; held: where there is genuine confusion over whether an item in vehicle belongs to nonarrested passenger or driver, police may investigate the item, see: State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486, 505 (1999); I.

State v. Jones, 146 Wn.2d 328 (2002)

Police lawfully arrest driver, ask passenger for identification which she produces from her purse, passenger is told to leave purse in her car and is placed in patrol car but told she is not under arrest, police search purse, find stolen gun, driver says it's his, driver is charged; held: because there is a direct relationship between the challenged police action (search of purse) and the evidence used against defendant, and because possession is an element, driver has automatic standing to challenge the search, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 180 (1980); search of purse was impermissible as police knew the purse belonged to unarrested passenger, was not in driver's control, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), contents suppressed as to driver, State v. Bello, 142 Wn.App. 930 (2008); reverses State v. Jones, 104 Wn.App. 966 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Byrd, 110 Wn.App. 259 (2002)

Police observe vehicle with expired tabs, observe trip permit in back window, pull over car to see if permit is valid, after stop officer observes equipment violation and that passenger is not wearing seat belt, discovers that permit is valid, finds warrant for passenger, arrests, searches, finds drugs; held: passenger has standing to challenge traffic stop, stopping vehicle to verify validity of trip permit is impermissible, equipment violation cannot justify stop since it was seen after the stop; I.

State v. Kypreos, 110 Wn.App. 612, 624-28 (2002) ,115 Wn.App. 207 (2002)

A trailer on private property not attached to a motor vehicle is a dwelling, not a vehicle for purposes of the automobile exception, see: California v. Carney, 85 L.Ed.2d 406 (1985), State v. Johnson, 128 Wn.2d 431 (1996), State v. Vrieling, 144 Wn.2d 489 (2001), Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663 (2018); I.

State v. Glossbrener, 146 Wn.2d 670 (2002)

Officer stops defendant, alone in vehicle, for infraction, observes defendant reach toward passenger side, smells alcohol, leaves defendant in car while he checks for warrants, defendant then passes field tests, officer calls for backup, searches car, finds drugs; held: while furtive gesture is often a basis to search vehicle for weapons, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986), even where suspect is outside the vehicle, State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849 (1997), but see: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), here where officer allowed suspect to remain in vehicle, see: State v. Horace, 144 Wn.2d 386, 388-89 (2001), had completed his investigation and had decided not to cite or arrest, officer did not have an objectively reasonable belief that defendant was armed and dangerous, State v. Cruz, 195 Wn.App. 120 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017); 9-0.

State v. McKinney, 148 Wn.2d 20 (2002)

In consolidated cases, police run license plate number in DOL database, discover that (1) driver's license is suspended, (2) a no-contact order exists and passenger is protected party, (3) driver has a warrant, all are arrested; held: drivers have no protected privacy interest in DOL driver's record pursuant to Fourth Amendment reasonable expectation of privacy analysis nor art. I, § 7 expectation of privacy which a citizen should be entitled to hold, State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506, State v. McCready, 123 Wn.2d 260, 270 (1994), State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 641-45 (2011), distinguishing State v. Maxfield; affirms State v. Martin, 106 Wn.App. 850 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002)

Officer stops defendant for infraction, determines his license is suspended, arrests, searches, finds container with marijuana, officer's supervisor directs officer to cite and release; held: because police had probable cause to arrest and did arrest, search incident to arrest was proper, irrespective of subsequent decision to cite and release, distinguishing State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), but see: State v. Radka,120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012); II.

State v. Turner, 114 Wn.App. 653, 657-59 (2002)

Police observe suspect urinating in public standing near open driver's side door of truck, arrest, search truck, find illegal weapon; held: because evidence at hearing fails to establish distance between defendant and truck, trial court could not find that the vehicle was under defendant's immediate control, a finding necessary to rely on search of vehicle incident to arrest, see: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009), State v. Adams, 169 Wn.2d 487 (2010); II.

Maryland v. Pringle, 157 L.Ed.2d 769 (2003)

Police stop car, search, find $763 cash in glove compartment, drugs in back-seat armrest accessible to driver and two passengers, ask three suspects about ownership of drugs and money, all three offer no information, arrest all three, defendant-passenger confesses; held: reasonable officer could conclude that all in vehicle possessed drugs, thus arrest was lawful, but see: State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135 (2008); 9-0.

State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003)

Officer observes car in parking lot of recently burglarized business, approaches, defendant says he drove there until his car broke, officer asks for identification, driver responds his license is suspended, officer asks defendant to step out of car, observes "cook spoon" on floor, asks repeatedly for consent to search which is eventually granted, police find drugs; held: approaching and asking for identification is not a seizure, State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1997), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), State v. Cerillo, 122 Wn.App. 341 (2004), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), effectively overruling State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509 (1990); when asking defendant to step outside, officer had probable cause to arrest for driving while license suspended, thus defendant was seized at that point; observation of cook spoon meets plain view test; pursuant to CONST. art. I, § 7, a custodial arrest is a prerequisite to a search incident to arrest, because defendant was not arrested, drugs must be suppressed, overruling State v. Brooks, 57 Wn.2d 422 (1960), State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 127, 138 (1977), effectively overruling, in part, State v. Garcia, 35 Wn.App. 174 (1983), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), State v. Harrell, 83 Wn.App. 393 (1996); reverses State v. O'Neill, 104 Wn.App. 850 (2001); 5-4.

State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002)

Following traffic stop, police arrest defendant for driving while license suspended, return to defendant's truck to search, find it locked, observe glass pipe, tow truck operator, pursuant to impound, opens truck, drugs seized, at suppression hearing, jail officer testifies that jail does not accept bookings for suspended license absent a request for a booking exception which has never been denied; held: booking into jail is not a necessary element of custodial arrest to justify search incident to arrest, see: State v. Thomas, 89 Wn.App. 774 (1998), State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 341-42 (1997), State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), *cf.: State v. State v. Myers, 117 Wn.App. 93 (2003)

Officer, knowing that defendant had a suspended license a year before, observes defendant driving, runs license check, follows car, before he gets radio reply observes infraction, stops defendant, after stop learns over radio of a warrant, arrests, finds drugs; held: driving with a suspended license is a criminal offense unrelated to the driving, thus the stop for the infractions was an impermissible pretext, State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999), State v. DeSantiago, 97 Wn.App. 446 (1999), State v. Meckelson, 133 Wn.App. 431 (2006), cf.: State v. Hoang, 101 Wn.App. 732 (2000), State v. McLean, 178 Wn.App. 236 (2014), Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022); 2-1, III.

State v. Brown, 119 Wn.App. 473 (2003) , overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012)

Police stop car for failing to signal when it turned right from a private driveway, passenger has warrant, search vehicle, find drugs; held: because no statute requires a signal from a parking lot into a public street, police had no basis for the traffic stop, , cf. State v. Brown, 194 Wn.2d 972 (2019), thus evidence suppressed; II.

Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004)

A week after hit-and-run fatality, police set up checkpoint at place of collision, stop all cars for 10-15 seconds to ask drivers if they saw anything, hand out flyer, officer smells alcohol on defendant's breath, detain, perform tests, arrest; held: purpose of stop was not to determine if occupants were committing a crime, distinguishing City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000), "special law enforcement concerns will sometimes justify highway stops without individualized suspicion," at 851, Michigan Dept. of State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), stops involved minimal intrusion and thus provided "little reason for anxiety or alarm," at 853, detention was thus valid under Fourth Amendment, State v. Silvernail, 25 Wn.App. 185 (1980), overruled, in part, on other grounds, State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982), but see: State v. Marchand, 104 Wn.2d 434 (1985); 6-3.

Thornton v. United States, 158 L.Ed.2d 905 (2004)

Police discover that vehicle's license does not match make and model, follow vehicle to parking lot, before police have opportunity to pull car over driver parks and gets out of vehicle, police arrest, search defendant, find drugs, search vehicle, find weapon; held: under Fourth Amendment, police may search entire passenger compartment of a vehicle whether or not the arrestee was in the car when the stop was made as long as he was a "recent occupant," at 914, New York v. Belton, 69 L.Ed.2d 768 (1981), but see: State v. Parker, 138 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); 7-2.

State v. Green, 150 Wn.2d 740 (2004)

Police stop defendant for failure to transfer title of car, search, seize drugs; held: failure to transfer title is a misdemeanor not committed in officer's presence, RCW 10.31.100, not a continuing offense, State v. Klump, 61 Wn.App. 911, 914 (1991), but see: RCW 46.12.101(6)

(2008), State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553 (2013), cf.: State v. Holmes, 135 Wn.App. 588 (2006), thus arrest was unlawful, drugs suppressed, State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 572 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004)

Police may not request a vehicle passenger's identification "for investigative purposes" unless there is an independent reason that justifies the request, CONST. art I, § 7, State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 808 (1999), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), see: State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 347 (2006), but see: State v. Mota, 129 Wn.App. 276 (2005), cf. State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011); reverses State v. Rankin, 108 Wn.App. 948 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793, 803-09 (2004)

Defendant lives in trailer on property owned and occupied by his parents, boathouse between parents' home and trailer contains personal items owned by defendant and parents, defendant's access to boathouse was contingent on parents' permission, father consents to search of boathouse, police find drugs; held: because defendant did not have authority to permit a search of the boathouse in his own right, he did not possess common authority and thus his consent was not necessary to validity of the search, see: United States v. Matlock, 38 L.Ed.2d 242 (1974), State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984); reverses, on other grounds, State v. Thompson, 112 Wn.App. 787 (2002); 6-3.

State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004)

Driver is stopped for infraction, DOL reports license suspended, police arrest, search car, find drugs; held: applying Aguilar-Spinelli test to DOL records establishes that they are presumptively reliable, cf.: State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); defendant's offering evidence that her record was inaccurate fails, as she did not show that DOL records are prima facie inaccurate; affirms State v. Gaddy, 114 Wn.App. 702 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004)

Owner of car consents to police stopping car and searching it, police stop car at gunpoint, order hands up, defendant-passenger is seen dropping hand to his hip area then raising hands, police remove passenger, find drugs below passenger seat; held: consent to search did not extend to search of passenger who reasonably believed he was under arrest, State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 36-37 (2004); absent probable cause to arrest, defendant was unlawfully seized, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), see also: State v. Flores, 186 Wn.2d 506 (2016), abandoned drugs were not voluntarily relinquished, State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282, 288 (2001), State v. Dugas, 109 Wn.App. 592, 595-96 (2001), thus seizure was unlawful, CONST., art. I, § 7; 9-0.

State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004)

After stop for infraction and discovery of suspended license, defendant is placed in patrol car, not cuffed, police search defendant's vehicle, find drugs, at suppression hearing officer testifies he did not intend to book for just suspended license, trial court suppresses; held: test to determine whether an arrest qualifies as a cite-and-release or custodial is an objective determination of what a reasonable detainee would consider to be the extent of the detention, State v. Clausen, 113 Wn.App. 657, 660-61 (2002), State v. Craig, 115 Wn.App. 191, 196

(2002), but see: State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554, 555 (1998); here, because defendant was not cuffed, allowed to use cell phone in patrol car support conclusion that arrest was noncustodial, thus suppression affirmed, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), see: State v. Gering, 146 Wn.App. 564 (2008), but see: State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002); 2-1, III.

Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005)

Following stop for traffic infraction, police bring in drug dog to sniff car, reacts positively, police open trunk, seize marijuana; held: where duration of traffic stop was justified by the traffic offense and the ordinary inquiries to such a stop, see: United States v. Jacobsen, 80 L.Ed.2d 85 (1984), a lawful canine sniff, United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983), but see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), does not implicate legitimate privacy interests, cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), *Rodriguez v. State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005)

Defendant is stopped for infraction, officer arrests for suspended license 3°, searches incident to arrests, finds drugs; officer testifies he always arrests and searches on suspended license cases, irrespective of CrRLJ 2.1(b)(2); held: police may arrest and search incident to arrest and then exercise discretion to cite and release or book, State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 346-47 (2006), but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012); driving while suspended is a "nonminor offense" for which police may arrest, distinguishing *State v. State v. Holmes, 135 Wn.App. 588 (2006)

Police stop defendant for operating a vehicle with an expired trip permit, RCW 46.16.160(1), search, find drugs; held: unlike failure to transfer title, State v. Green, 150 Wn.2d 740 (2004), but see: State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553 (2013), operating a vehicle with an expired trip permit requires driving, thus the misdemeanor occurred in officer's presence, *cf.: State v. State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 347 (2006)

Police observe but do not stop defendant driving vehicle with cracked windshield, later stop vehicle with defendant in passenger seat, discover registration is expired, driver at stop has valid license, police ask defendant for license, discover it's suspended; held: while police may not request passenger's identification where passenger has done nothing to invite suspicion, State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), here police had an independent reason to justify the request for a license, State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011); 7-2,

Brendlin v. California*, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007)

When a police officer makes a traffic stop, the passenger is seized, Arizona v. Johnson, 172 L.Ed.2d 694 (2009), and may challenge the constitutionality of the stop, State v. Takesgun, 89 Wn.App. 608 (1998), State v. Byrd, 110 Wn.App. 259 (2002), but see: State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990), State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001), State v. Rehn, 117 Wn.App. 142 (2003), cf.: State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Nichols, 161 Wn.2d 1 (2007)

Officer observes vehicle commit infraction and concurrently observes that the driver is appearing to avoid him, stops vehicle, driver's license suspended, searches, finds drugs, defense counsel does not raise pretext stop before trial court, but is raised as ineffective assistance of counsel on appeal; held: defendant has burden to show stop was not justified by the commission of traffic infractions since it is being raised in context of ineffective assistance; here, because observation of the infraction was concurrent with officer's observation and belief that defendant was seeking to avoid him, no pretext has been shown, State v. Arreola, 176 Wn.2d 284 (2012), Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022), distinguishing State v. Meckelson, 133 Wn.App. 431 (2006), ; 9-0.

State v. Moore, 161 Wn.2d 880 (2007)

Officer stops vehicle, recognizes passenger who has a pit bull on his lap but does not recall his name, asks him his name, passenger gives a name, arrests for possession of dangerous dog, searches, finds drugs, learns passenger gave a false name, later files a report stating that passenger was not wearing a seat belt, state concedes no probable cause to arrest for the dog; held: because the crime of failing to correctly identify one's self, RCW 46.61.021(3), requires that an officer must ask an individual for identification pursuant to an investigation of a traffic infraction, and because the officer here was not in the process of investigating the seat belt violation, probable cause to arrest and search incident to arrest was not present; 6-3.

State v. Day, 161 Wn.2d 889 (2007)

Police observe car illegally parked, approach and see defendant in driver's seat, holster on floor, defendant admits to a gun in car, police remove defendant, frisk, cuff, find gun in car, discover gun is stolen, search further and find drugs; held: where police merely suspect a civil infraction, there is no ground for a Terry stop and no grounds to frisk, State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638 (1980), State v. Duncan, 146 Wn.2d 166 (2002); reverses State v. Day, 130 Wn.App. 622 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Allen, 138 Wn.App. 463 (2007)

Police lawfully stop vehicle for traffic offense, obtain driver's license and registration, learn that driver was protected party of a no-contact order, observe that passenger is male, observe passenger reach under front seat, ask driver to leave vehicle, driver tells officer that passenger is the no-contact order respondent, police arrest passenger, search, find drugs; held: detention of passenger was unlawful, State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689, 699 (2004), identity of passenger obtained from driver does not meet independent source doctrine as removing her from car exceeded lawful scope of traffic stop, State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992), RCW 46.64.015, standing analysis is inapplicable, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711, 718 (2005), but see: State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244 (2009), cf.: State v. Miles, 159 Wn.App. 282 (2011), State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), State v, Alexander, 5 Wn.App.2d 154 (2018); 2-1, II.

State v. Glenn, 140 Wn.App. 627, 633-39 (2007)

Seven year old boy tells his mother that man in passing car pointed gun, mother gets plate number, police arrive, boy points at a car and says that's the one, police pull over car, defendant is removed, complies with order to get down, police smell marijuana from car, search, find drugs, no gun; held: a stop based upon a report of a "weapon sighting" from a legitimate citizen's report will justify a search of the car for a weapon, see: State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490, 494-98 (2008);; I.

State v. Carney, 142 Wn.App. 197 (2007)

Police, investigating a report of reckless driving by a motorcyclist, approach a man meeting the operator's description standing by a car and a motorcycle, man jumps on motorcycle and flees, officers order two women in car to show hands, request identity, discover warrant, arrest, search, find drugs; held: ordering citizen to show hands, demanding identification is a seizure as a reasonable person would not have felt free to ignore the officer's "request to identify herself after being seized," see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Butler, 2 Wn.App. 2d 549, 560-61 (2018); police belief that a citizen may be able to provide information material to the investigation of a crime does not justify a warrantless seizure absent reasonable suspicion based on objective facts that the individual is involved in criminal conduct, State v. Dorey, 145 Wn.App. 423 (2008), cf.: State v. Rubio, 185 Wn.App. 387 (2015); 2-1, II.

State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135 (2008)

Trooper stops a vehicle, smells marijuana, arrests driver and passengers, finds drugs on passenger; held: while smell of drug will justify search of a vehicle, see: State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992), State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 814, 819 (1987), but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), arrest of occupants without individualized probable cause violated state constitution, cf.: Maryland v. Pringle, 157 L.Ed.2d 769 (2003); here, trooper arrested passenger before determining individual probable cause, thus arrest and subsequent search was unlawful; 9-0.

State v. Bello, 142 Wn.App. 930 (2008)

Police stop car for speeding, see defendant-passenger "duck out of sight" in rear seat for four seconds, discover warrant for defendant-passenger who is arrested, bring narcotics dog which alerts on rear seat, police search unlocked container found on rear seat, find drugs, arrest driver who is convicted and appeals; held: a vehicle subject to a traffic stop is not immune from the automobile exigency exception if the arrested party is a passenger rather than the driver; personal possessions known to belong to a specific vehicle occupant may not be searched incident to the arrest of another occupant unless the possessions were in the span of control of the arrested person, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Jones, 146 Wn.2d 328 (2002); here, no basis existed for police to conclude that the container belonged to the driver, container was in passenger's immediate control prior to arrest, thus search was proper; I.

State v. Quinlivan, 142 Wn.App. 960 (2008)

Sheriff stops defendant for seat belt and suspended license, deputy returns to his vehicle, defendant asks if his car will be impounded, deputy says it will, defendant leaves vehicle, locks it, sits on curb, refuses to give keys absent warrant, deputy arrests, takes keys searches car, finds drugs; held: because defendant had not been arrested, had no access to passenger compartment of the car at time of arrest, police needed a warrant, thus evidence suppressed, Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144 (1986), State v. Adams, 169 Wn.2d 487 (2010), see: State v. Villela, 194 Wn.2d 451 (2019); III.

State v. Adams, 144 Wn.App. 100 (2008)

Police stop stolen car, handcuff defendant-passenger, patdown, find drugs; held: "[m]erely being a passenger in a stolen car does not alone justify" a search of the passenger absent articulable facts that would lead a reasonable person to believe the passenger could be armed and dangerous, distinguishing State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), thus drugs suppressed; 2-1, III.

State v. Gering, 146 Wn.App. 564 (2008)

Police stop defendant for driving while license suspended, cuff, search incident to arrest, find drugs on his person, defendant maintains that because jail would not accept a DWLS booking, custodial arrest was improper; held: manifestation of the arresting officer's intent was full custodial arrest, State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43, 49 (2004), reasonable detainee would under these circumstances consider himself under arrest, id., at 49-50, State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002), thus search was proper, cf.: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009); III.

State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490, 494-98 (2008)

Police respond to forgery in a bank, suspect in bank states that person who drove him is in car outside, gun in car, police detain driver, remove him, seize gun from floorboard of car; held: protective search exception to warrant requirement applies when a valid Terry stop includes a vehicle search to ensure officer safety, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 12 (1986), State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849, 853 (1997); had police discovered that driver was not part of forgery, police would have released him, giving him access to weapon in car, thus seizure was proper, State v. Glenn, 140 Wn.App. 627, 633-39 (2007), cf.: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); I.

State v. Neth, 165 Wn.2d 177 (2008)

Defendant is stopped for infraction, has no identification, has clear plastic bags, admits he has more than $2500 in car, police bring drug dog which reacts positively, impound car, obtain warrant, , drugs found, at suppression hearing trial court disregards dog evidence as affidavit did not establish reliability; held: without the dog evidence, while the evidence is suspicious, it does not rise to probable cause; 9-0.

State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010)

Officer approaches legally parked car, asks driver and passenger for identification, records information and suggests they go elsewhere, car begins to leave, officer discovers warrant, stops car, arrests, searches, finds drugs; held: "[b]ecause the purpose of making a social contact with…pedestrians is the same as making a social contact with people inside a parked car, it does not automatically constitute a seizure when an officer asks people in a car for their identification," at 848 ¶ 12, State v. Mote, 129 Wn.App. 276 (2005), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), cf., State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012); III.

Arizona v. Johnson, 172 L.Ed.2d 694 (2009)

In a traffic-stop setting, the first Terry condition – a lawful investigatory stop – is met whenever it is lawful for police to detain an automobile and its occupants pending inquiry into a vehicular violation; police need not have, in addition, cause to believe any occupant of the vehicle is involved in criminal activity; to justify a patdown of driver or passenger, police must harbor reasonable suspicion that the person frisked is armed and dangerous; a traffic stop communicates to a passenger that he is not free to terminate the encounter with the police and move about at will, Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), but see: State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001), State v. Rehn, 117 Wn.App. 142 (2003); 9-0.

Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009)

Defendant is arrested for driving with a suspended license, cuffed, locked in police vehicle, police search defendant's car and find drugs; held: police may search passenger compartment of vehicle incident to arrest only if it is reasonable to believe that the arrestee might access the vehicle at the time of the search of if vehicle contains evidence of the offense of arrest, State v. Wright, 155 Wn.App. 537 (2010), essentially modifying New York v. Belton, 69 L.Ed.2d 768 (1981) and Thornton v. United States, 158 L.Ed.2d 905 (2004), see: State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009), but see: State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244 (2009)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, arrest driver for suspended license, discover that driver is protected party for no contact order, ask driver who passenger is, driver discloses that passenger is the no contact order respondent, arrest passenger, trial court suppresses; held: passenger lacked automatic standing to challenge answers of driver as NCO violation is not a possessory offense, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980), and automatic standing doctrine only applies when defendant is asserting that his own rights were violated, State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 23 (2000), State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), but see: State v. Allen, 138 Wn.App. 463 (2007); I.

State v. Grib, 152 Wn.App. 885 (2009)

Police chase defendant who jumps out of car, swims across canal and is arrested, police find drugs in car; held: vehicle was not in defendant's control at time of arrest, thus search was invalid, Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), see also: State v. Bliss, 153 Wn.App. 197 (2009); III.

State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010)

Police arrests passenger pursuant to an arrest warrant, orders defendant-driver out of car, searches car, finds drugs; held: absent a belief that the car contained evidence of the crime for which a person in the car was arrested or that arrestee poses a safety risk, police may not search vehicle incident to arrest, Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009), see: State v. Abuan, 161 Wn.App. 135 (2011), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); there is no good faith exception to the exclusionary rule in Washington, State v. Adams, 169 Wn.2d 487 (2010), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), effectively overruling State v. Riley, 154 Wn.App. 433 (2010); affirms State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Tibbles, 169 Wn.2d 364 (2010)

Trooper stops car for infraction, smells marijuana, searches car and finds marijuana, cites defendant; held: while odor of marijuana establishes probable cause, State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135, 146 (2008), no exigent circumstance, no need for "particular haste" existed, no evidence that imminent destruction of evidence was established, no evidence that trooper could not have procured a telephonic warrant, no evidence that trooper or anyone else was in danger, no evidence that driver was impaired, cf.: State v. Patterson, 112 Wn.2d 731 (1989), State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 72-77 (1996), State v. Smith, 165 Wn.2d 511, 517-18 (2009), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012); "merely because one of these [exigent] circumstances exists does not mean that exigent circumstances justify a warrantless search," at 370 ¶ 9; 5-4.

State v. Morales, 154 Wn.App. 26, 45-49 (2010), rev'd on other grnds, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012)

Following vehicular assault arrest, police observe beer cans in front seat, seize them, then impound vehicle; held: because impound was lawful pursuant to DUI statute, RCW 46.55.113(1), but see: State v. Villela, 194 Wn.2d 451 (2019), and there was probable cause that vehicle had been used in a felony, State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 755 (2001), beer cans were admissible in evidence even if search incident to arrest was improper and even if inevitable discovery doctrine is inapplicable in Washington, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009); 2-1, II.

State v. Wright, 155 Wn.App. 537 (2010), reversed, on other grounds, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012)

Defendant is stopped for driving without headlights although sun had set less than 30 minutes before the stop, RCW 46.37.020, evidence establishes it was dark, cold and icy, officer smells marijuana, arrests defendant for marijuana, searches, finds drugs; held: test for lawfulness of the traffic stop is not whether defendant actually violated the code but rather whether officer had reasonable suspicion which justifies the stop here; because officer initiated the stop based on the infraction, "had virtually no opportunity to form an ulterior motive," stop was not a pretext; I.

State v. Whitney, 156 Wn.App. 405 (2010)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, discover defendant's license is suspended, arrest, search defendant, find drugs in pocket; held: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), does not extend to a search incident to arrest; III.

State v. Chesley, 158 Wn.App. 36, 44-47 (2010)

Police arrest and detain defendant for vehicle prowl, observe burglary tools in defendant's car, seize tools; held: absent evidence that search is necessary to preserve officer safety or prevent conealment or destruction of evidence of the crime of arrest, police may not search a vehicle incident to arrest without a warrant, State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761, 777 (2009), State v. Patton, 167 Wn.2d 379, 394-95 (2009), State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 177-78 (2010), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), *State v. Davis v. United States, 564 U.S. 229, 131 S.Ct. 2419, 180 L.Ed.2d 285 (2011)

Federal exclusionary rule is inapplicable to cases decided before Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), even if on direct appeal when Gant was decided, as sole purpose of federal rule is deterrence and police, relying upon precedent, act in good faith, thus deterrence is meaningless; 7-2.

State v. Robinson, 171 Wn.2d 292 (2011)

Appellant may raise motion to suppress pursuant to Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009) for the first time on appeal, Pers. Restraint of Nichols, 171 Wn.2d 370, 373-76 (2011), reversing State v. Millan, 151 Wn.App. 492 (2009), where defendant's trial was completed prior to Gant, but see: Davis v. United States, 564 U.S. 229, 131 S.Ct. 2419, 180 L.Ed.2d 285 (2011), even if no motion to suppress was made below, State v. Nyegaard, 164 Wn.App. 625 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Weber, 159 Wn.App. 779, 787-91 (2011)

Trooper sees defendant commit infraction, follows and stops when he observes another infraction, defendant appears intoxicated, arrests for DUI, trial court suppresses as a pretext; held: trooper was not conducting an investigation unrelated to traffic offenses, State v. Minh Hoang, 101 Wn.App. 732 (2000), State v. Nichols, 161 Wn.2d 1 (2007), where traffic violation is committed in police presence which results in a prompt stop is not a pretext, State v. Arreola, 176 Wn.2d 284 (2012), Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022); 2-1, III.

State v. Swetz, 160 Wn.App. 122 (2011)

Officer pulls next to defendant's vehicle, defendant exits and speaks to officer who smells marijuana on defendant's breath, walks with defendant back to his vehicle, observes marijuana on passenger seat, arrests, searches, finds additional drugs; held: absent a threat to officer safety or a threat to preservation of evidence, police must obtain a warrant to search a vehicle even for evidence of the crime of arrest per CONST., art. I, § 7, State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009); open view of the marijuana requires a warrant to seize it absent an exception to the warrant requirement if in a constitutionally protected area, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 9-10 (1986), State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506, 514-15 (1984), State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); here there were no exigent circumstances to justify the warrantless seizure, but see: State v. Louthan, 158 Wn.App. 732 (2010); 2-1, II.

State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, records check shows no contact order with a 16 year old girl, passenger appears to be 16, provides a name other than that of protected person, further records check shows specific tattoo on hand of protected person which is on passenger, driver is arrested for violation of no contact order; held: while a passenger cannot be asked for identification without an independent reason, State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), here police knew that protected person was a juvenile and passenger was a juvenile, thus police were justified in asking for identification, distinguishing State v. Allen, 138 Wn.App. 463 (2007), driver lacks standing to challenge the passenger's questioning, passenger was a minor who had been reported missing, see: State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-24 (2008), State v. Raines, 55 Wn.App. 459, 463 (1989), cf.: State v, Alexander, 5 Wn.App.2d 154 (2018), thus exigent circumstances justified her brief detention leading to evidence of her identity; II.

State v. Abuan, 161 Wn.App. 135, 146-54 (2011)

Police arrest driver for suspended license, ask passenger-defendant to leave car for search of the car, officer tells passenger that he wanted to search for weapons, as he begins patdown passenger states he has marijuana, officer handcuffs defendant, finds marijuana, finds gun in car, later questions defendant in custody who provides incriminating statements to felony assault, defendant challenges patdown and arrest for first time on appeal; held: had motion been made to trial court, it would likely have suppressed defendant's statement about marijuana, the marijuana itself and subsequent statements by defendant and gun in car, as there was no reason to search the vehicle to preserve officer safety or prevent concealment or destruction of evidence of the crime of arrest, State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), State v. Chesley, 158 Wn.App. 36, 44-47 (2010); 2-1, II.

State v. Wilson, 162 Wn.App. 409 (2011)

Defendant pleads guilty to VUCSA, prior to sentencing Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009) is decided, trial court denies motion to withdraw plea; held: a plea of guilty waives any search issue on appeal even if law changes, State v. Brandenburg, 153 Wn.App. 944, 947-48 (2009), McMann v. Richardson, 397 U.S. 759, 774, 25 L.Ed.2d 763 (1970), and even if defendant has not been sentenced; II.

State v. Lee, 162 Wn.App. 852 (2011)

Failure to move to suppress an auto search after Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009) is a waiver of the right to have the evidence excluded, State v. Mierz, 72 Wn.App. 783, 789 (1994), cf.: State v. Jones, 163 Wn.App. 354 (2011); here, ineffective assistance was not addressed on direct appeal; II.

State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011)

Police observe van stopped, later see it again in front of a driveway with man walking towards residence, officer activates emergency lights and pull up behind van, after further investigation observe through van window property that had been stolen that night in a burglary, arrest, search; held: while illumination by a spotlight is not a sufficient show of authority, State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), use of emergency lights constitutes a display of authority such that a reasonable person would believe he was seized, State v. DeArman, 54 Wn.App. 621 (1989), State v. Stroud, 30 Wn.App. 392, 396 (1981), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), more authority than a social contact, distinguishing State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009); 2-1, III.

State v. Jones, 163 Wn.App. 354 (2011)

Police stop defendant for infraction, observe drugs in car, arrest and handcuff defendant, search vehicle, find drugs, defendant moves to suppress claiming pretext, raises warrantless search of vehicle for first time on appeal; held: a motion to suppress preserves search issue even if it was on different grounds, cf.: State v. Lee, 162 Wn.App. 852, 857 (2011); while drugs observed from outside the car were in open view, State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 954 (2009), State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 10 (1986), open view doctrine does not provide authority to enter constituionally protected areas without a warrant, State v. Posenjak, 127 Wn.App. 41, 52-53 (2005), cf.: State v. Barnes, 158 Wn.App. 602 (2010); 2-1, II.

State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012)

Police stop defendant for infraction, observe what might be drugs in car, defendant lacks license, arrest defendant who says there is a meth pipe in car, place him in patrol car, disover warrant, search car, find drugs; in companion case, police stop vehicle for infraction, smell marijuana, arrest and place him in patrol car, admits smoking marijuana, police search defendant's car, find drugs; held: under CONST., art. I, § 7, when arrestee is secured police must obtain a warrant to search vehicle even when it is reasonable to believe evidence relevant to the crime of arrest might be found, State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016), rejecting Fourth Amendment analysis in Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), Thornton v. United States, 541 U.S. 615, 158 L.Ed.2d 905 (2004); reverses State v. Snapp, 153 Wn.App. 485 (2009), and reversing, in part, State v. Wright, 155 Wn.App. 537 (2010); 8-1.

State v. Quezadas-Gomez, 165 Wn.App. 593 (2011)

Police, with probable cause to arrest defendant although they do not know his name stop defendant's car, identify defendant and release him, later obtain warrant, search defendant's cars and residence, find drugs, trial court suppresses finding initial stop was a pretext; held: where police have probable cause to arrest, then stopping suspect's car, identifying him and releasing him is not a pretext, as stop was not based on a traffic code pretext, police could make a full arrest or effect some lesser intrusion, distinguishing State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999); 2-1, II.

State v. Arreola*,* 176 Wn.2d 284 (2018)

"[A] mixed-motive traffic stop is not pretextual so long as the desire to address a suspected traffic infraction (or criminal activity) for which the officer has a reasonable articulable suspicion is an actual, conscious, and independent cause of the traffic stop. So long as a police officer actually, consciously, and independently determines that a traffic stop is reasonably necessary in order to address a suspected traffic infraction, the stop is not pretextual," distinguishing State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999), see: Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022); reverses State v. Chacun Arreola, 163 Wn.App. 787 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Monaghan*,* 165 Wn.App. 782 (2012)

Defendant consents to search of car trunk, police find locked container, open it, seize drugs; held: a consensual search cannot exceed the scope of the consent which, here, did not extend to a locked container within the trunk of the car, distinguishing State v. Mueller, 63 Wn.App. 720 (1992); I.

State v. Campbell*,* 166 Wn.App. 464 (2011)

Police stop a vehicle, remove occupants, obtain search warrant to search the vehicle, defendant-passenger asks for her purse from the vehicle, police refuse, search vehicle, find drugs in purse; held: warrant for search of entire vehicle includes search of purse (parties do not dispute validity of warrant), distinguishing State v. Worth, 37 Wn.App. 889, 893-94 (1984); III.

State v. Snapp*,* 174 Wn.2d 177, 197-99 (2012)

Police stop vehicle for no headlights after dark, smell marijuana, search, find drugs, at hearing officer testifies it was dark, cold and icy, stop occurred 24 minutes after sunset, RCW 46.37.020 requires lights 30 minutes after sunset; held: officer reasonably believed an infraction was committed, thus Terry stop was valid, cf.: State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Byrd*,* 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013)

Officer stops vehicle with stolen plates, arrests driver on warrant, driver tells officer that car belongs to defendant-passenger who is ordered out of car, officer removes purse from her lap, arrests defendant, places her in patrol car, searches purse, finds drugs; held: "[a] search of the arrestee's immediate area must be justified by concerns for officer safety or evidence preservation, while a search of the arrestee's person and articles of his or her person is justified by the authority of a lawful arrest," at 625 ¶ 27, State v. Ellison, 172 Wn.App. 710 (2013), State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675 (1992); exigencies are presumed when an officer searches an arrestee's person, at 620 ¶ 17, here "the purse was unquestionably an article immediately associated with her person," at 623 ¶ 10; reverses State v. Byrd, 162 Wn.App. 612 (2011); "[w]e caution that the proper scope of the time of arrest rule is narrow… It does not extend to all articles in an arrestee's constructive possession, but only those personal articles in the arrestee's actual and exclusive possession at or immediately preceding the time of arrest," at 623 ¶ 9, State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014), State v. Alexander, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019); 5-4.

State v. McLean, 178 Wn.App. 236 (2013)

Trooper observes defendant weave within lane, cross fog line three times, pulls defendant over, smells alcohol, defendant performs field sobriety tests, is arrested for DUI, defense maintains pretext, State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999), claims trooper had reasonable suspicion only of weaving and lacked reasonable suspicion of DUI; held: from training and experience, State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57, 62 (2010), it was rational for trooper to infer defendant was under the influence, see: State v. Arreola, 176 Wn.2d 284 (2012), State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020); II.

Heien v. North Carolina, 574 U.S. 54, 135 S.Ct. 530, 190 L.Ed.2d 475 (2014)

Defendant is driving with one burnt out brake light, sheriff asks to search car, finds drugs, state law does not require two brake lights; held: a reasonable mistake of law by a police officer (here, there was some ambiguity and inconsistency in the equipment code, see: Kagan, J., concurring) may constitutionally establish reasonable suspicion to stop a car, see also: Michigan v. DeFillippo, 443 U.S. 31, 61 L.Ed.2d 343 (1979), but see: State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); 8-1.

Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 134 S.Ct. 1683, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014)

Anonymous citizen calls 911, reports a specific vehicle ran her off the road, provides license plate, police stop the vehicle, smell marijuana, search, find drugs; held: while an anonymous tip alone cannot justify an investigative stop, Florida v. J.L., 529 U.S. 266, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), caller's detailed eyewitness account establishes basis of knowledge, relaying a startling event supports veracity as does police corroborating that the vehicle was where the caller predicted, Alabama v. White, 496 U.S. 325, 110 L.Ed.2d 310 (1990), use of 911 supports veracity as it is traceable to the caller, thus stop was proper, see: State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357, 372-73 (2015), but see: State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); 5-4.

State v. MacDicken, 179 Wn.2d 936 (2014)

Defendant is arrested for robbery with gun, cuffed, standing outside patrol car, laptop and duffel bag car length away from defendant, police search, find evidence of robbery; held: officer safety was a substantial concern based upon nature of crime, public area, several people associated with defendant nearby, bags "still within reaching distance," justify search incident to arrest, State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), cf.: State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019); affirms State v. MacDicken, 171 Wn.App. 169 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014)

Officer runs defendant's license plate, enters wrong letter, computer shows vehicle stolen, stops car, before approaching runs correct plate and discovers it was not stolen, approaches to tell her she can go but observes her toss item behind seat, uses flashlight, sees drugs; held: while police may reasonably but erroneously believe a violation occurred based upon objective facts, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), and may reasonably rely on incorrect information provided by third parties, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004), they may not reasonably rely on their own mistaken assessment of material facts, State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539 (1996), State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), to justify an investigation; here, after realizing his error officer ordered driver to remain in car, held her for several seconds while he checked the proper number, never turned off overhead lights, used flashlight to look in vehicle, all of which were improper; 2-1, III.

State v. Witherrite, 184 Wn.App. 859 (2014)

Police need not provide warnings pursuant to State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998) to obtain consent to search a car, see: State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003); III.

Rodriguez v. United States, 575 U.S. 348, 135 S.Ct. 1609, 191 L.Ed. 2d 492 (2015)

Absent reasonable suspicion, police extension of a traffic stop in order to conduct a dog sniff violates Fourth Amendment, see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), cf.: United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983), Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.App. 652 (2015)

Defendant is arrested in a stolen vehicle, search incident to arrest discloses drugs on his person, officer asks if there are drugs in the vehicle, defendant replies there are drugs on front seat, officer sees closed black bag, through mesh side sees currency, opens bag, finds drugs; held: when a search of a closed bag seized incident to arrest can be delayed without endangering officer or destruction of evidence then a warrant must be obtained, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 189 (2012); when a closed piece of luggage in a vehicle gives no indication of dangerous contents it cannot be searched in the course of an inventory, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 158 (1980), State v. White, 135 Wn.2d 761 (1998), distinguishing State v. Smith, 76 Wn.App. 9 (1994), cf.: State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019); III.

Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. 232, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016)

During unlawful investigative stop of vehicle police learn of arrest warrant, defendant is arrested for the warrant, search incident to arrest yields drugs; held: discovery of arrest warrant during the unconstitutional detention breaks the causal chain thus attenuation doctrine applies, Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S.Ct. 2254, 45 L.Ed.2d 416 (1975), but see: State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019), and drugs are admissible; attenuation doctrine analysis: (1) look to the "temporal proximity" between the unconstitutional conduct and the discovery of evidence to determine how closely the discovery of evidence followed the unconstitutional search(2) consider the presence of intervening circumstances; (3) and "particularly" significant, examine "the purpose and flagrancy of the official misconduct;" 6-3.

State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016)

Following a report of someone in a white car shooting into a home police stop white car, remove occupants at gunpoint, handcuff and secure in police cars, open car's doors, find gun, remove gun, tow car, subsequently obtain search warrant; held: warrantless search of vehicle for evidence once vehicle's occupants are detained in police cars is improper, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 197-201 (2012); where there is reasonable suspicion that there is an unsecured gun in a vehicle that will be impounded and towed, police may make a limited sweep of the vehicle to obtain the gun to avoid accidental discharge under community caretaking function; 9-0.

State v. Samalia, 186 Wn.2d 262 (2016)

Vehicle driven by defendant is stopped by police as stolen, defendant escapes on foot, officer finds cell phone in car, without a warrant uses contents of cell phone to identify driver who moves to suppress; held: defendant abandoned privacy interest in cell phone and its data by voluntarily leaving it in the stolen vehicle; State v. Kealey, 80 Wn.App. 162 (1995); affirms State v. Samalia, 186 Wn.App. 224 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Cruz, 195 Wn.App. 120 (2016), review dismissed,, on other grounds, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017)

Officer arrests and cuffs defendant at defendant's truck for fishing misdemeanor, places him in patrol car intending to cite and release, inquires if there are weapons in the truck, defendant says guns, officer enters truck, removes guns, discovers defendant has a felony record, charged with unlawful possession a firearm; held: Terry frisk extends to a car if there is a reasonable suspicion that suspect is dangerous and may gain access to a weapon in the vehicle, State v. Glossbrener, 146 Wn.2d 670, 680-81 (2002), both components must be present, here there was no indication of dangerousness thus seizure of guns was improper, distinguishing State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986), no exigent circumstance justifying search without a warrant existed as there was no true emergency, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747, 753 (2009), even though only one officer was present; III.

Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663 (2018)

Police, with probable cause to believe motorcycle is stolen and is in defendant's driveway alongside his house enter the driveway, remove tarp from the motorcycle, observe that it is the stolen motorcycle, arrest defendant; held: automobile exception extends no further than the automobile itself, does not extend to warrantless entry of home or curtilage to search a vehicle therein, distinguishing Scher v. United States, 305 U.S. 251, 59 S.Ct. 174, 83 L.Ed. 151 (1938); 8-1.

State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315, 412 P.3d 1274 (2018)

Defendant in vehicle is stopped for infraction, police observe punched ignition and drug paraphernalia, defendant leaves vehicle and locks it, does not have a key, refuses consent to search, police contact owner, obtain key, search, seize gun, defendant charged with unlawful possession of a firearm; held: driver of a vehicle does not ordinarily assume the risk that the owner will consent to search, State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984), but where the police have good cause to believe that the vehicle is stolen, based here upon punched ignition and lack of a key, then the driver has assumed the risk that the absent owner may consent, thus motion to suppress is properly denied; affirms State v. Vanhollebeke, 197 Wn.App. 66 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Hendricks, 4 Wn.App.2d 135 (2018)

"A traffic stop is not pretextual even where the officer has an additional motivation for conducting the stop apart from a suspected traffic violation, so long as the officer's purported motive in investigating a suspected traffic violation was an actual, conscious, and independent reason for the stop. State v. Arreola, 176 Wn.2d 284, 299-300 (2012)," at 145, Matter of Pleasant, 21 Wn.App.2d 320 (2022); II.

State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019)

Police unlawfully seize defendant, advise him of his right to refuse a search, defendant consents to search of his vehicle, police find drugs, trial court denies suppression under attenuation doctrine, Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. ——, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 2061, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016), concluding that consent attenuated the unlawful seizure; held: under the state constitution the attenuation doctrine must be narrowly applied such that "[t}he State must prove that intervening circumstances gave rise to a superseding cause that genuinely severed the causal connection between official misconduct and the discovery of evidence. If the State fails to meet its burden then the attenuation doctrine cannot apply, regardless of whether the official misconduct was flagrant and purposeful, and regardless of whether suppression is likely to deter similar misconduct in the future;" here, the requested consent occurred while the illegal seizure was ongoing and the consent was not an independent act of free will sufficient to establish a superseding cause, State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997); 9-0.

State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019)

Defendant is arrested by a stolen car parked on private property, police impound, during inventory search open small zippered nylon CD case, find drugs; held: while a warrantless inventory search of closed luggage or a car trunk is impermissible, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 155 (1980), State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.App. 652, 675-76 (2015), "a nylon case that looked like it contained CDs does not possess the same aura of privacy as a purse, shaving kit, or personal luggage," at 159, at least where the case is found in a stolen vehicle; 5-4.

State v. Lee, 7 Wn.App.2d 692 (2019)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, arrest driver for suspended license, run defendant-passenger's name to see if she is licensed to drive the car away, discover she has a drug conviction, ask her if she will consent to search her purse left in car, advising her she can refuse, defendant consents, drugs found; held: during a traffic stop the driver and passengers are all lawfully seized, State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 910 (2009), Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), but see: State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), running passenger's name was reasonable as she had agreed to drive car, id., asking a lawfully seized person if she would consent to a search of an item left in a car after she knew officers would search the car was reasonable, cf.: State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), officer's mention of defendant's drug conviction does not vitiate consent; I.

Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020)

Sheriff runs license plate check, discovers owner of vehicle's license is suspended, stops car, determines that driver is owner who is convicted of driving while an habitual traffic offender; held: police may pull over a car when the officer has learned that the owner's license is suspended, absent other evidence that negates the inference that the owner is driving, State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268 (1997), Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), see: State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); 8-1.

By Citizens

State v. Morgan, 32 Wn.App. 764 (1982)

Private courier searches envelope, finds white powder, turns it over to police who search envelope and test it; held: police were obliged to obtain a warrant before searching the envelope, irrespective of the fact that it had previously been inspected by a private party; II.

United States v. Jacobsen, 80 L.Ed.2d 85 (1984)

Where employees of a private freight carrier examine a cardboard box and find drugs, there is no Fourth Amendment violation, even when package is resealed then reopened by police, see: State v. Agee, 15 Wn.App. 709 (1976).

State v. Ludvik, 40 Wn.App. 257 (1985)

From his residence, state game agent observed drug activity in residence across street, reports it to police who obtain warrant; held: the fact that person conducting search is a state employee does not lend an element of state action to search if search is not related to employee's official duties and search is done solely in the capacity of a private citizen, see: State v. Eisfeldt, 163 Wn.2d 628 (2008); III.

New Jersey v. T.L.O., 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985)

Fourth Amendment applies to searches by public school authorities as representatives of the state; school officials may search a student on reasonable suspicion, short of probable cause, without a warrant; see: State v. McKinnon, 88 Wn.2d 75 (1977), cf.: State v. Meneese, 174 Wn.2d 937 (2012), State v. A.S., 6 Wn.App.2d 264 (2018); 7-2.

State v. Dold, 44 Wn.App. 519 (1986)

Police receive an envelope addressed to police, open envelope, find another envelope addressed to defendant marked "delivered and opened in error"; inner envelope was open, police read letter, learn that defendant had access to drugs, investigate and arrest defendant for VUCSA; held: where a private citizen, acting without governmental authority, searches property, then a subsequent warrantless search by the government that does not exceed the bounds of the prior private search does not violate the Fourth Amendment, State v. Swenson, 104 Wn.App. 744, 753-56 (2000), but see: State v. Eisfeldt, 163 Wn.2d 628 (2008); burden is on the defense to establish collusion between the citizen informant and the police; I.

State v. Sweeney, 56 Wn.App. 42 (1989)

Job Corps student leader informs dormitory supervisor that defendant sells drugs, supervisor previously suspected defendant due to other students entering defendant's room at unusual hours, pats down defendant, finds unidentified leaf, strip searches, finds drugs in underwear; held: patdown was justified, as quasi-school officials had reasonable grounds to believe the search was necessary to maintain school discipline and order, State v. Brooks, 43 Wn.App. 560 (1986), no additional operative facts existed to justify expansion of the initial search to a strip search, cf.: Florence v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 566 U.S. 3187, 132 S.Ct. 1510, 182 L.Ed.2d 566 (2012); further, strip search violated Job Corps rules; III.

State v. McWatters, 63 Wn.App. 911 (1992)

Fire department paramedic, while giving medical assistance to injured motorcyclist, hands drugs to police at scene; held: no evidence that police knew of and acquiesced in search, even if paramedic recognized vial as drugs, State v. Clark, 48 Wn.App. 850 (1987), cf.: State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004); search and seizure rules do not apply to paramedic employed by fire department, distinguishing Michigan v. Tyler, 56 L.Ed.2d 486 (1978), State v. Bell, 108 Wn.2d 193 (1987); III.

State v. Walter, 66 Wn.App. 862 (1992)

Photo lab manager processes film showing juveniles standing in front of Tennessee state emblem, fears liability for preparation of counterfeit driver's licenses, calls police who requests copies of prints, manager complies; held: absent evidence of encouragement by police that would render manager an agent, lab manager's contact with police and delivery of prints constitute private action, State v. Clark, 48 Wn.App. 850, 856 (1987), State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 382-84 (2001), State v. Bass, 18 Wn.App.2d 760 (2021); I.

Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997)

PUD employee volunteers to police that defendant's power usage is high, after further investigation, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: there is a privacy interest in public power records (plurality of four justices holds pursuant to state constitution), PUD employee lacked statutory authority to disclose record to police, thus suppressed, State v. Orick, 129 Wn.App. 654 (2005), see: State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54, 67-8 (1986), cf.: State v. McKinney, 148 Wn.2d 20 (2002); RCW 42.17.314 authorizes police to demand power records only after setting forth in writing a reasonable suspicion, State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761 (1990); overrules, on state grounds, State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378 (1994), reverses Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 81 Wn.App. 705 (1996); 5-4.

State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 382-84 (2001)

Police, with knowledge that stolen property is in an apartment, are told by landlord that a dog in the apartment might damage property, ask officer if he wants to search, officer declines, having been refused consent by lessee, tells landlord he could not authorize him to search and that whatever lessor does is of his own free will, landlord searches, tells police he found stolen bicycle, police get warrant; held: defendant has burden of showing that search was government action, State v. Clark, 48 Wn.App. 850, 856 (1987), factors determining whether private party is acting as a government agent: (1) whether government knew of and acquiesced in the intrusive conduct, (2) whether party performing the search intended to assist law enforcement efforts or further his own ends, State v. Bass, 18 Wn.App.2d 760 (2021), State v. Clark, supra.; here, officer did not ask or authorize landlord to search, did not acquiesce in the search; II.

State v. Swenson, 104 Wn.App. 744, 753-56 (2000)

Homicide victim's father, having provided police information and having expressed frustration with perceived police inaction, obtains inculpatory telephone records which police could not have legally obtained without a warrant, gives information to police; held: critical factors in determining if citizen is acting as state's instrumentality include (1) whether government knew of and acquiesced in intrusive conduct, and (2) whether citizen intended to assist law enforcement efforts or to further his own ends, State v. Clark, 48 Wn.App. 850, 856 (1987); mere knowledge that a citizen might conduct an illegal private search without government taking deterrent action is insufficient to turn the private search into a governmental one, State v. Smith, 110 Wn.2d 658, 666 (1988); since state did not instigate, encourage, counsel, direct or control the conduct, then there was no state action, State v. Wolken, 103 Wn.2d 823, 830 (1985); here, police encouraged citizen to help with their investigation but did not encourage citizen to obtain phone records; I.

State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210 (2004)

Park security guards, employed by city, who approach individuals smoking marijuana, detain and call police, are state officers; 9-0.

State v. Eisfeldt, 163 Wn.2d 628 (2008)

Contractor, given key to home by owner, discovers drugs, calls police who enter with contractor's permission, make same observations as contractor, then obtain warrant; held: private search doctrine under which a warrantless search by police does not offend the Fourth Amendment if the search does not expand beyond the private search, Walter v. United States, 65 L.Ed.2d 410 (1980), United States v. Jacobsen, 80 L.Ed.2d 85 (1984), is inapplicable under CONST., art. I, § 7, overruling, in part, State v. Dold, 44 Wn.App. 519 (1986), State v. Walter, 66 Wn.App. 862 (1992); since contractor had no authority to grant consent, police entry was invalid; 9-0.

State v. E.K.P., 162 Wn.App. 675 (2011)

Assistant principal hears from unnamed "reliable" student that respondent smells of alcohol and might possess alcohol, assistant principal approaches respondent in parking lot, asks her to come to office, sees her try to hide backpack, in office does not smell alcohol, searches backpack, finds alcohol; held: informant's report and attempt to hide backpack gave school official reasonable grounds to suspect that a search of backpack would find alcohol, New Jersey v. T.L.O., 469 U.S. 325, 341-42, 83 L.Ed.2d 720 (1985), State v. B.A.S., 103 Wn.App. 549, 553-54 (2000); Aguilar-Spinelli test is inapplicable unless search is by a police officer, see: State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-48 (1980); II.

State v. Harrier, 14 Wn.App.2d 17 (2020)

Cloud storage company discovers child porn, reports it to police as required, 18 U.S.C. § 2258A, police open images, obtain search warrants which are served on cloud storage company for name of customer, then obtain warrant for defendant's computer, observe child porn; held: customer has no privacy interest in images held by a third party State v. Eisfeldt, 163 Wn.2d 628, 636 (2008); child porn is contraband and there is no privacy interest in contraband, citing State v. Carter, 151 Wn.2d 118, 126-27 (2004); II.

State v. Bass, 18 Wn.App.2d 760 (2021)

Detective, seeking touch DNA evidence from defendant to see if it matches semen found in homicide victim, contacts defendant-truck driver's employer, asks for defendant's route so he could collect discarded material, employer gives the information and indicates she would seek anything he discarded at work, detective says okay but that he's not asking her to do anything for him, employer obtains cup and soda can, gives them to detective, match found, defense at suppression hearing maintains that employer was acting as agent of police; held: an agency relationship requires more than knowledge and acquiescence in a private citizen's action, State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 382-84 (2001), State v. Clark, 48 Wn.App. 850, 856 (1987), State v. Wolken, 103 Wn.2d 823, 830 (1985), State v. Smith, 110 Wn.2d 658, 666 (1988), State v. Swenson, 104 Wn.App. 744, 753-56 (2000), trial court's finding that police did not direct, entice or control employer is supported by substantial evidence; I.

State v. Collins, 30 Wn.App. 1 (1981)

Suspect, arrested at home, advised of rights, told police he did not wish to make statement, police tell suspect it would be helpful if they had the gun, suspect gives police gun; held: police did not scrupulously honor defendant's request to remain silent, turning over gun was in response to police statement, thus equivalent to confession, thus suppressed, Rhode Island v. Innis, 64 L.Ed.2d 297 (1980), Michigan v. Mosely, 46 L.Ed.2d 313 (1975), State v. Dennis, 16 Wn.App. 417 (1976), State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 128-35 (2016); II.

State v. Jordan, 30 Wn.App. 335 (1981)

Police need not specifically advise suspect of his right to refuse consent to search, State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409, 420-22 (2001), see: State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003), State v. Tagas, 121 Wn.App. 872 (2004), but see: State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998); specifies standards to determine voluntariness of consent, State v. Shoemaker, 85 Wn.2d 207 (1975), cf.: State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860, 871-72 (2014); I.

State v. Cole, 31 Wn.App. 501 (1982)

Suspect consents to search of car, disclaims ownership of suitcases therein, which police search; held: search exceeded scope of consent; III; cf.: State v. Jensen, 44 Wn.App. 485 (1986).

State v. Rodriguez, 32 Wn.App. 758 (1982)

Evidence seized during a consensual search preceded by an illegal detention need not be suppressed if consent was voluntarily given and free of taint of prior detention, but see: State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009); II.

State v. Counts, 99 Wn.2d 54 (1983)

Merely opening door to residence when police knock is not the equivalent of consent to search or arrest in the home; 9-0.

Florida v. Royer, 75 L.Ed.2d 229 (1983)

Suspect who fit drug courier profile is approached by police who request his ticket and license; without oral consent, suspect surrenders documents, whereupon police ask suspect to accompany them to a small room 40 feet away; suspect goes with police; without consent, police retrieve luggage; when asked if he would consent to search, suspect produced a key; plurality held that police action exceeded the permissible bounds of an investigative stop, and suspect's consent was tainted by the illegal detention, Kaupp v. Texas, 155 L.Ed.2d 814 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Dresker, 39 Wn.App. 136 (1984)

Police, having previously decided to enter a residence, encounter the resident at the front door, say “let's step inside;” resident says nothing, but complies; held: in light of officer's decision to enter, his statement to resident was a command, and resident's silence and compliance were not consent; III.

State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984)

Owner-occupant of residence consents to search, defendant rents room from owner, police throw open door, see defendant asleep in his room, enter and arrest him; held: lessor lacked authority to consent to search of defendant's room, police entry into room was unlawful, Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 304-6 (1994), reversing State v. Mathe, 35 Wn.App. 572 (1983); see: State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793 (2004), see also: State v. Birdsong, 66 Wn.App. 534 (1992), cf.: State v. Haapala, 139 Wn.App. 424 (2007), State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315 (2018. Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 304-6 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Williamson, 42 Wn.App. 208 (1985)

Undercover officers in civilian attire are invited into home where they arrest the defendant without warrant; held: where invited, undercover police may effectuate a warrantless arrest in the home, distinguishing Payton v. N.Y., 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980); knowing and voluntary waiver analysis does not apply to Fourth Amendment issues, Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973), State v. McCrorey, 70 Wn.App. 103 (1993); II.

State v. Jensen, 44 Wn.App. 485 (1986)

Defendant is arrested for criminal traffic offense, police unlawfully search a bag in trunk of defendant's vehicle, advise defendant of Miranda warnings, obtain consent to search entire vehicle, find drugs in a jacket in the vehicle; held: in determining whether consent was voluntary, trial court should consider, inter alia, (1) whether Miranda warnings were given, (2) education and intelligence of suspect, and (3) whether suspect was advised of right to refuse search, State v. Shoemaker, 85 Wn.2d 207, 212 (1975); here, prior illegal search did not taint consent, but see: State v. Tijerina, 61 Wn.App. 626 (1991), State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Avila-Avina, 99 Wn.App. 9 (2000), State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019); factors for determining attenuation include (1) temporal proximity of illegal search and consent, (2) presence of intervening circumstances, (3) purpose of flagrancy of police misconduct, and (4) Miranda warnings; search of defendant's jacket within the vehicle was within the scope of the consent as the consent permitted a complete search of the vehicle, State v. Mueller, 63 Wn.App. 720 (1992), distinguishing State v. Cole, 31 Wn.App. 504 (1982); cf.: State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993), aff'd on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994), but see: State v. Monaghan, 165 Wn.App. 782 (2012); III, 2-1.

State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388 (1986)

After unlawful arrest, suspect consents to search of his home; held: because defendant volunteered to have his home searched, was told he need not consent and police misconduct in illegally arresting suspect was "minor" and nonflagrant, absence of an attempt to exploit the arrest and spontaneity of consent alleviate any taint to the consent, Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S.Ct. 2254, 45 L.Ed.2d 416 (1975), Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. 232, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016), but see: State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), cf.: State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993), aff'd on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994), State v. Eserjose, 171 Wn.2d 907 (2011), State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019); during search pursuant to the consent to look for stolen property, police pick up a paper bag, recognize it by weight as not containing stolen property, enter bag, find drugs; held: exceeds scope of consent; III.

State v. Nelson, 47 Wn.App. 157 (1987)

Where arrestee asks to return to his home to get a coat due to cold weather, and knows that he need not do so, then officer's entry accompanying arrestee is consensual, State v. Lyons, 76 Wn.2d 343, 346-7 (1969); III.

State v. Koepke, 47 Wn.App. 897 (1987)

Lessee may validly consent to search his guest's bedroom where (1) guest did not pay rent, (2) guest had only planned on staying two-three weeks and lessee was going to ask guest to leave, (3) no lock on door, (4) lessee stored goods in room, (5) no indication when guest would return, State v. Haapala, 139 Wn.App. 424 (2007), distinguishing State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984), cf.: Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 303-6 (1994), State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 635-39 (2002), State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793 (2004), State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), see: State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315 (2018), a second search following a consensual search is valid where time elapsed is short, second search had same objective and is conducted by same officers; III.

State v. Summers, 52 Wn.App. 767 (1988)

Adult sister of juvenile respondent, acting as head of household while parent was away, consents to search of respondent's bedroom, respondent having exclusive use of that room; held: a person acting as the responsible adult has the same authority to consent as the parent would have had, had the parent been present; a parent may consent to the search of a dependent child's room irrespective of the parent's prior agrement to tolerate the child's desire for exclusive domain of his/her room; issue of whether the relationship is that of a dependent child or that of landlord-tenant is a factual question to be decided by trial court; I.

State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735 (1989)

Where police have obtained consent to search for an individual possessing at best equal control over premises, that consent remains valid against a co-habitant, who also possesses equal control, only while the cohabitant is absent; should the cohabitant be present and able to object, police must obtain cohabitant's consent, State v. White, 141 Wn.App. 128, 134-40 (2007), State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678, 688-89 (2009), see: State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 678 (1998), State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257 (2001), State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), State v. Rooney, 190 Wn.App. 653 (2015), cf.: State v. Cantrell, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994) (Leach does not apply to motor vehicle searches), State v. Haapala, 139 Wn.App. 424 (2007), State v. Hamilton, 179 Wn.App. 870 (2014), see: State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793, 803-09 (2004); affirms State v. Leach, 52 Wn.App. 490 (1988), State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315 (2018); effectively overrules State v. Chichester, 48 Wn.App. 257 (1987).

State v. Raines, 55 Wn.App. 459 (1989)

Police respond to domestic violence call, observe male through window, knock on door, female answers, denies problem, police ask to speak to male, female denies male is present, police ask to enter, female does not object, steps back, police enter; female shuts inside door, states it is her room, police state they will investigate, female does not object, police open door, see suspect, drugs; held: failure to object and stepping aside is more than mere acquiescence, but see: State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746, 756-59 (2011); failure to object is an implied waiver; entry of bedroom was justified by exigent circumstance in response to domestic violence report in light of fact that police knew suspect was violent; 2-1, I.

State v. Flowers, 57 Wn.App. 636 (1990)

Police testify suspect, being held at gunpoint, not advised of Miranda rights or right to withhold consent, consents to search, defendant denies consenting; held: defendant was sophisticated, not "totally naive in criminal matters," did not claim to feel coerced, thus defendant's consent was not product of coercion or duress and his will was not overborne, distinguishing State v. Werth, 18 Wn.App. 530 (1977); accord: State v. Cyrus, 66 Wn.App. 502 (1992); cf.: State v. Cantrell, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994); I.

Illinois v. Rodriguez 111 L.Ed.2d 148 (1990)

Where police reasonably but erroneously believe that a third party has common authority to consent to search of premises, then the search is valid, as long as the facts available to the officer at the moment would warrant a person of reasonable caution in the belief that the consenting party had authority over the premises; but see: State v. Ryland, 65 Wn.App. 806 (1992), State v. Birdsong, 66 Wn.App. 534 (1992), State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28, 34-6 (1994); 6-3.

State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775 (1990)

Police advise of Miranda rights, ask for consent to search car trunk, defendant asks what happens if he refuses, police state they will impound and seek a warrant, defendant signs consent to search which includes specific language that documented right to refuse; held: defendant "voluntarily acquiesced" to search, State v. Cherry, 191 Wn.App. 456, 472-73 (2015), distinguishing Bumper v. North Carolina, 20 L.Ed.2d 797 (1968), wherein police lied that they had a warrant, whereas here police said they would request a warrant, thus no coercion, see: State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746, 756-59 (2011); 6-3.

State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174 (1991)

Taking blood over objection from vehicular homicide suspect does not violate CONST. Art. 1, § 7 where there is clear indication it would reveal evidence of intoxication and it was a reasonable test performed in a reasonable manner, State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706, 711-12 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Tijerina, 61 Wn.App. 626 (1991)

Police stop defendant's vehicle for infraction, decide not to cite, observe motel soap in glove box, suspect, because defendant is Hispanic, that he may have been involved in motel drug trade in Spokane, ask to search trunk, granted, find drugs; held: detention after decision not to cite must be based on articulable facts, which don't exist here, State v. Glossbrener, 146 Wn.2d 670 (2002), State v. Veltri, 136 Wn.App. 818 (2007), see: State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544 (1995); absence of intervening circumstances between illegal detention and consent and absence of Miranda warnings taint consent, Taylor v. Alabama, 73 L.Ed.2d 314 (1982), State v. Jensen, 44 Wn.App. 485, 490 (1986), State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993), aff'd on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998); III.

Florida v. Bostick, 115 L.Ed.2d 389 (1991)

Police routinely board bus at scheduled stop and ask passengers for permission to search luggage, defendant grants permission, police seize drugs; held: no seizure where a reasonable innocent person would feel free to say no, United States v. Drayton, 153 L.Ed.2d 242 (2002), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); cramped confines of bus is but one factor in determining if consent is voluntary; see: State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019); 6-3.

State v. Mueller, 63 Wn.App. 720 (1992)

Suspect consents to search of car for guns and drugs, trooper finds gym bag in car, searches it, finds drugs; held: consent was general and unqualified, thus search of gym bag did not exceed scope of consent, State v. Jensen, 44 Wn.App. 485 (1986), Florida v. Jimeno, 114 L.Ed.2d 297 (1991), but see: State v. Monaghan, 165 Wn.App. 782 (2012); I.

State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409 (1992)

Police, with consent of lessee, enter apartment, arrest defendant, a temporary resident, in bathroom; held: defendant's expectation of privacy was qualified by possibility that lessee would consent to search, State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 635-39 (2002); defendant's presence in bathroom does not provide a separate privacy right from that of lessee, as consent to search apartment included bathroom, distinguishing State v. Berber, 48 Wn.App. 583 (1987), State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735, 744 (1989); see also: Tukwila v. Nalder, 53 Wn.App. 746 (1989), State v. Haapala, 139 Wn.App. 424 (2007); III.

State v. Cyrus, 66 Wn.App. 502 (1992)

Police, investigating assault and having been told suspect was armed, knock on door, suspect angry, refuses to come out, demands that police come in, police at first wait, then enter, defendant points a gun at them, is convicted of assault on the officers; held: defendant's statement to police, "you come in" was voluntary, not a submission to police authority after arrest, State v. Flowers, 57 Wn.App. 636, review denied, 115 Wn.2d 1009 (1990), State v. Jones, 22 Wn.App. 447 (1979), defendant's intoxication does not vitiate consent; I.

State v. Birdsong, 66 Wn.App. 534 (1992)

During tenancy period, lessor asks police to enter house with him to see vandalism, police arrive with lessor, before entering defendant-lessee arrives, police enter without defendant's permission, find drugs; held: defendant was present before search, his property was in the premises, he retained keys, police did not ask for his consent, thus entry was unlawful, State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984), United States v. Matlock, 39 L.Ed.2d 242 (1974), Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 303-6 (1994), State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678, 688-89

(2009), State v. Rooney, 190 Wn.App. 653 (2015), see: State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257 (2001), State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793 (2004), State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), State v. White, 141 Wn.App. 128, 134-40 (2007), State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315 (2018), distinguishing Illinois v. Rodriguez, 111 L.Ed.2d 148 (1990) (no apparent authority, as defendant was present); I.

State v. Browning, 67 Wn.App. 93 (1992)

Building inspector informs resident that inspection had been requested, resident goes back into house without stating that inspector cannot enter, inspector enters, finds drugs, calls police who obtains warrant; held: mere acquiescence to a show of authority is insufficient to support a free and voluntary consent to search, Bumper v. North Carolina, 20 L.Ed.2d 797 (1968), State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 747 (2011), particularly where Uniform Building Code § 202(c) requires inspectors to request entry; even if inspector believed that contractor had authorized entry, where resident is at home, inspector must request entry, State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 127, 156 (Horowitz, J., dissenting) (1977); I.

State v. Ryland, 120 Wn.2d 325 (1992)

Without warrant, police knock on apartment door, house guest answers door, police ask to see defendant, guest admits police who arrest defendant, who confesses to burglary; per curiam decision adopts reasoning of the dissent in State v. Ryland, 65 Wn.App. 806, 810 (1992) (Agid, J., dissenting), and remands to the trial court to determine whether officer reasonably believed houseguest had authority to consent to entry.

State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996)

Police observe defendant, who looks away, patrol car stops, defendant approaches, police ask where he is going, defendant answers appropriately, police ask for name, defendant produces identification, police run radio check, ask if he has drugs, defendant says no, ask if they may search, defendant says yes, police find drugs; held: consent to search obtained through exploitation of prior illegality may be invalid even if voluntary, Taylor v. Alabama, 73 L.Ed.2d 314 (1982); factors to be considered in determining whether consent is tainted: (1) temporal proximity of the illegality and the subsequent consent, (2) the presence of significant intervening circumstances, (3) the purpose and flagrancy of police misconduct, and (4) Miranda warnings, State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388, 398 (1986); one factor alone is generally not dispositive, State v. Jensen, 44 Wn.App. 485, 490 (1986); here, defendant was not told he could withhold consent, misconduct was more intrusive than in Gonzales, supra, there was no basis for a stop, no Miranda warnings, thus suppressed; accord: State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Avila-Avina, 99 Wn.App. 9 (2000), State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.App. 656 (2009); II.

State v. McCrorey, 70 Wn.App. 103 (1993)

Police, with probable cause but without a warrant, knock on defendant's door, ask him to come out, defendant refuses, police ask to come in, defendant says police cannot enter if they intend to arrest, police respond that if admitted to residence they'll talk about it, defendant admits police who arrest defendant, who confesses; held: voluntariness standard, Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973), is to be applied under state constitution, distinguishing State v. Greco, 62 Wn.2d 265 (1958), McNear v. Rhay, 65 Wn.2d 530 (1965); while ruse entries may be permissible, State v. Hashman, 46 Wn.App. 211, 214 (1986), State v. Myers, 102 Wn.2d 548 (1984), State v. Williamson, 42 Wn.App. 208 (1985), nonundercover police acting in their official capacity may not actively misrepresent their purpose to gain entry or exceed scope of consent given; here, consent was limited in scope to talking, not arresting, police exceeded the scope, thus confession suppressed; I.

State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993), aff'd, on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994)

Police stop vehicle, owned by passenger's father, for speeding, ask passenger for consent to search, granted by passenger, find drugs, charge driver; held: after citing for infraction, police had no right to detain occupants further, State v. Tijerina, 61 Wn.App. 626 (1991), State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544 (1995), State v. Glossbrener, 146 Wn.2d 670 (2002), State v. Veltri, 136 Wn.App. 818 (2007), see: State v. King, 89 Wn.App. 612, 623-4 (1998); no intervening circumstances alleviate the taint, distinguishing State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388, 397-9 (1986), State v. Flowers, 57 Wn.App. 636, 645 (1990), State v. Jensen, 44 Wn.App. 485, 489 (1986), State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997); II.

State v. Cantrell*, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994)

Consent to search a motor vehicle given by passenger with common authority over it supports search of vehicle where driver does not object, and where driver is a permissive driver and not a mere passenger, distinguishing State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735 (1989), as privacy interest in automobile is less than in an office or home; overrules, in part, State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993); see: United States v. Matlock, 38 L.Ed.2d 242 (1974), Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973), State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315 (2018); 9-0.

Seattle v. McCready, 124 Wn.2d 300, 303-308 (1994)

Tenant has sole authority to consent or refuse consent to search of apartment; tenant and lessor have common authority to consent to search of common areas, State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537, 543-4 (1984); 8-0.

State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28, 32-36 (1994)

Landlord has no authority to consent to a search on behalf of a tenant where tenant is in undisputed possession of property unless tenancy has expired, will not be renewed and tenant has been notified landlord will be on premises, State v. Christian, 95 Wn.2d 655, 659 (1981); landlord's limited permission to enter does not translate into a general waiver of privacy; while police may reasonably rely upon a belief of common authority, Illinois v. Rodriguez, 111 L.Ed.2d 148, 161 (1990), a search premised upon an erroneous view of the law will not be validated by the doctrine of apparent authority, see: Stoner v. California, 11 L.Ed.2d 856 (1964); I.

State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669 (1994)

FBI, investigating bombing, go to suspect's home, suspect's mother signs general consent to search but orally consents to a search for evidence of bombing, agents enter suspect's bedroom, observe shotgun, unload it, take it to mother who agrees they can take it, shotgun is later linked to homicide, the res of this appeal; held: removing shotgun from bedroom and unloading it is a seizure, at 680-02, distinguishing Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1971); seizure of shotgun was reasonable, as police conducting a search may briefly seize and secure any weapon for safety, at 682-85, Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S. 692, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981), State v. King, 89 Wn.App. 612, 620 (1998); person who maintains common authority over residence can consent to seizure and removal of any item, even if it was owned by another and not suspected of being evidence of a crime, at 685; but see: State v. Ryland, 120 Wn.2d 325 (1992), State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984); II.

State v. Coutier, 78 Wn.App. 239 (1995)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, defendant doesn't produce registration, officer asks defendant to search glove box, defendant is hesitant, does so but tries to block officer's view of contents of glove compartment, officer, with flashlight, perseveres, sees drugs; held: defendant's blocking view of glove box was not a furtive gesture, rather it was communication of no consent, thus search was improper; III.

State v. Faford, 128 Wn.2d 476, 489 (1996)

Miranda warnings are not a prerequisite to establish consent; state must prove that consent was freely and voluntarily made by clear and convincing evidence, totality of circumstances, State v. Rodriguez, 20 Wn.App. 876 (1978).

State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 71-3 (1996)

Defendant signs consent to search his vehicle while he participates in work release program, is arrested and removed from work release, police search vehicle, find drugs; held: consent to search terminated upon defendant's termination from work release without necessity for him to take specific action to revoke consent; 9-0.

Ohio v. Robinette, 136 L.Ed.2d 347 (1996)

Police stop defendant for speeding, obtain license, warn him, return license, then ask permission to search car, defendant agrees, drugs found; held: police are not obliged to inform detainees that they are free to go before a consent to search may be deemed voluntary, Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973); 8-1.

State v. Davis, 86 Wn.App. 414 (1997)

Police enter room, find video camera focussed on bed, juvenile in bed with defendant, drugs present, defendant signs consent to "take...any letters, papers, materials or any other propery," police seize videotapes, watch them, discover other crimes; held: defendant gave police authority to seize virtually any materials they reasonably believed to be evidence of criminal activity, in light of other evidence of illegal activity in room, police reasonably believed that videotapes might contain incriminating images; II.

State v. Sondergaard, 86 Wn.App. 656 (1997)

Police ask apparently hallucinating person for consent to search purse, she agrees, drugs found, trial court suppresses; held: lack of capacity, by itself, is a sufficient basis on which to find a consent to search involuntary, court need not find an element of police coercion to suppress, distinguishing Colorado v. Connelly, 93 L.Ed.2d 473 (1986); 2-1, I.

State v. King, 89 Wn.App. 612 (1998)

Police obtain consent to search apartment for a gun used in a homicide, enter a bedroom, see defendant in bed covering an item with a sheet which looks like a gun, defendant says it's a gun, police handcuff defendant, seize gun, ask if gun is his, defendant says it is, police call in serial number and discover gun is stolen, advise of Miranda warnings, defendant admits he knows gun is stolen; held: entry of bedroom was within scope of consent, seizure of defendant and gun was reasonable to minimize risk of harm to officers, State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669 (1994), briefly holding gun to check serial number was reasonable, see; State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340, 344 (1993), aff'd in part, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994); II.

State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998)

Where police, without a warrant, seek consent to search a home ("knock and talk"), they must, prior to entering, inform the person from whom consent is sought that s/he may lawfully refuse to consent to the search and that s/he can revoke the consent and limit the scope of the consent at any time, CONST. Art. 1, § 7, State v. Freepons, 147 Wn.App. 689 (2008), State v. Budd, 185 Wn.2d 566 (2016), distinguishing State v. Shoemaker, 85 Wn.2d 207, 212 (1975), Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973), cf.: State v. Bustamante-Davila, 138 Wn.2d 964 (1999), State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 23-28 (2000), State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018); 7-2.

State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 678 (1998)

Wife consents to search of home, husband arrives before search begins, does not consent, police search, find drugs; held: where police have consent from an individual possessing equal control over premises, that consent remains valid against a cohabitant who also possesses equal control only while the cohabitant is absent, State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735, 744 (1989), but where cohabitant is present and does not consent, where police execute search it is valid only against the consenting cohabitant, here the wife, State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257 (2001), State v. White, 141 Wn.App. 128, 134-40 (2007), State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678, 688-89 (2009), State v. Rooney, 190 Wn.App. 653 (2015), see: State v. Walker, 86 Wn.App. 857 (1997); 7-2.

State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998)

Police arrest driver, passenger told to leave vehicle, passenger's purse placed on hood, passenger is not suspected of a crime but police testify that officer would not leave defendant in remote area, police ask if she has drugs and ask if they may search purse, she consents, police find drugs; held: since purse was not in vehicle, it was not subject to search incident to arrest, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Seitz, 86 Wn.App. 865 (1997), State v. Nelson, 89 Wn.App. 179 (1997; police having told defendant to get out of car, placed purse outside her reach, asked if she had drugs, ask for consent to search, reasonable person would believe she was not free to leave, thus defendant was seized, State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20, 22-25 (1992), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), without legal basis, consent was tainted by seizure, cf.: State v. Lee, 7 Wn.App.2d 692 (2019); III.

State v. Bustamante-Davila, 138 Wn.2d 964 (1999)

INS agent, accompanied by local police, go to home to arrest defendant, asks permission to enter which is granted, police enter as well, accompany defendant to bedroom to pack, see rifle, defendant is convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm; held: police did not go to house for "knock and talk" procedure to seek consent to search, so defendant need not be informed of his right to refuse entry, State v. Dancer, 174 Wn.App. 666 (2013), State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018), distinguishing State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), see: State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 23-28 (2000), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860, 871-72 (2014); 5-4.

State v. Leupp, 96 Wn.App. 324 (1999)

Police receive 911 hangup call, go to residence, ask for and receive permission to enter and look for injured person, enter house, one resident hurries towards back room, officer follows, enters room, sees drugs; held: no evidence of coercion, no reason to read Miranda warnings since no one was suspected of a crime, search was within scope of consent, distinguishing State v. Werth, 18 Wn.App. 530 (1977); police had no obligation to advise defendant of his right to decline to consent, as this was not a "knock and talk" situation, State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409, 420-22 (2001), State v. Tagas, 121 Wn.App. 872 (2004), State v. Overholt, 147 Wn.App. 92 (2008), State v. Dancer, 174 Wn.App. 666 (2013), *State v. State v. Avila-Avina, 99 Wn.App. 9 (2000)

Police lawfully stop defendant to investigate shooting, quickly determine he was not a suspect, detain him for four hours, obtain consent to search, find unlawful gun; held: police exploited the extended illegal detention without intervening circumstances and without Miranda warnings, tainting consent, Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S.Ct. 2254, 45 L.Ed.2d 416 (1975), State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388, 397-98 (1986); I.

State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000)

Police are given a coat found by a citizen, defendants in car contact officer, one says that the coat is his, officer states he needs identification of both driver and passenger, officer testifies he was satisfied with driver's identification and ownership of coat, finds warrant for passenger, while retaining coat and driver's identification asks permission to search trunk which is granted, finds drugs; held: retaining coat and license was a seizure without authority, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70 (1988), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), community caretaking function was complete when police were satisfied of ownership, State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509, 513 (1990), consent was tainted by the seizure, State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996); III.

State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 23-28 (2000)

In serving an arrest warrant, police need not inform homeowner or lessor that s/he may refuse consent to enter, State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 489, 504-06 (2001), State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013), State v. Westvang, 184 Wn.App. 1 (2014), distinguishing State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), see: State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.App. 972 (2001), State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018), which is limited to those situations where police seek to conduct a search for contraband or evidence of a crime without obtaining a warrant, State v. Overholt, 147 Wn.App. 92 (2008); 5-4.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409, 420-22 (2001)

Arrested suspect is advised of Miranda warnings, told he could refuse search of house, asks police if they need probable cause to search, is told (accurately) they have probable cause, police threaten to get warrant, suspect signs consent, police find drugs; held: an arrestee can consent, State v. Werth, 18 Wn.App. 530, 535-36 (1977), under totality of circumstances, consent was voluntary; in a non-"knock and talk" context, police need not advise suspect of right to refuse, revoke or limit consent, State v. Leupp, 96 Wn.App. 324 (1999), State v. Bustamante-Davila, 138 Wn.2d 964 (1999), State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 489, 504-06 (2001), State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003), *State v. State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 489, 504-06 (2001)

Where police have a search warrant, they may nevertheless seek consent and not reveal they have the warrant to minimize violence, State v. Myers, 102 Wn.2d 548, 554 (1984); where police have a warrant but seek consent, they need not follow "knock and talk" procedure, distinguishing State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103, 118 (1998); II.

State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.App. 972 (2001)

Police, investigating complaint about drugs in motel room, listen from outside, hear references to "razor" and "smooth," knock, identify themselves and ask to come in, occupant waves officers in, police observe, seize drugs; held: police lacked a warrant, no emergency was being investigated, defendant has same expectation of privacy in motel room as in a home, State v. Davis, 86 Wn.App. 414, 419 (1997), seeking consent to enter is no different from seeking consent to search, thus police were obliged to advise occupants of their right to refuse consent, State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), State v. Budd, 185 Wn.2d 566 (2016), but see: State v.

Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003), distinguishing State v. Bustamante-Davila, 138 Wn.2d 964 (1999), State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17 (2000), cf.: State v. Overholt, 147 Wn.App. 92 (2008), State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013), State v. Witherrite, 184 Wn.App. 859 (2014); 2-1, II.

State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257 (2001)

Housemate consents to police entry of kitchen where defendant is present, police arrest defendant, seize gun they know is stolen; held: one of two cohabitants can validly admit police to a common area with or without the other being present, distinguishing State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735 (1989), State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 678 (1998); test: does one cohabitant of a home assume the risk that an officer will enter that part of the home customarily used to receive guests based only on the consent of a different cohabitant?, United States v. Matlock, 39 L.Ed.2d 242 (1974), State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793, 803-09 (2004), see: State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), State v. White, 141 Wn.App. 128, 134-40 (2007), *Fernandez v. State v. Holmes, 108 Wn.App. 511 (2001)

Police arrest a woman for drugs, arrestee offers to turn in her dealer with whom she lives, she shows police an old bill with an address, computer check shows some contact between arrestee and the address, police take her to the address, she lacks a key, police knock, arrestee consents to entry when door is opened by a third party, police enter, find defendant, seize drugs, later learn arrestee did not live in searched premises; held: while police may rely upon a reasonable belief in the authority of a person giving consent, Illinois v. Rodriguez, 111 L.Ed.2d 148 (1990), but see: State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), here all of the circumstances, particularly where arrestee had no means of access, establish that it was not objectively reasonable for police to believe arrestee had authority, see also: State v. Rison, 116 Wn.App. 955 (2003); I.

United States v. Drayton, 153 L.Ed.2d 242 (2002)

Police board bus, state they are looking for drugs, ask defendant "mind if I check you?," defendant agrees, patdown reveals drugs; held: police are not obliged to advise bus passengers of their right to refuse search as they were not seized, were free to leave, nothing said would suggest to a reasonable person that he was barred from leaving or refusing, Florida v. Bostick, 115 L.Ed.2d 389 (1991), State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 635-39 (2002)

Police, with arrest warrant, obtain permission from lessee to enter apartment to arrest prison escapee, make arrest, seize evidence; held: defendant-guest's expectation of privacy is vitiated by lessee's consent, State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409, 414-15 (1992), distinguishing State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735 (1989); evidence found was in "communal garbage," consent by host is always effective against a guest within the common areas of the premises; affirms, on different grounds, State v. Thang, 103 Wn.App. 660 (2000); 9-0.

State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564, 587-91 (2003)

Initial refusal to consent followed by repeated requests for consent to search are indicators that consent was not voluntary; reverses State v. O'Neill, 104 Wn.App. 850 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003)

Police, looking for a "person of interest," knock, ask if they can talk to resident, person who answers door says come in, police enter, follow person who answers to bedroom, smell marijuana, see drugs, arrest respondent; held: police were not engaged in a "knock and talk," as they were looking for a specific person, thus did not have to advise of right to refuse consent, State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17 (2000), State v. Dancer, 174 Wn.App. 666 (2013), State v. Westvang, 184 Wn.App. 1 (2014), State v. Witherrite, 184 Wn.App. 859 (2014), but see: State v. Freepons, 147 Wn.App. 689 (2008), distinguishing State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.App. 972 (2001), see: State v. Overholt, 147 Wn.App. 92 (2008); affirms State v. Khounvichai, 110 Wn.App. 722 (2002); 7-2.

State v. Rison, 116 Wn.App. 955 (2003)

Police smell marijuana outside apartment, knock, read tenant Ferrier warnings, tenant consents to search, police find eyeglass case belonging to guest, open it, find drugs; held: defendant, as a guest, has legitimate expectation of privacy, Minnesota v. Carter, 142 L.Ed.2d 373 (1998), cf.: State v. Boot, 81 Wn.App. 546 (1996); closed container is protected under Fourth Amendment, State v. Kealey, 80 Wn.App. 162, 170 (1995); tenant did not have actual authority to consent to search of guest's eyeglass case, State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.App. 537 (1984); while police may rely upon apparent authority of person given consent, Illinois v. Rodriguez, 111 L.Ed.2d 148 (1990), but see: State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), here police ordered all guests other than tenant to leave the apartment prior to search, did not seek consent or ask them to remove their personal, property, thus police failed to make reasonable inquiries having found themselves in an ambiguous circumstance, see: State v. Holmes, 108 Wn.App. 511 (2001), thus evidence suppressed; 2-1, III.

State v. Tagas, 121 Wn.App. 872 (2004)

Police stop vehicle on freeway, driver and passenger are not arrested but informed they may not drive further, officer offers a ride, ask to search passenger's purse which is granted, find drugs; held: absent "knock and talk" circumstance in home, police need not advise of right to refuse search, distinguishing State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), cf.: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005); I.

State v. Cole, 122 Wn.App. 319 (2004)

Defendant signs general consent to search her apartment so that her roommate will qualify for electronic home detention; police, having determined that roommate tested positive for drugs and that defendant sold drugs from the apartment and another apartment, search and find drugs; held: defendant validly waived her right to be free from warrantless search; II.

State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004)

Citizen informs police that defendant is forcing him to drive him to buy drugs, asks police to stop and search his vehicle, police stop vehicle at gunpoint, order defendant-passenger to put hands up, observe defendant drop hand to hip area, then raise hands, police find drugs under passenger seat; held: citizen's consent was voluntary, but scope of consent could not extend to seizure of passenger, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), abandoned drugs were not voluntarily relinquished, State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282, 288 (2001), cf.: State v. Evans, 159 Wn.2d 402 (2007), as police lacked probable cause to arrest passenger, State v. Flores, 188 Wn.App. 305 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005)

Police, seeking to serve an arrest warrant upon a woman who they believed was staying at an apartment, knock on apartment door, get permission to enter from a temporary guest, enter master bedroom where defendant-tenant, not the subject of the warrant, is sitting on bed, observe drugs, arrest defendant for drugs, then obtain consent to search from defendant, seize drugs; held: police may not rely upon "apparent authority" granted by temporary guest, CONST. art. I, § 7, cf.: State v. Holmes, 108 Wn.App. 511 (2001), State v. Rison, 116 Wn.App. 955 (2003), Illinois v. Rodriguez, 111 L.Ed.2d 148 (1990), State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984), distinguishing Fourth Amendment analysis which focuses on the reasonableness of government action rather than the rights of the individual; when a cohabitant who has equal or greater authority to control the premises is present, his consent must be obtained, State v. White, 141 Wn.App. 128, 134-40 (2007), State v. Rooney, 190 Wn.App. 653 (2015), and the consent of another of equal or lesser authority is ineffective against the nonconsenting cohabitant; a person is not absent just because the police fail to inquire, are unaware, or are mistaken about the person's presence within the premises; 9-0.

Georgia v. Randolph, 164 L.Ed.2d 208 (2006)

Wife calls police to report her husband's drug possession in family home, when police arrive husband-defendant refuses consent, wife grants consent, police enter and seize drugs; held: physically present inhabitant's express refusal of consent to a police search is dispositive as to him, regardless of the consent of a fellow occupant, Fernandez v. California, 571 U.S. 292, 188 L.Ed.2d 25 (2014), cf.: State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315 (2018), distinguishing United States v. Matlock, 30 L.Ed.2d 242 (1974), Illinois v. Rodriguez, 111 L.Ed.2d 148 (1990); 5-3.

State v. Veltri, 136 Wn.App. 818 (2007)

Police observe truck with mismatched plates, identify driver who lacks a license, officer detains but decides not to cite, passenger consents to search of vehicle, drugs found; held: having dispelled suspicion that truck was stolen and having decided not to issue an infraction, purposes of stop were resolved, police lacked further reasonable articulable suspicion, continued questioning was unlawful thus consent was not validly obtained, State v. Henry, 80 Wn.App. 544, 553 (1995), State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340, 344 (1993), aff'd, on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994); III.

State v. Haapala, 139 Wn.App. 424 (2007)

Lessee, under eviction notice of lessor, consents to search of home, defendant is found in a bedroom with drugs, defendant claims he is a co-habitant with equal rights to control over common areas; held: because defendant was told by lessor that she would not lease to him after the eviction he was a guest not a co-tenant or sub-lessee, and thus lacked equal rights of control and thus he consent was not needed to search, State v. Koepke, 47 Wn.App. 897 (1987), see: State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984), cf.: State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735 (1989), State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 678 (1998); 2-1, II.

State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609, 625-27 (2007)

Police obtain written consent to search before advising defendant of Miranda rights, defendant testifies at suppression hearing that he was deprived of sleep, no inquiry is made as to education or intelligence, trial court finds consent based upon signature on consent form; held: state did not prove by clear and convincing evidence that consent was voluntary, State v. Bustamante-Davila, 138 Wn.2d 964, 981 (1999), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564, 588-89 (2003); III.

State v. Eisfeldt, 163 Wn.2d 628, 638-39 (2008)

Contractor, given key to home by owner, discovers drugs, calls police who enter with contractor's permission, make same observations as contractor, then obtain warrant; held: because a resident does not assume the risk that a contractor would invite others into the house, contractor's consent was invalid; police officer's reasonable belief that contractor had authority to consent to search is irrelevant; 9-0.

State v. Overholt, 147 Wn.App. 92 (2008)

Wildlife Officer follows trail from cow elk gut piles to defendant's home, observes blood on floor of carport, defendant approaches officer in driveway, officer asks about elk guts, blood, tracks, asks to see elk, defendant leads officer to shed, opens door, shows elk, defendant is charged with game violation; held: because officer was in fresh pursuit of criminal activity, did not enter property with intent of obtaining consent to search to evade a warrant, did not even enter home, thus was not obliged to advise of right to refuse consent, distinguishing State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103, 118 (1998); III.

State v. Freepons, 147 Wn.App. 689 (2008)

Police, investigating an accident and possible DUI, go to a house looking for the registered owner, knock, advise person who answers of Miranda warnings, occupant denies owner is present, police ask to search for owner, occupant agrees, police enter, find drugs; held: where police are investigating a crime, they are obliged to advise of right to refuse consent, State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), State v. Budd, 185 Wn.2d 566 (2016), but see: State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003), State v. Witherrite, 184 Wn.App. 859 (2014); III, 2-1.

State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009)

Officer observes defendant walking, approaches, asks to talk, defendant says he's coming from his sister's house, doesn't know address, bulges in pockets, fidgety, hands in pocket, trooper approaches, officer asks to pat defendant down, telling him he is not under arrest, defendant agrees, officer feels hard cylinder, asks what it is, defendant responds it's his meth pipe, defendant is arrested, drugs found; held: while initial contact was not a seizure, sudden arrival of second officer, request to remove hands from pockets, request to frisk would all lead a reasonable person to feel he was not free to leave, State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011), State v. Butler, 2 Wn.App. ad 549, 560-61 (2018), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), cf.:

State v. Smith, 154 wn.App. 695 (2010), thus consent to search was obtained through exploitation of a prior illegal seizure requiring suppression; reverses State v. Harrington 144 Wn.App. 558 (2008), see: State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), United States v. Mendenhall, 64 L.Ed.2d 497 (1980), State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), cf.: State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706, 712 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746 (2011)

Police respond to call about neighbors yelling, arrive at apartment, hear man and woman with raised voices, knock, defendant-woman answers, appears agitated and flustered, denies anyone is there, when challenged she calls for man who emerges from bedroom, defendant steps aside and opens door wider, police enter, notice neck is red and blotchy, defendant denies anything physical, fidgets and picks up things, is warned not to, continues to pick up things, officer notices handgun and marijuana pipe, asks to search for drugs, defendant agrees, is arrested for use of drug paraphernalia, revokes consent to search, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: mere acquiescence is not consent, citizens do not waive right to privacy by failing to object, State v. Browning, 67 Wn.App. 93 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Monaghan, 165 Wn.App. 782 (2012)

Defendant consents to search of car trunk, police find locked container, open it, seize drugs; held: a consensual search cannot exceed the scope of the consent which, here, did not extend to a locked container within the trunk of the car, distinguishing State v. Mueller, 63 Wn.App. 720 (1992); I.

State v. Libero, 168 Wn.App. 612 (2012)

Police receive consent of one of two inhabitants present to search, find drugs, charge defendant-guest who maintains that he has automatic standing to assert non-consenting inhabitant's right to privacy; held: while guest who is charged with possession has automatic standing to challenge the search, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980), the search's invalidity as to the inhabitant is not rendered invalid as to the guest, State v. Shuffelen, 160 Wn.App. 244, 255 (2009); II.

State v. Dancer, 174 Wn.App. 666 (2013)

Police, seeking a domestic violence suspect, ask defendant's permission to search without providing Miranda warnings or warnings per State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), enter home, find drugs; held: Ferrier rule does not apply where police seek consent to search for a person whom the police believe is on the premises and trial court finds voluntary consent to enter, State v. Bustamante-Davila, 138 Wn.2d 964, 982-83 (1999), State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003), State v. Westvang, 184 Wn.App. 1 (2014), State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018), cf.: State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013); II.

Fernandez v. California, 571 U.S. 292, 188 L.Ed.2d 25 (2014)

Investigating domestic violence police knock, bloody woman answers, defendant comes to door and orders police away, defendant is arrested for domestic violence and removed, woman consents to search an hour later, evidence of a robbery is found; held: where there are two or more occupants of a home one occupant may consent to a search unless an objecting occupant is physically present and expressly refuses consent, Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103, 164 L.Ed.2d 208 (2006), United States v. Matlock, 415 U.S. 164, 39 L.Ed.2d 242 (1974); while removal of the objecting resident, if objectively unreasonable, e.g., for the purpose of defeating consent, could preclude entry and search, here the arrest was objectively reasonable, and an occupant who has been properly arrested is in the same shoes as an occupant who is not present for any other reason; the fact that defendant objected earlier does not defeat the later consent; 6-3.

State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014)

Officer stops defendant for a bicycle infraction, recognizes him as a week earlier defendant denied he had a weapon but during prior stop officer found a loaded derringer, officer frisks, feels small hard container that he knew was not a gun, asks "do you mind if I take it out?", defendant says okay, removes box, opens it, finds drugs; held: none of the consent factors (1) Miranda warnings, (2) education and intelligence, (3) advice of right not to consent, State v. Shoemaker, 85 Wn.2d 207, 212 (1975), were established at suppression hearing, no evidence consent was voluntary, trial court's finding of consent lacks substantial evidence, cf.: State v. Bustamante-Davila, 138 Wn.2d 964 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Hamilton, 179 Wn.App. 870 (2014)

Defendant-wife is served with no contact order in her home, police arrive and ask her to come outside, husband-protected party hands purse to police saying that it contains drugs, police search and find drugs; held: husband had no possessory interest in the purse other than that it was left in his house, had no authority to consent to search the purse, particularly when defendant was present, cf.: State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1, 13-14 (2005); II.

State v. Westvang, 184 Wn.App. 1 (2014)

Police, looking to serve an arrest warrant on a third party, ask defendant for permission to look, defendant consents to enter, police do not inform defendant she can terminate search at any time, State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), find drugs; held: knock and talk warnings are not required when police request consent to execute an arrest warrant, State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013), see: State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018); on remand Division II reconsiders and reverses State v. Westvang, 174 Wn.App. 913 (2013).

State v. Witherrite, 184 Wn.App. 859 (2014)

Police need not provide warnings pursuant to State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998) to obtain consent to search a car, see: State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003); III.

State v. Rooney, 190 Wn.App. 653 (2015)

CCO with DOC warrant enter a home with police, enter bedroom of subject of the warrant, arrest subject, defendant is co-habitant of the room who objects to search, police search and find drugs and sees lots of swords and knives, defendant asks to dress, police search pants before defendant puts them on, finds a gun which defendant may not possess, is charged with drugs and VUFA; held: a probationer may be searched without a warrant not as an exception to the warrant requirement, but because a probationer must consent to a search, RCW

9.94A.631(1), but a cohabitant with common authority over the premises who is present and who objects has the right to require a warrant, State v. Morse, 156 Wn.2d 1 (2005), thus drugs suppressed; frisk of defendant's pants was valid for safety reasons due to weapons in room; II.

State v. Cherry, 191 Wn.App. 456, 469-71 (2015)

Defendant is arrested, advised of Miranda warnings, invokes, is later asked for consent to search his car which defendant grants stating that there were no drugs in the car; held: because Miranda warnings are not required before asking for consent to search, State v. Silvernail, 25 Wn.App. 185, 191 (1980), but see: State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466 (2009), request for consent to search after defendant invokes right to remain silent does not violate defendant's Fifth Amendment rights; statement about drugs was not made in response to questioning likely to elicit an incriminating response; III.

State v. Budd, 185 Wn.2d 566 (2016)

Police, without probable cause, confront defendant outside his home, inform him they want to seize and search his computer for child pornography, defendant agrees and consents to entry, inside police provide State v. Ferrier warnings, defendant acknowledges and agrees, police take computer; held: a knock and talk requires that the police advise defendant of Ferrier warnings prior to entry thus computer must be suppressed; affirms State v. Budd, 186 Wn.App. 184 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Vanhollebeke, 190 Wn.2d 315, 412 P.3d 1274 (2018

Defendant in vehicle is stopped for infraction, police observe punched ignition and drug paraphernalia, defendant leaves vehicle and locks it, does not have a key, refuses consent to search, police contact owner, obtain key, search, seize gun, defendant charged with unlawful possession of a firearm; held: driver of a vehicle does not ordinarily assume the risk that the owner will consent to search, State v. Mathe, 102 Wn.2d 537 (1984), but where the police have good cause to believe that the vehicle is stolen, based here upon punched ignition and lack of a key, then the driver has assumed the risk that the absent owner may consent, thus motion to suppress is properly denied; affirms State v. Vanhollebeke, 197 Wn.App. 66 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018)

Police receive report of assault in a home, at door of home officers advise that they are seeking information about an assault, tenant invites them in, says they can search anything, officers do protective sweep, observe defendant with drugs, seize and arrest; held: police only intended to question about the assault, not to do a consensual search for evidence thus "knock and talk" warnings, State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103 (1998), need not be given, State v. Khounvichai, 149 Wn.2d 557 (2003); tenant's unambiguous consent allowed full sweep of apartment, so supreme court need not determine whether protective sweep, Maryland v. Buie, 494 U.S. 325, 110 S.Ct. 1093, 108 L.Ed. 2d 276 (1990), was proper; affirms State v. Blockman, 198 Wn.App. 34, 39 (2017), which held that an arrest is not a prerequisite for conducting a protective sweep, but see: State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954, 959-60 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Lee, 7 Wn.App.2d 692 (2019)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, arrest driver for suspended license, run defendant-passenger's name to see if she is licensed to drive the car away, discover she has a drug conviction, ask her if she will consent to search her purse left in car, advising her she can refuse, defendant consents, drugs found; held: during a traffic stop the driver and passengers are all lawfully seized, State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 910 (2009), Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), but see: State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), running passenger's name was reasonable as she had agreed to drive car, id., asking a lawfully seized person if she would consent to a search of an item left in a car after she knew officers would search the car was reasonable, cf.: State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), officer's mention of defendant's drug conviction does not vitiate consent; I.

State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021)

Homeland Security agent arrests a drug dealer who gives them permission to search his cell phone, discover texts between arrestee and defendant regarding drugs, agent uses his own cell phone to contact defendant posing as arrestee, defendant agrees to meet, is arrested, drugs found; held: while defendant had a privacy interest in the text messages he sent to the arrestee, texts sent to defendant by agent did not "physically invade" defendant's cell phone, ruse merely capitalized on validly obtained information from the consenting arrestee, distinguishing State v. Hinton, 179 Wn.2d 862, 876-77 (2014); while defendant has a privacy interest in the texts he sent to the arrestee, Hinton, supra., at 865; agent's ruse in posing as the arrestee does not violate defendant's privacy rights under U.S. or state constitution, Hoffa v. United States, 385 U.S. 293, 302, 87 S. Ct. 408, 17 L. Ed. 2d 374 (1966), State v. Goucher, 124 Wn.2d 778 (1994); sending uninvited text messages as a ruse is not a trespass on defendant's cell phone as there is no physical invasion; reverses State v. Bowman, 14 Wn.App.2d 562 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Meredith, 18 Wn.App.2d 499, rev. granted, 198 Wn.2d 1026 (2021)

Defendant boards bus, officer requires proof of payment which defendant lacks, is removed from bus and provides false name, is convicted of making a false statement to a public servant; held: by boarding a public bus defendant consented to conditions of ridership, including paying bus fare and complying with a request for proof, RCW 81.112.210; I.

Emergency/Community Caretaking Function

State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18 (1989)

Police, responding to a 911 hang-up call, contact defendant outside residence, observe cut on defendant's head, defendant states he had a fight with his wife who was not in residence, refuses officer's request to enter; officer enters, finds marijuana; held: emergency exception requires state to prove (1) the searching officer subjectively believed an emergency existed and (2) a reasonable person in the same circumstances would have thought an emergency existed, State v. Loewen, 97 Wn.2d 562, 568 (1982), State v. Downey, 53 Wn.App. 543 (1989), State v. McAlpin, 36 Wn.App. 707, 716 (1984), State v. Swenson, 59 Wn.App. 586 (1990), State v. Hos, 154 Wn.App. 238, 246-49 (2010); here, officer's concern for safety of wife justified entry without warrant, cf.: State v. Morgavi, 58 Wn.App. 733 (1990); see: State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267 (1993), State v. Dempsey, 88 Wn.App. 918 (1997), State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409 (2001), State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685, 695 (2007), *State v. State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990)

Police stop vehicle for speeding, determine driver is drunk, ask passenger if he wishes to drive vehicle from scene in lieu of impound, passenger agrees, officer orders passenger to return to and remain in vehicle, requests driver's license from passenger, runs computer check, finds warrant, arrests passenger, searches, finds drugs; held: directing passenger to remain in vehicle was not a detention, reversing State v. Mennegar, 53 Wn.App. 257 (1989), as a reasonable person would not have believed himself to be detained, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706 (1993), but see: State v. Gleason, 70 Wn.App. 13 (1993), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), as passenger had agreed to drive vehicle away; requesting passenger's license was reasonable, as passenger was free to refuse, *State v. State v. Hutchison, 56 Wn.App. 863 (1990)

Police officer, finding defendant lying in a parking lot in a stupor, doesn't believe he needs medical attention but concludes he would be in danger if left in lot, searches pockets for identification, finds drugs; held: because officer reasonably believed defendant would be in danger if left, search for identification to determine what should be done with defendant was reasonable under community caretaking function, State v. Chisholm, 39 Wn.App. 864 (1985), State v. Lynch, 84 Wn.App. 467, 477-9 (1996), State v. Angelos, 86 Wn.App. 253 (1997), see: State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000), cf.: State v. Harris, 9 Wn.App.2d 625 (2019), State v. Boisselle, 194 Wn.2d 1 (2019); reasonable, good faith search by police of persons not in need of immediate professional medical treatment but who are in danger and in need of help is permissible, State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994), see: State v. Lawson, 135 Wn.App. 430 (2006), State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678 (2009); II.

State v. Barbosa, 57 Wn.App. 822 (1990)

Police receive complaint of armed kidnapping from residence, observe bullet hole in car; complainant tells police that kidnappers left and they should not enter the home; police enter, observe drugs; held: emergency doctrine to make sure no one had been shot and no assailant was in the house justifies entry in spite of complainant's claim that no one was there, State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409 (2001), see: State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746 (2011), as complainant "may have been upset and confused, or there may have been someone there unbeknownst to her"; I.

State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509 (1990)

Police receive report of a vehicle parked for hours occupied by a female who might be in trouble; at scene, police observe vehicle, two males inside, inquire, driver states "we're looking at the [city] lights"; police observe dazed expression, ask for identification, police observe drug paraphernalia, search, find drugs; held: initial inquiry was minimal and reasonable under community caretaking function, State v. Chisholm, 39 Wn.App. 864 (1985); further intrusion of request for identification, while minimal, was based solely upon "dazed expression," and was thus unreasonable, but see: State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1997), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), as no crime had been reported, no investigation was in progress, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733 (1984), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000), State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000), State v. Lawson, 135 Wn.App. 430 (2006), State v. Harris, 9 Wn.App.2d 625 (2019), see also: State v. White, 141 Wn.App. 128, 140-43 (2007); III.

State v. Swenson, 59 Wn.App. 586 (1990)

Police, responding to neighbor's call reporting that defendant's front door is open at 2:30 a.m., enter residence looking for burglar, find drugs; held: while probable cause under the emergency exception is not required, here there were no facts upon which the officer could conclude that a person was inside needing medical care, nor that a crime had been or was being committed, thus suppressed, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 21 (1989), State v. Bakke, 44 Wn.App. 830, 834 (1987), State v. Campbell, 15 Wn.App. 98 (1976), State v. Muir, 67 Wn.App. 149 (1992), State v. Leffler, 142 Wn.App. 175 (2007), State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678 (2009), see: State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994), State v. Davis, 86 Wn.App. 414, 420-3 (1997); I.

State v. Cahoon, 59 Wn.App. 606 (1990)

Defendant calls ambulance, informs emergency medical technicians (EMT) she took "crank," and it was in the kitchen; EMTs search kitchen, find crank and other drugs, call police; held: warrantless search was reasonable as (1) officer was motivated by perceived need to render aid and (2) a reasonable person would have thought emergency existed, State v. Loewen, 97 Wn.2d 562 (1982), State v. Muir, 67 Wn.App. 149 (1992), State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994); III.

State v. Lowrimore, 67 Wn.App. 949 (1992)

Dispatch reports that suspect fought with her mother, possessed knives, threatened suicide; police arrive at scene, find defendant upset, denies intent to kill herself, detain defendant, search, find drugs; held: information and observation of defendant's highly unstable state justifies belief that she was suffering from a mental disorder, information about knives justifies belief that there was an imminent likelihood of serious harm permitting detention for possible civil commitment, RCW 71.05.150, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18 (1989); search for weapons in purse was lawful, as limitations on a patdown incident to a Terry stop do not control in emergency noncriminal investigation situation, Lynd, supra., at 21, State v. Dempsey, 88 Wn.App. 918, 924-5 (1997), cf.: State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015); upon finding drug paraphernalia in purse, officer had probable cause to search a closed pouch within purse, State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675 (1992), but see: State v. McKenney, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998); I.

State v. Hill, 68 Wn.App. 300 (1993)

Police stop vehicle for no headlight, smell intoxicants, see open container of alcohol, arrest passenger for felony warrants, determine defendant-driver is not legally intoxicated, ask to search vehicle, which is denied, impound vehicle, find drugs; held: vehicle was neither abandoned, nor impeding traffic, but was partially blocking a sidewalk, police did not seek to determine if someone was available to take responsibility for vehicle, thus community caretaking function does not authorize impoundment; III.

State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 274-8 (1993)

Police, investigating report from relative of missing elderly woman, enter victim's apartment without warrant, smell decaying flesh from closed room, enter room belonging to defendant, find body; held: under emergency medical exception, police (1) subjectively believed someone likely needed assistance for health or safety reasons, (2) reasonable person would so similarly believe, and (3) there was a reasonable basis to associate need for assistance with the place searched, State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913 (2015), State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 20-1 (1989), State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994), State v. Angelos, 86 Wn.App. 253 (1997), State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-25 (2008), see: State v. Loewen, 97 Wn.2d 562, 568 (1982), State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685, 695 (2007), State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678 (2009); discovery of odor emanating from closed room falls within plain view exception; I.

State v. Lynch, 84 Wn.App. 467, 477-9 (1996)

Police receive report of car prowl, respond to vehicle, find it unlocked, open door, look for ownership documents, pick up checkbook, find drugs; held: search of van was reasonable under community caretaking function, State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990), State v. Hutchison, 56 Wn.App. 863 (1990); less intrusive alternative of checking ownership via license plate is "apparent from the advantage of hindsight, but is not necessarily a proper 'gauge by which to judge the officer's actions' "; III.

State v. Angelos, 86 Wn.App. 253 (1997)

Defendant calls 911, reports drug overdose, police accompany EMTs into home and, upon learning children live in home, search for and find drugs in bathroom after defendant is taken to hospital; held: officer reasonably believed drugs might present a safety hazard to children, reasonable person would similarly so believe, reasonable basis to associate need for assistance with place to be searched under emergency medical exception, State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 274-8 (1993), State v. Hutchison, 56 Wn.App. 863 (1990), State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 21 (1989), State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409 (2001), State v. Gibson, 104 Wn.App. 792 (2001), State v. Smith, 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009), see: State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685, 695 (2007), distinguishing State v. Loewen, 97 Wn.2d 562 (1982); I.

State v. Davis, 86 Wn.App. 414 (1997)

Defendant in motel for several days, pays each day hours after checkout time, after checkout time does not respond to knocks or phone calls, manager calls police, police knock, hear dog sniffing but no response, enter with pass key, find defendant who consents to search of room, police find drugs and videos, police view videos which contain evidence of other crimes; held: defendant had reasonable expectation of privacy in room in light of the fact that he was present, had paid late before, it was only an hour after checkout time, at 419, distinguishing State v. Christian, 95 Wn.2d 655, 660-1 (1981); police entry is minimally sufficient for application of medical emergency exception, at 420-3. distinguishing State v. Swenson, 59 Wn.App. 586, 588-90 (1990); II.

State v. Dempsey, 88 Wn.App. 918 (1997)

Distraught, out of control defendant is taken into custody by police for possible civil commitment, search of pocket finds knife and drugs; held: state must prove both subjective and objective motivation by police to render aid, State v. Angelos, 86 Wn.App. 253, 256 (1997), State v. Loewen, 97 Wn.2d 562, 568 (1982), primary motivation must not be to arrest and seize evidence, thus pretext doctrine remains viable for medical emergency exception, distinguishing Whren v. United States, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996); search incident to a civil commitment is broader than a Terry patdown, emergency situation exception permits search to whatever extent is objectively reasonable, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 21-2 (1989), State v. Lowrimore, 67 Wn.App. 949, 956-7 (1992); here, police reasonably believed defendant was a threat to himself and others, search for weapons and drugs with which defendant might harm himself was lawful, cf.: State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015); III.

State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000)

Police observe girl whom they believe to be 11-13 years old in high crime area late at night with adults known to be associated with drugs, hail her, she walks away, restrain her, observe drugs; held: community caretaking function may not be used as a pretext for a criminal investigation; balancing a citizen's privacy interest in freedom from police intrusion against public interest in having police perform caretaking, privacy must prevail, State v. Harris, 9 Wn.App.2d 625 (2019); police may conduct noncriminal investigation as long as it is necessary and strictly relevant to performance of caretaking function, State v. Boisselle, 194 Wn.2d 1 (2019), State v. Lawson, 135 Wn.App. 430 (2006), State v. Leffler, 142 Wn.App. 175 (2007), cf.: State v. Acrey, 148 Wn.2d 738 (2003), see: State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533 (2013), State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); 5-4.

State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000)

Police are given a coat found by a citizen, defendants in a car contact officer, one says that the coat is his, officer states he needs identification of both driver and passenger, officer testifies he was satisfied with driver's identification and ownership of coat, finds warrant for passenger, while retaining coat and driver's identification asks permission to search trunk which is granted, finds drugs; held: retaining coat and license was a seizure without authority, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70 (1988), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), cf.: State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000), community caretaking function was complete when police were satisfied of ownership, State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509, 513 (1990), consent was tainted by the seizure, State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996); III.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409 (2001)

Police respond to domestic violence call, defendant exits the house, is arrested, officers knock on door, bloody victim answers and appears to be about to exit, officer tells her to remain and enters, smells marijuana, asks defendant for consent, defendant is advised of Miranda warnings and told he can refuse but police say they will get warrant, defendant consents, drugs found; held: state constitution does not provide greater protection under emergency exception, State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 276-77 (1993), State v. Hos, 154 Wn.App. 238, 246-49 (2010), see: Brigham City v. Stuart, 164 L.Ed.2d 650 (2006); after accounting for one victim of violence, police may search for additional victims, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 19 (1989), police were not obliged to ask victim if other victims were present before entering because domestic violence victims are sometimes uncooperative fearing retribution, State v. Jacobs, 101 Wn.App. 80, 84 (2000), thus officer's subjective belief that an emergency existed was objectively reasonable, cf.: State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678 (2009), State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746 (2011); II.

State v. Gibson, 104 Wn.App. 792 (2001)

Police respond to report that babysitter was smoking marijuana, knock, defendant comes onto porch, closes door behind her, police smell marijuana, defendant admits smoking marijuana, police enter house to ensure children's safety, find marijuana and a child, ask defendant for other drugs, she goes into a back bedroom and, after five minutes, officer enters bedroom, sees more marijuana; held: emergency exception justified entry as police had a legitimate concern that defendant was unfit to care for children and that children may have had access to drugs, State v. Angelos, 86 Wn.App. 253(1997); officer going to back bedroom was proper as exigency was continuing and officer's conduct was "aimed at controlling these circumstances," at 799; II.

State v. Thompson, 112 Wn.App. 787, 797-99 (2002), rev'd, on other grounds, 151 Wn.2d 793 (2004)

Following arrest of suspect and observation by arresting officer of possible meth lab, "clandestine lab investigator" is called to property, looks in burn barrel and burn piles, observes evidence of meth lab, determines property is "fairly safe," secures it and obtains warrant; held: given investigator's experience and potential danger, limited search of barrel and piles were reasonable, State v. Downey, 53 Wn.App. 543 (1989); 2-1, II.

State v. Acrey, 148 Wn.2d 738 (2003)

Police are called to report of juveniles fighting at 12:40 a.m., spot five boys, determine they have not been fighting, get home telephone number from 12-year old respondent, call mother who asks police to drive respondent home, police patdown respondent before putting him in car, find drugs; held: community caretaking function justifies intrusion beyond initial investigative contact, balancing respondent's interest in freedom with public's interest in caretaking juvenile, detention was valid, distinguishing State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000), but see: State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015), State v. Boisselle, 194 Wn.2d 1 (2019), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); I.

State v. Schlieker, 115 Wn.App. 264 (2003)

Police, investigating report of a gunshot, are informed by residents where shot was reported that people in trailer on property were involved in drug activity; police go towards trailer, two men leave in a car and attempt to flee, police enter trailer, handcuff two people inside, find meth lab; held: police claim that they entered trailer because someone might be injured was a pretext for a search without a warrant, no substantial evidence supports claim that police subjectively believed someone inside needed assistance, State v. Lawson, 135 Wn.App. 430 (2006), State v. Leffler, 142 Wn.App. 175 (2007), State v. White, 141 Wn.App. 128, 140-43 (2007); II.

State v. Moore, 129 Wn.App. 870 (2005)

Officer checks license plate of a vehicle that almost collided with her, finds from database that owner is "missing/endangered," stops vehicle, all in car state that they are not the registered owner, officer asks for identification of driver and passengers, defendant-passenger gives an alias, officer runs name and discovers that name given is an alias for defendant who has a felony warrant and that he has described tattoos, officer demands defendant show his forearms, see matching tattoos, arrest, search, find drugs; held: initial stop and checking identification, while a seizure, was proper as a health and safety check as police were entitled to fully dispel concerns about the owner, see: State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913 (2015), distinguishing State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000); demanding exposure of defendant's forearms was a minimal intrusion designed to confirm the identity of a person with a warrant, thus was proper, see: State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987); I.

Brigham City v. Stuart, 164 L.Ed.2d 650 (2006)

Police respond to call of loud party, observe from outside juvenile strike an adult who spits blood, adults struggling with the juvenile, enter, arrest for contributing to the delinquency of a minor, disorderly conduct and intoxication, trial court and Utah appellate courts hold that injury caused by punch was insufficient to meet emergency aid doctrine because it did not give rise to an objectively reasonable belief that an unconscious, semi-conscious or missing person feared injured or dead was in the home and because oficers had not entered to assist the injured adult but had acted in their law enforcement capacity; held: subjective motivation of police is irrelevant, see: Bond v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 365 (2000), Graham v. Connor, 104 L.Ed.2d 443 (1989); test under Fourth Amendment is whether the circumstances, viewed objectively, justify the action, Michigan v. Fisher, 558 U.S.46, 175 L.Ed.2d 410 (2009); here, officers were confronted with ongoing violence within the home, thus entry was lawful as officers had an objectively reasonable basis for believing both that the injured adult might need help and that the violence was just beginning; 9-0.

State v. Lawson, 135 Wn.App. 430 (2006)

Anonymous caller reports chemical smell from defendant's residence, police arrive, see defendant near a shed, explain about odor, ask to search shed, defendant says yes, as they approach shed smell odor, enter, discover meth lab, arrest, find drugs on defendant; held: police were acting on "a potential danger the community" rather than on a specific belief that someone needed immediate help, a necessary step in authorizing an emergency entry into the shed, State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000), State v. Schlieker, 115 Wn.App. 264 (2003), absence of "knock and talk" warnings, State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103, 118-19 (1998) vitiates consent; 2-1, III.

State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685, 696 (2007)

Officer approaches apartment to investigate meth lab, smells acetone and hears fan, knocks on front door, two children arrive behind him and open door, officer enters, announces presence, sees drugs, trial court finds that primary motivation was to search for evidence; held: community caretaking function must be divorced from a criminal investigation, State v. Kypreos, 115 Wn.App. 207, 217 (2002), where officer's primary motive is to search for evidence, even if a secondary motive is safety, there is no exception to warrant requirement; II.

State v. Leffler, 142 Wn.App. 175 (2007)

Police receive anonymous complaint of strong chemical smells at a trailer, police arrive, smell harsh chemical smell, knock, defendant exits trailer and shuts door behind him, police discover warrant and arrest, defendant states that there is meth manufacturing in trailer, police call defendant's CCO who says he is authorized to search as a DOC condition, defendant refuses consent, police call in Clandestine Lab Team who enter and find drugs; held: to invoke emergency exception to warrant requirement, state must show that there is a substantial risk of serious injury to persons or property, State v. Schlieker, 115 Wn.App. 264, 272 (2003) and that the risk to persons or property must be imminent, State v. Downey, 53 Wn.App. 543, 544-45 (1989); here, because police had no information indicating presence of other persons on the property and no reason to believe that any person or property was under imminent threat, police should have obtained a warrant, emergency exception does not apply; prior op. at 140 Wn.App. 223 withdrawn; II.

State v. Ibarra-Raya, 145 Wn.App. 516 (2008), rev'd, on other grounds, 172 Wn.2d 880 (2011)

Police receive report that a house that "looked vacant during the day" was noisy, officers arrive, observe truck with a temporary permit, VIN check comes back "stolen," police knock, order people who respond to remain in the house, enter, see drugs, then learn that it was the license plates that had been stolen, not the truck and that defendant was leasing the house, obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: absent an immediate risk to health or safety, police had no legal basis to enter the house, thus evidence suppressed; III.

State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-35 (2008)

Knowledge by police that a 14-year old girl was missing for some time, suspected to be involved in sadomasochistic sex, inside home of older man who came slowly to the door, sweating and surprised support subjective belief that minor was in danger, justifying emergency entry, State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 276-77 (1993); 2-1, II.

State v. Smith, 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009)

Police, investigating theft of tanker truck containing anyhdrous ammonia, discover truck near house, see rifle through window, arrest occupants, police then see that rifle is missing, enter house for "safety sweep," search for places where a person could be hiding, observe evidence of meth lab, obtain warrant, seize drugs and lab; held: exigent circumstances of danger to police and public, fear that a person hiding in the house whould shoot officers or shoot the tanker of ammonia support entry and search under community caretaking function, State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400, 406 (2002), State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 953-58 (2009); affirms State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262 (2007); 6-3.

State v. Williams, 148 Wn.App. 678 (2009)

Police respond to disturbance call outside hotel, speak with a man who says his nephew was "being violent" with him and wanted him removed from his hotel room, police approach room, enter with complainant, find drugs; held: emergency exception justifies a warrantless entry when (1) officer subjectively believes there is an immediate risk to health or safety, (2) a reasonable person would come to same conclusion and (3) there is a reasonable basis to associate the emergency situation with the place searched, State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267 (1993); here, there was no concern that somebody inside the room was in immediate danger, thus emergency exception is inapplicable, entry was unlawful; 2-1, II.

State v. Hos, 154 Wn.App. 238, 246-49 (2010)

Officers accompanying CPS social worker knock, look through window, see defendant sitting, eyes closed, head on chest, pound on door louder, no response, enters unlocked front door, yell, no response, enter, find drugs; held: community caretaking function is valid, CONST., art. I § 7, cf.: State v. Harris, 9 Wn.App.2d 625 (2019); police need not use least intrusive means, State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409, 415 (2001); II.

Michigan v. Fisher, 558 U.S. 45, 175 L.Ed.2d 410 (2009)

Police, responding to disturbance call of man "going crazy," see smashed truck, damaged property, windows broken from the inside, blood on truck, on clothes in the truck and on door to house, see defendant inside screaming and throwing things, knock on door, are ignored, observe blood on defendant, enter and find defendant pointing a gun, trial court suppresses officers' observation of defendant pointing rifle; held: police do not need proof of serious, life-threatening injury to invoke emergency aid exception, Brigham City v. Stuart, 547 U.S. 398, 164 L.Ed.2d 650 (2006); test is whether there was an objectively reasonable basis of believing that medical assistance was needed or persons were in danger, Mincey v. Arizona, 437 U.S. 385, 392, 57 L.Ed.2d 1068 (2004); fact that police did not summon medical personnel has no bearing upon their need to assure that defendant was not endangering someone else; 7-2.

State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746 (2011)

Police respond to call about neighbors yelling, arrive at apartment, hear man and woman with raised voices, knock, defendant-woman answers, appears agitated and flustered, denies anyone is there, when challenged she calls for man who emerges from bedroom, defendant steps aside and opens door wider, police enter, notice neck is red and blotchy, defendant denies anything physical, fidgets and picks up things, is warned not to, continues to pick up things, officer notices handgun and marijuana pipe, asks to search for drugs, defendant agrees, is arrested for use of drug paraphernalia, revokes consent to search, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: domestic violence is an important factor in evaluating subjective belief of officer that someone needs assistance and in assessing reasonableness of belief of an imminent threat of injury, see: State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409 (2001), State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994), here there was insufficient evidence that an emergency existed, cf.: State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913 (2015), thus warrantless entry was improper, acquiescence is not consent; 5-4.

State v. Smith,177 Wn.2d 533 (2013)

Police unlawfully run names in a motel registry to check for warrants, State v. Jorden, 160 Wn.2d 121 (2007), arrest defendant at threshold of motel room, see bloodied victims in room, enter room, rescue victims who tell police about evidence in a dumpster which police search and seize without warrants, trial court admits evidence under inevitable discovery doctrine, later invalidated, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009), Court of Appeals affirms under attenuation and independent source doctrine, State v. Smith, 165 Wn.App. 296 (2011); held: police presence at room door was the fruit of the unlawful motel registry search, thus independent source doctrine does not justify entry, but community caretaking and need to render emergency aid do justify entry, State v. Acrey, 148 Wn.2d 738, 748 (2003), search was not motivated by any investigatory purpose, victims were in plain view, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18, 19-23 (1989), State v. Stevenson, 55 Wn.App. 725 (1989), evidence in dumpster was discovered from victim's information volunteered contemporaneous with efforts to render aid; willing victim's testimony is not amenable to suppression; 8-1.

State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913 (2015)

Teenage twins report abuse to therapists who reports it to CPS who interview twins at home, assess that they are unsafe, call police who knock, advise defendant-parent they wish to perform welfare check and ask to come in, mother steps back from door, officers enter, ask twins to speak with them privately, go to garage, twins advise they were beaten with a board, officer sees board in garage, ask if that is the board with which they were beaten, victim says it is, observe what appears to be dried blood, seize board; held: health and safety check exception to warrant requirement obliges state to show (1) officer subjectively believed someone needed health or safety assistance, (2) reasonable person would believe there was a need for assistance, (3) there was a reasonable basis to associate the need for assistance with the place searched, State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793 (2004), State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 277-9 (1993), State v. Moore, 129 Wn.App. 870 (2005); here, trained CPS investigator relayed opinion that children were not safe, were in the residence, there was no pretextual purpose in entering garage, entry was "totally divorced from a criminal investigation," at 924 ¶ 9, police were in garage lawfully, board was in plain view thus properly seized; II.

State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015)

Mother reports 15 year old son ran away, officer finds him, detains intending to take him to secure facility for juveniles pursuant to Family Reconciliation Act, RCW 13.32A.050(2), knows facility requires full search so on street searches and finds drugs; held: unlike detention pursuant to involuntary treatment act, ch. 13.32A RCW, State v. Dempsey, 88 Wn.App. 918 (1997), detainee here did not pose imminent threat of harm thus pat-down strictly for weapons was sufficient to protect officer, State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000) cf.: State v. Acrey, 148 Wn.2d 738 (2003); III.

State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016)

Following a report of someone in a white car shooting into a home police stop white car, remove occupants at gunpoint, handcuff and secure in police cars, open car's doors, find gun, remove gun, tow car, subsequently obtain search warrant; held: warrantless search of vehicle for evidence once vehicle's occupants are detained in police cars is improper, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 197-201 (2012); where there is reasonable suspicion that there is an unsecured gun in a vehicle that will be impounded and towed, police may make a limited sweep of the vehicle to obtain the gun to avoid accidental discharge under community caretaking function; 9-0.

State v. Boisselle, 194 Wn.2d 1 (2019)

Police receive anonymous phone call stating that someone was shot at an address, previously police had information that identified defendant-resident as a homicide suspect, at house no one answers, police smell foul odor, neighbors say no one has been there for days, observe disarray through window, realize they lack time or sufficient information to get a warrant, no one available to consent, force entry, find body, then obtain warrant; held: warrantless "emergency" search was a pretext for a criminal investigation, officer's entry under emergency exception must be "totally divorced" from the detection and investigation of criminal activity, State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373, 385 (2000); reverses State v. Boisselle, 3 Wn.App.2d 266 (2018); 5-4.

State v. Harris, 9 Wn.App.2d 625 (2019)

Citizen informs police that there are two people "passed out" in a car, police approach, observe two people either asleep or unconscious, open doors without seeking to arouse occupants first, awoke occupants, observe drug paraphernalia, arrest occupant who is charged with various crimes arising from the arrest; held: absent a reasonable, objective belief that defendant was specifically in need of immediate assistance, community caretaking exception is not a basis for a search; suspected unconsciousness alone does not support an objective, reasonable belief, cf.: State v. Hutchison, 56 Wn.App. 863 (1990), State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509 (1990), State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000), State v. Hos, 154 Wn.App. 238, 246-49 (2010); I.

State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020)

Police are called about a man sleeping in a coffee shop, officer approaches, attempts to awaken defendant, notices the end of a metal utensil sticking out of his pocket, removes the utensil which is a cook spoon with residue, continues searching, finds drugs; held: there was no evidence that a crime had been committed justifying a stop and frisk, coffee shop had not stated that defendant was trespassing, officer's belief that awakening sleeping person might cause a safety concern to other patrons is without support from the record, could have asked other customers to move away; even if the officer was conducting a criminal investigation, the removal of the spoon exceeded the scope of a limited pat-down, State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008), State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29 (2006), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982); because officer's actions were not "totally divorced" from a criminal investigation, State v. Boisselle, 194

Wn.2d 1, 14 (2019), no evidence that officer was conducting a routine check on health and safety or rendering emergency aid, even if emergency exception applied a simple pat-down would have elevated concern that the item was a weapon or sharp object, State v. A.A., 187 Wn.App. 475 (2015), State v. Acrey, 148 Wn.2d 738 (2003); I.

Caniglia v. Strom, et al., ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 1596, 209 L.Ed.2d 604 (2021)

Police see petitioner sitting on his porch, he agrees to be transported for psychiatric evaluation, police enter his home and seize firearms; held: while an impounded vehicle may be searched for firearms without a warrant, Cady v. Dombrowski, 413 U.S. 433, 93 S.Ct. 2523, 37 L.Ed.2d 706 (1973), community caretaking function does not justify entering a home without a warrant; 9-0.

SEARCH
Impound

State v. Cuzick, 21 Wn.App. 501 (1978)

Parking violation is not grounds for impound; III.

State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980)

Mere suspicion that a vehicle is stolen or has been used in commission of a felony is not sufficient to justify impound; must be probable cause to impound or may be impounded under community caretaker capacity, i.e., vehicle was abandoned, impeding traffic, State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694 (2006), or threatened public safety, per South Dakota v. Opperman, 49 L.Ed.2d 1000 (1976), Cady v. Dombrowski, 37 L.Ed.2d 706 (1973); where suspect is arrested, it is unreasonable to impound when there is no probable cause to seize car and where a reasonable alternative to impoundment exists; cf.: State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992); police cannot examine the locked trunk of an impounded vehicle in the course of an inventory search absent a manifest necessity, State v. White, 135 Wn.2d 761 (1998), State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015); where a closed piece of luggage in a vehicle gives no indication of dangerous contents police cannot search contents in course of inventory absent consent; reverses State v. Houser, 21 Wn.App. 30 (1980), cf.: State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019); 6-2.

State v. Davis, 29 Wn.App. 691 (1981)

Store security guard observes suspect remove toy car from vehicle and enter store where suspect seeks to return it for cash; store is aware toy car had been charged to a fraudulent account; arrest suspect who is taken to police station; police impound vehicle from store lot; vehicle had other items of merchandise in it, and it had no door handles or locks; police inventory vehicle and seize other evidence; held: impound was improper, per State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), as no probable cause existed to believe vehicle was stolen or used in commission of felony and there was a reasonable alternative to impoundment; however, search held lawful, as probable cause and exigent circumstances (car was accessible, as it did not have door handles) existed; interruption of initial search of car did not taint later search.

State v. Roth, 30 Wn.App. 740 (1981)

Following traffic stop on interstate highway, police smell marijuana and see roach clips in ash tray, search vehicle, find rifle used in a homicide; held: probable cause to arrest, lawful search incident to arrest, lawful impound as state established reasonable cause for impound, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), but see: State v. Duncan, 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016); I.

Michigan v. Thomas, 73 L.Ed.2d 750 (1982)

Where police are justified in making an inventory search of a vehicle, they may search every part of the vehicle, and need not have exigent circumstances; fact that car was "immobilized" does not prohibit complete inventory search; per curiam.

State v. Sweet, 36 Wn.App. 377 (1984)

Arrested felony suspect passes out in patrol car and is thus unable to arrange for safekeeping of his car which is parked in front of a private business, impound is proper; I.

State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113 (1985)

Suspect is stopped by police for license plate infraction, lacks a drivers license, is arrested, requests that vehicle's owner remove vehicle, police call owner, who agrees to pick up vehicle, police decide to impound anyway, inventory vehicle, find drugs, discover VIN does not match registration; held: vehicle may be impounded if there is probable cause to believe it is stolen or used in felony, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980); here, no evidence vehicle was stolen, fact that VIN did not correspond to registration is only evidence of a licensing violation, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 189 (1980); vehicle may be impounded for community caretaking function if there is a threat to public safety or impeded traffic and no one is available to remove it, State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694 (2006), State v. Froelich, 197 Wn.App. 831 (2017), thus not justified here, Houser, supra, at 150, Simpson, supra, at 189, State v. Hardman, 17 Wn.App. 910 (1978); vehicle may be impounded if authorized by statute and there is reasonable cause to impound under the constitution, see: State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654, 658 (1989), State v. Clifford, 57 Wn.App. 124 (1990); State v. Johnson, 65 Wn.App. 716 (1992), State v. Peterson, 92 Wn.App. 899 (1998); III.

State v. Burgess, 43 Wn.App. 253 (1986)

Police, investigating a burglary, find suspect vehicle lawfully parked across from burglary, run registration and discover that owner had previously burglarized the same business, deflate tires; two hours later, police arrest suspect, seize incriminating evidence, impound and search vehicle; held: impound and inventory was improper as police had an affirmative duty to explore reasonable alternatives to impound, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733, 743 (1984), State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 153 (1980); search of vehicle was, however, proper under automobile exception, State v. Davis, 29 Wn.App. 691, 699 (1981), since State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983) is not retroactive; accord: In re Taylor, 105 Wn.2d 683 (1986), superseded, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of St. Pierre, 118 Wn.2d 321 (1992); II.

State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986)

Defendant's automobile is found outside his home, tire treads match impression at scene of homicide, police impound vehicle; held: a car may be lawfully impounded if officer had probable cause to believe it was stolen or used in the commission of a felony; 9-0.

Colorado v. Bertine, 93 L.Ed.2d 739 (1987)

Police arrest DUI suspect, impound vehicle and, pursuant to departmental regulations, inventory a closed backpack, finding drugs; held: an inventory search of a closed pack in a fully impounded vehicle is permissible under the Fourth Amendment where performed in accordance with departmental procedures, and where there is no showing of bad faith or for the sole purpose of investigation; 7-2.

State v. Clifford, 57 Wn.App. 124 (1990)

Vehicle may be impounded where police are aware of a continuing violation of RCW 46.20.021, driving without valid license, distinguishing State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113, 119 (1985); III.

State v. Barajas, 57 Wn.App. 556 (1990)

Impoundment and inventory search of vehicle improper based solely upon arrest for driving without a valid license, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980), State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113 (1985), State v. Greenway, 15 Wn.App. 216 (1976), State v. Bales, 15 Wn.App. 834 (1976), State v. Tarica, 59 Wn.App. 368 (1990), State v. Terrazas, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1993); cf.: State v. Johnson, 65 Wn.App. 716 (1992); RCW 46.20.435(1), which authorizes impoundment when police determine that driver lacked license, is discretionary, not mandatory, see: State v. Villela, 194 Wn.2d 451 (2019); III.

Florida v. Wells, 109 L.Ed.2d 1 (1990)

Absent police policies with respect to opening closed containers found during inventory search, the opening of such a container is insufficiently regulated, and thus evidence suppressed; 9-0.

State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441 (1991), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1999)

Vehicle properly seized pursuant to forfeiture statute, RCW 69.50.505, on probable cause that it is used to facilitate a drug transaction, is subject to inventory search and evidence found therein is admissible under state and federal constitutions; cf.: State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 72-7 (1996), see: State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339 (1997); I.

State v. Hill, 68 Wn.App. 300 (1993)

Police stop vehicle for no headlight, smell intoxicants, see open container of alcohol, arrest passenger for felony warrants, determine defendant-driver is not legally intoxicated, ask to search vehicle, which is denied, impound vehicle, find drugs; held: vehicle was neither abandoned, nor impeding traffic, but was partially blocking a sidewalk, police did not seek to determine if someone was available to take responsibility for vehicle, thus community caretaking function does not authorize impoundment, State v. Froelich, 197 Wn.App. 831 (2017); RCW 46.32.060, which authorizes impoundment for defective equipment, is discretionary, officer testified he would not have impounded for a light violation alone; under CONST. Art. 1, § 7, impoundment is inappropriate when reasonable alternatives exist, State v. Greenway, 15 Wn.App. 216, 219 (1976), although police are not required to exhaust all possible alternatives, State v. Hardman, 17 Wn.App. 910, 914 (1977); here, police made no attempt to determine reasonable alternatives, no departmental impoundment procedures are in the record, distinguishing Colorado v. Bertine, 93 L.Ed.2d 739 (1987), thus impoundment was unreasonable, State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113, 116-9 (1985), State v. Coss, 87 Wn.App. 891, 898-900 (1997); while arrest of passenger would authorize search of vehicle incident thereto, State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144, 152 (1986), police did not search as a result of passenger's arrest; III.

State v. Mireles, 73 Wn.App. 605, 609-14 (1994)

DSHS Office of Support Enforcement seizes truck pursuant to lien, during inventory pursuant to written standards discovers drugs; held: under United States and Washington constitutions, inventory search of properly seized vehicle performed pursuant to written standards is reasonable, Florida v. Wells, 109 L.Ed.2d 1, 5 (1990), State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 149 (1980); III.

State v. Hendrickson, 129 Wn.2d 61, 72-77 (1996)

Defendant's vehicle is seized pursuant to civil forfeiture statute, RCW 69.50.505, inventory search reveals nothing, four days later after anonymous tip police search anew without warrant, discover drugs; held: second search was an investigatory, not inventory, search, which must be based upon probable cause, cf.: State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441 (1991), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1999), lacking here, see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000); until civil forfeiture court enters judgment of forfeiture, title resides in person from whom property was seized; accord: State v. Patterson, 112 Wn.2d 731, 734 (1989); Court declines to follow line of federal cases, see: Cooper v. California, 17 L.Ed.2d 730 (1967), holds CONST. Art. 1, § 7 requires a more restrictive view of investigatory searches; 9-0.

State v. Coss, 87 Wn.App. 891, 898-900 (1997)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, driver's license was suspended, police impound vehicle pursuant to departmental policy, as department did not book individuals for misdemeanors, discover drugs belonging to passenger; held: impoundment for driving with a suspended license is authorized, RCW 46.20.435A(1), but discretionary ["officer may immediately impound"], police must consider alternatives to impound, including another driver to remove the vehicle; here, police did not inquire if any passenger had a license, thus no reasonable alternative to impound was considered, thus impound was unlawful, and inventory search was improper, State v. Hill, 68 Wn.App. 300, 305 (1993), State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113, 116-9 (1985) State v. Froelich, 197 Wn.App. 831 (2017),see: State v. Peterson, 92 Wn.App. 899 (1998); 2-1, III.

State v. White, 135 Wn.2d 761 (1998)

Police lawfully impound vehicle, open trunk by a trunk release button in unlocked glove compartment, find drugs; held: police may not examine the locked trunk of an impounded vehicle in the course of an inventory search, absent manifest necessity, whether a key or interior release button is used to unlock the trunk, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015), cf.: State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694 (2006), reversing State v. White, 83 Wn.App. 770 (1996) 7-2.

State v. Peterson, 92 Wn.App. 899 (1998)

Defendant, sole occupant of vehicle, is stopped for vehicle tab expiration, police determine license is suspended, defendant lacks registration, vehicle belongs to another whom police do not try to contact, impound vehicle, find drugs; held: absent other licensed passengers or authorization of owner to leave vehicle, police properly exercised discretion to impound, State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113, 119 (1985), distinguishing State v. Coss, 87 Wn.App. 891 (1997); 2-1, III.

All Around Underground v. WSP, 148 Wn.2d 145 (2002)

WAC 205-96-010 requiring impound upon arrest for driving with a suspended license is invalid as it conflicts with RCW 46.55.113 which authorizes but does not mandate impound, obliging exercise of discretion, cf.: State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694 (2006)

Police stop vehicle for traffic violation, driver has outstanding warrant, is arrested, pasenger lacks identification, car is blocking intersection, trooper calls for impound, begins search, discovers meth lab items, opens trunk with inside trunk latch to see if there were dangerous chemicals inside, finds white gas and Coleman stove, shuts trunk, tows, gets warrant; held: impound decision was proper as vehicle was blocking street and passenger lacked license, State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), state proved manifest necessity for limited warrantless search of trunk to remove hazardous materials, distinguishing State v. White, 135 Wn.2d 761 (1998); III.

State v. Morales, 154 Wn.App. 26, 45-49 (2010) rev'd on other grnds, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012)

Following vehicular assault arrest, police observe beer cans in front seat, seize them, then impound vehicle; held: because impound was lawful pursuant to DUI statute, RCW 46.55.113(1), but see: State v. Villela, 194 Wn.2d 451 (2019), and there was probable cause that vehicle had been used in a felony, State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 755 (2001), beer cans were admissible in evidence even if search incident to arrest was improper and even if inevitable discovery doctrine is inapplicable in Washington, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009); 2-1, II.

State v. Tyler, 177 Wn.2d 690 (2013)

Following a lawful impound, police need not obtain consent to perform an inventory search of unlocked containers and trunks, effectively overruling dicta in State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733, 743 (1984), State v. White, 135 Wn.2d 761, 771 n.11 (1998); e-mail from searching officer to other sheriffs stating "[t]he obvious way to circumvent this [Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009)] is impounding the vehicle" does not establish that the impound was pretextual; affirms State v. Tyler, 166 Wn.App. 202 (2012); 8-1.

State v. Green, 177 Wn.App. 332 (2013)

Police arrest defendant for vehicular homicide, impound and inventory vehicle, in a paper bag find and seize suspicious gift card receipts, obtain warrant to search for evidence of vehicular homicide without mentioning what was seized in the bag, warrant authorizes seizure of evidence of drug and alcohol use and papers of dominions and control, during execution of warrant police find credit cards, put them back and obtain a warrant for identity theft and seize cards which were false or stolen; held: police did not recognize the gift card receipts as inventory items or as evidence of a crime, looking in the paper bag was proper to see if anything of value was present but seizure was for investigatory purposes and thus improper, distinguishing State v. Montague, 73 Wn.2d 381, 382-85 (1968); independent source doctrine, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005), State v. Miles, 159 Wn.App. 282 (2011), does not justify seizure of receipts as they were not found while executing first search warrant, belief that they would have been found had they not been seized during the initial search is speculative, inevitable discovery doctrine is not valid in Washington, State v. Smith, 165 Wn.App. 296, 310, aff'd, 177 Wn.2d 533 (2013); I.

State v. Duncan*,* 185 Wn.2d 430, 438-41 (2016)

Following a report of someone in a white car shooting into a home police stop white car, remove occupants at gunpoint, handcuff and secure in police cars, open car's doors, find gun, remove gun, tow car, subsequently obtain search warrant; held: warrantless search of vehicle for evidence once vehicle's occupants are detained in police cars is improper, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 197-201 (2012); where there is reasonable suspicion that there is an unsecured gun in a vehicle that will be impounded and towed, police may make a limited sweep of the vehicle to obtain the gun to avoid accidental discharge under community caretaking function; 9-0.

State v. Froelich, 197 Wn.App. 831 (2017)

Defendant, driving another's car, collides with another car, defendant's car on shoulder, defendant is taken to hospital, police decide to impound, inventory search yields drugs; held: before impounding and inventorying police must ask driver if she, spouse or friends can remove the car, even if the car is undrivable and must be towed, State v. Reynoso, 41 Wn.App. 113 (1985), State v. Coss, 87 Wn.App. 891, 898-900 (1997); while RCW 46.55.113(2) (2011) authorizes an impound of an unattended vehicle police still must consider alternatives to impound; 2-1, III.

State v. Villela*,* 164 Wn.2d 451 (2019)

RCW 46.55.360 authorizing summary impoundment following DUI arrest violates state constitution, State v. Tyler, 177 Wn.2d 690, 698 (2013); 9-0.

Incident to Arrest*

Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S. 692, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981)

Police, executing warrant, encounter defendant leaving his residence, require him to return to house, detain him while searching, find drugs in house, then search defendant and find drugs on his person; held: existence of warrant justified detention of occupant of home while search is conducted, Muehler v. Mora, 161 L.Ed.2d 299 (2005), but see: Bailey v. United States, 568 U.S. 186, 185 L.Ed.2d 19 (2013), and, upon finding contraband in house, justifies arrest and search of occupant on probable cause; this type of detention is "less intrusive than an arrest"; 6-3.

State v. Garcia, 35 Wn.App. 174 (1983)

Defendant is lawfully arrested, taken to station, before it was decided whether or not to place defendant in jail, he was booked and, in searching his wallet, police seize razor and drugs; held: search was pursuant to lawful arrest, it was reasonable to search his wallet as an inventory search, distinguishing State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981), wherein police had already decided to release defendant, whereas here that decision had not been made, cf.: State v. Smith, 61 Wn.App. 482 (1991), but see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003); III.

State v. White, 44 Wn.App. 276 (1986)

Defendant, properly arrested for DUI, is patted down, police feel something they believe is a knife, remove a cosmetic case from defendant's pocket, open it, find drugs; held: personal possessions closely associated with person's clothing may be seized pursuant to a lawful arrest, and may be opened by the police, State v. Gammon, 61 Wn.App. 858 (1991), State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25, 29-31 (1998), State v. Whitney, 156 Wn.App. 405 (2010), State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553, 568-71 (2013), distinguishing State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983); III.

State v. LaTourette, 49 Wn.App. 119 (1987)

Police arrest for reckless driving, find baggie in defendant's pants, open it, find drugs; held: search and seizure of evidence from suspect's person incident to lawful arrest may include possessions other than weapons, State v. White, 44 Wn.App. 276 (1986), State v. Gammon, 61 Wn.App. 858 (1991), State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25, 29-31 (1998), State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553, 568-71 (2013); I.

Maryland v. Buie, 108 L.Ed.2d 276 (1990)

Police obtain arrest warrant for armed robber who wore red running suit, serve warrant in home, arrest suspect emerging from basement, police enter basement to look for other people, observe and seize red running suit in plain view; held: a "protective sweep" of premises in conjunction with a home arrest is permissible, State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954 (2002), State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 125-26 (2008), incident to the arrest, limited to a cursory visual inspection of those places in which a person might be hiding, where police possess a reasonable belief based on specific and articulable facts which, taken together with the rational inferences from those facts, reasonably warrant an officer in believing that the area swept harbored an individual posing a danger to officers or others, State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262, 268 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009), State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018), cf.: State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593 (2004), State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 122-28 (2016); police do not need probable cause to believe that a serious and demonstrable potentiality for danger existed; 7-2.

Smith v. Ohio, 108 L.Ed.2d 464 (1990)

Police, without probable cause or a well-founded suspicion, search paper bag, find drugs, arrest defendant; held: search of paper bag could not be justified as incident to arrest of accused as there was no basis to arrest before the search; 8-1.

State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990)

Police stop defendant's vehicle for littering, observe drug paraphernalia in car, patdown defendant, find drugs; at suppression hearing, officer testifies he would not have taken defendant into custody only on the paraphernalia charge; held: officer had made merely a conditional decision to release dependent on the result of the patdown, distinguishing State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981), but see: State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), see: State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002); where probable cause to arrest exists, it is irrelevant whether the search incident to the arrest occurs before or after the arrest, Rawlings v. Kentucky, 65 L.Ed.2d 633 (1980), State v. Harrell, 83 Wn.App. 393, 400 (1996), State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002), but see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003); I.

State v. Gammon, 61 Wn.App. 858 (1991)

Following lawful arrest, police find prescription pill bottle on defendant, open it, discover cocaine; held: defendant had diminished expectation of privacy in bottle because it was found on his person akin to a wallet, State v. White, 44 Wn.App. 276 (1986), State v. LaTourette, 49 Wn.App. 119 (1987), thus allowing detailed inspection incident to arrest, State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25, 29-31 (1998), State v. Whitney, 156 Wn.App. 405 (2010); I.

Defendant is lawfully arrested following struggle with police, fanny pack falls off during struggle, defendant is handcuffed, placed in patrol car, officer places fanny pack on front seat, searches fanny pack 9-17 minutes later, finds drugs; held: object is within control of arrestee for purposes of search incident to arrest as long as object is within arrestee's reach immediately prior to, or at moment of, arrest, New York v. Belton, 69 L.Ed.2d 768 (1981), see: State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Ellison, 172 Wn.App. 710 (2013), State v.Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019), but see: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), State v. Valdez, 167 Wn.2d 761 (2009), State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014); handcuffing arrestee, who had resisted, and placing him in patrol car for safety reasons does not make subsequent search unreasonable, United States v. Turner, 926 F.2d 883 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 116 L.Ed.2d 73 (1991); 17 minutes between arrest and search is not per se unreasonable, United States v. Porter, 738 F.2d 622 (4th Cir.)(1984) (15 minutes), State v. Boursaw, 94 Wn.App. 629 (1999) (10 minutes), cf.: United States v. Chadwick, 53 L.Ed.2d 538 (1977) (more than one hour is unreasonable), United States v. Vasey, 834 F.2d 782 (9th Cir. 1987) (30-45 minutes is unreasonable), where delay results solely from officer's reasonable actions to secure premises and protect herself and public; reverses State v. Smith, 61 Wn.App. 482 (1991); 9-0.

Defendant is arrested in her car on warrant, asks for purse, police comply, during booking police search purse, find drugs; held: established and consistent practice of "inventorying" arrestee's personal possessions as part of booking procedures is an exception to the warrant requirement under the Fourth Amendment and CONST. Art. 1, § 7, Illinois v. Lafayette, 77 L.Ed.2d 65 (1983), South Dakota v. Opperman, 49 L.Ed.2d 1000 (1976), State v. Garcia, 35 Wn.App. 174 (1983), State v. Gluck, 83 Wn.2d 424, 428 (1974), State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), cf.: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Dunham, 194 Wn.App. 744 (2016), but see: State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.App. 652 (2015); I.

State v. Harrell, 83 Wn.App. 393 (1996)

As long as probable cause exists at the time of search, the search may be considered a search incident to arrest even if it occurs shortly before the arrest, State v. Ward, 24 Wn.App. 761 (1979), State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), but see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), even if the officer did not subjectively consider suspect to be under arrest, see: State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002), but see: State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998); I.

State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998)

Driver is stopped for infraction, lacks license and has traffic warrant but officer, aware that jail is not accepting nonviolent misdemeanors, cites and releases, decides to impound vehicle, allows defendant to remove chattels, offers ride home if defendant will consent to search of bag, officer finds drug paraphernalia [not a crime, see: RCW 69.50.412, 69.50.102, State v. Neeley, 113 Wn.App. 100, 107 (2002)], directs defendant to empty pockets, finds drugs; held: the search was not accompanied by a contemporaneous arrest, and thus is not justified even though police could have arrested, as search incident to arrest can only be justified when the search and arrest are reasonably contemporaneous, Rawlings v. Kentucky, 65 L.Ed.2d 633 (1980), State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675, 679 (1992), State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), cf.: State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995), State v. Lowrimore, 67 Wn.App. 949 (1992), State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002), State v. Clausen, 113 Wn.App. 657 (2002), State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002), State v. Craig, 115 Wn.App. 191 (2002), State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), see: State v. Gering, 146 Wn.App. 564 (2008); II, 2-1.

State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25 (1998)

Defendant is arrested on a warrant, during search incident to arrest at scene before transport to jail, drugs found; held: police may search incident to arrest on a warrant or on probable cause; mere fact that police are serving a warrant does not oblige them to allow defendant to post bail before search incident to arrest, State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 222 (2012), police are not limited to a patdown for weapons when serving a warrant, distinguishing State v. Caldera, 84 Wn.App. 527 (1997), State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989), RCW 10.31.030, see: State v. Ross, 106 Wn.App. 876 (2001); search of suspect's pocket and opening container found in pocket was within scope of search incident to arrest, State v. Gammon, 61 Wn.App. 858, 860 (1991), State v. White, 44 Wn.App. 276 (1986), State v. Whitney, 156 Wn.App. 405 (2010), State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553, 568-71 (2013); II.

State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, lawfully arrest driver, passenger exits vehicle, police search purse they know belongs to passenger, find drugs; held: full-blown search incident to arrest does not apply to an unarrested passenger or to personal belongings which police know or should know belong to the passenger who is not independently suspected of criminal activity, reversing State v. Parker, 88 Wn.App. 273 (1997) and State v. Hunnel, 89 Wn.App. 638 (1998); accord: State v. Jones, 146 Wn.2d 328 (2002), State v. Adams, 144 Wn.App. 100 (2008), cf.: State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); (4 justices concur; 1 justice would hold that passenger's belongings may be searched for weapon only; 1 justice would hold that police may not search items that they actually know belong to passenger; 2 dissents).

State v. Cormier, 100 Wn.App. 457 (2000)

Police, serving a warrant, observe defendant at night ride by on bicycle several times, stop and stare, police approach, ask him to remove hands from pockets, defendant refuses, is told he will be arrested for obstructing, officers try to take him in custody, defendant strikes police who search and find drugs; held: police had no reasonable belief that defendant was armed, thus had no basis to stop; once defendant assaulted the officer, police had probable cause to arrest, State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460, 50 A.L.R.5th 921 (1995), State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1, 21-22 (1997), State v. McKinlay, 87 Wn.App. 394, 398-99 (1997), and may search incident to that arrest, irrespective of the legality of the initial encounter, see: State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017); 2-1, III.

State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.App. 30 (2001)

Police hear gunshots, observe defendant run down alley, lean into vehicle then walk away, does not respond to officers' commands to stop, is forced to ground, handcuffed, placed in police van, defendant's car is searched, gun found; held: because there was no danger to officers, defendant would not have to re-enter car to get registration, State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849 (1997), and because no one else was in the vehicle, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1986), State v. Watkins, 86 Wn.App. 726, 730 (1995), then search of vehicle was beyond scope of investigatory stop, cf.: State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490, 494-98 (2008), however because police had probable cause to arrest, the search of the car was proper incident to arrest, cf.: State v. Porter, 102 Wn.App. 327 (2000), State v. Turner, 114 Wn.App. 653 (2002), see: State v. Rathbun, 124 Wn.App. 372 (2004); I.

State v. Ross, 106 Wn.App. 876 (2001)

Defendant is arrested on misdemeanor warrant, patted down by arresting officer, turned over to police from warrant jurisdiction who search incident to arrest and find drugs, defense seeks suppression because defendant was not taken "directly and without delay" to post bail, RCW 10.31.030; held: while RCW 10.31.030 precludes inventory searches at time of booking where a defendant is not given the opportunity to post bail, State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989), State v. Caldera, 84 Wn.App. 527 (1997), police are not precluded from searching incident to arrest, State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25 (1998); State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 222 (2012), initial arresting officers were not obliged to take defendant immediately to jail to post bail; I.

State v. Dugas, 109 Wn.App. 592 (2001)

During detention, suspect removes his jacket and puts it on his car hood; following arrest, police take jacket and, during inventory find closed key pouch, open it, find drugs; held: while police were authorized to impound the jacket for safekeeping, it is not reasonable for police to search the contents of closed containers found in the jacket incident to impound, State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015), State v. Dunham, 194 Wn.App. 744 (2016), see: State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143 (1980), State v. Wisdom, 187 Wn.App. 652 (2015), cf.: State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019); I.

State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002)

Following traffic stop, police arrest defendant for driving while license suspended, return to defendant's truck to search, find it locked, observe glass pipe, tow truck operator, pursuant to impound, opens truck, drugs seized, at suppression hearing, jail officer testifies that jail does not accept bookings for suspended license absent a request for a booking exception which has never been denied; held: booking into jail is not a necessary element of custodial arrest to justify search incident to arrest, State v. Craig, 115 Wn.App. 191 (2002), State v. Gering, 146 Wn.App. 564 (2008), see: State v. Thomas, 89 Wn.App. 774 (1998), State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 341-42 (1997), State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), cf.: State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), Knowles v. Iowa, 142 L.Ed.2d 492 (1998); III.

State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954 (2002)

Police, with an arrest warrant for defendant and a search warrant to search for the defendant "including outbuildings…and documents" arrest defendant, do a "security check" and "protective sweep" in shed, find meth lab; held: because search warrant was issued only on the basis of the arrest warrant, its scope is no greater than the arrest warrant; to justify a "protective sweep," state has burden of proving that the sweep was reasonable for security purposes and limited to a cursory visual inspection of places where a person may be hiding, Maryland v. Buie, 108 L.Ed.2d 276 (1990), State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262, 268 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009), see: State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-25 (2008); here, there were no articulable facts warranting a reasonably prudent officer in believing that the area to be swept harbored an individual posing a danger, thus drugs suppressed, State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 122-28 (2016), cf.: State v. Blockman, 198 Wn.App. 34 (2017), 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018); III.

State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002)

Officer stops defendant for infraction, determines his license is suspended, arrests, searches, finds container with marijuana, officer's supervisor directs officer to cite and release; held: because police had probable cause to arrest and did arrest, search incident to arrest was proper, irrespective of subsequent decision to cite and release, distinguishing State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003); II.

State v. Craig, 115 Wn.App. 191 (2002)

Defendant is arrested for suspended license, police follow county policy which requires that arrestee be taken to police department, processed, cited and released, police find drugs; held: booking into jail is not required for a search incident to arrest, distinguishing State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554, 561 (1998), see: State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002), State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), State v. Gering, 146 Wn.App. 564 (2008); II.

State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003)

Officer observes car in parking lot of recently burglarized business, approaches, defendant says he drove there until his car broke, officer asks for identification, driver responds his license is suspended, officer asks defendant to step out of car, observes "cook spoon" on floor, asks repeatedly for consent to search which is eventually granted, police find drugs; held: approaching and asking for identification is not a seizure, State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1997), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), State v. Cerrillo, 122 Wn.App. 341 (2004), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), effectively overruling State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509 (1990); when asking defendant to step outside, officer had probable cause to arrest for driving while license suspended, thus defendant was seized at that point; observation of cook spoon meets plain view test; pursuant to CONST. art. I, § 7, a custodial arrest is a prerequisite to a search incident to arrest, because defendant was not arrested, drugs must be suppressed, overruling State v. Brooks, 57 Wn.2d 422 (1960), State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 127, 138 (1977), effectively overruling, in part, State v. Garcia, 35 Wn.App. 174 (1983), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), State v. Harrell, 83 Wn.App. 393 (1996), cf.: State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002), State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43 (2004), see: State v. Gering, 146 Wn.App. 564 (2008); inevitable discovery doctrine is inapplicable because it would undermine holding requiring a lawful custodial arrest, see: State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620, 631-36 (2009); reverses State v. O'Neill, 104 Wn.App. 850 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593 (2004)

Police, serving search warrant on basement apartment, discover unlocked door into a storage area, perform "protective sweep," find drugs; held: unlike an arrest warrant, a protective sweep incident to execution of a search warrant is unjustified absent specific articulable facts that would support a prudent officer's belief that the area harbored a dangerous person, see: State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 122-28 (2016), cf.: State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018), distinguishing Maryland v. Buie, 108 L.Ed.2d 276 (1990), State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954 (2002), State v. Smith, 137 Wn.App. 262, 268 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 511 (2009); III.

State v. Gering, 146 Wn.App. 564 (2008)

Police stop defendant for driving while license suspended, cuff, search incident to arrest, find drugs on his person, defendant maintains that because jail would not accept a DWLS booking, custodial arrest was improper; held: manifestation of the arresting officer's intent was full custodial arrest, State v. Radka, 120 Wn.App. 43, 49 (2004), reasonable detainee would under these circumstances consider himself under arrest, id., at 49-50, State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002), thus search was proper; III.

State v. Sadler, 147 Wn.App. 97, 123-27 (2008)

Police enter defendant's home on legitimate emergency, seeking a minor with whom defendant is alleged to be engaged in sadomasochistic sex, arrest defendant, engage in cursory visual inspection of places in home where someone could be hiding, then return later to seek evidence for use in a search warrant affidavit; held: initial protective sweep was lawful, State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954, 959-60 (2002), but second warrantless entry was improper as it was an entry to investigate a possible crime; remanded to allow inquiry into independent source doctrine, State v. Gaines, 154 Wn.2d 711 (2005); 2-1, II.

State v. Bishop, 149 Wn.App. 439 (2009)

Following sentencing, defendant fails to report to work crew, court issues arrest warrant based upon unsworn letter from work crew staff, defendant is arrested, searched, drugs found; held: once court finds probable cause to detain for the original crime, it may issue bench warrants on the same oath that supported the original arrest warrant, State v. Erickson, 143 Wn.App. 660, review granted, 164 Wn.2d 1030 (2008); II.

State v. Erickson, 168 Wn.2d 41 (2010)

Defendant is on probation, fails to appear for a hearing, bench warrant issued, upon arrest drugs found; held: returned summons establishes a well-founded suspicion that defendant did not notify court of address change, thus warrant was valid; court must find a well-founded suspicion that a probation violation occurred for warrant to be valid, distinguishing State v. Parks, 136 Wn.App. 232 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Morales, 154 Wn.App. 26, 45-49 (2010), rev'd on other grnds, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012)

Following vehicular assault arrest, police observe beer cans in front seat, seize them, then impound vehicle; held: because impound was lawful pursuant to DUI statute, RCW 46.55.113(1), and there was probable cause that vehicle had been used in a felony, State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 755 (2001), beer cans were admissible in evidence even if search incident to arrest was improper and even if inevitable discovery doctrine is inapplicable in Washington, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009); 2-1, II.

State v. Johnson, 155 Wn.App. 270 (2010)

Officer, on routine patrol, runs "routine check" of defendant's plate, dispatch advises license of registered owner is suspended, stops vehicle, defendant-owner exits with her purse, is arrested for suspended license, cuffed, placed in patrol car, officer searches purse and vehicle, finds drugs in purse; held: search of purse was properly incident to arrest thus not subject to suppression under Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), State v.Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), cf.: State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014); III.

State v. Whitney, 156 Wn.App. 405 (2010)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, discover defendant's license is suspended, arrest, search defendant, find pill bottle in pocket, open bottle, find illegal drugs; held: Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), does not extend to an search incident to arrest; scope of search incident to arrest includes search of contents of vial, State v. Gammon, 61 Wn.App. 858, 863-65 (1991); III.

State v. Barker, 162 Wn.App. 858 (2011)

Defendant is arrested pursuant to DOC warrant, drugs found; held: an administrative warrant issued by the Department of Corrections pursuant to RCW 9.94A.740 (1999) [recodified as 9.94A.716 (2008)] need not be issued by a neutral magistrate based upon oath, State v. Olson, 164 Wn.App. 187 (2011); II.

State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 219-22 (2012)

Following lawful arrest for rape, seizure of clothing without a warrant to see if it contains victim's DNA is a proper exercise of a search incident to arrest, State ex rel. Murphy v. Brown, 83 Wash. 100, 105-06 (1914), State v. Nordstrom, 7 Wash. 506 (1893), State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 654-55 (2003); while defendant must be given opportunity to post bail following arrest on a warrant before being subject to inventory search, RCW 10.31.030, State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 145 (1989), the rule does not apply to a search incident to arrest, State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25, 28 (1998), see: State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553, 568-71 (2013); I.

State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013)

Officer stops vehicle with stolen plates, arrests driver on warrant, driver tells officer that car belongs to defendant-passenger who is ordered out of car, officer removes purse from her lap, arrests defendant, places her in patrol car, searches purse, finds drugs; held: "[a] search of the arrestee's immediate area must be justified by concerns for officer safety or evidence preservation, while a search of the arrestee's person and articles of his or her person is justified by the authority of a lawful arrest," at 625 ¶ 27, State v. Ellison, 172 Wn.App. 710 (2013), State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675 (1992), State v. MacDicken, 179 Wn.2d 936 (2014); exigencies are presumed when an officer searches an arrestee's person, at 620 ¶ 17, here "the purse was unquestionably an article immediately associated with her person," at 623 ¶ 10; reverses State v. Byrd, 162 Wn.App. 612 (2011); "[w]e caution that the proper scope of the time of arrest rule is narrow… It does not extend to all articles in an arrestee's constructive possession, but only those personal articles in the arrestee's actual and exclusive possession at or immediately preceding the time of arrest," at 623 ¶ 9, State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014), State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019); 5-4.

State v. Ellison, 172 Wn.App. 710 (2013)

Police find defendant under a blanket outside a home, backpack between his legs, arrest on warrants, handcuff, search backpack, find evidence of identity theft; held: an object is within the control of an arrestee for search incident to arrest as long as it was within arrestee's reach immediately prior to or at the moment of arrest, State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675, 681-82 (1992); even if Arizona v. Gant, 566 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009) applies to a non-automobile search, the concern for officer safety justifies the search of the backpack, State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), cf.: State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014), State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019); III.

State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553, 568-71 (2013)

Police may search contents of pockets incident to arrest, scope is not limited to a weapons frisk, Chimel v. California, 395 U.S. 752, 762-63, 23 L.Ed.2d 685 (1969), State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25, 31 (1998); II.

Riley v. California, 573 U.S. 373 134 S.Ct. 2473, 189 L.Ed.2d 430 (2014)

Incident to arrest, police seize and search cell phone; held: absent a search warrant or exigent circumstances police may not search a cell phone seized incident to arrest, see: Carpenter v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2206, 201 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Roden*,* 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014)

Incident to drug arrest of Lee, police seize smartphone, detective looks through the phone, sees a text message offering to sell drugs, posing as arrestee Lee replies, arranges to buy drugs, arrest defendant Roden; held: a text message to an individual, as opposed to a group texting function, manifests a subjective intent of privacy, illicit subject matter indicates a belief in privacy, thus text messages were private communications protected by privacy act, RCW 9.73.030(1), detective reading the texts intercepted the messages, police should have obtained a warrant, thus evidence must be suppressed, State v. Hinton, 179 Wn.2d 862 (2014),cf.: State v. Bowman, 198 Wn.2d 609 (2021), see also: State v. Faford, 128 Wn.2d 476 (1996), cf.: State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666 (2002), State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993), but see: State v. Roden, 179 Wn.2d 893 (2014); 5-4.

State v. MacDicken*,* 179 Wn.2d 936 (2014)

Defendant is arrested for robbery with gun, cuffed, standing outside patrol car, laptop and duffel bag car length away from defendant, police search, find evidence of robbery; held: officer safety was a substantial concern based upon nature of crime, public area, several people associated with defendant nearby, bags "still within reaching distance," justify search incident to arrest, State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), cf.: State v. Brock, 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014), State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019); affirms State v. MacDicken, 171 Wn.App. 169 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Brock*,* 182 Wn.App. 680 (2014)

Officer detains suspect for park trespass, puts suspect's backpack in patrol car, suspect gives name which doesn't show up in database, officer searches backpack for identification, finds drugs; held: pack searched ten minutes after seizing it, pack neither on defendant's person nor within area of control at time of arrest, search of backpack was not a valid search incident to arrest, State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019), distinguishing State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. MacDicken, 179 Wn.2d 936 (2014); 2-1, I.

State v. VanNess*,* 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015)

Police lawfully arrest defendant wearing a backpack, search backpack incident to arrest, find locked container, pry open container, observe drugs, obtain warrant; held: neither inventory nor search incident to arrest authorize search of a locked box absent a warrant, cf.: State v. Dunham, 194 Wn.App. 744 (2016), State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019), warrant issued here was based upon unlawful search, State v. Dugas, 109 Wn.App. 592 (2001), State v. Houser, 95 Wn.2d 143, 155-56 (1980); II.

State v. Wisdom*,* 187 Wn.App. 652 (2015)

Defendant is arrested in a stolen vehicle, search incident to arrest discloses drugs on his person, officer asks if there are drugs in the vehicle, defendant replies there are drugs on front seat, officer sees closed black bag, through mesh side sees currency, opens bag, finds drugs; held: when a search of a closed bag seized incident to arrest can be delayed without endangering officer or destruction of evidence then a warrant must be obtained, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 189 (2012); III.

State v. Flores, 188 Wn.App. 305 (2015)

Police receive anonymous report that a named person assaulted another with a gun, officer observes the suspect walking with defendant, order both down on their knees, both comply, after suspect is cuffed police order defendant to walk backwards towards them, defendant complies and states he has a gun, police seize gun, defendant is charged with felon in possession; held: police had reason to seize defendant to secure scene and assure defendant did not interfere with arrest of the suspect, but once suspect was safely in custody officer's rationale for seizing defendant evaporated, could no longer be detained and searched due to lack of reasonable suspicion that defendant had committed or was about to commit a crime, State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486, 497 (1999), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), abrogated, on other grounds, Brendlin v. California, 551 U.S. 249, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), distinguishing State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); III.

State v. Dunham, 194 Wn.App. 744 (2016)

Loss prevention officers arrest defendant, discover knives in backpack, police arrive and arrest for theft, search defendant and find knives on his person, search backpack at jail for inventory, policies require holding knives in secure containers, feel what appears to be a knife in locked pocket, open lock, find pipe and drugs; held: while an inventory search of a locked container, absent a safety issue, is invalid, State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148 (2015), State v. Dugas, 109 Wn.App. 592 (2001), the fact that several knives were found on defendant and in his backpack, one of which was unsheathed, and belief that item in locked pocket was a knife based upon feel, plus inventory policy of keeping knives separate justifies opening locked pocket; II.

State v. Cruz, 195 Wn.App. 120 (2016), review dismissed,, on other grounds, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017)

Officer arrests and cuffs defendant at defendant's truck for fishing misdemeanor, places him in patrol car intending to cite and release, inquires if there are weapons in the truck, defendant says guns, officer enters truck, removes guns, discovers defendant has a felony record, charged with unlawful possession a firearm; held: Terry frisk extends to a car if there is a reasonable suspicion that suspect is dangerous and may gain access to a weapon in the vehicle, State v. Glossbrener, 146 Wn.2d 670, 680-81 (2002), both components must be present, here there was no indication of dangerousness thus seizure of guns was improper, distinguishing State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986), no exigent circumstance justifying search without a warrant existed as there was no true emergency, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747, 753 (2009), even though only one officer was present; III.

State v. Chambers, 197 Wn.App.. 96, 122-28 (2016)

Police arrest defendant for homicide on porch of home, door remains open, woman inside, officers do a "cursory sweep" for other suspects, observe gun, obtain warrant, seize gun; held: arrest outside the home does not authorize a warrantless entry unless police have an articulable suspicion that an individual poses a danger to those at the arrest scene, distinguishing Maryland v. Buie, 494 U.S. 325, 110 S.Ct. 1093, 108 L.Ed.2d 276 (1990), State v. Hopkins, 113 Wn.App. 954, 959 n.3, 55 P.3d 691 (2002), harmless here; I.

State v. Nelson, 7 Wn.App.2d 588 (2019)

Breath sample can be obtained as a search incident to arrest under state constitution, State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016); 2-1, III.

Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019)

Defendant is arrested on a warrant and not for DUI, at station officer asks defendant to take PBT (preliminary breath test), defendant refuses, trial court admits refusal as evidence of guilt; held: where an arrest is based on an offense unrelated to DUI a search of the arrestee's breath for alcohol does not fall within the search incident to arrest rule, arrestee thus has a constitutional right to refuse the PBT which is inadmissible in court, distinguishing State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), State v. Mecham, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016), Birchfield v. North Dakota, —— U.S. ——, 136 S. Ct. 2160, 2185, 195 L. Ed. 2d 560 (2016), State v. Cohen, 125 Wn.2d 220 (2005); Division II disagrees with State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 176, 185 (2017); dicta: a search that precedes an arrest cannot be justified as a search incident to arrest exception to the warrant requirement, thus it is questionable whether PBT refusal is admissible, id., n. 8.

State v. Richards, 11 Wn.App.2d 84 (2019)

Police lawfully arrest defendant, search purse, open closed zippered pouch in purse, find drugs; held: while police may not, incident to arrest, open a locked container, State v. VanNess, 186 Wn.App. 148, 156-62 (2015), Riley v. California, 573 U.S. 373, 134 S. Ct. 2473, 189 L. Ed. 2d 430 (2014), a closed but unlocked pouch may be searched incident to arrest; II.

State v. Alexander, 10 Wn.App.2d 682 (2019)

Defendant is arrested on a warrant, behind her is a backpack which she says is hers, police search backpack, find drugs; held: unlike a search of an arrestee's person including personal effects immediately associated with the arrestee such as purses, a search of the area within an arrestee's immediate control, a "grab bag search," requires justification based upon officer safety or evidence preservation, State v. Brock, 184 Wn.2d 148, 154 (2015); whether an item is part of an arrestee's person is determined by applying the time of arrest rule: did the person have actual and exclusive possession at or immediately preceding the time of arrest, State v. Byrd, 178 Wn.2d 611 (2013), State v. MacDicken, 179 Wn.2d 936 (2014), cf.: State v. Smith, 119 Wn.2d 675 (1992); here, there is no evidence that defendant had actual and exclusive possession, not merely constructive possession, thus search was unlawful; I.

SEARCH
Informers

State v. Sainz, 23 Wn.App. 532 (1979)

Where an informant testifies under oath before a magistrate, this alone provides indicia of reliability; III.

State v. Higbey, 26 Wn.App. 457 (1980)

Unnamed informant saw marijuana in residence, affidavit states informant is reliable; held insufficient; distinguished from State v. Northness, 20 Wn.App. 551 (1978); II.

State v. Larson, 29 Wn.App. 669 (1981)

Affidavit fails to establish reliability of informant, states no dates when "recent purchases" of drugs were made, alleges that a named person was arrested with marijuana in his possession after leaving defendant's residence without indicating that he did not have marijuana on his person when he entered, all fatally defective.

State v. Duhaime, 29 Wn.App. 842 (1981)

Personal relationship between police and disclosed informant may establish "veracity" test; "basis of knowledge" prong may be established by hearsay if there is a "substantial basis for crediting the hearsay"; here, father of suspect provided information to informant which father received from suspect, thus establishing a "substantial basis;" I.

State v. Jordan, 30 Wn.App. 335 (1981)

Aguilar-Spinelli test can apply to a warrantless arrest and search; police investigation can supply corroboration to informant's tip.

State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706 (1981)

Statement against penal interest by informant is a factor to be considered in establishing veracity prong of Aguilar-Spinelli test; conclusory statements of a reliable informant may be considered to bolster veracity of another informant; fact that informant is named in affidavit is a factor which may bolster veracity of informant, State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259 (1993); failure to challenge veracity of affidavit pretrial waives issue.

State v. Maffeo, 31 Wn.App. 198 (1982)

Undercover officer meets with intermediary A who advised officer that B will get cocaine from defendant's home; B is followed to defendant's home and then back to A; B tells A that he got drugs from defendant; A delivers drugs to police, who obtain warrant and find drugs at defendant's home; held: information obtained from A and B meet Aguilar-Spinelli test; II.

State v. Hett, 31 Wn.App. 849 (1982)

Where affiant is named, appears before magistrate, makes statements against penal interest, and provides details, veracity prong of Aguilar-Spinelli test is met, State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991); fact that informant actually appeared before magistrate means veracity need not be established, as Aguilar-Spinelli does not apply; III.

State v. Huff, 33 Wn.App. 304 (1982)

Affidavit states "informant . . . observed . . . marijuana" held sufficient for basis of knowledge prong of Aguilar-Spinelli; III.

State v. Helfrich, 33 Wn.App. 338 (1982)

Three "reliability" purchases plus self-verifying information about the instant offense satisfies Aguilar-Spinelli test; mere allegation by defense that disclosure of informant's identity is necessary to establish entrapment is insufficient to trigger an in camera hearing; I.

State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962 (1982)

Where affidavit states that the informant had given affiant information proven to be true and correct in the past, this is a factual statement, not a conclusion of the affiant, and thus the veracity prong of Aguilar is met, reversing State v. Fisher, 28 Wn.App. 890 (1981); accord: State v. Smith, 110 Wn.2d 658 (1988), State v. Colin, 61 Wn.App. 111 (1991), State v. Selander, 65 Wn.App. 134 (1992); 6-3.

State v. Mannhalt, 33 Wn.App. 696 (1983)

Informant personally appears before magistrate and testifies under oath making statements against penal interest; police verify a portion of informant's testimony; magistrate finds testimony credible, meeting Aguilar-Spinelli credibility prong; where informant lies to magistrate, but police are unaware of this, court will not suppress, as good faith reliance by government officials on knowing and materially false statements of a nongovernmental affiant does not call for use of the exclusionary rule, United States v. Damitz, 495 F.2d 50, 55 (9th Cir., 1974); State v. Vegas, 20 Wn.App. 535 (1978).

State v. Riley, 34 Wn.App. 529 (1983)

Named informant states he knows defendant has stolen computer but does not know its location; another named informant states he knows defendant has Apple computer; police state in affidavit that an Apple computer was stolen from a school; held: Aguilar-Spinelli tests are met; III.

State v. Myers, 35 Wn.App. 543 (1983)

Affidavit states that informant has made five reliable buys and provided information leading to one search warrant, and that informant was in suspect's home, knew suspect, observed what he believed to be heroin, that he is familiar with heroin through use; held: meets both Aguilar-Spinelli tests; I.

State v. Davis, 35 Wn.App. 724 (1983)

Police receive information from informant that suspect would arrive on flight from L.A. to Seattle on a date certain to deliver drugs to a man whom police confirm was involved in drugs; suspect arrives without luggage, has traffic warrant; held: (1) traffic warrant is enough to search incident to arrest (2) even without warrant, totality of circumstances is enough to search on probable cause since informant's tip is corroborated, suspect had no luggage and came from a primary drug source city, Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983); absence of search warrant, as existed in Gates, does not affect validity of search as totality of circumstances test applies with or without warrant; I.

State v. Bowers, 36 Wn.App. 119 (1983)

Informant tells police defendant was on street with Ritalin; police observe defendant standing on corner contacting two drivers, arrest him, find drugs; held: information was conclusory only, with no factual basis; defendant's approaching two vehicles without police observations of an exchange fails to establish probable cause, thus evidence suppressed; II.

State v. Woodall, 100 Wn.2d 74 (1983)

A "reliable informant who has proven to be reliable in the past" is a mere conclusion which fails to meet veracity requirement of Aguilar-Spinelli or Illinois v. Gates test; reverses State v. Woodall, 32 Wn.App. 407 (1982); cf.: State v. Colin, 61 Wn.App. 111 (1991); see: State v. Salinas, 119 Wn.2d 192 (1992), State v. Selander, 65 Wn.App. 134 (1992); 9-0.

Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983)

Police receive anonymous letter detailing drug transaction to occur; police verify and substantiate some of the information and obtain a warrant based upon the anonymous letter and the corroboration; held: two-pronged Aguilar-Spinelli test is abandoned, replaced with totality of circumstances test; veracity and basis of informant's knowledge are relevant, but a deficiency in one may be compensated for by a strong showing as to the other; magistrate must determine whether there is a fair probability that evidence will be found in a particular place; 5-4.

State v. Patterson, 37 Wn.App. 275 (1984)

Unnamed juvenile testifies before magistrate that he burglarized defendant's home, stole psilocybin mushrooms two days earlier; warrant issued, drugs seized; held: fact that informant is unnamed does not necessarily make his information unreliable, distinguishing State v. Hett, 31 Wn.App. 849, 851 (1982); I.

State v. Morehouse, 38 Wn.App. 191 (1984)

Affidavit establishes reliability of informant but not of a middleman whose actions are corroborated by the informant; held: under totality of circumstance test, Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983), informant and police corroboration of middleman's actions is sufficient to uphold warrant; I.

State v. Steenerson, 38 Wn.App. 722 (1984)

Affidavit states informant is reliable, made a prior controlled buy, is familiar with marijuana, and observed marijuana in suspect's home; held: affidavit failed to sufficiently establish reliability under Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983); II.

State v. O'Connor, 39 Wn.App. 113 (1984)

Veracity prong of Aguilar-Spinelli test may be met without corroboration where informant is named, arrested, advised of rights, made statements against interest and provided details, see: State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989), State v. Gross, 57 Wn.App. 549, 553 (1990), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thein, 138 Wn.2d 133 (1999), State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991), but see: State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); I.

State v. Casto, 39 Wn.App. 229 (1984)

Properly executed controlled buy (search before and after, marked money) will establish both Aguilar-Spinelli prongs; accord: State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989); II.

State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432 (1984)

Washington rejects Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983), returning to Aguilar-Spinelli; here there was insufficient evidence in affidavit to establish basis of knowledge prong but independent police investigation corroborated the tip sufficiently to support missing element, Ker v. California, 10 L.Ed.2d 726 (1963), see: State v. McCord, 125 Wn.App. 888 (2005); accord: State v. Smith, 102 Wn.2d 449 (1984); but see: State v. Randall, 73 Wn.App. 225, 228-9 (1994), State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 904 (2009); 7-2.

Massachusetts v. Upton, 80 L.Ed.2d 721 (1984)

Search warrant issued based upon telephone tip from purported acquaintance of suspect who did not identify herself but whose voice police officer recognized; held: under totality of circumstances test, there was sufficient information provided the magistrate to support a determination that there was a "fair probability" that evidence would be found; 7-2.

State v. McPherson, 40 Wn.App. 298 (1985)

Anonymous tip that defendant was growing marijuana in his home plus police observation of condensation on windows, potting soil, black plastic over windows plus two to threefold increase in power consumption is insufficient to establish probable cause, as observations were consistent with lawful behavior, informant was neither reliable nor credible, State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694, 704-06 (2006), see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), cf.: Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014); I.

State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985)

Unnamed citizen tells officer that a man in a bus station restroom stall has a gun, describes suspect; officer enters restroom, sees man who meets description, holds him at gun point, is told by suspect that suspect has a blank gun in his rucksack, handcuffs suspect, searches rucksack, finds starter pistol and handcuffs in rucksack; officer recalls a police bulletin concerning a crime committed with handcuffs, arrests defendant who, following further investigation, is charged and convicted of a robbery; held: investigatory stop was proper where an anonymous informant of undetermined reliability states he observed suspect carrying or displaying a gun in a public place, Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), but see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), cf.: State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593, 605-07 (2004), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); where officer is told by suspect he has a gun in a container, officer may search container since releasing it to suspect would put officer in danger, United States v. McClinnhan, 660 F.2d 500 (D.C. Cir. 1981); arrest was unlawful as officer at best only suspected suspect of committing a crime, and recollection of police bulletin was too vague to support probable cause; I.

State v. Paradiso, 43 Wn.App. 1 (1986)

Affidavit in support of warrant states that informant has "provided verifiable [sic] information and assistance in drug purchases" and has seen marijuana in the house in question; held: veracity prong is met, as statement is more than a mere conclusion, State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962, 965 (1982); but see: State v. Woodall, 100 Wn.2d 74 (1983); 2-1, III.

State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986)

Reliability prong of Aguilar-Spinelli test is met where disclosed citizen informant provides detailed description of the underlying circumstances of the crime observed, State v. Riley, 34 Wn.App. 529 (1983), State v. Northness, 20 Wn.App. 551 (1978), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); I.

State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986)

Undercover police buy drugs from seller four times, each time seller tells police she obtained drugs from "Laurie" at defendant's address; police obtain warrant based on this information; held: seller's veracity is established by her statements against penal interest with no motive to lie plus police having watched seller go to and from defendant's residence with officer's money and return with drugs, State v. Maffeo, 31 Wn.App. 198 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Huft, 106 Wn.2d 206 (1986)

Affidavit states that confidential informant told police defendant was growing marijuana, no basis of knowledge or reliability established, citizen informant reports defendant growing marijuana, not identified, police independently verify defendant lived at address, observed bright light in basement, determine that power consumption had increased 46%; held: although informant's tip does not establish either Aguilar-Spinelli test, State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695 (1991), independent police investigation which points to suspicious activities along lines suggested by informant may establish probable cause, State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432 (1984), State v. Merkt, 124 Wn.App. 607 (2004); here, police investigation only corroborated innocuous facts, State v. McCord, 125 Wn.App. 888 (2005); increased power consumption plus bright light is insufficient, State v. McPherson, 40 Wn.App. 298 (1985), State v. Crawley, 61 Wn.App. 29 (1991); unnamed citizen informant's information which does not provide a basis for knowledge is insufficient, see: State v. White, 44 Wn.App. 215 (1986), State v. Duncan, 81 Wn.App. 70 (1996), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986)

Following warrantless stop of vehicle and seizure of drugs, officer testifies at suppression hearing that he had received tips from an informer for several months, that the informant is reliable, that one tip resulted in a warrant and conviction, establishing reliability prong; in addition officer testified informer told him that defendant purchased drugs from a certain house, that defendant usually drove a specific car, that defendant only went to that house to purchase drugs, that officer had received complaints of frequent foot traffic at the house, officer saw defendant leave the house and drive off in the car described by the informant; held: corroboration established a well-founded suspicion to stop defendant, see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 904 (2009), cf.: State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Berlin, 46 Wn.App. 587 (1987)

Affidavit states that three citizens reported a marijuana grow operation, that citizens wished to remain anonymous for fear of retaliation, that they gave names and identifying information to affiant-officer, have no records, were interviewed by the affiant and appeared honest; held: although identity was not revealed to the magistrate, State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986), identity was revealed to officer, unlike State v. Chatmon, 9 Wn.App. 741 (1973), and there was a legitimate reason for anonymity, thus reliability prong was met, cf.: State v. Franklin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987), State v. Mickle, 53 Wn.App. 39 (1988), State v. Payne, 54 Wn.App. 240 (1989), State v. Dice, 55 Wn.App. 489 (1989), State v. Dobyns, 55 Wn.App. 609 (1989), State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695 (1991), State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000), State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694, 704-06 (2006), see: State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593, 605-07 (2004); I.

State v. Thetford, 109 Wn.2d 3092 (1987)

When an informant's involvement with and control by the police is so great that he is a de facto police officer, then he is no longer protected by the informer's privilege, RCW 5.60.060(5), CrR 4.7(f)(2); merely paying the informant does not remove the informant from the informant's privilege; where the defense has correctly identified the informant, then the informant is no longer protected by the informant's privilege, Rovario v. United States, 1 L.Ed.2d 639, 644-645 (1957); where a de facto police officer-informant makes reckless or false statements to police officer-affiant, then those statements shall be excised from the affidavit in support of warrant; 9-0.

State v. Freeman, 47 Wn.App. 870 (1987)

Affidavit which states that informant introduced police to a subject "where that individual was subsequently arrested and charged with delivery of [drugs] and also a quantity of [drugs] were seized" satisfied reliability prong; 2-1, I.

State v. Franklin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987)

Affidavit states that police received information from a confidential citizen informer who asked to remain anonymous, and who was "an upstanding citizen with no criminal record" held not to meet reliability prong, as credibility of informer was based entirely upon officer's conclusion without corroboration, distinguishing State v. Berlin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987), accord: State v. Mickle, 53 Wn.App. 39 (1988), State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694, 704-06 (2006), but see: State v. Payne, 54 Wn.App. 240 (1989), State v. Dobyns, 55 Wn.App. 609 (1989), cf.: State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 285-9 (1995), State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000); 2-1, III.

State v. Smith, 110 Wn.2d 658 (1988)

Where informant suggests to police that he could go onto suspect's property and police tell informant that he could not do so without a legitimate reason and could not trespass, then informant is not an agent of the state, even if informant is not an innocent volunteer; 6-3.

State v. Murray, 110 Wn.2d 706 (1988)

Affidavit states tipster told reliable informant that tipster saw marijuana growing in basement of a house, and police obtained power records establishing double average power consumption, police heard exhaust fan operating in basement at 11 p.m. with no steam escaping thus inconsistent with showering, and use of infrared viewing device established high heat in basement area consistent with grow lights; held: tipster meets basis of knowledge prong as he saw marijuana, see: State v. Wilke, 55 Wn.App. 470 (1989), State v. Creelman, 75 Wn.App. 490 (1994); police corroboration establishes basis of knowledge prong, State v. Cowin, 116 Wn.App. 752, 758-60 (2003); failure of defense counsel to cite authority in support of argument that obtaining power records without warrant and failure to elicit evidence that police trespassed when using infrared viewing device precludes review on those issues; 9-0.

State v. Carver, 51 Wn.App. 347 (1988)

Eight- and ten-year-old children tell police that a six-year-old neighbor gave them marijuana which she got from her parents, marijuana tests positive; held: six-year-old's possession of the marijuana, statement she got it from her parents plus her lack of access to drug sources establishes basis of knowledge prong; eight- and ten-year-olds' mutual corroboration, specific detail, and fact that they immediately gave it to their mother plus six-year-old's very young age support reliability prong as identified citizen informants, State v. Northness, 20 Wn.App. 551 (1978); court asserts that this option does not accord blanket approval to double hearsay; III.

State v. Ortiz, 52 Wn.App. 523 (1988)

Where informant is a victim or eyewitness, reliability requirement is relaxed, State v. Chatmon, 9 Wn.App. 741, 748 n.4 (1973), veracity analysis is of diminished importance, State v. Berlin, 46 Wn.App. 587 (1987), corroboration is not always essential, State v. Sheldon, 38 Wn.App. 195 (1984), State v. Wakeley, 29 Wn.App. 238 (1981), State v. Wilke, 55 Wn.App. 470 (1989), State v. Randall, 73 Wn.App. 225 (1994); I.

State v. Mickle, 53 Wn.App. 39 (1988)

Affidavit states that citizen informant, known to police but not disclosed to magistrate, is a long-time resident and business owner of county, has no record, is familiar with marijuana having seen it before, had been to suspect's home, observed marijuana growing, police verified that electric power is on; held: facts used to establish informant's credibility were not related to the issue of credibility, affidavit fails to establish reason for informant's desire for anonymity or why informant was at suspect's home, nor is there a "wealth of collateral detail" corroboration, thus suppressed, State v. Franklin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987), State v. Chatmon, 9 Wn.App. 741 (1973), State v. Huft, 106 Wn.2d 206 (1986), State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694, 704-06 (2006), cf.: State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000); III.

State v. Mejia, 111 Wn.2d 892 (1989)

Affidavit states police search reliable informant, establish he is drug-free, observe informant speak to unknown middleman, follow middleman to defendant's residence, observe middleman enter residence, then observe middleman meet with informant who gets drugs from middleman and turns them over to police; held: Aguilar-Spinelli does not apply to middleman's nonassertive conduct, magistrate could reasonably infer that middleman acquired drugs from defendant's house from middleman's conduct alone, overruling State v. Smith, 28 Wn.App. 387 (1981) and State v. Morehouse, 41 Wn.App. 334 (1985); accord, State v. Gonzales, 51 Wn.App. 242 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Hall, 53 Wn.App. 296 (1989)

Police arrest a drug suspect who then gives police name of supplier; police go to supplier-defendant's residence, observe a bong through window, obtain warrant; held: where informant has been arrested and provides details against his own interest, and police corroborate information by observing bong, then informer is reliable, State v. Bean, 89 Wn.2d 467 (1978), see: State v. Chamberlin, 161 Wn.2d 30, 41-42 (2007); III.

State v. Rodriguez, 53 Wn.App. 571 (1989)

Affidavit states that a mechanic, while working on a vehicle, found drugs, called police who obtained warrant; drugs placed back in car, car turned over to suspect who drives it away, police stop vehicle, arrest defendant, search and find drugs; held: while citizen-informant was unnamed in affidavit, he obtained his information in entirely unsuspicious circumstances and description in warrant makes him readily identifiable, thus credibility prong met, State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 572-73 (2000), cf.: State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695 (1991); defendant's driving car provided probable cause to arrest; see: State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539, 542-3 (1996); III.

State v. Moore, 54 Wn.App. 211 (1989)

Disclosed citizen informant tells magistrate that, to clear his conscience, he is informing on suspect who had employed him to tend a marijuana farm, warrant is issued, drugs found, defendant files affidavit stating that informant admitted that he was forced to lie by police pressure, informant denies saying this, defendant's demand for evidentiary hearing to show informant was a dissembling government agent, Franks v. Delaware, 57 L.Ed.2d 667 (1978), State v. Thetford, 109 Wn.2d 392 (1987), denied; held: uncorroborated claim by defense that informant was a liar is insufficient to overcome the presumption favoring the warrant, cf.: State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 157-60 (2007); I.

State v. Payne, 54 Wn.App. 240 (1989)

Informant is apparently known to police, has no record, had been at scene of marijuana grow operation, appeared voluntarily, police corroborate with a six-month-old tip from another police agency; trial court suppresses, holding affidavit is conclusory, insufficient evidence of credibility; held: identity was known to police, distinguishing State v. Franklin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987), desire for anonymity was self-protection, distinguishing State v. Mickle, 53 Wn.App. 39 (1988), additional corroboration establishes probable cause, State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000); III, 2-1.

State v. Dobyns, 55 Wn.App. 609 (1989)

Where affidavit states that citizen informant who wishes to remain anonymous has no record, did not give information in return for leniency, asked for no money and was motivated by an interest in justice, veracity prong is met, State v. Berlin, 46 Wn.App. 587 (1987), State v. Franklin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987) (Green, J., dissenting), State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000); affidavit need not state why informant wishes to remain anonymous unless informant withheld identity from police, State v. Chatmon, 9 Wn.App. 741 (1973), cf.: State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593, 604-07 (2004), State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694, 704-06 (2006); I.

State v. Stone, 56 Wn.App. 153 (1989)

Warrant to obtain unlisted telephone number is based in part upon license plate number obtained by an unidentified person; held: where a citizen provides nonaccusatory information which does not describe criminal activity, and the nature of the information strongly suggests it was obtained by personal observation, then credibility and reliability need not be demonstrated, United States v. Melvin, 596 F.2d 492 (1st Cir. 1979), State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171, 181 (2002); III.

State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989)

Controlled buy is sufficient to establish probable cause without establishing reliability of informant where informant is strip searched prior to entry, upon return informant has drugs but not the money given by police, police surveil place during buy, and had previously observed known drug dealers and users go in on several occasions, State v. Casto, 39 Wn.App. 229 (1984); III.

State v. Conner, 58 Wn.App. 90 (1990)

Crime victim pointing out suspect is inherently reliable for purposes of Aguilar-Spinelli analysis, State v. Northness, 20 Wn.App. 551 (1978), State v. Chatmon, 9 Wn.App. 741, 748 n.4 (1973), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); victim need not first explain how he knows he was victimized or why he believes suspect is the perpetrator; once police have sufficient evidence that a crime has been committed, along with an identification of the suspect by the victim, there is probable cause for an arrest; I.

State v. Medcalf, 58 Wn.App. 817 (1990)

Where numerous explicit details about crime are set forth in affidavit, such that there is a strong suggestion that informant is crime victim, then reliability is established and no independent corroboration is required, State v. Northness, 20 Wn.App. 551 (1978); I.

State v. Rice, 59 Wn.App. 23 (1990)

Radio broadcast of shots fired at a specific location is deemed reliable as information from a citizen informant justifying detention, State v. Conner, 58 Wn.App. 90 (1990), State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 8 (1986), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015), see: State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015); I.:

Alabama v. White, 110 L.Ed.2d 301 (1990)

Police receive anonymous telephone tip that suspect would leave a particular apartment at a particular time in a certain vehicle, would go to a specific place and would possess drugs; police follow suspect, who acts in accordance with tip, detain her, she consents to search, drugs found; held: tip plus police corroboration, Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983), establish a well-founded suspicion to detain, Adams v. Williams, 32 L.Ed.2d 612 (1972), Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), but see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991)

Informer's statement against penal interest to police officer alone is a factor to be considered, State v. Hett, 31 Wn.App. 849, 851 (1982), although it may add little or nothing to credibility; greater reliability may be attached to admissions against penal interest in post-arrest situations, particularly where the information is given in exchange for a promise of leniency, State v. Bean, 89 Wn.2d 467, 471 (1978), State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259 (1993), State v. Ollivier, 161 Wn.App. 397 (2011), 178 Wn.2d 813, 851 (2013), see: State v. Chamberlin, 161 Wn.2d 30, 41-42 (2007), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 908 (2009); II.

State v. Crawley, 61 Wn.App. 29 (1991)

Anonymous informant calls police, states she saw marijuana at defendant's residence, that defendant told her what it was, that she is a friend of defendant's mother, whom she names and whom officer knows, and that high intensity light is shining from residence; police corroborate high intensity light, obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: observation of marijuana and confirmation by defendant satisfy basis of knowledge element; presence of high intensity light, even when coupled with evidence of increase in electrical consumption, is insufficient, State v. Huft, 106 Wn.2d 206 (1986); III.

State v. Colin, 61 Wn.App. 111 (1991)

Affidavit states that based upon information provided by informant, one arrest has resulted "in this investigation" and informant has provided information in other narcotics investigations that have been proven accurate by other detectives is sufficient, State v. Wolken, 103 Wn.2d 823, 827 (1985), State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962, 965 (1982), State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259 (1993), distinguishing State v. Woodall, 100 Wn.2d 76 (1983); III.

State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695 (1991)

Affidavit: citizen informer, known to police, identity not revealed to magistrate, reports as civic duty that s/he observed cocaine in defendant's home, informer has never used but knows what cocaine looks like; held: credibility prong: state's burden of demonstrating unidentified citizen informer's credibility is heightened, State v. Rodriguez, 53 Wn.App. 571, 575-6 (1989) due to danger that informer is an anonymous troublemaker; here, nothing establishes credibility or explanation why informer was at crime scene; basis of knowledge: affidavit fails to establish how informer gained knowledge, nor a description, nor how informer came by information, thus insufficient, State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593, 605-07 (2004), State v. Ferguson, 131 Wn.App. 694, 704-06 (2006), but see: State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000), cf.: State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 285-9 (1995), State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 160-64 (2007); II.

State v. Garcia, 63 Wn.App. 868 (1992)

Motel manager observes bindles in room, smells diesel fuel, provides that information to officer who states in affidavit that bindles and diesel fuel are used in cocaine; held: basis of knowledge prong is met where informant provides facts to officer-affiant who links information to criminal activity, State v. Berlin, 46 Wn.App. 587, 592 (1987); III.

State v. Salinas, 119 Wn.2d 192 (1992)

Recency of informant's assistance in drug investigations resulting in arrests, seizure of drugs, charges filed is more than mere conclusion, distinguishing State v. Woodall, 100 Wn.2d 74, 76 (1983), sufficient to establish veracity and reliability prong; 9-0.

State v. Selander, 65 Wn.App. 134 (1992)

Reliability is established where informant provided information that resulted in one conviction, see: State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962 (1982); cf.: State v. Woodall, 100 Wn.2d 74 (1983); II.

State v. Hart, 66 Wn.App. 1 (1992)

Police approach vehicle, observe open container, occupants state that a man dressed in black on a motorcycle nearby is selling drugs, respondent appears as described, occupant points out respondent, police stop respondent, patdown, find drugs; held: an informant's tip possesses sufficient indicia of reliability where (1) the informant is reliable and (2) the informant's tip contains enough objective facts to justify pursuit and detention or the noninnocuous details of the tip have been corroborated by the police thus suggesting that the information was obtained in a reliable fashion, State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-8 (1980), State v. Lesnick, 10 Wn.App. 281, 285 (1973), aff'd, 84 Wn.2d 940 (1975), State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008); while informant here could be deemed reliable as he was unlikely to make his situation worse by giving false information to police and because he was not entirely anonymous (although officer did not have his name at suppression hearing, he testified he did record his name), the tip lacked any objective facts to justify respondent's detention, and police observation of respondent only corroborate innocuous details, State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021, thus suppressed; I.

State v. Bittner, 66 Wn.App. 541 (1992)

Affidavit states informant was with a friend who stopped at defendant's home, told informant he purchased drugs and showed drugs to informant; held: single unobserved transaction by an unidentified friend of informant uncorroborated by evidence with no effort to establish friend's reliability is insufficient to support search; I.

State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259 (1993)

Where affidavit states that informant "has assisted the...[p]olice...by posing as a seller of controlled substances...to individuals he has had prior dealings with involving" drugs, reliability prong is satisfied, State v. Wolken, 103 Wn.2d 823 (1985), State v. Colin, 61 Wn.App. 111 (1991); naming informant in affidavit supports reliability prong, State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706 (1981), State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991); lack of report in affidavit to a pending criminal charge against informant is not fatal, as pending charges further support reliability and veracity, State v. Bean, 89 Wn.2d 467 (1978), State v. Estorga, supra; promises of leniency in exchange for information which includes statements against penal interest enhances reliability, State v.

O'Connor, 39 Wn.App. 113, 121 (1984), State v. Merkt, 124 Wn.App. 607 (2004), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 908 (2009), see: State v. Chamberlin, 161 Wn.2d 30, 41-42 (2007), but see: State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); III.

State v. Randall, 73 Wn.App. 225 (1994)

Radio broadcasts armed robbery with description of two robbers, ten minutes later officer observes two males fitting description six blocks from robbery, suspects leave area upon observing police, officer finds suspect, stops him, pats down, feels hard object, seizes it, finds pipe and drugs; held: where an investigatory stop is based on information given by another person, the stop is valid if under totality of circumstances officer had reasonable suspicion that defendant was engaged in criminal activity, rejecting Aguilar-Spinelli and State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432 (1984) in Terry stop situations, State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 904 (2009); since reported offense was a violent, armed crime, requiring an in-depth analysis of reliability of the information by the officer would increase threat to public safety, State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985), see: State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940, 944-5 (1975), cf.: State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); here, investigatory stop and frisk was reasonable; but see: State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992); I.

State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111 (1994)

Where police deliberately or recklessly omit drug informer's criminal status relationship to defendant and other facts that might identify informer, it is not material to a finding of probable cause, at 117-9, see: State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286, 294-5 (1989); ulterior motive of informer need not be disclosed to magistrate, since informants frequently have records and self-serving motives; I.

State v. Garcia, 125 Wn.2d 239 (1994)

Citizen tells officer that defendant said he had drugs, officer had heard other officers describe citizen as a frequent visitor who often pointed out persons carrying drugs, few months earlier citizen had identified to the officer a person carrying drugs which resulted in arrest, officer asks defendant to talk, defendant consents to talk and to search, police find drugs; held: citizen tip does not require a showing of the same degree of reliability as from a "professional" informant, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 8 (1986), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015), see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), intrusion was minimal, consent to search was freely given, thus there were sufficient indicia of reliability to provide an objective measure of reasonableness; per curiam.

State v. Creelman, 75 Wn.App. 490 (1994)

Affidavit states that concerned citizen informant whose name is known to police observed marijuana growing in residence and that he is familiar with it; held: deferring to magistrate's determination of probable cause, citizen informant's observation and assertion of familiarity with marijuana is sufficient, State v. Murray, 110 Wn.2d 706, 711 (1988), State v. Smith, 110 Wn.2d 658, 663 (1988), State v. Wolken, 103 Wn.2d 823, 827 (1985), State v.

Vickers, 148 Wn.2d 91, 111-13 (2002), but see: State v. Matlock, 27 Wn.App. 152, 155-6 (1980); I.

State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 285-9 (1995)

Informant known to affiant but not disclosed to magistrate is reliable where affidavit establishes he was a neighbor of house searched for several years, worked in community, had an extended family, no record, volunteered, did not request compensation, distinguishing State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695 (1991), State v. Franklin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987), State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000), see: State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593, 605-07 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Duncan, 81 Wn.App. 70, 76-8 (1996)

Affidavit states suspect's girlfriend, following domestic dispute, observed suspect take marijuana from a storage unit, storage unit records establish suspect rented the unit and had visited unit when girlfriend said he did, suspect had previously grown marijuana; held: girlfriend's veracity was not established, police did not check her identity, address, employment, residence, family history, State v. Wilke, 55 Wn.App. 470, 479 (1989), police investigation corroborated only innocuous facts, State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173, 196 (1994), State v. Huft, 106 Wn.2d 206, 211 (1986), State v. McCord, 125 Wn.App. 888 (2005), rather than criminal activity, State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432, 438 (1984), prior criminal history is insufficient, see: State v. Sterling, 43 Wn.App. 846, 851 (1986), State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437, 446 (1980), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021), thus veracity prong not satisfied; III.

State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997)

Driver of a truck with a company name on it indicates with hand signals to officer that car in front weaved, office observes no infractions but stops car, after tests arrests defendant for DUI; held: name written on side of truck is not qualitatively different from a named but unknown telephone caller, insufficient to establish reliability of citizen informer, Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833, 835 (1982), State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-9 (1980), State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), cf. *State v. Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997)

PUD employee volunteers to police that defendant's power usage is high, after further investigation, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: there is a privacy interest in public power records (plurality of four justices holds pursuant to state constitution), PUD employee lacked statutory authority to disclose record to police, thus suppressed, State v. Orick, 129 Wn.App. 654 (2005), see: State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54, 67-8 (1986); RCW 42.17.314 authorizes police to demand power records only after setting forth in writing a reasonable suspicion, State v. Maxwell, 114 Wn.2d 761 (1990); overrules, on state grounds, State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378 (1994), reverses Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 81 Wn.App. 705 (1996); 5-4.

State v. Bauer, 98 Wn.App. 870 (2000)

Affidavit in support of search warrant states that citizen informant had lived in a house with growing marijuana in the past, had observed a marijuana grow within thirty days at defendant's home, that informant was afraid of retaliation, wanted hotline reward money, was concerned about drugs, police confirm informant had no record, was a citizen of Washington for nine years, and was a registered voter; held: basis of knowledge satisfied by observation, verification by police established credibility and no motive to falsify, thus Aguilar-Spinelli prongs were met, distinguishing State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695, 700 (1991), State v. Mickle, 53 Wn.App. 39 (1988), State v. Franklin, 49 Wn.App. 106 (1987); 2-1, II.

Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000)

Anonymous call to police reports young black male at a bus stop wearing plaid shirt carrying a gun, police respond to specific bus stop, see black male in plaid shirt, frisk, find gun; held: anonymous tip that a person is carrying a gun, without more, is insufficient to justify a stop and frisk, distinguishing Alabama v. White, 110 L.Ed.2d 301 (1990), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), cf.: State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985), Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Tarter, 111 Wn.App. 336 (2002)

Motel owner tells police that tenant paid cash, 20 calls came to room within an hour, high traffic to room, people from room crossed street to truck stop for brief encounters, police obtain warrant, find drugs; held: basis of knowledge established from motel owner's firsthand observations, State v. Duncan, 81 Wn.App. 70, 76 (1996), veracity is established as informer is a named citizen, State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695, 699 (1991), State v. Northness, 20 Wn.App. 551, 557-58 (1978), but see: State v. McCord, 125 Wn.App. 888, 893 (2005); III.

State v. Boyer, 124 Wn.App. 593, 605-07 (2004)

Affidavit states that citizen informant not disclosed to magistrate had seen stolen goods and drugs in an apartment; held: veracity prong is not met, as nothing addresses informant's background, standing in community, reasons for being present at scene of crime, motivation in providing information to police, State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 287-88 (1995), State v. Dobyns, 55 Wn.App. 609, 618 (1989); absent information as to how informant can identify cocaine or basis for belief that the items were stolen, basis of knowledge prong fails; III.

State v. McCord, 125 Wn.App. 888 (2005)

Merely naming a person in affidavit is insufficient to determine reliability, State v. Duncan, 81 Wn.App. 70, 78 (1996), cf.: State v. Tarter, 111 Wn.App. 336 (2002); corroboration of an informant's tip with information discovered through an independent police investigation may cure a deficiency, State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111, 116 (1994), but investigation must verify more than innocuous facts, State v. Huft, 106 Wn.2d 206. 210 (1986), corroboration must suggest probative indications of criminal activity along the lines suggested by the informant, State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432, 438 (1984), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); III.

State v. Orick, 129 Wn.App. 654 (2005)

Police, suspicious of marijuana grow operation, ask Public Utility District to check for possible power diversion, two PUD employees enter property past no trespassing signs and determine diversion, police obtain warrant; held: while Fourth Amendment and art I, § 7 generally do not apply to PUD employees, here employees acted at express request of, and thus jointly and in concert with, police, who lacked probable cause, thus evidence suppressed, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332, 337-38 (1997); III.

State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 160-64 (2007)

Where affidavit establishes that citizen informant whose name is not given to magistrate received no compensation, gave name and contact information to affiant, affiant states a background check revealed nothing to suspect the information provided was false and informant said he came forward to rid the community of drugs, credibility is established, cf.: State v. Ibarra, 61 Wn.App. 695 (1991); III.

State v. Nelson, 152 Wn.App. 755, 772-73 (2009)

Where affidavit states that anonymous citizen informants are neighbors of a dog fighting operation, without criminal records who had visited the property, informants' credibility is established; III.

State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014)

911 caller at 2:45 a.m. asks for civil standby at defendant's residence to recover property, told to call back at a more reasonable hour, 13 minutes later 911 caller says he witnessed a man threaten woman with a shotgun in front of defendant's residence, gives a name and describes a specific car parked outside residence, says he's at a gas station, police drive by house, no lights, go to gas station, no one present, return to house, use loudspeaker, defendant exits, is handcuffed and placed in patrol car, says no women have been present, says 911 caller had been there earlier, denies waving a shotgun, police sweep house, no women present, officer asks defendant if he has a shotgun, defendant says yes and consents to search, police find shotgun, defendant is charged with felon in possession; held: while a 911 phone call from an unknown caller who gives a contemporaneous eyewitness account of a serious offense presenting an exigent threat to public safety may provide a valid basis for a Terry stop, Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), here police had good reason to question reliability of the 911 call, suspicion of exigent circumstances dissipated before officer asked if defendant had a gun and would consent, thus admission and consent were not within the scope of a valid Terry stop, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64, 72-73 (2004), State v. Wakely, 29 Wn.App. 288, 241 (1981), State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 42, 48 (1980), State v. Hopkins, 128 Wn.App. 855, 858-59 (2005), *Florida v. State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021)

Police serve arrest warrant on a woman, find drugs, unsolicited she states she bought the drugs from defendant who uses the nickname "Duffles," drives a specific car and will have drugs on him and in his hotel room, later officer observe a car meeting informant's description, performs a traffic stop, orders defendant out of car, frisks for weapons, observes drugs in car, obtains search warrant, seizes drugs, a month later police observe defendant driving, stop car, arrest defendant an a warrant, drug dog alerts, search warrant obtained; held: an informant's tip is insufficient for a Terry stop absent circumstances establishing informant's reliability or corroborative observation that shows criminal activity or that informer's information was obtained in a reasonable fashion; while an informant is more credible if s/he makes a statement against penal interest, State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432, 437 (1984),

State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706, 710 (1981), a criminal informant is not presumed to be acting out of civic responsibility; "[t]he real question is not whether the informant has technically made a statement against interest, but whether the statement against interest was made under circumstances suggestive of reliability," at ¶19; here, informer's statement was not the type of statement against interest that carries an aura of reliability, the information was not amenable to corroboration, police only corroborated innocuous facts, State v. Z.U.E., 183 Wn.2d 610, 618-19 (2015); because both stops had a direct causal connection to the informer's information, thus both seizures suppressed; III.

Informer, Disclosure

State v. Larson, 26 Wn.App. 564 (1980)

Won't disclose unless evidence sought bears on guilt or innocence; seems to say need not disclose to address issue of probable cause in affidavit; evidence that informant lied to police is not enough to get in camera hearing.

State v. Allen, 27 Wn.App. 41 (1980)

In camera hearing is required where defendant makes a preliminary showing that informant may have evidence relevant to defendant's innocence; here, informant might testify as to possession of drugs by persons other than defendant; request for disclosure or in camera hearing is of constitutional stature and may be raised for the first time on appeal; but see: State v. Frederick, 45 Wn.App. 916 (1986).

State v. Mathiesen, 27 Wn.App. 261 (1980)

Trial court may excise portions of affidavit in support of a warrant to prevent disclosure of informant, but must release the remainder of affidavit to defense; court may not seal entire affidavit.

State v. Cleppe, 96 Wn.2d 373 (1981)

Search warrant affidavit states informant tells police he had been in residence, observed defendant's girlfriend use heroin, that girlfriend said that heroin belonged to her, and that she said "they" had cocaine for sale; held: court should hold in camera hearing with informant to determine whether informant would be helpful to defense.

State v. Haywood, 38 Wn.App. 117 (1984)

Defense sought disclosure of informant alleging that informant lied to police because the only place informant could have been was in jail at the time he allegedly saw drugs in defendant's home; prosecutor stated jail records reflected that informant was not in jail; held: while disclosure may be appropriate where defense shows information was false or that police knew information was patently unreliable, United States v. Danesi, 342 F.Supp. 889 (D.Conn. 1972), State v. Wright, 511 P.2d 1223, 1225 (OR. 1973), decision to disclose is within discretion of trial court, United States v. Anderson, 509 F.2d 724 (9th Cir. 1974); III.

State v. Casal, 103 Wn.2d 812 (1985)

Police obtain warrant based upon confidential informant's information, search residence, seize drugs; defendant provides affidavit naming a person alleged to be informant and stating that informant told him affidavit misrepresented the story informant gave police; held: when defendant's allegations cast reasonable doubt on veracity of material representations in affidavit, trial court shall conduct in camera hearing, on the record, to determine whether defendant's identification of informant is correct, whether affiant truthfully reported facts; reverses State v. Casal, 38 Wn.App. 310 (1984); see also: State v. Wolken, 103 Wn.2d 823 (1985), but see:

State v. Harris, 44 Wn.App. 401 (1986), State v. Stansbury, 64 Wn.App. 601 (1992), State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147 (2007); accord: State v. White, 50 Wn.App. 858 (1988), State v. Selander, 65 Wn.App. 134 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Harris, 44 Wn.App. 401 (1986)

Defense is not entitled to disclosure of informant's identity or in camera hearing where defense provides evidence that the informant lied to the affiant, but presents no evidence that affiant lied, McCray v. Illinois, 18 L.Ed.2d 62 (1967), distinguishing State v. Casal, 103 Wn.2d 812 (1985); I.

State v. Unthoff, 45 Wn.App. 261 (1986)

Trial court may consider informant's safety in determining whether or not disclosure should be ordered, United States v. Ward, 703 F.2d 1062 (8th Cir. 1983), State v. Harris, 91 Wn.2d 145, 150-1 (1978); I.

State v. Enriquez, 45 Wn.App. 580 (1986)

Defendant's motion for in camera hearing on issue of disclosure of informant is denied; at trial, defendant raises entrapment defense; held: where defendant's testimony at trial establishes that entrapment is not available as a defense as a matter of law, then appellate court need not remand for in camera hearing even though trial judge gave entrapment instructions; see: State v. Vargas, 58 Wn.App. 391 (1990); 2-1, I.

State v. Fredrick, 45 Wn.App. 916 (1986)

Affidavit states that informant saw drugs in the residence; defendant seeks in camera hearing to determine if informant would establish that drugs were in constructive possession of co-defendant only; trial court declines in camera hearing; held: where defense fashions no specific exculpatory scenario, and drugs were found in defendant's personal belongings, no in camera hearing is necessary; Division I declines to follow State v. Allen, 27 Wn.App. 41 (1980), another Division I case to the contrary.

State v. White, 50 Wn.App. 858 (1988)

Where defendant correctly identifies informant and raises a reasonable doubt as to veracity of material representations made by affiant, trial court must hold in camera hearing with informant present; if trial court finds that probable cause was questionable, there must be an open evidentiary hearing, State v. Casal, 103 Wn.2d 812 (1985); III.

State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989)

Trial court orders informant disclosed, investigator searches for informant for five days unsuccessfully, court denies continuance to find informant; held: where continuance is requested to locate witness, accused must show that the witness can probably be found if granted and that due diligence has been used; test on appeal is whether defendant was denied a fair trial because defendant would not have been convicted had the witness testified; III.

State v. Vargas, 58 Wn.App. 391 (1990)

Informant and police officer are present at sale of drugs; police then arrest wrong person, following which defendant is arrested; court holds in camera hearing, determines that informer could aid defense by identifying another person who was present at the sale who could perhaps implicate one other than defendant as the one who delivered the drugs; held: in camera hearing is necessary where informant was present at scene and could identify seller, as his testimony has a direct bearing on defendant's guilt or innocence, distinguishing State v. Enriquez, 45 Wn.App. 580 (1986), State v. Redd, 51 Wn.App. 597, 606 (1988); because a police officer was at the scene of the sale, the informer's testimony would be cumulative, defense has failed to meet burden of establishing that informer's testimony would be helpful to defense, State v. Unthoff, 45 Wn.App. 261 (1986), State v. Salazar, 59 Wn.App. 202, 217 (1990); III.

State v. Sanchez, 60 Wn.App. 687 (1991)

Where state inquires during trial into the substance of communication made by an unidentified informant, the conditional privilege against disclosure may be waived, State v. McCoy, 10 Wn.App. 807, 810-11 (1974), where the informant's statements reveal specific personal knowledge about the criminal activity; here, informer merely alerted police to possibility of criminal activity, crime was committed in presence of officer without informer, thus identity of informer could serve no material purpose to the defense, State v. Vasquez, 66 Wn.App. 573 (1992), State v. Kennedy, 72 Wn.App. 244, 250-2 (1993); I.

State v. Stansbury, 64 Wn.App. 601 (1992)

Where defendant correctly identifies informant and challenges veracity of informant's information, court shall hold in camera hearing to determine if affiant truthfully reported the facts stated by informant and, if probable cause is found to have existed, court need not reveal identity, State v. Casal, 103 Wn.2d 812 (1985), distinguishing State v. Thetford, 109 Wn.2d 392, 397 (1987); mere fact that defense correctly identifies informant is not grounds for revealing identity by court unless court finds that informant is an agent of the police; a finding that informant would not be a witness for either party is appropriate absent evidence that informant is a significant participant in the transaction; I.

State v. Vazquez, 66 Wn.App. 573 (1992)

Informant sets up telephone call between police and suspect for a drug transaction, which is consummated without informant's presence, trial court denies in camera hearing for disclosure; held: defense failed to establish that a person who defendant claimed entrapped him was the informant who set up phone call or that the informant was a material witness to the drug transaction or, in support of entrapment defense, that informant was a government agent, thus informant was not a material witness, and trial court did not abuse discretion in failing to hold hearing, State v. Smith, 101 Wn.2d 36, 42 (1984), State v. Sanchez, 60 Wn.App. 687 (1991); II.

State v. Petrina, 73 Wn.App. 779 (1994)

Affidavit states that informant observed a third party place drugs in defendant's home, trial court orders disclosure without an in camera hearing, state refuses to disclose, court dismisses; held: informant must be disclosed if the defense has established either that the informant has relevant and helpful evidence or is essential to a fair determination, Roviaro v. United States, 1 L.Ed.2d 639 (1957), State v. Harris, 91 Wn.2d 145, 149 (1978); whereas defendant is claiming unwitting possession, informant's testimony is essential to the determination of guilt or innocence; trial court cannot substitute its judgment for the defendant's as to the benefit of the testimony; where trial court orders disclosure, it need not hold an in camera hearing; II.

State v. Atchley, 142 Wn.App. 147, 154-57 (2007)

Where informant provides information relating only to probable cause and not to defendant's guilt or innocence, disclosure is not required, State v. Casal, 103 Wn.2d 812 (1985), where there is no evidence that the informant provided false information; III.

Knock and Announce

State v. Lomax, 24 Wn.App. 541 (1979)

Police need only wait a reasonable time between knocking and entering; accord: State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999), United States v. Banks, 157 L.Ed.2d 343 (2003); I.

State v. Russell, 25 Wn.App. 933 (1980)

Apparently holds that where police are invitees, they need not knock and announce on inner door to arrest people in another room; I.

State v. Coyle, 95 Wn.2d 1 (1980)

Police must knock and announce even if door is open; the mere possibility of escape is not an exigent circumstance; to establish exigent circumstance, state must show either (1) police have specific prior information that suspect has resolved to act in a manner which would create an exigency or (2) police are confronted with sound or activity alerting them to exigency, State v. Ortiz, 196 Wn.App. 301 (2016), but see: United States v. Banks, 157 L.Ed.2d 343 (2003); useless gesture exception only applies where police are virtually certain occupants are aware of police presence; reverses State v. Coyle, 25 Wn.App. 349 (1980), see: State v. Alldredge, 73 Wn.App. 171 (1994), cf.: State v. Richards, 136 Wn.2d 361 (1998), but see: State v. Garcia-Hernandez, 67 Wn.App. 492 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Jeter, 30 Wn.App. 360 (1981)

Police learn from a named informant that defendant has drugs and a firearm near his bed; warrant obtained with a "no knock" authorization; police use pass key, search, find drugs but no weapon; held: no exigent circumstances, thus evidence suppressed; a belief that drugs will be destroyed must be based upon sounds or activity at scene or specific prior knowledge that suspect has propensity to destroy contraband; mere fact that suspect has a weapon is not enough to enter without knocking; police must have prior knowledge that suspect has a weapon and a known propensity to use it; no-knock authorization in warrant has no significance, State v. Spargo, 30 Wn.App. 949 (1982); 2-1; II.

State v. Roth, 30 Wn.App. 740 (1981)

Police, with bench warrant and probable cause to arrest for murder, use ruse to get defendant to come to door; defendant opens door 12 inches, sees police, tries to slam door; held: defendant was aware of police identification when he tried to slam door; to permit closing of door would have risked further violence and "loss of element of surprise," therefore exigent circumstances found, State v. Ellis, 21 Wn.App. 123 (1978); I.

State v. Spargo, 30 Wn.App. 949 (1982)

"No-knock" authorization in a search warrant is invalid; reviewing court may consider all facts, and is not limited to the affidavit presented to the magistrate who issued the warrant; II.

State v. Woodall, 32 Wn.App. 407 (1982), rev'd, on other grounds, 100 Wn.2d 74 (1983)

Police, serving warrant, knock, wait three-four seconds, enter; police testify they "believed" eight-ten people were conducting a party and might cause violent acts; held: trial court's determination that three-four seconds was reasonable is upheld, United States v. Banks, 157 L.Ed.2d 343 (2003), see: State v. Berlin, 46 Wn.App. 587 (1987), but see: State v. Ortiz, 196 Wn.App. 301 (2016); III.

State v. Myers, 35 Wn.App. 543 (1983)

Police, with search warrant, create a dummy arrest warrant to gain entry into defendant's home, whereupon they serve search warrant; held: ruse is permissible to gain entry as exception to knock and announce rule, State v. Ellis, 21 Wn.App. 123 (1978), cf.: State v. McCrorey, 70 Wn.App. 103 (1993); dummy arrest warrant does not violate due process, is not "shocking to the universal sense of justice," State v. Emerson, 10 Wn.App. 235 (1973), aff'd, 101 Wn.2d 548 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Reid, 38 Wn.App. 203 (1984)

Police arrest homicide suspect outside building, seize keys; police don't know if door to building leads to residence or common hallway, open door, announce presence; held: substantial compliance with RCW 10.31.040; 2-l, I.

State v. Allyn, 40 Wn.App. 27 (1985)

Prior knowledge by police that there are weapons in residence and suspects had a propensity to use them is exigent circumstance permitting forcible entry to search without prior announcement, State v. Coyle, 95 Wn.2d 1, 10 (1980); III.

State v. Williamson, 42 Wn.App. 208 (1985)

A peaceful consensual entry by undercover police, even if obtained by deception, does not violate knock and announce statute, RCW 10.31.040; II.

State v. Sturgeon, 46 Wn.App. 181 (1986)

Police knock, defendant says "Yeah," police enter, serve warrant, search, find drugs; held: "Yeah", construed objectively, is not an invitation to enter, thus RCW 10.31.040 was violated; III.

State v. Chichester, 48 Wn.App. 257 (1987)

Wife consents to search, tells police they can expect a fight from husband, police knock, yell "police," hear a noise and movement; officer testifies he did not know if defendant was getting a weapon; held: prior warning by wife plus noise inside provides specific articulable facts for exigent circumstance; II.

State v. Schmidt, 48 Wn.App. 639 (1987)

Police, serving warrant, knock on partially opened door, announce "sheriff's office, search warrant," wait less than three seconds, enter; held: failure to demand admittance, RCW 10.31.040, did not increase likelihood of physical destruction of property, as door was open, did not impact right to privacy since it can be implied from the announcement that police intended to enter, wait of only three seconds was reasonable in light of sounds from inside, dogs barking, small size of building; accord: State v. Garcia-Hernandez, 67 Wn.App. 492 (1992), State v. Richards, 136 Wn.2d 361 (1998), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 890-91 (1999), cf.: State v. Ortiz, 196 Wn.App. 301 (2016); III.

State v. Garcia-Hernandez, 67 Wn.App. 492 (1992)

Police, with search warrant, approach open door of apartment, yell "police" twice to no response, wait five seconds, enter; held: trial court's determination that five seconds was reasonable, as people outside apartment may have alerted suspect, is upheld as supported by substantial evidence, State v. Jones, 15 Wn.App. 165, 167 (1976), State v. Schmidt, 49 Wn.App. 639 (1987), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 890-91 (1999), see: United States v. Banks, 157 L.Ed.2d 343 (2003), cf.: State v. Ortiz, 196 Wn.App. 301 (2016); I.

Wilson v. Arkansas, 131 L.Ed.2d 976 (1995)

Knock and announce requirement is an element in the reasonableness inquiry under the Fourth Amendment; in individual cases, law enforcement interests may establish the reasonableness of an unannounced entry; 9-0.

State v. Schimpf, 82 Wn.App. 61 (1996)

Police, with warrant, enter vacant yard through unlocked back gate without knocking and announcing, seize marijuana plant; held: because no one was present, there was no risk of violence, knocking on gate would have been an empty gesture, thus police acted lawfully; III.

Richards v. Wisconsin, 137 L.Ed.2d 615 (1997)

Police seek no-knock warrant for drugs, magistrate issues warrant but deletes no-knock portion, police knock on door, claim they are maintenance workers, defendant opens door, sees police, slams door, police break in and seize drugs; held: a per se exception to the knock and announce requirement would make meaningless the reasonableness inquiry under the Fourth Amendment; here, once officers reasonably believed defendant knew who they were, it was reasonable for them to force entry; 9-0.

United States v. Ramirez, 140 L.Ed.2d 191 (1998)

Validity of exigent circumstances justifying a no-knock entry are not impacted by whether or not property is damaged by the police at the time of entry, see: Richards v. Wisconsin, 137 L.Ed.2d 615 (1997), Wilson v. Arkansas, 131 L.Ed.2d 976 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Richards, 136 Wn.2d 361 (1998)

Plain-clothed police with warrant find glass door open, screen door closed, observe suspect and call his name, open screen door, shout "police, we have a warrant" and enter; held: calling defendant's name is equivalent of knocking, where defendant is aware of presence and purpose, requirements of knock and wait rule, RCW 10.31.040, are met, as there is no unannounced entry, no danger of violence, defendant was given reasonable warning, warrant authorized entry so there is no purpose to wait for a response to a demand or request for admittance, distinguishing State v. Ellis, 21 Wn.App. 123 (1978), State v. Coyle, 95 Wn.2d 1 (1980); affirms State v. Richards, 87 Wn.App. 285 (1997); 5-4.

State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400 (2002)

Police, seeking armed robbery suspects in motel, observe suspects through window dash to rear of room, open window, point gun, shout "get your hands up," jump through window; held: because police reasonably believed suspects were armed, had used force against victims, observed suspects rush toward back, did not destroy property, then knocking and announcing is excused, State v. Carson, 21 Wn.App. 318 (1978), see: State v. Edwards, 20 Wn.App. 648 (1978), State v. Mueller, 15 Wn.App. 667 (1976); 5-4.

United States v. Banks, 157 L.Ed.2d 343 (2003)

Police, with drug warrant, knock, announce, wait 15-20 seconds, break in, at suppression hearing defendant testifies he was in shower, heard nothing until battering ram broke door; held: after 15-20 seconds without a response, police "could fairly suspect" that drugs would be flushed without entry, at 353; fact that defendant was in shower is irrelevant, as it was unknown to police in judging reasonable waiting time; it is imminent disposal of drugs, not travel time to door, that governs when police may enter, cf.: State v. Coyle, 95 Wn.2d 1 (1980); "[a]ttention to cocaine rocks and pianos tells a lot about the chances of their respective disposal and its bearing on reasonable time," at 356; 9-0.

State v. Thompson, 151 Wn.2d 793, 800-02 (2004)

Police may not forcibly enter a building to serve a civil arrest warrant issued in a civil contempt procedure, reversing State v. Thompson, 112 Wn.App. 787, 793-96 (2002); 9-0.

Hudson v. Michigan, 165 L.Ed.2d 56 (2006)

Violation of knock and announce rule does not require suppression of the evidence seized in the subsequent search, but see: State v. Coyle, 95 Wash.2d 1, 14 (1980), State v. Ibarra-Cisneros, 172 Wn.2d 880 n. 7 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Ortiz, 196 Wn.App. 301 (2016)

Knocking and announcing "police search warrant" three times within 6-9 seconds then breaking down door at night violates the knock and announce rule, lacking a reasonable waiting period, remedy is suppression, State v. Coyle, 95 Wn.2d 1 (1980), State v. Richards, 136 Wn.2d 361, 370-72 (1998), State v. Allredge, 73 Wn.App. 171 (1994), cf.: State v. Garcia-Hernandez, 67 Wn.App. 492, 495 (1992), State v. Lomax, 24 Wn.App. 541 (1979), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882 (1999), State v. Schmidt, 48 Wn.App. 639 (1987), State v. Jones, 16 Wn.App. 165 (1976); III.

SEARCH
Plain and Open View

State v. Legas, 20 Wn.App. 535 (1978)

After police find what they are looking for, search must stop or it becomes general.

State v. Daugherty, 22 Wn.App. 442 (1979)

Observation of evidence from a constitutionally unprotected area is not a search, therefore, plain view doctrine does not apply (presupposes an intrusion); but, where police then intrude into a protected area, they need a warrant or exigent circumstances.

State v. Gerry, 23 Wn.App. 166 (1979)

Police overhearing conversations of defendant from adjoining motel room analogous to plain view.

State v. Vaster, 24 Wn.App. 405 (1979)

Third test of "probable cause to believe that what police are viewing is incriminating evidence" is met by (1) valuable camera, (2) knowing that similar camera recently stolen, (3) suspect known to be in area of search, and (4) incongruous to have valuable camera in "modest home."

State v. Daugherty, 94 Wn.2d 263 (1980)

Driveway is generally not within the legitimate expectation of privacy, but where defendant blocks and obscures part of driveway, there is a subjective expectation, State v. Dyreson, 104 Wn.App. 703 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Jordan, 29 Wn.App. 924 (1981)

Police, investigating complaint of a loud party, peek through mostly closed curtains, see marijuana; held: by drawing curtains, residents demonstrated reasonable expectation of privacy; fact that occupants had not completely succeeded in shutting the curtains does not diminish the reasonableness, thus suppressed, cf.: State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996), State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400, 408-11 (2002); distinguishes State v. Brown, 9 Wn.App. 937 (1973) involving peering through closed curtains of a motel room, as occupant of motel has less expectation of privacy than resident of private home; 2-l.

State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706 (1981)

Exigent circumstances is not an element of the plain view doctrine; police, searching for marijuana with a warrant, find bindle, open it, discover white powder; held: since cops "knew" bindles contained drugs, they had a right to seize it; search for marijuana, pursuant to a warrant, can be virtually a general search, and police can seize any drugs found unless it is shown police knew in advance they would find drugs not specified in warrant; 6-3.

State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981)

Police officer, investigating an unrelated matter, knocks on door, receives no response, knows from prior experience that occupants can't hear knock on front door, proceeds toward back door, observes what he believes to be marijuana plant but which turned out to be tomatoes, gets warrant, seizes marijuana in a greenhouse; held: officer had the right to go toward back door as curtilage may be impliedly open to public, State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 397-9 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997) State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), but see: Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 1670 (2018), tomato plants were in "open view" (distinguished from plain view, wherein there is an invasion; here there is no invasion), accord: State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991), State v. Creegan, 123 Wn.App. 718 (2004), cf.: State v. Ferro, 64 Wn.App. 181 (1992), State v. Browning, 67 Wn.App. 93 (1992), State v. Hoke, 72 Wn.App. 869 (1994), State v. Dykstra, 84 Wn.App. 186 (1996), State v. Dyreson, 104 Wn.App. 703 (2001), State v. Boethin, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), State v. Posenjak, 127 Wn.App. 41, 50-53 (2005); innocent but mistaken belief that tomatoes are marijuana does not invalidate warrant (affidavit claimed officer had eight years' experience observing marijuana).

State v. Alger, 31 Wn.App. 244 (1982)

Police, having received rape complaint and having been told that victim was raped under a sleeping bag and that victim was in her menstrual cycle, enter defendant's home to arrest defendant, see and seize sleeping bag and tampon; held: evidence was in plain view and obvious that it was evidence, thus seizure without warrant was proper; I.

State v. Roberts, 31 Wn.App. 375 (1982)

Police, investigating a disturbance at an apartment building, contact a juvenile runaway in hall and take her into custody, whereupon she asks to go into an apartment to get her belongings; police accompany her into apartment, observe defendant in apartment with a large quantity of cheese; on learning that a dairy had been burglarized, police arrest defendant; ten minutes later, police search and find a coat with a padlock and bolt cutters; held: pre-arrest seizure was lawful as police could remain "at the elbow" of the juvenile, Washington v. Chrisman, 70 L.Ed.2d 778 (1982); seizure of coat, lock and cutters was unlawful as beyond the scope of search incident to arrest, but harmless here; II.

State v. Callahan, 31 Wn.App. 710 (1982)

Police officer walks over to car parked in a dark parking lot at 3:00 a.m., observes through window a white powdery substance on a piece of paper on suspect's lap; officer asks for paper, suspect slips it between front seat and console; officer orders suspect out of car into patrol car, goes into store and questions clerk, who states that suspect attempted to sell him cocaine; officer then searches car and finds coke, searches unlocked glove compartment, finds more coke; held: plain view requirement that officer's observation be "inadvertent" does not mean that the officer must act with a completely neutral and benign attitude when investigating suspicious activities; the term "inadvertent" means that the officer discovered the evidence from a position that does not infringe upon any reasonable expectation of privacy and does not take any further unreasonable steps to find evidence from that position, Horton v. California, 109 L.Ed.2d 112 (1990), but see: State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019); I.

State v. Cross, 32 Wn.App. 193 (1982)

Police officer's view of interior of vehicle from place where officer has right to be is not search, even though officer expresses desire to look inside vehicle, where the officer does not enter the vehicle and the exposure of the vehicle's interior is not triggered by any act of the officer; II.

State v. Alexander, 33 Wn.App. 271 (1982)

Police pull over van for DUI, an officer, in securing van, enters cab and sees drugs; held: officer had right to enter cab to secure van under community caretaking function of the automobile exception, Cady v. Dombrowski, 37 L.Ed.2d 706 (1973), State v. Lynch, 84 Wn.App. 467, 477-9 (1996), and could seize what he inadvertently discovered and immediately knew was contraband, Coolidge v. N.H., 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1971), State v. Daugherty, 94 Wn.2d 263, 267-68 (1980); III.

State v. Jones, 33 Wn.App. 275 (1982)

Use of binoculars by police to observe that which was in the open and could be seen by naked eye from same location does not violate the Fourth Amendment, State v. Ludvik, 40 Wn.App. 257, n.1 (1985), State v. Manley, 85 Wn.2d 120 (1975), State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996), cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 133 S.Ct. 1409, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); I.

State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982)

Police, serving search warrant on a residence, patdown all persons present; officer feels bulge on defendant which he knows is not a weapon but, based on his experience, knew it was a balloon of heroin; held: a person's mere presence at a private residence being searched pursuant to a warrant does not justify a frisk by police, Ybarra v. Illinois, 62 L.Ed.2d 238 (1979) in the absence of "particular facts from which he reasonably inferred that the individual was armed and dangerous," Sibron v. N.Y., 20 L.Ed.2d 917 (1968); even if patdown was justified, "once it is ascertained that no weapon is involved, the government's limited authority to invade the individual's right to be free of police intrusion is spent, State v. Allen, 93 Wn.2d 170 (1980), State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); plain feel is not an exception to warrant requirement, but see: State v. Hudson, 124 Wn.2d 107 (1994); reverses State v. Broadnax, 29 Wn.App. 433, 25 Wn.App. 704; reaffirms State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437 (1980), but see: Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993); 5-3.

Washington v. Chrisman, 70 L.Ed.2d 778 (1982)

Police officer arrests defendant for minor in possession of alcohol, accompanies defendant to his dorm room where defendant's identification is, observes drugs and seizes them; held: police may remain "at the elbow" of a person under arrest, thus police were properly in dorm room, and drugs were in plain view; reverses State v. Chrisman, 94 Wn.2d 711 (1980), suppressed on independent state grounds, 100 Wn.2d 814 (1984); 6-3.

Texas v. Brown, 75 L.Ed.2d 502 (1983)

Police stop vehicle at routine license checkpoint, ask for license, shine flashlight in car, see knotted balloon fall from suspect's hand, observe vials and powder in glove compartment; after suspect stated that he had no license, officer seizes balloon which "seemed to contain a powdery substance"; plurality of four held initial stop valid, shining flashlight did not violate

Fourth Amendment, State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996); the "immediately apparent" language in Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1921), does not require police to "know" that items are evidence or contraband, i.e., police may seize a suspicious object if the initial intrusion is lawful, see: State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609, 624-25 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Henry, 36 Wn.App. 530 (1984)

Police, serving a search warrant for drugs, seize several firearms, police officer testifies he was searching for drugs and weapons; held: "inadvertent" element of plain view doctrine means that police discovered items while in a position that does not infringe upon privacy, State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257, 270 n. 32 (2001), but see: State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019); where weapons are found in places where police may legitimately search for drugs, they are in plain view, State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706 (1981), State v. Callahan, 31 Wn.App. 710, 712 (1982); I.

State v. Drumhiller, 36 Wn.App. 592 (1984)

Police, called to burglary in progress, walk to front of residence, look through window with open drapes, see drug activity, ring bell, arrest occupants, seize drugs; held: defendants had no legitimate expectation of privacy due to open drapes, Rakas v. Illinois, 58 L.Ed.2d 387 (1978), State v. Wolohan, 23 Wn.App. 810, 817 (1979), State v. Creegan, 123 Wn.App. 718 (2004), cf.: State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173, 187-8 (1994), State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400 (2002); police had right to enter curtilage area impliedly open to public, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 989, 902-3 (1981), State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 1670 (2018); III.

State v. McAlpin, 36 Wn.App. 707 (1984)

Defendant calls for medical assistance for his wife who stopped breathing; medics and police arrive, medics discover drugs, police obtain warrant; held: police were justified in being on premises for medical emergency, inadvertently see drugs, thus search warrant was based upon properly viewed evidence, State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991),see: State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019); I.

State v. Chrisman, 100 Wn.2d 814 (1984)

Police officer arrests defendant for minor in possession of alcohol, accompanies him to his dormitory so defendant can obtain identification, observes drugs, enters and seizes them; held: under CONST. Art. 1, § 7, officer who has taken into custody a person arrested for a misdemeanor may not make a warrantless entry into arrestee's residence absent exigent circumstances (safety, destruction of evidence, escape), see: State v. Anderson, 105 Wn.App. 223 (2001), State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80 (2005), State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685 (2007), State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390 (2007), see also: State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013); absent a justification for an intrusion, a plain view seizure is not permissible; court finds independent state grounds to suppress, and declines to follow Washington v. Chrisman, 70 L.Ed.2d 778 (1982); 6-3.

State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506 (1984)

Aerial surveillance of open fields at an altitude of 1500 feet does not constitute a search, State v. Wilson, 97 Wn.App. 572 (1999); where warrant specifically excludes buildings, and police, in serving warrant, peer in window or inadvertently see contraband, police may not enter the building in absence of exigent circumstances; 9-0.

State v. Cockrell, 102 Wn.2d 561 (1984)

While aerial surveillance is permissible without a warrant, the conduct may be so intrusive such that it would become a search necessitating a warrant; here, 800 feet is not intrusive, State v. Wilson, 97 Wn.App. 578 (1999); 9-0.

United States v. Jacobsen, 80 L.Ed.2d 85 (1984)

Private carrier employees examine a damaged box, observe white powder, return same to box, call DEA; DEA removes powder, field tests a trace, obtain warrant to search the place to which the package was addressed; held: because DEA already knew that the contents were a white powder, reopening the box and inspecting contents did not invade any legitimate privacy interest; field test which consumed a trace of the powder was a reasonable invasion of defendant's privacy interest; 7-2.

State v. Crandall, 39 Wn.App. 849 (1985)

A police officer's warrantless trespass on unoccupied undeveloped land which is not posted, frequented by hunters, not part of the curtilage, part of which is fenced, does not offend the Fourth Amendment or CONST. Art. I, § 7, as there is no privacy interest in open fields; 2-1; III.

State v. Dorsey, 40 Wn.App. 459 (1985)

Police, while detaining suspect for investigation, observe suspect shaking an envelope out of his jacket, seize envelope, feel credit cards, open it and seize them; held: in course of Terry stop, police who inadvertently discover evidence may seize it and look at it to confirm suspicions, see: State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019), State v. Elwell, 199 Wn.2d 256 (2022); I.

State v. Perez, 41 Wn.App. 481 (1985)

Police stop suspect for traffic infraction, detect odor of alcohol, give suspect field sobriety tests 18-20 feet from car; other officer looks in car window, sees unattached car speaker and what appears to be a gun barrel beneath a jacket, reaches in open door, seizes sawed-off rifle; held: observation of gun was lawful under open view doctrine, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981), as there was no intrusion of privacy into the interior of the car which can be viewed from outside the car, Texas v. Brown, 75 L.Ed.2d 502 (1983); entry into car and seizure of gun was lawful even in absence of a threatening gesture as suspect "might be dangerous" due to apparent attempt to conceal weapon under jacket by intoxicated suspect who could have made a move for the weapon from 18-20 feet away; I.

State v. Hansen, 42 Wn.App. 755 (1986)

Fourth Amendment and CONST. Art. I, § 7 provide no recognized privacy interest in the cultivation of crops, including marijuana, in rural areas, Oliver v. United States, 80 L.Ed.2d 214 (1984), State v. Crandall, 39 Wn.App. 849 (1985); III.

State v. Bell, 108 Wn.2d 193 (1987)

Fire fighters enter home to extinguish fire, observe marijuana, call police who seize marijuana; held: fire fighters, as government officials, had prior justification for the intrusion, discovery was inadvertent, see: State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019), they immediately recognized contraband; once governmental official who is not a police officer legally discovers incriminating evidence, police may enter without a warrant to seize it; 9-0.

California v. Ciraolo, 90 L.Ed.2d 210 (1986)

Police flew in airplane over defendant's fenced backyard, observed marijuana growing from 1000 feet with naked eye, obtained warrant; held: mere fact that individual has taken measures to restrict some views of his activities by building fence does not preclude police observation from public vantage point where police have right to be and which renders activities clearly visible; 5-4.

Dow Chemical Co. v. United States, 90 L.Ed.2d 226 (1986)

Aerial photography of a manufacturing plant by EPA does not require warrant, as open areas of an industrial plant complex are not analogous to curtilage of a dwelling, but are closer to an open field; 5-4.

State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388 (1986)

Defendant consents to search for stolen property; during search, police find glass vial containing pills; held: "immediately apparent" prong of plain view exception requires less than certain knowledge; held: vial viewed in context with other evidence of drug use found in the home rises to probable cause to seize even without firm knowledge that vial contained illegal drugs; III.

State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986)

Police, while stopping a vehicle with driver and passenger on a well founded suspicion observe defendant-driver make a furtive gesture; police remove defendant from vehicle, reach under seat, seize a baggie of drugs; held: where suspect has been removed from a vehicle that was subject to a lawful investigative stop and officer has an objective reason for believing that a weapon is in vehicle (furtive gesture here), police may make a limited search of the passenger compartment for weapons within the area of control of suspect and passenger and, if contraband is observed, police may seize it as in plain view, State v. Stroud, 106 Wn.2d 144 (1986), see: State v. Swetz, 160 Wn.App. 122 (2011); 5-4.

United States v. Dunn, 94 L.Ed.2d 326 (1987)

Peering into a barn from open fields does not violate privacy expectations where barn is not within curtilage of house; see also: State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996); 7-2.

Arizona v. Hicks, 94 L.Ed.2d 347 (1987)

Police, while lawfully in an apartment investigating a shooting, observe expensive stereo in a squalid room, move it to record serial numbers, determine stereo was stolen; held: moving stereo was a search for which police lacked probable cause to believe it was stolen, see: State v. Johnson, 104

Wn.App. 489, 500-02 (2001), State v. Murray, 84 Wn.2d 527, 534 (1974), State v. Haggard, 9 Wn.App.2d 98 (2019), affirmed, on other grounds, State v. Haggard, 195 Wn.2d 544 (2020); 6-3.

State v. Nelson, 47 Wn.App. 157 (1987)

Police, aware that defendant was a suspected drug dealer and that drug dealers are frequently armed, knock on defendant's house door, defendant comes to porch, is served with misdemeanor arrest warrant, asks for permission to enter house to get coat as it is cold, is accompanied by officers who observe, seize drugs; held: police may accompany arrestee into residence without a search warrant if police are aware of specific articulable facts demonstrating possibility of threat, distinguishing State v. Chrisman, 100 Wn.2d 814 (1984), State v. Anderson, 105 Wn.App. 283 (2001), State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80 (2005); III.

State v. Courcy, 48 Wn.App. 326 (1987)

Police, lawfully requesting identification, observe bindle in wallet, testify that from experience recognized it as a drug container, open bindle, find cocaine; held: as bindle was seen without an intrusion, it was in open view and thus could be seized; because of the unique shape of the bindle and the officers' experience, it was proper to open it without a warrant under the single purpose container doctrine, Arkansas v. Sanders, 61 L.Ed.2d 235, n. 13 (1979); III.

State v. McKinney, 49 Wn.App. 850 (1987)

Police knock on apartment door, defendant answers, is known to police to have a warrant for driving while license suspended, known to have fled from police, defendant attempts to close door, police push through, observe drugs; held: officers' knowledge of defendant's propensity to flee plus defendant's attempt to shut door justifies police entry, distinguishing State v. Chrisman, 100 Wn.2d 814 (1984), State v. Anderson, 105 Wn.App. 283 (2001), see: State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80 (2005), State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390 (2007); additionally, shutting door meets hot pursuit exigency; III.

State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33 (1988)

Where a tax appraiser enters property to revalue it, the Fourth Amendment and CONST. Art. 1, § 7 are implicated, distinguishing State v. Ludvick, 40 Wn.App. 257 (1985); however, where the appraiser is legitimately on the property, does not exceed the scope of his appraisal, and his route is a normal one, no search has occurred, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981), State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991); but see: State v. Browning, 66 Wn.App. 541 (1992), State v. Hoke, 72 Wn.App. 869 (1994); III.

Tukwila v. Nalder, 53 Wn.App. 746 (1989)

Police officer looks over locked public restroom stall, observes defendant masturbating, arrests for lewd conduct; held: sitting in a closed restroom stall provides a high expectation of privacy, irrespective of the height of the stall door; officer looking over the door was impermissibly intrusive, thus observations suppressed, distinguishing State v. Berber, 48 Wn.App. 583 (1987); I.

State v. Yoder, 55 Wn.App. 632 (1989)

Juvenile calls police to report her mother being assaulted by mother's boyfriend, upon arrival, mother says she was not assaulted, police enter to speak with juvenile, observe drugs; held: police were obliged to investigate and take a complete report under domestic violence law, RCW 10.99.030; mother's claim she was not assaulted was not dispositive, police required to investigate further, thus police were justified in the intrusion, inadvertently discovered drugs, see: State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019); II.

State v. Stevenson, 55 Wn.App. 725 (1989)

Where police lawfully come upon evidence in plain view, they need not seize it immediately as long as the ultimate seizure does not exceed the scope of the earlier intrusion, see: State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 277-9 (1993); II.

State v. Sistrunk, 57 Wn.App. 210 (1990)

Police officer approaches vehicle parked with hood raised, driver and passengers state that there is no problem, officer observes numerous dirty beer cans in back seat, advise suspects of open container law, suspects reply they were collecting for recycling, police observe no drinking nor smell intoxicants, search vehicle for intoxicants, find that visible beer cans were empty, then find syringe under seat; held: search for cans in back seat was improper under open view doctrine as cans were dirty, no apparent wetness, consistent with suspects' explanation, thus it was not immediately apparent he had seizable evidence, thus suppressed; III.

State v. Ridgway, 57 Wn.App. 915 (1990)

Tax assessor observes marijuana, returns to take photograph which he gives to police who walk around closed gate and up drive to house not visible from road, circle around dogs, observe marijuana; held: closed gate, isolated setting, barking dogs establish a subjective expectation of privacy, State v. Daugherty, 94 Wn.2d 263, 269 (1980), State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995), State v. Hoke, 72 Wn.App. 869 (1994), and not areas of curtilage impliedly open to public, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 902 (1981), State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008), cf.: State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 1670 (2018); II.

Horton v. California, 109 L.Ed.2d 112 (1990)

Police, with a warrant to seize stolen property discover and seize, during search, weapons which police were hoping to find, in plain view; held: inadvertent discovery is not a necessary condition of a legitimate plain view seizure, State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019), distinguishing Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1971); the fact that an officer is interested in an item and fully expects to find it should not invalidate its seizure if the search is confined in area and duration by a warrant's terms; accord: State v. Goodin, 67 Wn.App. 623 (1992); but see: State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991), which appears to maintain inadvertence requirement, but see: State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257, 270 n. 32 (2001), State v. Morgan, supra; 7-2.

State v. Wright, 61 Wn.App. 819 (1991)

Police, executing warrant to search for and seize vibrator and to "photograph crime scene" seize vibrator and, while photographing, observe bag which appears to be handgun case, open it, observe gun; held: opening gun case was "no more than a de minimis invasion of right to privacy" and not a general search that exceeds scope of warrant, Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 29 L.Ed.2d 564 (1971); photographs taken during a search pursuant to a warrant is not a seizure any more than the knowledge the officers gained during execution of the warrant as long as the observation was otherwise legally made and the officers did not exceed the scope of the warrant by taking the photographs; I.

State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332 (1991)

Police walk to front porch, knock, smell marijuana, observe, from porch, rolling machine, are invited in, observe marijuana; held: approaching residence from a common access route does not violate resident's reasonable expectation of privacy, State v. Petty, 48 Wn.App. 615, 619-20 (1987), State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), State v. Graffius, 74 Wn.App. 23 (1994), State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008); front porch is not a constitutionally protected area, what police observe from a nonintrusive vantage point is in open view, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981), State v. Lemus, 104 Wn.App. 94, 101-03 (2000); factors to determine if police exceeded scope of open view doctrine include (1) spying into house, (2) acting secretly, (3) daylight, (4) normal, direct access route, (5) attempt to talk to resident, (6) artificial vantage point, and (7) accidental discovery, Seagull, supra, at 905, see: State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257, 270 n. 32 (2001), cf.: State v. Ferro, 64 Wn.App. 181 (1992), State v. Dykstra, 84 Wn.App. 186 (1996), State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), State v. Littlefair, 129 Wn.App. 330 (2005), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Ferro, 64 Wn.App. 181 (1992)

Police in helicopter observe marijuana in field, advise police on ground who enter defendant's driveway, walk across her property to plants, seize same; held: open view doctrine applies to visual intrusions, not to physical intrusions such as entries onto premises without warrant, State v. Bell, 108 Wn.2d 193, 206 (1987); here, police substantially departed from curtilage impliedly open to public, State v. Hoke, 72 Wn.App. 869 (1994), failed to seek telephonic warrant, thus suppressed, but see: State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994); III.

State v. Browning, 67 Wn.App. 93 (1992)

Where building inspector enters a residence, plain as opposed to open view doctrine applies, distinguishing State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33 (1988), State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981); I.

Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993)

Police, during Terry frisk, feel no weapons but feel a lump in pocket, examine it with fingers, conclude it's crack cocaine, seize it; held: police may seize nonthreatening contraband during a lawful frisk if the officer feels an object whose contour or mass makes its identity immediately apparent; here, while officer could lawfully feel the lump, his continued exploration of the pocket after he concluded it was not a weapon exceeded the scope of the Terry frisk, thus suppressed, State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), see: State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995), State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 277-79 (1993)

Police, investigating report from relative of missing elderly woman, enter victim's apartment without warrant, smell decaying flesh from closed room, enter room belonging to defendant, find body; held: discovery of odor from closed room falls within plain view exception, as initial entry was justified by health and safety emergency exception, State v. Angelos, 86 Wn.App. 253 (1997), see: State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913 (2015), odor established immediate knowledge of evidence; officer's leaving apartment and reentry with other officers in an hour was a continuation of the first entry, thus lack of warrant did not invalidate resulting seizure, State v. Stevenson, 55 Wn.App. 725, 731 (1989), Michigan v. Tyler, 56 L.Ed.2d 486 (1978); I.

State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994)

Police drive up a common access road, past numerous "no trespassing" signs and open gate to residence, knock at door, observe marijuana, obtain warrant; held: "no trespassing" signs alone do not create a legitimate expectation of privacy, State v. Vonhof, 51 Wn.App. 33, 40 (1988), see: Oliver v. United States, 80 L.Ed.2d 214 (1984), Hester v. United States, 68 L.Ed. 898 (1924), police remained on areas impliedly open to the public, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 902-3 (1981), State v. Ferro, 64 Wn.App. 181, 183 (1992), State v. Hornback, 73 Wn.App. 738 (1994), State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 397-9 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997), distinguishing State v. Ridgway, 57 Wn.App. 915 (1990); see: State v. Hoke, 72 Wn.App. 869 (1994), State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), but see: State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008); III.

State v. Tzintzun-Jimenez, 72 Wn.App. 852 (1994)

Police officer, with fingers (presumably) lawfully in suspect's pocket, feels a "slippery material," pulls out baggie with drugs; held: absent evidence that officer knew by training or experience that a slippery material was likely to be cocaine, immediate recognition prong of plain feel exception is not met, as there was no evidence that officer had probable cause to believe he was touching a baggie of cocaine, Minnesota v. Dickenson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993); II.

State v. Hoke, 72 Wn.App. 869 (1994)

Police knock on front door then walk around to yard which is partially obstructed by stacked wood, broken vehicle, wheelbarrow, tools, yard covered with grass, no pathway, thick foliage borders yard, officer forced to deviate from direct access route, smells growing marijuana; held: yard was not an area of curtilage impliedly open to public, thus officer exceeded scope of implied invitation, State v. Ridgway, 57 Wn.App. 915, 920 (1990), State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), State v. Littlefair, 129 Wn.App. 330 (2005), State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008), see: State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996), cf.: State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86 (2007), distinguishing State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 902-3 (1981), State v. Ferro, 64 Wn.App. 181, 183 (1992); homeowner need not take overt steps signalling that area of curtilage is private; see: State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994), State v. Hornback, 73 Wn.App. 738 (1994); I.

State v. Hudson, 124 Wn.2d 107 (1994)

At suppression hearing, officer testifies that, following valid Terry stop, during weapons patdown, he felt an item which he "knew immediately from feeling it that [it] was likely one large chunk of a hard substance, which was likely cocaine"; held: plain feel is a corollary to the plain view doctrine under United States Constitution, distinguishing State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289, 298 (1982), see: Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993), overruling State v. Hudson, 69 Wn.App. 270 (1993); remanded for trial court to determine whether the nature of the object is such that there can be a credible claim of recognition by touch, see: State v. Fowler, 76 Wn.App. 168 (1994), State v. Acrey, 110 Wn.App. 769, 777 (2002), 148 Wn.2d 738, 754 (2003), State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Graffius, 74 Wn.App. 23 (1994)

Police officer, in curtilage impliedly open to public, intentionally looks into open trash can, observes marijuana, obtains warrant; held: while citizens have a privacy right in garbage, State v. Boland, 115 Wn.2d 571 (1990), where can is left open exposing contraband, police view it from a nonintrusive vantage, intentional look down into garbage is not a particularly intrusive means of viewing it, thus it was an open view and did not violate CONST. Art. 1, § 7, see: State v. Petty, 48 Wn.App. 615, 619-20 (1987), State v. Patterson, 37 Wn.App. 275, 281 (1984) State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Hepton, 113 Wn.App. 673, 678-81 (2002), cf.: State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 881 (2005), Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); I.

State v. Gave, 77 Wn.App. 333 (1995)

Police, with permission from owner of private road, drive up road past "no trespassing" signs which were not posted by defendant, go to defendant's front door, knock, speak with defendant using a ruse, smell marijuana, obtain warrant; held: defendant cannot rely upon signs he did not post, police did nothing more than approach residence within curtilage impliedly open to public, thus no search occurred, State v. Hornback, 73 Wn.App. 738 (1994), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 696 (1994), cf.: State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86 (2007), cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013), Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 1670 (2018); II.

State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388 (1996)

Police enter property, walk to shed behind premises, smell marijuana, approach front porch, knock, peer through window with flashlight, see marijuana, obtain warrant; held: absent signs or fences, front porch is impliedly open to public, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 902 (1981), thus police lawfully on porch can intentionally look through unobstructed window beside front door without leaning, bending or straining, at 396, State v. Manly, 85 Wn.2d 120, 124 (1975), State v. Drumhiller, 36 Wn.App. 592, 595-6 (1984), cf.: State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400 (2002), use of flashlight "does not transform an observation...within the open view doctrine during daylight into an impermissible search simply because darkness falls," at 398-9, State v. Young, 28 Wn.App. 412 (1981), State v. Cagle, 5 Wn.App. 644 (1971), State v. Regan, 76 Wn.2d 331 (1969), United States v. Lee, 71 L.Ed. 1202 (1927), United States v. Dunn, 94 L.Ed.2d 326 (1987), Texas v. Brown, 75 L.Ed.2d 502 (1983), distinguishing State v. Young, 123 Wn.2d 173, 182-3 (1994), reversing State v. Rose, 75 Wn.App. 28 (1994), see: State v. Dykstra, 84 Wn.App. 186 (1996), State v. Creegan, 123

Wn.App. 718 (2004), State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), State v. Posenjak, 127 Wn.App. 41, 50-53 (2005), State v. Littlefair, 129 Wn.App. 330 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Dykstra, 84 Wn.App. 186 (1996)

Police arrest defendant for DUI, insist upon driving him home, defendant tells police to leave upon arrival, police refuse and accompany defendant to porch, defendant states he will not go inside, police state they won't leave until he enters, defendant opens door, police observe drugs; held: open view doctrine permits law enforcement to observe from a legitimate nonintrusive vantage point, State v. Myers, 117 Wn.2d 332, 345 (1991), including curtilage, State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388, 391-2 (1996), but see: Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 1670 (2018), however where a resident has clearly manifested an objection, then the back porch of a private residence is not impliedly open to the public, distinguishing State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898 (1981); II.

State v. Wilson, 97 Wn.App. 578 (1999)

Aerial surveillance of open fields at 500 feet, within FAA regulations, is not a search, does not violate CONST. art. I, § 7, State v. Cockrell, 102 Wn.2d 561 (1984), State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506 (1984); III.

State v. Thorson, 98 Wn.App. 528 (1999)

Police, serving a warrant on another property on a rural island, cross defendant's property, observe and seize marijuana; held: court must look to (1) nature of the property, (2) expectation of privacy it reasonably supports, and (3) nature of the intrusion, State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506 (1984); here, rural property on an uncommercial island rarely visited establishes reasonable expectation of privacy even absent fences and boundary markers; paths police used were not impliedly open to the public, leaving property authorized by warrant establishes that police were not in a place they had the right to be, thus suppressed, State v. Dyreson, 104 Wn.App. 703 (2001), State v. Littlefair, 129 Wn.App. 330 (2005); I.

Bond v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 365 (2000)

Agent boards bus, squeezes defendant's soft luggage, feels "brick-like object," asks passenger if he could open it, passenger agrees, agent finds drugs; held: physical manipulation of luggage is a search, violates Fourth Amendment; 7-2.

State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 257-60 (2000)

Officer views goods in defendant's storage unit through a hole in a common wall from a contiguous storage unit where officer had permission to be, thus no search occurred under open view doctrine, State v. Rose, 128 Wn.2d 388, 392 (1996), State v. Creegan, 123 Wn.App. 718 (2004), affirming, in part, State v. Bobic, 94 Wn.App. 702, 712-14 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000)

Police enter defendant's property for sole purpose of searching for evidence of marijuana grow in order to obtain search warrant, 12:10 a.m., had no intention of contacting residents, smell marijuana, obtain warrant; held: police were not conducting legitimate business at an hour when no reasonably respectful citizen would be welcome absent actual invitation or emergency, thus were not lawfully on the property, evidence must be suppressed, State v. Johnson, 75 Wn.App. 692, 704-5 (1994), State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), State v. Littlefair, 129 Wn.App. 330 (2005), State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008), cf.: State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86 (2007); affirms State v. Ross, 91 Wn.App. 814 (1998); 4-2-2.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 489, 500-02 (2001)

Police, executing warrant for a vibrator, observe a videotape, play it, discover child pornography; held: nothing about the exterior of the tape gave probable cause to believe the tapes were evidence of a crime, thus viewing was an unauthorized search, Arizona v. Hicks, 94 L.Ed.2d 347 (1987), State v. Murray, 84 Wn.2d 527, 534 (1974); II.

State v. Dyreson, 104 Wn.App. 703 (2001)

Police go to residence to talk to property owner, renter tells detectives to look in the garage to see if owner is there, detective approaches garage, hears loud music, knocks, no response, enters garage, sees drugs, obtains warrant; held: interior of garage was not an area of curtilage impliedly open to public, State v. Daugherty, 94 Wn.2d 263 (1980), as no "reasonably respectful citizen would feel free to enter the garage without the owner's consent," State v. Thorson, 98 Wn.App. 528, 536-37 (1999), State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005), State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008), even with loud music playing such that citizen believes that occupant would not hear knocking; III.

State v. Hoggatt, 108 Wn.App. 257, 269-71 (2001)

Officer, with probable cause that defendant is a felon in possession of a gun, sees defendant in kitchen from porch, is invited in by cohabitant, sees gun in kitchen, seizes it and arrests defendant; held: officer viewed the item without an unlawful intrusion, reached the gun with consent and seized it on probable cause, thus plain view test is met; II.

State v. Cardenas, 146 Wn.2d 400 (2002)

With exigent circumstances, police on bended knees peer through partially opened curtains of motel room, observe robbery suspects dash to back of room, enter and arrest; held: when exigent circumstances justify a warrantless entry, police are justified in taking reasonable action to secure their safety, thus need not apply open or plain view analysis, cf.: State v. Jordan, 29 Wn.App. 924 (1981), State v. Brown, 9 Wn.App. 937 (1973); 5-4.

State v. Carter, 151 Wn.2d 118 (2004)

Private firearms instructor brings illegal machine gun to class, invites students to handle it, investigators in class seize it, defendant is charged with possession of a machine gun, RCW 9.41.190(1); held: presenting firearm in open view of students precludes any expectation of privacy; 8-1.

State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80 (2005)

Police arrest defendant outside her apartment for a misdemeanor warrant, cuff her, discuss bail, defendant is taken into apartment where she asks someone inside to get her purse, police follow person inside to defendant's bedroom, observe and seize drugs; held: because trial court's findings do not support its conclusion that the plain view exception is justified by a need for officer safety, see: State v. Chrisman, 100 Wn.2d 814 (1984), State v. Anderson, 105 Wn.App. 223 (2001), court erred in failing to suppress; 9-0.

State v. Posenjak, 127 Wn.App. 41, 50-53 (2005)

Police enter driveway which is exposed to the street, observe poached elk in open garage, enter and seize elk; held: a reasonably respectful citizen would have taken the driveway to enter the curtilage which was impliedly open to the public, State v. Seagull, 95 Wn.2d 898, 902 (1981), distinguishing State v. Ridgway, 57 Wn.App. 915 (1990), see also: State v. Boethan, 126 Wn.App. 695 (2005); while entering garage and seizing elk without a warrant did intrude upon defendant's privacy, error was harmless; III.

State v. Littlefair, 129 Wn.App. 330 (2005)

Police, using outdated assessor's map, trespass onto rural property, smell marijuana, obtain warrant; held: state has burden to demonstrate open view, defendant's rural property was not open to public, , State v. Thorson, 98 Wn.App. 528 (1999), issue is not whether police made a mistake in good faith but rather whether they had a lawful basis for presence in the specific location from which officer spied something incriminating, see: State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92, 107-08 (1982); police here did not act in the same manner as a reasonably respectful citizen, thus suppressed, State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008); II.

State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685, 696 (2007)

Officer approaches apartment to investigate meth lab, smells acetone and hears fan, knocks on front door, two children arrive behind him and open door, officer enters, announces presence, sees drugs; held: plain view only applies where officer is lawfully standing in the place when he sees something that he immediately knew was incriminating evidence, State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80, 85 (2005); here, officer had no right to pass threshold; II.

State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609, 624-25 (2007)

Police, serving drug warrant, observe jewelry on defendant that an officer immediately knew was stolen, one item still had price tag on it; held: plain view doctrine requiring prior justification for intrusion, inadvertent discovery, but see: Horton v. California, 109 L.Ed.2d 112 (1990), State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019), and immediate knowledge that material in plain view is evidence of a crime was met, State v. Lair, 95 Wn.2d 706, 714 (1981); III.

State v. Jesson, 142 Wn.App. 852 (2008)

Police, investigating a theft, drive past "no trespassing" and "keep out" signs via primitive driveway in secluded location, open closed gate, observe growing marijuana, obtain warrant; held: a reasonable, respectful citizen would not believe that he could enter the property, thus evidence must be suppressed, State v. Ross, 141 Wn.2d 304 (2000), State v. Dyreson, 104 Wn.App. 703 (2001), cf.: State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 97-101 (2007), but see: State v. Chausee, 72 Wn.App. 704 (1994); III.

State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009)

During patdown, once police ascertain that there is no weapon, they may not continue squeezing and seize what they determine is contraband; as soon as the officer knows there is no weapon, further search exceeds the lawful bounds of Terry, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993), State v. Hudson, 124 Wn.2d 107 (1994), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 163 Wn.App. 354 (2011)

Police stop defendant for infraction, observe drugs in car, arrest and handcuff defendant, search vehicle, find drugs; held: while drugs observed from outside the car were in open view, State v. Gibson, 152 Wn.App. 945, 954 (2009), State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 10 (1986), open view doctrine does not provide authority to enter constitutionally protected areas without a warrant, State v. Posenjak, 127 Wn.App. 41, 52-53 (2005), cf.: State v. Barnes, 158 Wn.App. 602 (2010); 2-1, II.

Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013)

Police bring drug dog to front door of home, dog alerts, obtain warrant, find drugs; held: curtilage of home is constitutionally protected and, while knocking on front door is not a privacy violation, Breard v. Alexandria, 341 U.S. 622, 95 L.Ed. 1233 (1951), Kentucky v. King, 563 U.S. 452, 179 L.Ed.2d 865 (2011), Collins v. Virginia, 584 U.S. ___, 138 S.Ct. 1663, 201 L.Ed.2d 9 (2018), because there is a "customary invitation" for citizens to do so, introducing a trained police dog exceeds that invitation and is a search, Kyllo v. United States, 533 U.S. 27, 150 L.Ed.2d 94 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913 (2015)

Teenage twins report abuse to therapists who reports it to CPS who interview twins at home, assess that they are unsafe, call police who knock, advise defendant-parent they wish to perform welfare check and ask to come in, mother steps back from door, officers enter, ask twins to speak with them privately, go to garage, twins advise they were beaten with a board, officer sees board in garage, ask if that is the board with which they were beaten, victim says it is, observe what appears to be dried blood, seize board; held: police were in garage lawfully pursuant to health and safety exception, trained CPS investigator relayed opinion that children were not safe, were in the residence, there was no pretextual purpose in entering garage, entry was "totally divorced from a criminal investigation," at 924 ¶ 9, board was in plain view thus properly seized; II.

State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365 (2019)

Police officer, investigating a stabbing, enters defendant's hospital room, sees clothing in a bag, seizes it believing it may have blood evidence on it; held: while exigent circumstances do not justify seizure as there was no urgency, it was reasonably apparent that the evidence was associated with a crime, thus seizure under plain view doctrine was lawful, cf.: State v. Elwell, 199 Wn.2d 256 (2022); inadvertent discovery is not an element of the plain view doctrine, Horton v. California, 496 U.S. 128, 130, 110 S.Ct. 2301, 110 L.Ed.2d 112 (1990), overruling, in part, State v. Kull, 155 Wn.2d 80, 85 & n.4 (2005), State v. Muñoz Garcia, 140 Wn.App. 609, 624-25 (2007); 7-2.

State v. Elwell, 199 Wn.2d 256 (2022)

Defendant is observed on surveillance video removing a Pac-Man machine from a building, police observe defendant with a large item like the stolen machine covered by a blanket, recognize him from the video, without consent lift the blanket, find machine, seize it and arrest defendant; held: for the open view doctrine to apply, the evidentiary value of the object need not be certain so long as it is immediately apparent that the object is associated with criminal activity, but the identity of the object must be unambiguous; here, because the police removed the blanket, which would not have been necessary if the object's identity was unambiguous, even though it was highly likely that the object was the stolen machine; for the open view doctrine to apply there must be no ambiguity as to the identity of the object, the officer must be able to determine what the object is with certainty without manipulating the object, distinguishing State v. Morgan, 193 Wn.2d 365, 372 (2019); harmless here; 9-0.

SEARCH
Standing

United States v. Salucci, 65 L.Ed.2d 619 (1980)

In contraband possession cases defendants do not have automatic standing to challenge legality of search without regard to defendant's expectation of privacy, reversing Jones v. United States, 4 L.Ed.2d 697 (1960); see: Rawlings v. Kentucky, 65 L.Ed.2d 633 (1980); 7-2.

State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980)

Washington will not abandon automatic standing rule (plurality decision); a defendant charged with a crime which has possession as an element automatically has standing to challenge search if it was in his possession at the time of search, CONST. Art. 1, § 7, State v. Carter, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995), State v. Libero, 168 Wn.App. 612, 616-17 (2012), State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019), but see: State v. Jones, 68 Wn.App. 843 (1993), cf.: State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 20-23 (2000), State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244 (2009); 5-3.

United States v. Payner, 65 L.Ed. 468 (1980)

Feds burglarize third party's home and illegally seize evidence used to convict defendant; held that evidence is admissible as defendant lacks standing to challenge unlawful search of third party's home; 6-3.

State v. Hayden, 28 Wn.App. 935 (1981)

Police stop vehicle for traffic infraction, get consent to search glove compartment, find a purse which suspect says belongs to his "old lady"; held: defendant lacked standing to object to search of purse as he did not have a subjective expectation of privacy, having told police purse was not his, per Rakas v. Illinois, 58 L.Ed.2d 387 (1978); automatic standing rule does not apply as possession is not an element of robbery; I.

State v. Selvidge, 30 Wn.App. 406 (1981)

Police are called to burglary, observe footprints with distinctive tread; 90 minutes later, police observe car parked in high crime area three blocks from burglary scene; car had been seen "prowling" several houses before burglary; police stop car, ask defendants what they are doing, recognize one defendant from prior burglaries, ask to see their shoes, release defendants; upon further investigation, police determine that suspects' shoe treads match footprints; held: police had sufficient articulable facts to support a well-founded suspicion to detain; suspects had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the tread pattern of shoes they wear in public; II.

State v. Morgan, 32 Wn.App. 764 (1982)

Package is sent by private courier in Los Angeles to defendants in Washington; in California, package is searched; held: defendants have standing to object to the Los Angeles search; II.

State v. Aydelotte, 35 Wn.App. 125 (1983)

Evidence of post-entry assaults on police officers are outside the scope of the exclusionary rule, State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017); I.

State v. White, 40 Wn.App. 490 (1985)

Passenger in front seat of car does not have legitimate expectation of privacy in unoccupied rear passenger compartment of the car; II.

State v. Goodman, 42 Wn.App. 331 (1985)

Denial of ownership does not eliminate standing as long as defendant was in possession of the item at the time it was seized or searched, State v. Allen, 93 Wn.2d 170, 172 (1980); cf.: State v. Foulkes, 63 Wn.App. 643 (1991), State v. Zakel, 119 Wn.2d 563 (1992); II.

State v. Pittman, 49 Wn.App. 889 (1987)

Defendant and passenger are unlawfully stopped by police investigating a robbery, passenger provides police with information incriminating defendant; held: defendant lacks standing to object to evidence obtained from an illegal stop of the passenger, State v. Smith, 104 Wn.2d 497, 509 (1985), cf.: Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007); I.

State v. Belieu, 50 Wn.App. 834 (1988)

Passenger in front seat of car does have standing to challenge seizure of property under passenger seat, distinguishing State v. White, 40 Wn.App. 490 (1985); III.

State v. Davis, 53 Wn.App. 502 (1989)

Possession of child pornography, RCW 9.68A.070, does not impermissibly infringe on the right to privacy, distinguishing Stanley v. Georgia, 22 L.Ed.2d 542 (1969); I.

State v. Stone, 56 Wn.App. 153 (1989)

Guest in home lacks standing to challenge warrant for unlisted telephone number of that home, State v. McKinney, 49 Wn.App. 850 (1987), State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 20-23 (2000), see: Minnesota v. Carter, 142 L.Ed.2d 373 (1998), distinguishing State v. Butterworth, 48 Wn.App. 152 (1987); III.

United States v. Verdugo-Urquidez, 108 L.Ed.2d 222 (1990)

Fourth Amendment does not apply to search by United States agents of property owned by a nonresident alien located in a foreign country; 6-3.

State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991)

A "target" defendant may not raise a possible violation of the rights of a third party in order to invoke the exclusionary rule under the Fourth Amendment and CONST. Art. 1, § 7; II.

California v. Hodari D., 113 L.Ed.2d 690 (1991)

Suspect sees police and runs, police chase without reasonable suspicion, suspect throws drugs while fleeing, is stopped and arrested, police recover drugs; held: absent the application of physical force or submission to a show of authority, no seizure for purposes of the Fourth Amendment occurs, Michigan v. Chesternut, 100 L.Ed.2d 565 (1988), see: State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), United States v. Mendenhall, 64 L.Ed.2d 497 (1980), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 344 (1997), see: Torres v. Madrid, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 989, 209 L.Ed.2d 190 (2021); here, suspect was not seized until he was tackled; 7-2.

State v. Foulkes, 63 Wn.App. 643 (1991)

Burglary defendant denies at suppression hearing that he owned car that was searched, did not drive it to site of search and did not know who did, thus defendant lacked expectation of privacy in the car or its contents at search and lacks standing, Rakas v. Illinois, 58 L.Ed.2d 387 (1978), see: State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267, 279-80 (1993), as crime charged does not have possession as element, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 181 (1980); I.

State v. Pentecost, 64 Wn.App. 656 (1992)

Area surrounding a trespasser's campsite is not analogous to curtilage of a residence, thus trespasser has no reasonable expectation of privacy, but see: State v. Pippin, 200 Wn.App. 826 (2017), United States v. Ross, 456 U.S. 798, 822, 102 S.Ct. 2157, 72 L.Ed.2d 572 (1982), see also: State v. Cleator, 71 Wn.App. 217 (1993); III.

State v. Zakel, 119 Wn.2d 563 (1992)

Defendant's testimony that he lived in allegedly stolen vehicle is insufficient to establish defendant's possession of vehicle where it was found by police unattended, illegally parked, unlocked, window open, defendant had no relationship to businesses where vehicle found; defendant did not possess vehicle at time of search, thus he cannot invoke automatic standing doctrine; Supreme Court overrules that portion of State v. Zakel, 61 Wn.App. 805 (1991), which purports to abandon automatic standing doctrine, but see: State v. Jones, 68 Wn.App. 843 (1993); see: State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980), State v. Carter, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995), State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 658-9 (1997), State v. Kypreos, 110 Wn.App. 612 (2002), 115 Wn.App. 207 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Walter, 66 Wn.App. 862 (1992)

Photo lab manager processes film showing juveniles standing in front of Tennessee state emblem, fears liability for preparation of counterfeit driver's licenses, calls police who requests copies of prints, manager complies; held: delivery of film to processor establishes a lack of a reasonable expectation of privacy in photos or in disclosure of the fact that negatives existed, State v. Duncan, 81 Wn.App. 70, 74-6 (1996); any implied contract of confidentiality is of no consequence; First Amendment scrutiny need not be applied to photographs, see: New York v. P.J. Video, Inc., 89 L.Ed.2d 871 (1986), Heller v. New York, 37 L.Ed.2d 745 (1973); I.

State v. Jones, 68 Wn.App. 843 (1993)

Police observe defendant in apartment and hallway engaging in drug transactions, seize drugs, arrest defendant; at suppression hearing, defense presents no evidence establishing defendant's relationship to the apartment; held: defense has the burden to establish a subjective and reasonable expectation of privacy; mere legitimate presence in an apartment with permission of the owner fails to sustain burden of showing an invasion of Fourth Amendment rights, Minnesota v. Carter, 142 L.Ed.2d 373 (1998), see: State v. Carter, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995), distinguishing Minnesota v. Olson, 109 L.Ed.2d 85 (1990) (overnight guest has reasonable expectation of privacy); but see: State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980), State v. Zakel, 119 Wn.2d 563 (1992), State v. Rison, 116 Wn.App. 955 (2003), cf.: State v. Magneson, 107 Wn.App. 221 (2001), State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685 (2007); I.

State v. Cleator, 71 Wn.App. 217 (1993)

Owner of a tent erected without permission on public land not in a campsite has no legitimate expectation of privacy in the contents of the tent other than his personal belongings, but see: State v. Pippin, 200 Wn.App. 826 (2017), United States v. Ross, 456 U.S. 798, 822, 102 S.Ct. 2157, 72 L.Ed.2d 572 (1982), see also: State v. Pentecost, 64 Wn.App. 656 (1992); I, 2-1.

State v. Goucher, 124 Wn.2d 778 (1994)

During search of residence pursuant to warrant, phone rings, police answer, caller asks to buy drugs, police agree, defendant arrives, is sold drugs by police and arrested; held: automatic standing is inapplicable, as defendant was not in possession at the time of the contested search (telephone call), State v. Zakel, 119 Wn.2d 563, 568 (1992), defendant lacks standing to challenge police answering telephone as beyond scope of warrant; 9-0.

State v. Carter, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995)

Defendant, charged with possession of drugs, is arrested in a motel room which police enter without a warrant, at hearing defendant testifies she was just visiting; held: automatic standing is not applicable under United States Constitution, United States v. Salvucci, 65 L.Ed.2d 619 (1980), but is not abandoned under Washington Constitution, State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 20-23 (2000), reversing, in part, State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 320 (1994), as defendant's testimony establishes she lacked a reasonable expectation of privacy under either constitution, see; Minnesota v. Carter, 142 L.Ed.2d 373 (1998); 5-4.

State v. Kealey, 80 Wn.App. 162 (1995)

Defendant, while shopping, leaves purse in store, clerk opens it and finds drugs, clerk tells police who search purse for identification, police "set up a sting operation," defendant recovers purse, is arrested; held: owner of misplaced, as opposed to abandoned, property maintains reasonable expectation of privacy; searches of misplaced property for identification are an exception to the warrant requirement, thus police search here was proper; II.

State v. Farmer, 80 Wn.App. 795, 801 (1996)

Defendant provides store receipts to insurance company to claim reimbursement following flood, police investigating insurance fraud obtain original receipts from stores, defense objects to warrantless seizure; held: assuming, arguendo, a customer has a legitimate expectation of privacy in a transaction with a business, that expectation ceases to exist once the customer discloses evidence of the transaction to a third party, as occurred by giving altered receipts to insurance company, see: State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689, 694 (1993); I.

State v. Duncan, 81 Wn.App. 70, 74-6 (1996)

Renter does not have reasonable expectation of privacy in storage facility's business records identifying renter, State v. McCray, 15 Wn.App. 810, 816-7 (1976), State v. Walter, 66 Wn.App. 862 (1992), State v. Faydo, 68 Wn.App. 621, 625 (1993), State v. Jeffries, 105 Wn.2d 398 (1986), absent rental agreement requiring that information be kept private; III.

State v. Boot, 81 Wn.App. 546 (1996)

Defendant's presence in basement of house with permission at a party does not establish a legitimate expectation of privacy under Fourth Amendment, as he was not a temporary or overnight guest, State v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 409, 414 (1992), basement area does not give rise to a privacy expectation, State v. Jones, 68 Wn.App. 843, 851 (1993); casual presence alone does not establish standing, Minnesota v. Carter, 142 L.Ed.2d 373 (1998), see: State v. Rison, 116 Wn.App. 955 (2003), State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685 (2007); III.

State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 603-4 (1996)

Police officer advises Federal Express he will obtain a warrant for a package, Federal Express delivers package to sheriff's office, officer picks it up later, holds it until drug dog reacts positively, obtains warrant and searches it; held: defendant has burden of proof to establish whether and when defendant is entitled to constitutional protection, delivery by Federal Express was without governmental participation, seizure did not occur when Federal Express delivered package to sheriff as there is no evidence counter clerk was authorized to make seizure; seizure occurred when officer arrived and took control of package, cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 133 S.Ct.1409, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); II.

State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 658-09 (1997)

Police search residence where defendant does not reside, find drugs, defendant "made no claim that he was in possession" of the drugs, thus lacks automatic standing, State v. Zakel, 119 Wn.2d 563, 568 (1992); II.

State v. Takesgun, 89 Wn.App. 608 (1998)

Trooper stops vehicle for infraction, illegally detains driver and searches trunk, finds drugs, arrests passenger, finds drugs on passenger's person, trial court holds passenger lacks standing to challenge search; held: unlawful stop or detention of driver and vehicle is an unlawful detention of the passenger, who can challenge the lawfulness of the stop, Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007); III.

State v. Picard, 90 Wn.App. 890, 895-7 (1998)

After house fire is extinguished, fire officials take a heater from defendant's mother's bedroom without a warrant, evidence establishes that defendant lived in premises but did not reside in mother's bedroom, would knock before entering; held: defendant has burden of showing privacy or possessory interest was invaded and that he has standing, State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 601-2 (1996), residence in premises does not confer standing to challenge seizure from a room to which defendant lacks access; II.

Minnesota v. Carter, 142 L.Ed.2d 373 (1998)

Police observe through gap in closed blind of apartment window three men bagging cocaine, at hearing trial court finds that defendant was a visitor and not an overnight social guest; held: an overnight guest in a home may claim the protection of the Fourth Amendment, State v.

Magneson, 107 Wn.App. 221 (2001), but one who is merely present with consent of householder may not, Rakas v. Illinois, 58 L.Ed.2d 387 (1978), cf.: State v. Rison, 116 Wn.App. 955 (2003), State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685 (2007), Byrd v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 1518, 200 L.Ed.2d 805 (2018), distinguishing Jones v. United States, 4 L.Ed.2d 697 (1960), Minnesota v. Olson, 109 L.Ed.2d 85 (1990); 6-3.

State v. Walker, 136 Wn.2d 678 (1998)

Wife consents to search of home, husband arrives before search begins, does not consent, police search, find drugs; held: where police have consent from an individual possessing equal control over premises, that consent remains valid against a cohabitant who also possesses equal control only while the cohabitant is absent, State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 735, 744 (1989), cf.: State v. Haapala, 139 Wn.App. 424 (2007), but where cohabitant is present and does not consent and where police execute search, it is valid only against the consenting cohabitant, here the wife, thus evidence against husband is suppressed; reverses State v. Walker, 86 Wn.App. 857 (1997); 7-2.

Bond v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 365 (2000)

Agent boards bus, squeezes defendant's soft luggage, feels "brick-like object," asks passenger if he could open it, passenger agrees, agent finds drugs; held: physical manipulation of luggage is a search, violates 4th Amendment; 7-2.

State v. Jacobs, 101 Wn.App. 80 (2000)

Defendant, prohibited by no contact order from contacting victim, is found inside victim's home after victim tells police that they may not enter victim's home, defendant challenges validity of search; held: while defendant kept clothing at residence and, with victim's permission, showered there, he had no legitimate expectation of privacy, and thus lacks standing to challenge police entry, Rakas v. Illinois, 58 L.Ed.2d 387 (1978), California v. Ciraolo, 90 L.Ed.2d 210 (1986), see: State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685 (2007); because defense did not engage in state constitutional analysis, State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54, 61-67 (1986), court will not consider CONST. Art. I, § 7 claims, but see: State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019); II.

State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 20-23 (2000)

Police enter third party's home, serve arrest warrant on defendant, find drugs on defendant in search pursuant to arrest, defendant challenges lawfulness of entry; held: while automatic standing is applicable under Washington Constitution, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 182 (1980), the purpose of the rule is so that a defendant is not faced with the risk that statements made at suppression hearing will later be used to incriminate him, albeit under the guise of impeachment, Simpson, 95 Wn.2d at 180; here, defendant's ability to challenge the entry into the home does not depend upon his admission to possession of drugs, thus automatic standing does not apply, cf.: State v. Jones, 146 Wn.2d 328 (2002), see also: State v. Kypreos, 110 Wn.App. 612 (2002), 115 Wn.App. 207 (2002); 5-4.

State v. Francisco, 107 Wn.App. 247, 251-55 (2001)

Adult son who resides elsewhere but is a "welcome visitor" in mother's home and occasionally stays there overnight lacks standing to challenge mother's consent to search; I.

State v. Byrd, 110 Wn.App. 259 (2002)

Passenger has standing to challenge traffic stop, Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007); I.

State v. Kypreos, 110 Wn.App. 612 (2002), 115 Wn.App. 207 (2002)

Automatic standing applies if (1) possession is an element, (2) defendant was in possession of contraband, (3) contraband bears a direct relationship to the search sought to be contested, and (4) defendant reasonably believe he was legitimately on the premises searched, cf.: State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019); I.

State v. Evans, 159 Wn.2d 402 (2007)

Police, with consent to search defendant's car, see briefcase, defendant denies it's his, police take briefcase from car, defendant objects, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: defendant had automatic standing to challenge seizure and search of briefcase as possession was an element of the crime and defendant "was in possession of the contraband at the time of the" seizure, at 407 ¶ 9, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 181 (1980); defendant had a reasonable expectation of privacy in the contents of the briefcase as he exhibited a subjective expectation of privacy and because society recognizes a general expectation of privacy in briefcases, State v. Kealey, 80 Wn.App. 162, 168-70 (1995), State v. Hamilton, 179 Wn.App. 870 (2014); a defendant who denies ownership of an item, located in an area in which he has a privacy interest, has not voluntarily abandoned the property, State v. Goodman, 42 Wn.App. 331 (1985); reverses, in part, State v. Evans, 129 Wn.App. 211, 221-24 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685, 692-95 (2007)

Defendant and lessor are in romantic relationship, defendant visits lessor's apartment, previously spent the night and kept some clothing there, enters apartment to assist lessor in moving, takes a shower, police officer enters without a warrant and observes defendant with drugs; held: test for less-than-overnight social guest standing: (1) defendant's relationship with tenant, (2) context and duration of visit during which search took place, (3) frequency and duration of defendant's previous visits, (4) whether defendant kept personal effects in the home; here, all four factors indicate legitimate expectation of privacy; II.

Brendlin v. California, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007)

When a police officer makes a traffic stop, the passenger is seized and may challenge the constitutionality of the stop, State v. Takesgun, 89 Wn.App. 608 (1998), State v. Byrd, 110 Wn.App. 259 (2002), but see: State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990), State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001), State v. Rehn, 117 Wn.App. 142 (2003), cf.: State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244 (2009)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, arrest driver for suspended license, discover that driver is protected party for no contact order, ask driver who passenger is, driver discloses that passenger is the no contact order respondent, arrest passenger, trial court suppresses; held: passenger lacked automatic standing to challenge answers of driver as NCO violation is not a possessory offense, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170 (1980), and automatic standing doctrine only applies when defendant is asserting that his own rights were violated, State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 23 (2000), State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), but see: State v. Allen, 138 Wn.App. 463 (2007); a person does not have standing to raise a violation of another's Fifth Amendment rights; I.

State v. Lakotiy, 151 Wn.App. 699, 706-13 (2009)

Lessee of storage locker admits police to common area of storage facility where police observe another lessee committing a crime, defendant argues he has a right of privacy in common area; held: under state and federal constitutions, a person has no protected privacy interest in the common area of a gated commercial storage facility, distinguishing Seattle v. McCready, 123 Wn.2d 260 (1994); I.

State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, records check shows no contact order with a 16 year old girl, passenger appears to be 16, provides a name other than that of protected person, further records check shows specific tattoo on hand of protected person which is on passenger, driver is arrested for violation of no contact order; held: driver lacks standing to challenge the passenger's questioning, State v. Shuffelen, 150 Wn.App. 244 (2009), but see: State v. Allen, 138 Wn.App. 463 (2007); II.

State v. Hamilton, 179 Wn.App. 870 (2014)

Protected party with protection order finds respondent-defendant in his house where defendant had lived, calls police who ask defendant to come out, protected party finds purse with drugs and hands it to police, defendant tells police it is not her purse but she found it, her rings were in it, she decided to keep it, police search and seize drugs; held: purse was in defendant's home where she had a privacy interest and had her property in the purse so, in spite of her denial of ownership she had a privacy interest, State v. Evans, 159 Wn.2d 402, 409 (2007); judicial estoppel does not preclude defendant from raising a privacy interest because she denied ownership at trial is not material as the evidence should have been suppressed pretrial, defendant did not argue she had no privacy interest, she argued she had no ownership interest; II.

Byrd v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 1518, 200 L.Ed.2d 805 (2018)

Mere fact that a driver in lawful possession or control of a rental car is not listed as an authorized driver on rental agreement will not defeat his or her otherwise reasonable expectation of privacy under the Fourth Amendment, cf.: Minnesota v. Carter, 142 L.Ed.2d 373 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Chase, 1 Wn.App.2d 799 (2017)

Prior to theft trial defendant, shareholder and principal officer of corporation, seeks suppression of corporation's bank records; held: shareholder and officer does not have a privacy interest in a corporation's bank records; I.

State v . Peck, 194 Wn.2d 148 (2019)

Defendant in a stolen truck has automatic standing to challenge the search and seizure of drugs, State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 175 (1980), State v. Evans, 159 Wn.2d 402, 406-07 (2007); 5-4.

SEARCH
Terry Stop and Frisk

Ybarra v. Illinois, 62 L.Ed.2d 238 (1979)

Warrant to search bar and bartender does not extend to customers.

State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437 (1980)

Stop-and-frisk is limited only to a search for weapons; where police discover "spongy" objects in suspect's pocket by squeezing them while patting down for weapons, search reaches beyond scope permitted by Terry v. Ohio, and fruits must be suppressed; 9-0.

State v. Keyser, 29 Wn.App. 120 (1981)

Weapons search must cease when police are aware that they have not found a weapon, even if searching a vehicle, see: State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437 (1980).

Michigan v. Summers, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981)

Police, executing warrant, encounter defendant leaving his residence, require him to return to house, detain him while searching, find drugs in house, then search defendant and find drugs on his person; held: existence of warrant justified detention of occupant of home while search is conducted, Muehler v. Mena, 544 U.S. 93, 161 L.Ed.2d 299 (2005), but see: Bailey v. United States, 568 U.S. 186, 185 L.Ed.2d 19 (2013), and, upon finding contraband in house, justifies arrest and search of occupant on probable cause; this type of detention is "less intrusive than an arrest," Illinois v. McArthur, 148 L.Ed.2d 838 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Quaring, 32 Wn.App. 728 (1982)

Police lawfully stop defendant's vehicle and have defendant step outside; defendant asks for his jacket from inside vehicle; police search jacket, find evidence; held: police had "reasonable concern" that jacket might contain a weapon, per Terry; I.

State v. Swaite, 33 Wn.App. 477 (1982)

Police respond to burglary scene, get description of suspect, detain defendant after flight, seize knife from belt, patdown, find two cigarette holders, ask defendant his name, then learn cigarette holders did not belong to burglary victim; police then determine defendant gave false name and arrest him for obstructing, later learn that cigarette holders were stolen from another nearby burglary; held: since obstructing statute, RCW 9A.76.020 (1975), is unconstitutional, State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92 (1982), cigarette holders are suppressed, but police may testify that they found holders on defendant, as they were seen before the obstruction arrest; I.

State v. Harper, 33 Wn.App. 507 (1982)

Detained suspect who repeatedly thrusts his hands in his pockets may be patted down; I.

State v. Loewen, 97 Wn.2d 562 (1982)

Defendant is injured in automobile accident; police find CCW permit in wallet, patdown defendant, find "cocaine sniffer"; at hospital, police search defendant's purse for identification, find drugs; held: patdown exceeded scope of stop and frisk, as coke sniffer was clearly not a weapon; search of purse exceeded scope of "medical emergency exception," as state failed to prove that a reasonable person would have thought that an emergency existed; see: State v. Gocken, 71 Wn.App. 267 (1993); 7-2.

State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982)

Police, serving search warrant on residence, patdown all persons present; officer feels bulge on defendant which he knows is not weapon but, based on his experience, knew it was a balloon of heroin; held: person's mere presence at private residence being searched pursuant to warrant does not justify a frisk by police, Ybarra v. Illinois, 62 L.Ed.2d 238 (1979) in absence of "particular facts from which he reasonably inferred that the individual was armed and dangerous," Sibron v. N.Y., 20 L.Ed.2d 917 (1968), State v. Lennon, 94 Wn.App. 573 (1999); even if patdown was justified, "once it is ascertained that no weapon is involved, the government's limited authority to invade the individual's right to be free of police intrusion is spent," State v. Allen, 93 Wn.2d 170 (1980), State v. Garvin, 166 Wn.2d 242 (2009), State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29 (2006), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020); plain feel is not an exception to warrant requirement, State v. Hudson, 69 Wn.App. 270 (1993); reverses State v. Broadnax, 29 Wn.App. 433, 25 Wn.App. 704; reaffirms State v. Hobart, 94 Wn.2d 437 (1980); but see: State v. Pimentel, 55 Wn.App. 569 (1989), Minnesota v. Dickerson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993); 5-3.

State v. Holbrook, 33 Wn.App. 692 (1983)

Police stop suspect's vehicle for infraction, radio registration, another officer hears broadcast, recognizes vehicle from a "hot sheet" which states that an informant claims suspect keeps drugs and gun under dashboard,police remove suspect from vehicle, search under dash, find drugs, no gun; held: where police have made a reasonable investigatory stop and have information that suspect carries a gun, officer may search for gun even if information is not established as reliable, see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), but see: State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); distinguishes State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43 (1980); see: State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168 (1993); I.

Michigan v. Long, 77 L.Ed.2d 1201 (1983)

Police stop vehicle that was driving erratically; sole occupant gets out of car; police observe knife in car, search car, find drugs; held: where police, in roadside encounter, have a reasonable articulable belief that suspect poses a danger and may gain immediate control of weapons, they may conduct a Terry search of car's interior and may seize contraband found therein; 6-3.

State v. Adame, 37 Wn.App. 94 (1984)

Police, serving search warrant, patdown resident about whom they had information that he was armed, feel a bulge which they could not identify, find a bag of marijuana; held: police officer, in conducting patdown, may remove an unidentifiable item producing a bulge to satisfy himself it was not a weapon; II.

State v. Worth, 37 Wn.App. 889 (1984)

Warrant authorizes search of premises and person of owner of premises; police serve warrant, arrest owner, search purse belonging to nonowner occupant, find bindle of cocaine; held: search of purse exceeded scope of warrant, State v. Campbell, 166 Wn.App. 464 (2011); police may detain occupants not listed in warrant and may, if suspicious activities justify it, search for weapons, but may not be more intrusive; c.f: State v. Hill, 123 Wn.2d 641 (1994); II.

State v. Smith, 102 Wn.2d 449 (1984)

Police, searching for an escapee, approach defendant, ask to speak with him and because it is a high crime area and they did not know defendant, pat him down and discover concealed weapon; further investigation establishes defendant is not escapee; held: patdown was unlawful as police lacked a reasonable suspicion that the defendant was armed or dangerous, cf.: State v. Collins, 66 Wn.App. 157 (1992); suspicion of dangerousness must focus particularly on the individual searched, not simply upon the area in which s/he is found, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982); 7-2.

State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985)

Unnamed citizen tells officer that a man in a bus station rest room stall has a gun, describes suspect, officer enters restroom, sees man who meets description, holds him at gun point, is told by suspect that suspect has a blank gun in his rucksack, handcuffs suspect, searches rucksack, finds starter pistol and handcuffs in rucksack, officer recalls a police bulletin concerning a crime committed with handcuffs, arrests defendant who, following further investigation, is charged and convicted of a robbery; held: investigatory stop was proper where an anonymous informant of undetermined reliability states he observed suspect carrying or displaying a gun in a public place, see: State v. Randall, 73 Wn.App. 225 (1994), see also: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), but see: State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992), Florida v. J.L., 579 U.S. 266, 272, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019); where officer is told by suspect he has a gun in a container, officer may search container since releasing it to suspect would put officer in danger, United States v. McClinnhan, 660 F.2d 500 (D.C. Cir. 1981); arrest was unlawful as officer at best only suspected suspect of committing a crime, and recollection of police bulletin was too vague to support probable cause; I.

State v. Douglas S., 42 Wn.App. 138 (1985)

"John Doe" warrant cannot authorize the search of any individual who resides in the premises described in the warrant; where a person is present at a location police are searching pursuant to a valid warrant, that person may be frisked only if police have reasonable grounds to believe he is armed and dangerous, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), State v. Lennon, 94 Wn.App. 573 (1999), State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008); III.

State v. Pimintel, 55 Wn.App. 569 (1989)

Warrant authorizes search of premises and "Juan Doe, Mexican Male," 21-years old, 5'10", 165 pounds; police serve warrant, defendant enters room, is secured, reaches toward his left shirt pocket, police search, find drugs in pocket, officer testifies he did not believe defendant had weapon; held: defendant matched "Juan Doe," drugs found on premises, thus detention was valid; once detained person acts in a manner to arouse suspicion he is destroying evidence, then seizure of that evidence is permitted, State v. Dorsey, 40 Wn.App. 459, 473 (1985), State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591 (1992), distinguishing Ybarra v. Illinois, 62 L.Ed.2d 238 (1980), State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), see: State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008); III.

State v. Lucas, 56 Wn.App. 236 (1989)

A defendant released on conditions of probation supervision pending appeal has the same diminished expectation of privacy as a probationer serving his sentence; well-founded suspicion is sufficient, State v. Patterson, 51 Wn.App. 202 (1988); observation by probation officer of suspected drugs in residence four days before search plus defendant's nervousness when officers arrived plus defendant's demand for warrant even though officers had not conveyed a desire to search establish well-founded suspicion, State v. Lampman, 45 Wn.App. 228 (1986); I.

State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812 (1990)

Police, knowing driver lacked license, follow vehicle, which does not immediately pull over, with emergency lights on, observe defendant-passenger move around considerably as though trying to hide something, begins patdown of defendant-passenger, who gives officer syringe with drugs; held: "an officer who properly stops a car may conduct a search for weapons within the immediate control of the driver and passengers when one of the persons in the car moves as if to hide a weapon," at 815, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986), State v. Watkins, 76 Wn.App. 726, 729-31 (1995), State v. Larson, 88 Wn.App. 849 (1997), State v. Laskowski, 88 Wn.App. 858 (1997), see: State v. Bradley, 105 Wn.App. 30, 36-38 (2001), State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); I.

State v. Biegel, 57 Wn.App. 192 (1990)

Police observe defendant in high crime area drive up, park, converse with one of several persons standing on corner for 30 seconds, follow person into apartment building; police testify that was the normal mode of conduct for a drug transaction, detain defendant, search wallet without consent, call in identification, find warrant, patdown defendant, find drugs; held: police had sufficient evidence to make a Terry stop to identify defendant but seizing wallet was not a weapons search, which was the extent of the Terry search, thus drugs suppressed; III.

State v. Sistrunk, 57 Wn.App. 210 (1990)

Police officer approaches vehicle parked with hood raised, driver and passengers state that there is no problem, officer observes numerous dirty beer cans in back seat, advise suspects of open container law, suspects reply they were collecting for recycling, police observe no drinking nor smell intoxicants, search vehicle for intoxicants, find that visible beer cans were empty, then find syringe under seat; held: a mere traffic stop is not grounds for a Terry weapons search, State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638 (1980); no evidence existed to lead officer to believe that suspects were armed and dangerous, thus seizure of syringe was unlawful; III.

State v. Conner, 58 Wn.App. 90 (1990)

Investigatory stop deemed valid where police knew that radio dispatch received call from person identified as an employee of a business at a certain location, that a wallet had been stolen nearby within the hour, that suspect was at the business office being stalled by other employees, upon arrival, defendant met description, distinguishing State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43 (1980), in that person calling reported a crime, not just suspicious activity, but see: State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); citizen informant is inherently reliable even if calling on the telephone, State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); patdown and removal of papers was reasonably related in scope to the reason for the stop; I.

State v. Rice, 59 Wn.App. 23 (1990)

Responding to call of shots fired, police arrive at scene, observe group of juveniles walking through parking lot, some run upon approach of police, defendant ordered to walk toward police, defendant hesitates, moves hands toward pockets, police patdown defendant, find drugs in hand; held: seizure of defendant was lawful even though he was not suspected of a crime, as police had to investigate shooting report, defendant was only person available at the time to talk to, crime detection and prevention are legitimate purposes of investigative stops, police can do more if suspected misconduct endangers life or personal safety, State v. McCord, 19 Wn.App. 250, 253 (1978), State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986); patdown was lawful due to defendant's fidgeting toward pocket, as police may conduct a limited, self-protective search of someone whom they have lawfully stopped for investigation and reasonably believe to be armed, State v. Malbeck, 15 Wn.App. 871, 873 (1976); I.

State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775 (1990)

Police observe vehicle in closed park, see three men in car, no one in driver's seat, ask for identification, find concealed weapons permit on one suspect who says he has a gun in vehicle, all three removed from vehicle, patted down, knife found strapped to one suspect, police search passenger compartment for gun, find numerous weapons; held: whereas driver's seat was empty and police thus had reasonable suspicion that a fourth person was in the vicinity, one passenger was agitated and uncooperative, time of night, weapon found during patdown, police were reasonably suspicious that suspects were dangerous, might try to gain access to weapon in vehicle, thus search of passenger compartment was valid, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733, 738-30 (1984), State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987), State v. Mitchell, 80 Wn.App. 143 (1995), cf.: State v. Pines, 17 Wn.App.2d 483 (2021); 6-3.

Seattle v. Hall, 60 Wn.App. 645 (1991)

Defendant approaches officer, becomes "sort of hostile, antsy, nervous, bobbed around, talking defensively," kept hands in pocket, police frisk, find unlawful weapons; held: when an individual voluntarily approaches an officer and behaves in a manner that causes the officer a legitimate concern for safety, the officer is entitled to take immediate protective measures; suspect's behavior would lead reasonable person to believe that his safety was in danger, State v. Harper, 33 Wn.App. 507 (1982); I.

State v. Feller, 60 Wn.App. 678 (1991)

Stop for minor traffic violation does not justify patdown absent reasonable grounds that person is presently armed and dangerous, Terry v. Ohio, 20 L.Ed.2d 889 (1968), State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982); III.

State v. Barber, 118 Wn.2d 335 (1992)

"Racial incongruity," i.e., a person of any race being out of place in a particular area, should never constitute a finding of reasonable suspicion of criminal behavior; 7-2.

State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992)
