CRIMINAL CASELAW NOTEBOOK©
2023

by

Ronald Kessler

Revised: February 2, 2023

Caselaw current through January 24, 2023

EDITOR'S NOTE

The Criminal Caselaw Notebook 2023 is free.

Many of the cases are hyperlinked to Westlaw. Users can navigate via the navigation sidebar (View menu) in most versions of MS Word.

Ronald Kessler
caselawnotebook@gmail.com

2 February 2023

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ACCOMPLICE

State v. Sutherland, 24 Wn.App. 719 (1979), rev'd, on other grounds, 94 Wn.2d 527 (1980)
Can give aiding and abetting instruction even though defendant is only one charged;

State v. Matthews, 28 Wn.App. 198 (1981)
State need not establish which of two defendants was principal and which was accomplice; II.

State v. William, 28 Wn.App. 209 (1981)
Approves WPIC 10.51; distinguishes In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979); where accomplice liability is before jury as alternative theory, they need not be instructed they must be unanimous as to whether defendant is principal or accomplice; accord: State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981); I.

State v. Brown, 29 Wn.App. 11 (1981)
Defendant, charged with forgery, calls a witness who takes the Fifth, whereupon court gives accomplice instruction as jury might believe witness was the principal; held: because defense interjected the possibility that the witness was the forger, accomplice instruction was proper; I.

State v. Wilson, 95 Wn.2d 828 (1981)
Defendant, present during drug sale to police, tells agent it's good pot and well worth the price; held: evidence establishes intent to encourage by defendant, thus establishing accomplice liability, distinguishing State v. Peasley, 80 Wash. 99 (1914), State v. Gladstone, 78 Wn.2d 306 (1970), In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Rotunno, 95 Wn.2d 931 (1981)
Mere presence at scene of crime with knowledge crime is occurring is not enough to convict under accomplice theory, cf.: State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936 (2013); jury must be instructed that one is "ready to assist" in the commission of the crime, In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979), State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 568-70 (2009); appears to approve WPIC 10.51; reverses State v. Rotunno, 27 Wn.App. 961 (1980); 9-0.

State v. Lozier, 32 Wn.App. 376 (1982)
"Ready to assist," In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979), may be proven by circumstantial evidence, see: State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 568-70 (2009); I.

State v. Cirkovich, 35 Wn.App. 134 (1983)
Uncorroborated testimony of accomplice should be regarded with skepticism and carefully scrutinized, but it is the exclusive province of the trier of fact to review the testimony and accord it the appropriate weight; I.

State v. Robinson, 35 Wn.App. 898 (1983)
Mere presence at scene of crime is not sufficient to convict, but a person who is present and ready to assist is aiding, State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936 (2013); III.

State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757 (1984)

Defendant is not charged as an accomplice, nor is jury instructed re: accomplice liability, prosecution argues to jury that defendant is guilty as an accomplice; held: argument upon the law must be confined to the law as set forth in the instructions, State v. Estill, 80 Wn.2d 196, 199 (1972), State v. Becklin, 133 Wn.App. 610, 615-20 (2006), see: State v. Scott, 48 Wn.App. 561 (1987).

State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654 (1984)

Accomplice to robbery 1° may be convicted even if s/he did not know that the principal was armed, State v. McChristian, 158 Wn.App. 392, 399-401 (2010), affirming State v. Davis, 35 Wn.App. 506 (1983), reversing State v. Plakke, 31 Wn.App. 262, 266 (1982) and State v. McKeown, 23 Wn.App. 582, 591-93 (1979), cf.: State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 509-13 (2000), State v. Cronin, 142 Wn.2d 568 (2000); see also: State v. Anderson, 63 Wn.App. 257 (1991), State v. Dreewes, 192 Wn.2d 812 (2019); to enhance with special allegations, accomplice must know principal was armed, see: State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572 (1992); 5-4.

State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 561 (1987)

State need not prove that an accomplice shared the same mental state as principal; accomplice liability is proved by showing that accomplice acted with knowledge that his acts will promote the crime, RCW 9A.08.020(3)(a), even if mental state for substantive offense is intent; approved, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 103-4 (1991), State v. Haack, 89 Wn.App. 423 (1997); I.

State v. Gamboa, 38 Wn.App. 409 (1984)

Statutory defense to felony murder, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c), does not shift burden of proof of any element of crime of felony murder to defense; accomplice may be obliged to prove lack of knowledge as to principal being armed when such knowledge is not element of underlying charge; I.

State v. Markham, 40 Wn.App. 75 (1985)

Vicarious liability instruction approved where there is evidence that principal caused agent to commit acts which constitute a crime, distinguishing Windsor v. United States, 384 F.2d 535 (9th Cir. 1967); III.

State v. Scott, 48 Wn.App. 561 (1987)

While mere presence at scene of burglary is insufficient to convict as an accomplice, State v. Rotunno, 95 Wn.2d 931 (1981), In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979), finding defendant in back seat of burglar's vehicle with stolen property is sufficient, State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936 (2013); I.

State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999)

Physical presence and assent, without more, is insufficient to establish accomplice liability for drug case; proof resident cooked and cleaned in presence of heroin dealing is insufficient, see: State v. Roberts, 80 Wn.App. 342 (1996), see also: State v. Munden, 81 Wn.App. 192 (1996), cf.: State v. Collins, 76 Wn.App. 496, 501-2 (1995); I, 2-1.

State v. Dove, 52 Wn.App. 81 (1988)

Defendant who is not involved in actual planning or abduction but who assists in collecting ransom is an accomplice to kidnapping 1°, as kidnapping continues until victim is released; I.

State v. Peterson, 54 Wn.App. 75 (1989)

Where the principal is an informant, defendant may be convicted as an accomplice as long as the crime does not require an intent to do more than the proscribed act; thus, although the accomplice here had police permission to manufacture speed, he nonetheless committed the crime for purposes of being a principal, distinguishing Seattle v. Edwards, 50 Wn.2d 735, 739 (1957); I.

State v. Elliott, 114 Wn.2d 6 (1990)

Being an accomplice is a distinct theory of criminal liability and cannot be a lesser included offense; 9-0.

State v. Ransom, 56 Wn.App. 712 (1990)

In answer to a jury question after deliberations had begun, court gives accomplice instruction over objection; held: accomplice liability is a distinct theory of culpability, for which state must offer timely instructions to permit defense to argue the issue, State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757 (1984), see: State v. Becklin, 163 Wn.2d 519 (2008); supplemental instructions should not go beyond matters that had been, or could have been, argued; II.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

Jury need not be instructed they must be unanimous as to who is principal and who is accomplice as long as all agree they did participate in the crime, State v. Carothers, 84 Wn.2d 256 (1974), State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654, 658 (1984), State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423 (1997), State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780, 792-3 (1998), Pers Restraint of Hegney, 138 Wn.App. 511, 524 (2007), State v. Holcomb, 180 Wn.App. 583, 586-88 (2014), State v. Walker, 182 Wn.2d 463, 481-85 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Parker, 60 Wn.App. 719 (1991)

To prove accomplice liability to vehicular homicide, state must establish defendant, with knowledge it will promote a crime, (1) encouraged another to perform an act of reckless driving and (2) which proximately caused death; defendant's racing another vehicle which is involved in a collision killing another is sufficient, distinguishing State v. Cordero, 36 Wn.2d 846 (1950); an accomplice must be associated with the venture and participate in it as something he wishes to bring about and by his action make it succeed, State v. Jennings, 35 Wn.App. 216, 220 (1983); I.

State v. Anderson, 63 Wn.App. 257 (1991)

Conviction of rendering criminal assistance 1°, RCW 9A.76.070(1), is proper where evidence establishes defendant knew of principal's crime, but not of facts disclosing degree of crime; thus, where defendant knew principal would commit robbery but was ignorant as to firearm (thus, degree), evidence is sufficient, State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654 (1984); II.

State v. Galisia, 63 Wn.App. 833 (1992)

Defendant's continuing and purposeful presence at scene of drug transaction plus expressed interest in seeing transaction succeed so he could obtain drugs and money are sufficient to convict for accomplice to possession with intent to deliver, State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 815-6 (1994), distinguishing State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999), State v. Gladstone, 78 Wn.2d 306 (1970), see: State v. Robinson, 73 Wn.App. 851 (1994), State v. Collins, 76 Wn.App. 496, 501-2 (1995); I.

State v. Langford, 67 Wn.App. 572 (1992)

Accomplice may be convicted of felony-murder 2° (assault) even if he did not know means by which principal intended to accomplish the assault or that principal was armed, State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654, 658-9 (1984); III.

State v. Ferreira, 69 Wn.App. 465 (1993)

In response to prior drive-by shooting, defendant directs others to drive to a house, knowing the others in the car would shoot up the house; held: while presence in car and directing another where to drive might not, standing alone, prove accomplice liability, State v. Scott, 48 Wn.App. 561, 570 (1987), aff'd, 110 Wn.2d 682 (1988), State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 568-70 (2009), here defendant was present at prior shooting, knew shooter was armed and that a shooting would take place, thus evidence was sufficient, distinguishing State v. Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979); III.

State v. Luna, 71 Wn.App. 755, 758-60 (1993)

Defendant's knowledge that principal took a truck after the fact and defendant following stolen truck in another vehicle is insufficient to establish mental accomplice liability, RCW 9A.08.020(3), to taking a motor vehicle without permission, RCW 9A.56.070(1), as there was no evidence defendant knew of taker's intent before theft, and his following did not promote or facilitate theft, nor did it seek to make theft succeed, since it had already occurred, and defendant was unaware of taker's plans; III.

State v. Robinson, 73 Wn.App. 851 (1994)

Defendant-driver observes passenger leave vehicle, grab purse from pedestrian, struggle over purse, passenger returns to vehicle, defendant drives off, is convicted of robbery under accomplice theory; held: once passenger possessed purse and returned to car, robbery was complete, see: State v. Manchester, 57 Wn.App. 765, 770 (1990), State v. Handburgh, 119 Wn.2d 284, 288-94 (1992), State . Phillips, 9 Wn.App.2d 368 (2019), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Derri, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022), thus defendant neither associated himself with robbery, participated in it with desire to bring it about, nor sought to make crime succeed by any actions of his own, In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487, 491 (1979), State v. Galisia, 63 Wn.App. 833, 839 (1992), thus evidence is insufficient to convict of robbery; driving away did not aid and abet passenger, as crime was complete; I.

State v. Rodriguez, 78 Wn.App. 769 (1995)

Although charged as a principal in information, defendant may be convicted as an accomplice, RCW 9A.08.020, State v. Molina, 83 Wn.App. 144, 148 (1996), State v. Johnston, 85 Wn.App. 549, 555 (1997), State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 324 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009); I.

State v. Roberts, 80 Wn.App. 342 (1996)

Defense to VUCSA charge is that defendant-landlord was aware of marijuana grow operation in basement but that he had no dominion and control; held: landlord is not an accomplice by accepting rent, paying utilities, not exercising self-help to terminate the grow operation, not contacting police or otherwise terminating tenancy, as one does not aid and abet unless he associates himself with the undertaking, participates in it as something he desires to bring about, and seeks by his action to make it succeed, State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78, 89 (1987) (dicta), overruled, on other grounds, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999), cf.: State . Eplett, 167 Wn.App. 660 (2012), but see: State v. Winterstein, 140 Wn.App. 676, 685-87 (2007), rev'd, on other grounds, 167 Wn.2d 620 (2009); I.

State v. Munden, 81 Wn.App. 192 (1996)

Evidence that defendant broke into a store and stole property will support instructions as a principal and an accomplice to burglary, see also: State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78 (1987), overruled, in part, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680 (1999); I.

State v. Jackson, 87 Wn.App. 801, 809-12 (1997)

In criminal mistreatment 1° case, RCW 9A.42.020, failing to perform a duty is not an element of accomplice liability in spite of statutory obligations to protect foster children from child abuse or neglect; I.

State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423, 426-31 (1997)

Instructing jury that "defendant or an accomplice assaulted" victim correctly sets forth elements, see: State v. Fallentire, 149 Wn.App. 614, 625-26 (2009), but cf.: State v. Teal, 152 Wn.2d 333 (2004); as long as there is sufficient evidence to support the giving of an accomplice instruction, jurors are not required to determine which participant acted as principal and which acted as accomplice, only that both participated in the crime; jury need not be unanimous as to the manner of participation, State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1993), State v. Carothers, 84 Wn.2d 256, 264 (1974), Pers. Restraint of Hegney, 138 Wn.App. 511, 524 (2007), Pers Restraint of D'Allesandro, 178 Wn.App. 457 (2013), State v. Holcomb, 180 Wn.App. 583, 586-88 (2014); I.

State v. Robertson, 88 Wn.App. 836 (1997)

Malicious harassment, RCW 9A.36.080(1), is a substantive crime, not a sentence enhancement, State v. Worl, 74 Wn.App. 605 (1994), rev'd on other grounds, 129 Wn.2d 416 (1996), thus an accomplice may be strictly liable for the principal's offense, distinguishing State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982); I.

State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780, 792-4 (1998)

Defendant claims co-defendant shot victim and defendant did not know co-defendant would shoot, objects to accomplice instruction "if you are convinced defendant participated in a crime . . . and that a crime . . . [has] been proven beyond a reasonable doubt, you need not determine which participant was an accomplice and which was a principal"; held: accomplice need not share same mental state as principal, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 431 (1985), criminal liability is predicated upon general knowledge of the crime, RCW 9A.08.020(3)(a), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 103-5 (1991), State v. McDonald, 90 Wn.App. 604, 610-11

(1998), State v. Holcomb, 180 Wn.App. 583, 586-88 (2014), see: Waddington v. Sarausad, 172 L.Ed.2d 532 (2008), State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 568-70 (2009), State v. Dreewes, 192 Wn.2d 812 (2019); II.

State v. Alires*, 92 Wn.App. 931, 935-36 (1998)

Evidence that defendant fled from scene of burglary with another, moved property within residence, open window, paint smear on defendant's clothing consistent with paint on point of entry window, defendant's sweating is sufficient to permit accomplice instruction; III.

State v. Jackson, 137 Wn.2d 712, 720-26 (1999)

In criminal mistreatment 1° (child abuse) case, while parents have a common law duty to protect children in their custody, a parent's failure to perform this duty does not subject them to liability as an accomplice to a crime, as the accomplice liability statute does not extend to a failure to come to the aid of another person who is being assaulted or abused, affirming State v. Jackson, 87 Wn.App. 801, 809-12 (1997), cf.: State v. Berube, 150 Wn.2d 498, 509-10 (2003); 7-2.

State v. McDonald*, 138 Wn.2d 680, 685-91 (1999)

Defendant shoots and kills victim who was already fatally wounded by another, claims his shooting was not proximate cause as victim would have died anyway; held: where there is substantial evidence to support accomplice liability, then it is irrelevant that defendant's shooting was not the proximate cause of victim's death, because principal and accomplice liability are not alternative means of committing a single offense, jury need not be instructed that they must be unanimous as to which alternative is used, overruling, in part, State v. Amezola, 49 Wn.App. 78, 90 (1987), State v. Holcomb, 180 Wn.App. 583, 586-88 (2014); affirms State v. McDonald, 90 Wn.App. 604 (1998), see: State v. Guzman, 98 Wn.App. 638 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 509-13 (2000)

An accomplice is not subject to strict liability for any crime committed by the principal, thus instructing jury that a person is legally accountable when he is "an accomplice of such other person in the commission of a crime*"* is improper; while an accomplice need not have knowledge of each element of the principal's crime in order to be convicted, the state must prove the accomplice's general knowledge of his coparticipant's substantive crime, State v. Grendahl, 110 Wn.App. 905 (2002), State v. Cronin, 142 Wn.2d 568 (2000), State v. Rice, 102 Wn.2d 120, 125 (1984), State v. Thomas, 150 Wn.2d 821, 840-50 (2004), State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 492-96 (2007), see: State v. Mangan, 109 Wn.App. 73 (2001), Pers. Restraint of Sarausad, 109 Wn.App. 824 (2001), State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002)(harmless error analysis), State v. Stovall, 115 Wn.App. 650 (2003)(harmless error analysis), State v. Wren, 115 Wn.App. 922 (2003), State v. Trujillo, 112 Wn.App. 390, 400-08 (2002), State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 264-67 (2002)(harmless error analysis), Pers. Restraint of Sims, 118 Wn.App. 471 (2003)(harmless error analysis), Pers. Restraint of Kiet Hoang Le, 122 Wn.App. 816 (2004)(harmless error and retroactivity analysis), Pers. Restraint of Domingo, 155 Wn.2d 356 (2005), see also: State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 403, 408-13 (2005), State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 229-30 (2006), State v. Dreewes, 192 Wn.2d 812 (2019), distinguishing State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654 (1984); 6-3.

State v. Swenson, 104 Wn.App. 744, 756-63 (2000)

Where accomplice instruction erroneously states that a person is legally accountable when he is "an accomplice of such other person in the commission of a crime," State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 509-13 (2000), in felony murder/robbery case, because the state of mind necessary to prove felony murder is same state of mind necessary to prove the underlying robbery, the instruction is harmless, distinguishing State v. Jackson, 137 Wn.2d 712, 726-27 (1999), State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002)(harmless error analysis), State v. Trujillo, 112 Wn.App. 390, 400-08 (2002), State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 264-67 (2002)(harmless error analysis), State v. Stovall, 115 Wn.App. 650 (2003), State v. Wren, 115 Wn.App. 922 (2003), cf.: State v. Grendahl, 110 Wn.App. 905 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Sims, 118 Wn.App. 471 (2003), State v. Moran, 119 Wn.App. 197, 209-17 (2003); I.

State v. Stovall, 115 Wn.App. 650 (2003)

Where jury instruction erroneously states that defendant is accountable when he is an "accomplice of such other person in the commission of a crime," State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000), and there is evidence before the jury of an uncharged crime and the prosecutor argues that the defendant's participation in such crime triggered liability for the specific crime charged, then the error is not harmless, cf.: State v. Johnson, 116 Wn.App. 851, 856-59 (2003), State . Eplett, 167 Wn.App. 660 (2012); I.

State v. Allen, 116 Wn.App. 454, 459-60 (2003)

Defendant is not entitled to a bill of particulars to explain whether state contends he was an accomplice or principal, as there is no distinction between accomplice or principal liability, the charging of one theory adequately apprises defendant of his liability for the other, State v. Molina, 83 Wn.App. 144, 148 (1996); III.

Auburn v. Hedlund, 165 Wn.2d 645, 651-54 (2009)

Defendant furnishes liquor to minor who drives drunk and severely injures defendant-passenger, who is charged with accomplice to DUI; held: an injured passenger of a drunk driver is a victim and thus cannot be an accomplice, State v. Jameison, 4 Wn.App.2d 184 (2018), RCW 9A.08.020(5) (1975); reverses, on other grounds, Auburn v. Hedlund, 137 Wn.App. 494 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Bobenhouse, 143 Wn.App. 315, 322-24 (2008), 166 Wn.2d 881 (2009)

Defendant forces his young children to engage in sexual intercourse, is convicted of rape as an accomplice; held: even though principals could not have been convicted of the crime, forcing innocent people to engage in conduct that would constitute a crime if defendant engaged in the same conduct establishes the elements of accomplice liability, see: State v. B.J.S., 72 Wn.App. 368, 371-72 (1994); III.

State v. Montejano, 147 Wn.App. 696 (2008)

Felony riot statute, RCW 9A.84.010, which provides that a person is guilty if, acting with others, he knowingly threatens force and is armed, defines a specific type of accomplice liability, thus where defendant did not know his cohorts were armed, he is not complicit in the felony; III.

State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 568-70 (2009)

In murder case, evidence that three men, not including defendant, witnessed victim shoot at a car a week before the homicide, week later defendant is seen talking to two of the three in a bar, defendant, with one of the three and the two others drive separately to a park, defendant speaks to people in another car, one of the others shoots victim; held: mere presence is insufficient to prove complicity, defendant's presence with others whom he knew were looking for victim is insufficient to support a murder conviction; evidence that co-defendant spoke with the shooter at a bar right before the homicide, shooter and co-defendant arrived at park at the same time, several members of the group with whom they arrived called out victim, two of the group covered their faces, co-defendant signaled to shooter who shot victim, all sufficient to allow jury to conclude that co-defendant knew shooter was armed and prepared to shoot; II.

State v. McDaniel, 155 Wn.App. 829, 862-64 (2010)

Robbery victim approaches vehicle that defendant is driving, asks to purchase drugs, passenger tells victim to follow vehicle, victim approaches vehicle again, passenger is armed, takes money and shoots victim, vehicle speeds away, all leading to reasonable inference that driver positioned vehicle for quick getaway, allowed time for shooter to draw his gun, thus sufficient to convict as accomplice to robbery; 2-1, II.

State v. McChristian, 158 Wn.App. 392, 399-401 (2010)

To prove accomplice to assault 1°, state is not required to prove that defendant had knowledge that the principal intended to assault victim with a deadly weapon, only that defendant knew the pricnipal intended to assault; "[b]y facilitating the assault…, [defendant] ran the risk that an accomplice would elevate the assault to a first degree offense," at 410 ¶ 14, State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654 (1984); an accomplice may be subject to a mandatory minimum, RCW 9.94A.540(1)(b), for assault 1°; II.

State v. Ferguson, 164 Wn.App. 370 (2011)

Accomplice liability statute, RCW 9A.08.020, is not unconstitutionally overbroad, State v. McPherson, 186 Wn.App. 114, 119-21 (2015), does not criminalize constitutionally protected speech, State v. Coleman, 155 Wn.App. 951, 961 (2010), State v. Holcomb, 180 Wn.App. 583, 588-90 (2014); II.

State v. Hayes, 164 Wn.App. 459 (2011)

In leading organized crime case, RCW 9A.82.060(1)(a) (2003), it is error to give an accomplice instruction as the defendant must actually be the leader; I.

State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 948-50 (2013)

Defendant willingly participates in home invasion robbery in which co-defendant assaults victims while defendant was in another room, is convicted of felony assault; held: defendant's participation in the robbery was more than merely a present, uninvolved observer, reasonable jury could find defendant promoted or facilitated the commission of the assaults by aiding another in planning or committing the assaults; II.

State v. Bauer, 180 Wn.2d 929 (2014)

Defendant leaves loaded gun on dresser, 9-year old visitor takes gun to school and shoots another student, defendant is charged with assault 3° "[w]ith criminal negligence, causes bodily harm to another person by means of a weapon…," RCW 9A.36.031(1)(d) (2011), trial court denies Knapstad motion; held: defendant did not have knowledge that his acts would promote or facilitate the commission of the crime, RCW 9A.08.020(3)(a) (2011), nor did he cause an innocent or irresponsible person to engage in such conduct, RCW 9A.08.020(2)(a), as no evidence was offered to prove defendant had the mens rea to commit the crime, State v. Stein, 144 Wn.2d 236, 245 (2001), thus evidence was insufficient to convict him as an accomplice; reverses State v. Bauer, 174 Wn.App. 59 (2013); 6-3.

State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 382-85 (2015)

Aggravating sentencing factor that victim was a police officer, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(v) (2008), applies to an accomplice if the jury finds the required elements based on the accomplices own misconduct, State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111, 117 (1982), State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654, 658 (1984), State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015), State v. Weller, 185 Wn.App. 913, 927-31 (2015); reverses, in part, State v. Allen, 178 Wn.App. 893 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768, 780-81 (2016)

Co-defendant, after agreeing with defendant to steal from a bank, defendant advising "whenever you're robbing a bank" tellers do what they're told, enters bank in disguise, hands teller a note that reads "no die [sic] packs, no tracking devices, put the money in the bag," teller hands over money, defendant drives getaway car, is convicted of robbery 1º; held: evidence was sufficient to prove accomplice liability in light of accomplice's planning the robbery, writing the note, implied threat, State v. Clark, 190 Wn.App. 736 (2015); reverses State v. Farnsworth, 184 Wn.App. 305 (2014); 5-4.

State v. Wiebe, 195 Wn.App. 252 (2016)

Trial court instructs jury that "a person is not an accomplice…if he or she terminates his or her complicity prior to commission of the crime" and notifies police or makes a good faith effort to prevent the crime, RCW 9A.08.020(5)(b), defense maintains that state has the burden to prove that defendant did not terminate; held: termination of accomplice statute neither negates an element nor is an affirmative defense, thus trial court's instruction was proper and instruction did not shift burden to defense; prosecutor's closing argument that defendant did not call the police did not suggest that defense had the burden of proving he was not an accomplice; II.

State v. Jameison, 4 Wn.App.2d 184 (2018)

Shooter shoots at armed defendant, hits bystander who is run over and killed by a car, defendant is accused of accomplice to murder; held: victim is not an accomplice, Auburn v. Hedlund, 165 Wn.2d 645, 651-54 (2009); III.

State v. Miller, 14 Wn.App.2d 469 (2020)

Defendant is charged as principal, defense case lays blame on a state's witness, trial court over objection, gives accomplice instruction; held: when determining if the evidence at trial is sufficient to support the giving of an instruction, the court views the supporting evidence in the light most favorable to the party that requested the instruction." State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448, 455-56 (2000);" here, because defendant could be viewed as an accomplice, even though the original state's theory was that he was the principal, the instruction was proper; III.

AFFIDAVITS OF PREJUDICE/NOTICE OF DISQUALIFICATION

Matter of Hiebert, 28 Wn.App. 905 (1981)

Where a judge hears dependency case, and later a deprivation petition is filed, same judge must approve affidavit of prejudice, as these are separate proceedings; appointment of counsel and setting case for hearing are not discretionary rulings for purposes of filing affidavit of prejudice, RCW 4.12.050; III.

State v. Cockrell, 102 Wn.2d 561 (1984)

Defendant learns of possible prejudice by judge two months before trial, advises counsel three weeks before trial, affidavit of prejudice filed two weeks before trial, denied as not timely; held: defendant's waiver of speedy trial cured lack of timeliness problems, if any; 9-0.

State v. Hansen, 107 Wn.2d 331 (1986)

Defendant files affidavit of prejudice on day of trial, RCW 4.12.040, stating purpose of affidavit is to obtain continuance, trial judge offers to switch with another judge, defense declines offer, trial judge rejects affidavit; held: only right of defendant is for a different judge, trial judge's offering to switch satisfied that right, defendant's rejection of switch waived right to file affidavit; affirms, on other grounds, State v. Hansen, 42 Wn.App. 755 (1986); see: State v. Parra, 122 Wn.2d 590 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Guajardo, 50 Wn.App. 16 (1987)

Granting or denying a continuance is a discretionary ruling for purposes of an affidavit of prejudice, State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 777-81 (2017); where the court declines to rule on a motion, then no discretionary action has been taken, and an affidavit of the prejudice is timely; III.

Seattle v. Marshall, 54 Wn.App. 829 (1989)

In district or municipal court, CrRLJ 8.9(b) requiring that an affidavit of prejudice be filed within ten days of learning of the judge who will hear a case does not conflict with RCW 3.66.090; I.

State v. Clemons, 56 Wn.App. 57 (1989)

Following hung jury and declaration of mistrial, defense sought to file affidavit of prejudice, RCW 4.12.040, -050, against judge who tried case first time; held: untimely, as judge had made discretionary rulings, retrial is not a new proceeding, cf.: State v. Torres, 85 Wn.App. 231 (1997); I.

State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990)

Once defendant "calls upon" judge to make discretionary ruling regarding waiver of counsel, affidavit of prejudice is untimely; where parties stipulate to a continuance, granting of same is a discretionary ruling, at n. 10, State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 777-81 (2017); counsel does not have an independent right to file affidavit of prejudice once defendant's affidavit is filed and appropriately rejected, State ex rel. Sheehan v. Reynolds, 111 Wash. 281 (1920); 9-0.

State v. Belgarde, 119 Wn.2d 711 (1992)

When a judgment of trial court is reversed and remanded for new trial, parties may not disqualify original trial judge by affidavit of prejudice without cause, State v. Torres, 85 Wn.App. 231 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Parra, 122 Wn.2d 590 (1993)

Ruling on discretionary discovery motions, CrR 4.7(b)(2), by agreed order is an exercise of discretion precluding a subsequent affidavit of prejudice, Rhinehart v. Seattle Times Co., 51 Wn.App. 561, 578 (1988), State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 777-81 (2017); filing affidavit of prejudice 45 minutes before superior court trial is timely absent prior exercise of discretion, RCW 4.12.050, In re Marriage of Lemon, 118 Wn.2d 422, 423 (1992), Harbor Enters., Inc. v. Gudjonsson, 116 Wn.2d 283, 293 (1991), distinguishing Hanno v. Neptune Orient Lines, Ltd., 67 Wn.App. 681 (1992) and In re Marriage of Hennemann, 69 Wn.App. 345 (1993), see also: State v. Hansen, 42 Wn.App. 755, aff'd, 107 Wn.2d 331 (1986), cf.: CrRLJ 8.9(b), Seattle v. Marshall, 54 Wn.App. 829 (1989) re: courts of limited jurisdiction; 9-0.

Special Inquiry Judge, 78 Wn.App. 13 (1995)

An attorney representing a witness before a special inquiry judge, RCW 10.27, is not a party entitled to file an affidavit of prejudice, RCW 4.12.040, .050; a witness before a special inquiry judge is not entitled to file an affidavit of prejudice; III.

State v. Torres, 85 Wn.App. 231 (1997)

Following dismissal without prejudice and refiling of same charge, affidavit of prejudice is timely even where judge made discretionary rulings prior to the dismissal if no discretionary rulings were made after refiling, see: State v. Rock, 65 Wn.App. 654 (1992); III.

State v. Detrick, 90 Wn.App. 939 (1998)

Where one consolidated juvenile respondent files an affidavit of prejudice, it may be imputed to correspondents, LaMon v. Butler, 112 Wn.2d 193 (1989); I.

State v. Waters, 93 Wn.App. 969, 974-75 (1999)

In one-judge counties, statute which requires an affidavit of prejudice to be filed not later than the day on which the case is called to be set for trial, RCW 4.12.050, does not apply to a visiting judge, against whom an affidavit is timely until the judge has made a discretionary ruling; III.

State v. Tarabochia, 150 Wn.2d 59 (2003)

In one-judge counties, an affidavit of prejudice is timely only if filed on or before the date the case is called to be set for trial, RCW 4.12.050, without exceptions, overruling State v. Norman, 24 Wn.App. 811 (1979); 9-0.

State v. Hawkins, 164 Wn.App. 705, 712-14 (2011)

A ruling on a post-conviction motion to dismiss is a discretionary ruling, defendant has no right to an affidavit of prejudice as to that judge in a subsequent motion to modify or vacate a sentence, CrR 7.8(b), as it is not a new case arising from new facts that have occurred since the entry of final judgment, State v. Belgarde, 119 Wn.2d 711, 715 (1992), State v. Clemons, 56 Wn.App. 57, 59 (1989), distinguishing State v. Torres, 85 Wn.App. 231, 234 (1997); I.

State v. Gentry, 183 Wn.2d 749, 759-63 (2015)

A motion to disqualify focused on the appearance of fairness and seeking a discretionary disqualification need not be treated as the equivalent of an affidavit of prejudice; 9-0.

State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 777-81 (2017)

Granting an agreed motion to continue is a discretionary ruling precluding an affidavit of prejudice, State v. Guajardo, 50 Wn.App. 16 (1987), State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990), State v. Parra, 122 Wn.2d 590 (1993), overruling State ex rel. Floe v. Studebaker, 17 Wn.2d 8, 15-17 (1943), reversing, in part, State v. Lile, 193 Wn.App. 179 (2016), but see: RCW 4.12.050(2) (2017); 9-0.

State, ex rel. Haskell, v. Spokane County District Court, 198 Wn.2d 1 (2021)

Following a ruling in district court prosecutor obtains an ex parte writ of review from a superior court judge, defense files notice of disqualification, RCW 4.12.050, superior court denies disqualification; held: a writ of review is a discretionary ruling precluding a notice of disqualification even where defense had no notice that the writ was being sought; 7-2.

APPEAL

In re Lee, 95 Wn.2d 357, 363 (1980), overruled, on other grounds, Hews v. Evans, 99 Wn.2d 80 (1983)

Failure to object to admissibility of evidence precludes attacking the use of the evidence on appeal; however, if challenge is raised in a motion for new trial, issue is preserved, State v. Fagalde, 85 Wn.2d 730 (1975), State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531 (1991), State v. Wicke, 91 Wn.2d 638, 642 (1979), State v. Bird, 136 Wn.App. 127, 133 (2006), but see: State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 807 n. 2 (1993); 6-3.

State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981)

Where state appeals a suppression order, trial court's findings will be reviewed by the substantial evidence test; not subject to independent evaluation of evidence; II.

State v. Kerry, 34 Wn.App. 674 (1983)

Merely because defense puts on evidence does not preclude review for sufficiency, see: State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 608 (1996); I.

State v. Valladares, 99 Wn.2d 663 (1983)

Affirmatively withdrawing motion to suppress waives issue on appeal, Johnson v. United States, 87 L.Ed.2d 704 (1943), State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131, 139 (1990), see also: State v. Tarica, 59 Wn.App. 368 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Baeza, 100 Wn.2d 487 (1983)

Challenge to sufficiency of evidence may be raised for first time on appeal; 9-0.

Jones v. Barnes, 77 L.Ed.2d 987 (1983)

Counsel on appeal is not constitutionally required to raise every nonfrivolous issue on appeal requested by defendant if counsel, as a matter of professional judgment, decides not to present those points; 6-3.

Simonson v. Veit, 37 Wn.App. 761 (1984)

A timely motion for reconsideration suspends the finality of judgment; notice of appeal may be filed within 30 days of ruling on motion for reconsideration; I.

Cheney v. Marchand, 40 Wn.App. 124 (1985)

A decision in an RALJ appeal is not final until an order is signed by a superior court judge; absent a signed order, the court of limited jurisdiction lacks jurisdiction to proceed; III.

State v. Miller, 40 Wn.App. 483 (1985)

During deliberations jury sends out a note to judge, record fails to indicate what response, if any, was made, defense claims denial of right to appeal as record was not preserved; held: appellate counsel, having made no apparent effort to obtain affidavits from trial court or counsel, waived issue on appeal, see: State v. Larson, 62 Wn.2d 64 (1963) (Hill, J. concurring), State v. Keller, 65 Wn.2d 907 (1965), but see: State v. Tilton, 149 Wn.2d 775 (2003); I.

Seattle v. Braggs, 41 Wn.App. 646 (1985)

Where court of limited jurisdiction fails to advise defendant of right to appeal, RALJ 2.7, compelling circumstances will be found to extend appeal notice filing period, distinguishing State v. Mayville, 36 Wn.App. 174 (1983); accord, State v. Lewis, 42 Wn.App. 789 (1986), see also: Pers. Restraint of Vega, 118 Wn.2d 449 (1992); I.

State v. Smissaert, 103 Wn.2d 636 (1985)

Murder 1° defendant is sentenced to 20 years, two years later court learns of error, sentences to life; held: upon correction of sentence, defendant may appeal initial conviction if he did not originally appeal; 7-1.

State v. Rolax, 104 Wn.2d 129 (1985)

Motion on the merits procedures, RAP 18.14, wherein appeal is decided by court commissioner subject to review by panel of Court of Appeals, does not violate defendant's constitutional right to appeal, CONST. Art. I, § 22; 8-1.

Evitts v. Lucey, 83 L.Ed.2d 821 (1985)

Counsel fails to perfect appeal in state court, whereupon state appellate court dismisses appeal; held: due process clause requires effective assistance of counsel for a first appeal of a criminal conviction, thus appeal is reinstated, cf.: State v. Tomal, 82 Wn.App. 415 (1996); 7-2.

State v. Perkins, 108 Wn.2d 212 (1987)

As part of a plea bargain, a defendant can waive the right to appeal a tried case if done knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently, State v. Lee, 132 Wn.2d 498, 505-6 (1997), see: State v. Cooper, 63 Wn.App. 8 (1991), Pers. Restraint of Breedlove, 138 Wn.2d 298 (1999), but see: Garza v. Idaho, 586 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 738, 203 L.Ed.2d 77 (2019), Roe v. Flores-Ortega, 528 U. S. 470 (2000); 8-0.

State v. Knighten, 109 Wn.2d 896 (1988)

Appellate court is not bound by officer and state's concession that it lacked probable cause to arrest; 4 justices concur in plurality opinion.

State v. Arko, 52 Wn.App. 130 (1988)

It is not a breach of a plea bargain for the state to support, on appeal, an exceptional sentence even though the state recommended a sentence within the standard range, unless the parties so agreed as part of the initial plea bargain; I.

McCoy v. Court of Appeals, 100 L.Ed.2d 440 (1988)

Right to counsel not violated by state law requiring appointed appellate counsel, in writing brief pursuant to Anders v. California, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967), to argue why appeal is frivolous; 5-3.

State v. Wethered, 110 Wn.2d 466 (1988)

Appellate court need not address application of state constitution to search and seizure issue where counsel has not adequately addressed the criteria set forth in State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986), but see: State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019); accord: State v. Motherwell, 114 Wn.2d 353 (1990).

State v. Pittman, 54 Wn.App. 58 (1989)

A general objection that does not specify particular ground upon which it is made does not preserve issue for appellate review except where specific basis was apparent from the context; I.

State v. Ortiz, 113 Wn.2d 32 (1989)

Defendant's appeal is dismissed following his deportation to Mexico; held: while an appeal may be dismissed when defendant becomes a fugitive from justice, State v. Johnson, 105 Wn.2d 92 (1986), State v. Estrada, 78 Wn.App. 381 (1995), but see: State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 600-03 (2006), Seattle v. Klein, 161 Wn.2d 554 (2007), a defendant who was deported neither renders the appeal moot, State v. Mosley, 84 Wn.2d 608, 610-11 (1974), nor has defendant treated the appellate process contemptuously, thus reversed; burden on defense to prove deportation as opposed to flight, State v. Rosales-Gonzales, 59 Wn.App. 583 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Trader, 54 Wn.App. 479 (1989)

Failure to object to a polygraph test in the absence of a written stipulation as required in State v. Renfro, 96 Wn.2d 902 (1982) waives issue on appeal; II.

State v. Robinson, 58 Wn.App. 599 (1990)

Right to counsel on appeal is violated where brief filed pursuant to Anders v. California, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967) fails to contain citations to the record or legal authority supporting arguable issues; appellate court must review the record before granting leave to withdraw, State v. Hairston, 133 Wn.2d 534 (1997); I.

State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131 (1991)

Failing to pursue a filed motion to suppress with argument is deemed an abandonment of the motion, State v. Valladares, 31 Wn.App. 63, 75-76 (1982), rev'd, on other grounds, 99 Wn.2d 663 (1983); II.

State v. West, 64 Wn.App. 541 (1992)

After timely notice of appeal is filed, superior court lacks jurisdiction to extend the time allowed for filing a motion for indigency if latter is filed beyond the time allowed for filing a notice of appeal, RAP 15.2(a), see: Lakewood v. Cheng, 169 Wn.App. 165 (2012); II.

State v. Stearns, 119 Wn.2d 247 (1992)

Where not objected to in trial court, defendant cannot challenge definition of "manufacture," RCW 69.50.101(m), for first time on appeal; as long as instructions properly inform jury of elements of the charged crime, any error in further defining terms used in the elements is not of constitutional magnitude; affirms State v. Stearns, 59 Wn.App. 445 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Putman, 65 Wn.App. 606 (1992)

Absence of verbatim report of proceedings of suppression hearing and closing argument held not error, as state submitted narrative report prepared from hearing notes, court's written findings and conclusions, oral ruling, distinguishing State v. Larson, 62 Wn.2d 64, 67 (1963); modifies State v. Putman, 61 Wn.App. 450 (1991); II.

State v. Pollard, 66 Wn.App. 779 (1992)

RAP 15.2(h) does not require appellate counsel to discuss why arguable issues are frivolous, Anders v. California, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967), see also: State v. Hairston, 85 Wn.App. 196 (1997); I.

State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992)

Failure of trial court to enter findings pursuant to CrR 3.5 and 3.6 is not grounds for reversal where the judge's oral opinion is adequate to allow review, see: State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 329-30 (1996), distinguishing State v. Witherspoon, 60 Wn.App. 569, 572 (1991); accord: State v. Riley, 69 Wn.App. 349 (1993), State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 703-4 (1998), State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 343-44 (2006), State v. Bluehorse, 159 Wn.App. 410, 422-23 (2011), see: State v. Powell, 181 Wn.App. 716, 722-23 (2014), but see: State v. McCrorey, 70 Wn.App. 103, 115-6 (1993), State v. Denison, 78 Wn.App. 566 (1995), State v. Naranjo, 83 Wn.App. 300 (1996), State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998); I.

State v. Lynn, 67 Wn.App. 339 (1992)

To analyze alleged constitutional error raised for the first time on appeal, (1) appeals court must make a cursory determination as to whether the alleged error is constitutional, (2) is error manifest?, RAP 2.5, see: State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App.. 44, 56-58 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008), (3) address merits, (4) harmless error analysis, see: State v. Scott, 110 Wn.2d 682 (1988), State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 313 (2005), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 311-13 (2005), but see: State v. Hieb, 107 Wn.2d 97 (1986), State v. Williams, 91 Wn.App. 344 (1998); I.

State v. Barberio, 121 Wn.2d 48 (1993)

Where one count of two-count information is reversed on appeal and dismissed, and upon resentencing trial court does not independently review the sentence on remaining count, and where legality of sentence was not raised at first appeal, the appellate court need not review the issue, RAP 2.5(c)(1), State v. Traicoff, 93 Wn.App. 248, 257-58 (1998), State v. Kilgore, 141 Wn.App. 817 (2007), 167 Wn.2d 28 (2009), State v. Parmalee, 172 Wn.App. 899 (2013), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71 (2015), affirming State v. Barberio, 66 Wn.App. 902 (1992), see: State v. Sauve, 100 Wn.2d 84 (1983).

Butts v. Heller, 69 Wn.App. 263 (1993)

Writ of prohibition, RCW 7.16.300, is appropriate to review denial of a speedy trial motion where (1) reversal would be unquestioned if the case were on appeal and (2) litigation will terminate once error is corrected by interlocutory review, Seattle v. Williams, 101 Wn.2d 445 (1984), State v. Harris, 2 Wn.App. 272 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 78 Wn.2d 894, rev'd, Harris v. Washington, 30 L.Ed.2d 212 (1971), Mabe v. White, 105 Wn.App. 827 (2001); II.

State v. Young, 70 Wn.App. 528 (1993)

Where indigent defendant challenged sufficiency of the evidence before, during and after trial, s/he is entitled to a verbatim report of proceedings of the trial itself, excluding voir dire and opening statements; I.

State v. Olson, 126 Wn.2d 315 (1995)

Trial court suppresses and dismisses, state appeals from dismissal order but not suppression order; held: failure to assign error to an issue, by itself, should not preclude appellate review unless appellant fails to raise an issue in assignments of error, RAP 10.3(a)(3), and fails to present any argument on the issue or provide any legal citation, State v. Pam, 101 Wn.2d 507, 511 (1984), overruling, on other grounds, State v. Fortun, 94 Wn.2d 754 (1980), State v. Cruz, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017), see also: State v. Perry, 120 Wn.2d 200 (1992); affirms State v. Olson, 74 Wn.App. 126 (1994); 9-0.

State v. McFarland, 127 Wn.2d 322 (1995)

Failure to move to suppress evidence is not per se deficient representation, State v. Lee, 162 Wn.App. 852 (2011), overruling State v. Tarica, 59 Wn.App. 368, 374 (1990); where a search is challenged for the first time on appeal, appellant must show, from the record, actual prejudice, i.e., that the trial court likely would have granted the motion if made, see: State v. Rainey, 107 Wn.App. 129 (2001), State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 313 (2005), State v. Kirkpatrick, 160 Wn.2d 873, 879-81 (2007), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 730-31 (2009), State v. Trujillo, 153 Wn.App. 454 (2009); reverses State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57 (1994), State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804 (1994); a personal restraint petition is the appropriate means of having the reviewing court consider matters outside the record, at n. 5, see: State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619 (1999); 7-0.

State v. Worl, 129 Wn.2d 416 (1996)

Law of the case doctrine: appeals courts should not revisit issues already determined in a prior appeal on same case absent a conclusion that the first appellate decision was clearly erroneous, Greene v. Rothschild, 68 Wn.2d 1 (1966), Folsom v. County of Spokane, 111 Wn.2d 256, 263-4 (1988), see: State v. Schwab, 134 Wn.App. 635, 644-45 (2006); 6-3.

State v. Huddleston, 80 Wn.App. 916, 924-6 (1996)

In entering findings following assault 1° bench trial, court uses wrong definition of great bodily harm; held: remedy is a remand to trial court to either apply correct definition to the evidence previously presented or, if trial court believes it cannot fairly do this, grant new trial; II.

State v. Massey, 81 Wn.App. 198 (1996)

Probationer cannot appeal a condition of probation as unconstitutional until harmfully affected, State v. Langland, 42 Wn.App. 287, 292 (1985), State v. Phillips, 65 Wn.App. 239, 244 (1992), State v. J.B., 102 Wn.App. 583 (2000), State v. Cates, 183 Wn.2d 531 (2015), but see: State v. Armstrong, 91 Wn.App. 635 (1998), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), State v.

Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782, 786-91 (2010), State v. Irwin, 191 Wn.App. 644 (2015), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672, 677 (2018), but see: State v. T.J.S.-M., 193 Wn.2d 450 (2019), State v. Blazina, 182 Wn.2d 827, 833-34 (2015), State v. Peters, 10 Wn.App.2d 574 (2019); I.

State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 591-3 (1997)

Where part of verbatim report of proceedings is missing, trial judge's notes may provide a record of sufficient completeness for adequate review, RAP 9.1(b), 9.3, State v. Classen, 143 Wn.App. 45, 54-58 (2008), cf.: State v. Tilton, 149 Wn.2d 775 (2003), State v. Burton, 165 Wn.App. 866 (2012), State v. Waits, 200 Wn.2d 507 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Broadaway, 133 Wn.2d 118, 129-31 (1997)

Review of findings of fact following CrR 3.5 hearings will be based upon substantial evidence (facts will be verities if unchallenged) rather than by independent review, State v. Hill, 123 Wn.2d 641 (1994), State v. Neeley, 113 Wn.App. 100, 103-05 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Cruz, 88 Wn.App. 905 (1997)

Failure of superior court to enter adequate CrR 3.6 findings will result in a presumptive reversal, State v. Smith, 68 Wn.App. 201 (1992), but see: State v. Head, 113 Wn.2d 619 (1998); III.

State v. Tomal, 133 Wn.2d 985 (1997)

Counsel files notice of appeal, does nothing for four years, then, in response to motion to dismiss, files a brief then fails to file transcript for four months, appeal dismissed; held: absent evidence of a knowing, voluntary and intentional abandonment, appeal may proceed, State v. Sweet, 90 Wn.2d 282, 286 (1978), Seattle v. Klein, 161 Wn.2d 557 (2007), cf. State v. Cater, 186 Wn.App. 384 (2015), subject to sanctions against counsel; 9-0.

State v. Smith, 134 Wn.2d 849 (1998)

Following suppression hearing, counsel informs court defense will plead guilty and appeal, respondent enters plea of guilty, Court of Appeals holds that plea waives appeal, State v. Smith, 87 Wn.App. 293 (1997); held: because it is unclear whether respondent knowingly relinquished right to appeal suppression ruling due to counsel's error, remanded to trial court to permit respondent to withdraw plea in favor of stipulated facts trial, see also: State v. Neff, 163 Wn.2d 453, 459-61 (2008), State v. Snapp, 153 Wn.App. 485, 491-93 (2009); per curiam.

State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998)

Failure of trial court to enter findings and conclusions following bench trial, CrR 6.1(d), requires remand for entry of findings; reversal may be appropriate where defense shows actual prejudice, State v. Pray, 96 Wn.App. 25, 30-31 (1999), burden on defendant; no additional evidence may be taken, trial court is not bound by its earlier oral decision, may acquit despite its earlier conviction, see: State v. Pruitt, 145 Wn.App. 784 (2008);; 7-2.

State v. Armstrong, 91 Wn.App. 635 (1998)

Defendant does not waive right to appeal conditions of community placement by failing to object in trial court, State v. Paine, 69 Wn.App. 873, 884 (1993), State v. Moen, 129 Wn.2d 535, 547 (1996), State v. Rasmussen, 109 Wn.App. 279, 285 (2001), State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739 (2008), but see: State v. Massey, 81 Wn.App. 198 (1996), State v. Langland, 42 Wn.App. 287, 292 (1985), State v. Phillips, 65 Wn.App. 239, 244 (1992), State v. Peters, 10 Wn.App.2d 574 (2019); I.

State v. Nichols, 136 Wn.2d 859 (1998)

Appellate counsel files motion to withdraw on grounds that appeal is frivolous, files brief with arguable issues, Anders v. California, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967), Court of Appeals finds a sentencing issue and remands for new sentencing; held: where appeals court determines that there are any nonfrivolous issues, it must appoint counsel to pursue appeal and prepare an advocate's brief, McCoy v. Court of Appeals, 100 L.Ed.2d 440 (1988), Penson v. Ohio, 102 L.Ed.2d 300 (1988), cf.: State v. Wade, 133 Wn.App. 855 (2006), Smith v. Robbins, 145 L.Ed.2d 756 (2000); per curiam.

State v. Williams, 137 Wn.2d 746 (1999)

Failure of court to advise defendant of right to testify or not, CrR 3.5(b), is not a constitutional error, thus should not be considered for the first time on appeal, reversing State v. Williams, 91 Wn.App. 344 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Leeloo, 94 Wn.App. 403 (1999)

Before seeking to withdraw pursuant to Anders v. California, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967), claiming no good faith appeals arguments, counsel must review and provide to appeals court transcripts of plea and sentencing hearings; I.

Commanda v. Cary, 143 Wn.2d 651 (2001)

Defendant's motion to dismiss DUI for violation of equal protection is denied, superior court issues ex parte stay and writ of review, RCW 7.16.120, denies motion to quash writ and reverses district court; held: statutory writ of review may only be granted if (1) district court exceeded jurisdiction or acted illegally and (2) there is no adequate remedy at law, State v. Epler, 93 Wn.App. 520 (1999), Alter v. Issaquah Dist. Court, 35 Wn.App. 590, 591 (1983), cf.: Butts v. Heller, 69 Wn.App. 263 (1993), see: Mabe v. White, 105 Wn.App. 827 (2001), Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230, 239-46 (2010), State v. Chelan County District Court, 189 Wn.2d 625 (2017); here there was an adequate remedy via RALJ appeal, thus writ is quashed, see: Seattle v. Keane, 108 Wn.App. 630 (2001); 9-0.

Seattle v. Keene, 108 Wn.App. 630 (2001)

Municipal court holds patent-holder of breath test instrument in contempt and, as sanction, suppresses breath test, city seeks writ of review, superior court dismisses; held: errors of law are reviewable by statutory writ, Seattle v. Williams, 101 Wn.2d 445 (1984), see: Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230 (2010), cf.: Commanda v. Cary, 143 Wn.2d 651 (2001), but see: State v. Epler, 93 Wn.App. 520, 524 (1999), State v. Chelan County District Court, 189 Wn.2d 625 (2017); I.

State v. Kinard, 109 Wn.App. 428, 431-32 (2001)

Test for appellate review of pretrial photo identification issue is substantial evidence, State v. Hill, 123 Wn.2d 641 (1994); III.

State v. Giles, 148 Wn.2d 449 (2003)

Where "grounds of appeal" state juror bias during voir dire, defendant is entitled to transcript of voir dire for his pro se supplemental brief, Mayer v. City of Chicago, 30 L.Ed.2d 372 (1971), Draper v. Washington,9 L.Ed.2d 899 (1963); 9-0.

State v. Jones, 148 Wn.2d 719 (2003)

Court of Appeals reverses and remands for in camera review of police internal investigation files and for proceedings consistent with its opinion, trial court on remand reviews files, discloses some but denies new trial, holding that result would not have differed; held: where it is apparent from a decision on direct appeal that the appellate court anticipated a new trial, trial court lacks discretion to do otherwise; per curiam.

State v. Taylor, 150 Wn.2d 599 (2003)

An order of dismissal without prejudice is not appealable, overruling State v. Rock, 65 Wn.App. 654 (1992), nor is defendant an "aggrieved party," RAP 3.1, for purposes of discretionary review, unless charges are refiled; affirms State v. Taylor, 114 Wn.App. 124 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Busig, 119 Wn.App. 381, 390-91 (2003)

Defendant challenges warrant for first time on appeal; held: while a search not based on probable cause is of constitutional magnitude, where prejudice is not evident in the record, defendant has not shown actual prejudice, thus error is not manifest, see: State v. McFarland, 127 Wn.2d 322, 332-33 (1995), State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 313 (2005), State v. Kirkpatrick, 160 Wn.2d 873, 879-81 (2007), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012), State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 730-31 (2009); III.

Pers. Restraint of Isadore, 151 Wn.2d 294, 302 (2004)

"A plurality opinion has limited precedential value and is not binding on the courts," State v. Gonzalez, 77 Wn.App. 479, 486 (1995); 9-0.

Halbert v. Michigan, 162 L.Ed.2d 552 (2005)

State law precluding appointment of counsel on appeal following a nolo contendere plea violated due process and equal protection clauses, see: Douglas v. California, 9 L.Ed.2d 811 (1963); 6-3.

State v. Larranaga, 126 Wn.App. 505 (2005)

Denial of a motion to vacate or amend a judgment, RAP 2.2(a), is appealable as a matter of right, thus defendant is entitled to counsel, RCW 10.73.150(1), State v. Thompson, 93 Wn.App. 364, 368-69 (1998), although defendant is not entitled to appointed counsel during the initial hearing on the CrR 7.8 motion, State v. Winston, 105 Wn.App. 318, 325 (2001), State v. Forest, 125 Wn.App. 702, 707-08 (2005); II.

State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 600-03 (2006)

Where defendant flees jurisdiction after conviction but before sentencing, he may still appeal after he is caught and sentenced, CONST. art. I, § 22, Seattle v. Klein, 161 Wn.2d 557

(2007), State v. Hoa Van Tran, 149 Wn.App. 144 (2009), overruling State v. Estrada, 78 Wn.App. 381 (1995); 9-0.

Seattle v. Klein, 161 Wn.2d 554 (2007)

Where defendant flees pending appeal, he has not waived the right to appeal, State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 600-03 (2006), State v. Hoa Van Tran, 149 Wn.App. 144 (2009), overruling, sub silentio, State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77 (1990), State v. Handy, 27 Wash. 469 (1902), State v. Mosley, 84 Wn.2d 608 (1974), State v. Estrada, 78 Wn.App. 381 (1995), see: State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Stein, 140 Wn.App. 43, 55-56 (2007)

A Supreme Court of Washington decision supersedes a Court of Appeals decision only on the issues the Supreme Court decides, even where the Supreme Court grants review on issues that it does not ultimately decide, State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401, 412 (1992); II.

State v. Davenport, 140 Wn.App. 925, 932 (2007)

Where a case is reversed and remanded for resentencing, trial court has discretion to consider issues defendant did not raise at his initial sentencing or in his first appeal, State v. Barberio, 121 Wn.App. 48, 51 (1993), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71 (2015), see: State v. Parmalee, 172 Wn.App. 899 (2013), State v. Gleim, 200 Wn.App. 40 (2017); where trial court exercises discretion at a resentencing, defendant has the right to be present, State v. Rodriguez, 171 Wn.2d 46 (2011); II.

State v. Kilgore, 141 Wn.App. 817 (2007), 167 Wn.2d 28 (2009)

At first appeal, State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, aff'd, 147 Wn.2d 288 (2002), two counts are reversed, state chooses not to retry those counts, trial court declines to resentence; held: because offender score was greater than 9 and thus standard range did not change following dismissal of the two reversed counts, defendant is not entitled to a resentencing and may not appeal, see: State v. Argo, 81 Wn.App. 552, 569 (1996); 2-1, II.

Greenlaw v. United States, 171 L.Ed.2d 399 (2008)

Defendant appeals length of sentence, government does not cross-appeal, Court of Appeals finds sentence was unlawful, vacates and orders increase of sentence; held: principle of party presentation dictates that an appellate court may not alter a judgment to benefit a non-appealing party, cf.: Castro v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 778 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Bahl, 164 Wn.2d 739, 745 (2008)

As condition of community custody, defendant is ordered not to possess pornography, appeals; held: vagueness challenges to conditions of community custody may be raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Sanchez-Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 783, 786-91 (2010), State v. Padilla, 190 Wn.2d 672 (2018), see: State v. Peters, 10 Wn.App.2d 574 (2019), cf.: State v. Cates, 183 Wn.2d 531 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Classen, 143 Wn.App. 45, 54-58 (2008)

Where the trial record is incomplete, whether or not a reconstructed record is sufficient for appeal depends on (1) whether all or only part is missing, (2) the importance of the missing portion to review the issues raised on appeal, (3) the adequacy of the reconstructed record, (4) the degree of resultant prejudice from the missing or reconstructed record, see: State v. Putnam, 65 Wn.App. 606 (1992), State v. Miller, 40 Wn.App. 483 (1985), State v. Larson, 62 Wn.2d 64 (1963), State v. Tilton, 149 Wn.2d 775, 781 (2003), State v. Burton, 165 Wn.App. 866 (2012), State v. Waits, 200 Wn.2d 507 (2022); II.

State v. Smith, 144 Wn.App. 860 (2008)

Trial court lacks authority to dismiss a motion to vacate a judgment, CrR 7.8(c) (2007), on timeliness grounds, but must transfer the motion to the Court of Appeals for consideration as a personal restraint petition; superior court may only rule on the merits of a motion to vacate when the motion is timely and defendant makes a substantial showing that he is entitled to relief or the motion cannot be resolved without a factual hearing, *State v. Robinson,*193 Wn.App. 215 (2016); II.

Pers. Restraint of Rowland, 149 Wn.App. 496 (2009)

A judgment and sentence is valid on its face for purposes of the time bar to a collateral attack, RCW 10.73.090(1) (1989), where the judgment and sentence itself reflects an offender score without findings about comparability; where a judgment and sentence is a result of a guilty plea,, the phrase "on its face" includes those documents signed as part of the plea agreement, Pers. Restraint of Stoudmire, 141 Wn.2d 342, 353 (2000), Pers Restraint of Banks, 149 Wn.App. 513 (2009); where an intervening appellate opinion has effectively overturned a prior appellate decision, the intervening opinion constitutes a significant change of the law for purposes of exemption from procedural bars, Pers. Restraint of Greening, 141 Wn.2d 686, 697 (2000), cf.: State v. Miller, 185 Wn.2d 111 (2016); I.

State v. Snapp, 153 Wn.App. 485, 491-93 (2009)

Defendant pleads guilty, in plea statement prosecutor writes that defendant can appeal suppression motion; held: state waived objection to defendant's appeal, see: State v. Smith, 134 Wn.2d 489 (1998); II.

State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23, 38 n. 3 (2010)

Appellant is responsible to designate the necessary portions of the record, see: RAP 9.6(a), and in absence of an adequate record, appellate court may decline to review the issue; 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Clark, 168 Wn.2d 581 (2010)

At plea, defendant is informed that he will be sentenced to community custody, judgment and sentence has boilerplate language which states defendant is sentenced to community custody for certain offenses which do not apply, court later amends, ex parte, J&S to delete the community custody language, ten years later defendant seeks to withdraw plea, claiming judgment and sentence is invalid on its face, RCW 10.73.090(1); held: PRP more than a year after sentencing may only be considered if J&S is invalid on its face, not whether plea documents are facially invalid, Pers. Restraint of Hemenway, 147 Wn.2d 529, 532-33 (2002); a J&S is not valid on its face when, without further elaboration, it "evidences an error," at 585 ¶ 11, Pers Restraint of Thompson, 141 Wn.2d 712, 718 (2000); here, J&S was not invalid, amendment may have violated due process but even if void, original J&S was not facially invalid, defendant's affidavit and reference to guilty plea are external documents which are beyond the face of the J&S, thus cannot overcome the one year time limit for PRP; 8-1.

State v. Osman, 168 Wn.2d 632 (2010)

Part of district court suppression hearing recording is lost, including trial judge's oral findings and conclusions, on remand district judge finds that the missing portions were not significant or material, RALJ 5.4; held: appellate review of court of limited jurisdiction's determination that missing record is significant or material is reviewed de novo, trial court may not reconstruct the record from other sources, cf.: RAP 9.4, loss of findings and conclusions is material and significant, remedy is new trial, RALJ 5.4, even though only suppression hearing is missing; reverses State v. Osman, 147 Wn.App. 867 (2008); 9-0.

Seattle v. Holifield, 179 Wn.2d 230, 239-46 (2010)

Municipal judge suppresses breath test results due to government misconduct, CrRLJ 8.3(b), city seeks writ of review, RCW 7.16.040; held: writ of review may issue where lower court "(1) has committed an obvious error that would render further proceedings useless; (2) has committed probable error and the decision substantially alters the status quo or substantially limits the freedom of a party to act; or (3) has so far departed from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceedings as to call for the exercise of revisory jurisdiction by an appellate court," at 244-45; here, suppression would constitute, at most, a mere error of law that, without more, would not justify issuance of a writ of review, State v. Chelan County District Court, 189 Wn.2d 625 (2017); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Nichols, 171 Wn.2d 370, 373-76 (2011)

A motion to suppress may be raised for the first time in a timely PRP, Pers. Restraint of Robinson, 171 Wn.2d 292 (2011), reversing Pers. Restraint of Nichols, 151 Wn.App. 262 (2009); 5-4.

State v. Sims, 171 Wn.2d 436 (2011)

Sentencing court grants special sex offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.670, as condition banishes defendant from the county where victim lives, defendant appeals this condition, Court of Appeals reverses but remands for sentencing judge to reconsider SSOSA, State v. Sims, 128 Wn.App. 526 (2009); held: while the necessities provision of RAP 2.4(a) provides for broader relief where petitioner's claim cannot be considered separately from issues a respondent raises in response, here the broader remedy of reconsideration of the SSOSA is not demanded by the necessities as court may narrow the banishment condition by itself, thus avoiding the chilling effect on the right to appeal; 7-2.

State v. Lee, 162 Wn.App. 852 (2011)

Failure to move to suppress an auto search after Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009) is a waiver of the right to have the evidence excluded, State v. Mierz, 72 Wn.App. 783, 789 (1994), cf.: State v. Jones, 163 Wn.App. 354, 360 n.9 (2011); here, ineffective assistance was not addressed on direct appeal; II.

State v. Hecht, 173 Wn.2d 92 (2011)

Appellant who receives food stamps is presumptively indigent for purposes of appellate expenses, RCW 10.101.010; per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Heidari, 174 Wn.2d 288 (2012)

Where evidence is insufficient to support a conviction, appellate court may only permit entry of judgment on a lesser if the jury was instructed on the lesser, State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216, 234 (1979), State v. Richardson, 12 Wn.App.2d 657 (2020), distinguishing State v. Gilbert, 68 Wn.App. 379, 384 (1993), State v. Gamble, 118 Wn.App. 332, 336 (2003); affirms Pers. Restraint of Heidari, 159 Wn.App. 601 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Hayes, 165 Wn.App. 507, 514-20 (2011)

Record establishes that defense recognized the existence of a confrontation clause issue, failed to object and then raised issue for first time on appeal, RAP 2.5(a)(3); held: a manifest constitutional issue deliberately not litigated at trial is waived and may not be raised on direct appeal, State v. Walton, 76 Wn.App. 364, 368-70 (1994), Johnson v. United States, 87 L.Ed. 704 (1943), State v. Valladares, 99 Wn.2d 663, 666-72 (1983), State v. White, 83 Wn.App. 770, 776 (1996), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 761 (1998), State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 730-31 (2009), see also: State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 313 (2005); I.

State v. Burton. 165 Wn.App. 866 (2012)

Three-year delay in preparing transcript for appeal, while inexcusable, does not warrant a new trial; while some of the transcript is garbled, state's clarifying affidavit is sufficient to settle the record for review, not offered as a substitute for the record, distinguishing State v. Tilton, 149 Wn.2d 775 (2003), see: State v. Waits, 200 Wn.2d 507 (2022); III.

State v. Chetty, 167 Wn.App. 432 (2012)

Following stipulated facts trial in 2004, defendant-resident alien does not appeal, after deportation proceedings are commenced defendant seeks to extend period of time to appeal, avers that counsel did not advise that he was deportable, that counsel said an appeal was a waste of time, and that if immigration issues arose "I should not volunteer" information; held: failure to provide advice on deportation consequences of a plea being ineffective assistance, State v. Sandoval, 171 Wn.2d 163 (2011), Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), see: Chaidez v. United States, 568 U.S. 342, 185 L.Ed.2d 149 (2013), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Ramos, 181 Wn.App. 743 (2014), failure to so advise may impact proper advice regarding right to appeal, remanded for evidentiary hearing as to whether counsel's performance was deficient and whether defendant knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently waived right to appeal, see: State v. Chetty, 184 Wn.App. 607 (2014); I.

Lakewood v. Cheng, 169 Wn.App. 165 (2012)

Defendant faxes notice of appeal to superior court on 30th day, no evidence exists that clerk received it, defense has facsimile transmission verification report showing date, clerk "accepts" notice of appeal next day, defendant pays filing fee six weeks later, superior court holds appeal is timely; held: superior court's acceptance of the faxed notice of appeal establishes it was timely filed, see: State v. West, 64 Wn.App. 541 (1992); II.

State v. Harvey, 175 Wn.2d 919 (2012)

Appellant claims court closed courtroom during voir dire, trial court refuses to order transcription of voir dire at public expense; held: by claiming that courtroom was closed during voir dire, defendant made a "colorable need" for transcript of voir dire, State v. Giles, 148 Wn.2d 449, 450 (2003), entitling him to transcript; per curiam.

State v. Flaherty, 177 Wn.2d 90 (2013)

Five years after conviction, defendant mails a motion to vacate, CrR 7.8, superior court does not file it and returns it as time barred, defendant appeals; held: clerk must file a motion presented in the proper form, CR 5(e), if motion is time barred court must transfer it to the Court of Appeals, CrR 7.8(c)(2); reverses State v. Flaherty, 166 Wn.App. 716 (2012); per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Adams, 178 Wn.2d 417 (2013)

Defendant is convicted of murder, does not appeal, ten years later files motion to vacate sentence as offender score had been miscalculated, parties agree and defendant is resentenced, then files PRP claiming ineffective assistance at trial; held: time bar exception for a judgment and sentence invalid on its face does not open the door to all claims including those that do not relate to the invalidity of the judgment and sentence, Pers. Restraint of Snively, 180 Wn.2d 28 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Smalls, 182 Wn.App. 381 (2014), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 77-80 (2015), thus PRP is time barred and dismissed, *Pers. Restraint of Coats,*173 Wn.2d 123 (2011), Pers. Restraint of Skylstad, 160 Wn.2d 944 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Snively, 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Parmelee, 172 Wn.App. 899 (2013)

Mandate from Supreme Court vacates exceptional sentence based solely on lack of jury finding, Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), at resentencing defendant argues that his offender score was wrongly calculated, judge allows argument but expressly declines to consider it, stating that the "offender score is 13," the same as it was at original sentencing; held: where sentencing court declines to consider an issue that was not remanded, and merely states what the score is, the court has not independently reviewed the issue (rejecting state's concession) and thus may not be appealed, State v. Barberio, 121 Wn.2d 48, 50 (1993) , State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71 (2015); I.

State v. Hand, 173 Wn.App. 903 (2013)

At probation revocation hearing, trial court does not advise of right to appeal, three years later defendant files notice of appeal and seeks extension; held: revocation is not a stage of criminal prosecution where defendant is entitled to full panoply of constitutional rights, court is not obliged to inform revoked probationer of right to appeal, no extraordinary circumstances justify extension; I.

Pers. Restraint of Snively, 180 Wn.2d 28 (2014)

Plea agreement and sentence includes community custody which was not authorized, 17 years later defendant seeks to withdraw plea due to erroneous community placement; held: facially invalid judgment and sentence does not permit raising of other time-barred claims, RCW 10.73.100, Pers. Restraint of Toledo-Sotelo, 176 Wn.2d 759 (2013), *Pers. Restraint of Clark,*168 Wn.2d 581, 587 (2010), State v. Wheeler, 183 Wn.2d 71, 77-80 (2015), defendant's sole remedy is correction of sentence; per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Ruiz-Sanabria, 184 Wn.2d 632 (2015)

Superior Court which receives a post-conviction motion must expressly state the basis for transferring the motion to the Court of Appeals, CrR 7.8(c)(2), and should assure that the documents necessary for review are transferred to the Court of Appeals, cf.: State v. Frohs, 22 Wn.App.2d 88 (2022); per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Khan, 184 Wn.2d 679, 684-87 (2015)

A personal restraint petition is frivolous where it fails to present an arguable basis for collateral relief either in law or in fact, cf.: Matter of James, 190 Wn.2d 686 (2018); 5-4.

State v. Cater, 186 Wn.App. 384 (2015)

Thirty-four years after pleading guilty defendant seeks to enlarge time to appeal, record does not show defendant was advised of right to appeal following sentencing, plea statement states he was giving up right to appeal from finding of guilt and sentence, defendant's only contemporary claim is that 1979 plea was invalid; held: while advisement in plea statement was potentially misleading, absent a declaration from defendant or prior counsel claiming he was unaware of limited right to appeal or that he would have directed his attorney to appeal or that he was misadvised by his attorney support "strong inference" that he knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily waived his limited right to appeal following a guilty plea, distinguishing State v. Sweet, 90 Wn.2d 282 (1978), State v. Kells, 134 Wn.2d 309 (1998); I.

State v. Fort, 190 Wn.App. 202, 238 (2015)

When raising public trial violation in a PRP petitioner must show prejudice but by arguing counsel was ineffective by not asserting public trial rights during an appeal petitioner need not prove prejudice; III.

State v. Miller, 185 Wn.2d 111 (2016)

Defendant is sentenced to consecutive sentences for two counts of murder, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(b) (2002), defendant files untimely collateral attack seeking resentencing because Pers. Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007) authorized court to impose concurrent exceptional sentences, trial court agrees it was unaware it had the authority and imposes concurrent sentences, state appeals; held: Mulholland did not qualify as a significant change in the law, Pers. Restraint of Gentry, 179 Wn.2d 614, 625 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Zamora, 14 Wn.App.2d 858 (2020), RCW 10.73.100(6) (1989), could have argued at original sentencing for concurrent sentences thus concurrent sentences vacated; 8-1.

State v. Robinson, 193 Wn.App. 215 (2016)

Following sanctions imposed by DOC for community custody violation defendant files a motion for relief, CrR 7.8(b), superior court dismisses asserting it lacks jurisdiction; held: a motion to vacate judgment must either be transferred to Court of Appeals or order a show cause hearing directing adverse party to appear, CrR 7.8(c)(3), and hold a hearing "attended by both [petitioner] and DOC," cf.: State v. Bandura, 85 Wn.App. 87, 92-93 (1997), superior court has jurisdiction to hear motion challenging sanctions imposed for community custody violations as it relates to the original sentence, State v. Madsen, 153 Wn.App. 471, 475 (2009), overruled on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Flint, 174 Wn.2d 539 (2012); II.

State v. Gonzalez-Gonzalez, 193 Wn.App. 683, 688-91 (2016)

Standard of review of a hearsay ruling is de novo, but see: State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 595 (2001); III.

Pers. Restraint of Troupe, 194 Wn.App. 701 (2016)

Court of Appeals lacks statutory authority to waive filing fee for an indigent prisoner seeking to file a personal restraint petition challenging conditions of confinement if prisoner has filed three or more prior PRPs, RCW 4.24.430 (2010), see: Matter of Troupe, 4 Wn.App.2d 715 (2018); II.

State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017)

Deadly weapon special verdict, court imposes firearm enhancement, defendant had absconded in 2005 but was tried after Pers. Restraint of Eastmond, 173 Wn.2d 632, 634 (2012) held that a sentencing court cannot impose a firearm enhancement on a deadly weapon finding which applies to all cases on direct review, rule applies even though defendant had absconded, but see: State v. Handy, 27 Wash. 469, 470-71 (1902), State v. Mosley, 84 Wn.2d 608 (1974); 6-3.

State v. Cruz, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017)

Trial court suppresses evidence, finds that suppression order effectively terminates case, RAP 2.2(b)(2), then state moves to dismiss with prejudice, granted by trial court, state appeals suppression order; held: state's failure to brief and assign error to its invited dismissal order precludes review, State v. Fortun, 94 Wn.2d 754 (1980), State v. Perry, 120 Wn.2d 200, 202 (1992), overruled on other grounds State v. Olson, 126 Wn.2d 315, 319, 893 P.2d 629 (1995); reverses, in part, State v. Cruz, 195 Wn.App. 120 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Chelan County District Court, 189 Wn.2d 625 (2017)

In DUI case District Court judge suppresses refusal to take breath test, state seeks writ of review which Superior Court denies; held: where there is no finding that the trial court's decision effectively terminated the state's case, RALJ 2.2(c)(2), RAP 2.2(b)(2), and the decision may be a mere error of law then an interlocutory writ should be denied; here, the trial court did not "act illegally," Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230, (2010), RCW 7.16.040 (1987), thus regardless of whether or not the decision was correct interlocutory review is not available, cf.: Seattle v. Keene, 108 Wn.App. 630 (2001); 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Fero, 190 Wn.2d 1 (2018)

A motion for discretionary review may be timely if filed within thirty days of a Court of Appeals denial of a motion for reconsideration; 5-2 (two justices do not address this issue in a dissent on other grounds).

Pers. Restraint of Arnold, 190 Wn.2d 136 (2018)

One division of the Court of Appeals is not bound, via "horizontal stare decisis," by another division's published opinion, see also: State v. Ridgley, 17 Wn.App.2d 846 (2021); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Knight,4 Wn.App.2d 248 (2018)

Defendant negotiated a plea to attempted manslaughter 1°, which is an invalid crime as one cannot attempt a non-intent crime; even though defendant filed an untimely PRP the judgment is invalid on its face; II.

Pers. Restraint of Light-Roth, 191 Wn.2d 328 (2018)

While youth is a mitigating factor, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680 (2015), it is not a new mitigating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(1)(e) (2016), and thus an untimely PRP is time-barred, Matter of Meippen, 193 Wn.2d 310 (2019), Pers. Restraint of Kennedy, 16 Wn.App.2d 423 (2021), 200 Wn.2d 1 (2022), see: Pers. Restraint of. Young, 21 Wn.App.2d 826 (2022); reverses Pers. Restraint of Light-Roth, 200 Wn.App. 149 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019)

State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986) analysis is no longer required to justify an independent state law analysis of article I, section 7 in new contexts; 9-0.

Garza v. Idaho, 568 U.S. __ (2019)

Defendant pleads guilty, in plea form gives up right to appeal, tells trial counsel to file appeal, trial counsel declines stating that defendant waived; held: an appeal waiver doesn't give up the right to appeal all issues, thus counsel was ineffective for failure to file notice of appeal, Roe v. Flores-Ortega, 528 U. S. 470 (2000), Roe v. Flores-Ortega, 528 U. S. 470 (2000); 6-3.

State v. McKee, 193 Wn.2d 271 (2019)

Trial court denies a motion to suppress, court of appeals reverses and remands with order to dismiss, state appeals remedy; held: when an appellate court holds that a search was improper the remedy must be remand to suppress, not dismiss; 9-0.

State v. T.J.S.-M., 193 Wn.2d 450 (2019)

Respondent has the right to appeal a manifest injustice SSODA suspended sentence, RCW 13.40.162 (2011), need not wait until it is revoked, disapproving State v. J.B., 102 Wn.App. 583 (2000), cf.: State v. Langland, 42 Wn.App. 287 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Basra, 10 Wn.App.2d 279 (2019)

A motion to dismiss pursuant to CrR 8.3(b) cannot be raised post-judgment. I.

State v. Vandervort, 11 Wn.App.2d 300 (2019)

One-year time period to seek review of LFOs begins at sentencing, not revocation, RAP 5.2(c), CR 58(a), In re Pers. Restraint of Wolf, 196 Wn.App. 496, 509-10 (2016),;State v. Vandervort, 11 Wn.App.2d 300 (2020); II.

Matter of Domingo-Cornelio, 196 Wn.2d 255 (2020)

Where a juvenile sentenced as an adult files a PRP more than a year after finality State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wash.2d 1, 8 (2017) constitutes a significant and material change in the law that requires retroactive application on collateral review, Personal Restraint of Ali, 196 Wn.2d 220 (2020), but see: Matter of Forcha-Williams, ___ Wn.2d ___, 520 P.3d 939 (2022), Matter of Williams, ___ Wn.2d ___, 520 P.3d 933 (2022); 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Tricomo, 13 Wn.App.2d 223 (2020)

Petitioner files timely personal restraint petition pro se raising specific issues of ineffective assistance of counsel, RCW 10.73.090(1), after prosecutor replies petitioner retains counsel who files untimely supplemental PRP raising other ineffective assistance issues, claims it is part and parcel of original PRP; held: ineffective assistance of counsel claims that raise distinct complaints about the conduct of counsel and rely on distinct legal theories should not be treated as a single claim simply because they fall under the ineffective assistance of counsel rubric, thus counsel's supplemental petition is time-barred, but see: Pers. Restraint of Fowler, 197 Wn.2d 46 (2021); II.

Pers. Restraint of Millspaugh, 14 Wn.App.2d 137 (2020)

Governor's emergency proclamation suspending statutes that limit an individual's right to seek post-conviction relief, during the COVID-19 pandemic, do not revive previously time-barred PRPs, Pers. Restraint of Blanks, 14 Wn.App.2d 559 (2020); II & III.

Pers. Restraint of Fowler, 197 Wn.2d 46 (2021)

Egregious failure of defense counsel to file a timely personal restraint petition is grounds to equitably toll time limits for filing, RCW 10.73.090(1) (1989), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Tricomo, 13 Wn.App.2d 223 (2020); 6-3.

State v. Waller, 197 Wn.2d 218 (2021)

"A trial court's order granting a CrR 7.8(b) motion to vacate a judgment and sentence and setting a resentencing hearing vacates that judgment and sentence. Accordingly, the State may appeal such an order under RAP 2.2(b)(3)", at ¶32; 9-0.

State v. Molnar, 198 Wn.2d 500 (2021)

Defendant moves trial court for resentencing four years after judgment and sentence became final, claiming state breached the plea agreement by arguing aggravating sentencing factors, trial court denies motion, defendant appeals; held: motion for resentencing was an untimely collateral attack, RCW 10.73.090, thus superior court should have transferred it to the court of appeals, CrR 7.8(c)(2); because court of appeals ruled on the merits, supreme court grants review on the merits, holding that state did not breach the plea agreement; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Gilbert, 18 Wn.App.2d 75 (2021)

While constitutional double jeopardy allows an untimely PRP, RCW 10.73.100, where petitioner was convicted in both state and federal court of the same crime Washington's statutory double jeopardy prohibition, RCW 10.43.040, is not a constitutional issue, thus a PRP filed after one year alleging such a violation is untimely; II.

Pers. Restraint of Williams, 18 Wn.App.2d 707 (2021)

Defendant files untimely PRP claiming that one of his prior convictions that was a strike for purposes of a POAA life without parole sentence occurred when he was a juvenile and thus was unconstitutional; held: RCW 10.73.100(2) (1989) which provides for an exception to the one year time limit, RCW 10.73.090, only applies if the statute of conviction is unconstitutional, see: Pers. Restraint of Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021), here defendant is challenging a sentencing statute; II.

State v. Fletcher*,* 19 Wn.App. 566 (2021)

When court imposes an exceptional sentence where the standard range is incorrectly calculated then the judgment and sentence is invalid on its face and thus a motion to modify, CrR 7.8(b), is timely even if filed more than a year after finality, Pers. Restraint of Goodwin, 146 Wn.2d 861, 872 (2002), State v. Parker, 132 Wn.2d 182 (1997); however where defendant filed a timely petition and failed to raise the offender score issue in his first motion then his second motion is successive and thus barred, State v. Crumpton, 90 Wn.App. 297 (1998); III.

State v. Waits*,* ___ Wn.2d ___, 520 P.3d 49 (2022)

Where the verbatim report of proceedings is incomplete the state, not defense or appellate counsel, is responsible for reconstructing it, with the assistance of trial counsel, see: State v. Burton, 165 Wn.App. 866 (2012), State v. Tilton, 149 Wn.2d 775 (2003), State v. Classen, 143 Wn.App. 45, 54-58 (2008); reverses, in part, State v. Waits, 20 Wn.App.2d 800 (2022); 9-0.

Matter of Pheth*,* 20 Wn.App.2d 326 (2022)

Defendant's self-serving affidavit claiming that he told he trial counsel that he could not understand the interpreter is insufficient to establish prejudice where defendant makes no effort to obtain his trial counsel's version; I.

Matter of McMurtry*,* 20 Wn.App.2d (2022)

Community custody condition that defendant have a curfew at home is a restraint allowing relief via a PRP; Sixth Amendment standard for ineffective assistance does not apply to revocation of community custody; I.

Matter of Fernandez*,* 20 Wn.App.2d 883 (2022)

State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018) (aggravating circumstances are elements of the crime for double jeopardy purposes), is not a significant change in the law justifying an untimely PRP; II.

Pers. Restraint of Young*,* 21 Wn.App.2d 826 (2022)

Twenty-year old defendant is sentenced in 2014, filed PRP more than a year later arguing he is entitled to be resentenced per State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1 (2017) due to his youth; held: while Houston-Sconiers, supra., is a significant change in the law, it only applies to juvenile defendants, thus PRP is untimely; II.

State v. Frohs*,* 22 Wn.App.2d 88 (2022)

Defendant files CrR 7.8 motion to amend his sentence, state replies in writing concurring in one request, superior court rules without oral argument on one request and effectively denying the other two, defense appeals arguing court did not enter findings or hold oral argument; held: "CrR 7.8(c)(2) requires transfer of a postconviction motion to this court for consideration as a personal restraint petition (PRP) unless the motion is not time barred and 'either the defendant has made a substantial showing of merit or a factual hearing is required to decide the motion.' The trial court is prohibited from deciding the merits of a motion if those conditions are not met. But if one of those conditions is met, then CrR 7.8(c)(3) states the superior court 'shall enter an order fixing a time and place for hearing and directing the adverse party to appear and show cause why the relief asked for should not be granted.' The plain terms of CrR 7.8(c) do not require oral argument for a show cause hearing, only that the court consider the motion after hearing from both parties. Indeed, the general rule for criminal motions, CrR 8.2, provides that courts look to CrR 3.6 for guidance, and CrR 3.6 gives courts discretion to decide 'based upon the moving papers' whether an evidentiary hearing is required," distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Ruiz-Sanabria, 184 Wn.2d 632 (2015); I.

State v. Edwards, 23 Wn.App.2d 118 (2022)

While case is on direct appeal trial court resentences defendant without obtaining leave from Court of Appeals; held: amended judgment and sentence is void, RAP 7,2(e); I.

Pers. Restraint of Rhone, 22 Wn.App.2d 307 (2022)

Seattle v. Erickson, 188 Wn.2d 721 (2017) and State v. Jefferson, 192 Wn.2d 225, 230 (2018) changing the state's Batson inquiry to an "objective observer" standard are significant changes in the law, apply retroactively thus one-year time bar to PRP does not apply; 2-1, II.

Seattle v. Wiggins, 23 Wn.App.2d 401 (2022)

Municipal court enters findings of fact and conclusions of law, appellant City does not challenge findings, superior court fails to accept unchallenged findings and enters its own findings; held: appellate courts may not engage in de novo review of evidence, State v. Basson, 105 Wn.2d 314, 315 (1986); I.

Matter of Sylvester, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1123 (2022)

A void drug possession conviction, State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021), may be challenged in a PRP beyond one year after finality, not time-barred; II.

ARREST
Probable Cause

Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980)

Warrantless and nonconsensual entry into suspect's home to make routine felony arrest is prohibited by Fourth Amendment, absent exigent circumstances; see: State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993); 6-3; retroactive, United States v. Johnson, 73 L.Ed.2d 202 (1982); 6-3.

United States v. Crews, 63 L.Ed.2d 537 (1980)

In-court identification not suppressible due to illegal arrest, State v. Tan Le, 103 Wn.App. 354, 361-67 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Gardner, 28 Wn.App. 721 (1981)

Investigative stop and removal of suspect to another place for further investigation is not an arrest, but see: State v. Byers, 88 Wn.2d 1 (1977); I.

State v. Maesse, 29 Wn.App. 642 (1981)

Fellow officer rule: arresting officer is entitled to act on instructions from other officers who, taken as a whole, possess probable cause, State v. Perez, 5 Wn.App.2d 867 (2018), see: State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013); I.

State v. Fletcher, 30 Wn.App. 58 (1981)

Police can arrest on probable cause for attempted theft 2°, even if not in presence of officer, because crime involves unlawful taking of property, RCW 10.31.100(1); I.

State v. Jordon, 30 Wn.App. 335 (1981)

Aguilar-Spinelli test can apply to a warrantless arrest and search; police investigation can supply corroboration to informant's tip; I.

State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92 (1982)

Defendant is arrested for obstructing for providing false information to police, per RCW 9A.76.020(1), the "stop and identify" statute, following which defendant confesses to a burglary; held: statute is unconstitutionally vague; although Michigan v. DeFillippo, 61 L.Ed.2d 343 (1979) holds that a similar statute, while vague, was presumptively valid, and thus police reliance thereon was reasonable, the within statute is flagrantly unconstitutional, and further, Wash. CONST. Art. I, § 7 provides broader protections than the Fourth Amendment; 6-3.

State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, Minnesota v. Dickinson, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993)

The discovery of evidence of criminal activity (drugs) during the execution of a search warrant does not, without more, establish probable cause to arrest all persons present; while the occupant may be detained during a search, this does not extend to all persons present, State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008); 5-3.

State v. Bonaparte, 34 Wn.App. 285 (1983)

Marital privilege does not bar spouse's statements offered to demonstrate probable cause; II.

State v. Dugger, 34 Wn.App. 315 (1983)

RCW 10.31.030, which requires that police arresting a defendant on a warrant either show it at the time of arrest or advise that it will be shown at the place of intended confinement, is substantially complied with when defendant knows what he is being arrested for, State v. Singleton, 9 Wn.App. 327 (1973), see also: State v. Simmons, 35 Wn.App. 421 (1983), State v. Jordan, 92 Wn.App. 25 (1998).

State v. Poirier, 34 Wn.App. 839 (1983)

An exchange between two persons unknown to arresting officers of white envelopes in plain view in an open lot not itself known for frequent drug transactions does not establish probable cause to arrest; cf.: State v. Fore, 56 Wn.App. 339 (1989), but see: State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995), State v. Graham, 130 Wn.2d 711, 723-6 (1996); II.

State v. Koetje, 35 Wn.App. 157 (1983)

City police officer who also had a commission from county sheriff has authority to arrest in unincorporated county; I.

State v. Bowers, 36 Wn.App. 119 (1983)

Informant tells police defendant was on street with Ritalin, police observe defendant standing on corner contacting two drivers, arrest him, find drugs; held: whereas Aguilar-Spinelli tests are abandoned in favor of totality of the circumstances, Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983), cf.: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), veracity and basis of knowledge are still to be considered in determining probable cause; here, informant's report was conclusory only, with no factual basis; defendant's approaching two vehicles without police observations of an exchange fails to establish probable cause, thus evidence suppressed; pre-State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432 (1984); II.

State v. Counts, 99 Wn.2d 54 (1983)

Exigent circumstances which would permit a warrantless arrest in the home are (1) hot pursuit, (2) fleeing suspect, (3) danger to police or public, (4) mobility of vehicle, and (5) mobility or destruction of evidence. Where police argue with suspect's father at threshold for one hour before entering and arresting, there can be no hot pursuit; test for destruction of evidence exception is whether police "reasonably fear" evidence will be destroyed; merely opening door when police knock is not equivalent of consent; 9-0.

In re Armed Robbery, 99 Wn.2d 106 (1983)

Police, believing that a description of a robber fit a suspect, show montage to victim who states that suspect bore a "striking resemblance" to the robber; police obtain a show cause order to require suspect to appear in lineup; held: an individual may not be ordered to participate in a lineup where no probable cause exists to believe that the suspect has committed the offense; dicta that police may not seize a suspect to obtain physical evidence (such as eyewitness identification) on less than probable cause, at 111; 9-0.

Florida v. Royer, 75 L.Ed.2d 229 (1983)

Suspect who fit drug courier profile is approached by police who request his ticket and license; without oral consent, suspect surrenders documents, suspect complies with request to accompany them to a small room 40 feet away; without consent, police retrieve luggage; when asked if he would consent to search, suspect produces a key; plurality held that police action exceeded the permissible bounds of an investigative stop, suspect's consent was tainted by the illegal detention, Kaupp v. Texas, 155 L.Ed.2d 814 (2003); 6-3.

State . Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984)

Front porch is "public place" for arrest purposes once probable cause is established, distinguishing Payton v. N.Y., 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980); see: United States v. Santana, 49 L.Ed.2d 300 (1976); suspect's retreat into residence does not defeat arrest, United States v. Fleming, 677 F.2d 602, 608 (7th Cir. 1982); I.

State v. Welker, 37 Wn.App. 628 (1984)

Rape victim reports she scratched suspect's face, police enter suspect's home without warrant or consent, arrest suspect; held: exigent circumstance to avoid destruction of evidence, State v. Counts, 99 Wn.2d 54 (1983), excuses nonconsensual entry into home to arrest; containing premises to obtain warrant would take too long, defendant could destroy trace evidence; II.

State v. McIntyre, 39 Wn.App. 1 (1984)

Exigent circumstances excusing warrantless arrest in home include: (1) a grave offense; (2) suspect armed; (3) there is reasonably trustworthy information that suspect is armed; (4) strong reason to believe suspect is on premises; (5) suspect likely to escape and (6) entry is peaceable, Dorman v. United States, 435 F.2d 385 (Defendant.C. Cir. 1970), Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 101 (1991); II.

State v. Dresker, 39 Wn.App. 136 (1984)

Police, believing some minors may be drinking at a party, enter residence and find drugs; held: mere possibility of escape is not sufficient exigent circumstance to enter a residence without warrant; police must observe specific person commit specific misdemeanor to justify warrantless arrest for a misdemeanor being committed in the presence of the officer, State v. Perez, 5 Wn.App.2d 867 (2018), see: State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013), RCW 10.31.100; III.

State v. Smith, 102 Wn.2d 449 (1984)

Police have description of escapee and anonymous tip of his general whereabouts, stop suspect generally meeting description who denies he is escapee; police frisk suspect, find concealed weapon, transport him to precinct where they determine suspect lacks specific tattoos of escapee; held: seizure of an individual other than one for whom a warrant exists is constitutionally valid if police act in good faith, cf.: State v. Afana, 169 Wn.2d 169, 173-84 (2010), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019), and have reasonable articulable grounds to believe suspect is the intended arrestee; should doubt arise, police must make immediate reasonable efforts to confirm; if, after such efforts, officer reasonably believes suspect is intended arrestee, a protective frisk is permissible; 7-2.

State v. Komoto, 40 Wn.App. 200 (1985)

Erratic driving plus description of vehicle involved in hit and run plus previous contact with defendant for erratic driving and drinking 26 hours earlier plus car found with damage in defendant's parking place at an apartment plus police determination defendant is sole occupant of apartment support probable cause defendant was drinking and was involved in hit and run; I.

State v. Bryan, 40 Wn.App. 366 (1985)

Defendant is taken into "protective custody" for intoxication during which police notice he has a wallet containing photos and identification; after defendant is released police receive report that a vehicle is stolen near station, is recovered ten miles away, defendant's wallet found nearby; police go to defendant's home, ask him if he lost wallet, defendant says yes, show him wallet, defendant denies it's his, later admits it is his, is advised of rights, confesses to car theft; held: police had probable cause to arrest defendant as soon as he denied wallet was his, thus statements after that point are suppressed; trial court's finding that confession after advice of rights was tainted by prior statement affirmed, State v. Lavaris, 99 Wn.2d 851 (1983); II.

State v. Dorsey, 40 Wn.App. 459 (1985)

While mere presence with others suspected of criminal activity does not give rise to probable cause, State v. Broadnax, 98 Wn.2d 289 (1982), Ybarra v. Illinois, 62 L.Ed.2d 238 (1979), more than mere propinquity may be enough, particularly if the known criminal activity is contemporaneous with the association; I.

State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985)

Unnamed citizen tells officer a man in a bus station rest room stall has a gun, describes suspect; officer enters rest room, sees man who meets description, holds him at gun point, is told by suspect that suspect has a blank gun in his rucksack, handcuffs suspect, searches rucksack, finds starter pistol and handcuffs in rucksack; officer recalls a police bulletin concerning a crime committed with handcuffs, arrests defendant who, following further investigation, is charged and convicted of a robbery; held: investigatory stop was proper where an anonymous informant of undetermined reliability states he observed suspect carrying or displaying a gun in a public place, Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), but see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); where officer is told by suspect he has a gun in a container, officer may search container since releasing it to suspect would put officer in danger; arrest was unlawful as officer at best only suspected suspect of committing a crime, and recollection of police bulletin was too vague to support probable cause; I.

State v. Williamson, 42 Wn.App. 208 (1985)

Undercover officers in civilian attire are invited into home where they arrest defendant without warrant; held: where invited, undercover police may effectuate warrantless arrest in home, distinguishing Payton v. N.Y., 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980); knowing and voluntary waiver analysis does not apply to Fourth Amendment issues, Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973); II.

State v. Goodman, 42 Wn.App. 331 (1985)

Vague, incredible explanation for presence in area plus defendant seen circling area plus passenger running out of car and returning with suitcase plus inconsistent statements about who owned suitcase plus officer knowing defendant on parole plus late at night in neighborhood where defendant did not live equals probable cause; mere fact that officer could not articulate what crime was committed does not defeat probable cause, State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992); II.

State v. Ekkelkamp, 42 Wn.App. 375 (1985)

Requirement of RCW 10.31.010 that arresting officer making arrest pursuant to a warrant not in his possession tells arrestee he will be shown a copy of the warrant upon incarceration is excused where arrestee is so uncooperative that officer lacks opportunity to so inform him; I.

State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426 (1985)

Police, on porch of defendant's home without warrant investigating theft, reach across threshold to take defendant, whose father threatens police with crowbar, whereupon police enter home; defendant attempts to prevent father's arrest, is arrested for obstructing, at station confesses to theft; held: while first arrest was unlawful, second arrest for obstructing was lawful, thus confession admissible, cf.: State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993); affirms State v. Holeman, 37 Wn.App. 283 (1984); 9-0.

Hayes v. Florida, 84 L.Ed.2d 705 (1985)

Absent probable cause police may not take a suspect to the station for fingerprinting; dicta that an investigative detention for fingerprinting in the field is lawful; 8-0 (holding), 6-2 (dicta).

State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986)

Police observe equipment violation, stop defendant's vehicle, defendant states he lacks a license or any identification; police arrest driver, pat him down, find fruits of burglary; other officer, while talking to passenger, observes possible weapon, removes passenger, searches vehicle, finds burglary tools, pats down passenger, finds fruits of burglary; held: absence of identification permits arrest for no valid license, distinguishing State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978); full search of suspect's person, following arrest, is permissible, distinguishing Terry v. Ohio, 20 L.Ed.2d 889 (1968); because passenger was not yet arrested when officer searched vehicle, State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983) is inapposite, since passenger "could return to the car"; further, the early morning hour, fact that driver had a knife, appearance of a weapon in car justifies a Terry "quick check" of the vehicle for a weapon; cf.: State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992); I.

Waid v. Department of Licensing, 43 Wn.App. 32 (1986)

Officer receives a radio call about a citizen complaint of another citizen's driving, arrives at scene, observes appellant without shoes, hair disorderly, strong odor of intoxicants, citizen with appellant tells officer that appellant had been weaving all over the road; held: officer had probable cause to arrest for DUI; I.

State v. Burgess, 43 Wn.App. 253 (1986)

Police respond to burglar alarm, observe suspect run from scene, discover truck registered to suspect across from burglary, arrest suspect, who met description provided by responding officer two hours after burglary within blocks of burglary; held: detailed description from responding officer provided probable cause; search of suspect during booking process was proper; II.

Wenatchee v. Durham, 43 Wn.App. 547 (1986)

Police, following suspect vehicle across county line without using emergency equipment, stop defendant for traffic infraction, arrest him for suspended driver's license; held: fresh pursuit must be justified by: (1) felony occurred in the jurisdiction (also "traffic or criminal laws," RCW 10.93.120); (2) suspect is attempting to escape or at least knows he is being pursued; (3) police pursue without unnecessary delay; (4) pursuit is continuous and uninterrupted, although continuous surveillance is not required; and (5) relationship in time between commission of offense, commencement of pursuit and apprehension; here, no criminal violation was observed, only civil traffic infraction, police delayed, no evidence suspect knew of pursuit, thus arrest was unlawful, evidence suppressed; see: RCW 10.93, Mutual Aid Peace Officers Powers Act, State v. Waters, 93 Wn.App. 969, 976-81 (1999), but see: Tacoma v. Durham, 95 Wn.App. 876 (1999), Vance v. Dep't of Licensing, 116 Wn.App. 412 (2003); III.

State v. Carlow, 44 Wn.App. 821 (1986)

Police, with probable cause but without a warrant, walk to defendant's doorway, defendant crosses threshold, police tell defendant they want to talk to him at station, defendant agrees, enters house to get a coat, is handcuffed in house, taken to station, advised, confesses; held: it is implicit in the police "request" at the doorway that defendant was not free to go, thus defendant was arrested before he re-entered the house, see also: State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993); but even if defendant was arrested in the house, his predisposition to talk to police alleviates the taint, distinguishing Payton v. N.Y., 44 Wn.App. 821 (1986); 2-1.

State v. Evans, 45 Wn.App. 678 (1986)

Police enter tavern in response to a rape call describing suspect as black male, 5'8", 200 pounds, horizontally braided hair, blue jacket; police observe defendant meeting description of suspect, plus flight, plus "arresting officers' special expertise in identifying criminal behavior" equal probable cause; III.

State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388 (1986)

Police observe unfamiliar vehicle in high crime area commit traffic infraction, stop vehicle, officer is aware of driver's burglary history; driver says some guy told him to meet him and driver claims he knows nothing about stuff in car; police observe television in rear seat; police place driver in patrol car to investigate; officer examines package that passenger kicks into street, observes a local address on package, handcuffs driver and passenger, takes them to precinct, discovers burglary at address on package; held: initial detention to investigate was well founded, but handcuffing and transporting suspect was an unlawful arrest, as police did not know that a crime was committed until after arrest; III.

State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986)

Exigent circumstances for warrantless arrest in the home, distinguishing Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 573 (1980); accord: State v. McIntyre, 39 Wn.App. 1 (1984), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 101 (1991); where police lawfully enter premises without a warrant to make an arrest, pursuant to exigent circumstances, and secure premises until a warrant is obtained, then the actions of the police were lawful where no incriminating evidence was found before service of the warrant, distinguishing State v. Bean, 89 Wn.2d 467 (1978); 9-0.

State v. LaTourette, 49 Wn.App. 119 (1987)

Custodial arrest for criminal traffic offense is permitted, distinguishing State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1987); accord: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 342 (1997), State v. Thomas, 89 Wn.App. 774 (1998), see: State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249, 256 (1996), State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005); I.

State v. Lidge, 49 Wn.App. 311 (1987)

Police receive call of theft describing three suspects and vehicle, stop defendants' vehicle, question suspects who acknowledge being at scene of theft, search vehicle, seize res of theft; held: police had probable cause to arrest and search; I.

State v. Jordan, 50 Wn.App. 170 (1987)

Custodial arrest following traffic stop was valid where defendant had no license or other identification and was driving a vehicle he did not own, State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), distinguishing State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978); in spite of defendant's claim that he merely left his license at home, where police lacked access in field to Department of Licensing records, police are entitled to assume, until proven otherwise, that defendant's failure to produce a valid license means that he did not have one; I.

Sunnyside v. Lopez, 50 Wn.App. 786 (1988)

The illegal arrest of a defendant does not prevent his subsequent prosecution so long as the evidence utilized arises from sources independent of the arrest and is untainted by it, Pasco v. Titus, 26 Wn.App. 412, 417 (1980), United States v. Crews, 63 L.Ed.2d 537 (1980), State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701 (1983), State v. Tan Le, 103 Wn.App. 354, 361-67 (2000); III.

State v. Knighten, 109 Wn.2d 896 (1988)

Police officer, while at scene of felony hit and run, is aware that a black vehicle, owned and driven by defendant, had been removed from a ditch directly across from the accident; officer observes defendant's vehicle driving past accident site, stops vehicle, arrests defendant, obtains confession; held: police had probable cause to arrest for felony hit and run even though officer testified he believed he did not have probable cause and state conceded it did not have sufficient evidence for a Terry stop; four (4) justices concur in plurality opinion; see: State v. Lewis, 62 Wn.App. 350 (1991).

State v. Rodriguez, 53 Wn.App. 571 (1989)

Affidavit states that a mechanic, while working on a vehicle, found drugs, called police who obtained warrant, drugs placed back in car, car turned over to suspect who drives it away, police stop vehicle, arrest defendant, search and find drugs; held: while citizen-informant was unnamed in affidavit, he obtained his information in entirely unsuspicious circumstances and description in warrant makes him readily identifiable, thus credibility prong met, see: State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539, 542-3 (1996); defendant's driving car provided probable cause to arrest; III.

State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989) overruled, in part, State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992)

Police stop vehicle for speeding, driver lacks a license, officer, intending to cite and release, search vehicle, find drugs; held: a custodial arrest for driving without a license should not be made unless there are grounds to believe that arrestee will fail to appear in court; where a custodial arrest is not justified, no warrantless search pursuant to that arrest may be upheld; see: State v. Carner, 28 Wn.App. 439 (1981), State v. Barajas, 57 Wn.App. 556 (1990), State v. Watson, 56 Wn.App. 665 (1990), State v. Jordan, 50 Wn.App. 170 (1987), State v. LaTourette, 49 Wn.App. 119 (1987), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), State v. Feller, 60 Wn.App. 678 (1991), State v. Reeb, 63 Wn.App. 678 (1992), State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249, 256 (1996), State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998), State v. Thomas, 89 Wn.App. 774 (1998), State v. Clausen, 113 Wn.App. 657 (2002), see: State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002), but see: State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 342 (1997), State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005); 2-1.

State v. Steinbrunn, 54 Wn.App. 506 (1989)

Taking of blood from unconscious vehicular homicide suspect pursuant to implied consent statute, RCW 46.20.308, can only be done if suspect is lawfully arrested; Washington officer was in fresh pursuit even though he lacked probable cause to arrest until he arrived in Oregon and smelled defendant's breath, Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit, 10.89 RCW; failure of police to take suspect to a local magistrate as required by RCW 10.89.020 does not apply to a noncustodial arrest, but see: Clarkston v. Stone, 63 Wn.App. 500 (1991), see: License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005); III.

State v. Machado, 54 Wn.App. 771 (1989)

Warrantless robbery arrest in the home justified by exigent circumstances where there was reason to believe suspect was armed, description of suspect in home points emphatically to suspect as robber, entry is peaceful, State v. Wolters, 133 Wn.App. 297, 304-05 (2006), not a preplanned arrest operation, Dorman v. United States, 435 F.2d 385 (D.C.Cir. 1970), State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986); III.

Seattle v. Cadigan, 55 Wn.App. 30 (1989)

An arrest on one charge without probable cause is lawful if police had probable cause to arrest on a different charge, State v. Stebbins, 47 Wn.App. 482 (1987), State v. Vangen, 72 Wn.App. 548 (1967), see: State v. Eserjose, 171 Wn.2d 907 (2011); I.

State v. Fore, 56 Wn.App. 339 (1989)

Police observation, through binoculars, in high drug area, of three transactions in which suspect exchanged small plastic bags containing brownish or greenish matter with passing motorists for currency plus suspect observed going to vehicle, removing large plastic bag from underneath dashboard and removing smaller plastic packets containing green vegetable matter equals probable cause, State v. Graham, 130 Wn.2d 711, 723-6 (1996), distinguishing State v.

Poirier, 34 Wn.App. 839 (1983); probable cause is not negated merely because it is possible to imagine innocent explanation for observed activities; I.

New York v. Harris, 109 L.Ed.2d 13 (1990)

Police, with probable cause but without a warrant, unlawfully arrest suspect in his home; at station, suspect confesses; held: exclusionary rule does not bar use of statement made outside of the home even though the arrest is made in the home in violation of Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980), as long as police have probable cause to arrest, State v. Eserjose, 171 Wn.2d 907 (2011), but see: State v. Tan Le, 103 Wn.App. 354 (2000); 5-4.

Minnesota v. Olson, 109 L.Ed.2d 85 (1990)

Warrantless, nonconsensual entry into residence to arrest an overnight guest violates the guest's Fourth Amendment rights, Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980); 7-2.

State v. Alvarado, 56 Wn.App. 454 (1990)

Two officers observe defendant sell cocaine, radio to third officer who arrests defendant; at suppression hearing, state cannot show who made the arrest; held: fellow officer rule: cumulative information possessed by all of the investigating officers could be considered when assessing whether police had probable cause to arrest, State v. Maesse, 29 Wn.App. 642 (1981); whether arresting officer had personal knowledge of the information amounting to probable cause is irrelevant, rather the evidence established that the arresting officer acted on a directive made by another officer who had probable cause to arrest, cf.: State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013), State v. Perez, 5 Wn.App.2d 867 (2018); I.

State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490 (1990)

Fleeing from a police officer effecting an arrest without probable cause is still obstructing as the officer is "engaged in the performance of his official duties provided he is not on a 'frolic of his own,'" Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653, 661 (2000), State v. Contreras, 92 Wn.App. 307 (1998), State v. Turner, 103 Wn.App. 515-26 (2000), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020), but see: State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217, 225-26 (1999), see: State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017); I.

State v. Bartholomew, 56 Wn.App. 617 (1990)

Seattle police, investigating a robbery, receive anonymous tip that defendant committed robbery, learn that Tacoma police had warrant to search defendant's home for evidence of a Tacoma robbery; Seattle police accompany Tacoma police in search, seize evidence, arrest defendant; held: because Seattle police were not executing a search or arrest warrant, RCW 10.93.070(5), nor were they responding "to a request of a peace officer with enforcement authority" in the jurisdiction, RCW 10.93.070(3), then evidence must be suppressed, cf.: State v. Chambers, 23 Wn.App.2d 917 (2022), but see: State v. Rasmussen, 70 Wn.App. 853 (1993); I.

State v. Watson, 56 Wn.App. 665 (1990)

Respondent is stopped for driving at night without lights, lacks license, is arrested, drugs found; held: custodial arrest for driving without a valid license is valid only where officer has a substantial reason, "beyond the infraction itself," to make an arrest, e.g., State v. Jordan, 50 Wn.App. 170 (1987); (no identification, car not driver's), State v. LaTourette, 49 Wn.App.

119 (1987); ("unique circumstances and hostile bystanders"), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986); (no identification, car not driver's, suspicious account of circumstances), State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249, 256 (1996) ("truly dangerous driving"); here, no additional circumstances other than the minor traffic violation are present to support the arrest, State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989), State v. Feller, 60 Wn.App. 678 (1991), cf.: State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339 (1997); II.

State v. Flowers, 57 Wn.App. 636 (1990)

Radio broadcast of robbery reports suspects are black male and female wearing sunglasses in black VW rabbit or BMW; police observe similar vehicle in motel six miles from robbery, speak with motel clerk, learn that suspects were nervous, looked out window, showed large sum of money in small bills; police use ruse to get female from room, upon her exit she yells "police," states she just lent car out; police order male from room at gunpoint, obtain consent to search; held: police had probable cause to arrest male for robbery; grave offense of robbery, use of gun, peaceable "entry," justify warrantless arrest in home; I.

State v. Conner, 58 Wn.App. 90 (1990)

Crime victim pointing out suspect is inherently reliable for purposes of Aguilar-Spinelli analysis, State v. Northness, 20 Wn.App. 551 (1978), State v. Chatmon, 9 Wn.App. 741, 748 n. 4 (1973), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); victim need not first explain how he knows he was victimized or why he believes suspect is the perpetrator; once police have sufficient evidence that a crime has been committed, along with an identification of the suspect by the victim, there is probable cause for an arrest; I.

State v. Lewis, 59 Wn.App. 834 (1990), 62 Wn.App. 350 (1991)

Drug search warrant authorizes search of residence and defendant; during execution of another warrant on another residence, defendant is handcuffed, frisked, read Miranda rights, transported to precinct for strip-searching and questioning, drugs found; held: arrest was unlawful, as it lacked probable cause; transport to precinct exceeded scope of permissible Terry stop; III.

State v. Quintero-Quintero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991)

Police knowledge that defendant had a revoked license 2 1/2 weeks earlier plus weaving is grounds for stop and search of vehicle, State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339 (1997), State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 530-33 (2003), distinguishing State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989); see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992); III.

Ghaffari v. Department of Licensing, 62 Wn.App. 870 (1991)

Statute authorizing police to arrest outside jurisdiction with consent of sheriff, RCW 10.93.070(1), is constitutional; I.

Clarkston v. Stone, 63 Wn.App. 500 (1991)

Washington police chase speeding vehicle into Idaho, arrest for DUI; held: Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit, RCW 10.89 (and identical Idaho counterpart) only applies to felony; because Washington officer did not have authority to arrest for misdemeanor in Idaho, fruits must be suppressed, cf.: License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005), State v. Eriksen, 172 Wn.2d 506 (2011); III.

State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992)

Probable cause to arrest the occupants of a car for possession of a controlled substance exists when a trained officer detects that the odor of a controlled substance is emanating from the vehicle, but see: State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135 (2008), irrespective of whether the smell emanates from the person or the car, State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 814, 819 (1987); an arrest supported by probable cause is not made unlawful by officer's belief or announcement of an offense different from the one for which probable cause exists, State v. Louthan, 158 Wn.App. 732, 741-44 (2010); II.

State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992)

Police officer, pursuant to an agreement with public housing authority, arrest defendant for drug offense nearby, admonish defendant to stay out of housing complex; three weeks later, officer sees defendant on complex grounds, arrest, search, find drugs; held: officer's knowledge that defendant did not live in complex, plus prior admonishment not to return establishes an articulable suspicion that defendant might be trespassing but does not establish probable cause to arrest, thus absent further investigation, search was unlawful, see: State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509 (1991), State v. Little, 116 Wn.2d 488 (1991), State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002), cf.: State v. Thompson, 69 Wn.App. 436 (1993); I.

State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 501 (1992)

Smell of alcohol plus statement that defendant was afraid he was drunk plus fleeing from scene plus alcohol in car plus accident resulting in death is sufficient to establish probable cause to arrest for DUI; II.

State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992)

Custodial arrest for traffic offenses that are not minor, such as reckless driving, is permissible, State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978), RCW 10.31.100, 46.64.015, State v. Reeb, 63 Wn.App. 678, 682 (1992), State v. Quintero-Quintero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991), State v. Feller, 60 Wn.App. 678 (1991), State v. LaTourette, 49 Wn.App. 119 (1987), State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249, 256 (1996), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339 (1997), State v. Thomas, 89 Wn.App. 774 (1998), see: State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005), State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013); overrules, in part, State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992)

Passenger is stopped for open container violation, RCW 46.61.519(2), a traffic infraction, police demand identification, defendant hands officer a Costco card, officer asks for more identification, defendant denies he has any, acts furtively as if to stop officer from looking in wallet, officer asks defendant to place wallet on hood of car, observes bindle in wallet, seizes it, finds drugs; held: passenger has no obligation to carry identification, see also: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), defendant's concealing of contents of wallet does not support custodial arrest for an infraction where police lack a reasonable belief that suspect would fail to appear, thus drugs suppressed, distinguishing State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 579 (1986); accord: State v. Cole, 73 Wn.App. 844 (1994), but see: State v. Chelly, 94 Wn.App. 254 (1999); III.

State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992)

Radio broadcast of burglary plus suspect description as black male in dark clothing plus defendant meeting description in vehicle proceeding from burglary site in light traffic plus obscured license plate plus officers' observations of televisions, VCR and speakers in vehicle which are type of goods typically associated with a residential burglary equals probable cause to arrest; I.

State v. Thompson, 69 Wn.App. 436 (1993)

Police twice warn defendant to stay out of apartment complex where defendant does not live, defendant fled each time prior to contact by police, on day in question defendant hid from police, defendant had previously stated he did not live in complex nor did he have permission from manager to be there, no trespassing signs present; held: defendant's failure to explain or justify his presence, flight and hiding, see: State v. Friederick, 34 Wn.App. 537, 542-3 (1983), arise to probable cause, distinguishing State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992), see also: State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995); under these circumstances, officer was not obliged to question defendant regarding his right to be on the property prior to arrest, cf.: Blair, supra, at 69-70; I.

State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993)

At scene of serious injury accident, damage which established high-speed collision, suspect admitting he was owner and driver and had been drinking, strong odor of alcohol on breath, need to restrain suspect from fleeing, resistance equal probable cause for DUI and vehicular assault; II.

State v. Rasmussen, 70 Wn.App. 853 (1993)

Undercover Black Diamond police purchase drugs from defendant in Kent; Black Diamond had a notice of consent pursuant to Washington Mutual Aid Peace Officer Powers Act of 1985, RCW 10.93, but had not notified Kent of their operation; held: defendant was observed and apprehended outside jurisdiction of arresting agency, which had a consent letter, thus arrest was valid, Ghaffari v. Department of Licensing, 62 Wn.App. 870 (1991), distinguishing State v. Bartholomew, 56 Wn.App. 617 (1990), see: State v. Plaggemeier, 93 Wn.App. 472 (1999), State v. Barron, 139 Wn.App. 266 (2007); I.

State v. Solberg, 122 Wn.2d 688 (1993)

Police may make warrantless arrest on probable cause when suspect voluntarily exits residence to speak to officers on unenclosed front porch, State v. Carlow, 44 Wn.App. 821, 826 (1986), State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474, 481 (1984), State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35, 40 n. 2 (1991), State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426, 429 (1985), reversing State v. Solberg, 66 Wn.App. 66, 79 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Terrazas, 71 Wn.App. 873 (1993)

Trooper stops vehicle for weaving, asks driver for license, defendant says he has none, trooper asks for name and birthdate, suspects false name, pats down driver, finds nothing, arrests driver for driving without license, observes passenger with blanket on lap, suspects weapon, removes passengers from car, searches, finds guns, drugs; held: an arrest solely for driving without a license, without other reasonable grounds, is improper, State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978), State v. Barajas, 57 Wn.App. 556 (1990), State v. Watson, 56 Wn.App. 665 (1990), see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339 (1997), cf.: State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005); mere suspicion that driver gave a false name is not enough; search of vehicle for officer safety was improper, as blanket on passenger's lap does not rise to an articulable suspicion that passenger was dangerous or armed, see: State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573, 578-9 (1986), State v. Cruz, 195 Wn.App. 120 (2016), reversed, on other grounds, 189 Wn.2d 588 (2017), State v. Martin, 13 Wn.App.2d 625 (2020), see also: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), State v. Russell, 180 Wn.2d 860 (2014), but see: Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181 (1998), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), cf.: State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), State v. Horace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); III.

State v. White, 76 Wn.App. 801, 804-5 (1995), aff'd, on other grounds, 129 Wn.2d 105 (1996)

Police observe defendant speak with another man, point to third man, second man goes to third man, defendant follows, third man drops object, second man picks it up, puts it in his mouth for moment, gives money to third man, arrest defendant; held: observations were sufficient to believe defendant was lookout or setup person in a drug transaction; see: State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687, 693-4 (1995), but see: State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995); I.

State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995)

Officer observes man give defendant money, defendant shows man an object cupped in his hand, someone yells "police" when officer approaches, defendant and companion leave scene quickly, police stop defendant and search pockets, find drugs; held: police had probable cause to believe defendant had committed the offense of possession with intent to deliver drugs, State v. White, 76 Wn.App. 801, 804-5 (1995), aff'd, on other grounds, 129 Wn.2d 105 (1996) , State v. Fore, 56 Wn.App. 339 (1989), State v. Graham, 130 Wn.2d 711, 723-6 (1996), but see: State v. Poirier, 34 Wn.App. 839 (1983), State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995), thus search incident to arrest was valid, State v. Ward, 24 Wn.App. 761, 765 (1979); I.

State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995)

Police observe defendants inside park closed by ordinance, no evidence offered of signs or notice; held: absent some notice, no reasonable grounds for police to believe misdemeanor trespass had been committed in officer's presence, RCW 10.31.100, see: State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64, 67 (1992), State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509, 514 (1991), State v. Thompson, 69 Wn.App. 436, 442 (1993), State v. Walker, 157 Wn.2d 307 (2006), State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008), State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013), State v. Perez, 5 Wn.App.2d 867 (2018); drug paraphernalia on hood of car stopped in a park at night is grounds to arrest driver and passenger, distinguishing State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414, 417 (1975) , see: State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10, 18-22 (2012); 2-1.

State v. Nelson, 81 Wn.App. 249 (1996)

Police may make a custodial arrest, and search incident to that arrest, for negligent driving, a nonjailable misdemeanor, former RCW 46.61.525, where the driving was "truly dangerous," at 256, pursuant to RCW 10.31.100(3)(f), 46.64.015(2) and U.S. and Washington constitutions, State v. Watson, 56 Wn.App. 665 (1990), State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992), see: State v. Walker, 157 Wn.2d 307 (2006), cf.: State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978), State v. Klinker, 85 Wn.2d 509 (1975); II.

State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539 (1996)

Car dealer reports car stolen, next day calls to report he erred, after which police stop defendant driving car based upon the stolen car hot sheet, which had not been corrected, arrest defendant who spits out drugs; held: while original report of theft was sufficient to establish probable cause as it came from victim, see: State v. Rodriguez, 53 Wn.App. 571, 574-5 (1989), and fellow officer rule justifies an arrest on basis of a police bulletin, Whiteley v. Warden, Wyo. State Penitentiary, 28 L.Ed.2d 306 (1971), see: State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64, 70-71 (2004), State v. O'Cain, 108 Wn.App. 542 (2001), State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013), when police fail to correct records, probable cause may no longer exist by the time an arrest is made, at 543, State v. Nall, 117 Wn.App. 647 (2003); state has burden of proving probable cause absent warrant or consent, cf.: State v. Smith, 50 Wn.2d 408, 412 (1957), and has burden of proving two-day delay between cancellation of stolen vehicle report and arrest was reasonable, cf.: State v. Sandholm, 96 Wn.App. 846 (1999); dicta that had defendant been detained for investigation and not arrested until after he spit out drugs, arrest might have been lawful, see: State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); II.

State v. Graham, 130 Wn.2d 711 (1996)

Off-duty Seattle police officers, working as security guards in Seattle, observe defendant carrying large amount of cash and small packet containing what looked like rock cocaine in hands, defendant quickly conceals contents of his hands when he sees officers, refuses request to stop, sweats, looks nervous; held: a police officer has authority to arrest whenever the officer reasonably believes a crime is committed in the officer's presence, whether or not the officer is on duty, State v. Brown, 36 Wn.App. 166 (1983); furtive gestures plus officers' observations and experience establish probable cause to arrest, State v. Fore, 56 Wn.App. 339, 343-5 (1989), State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995), cf.: State v. Poirier, 35 Wn.App. 839 (1983), but see: State v. Gatewood, 163 Wn.2d 534 (2008); 9-0.

Jacques v. Sharp, 83 Wn.App. 532 (1996)

Domestic violence protection order directs that respondent stay out of the Magnolia neighborhood of Seattle, police arrest respondent in Magnolia; held: police may only arrest for violation of those restraint provisions in a protection order that restrain respondent from acts of domestic violence, exclusion from residence or contact, RCW 26.50.060(1); only remedy for violation of other provisions of protection order is contempt, not arrest, but see: State v. Chapman, 140 Wn.2d 436 (2000); I.

State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 342 (1997)

Police observe defendant driving, know that his license was suspended from a records check seven days earlier, activate emergency lights, defendant exits, closes door and walks away, is ordered to return to vehicle, defendant refuses, is arrested, police confiscate keys, search car, find illegal gun; held: seven-day-old information about suspended license constitutes articulable facts to support a detention, State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591, 595 (1992), State v. Quintero-

Qunitero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991), State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 531-33 (2003); custodial arrest for DWLS is proper, see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992); II.

State v. Duffy, 86 Wn.App. 334, 339-41 (1997)

Lack of probable cause to stop is not a basis to dismiss a charge of attempting to elude, State v. Mather, 28 Wn.App. 700, 703 (1981); III.

State v. Plaggemeier, 93 Wn.App. 472 (1999)

City police officer arrests defendant outside city limits for DUI, Mutual Aid Agreement, RCW 10.93, was in effect but had not been adopted by ordinance as required by Interlocal Cooperation Act, RCW 39.34, nor filed with county auditor; held: while the Mutual Aid Agreement is invalid for failure to comply with Interlocal Cooperation Act, the consent section of the agreement is independently enforceable, RCW 10.93.070, thus arrest was valid; II.

Tacoma v. Durham, 95 Wn.App. 876 (1999)

Tacoma police, receiving report of drunk driver, pursue defendant into Lakewood, no evidence that defendant knew he was being pursued while he was in Tacoma; held: Washington Mutual Aid Peace Officers Powers Act, RCW 10.93.120, abrogates common law of fresh pursuit, thus statute is to be liberally construed, suspect need not know he is being pursued, nor must the active pursuit cross a boundary, distinguishing Wenatchee v. Durham, 43 Wn.App. 547 (1986); police may cross over to another jurisdiction and arrest "in response to an emergency involving an immediate threat to human life or property," RCW 10.93.070(2), defendant's erratic driving meets that test, Vance v.Dep't of Licensing, 116 Wn.App. 412 (2003), see: State v. Eriksen, 172 Wn.2d 506 (2011), cf.: State v. King, 167 Wn.2d 324 (2009); II.

State v. Sandholm, 96 Wn.App. 846 (1999)

Absent evidence of the source of a stolen vehicle report from WACIC, or procedures followed by WACIC in accepting and broadcasting a report, probable cause to arrest is insufficient, State v. O'Cain, 108 Wn.App. 542 (2001), see: State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004), distinguishing State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539 (1996), however here, evidence of damage to driver's door and trunk locks and defendant's nervous demeanor provides probable cause; I.

State v. Walker, 101 Wn.App. 1 (2000)

Municipal court clerk issues bench warrant without prior approval by a judge, on service of warrant police find drugs; held: a clerk may not order the issuance of a warrant of arrest absent a statute, court rule or ordinance; remedy for all violations of CONST. Art. I, § 7 is suppression, see: State v. Parks, 136 Wn.App. 232 (2006); 2-1, II.

State v. Tan Le, 103 Wn.App. 354 (2000)

Warrantless arrest in a home without exigent circumstances is unlawful irrespective of the existence of probable cause, Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980), State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35, 41 (1991); identification of suspect immediately following the unlawful arrest must be suppressed absent attenuation of taint, see: Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. 232, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016), Brown v. Illinois, 422 U.S. 590, 95 S.Ct. 2254, 45 L.Ed.2d 416 (1975), State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019); in-court identification, absent unreliability, is admissible irrespective of lawfulness of arrest, United States v. Crews, 63 L.Ed.2d 537 (1980); I.

Atwater v. City of Lago Vista, 149 L.Ed.2d 549 (2001)

Custodial arrest for nonjailable misdemeanor does not violate Fourth Amendment; 5-4.

State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001)

Police observe juvenile holding beer, chase him to defendant's home, demand entry, defendant refuses absent warrant, defendant is convicted of obstructing; held: minor in possession of alcohol is a minor offense, no indication juvenile was armed or likely to escape, State v. Wolters, 133 Wn.App. 297, 303-04 (2006), was not a threat, telephonic warrant could have been obtained, Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), thus insufficient exigent circumstances to enter without a warrant, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009), thus defendant did not obstruct, see: State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 814 (1987), State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991), Seattle v. Altschuler, 53 Wn.App. 317, 321 (1989); III.

State v. O'Cain, 108 Wn.App. 542 (2001)

Police stop car based on stolen vehicle radio report, at suppression hearing detective testifies that he confirmed that the vehicle had been stolen and that defendant lacked permission to drive it, trial court denies suppression; held: post-seizure verification that vehicle was stolen does not satisfy 4th Amendment; under fellow officer rule, State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539, 542 (1996), United States v. Hensley, 83 L.Ed.2d 604 (1985), police may rely upon collective knowledge, but where a dispatch is challenged, police must establish reliability of the dispatch prior to the seizure, State v. Sandholm, 96 Wn.App. 846 (1999), cf.: State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004); I.

Clement v. Dep't of Licensing, 109 Wn.App. 371 (2001)

Trooper reports to arresting trooper that radar shows driver is speeding, arresting trooper observes front end of car dip as if driver hit the brakes, stops driver who is intoxicated, RALJ judge finds no probable cause because there is no radar foundation evidence, Seattle v. Peterson, 39 Wn.App. 524 (1985); held: foundation evidence need not be presented to establish probable cause in license revocation proceeding, Jury v. Dep't of Licensing, 114 Wn.App. 726 (2002); I.

State v. Neeley, 113 Wn.App. 100, 106-110 (2002)

Police see vehicle in high drug and prostitution area at 2:00 a.m., approach and illuminate vehicle, defendant leans over seat, head bobs up and down as if ingesting or concealing something, police observe from outside steel wool pad, scissors, lighter which they recognize as drug paraphernalia, arrest, search, find drugs; held: while possession of drug paraphernalia alone does not support probable cause, RCW 69.50.412, State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554, 563 (1998), State v. Lowrimore, 67 Wn.App. 949, 959 (1992), other evidence present here indicating the paraphernalia had been used for drugs supports probable cause, State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 748, 752-53 (1991); III.

State v. Clausen, 113 Wn.App. 657 (2002)

Police stop defendant for driving while license suspended, decide to book him, advise him that he'll be released following booking, inventory car, find drugs, at suppression hearing it is established that jail advised police that it would not book nonviolent misdemeanants; held: because it was officer's intent to book, defendant was validly arrested and would not be cited, thus search incident to arrest was valid, State v. Balch, 114 Wn.App. 55 (2002), distinguishing State v. McKenna, 91 Wn.App. 554 (1998); II.

Maryland v. Pringle, 157 L.Ed.2d 769 (2003)

Police stop car, search, find $763 cash in glove compartment, drugs in back-seat armrest accessible to driver and two passengers, ask three suspects about ownership of drugs and money, all three offer no information, arrest all three, defendant-passenger confesses; held: reasonable officer could conclude that all in vehicle possessed drugs, thus arrest was lawful, but see: State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Nall, 117 Wn.App. 647 (2003)

Police arrest defendant on an invalid, non-judicial out-of-state warrant, find drugs; held: while police may rely upon collective knowledge of other police agencies, State v. Stebbins, 47 Wn.App. 482, 484 (1987), where the issuing agency's information is out of date, the arresting officers also lack probable cause, State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539, 542 (1996); RCW 10.88.330(1), authorizing arrest without a warrant "upon reasonable information" that suspect is charged in court of another state, does not provide a good faith exception; 2-1, I.

State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004)

Driver is stopped for infraction, DOL reports license suspended, police arrest, search car, find drugs; held: applying Aguilar-Spinelli test to DOL records establishes that they are presumptively reliable, cf.: State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); defendant's offering evidence that her record was inaccurate fails, as she did not show that DOL records are prima facie inaccurate; affirms State v. Gaddy, 114 Wn.App. 702 (2002); 9-0.

Devenpeck v. Alford, 160 L.Ed.2d 537 (2004)

To be a lawful arrest under the Fourth Amendment, the crime for which there is probable cause need not be closely related to the crime stated or believed by the arresting officer at the time of the arrest; 8-0.

Illinois v. Caballes, 160 L.Ed.2d 842 (2005)

Following stop for traffic infraction, police bring in drug dog to sniff car, reacts positively, police open trunk, seize marijuana; held: where duration of traffic stop was justified by the traffic offense and the ordinary inquiries to such a stop, see: United States v. Jacobsen, 80 L.Ed.2d 85 (1984), a lawful canine sniff, United States v. Place, 77 L.Ed.2d 110 (1983), but see: State v. Dearman, 92 Wn.App. 630 (1998), does not implicate legitimate privacy interests, cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); 5-3.

State v. Pulfrey, 154 Wn.2d 517 (2005)

Defendant is stopped for infraction, officer arrests for suspended license 3°, searches incident to arrests, finds drugs; officer testifies he always arrests and searches on suspended license cases, irrespective of CrRLJ 2.1(b)(2); held: police may arrest and search incident to arrest and then exercise discretion to cite and release or book, State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 346-47 (2006); driving while suspended is a "nonminor offense" for which police may arrest, distinguishing State v. Hehman, 90 Wn.2d 45 (1978), State v. Stortroen, 53 Wn.App. 654 (1989), State v. WS, 40 Wn.App. 835 (1985), State v. Pettitt, 93 Wn.2d 288 (1980), see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992); affirms State v. Pulfrey, 120 Wn.App. 270 (2004); 9-0.

License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005)

Unconscious driver is taken from collision in Washington to Idaho hospital, Washington trooper smells alcohol on driver's breath in hospital, orders blood draw, arrests for DUI, DOL suspends license; held: applying Idaho's fresh pursuit statute, Idaho Code § 19-701, trooper had reasonable suspicion to detain for DUI, which for purposes of fresh pursuit statute is treated as a felony, see: RCW 10.31.100(3)(d), trooper could thus pursue into Idaho and arrest when probable cause is established, distinguishing Clarkston v. Stone,63 Wn.App. 500 (1991), State v. Steinbrunn, 54 Wn.App. 506 (1989); III.

State v. Fisher, 132 Wn.App. 26, 29-31 (2006)

In lawful patdown, police find glass pipe with bulb and burnt residue in defendant's pocket, defendant claims it's not his, police search, find drugs; held: denial with no other explanation plus pipe with residue that had been used to inhale a drug equals probable cause that defendant possessed drug paraphernalia with intent to use it; I.

State v. Potter, 156 Wn.2d 835 (2006)

Police arrest for suspended license 3º, search, find drugs; held: while the method by which a license is suspended may violate due process, Redmond v. Moore, 151 Wn.2d 664 (2004), DOL records are presumed reliable, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004), subsequent invalidation of license suspension procedures do not void the probable cause that existed to arrest, State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 346-47 (2006), distinguishing State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92 (1982); affirms State v. Potter, 129 Wn.App. 494 (2005), State v. Holmes, 129 Wn.App. 24 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Walker, 157 Wn.2d 307 (2006)

Statutory expansion to common law rule allowing for warrantless misdemeanor arrests only when the misdemeanor occurs in the officer's presence, RCW 10.31.100(1), does not violate CONST. art I, § 7, see: State v. Hornaday, 105 Wn.2d 120, 130 (1986), Staats v. Brown, 139 Wn.2d 757, 766-67 (2000), or Fourth Amendment, see: Atwater v. City of Lago Vista, 149 L.Ed.2d 549 (2001); legislature may provide exceptions to the common law "in the presence" rule for warrantless misdemeanor arrests, see: State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013), State v. Perez, 5 Wn.App.2d 867 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390 (2007)

Police may enter a home to serve a misdemeanor arrest warrant if there is probable cause to believe arrestee resides there and is present pursuant to Fourth Amendment and CONST. art. I, § 7, State v. Winterstein, 167 Wn.2d 620, 628-31 (2009); affirms State v. Hatchie, 133 Wn.App. 100, 106-17 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Link, 136 Wn.App. 685, 696 (2007)

Officer approaches apartment to investigate meth lab, smells acetone and hears fan, knocks on front door, two children arrive behind him and open door, officer enters, announces presence, sees drugs, trial court finds that primary motivation was to search for evidence; held: community caretaking function must be divorced from a criminal investigation, State v. Kypreos, 115 Wn.App. 207, 217 (2002), where officer's primary motive is to search for evidence, even if a secondary motive is safety, there is no exception to warrant requirement; II.

State v. Chavez, 138 Wn.App. 29 (2007)

Officer hears a snorting noise coming from a barroom bathroom stall, observes three men in stall, one man leaves, another man, who is seen holding a dollar bill with white powder, attempts to hand bill to defendant who refuses it, police arrest defendant, find drugs in wallet; held: police did not see defendant holding drugs, using it or in dominion and control; an aspect of dominion and control is that defendant may immediately reduce object to actual possession, which here defendant refused to do, thus police lacked probable cause, search of wallet was unlawful; III.

State v. Grande, 164 Wn.2d 135 (2008)

Trooper stops a vehicle, smells marijuana, arrests driver and passengers, finds drugs on passenger; held: while smell of drug will justify search of a vehicle, see: State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641 (1992), State v. Ramirez, 49 Wn.App. 814, 819 (1987), arrest of occupants without individualized probable cause violated state constitution, cf.: Maryland v. Pringle, 157 L.Ed.2d 769 (2003); here, trooper arrested passenger before determining individual probable cause, thus arrest and subsequent search was unlawful; 9-0.

State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646 (2008)

Defendant crosses lane divider by two tire widths for one second, is stopped for lane change violation, RCW 46.61.140 (2020), processed and arrested for DUI; held: statute which requires that a vehicle be driven "as nearly as practicable" within a lane does not authorize a stop by police as the statute does not impose strict liability, State v. Jones, 186 Wn.App. 786 (2015), but see: State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98 (2014), State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017), State v. Alvarez, 6 Wn.App.2d 398 (2018), State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020); I.

State v. Bishop, 149 Wn.App. 439 (2009)

Following sentencing, defendant fails to report to work crew, court issues arrest warrant based upon unsworn letter from work crew staff, defendant is arrested, searched, drugs found; held: once court finds probable cause to detain for the original crime, it may issue bench warrants on the same oath that supported the original arrest warrant, but see: State v. Erickson, 168 Wn.2d 41 (2010); II.

State v. King, 167 Wn.2d 324 (2009)

Reckless driving that does not reach the level of erratic driving that constitutes "an emergency involving an immediate threat to human life or property," RCW 10.94.070(2), does not justify an extraterritorial arrest, distinguishing Tacoma v. Durham, 95 Wn.App. 876 (1999); 7-2.

State v. Patton, 167 Wn.2d 379 (2009)

Police, seeking to serve arrest warrant, see defendant with his head in the window of a car, announce he's under arrest, defendant flees, is arrested in a nearby residence, police search car and find drugs; held: defendant was arrested upon the officer's exercise of authority to arrest, fleeing does not defeat the arrest, State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998); defendant was not a driver or recent occupant of the vehicle searched, no evidence he had keys, brief proximity did not give rise to safety concerns upon his arrest, thus search was improper, Arizona v. Gant, 173 L.Ed.2d 485 (2009), see: State v. Chesley, 158 Wn.App. 36, 44-47 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Trujillo, 153 Wn.App. 454 (2009)

Police respond to report of domestic violence by a man against a woman at a particular house, items strewn in front yard, defendant answers door and refuses to respond to questions about what was going on, victim refuses to talk but looks distraught, disheveled, puffy eyes, grass and leaves in hair, finger bleeding all support probable cause to arrest; III.

State v. Erickson, 168 Wn.2d 41 (2010)

A probation bench warrant may be issued upon a well-founded suspicion that a violation has occurred, effectively overruling State v. Bishop, 149 Wn.App. 439 (2009), distinguishing State v. Parks, 136 Wn.App. 232 (2006); affirms State v. Erickson, 143 Wn.App. 660 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Hardgrove, 154 Wn.App. 182 (2010)

University police have the same powers as sheriffs, may pursue and arrest beyond university's boundaries, RCW 28B.10.555(1), ch. 10.93 RCW; III.

State v. Mann, 157 Wn.App. 428 (2010)

A person cannot respond to unlawful police conduct by shooting at the police, State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1, 21 (1997); III.

State v. Chesley, 158 Wn.App. 36, 41-44 (2010)

Officer, responding to bait car silent alarm, sees defendant between bait car and another car, defendant jumps in to adjacent car, officer detains, sees that bait car's door lock had been punched and sees burglary tools inside adjacent car, arrests defendant; held: appearance, conduct and presence in the vicinity of a crime establishes a well-founded suspicion that defendant activated bait car alarm, State v. Clark, 13 Wn.App. 21 (1975), observation of tools established probable cause to arrest; although arrest for a misdemeanor may be limited to a crime committed in the officer's presence, police may arrest if the misdemeanor involves harm to property or theft, RCW 10.31.100(1); 2-1, II.

State v. Eserjose, 171 Wn.2d 907 (2011)

Police, with probable cause to arrest, unlawfully enter home without a warrant and arrest defendant illegally, Payton v. New York, 445 U.S. 573, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980), at sheriff's office advise of Miranda warnings, defendant confesses; lead opinion (3 justices) holds that "attenuation doctrine" is compatible with CONST., art. I, § 7, sic: evidence is not the fruit of the poisonous tree if the connection between the challenged evidence and the illegal actions of the police is so attenuated as to dissipate the taint, New York v. Harris, 495 U.S. 14, 109 L.Ed.2d 13 (1990), see: Utah v. Strieff, 579 U.S. 232, 136 S.Ct. 2056, 195 L.Ed.2d 400 (2016), cf.: State v.

Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019); here, defendant was not questioned during the unlawful entry and maintained his innocence at the sheriff's office until informed that co-defendant had confessed, thus it was this information and not the illegal arrest that induced the confession; one justice concurs in the result without an opinion; one justice concurs in an opinion concluding that there was no connection between the police unlawful act and the confession, thus attenuation inquiry is erroneous; dissent would reject attenuation exception under state constitution.

State v. Eriksen, 172 Wn.2d 506 (2011)

Tribal officer may not stop and detain outside the reservation for a traffic infraction, at least absent cross-deputization or mutual aid pact, see: United States v. Cooley, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 1638, 210 L.Ed.2d 1 (2021); supersedes State v. Eriksen, 166 Wn.2d 953 (2009), 170 Wn.2d 209 (2010); 5-4.

State v. Louthan, 158 Wn.App. 732, 740-44 (2010)

An officer's subjective intent to arrest for a particular offense is immaterial if there is probable cause to arrest for any offense, State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641, 646 (1992); 2-1, II.

State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10, 18-22 (2012)

Officer observes glass pipe with residue, arrests for VUCSA; held: while mere possession of drug paraphernalia is not a crime, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564, 584 n.8 (2003), observation of "chalky white residue" supports officer's belief that the residue was contraband; 9-0.

State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013)

Officer on second floor of a building observes defendant commit drug-traffic loitering, directs by radio fellow officers to arrest defendant who find drugs; held: because the officer who arrested defendant was not present when the gross misdemeanor occurred and the officer who observed the offense was not an arresting officer, the arrest was unlawful as the fellow officer rule does not apply to an arrest for a misdemeanor, RCW 10.31.100 (2010), but see: State v. Perez, 5 Wn.App.2d 867 (2018), RCW 10.31.100 (2017); reverses State v. Ortega, 159 Wn.App. 889 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Ruem, 179 Wn.2d 195 (2013)

Police have arrest warrant for Chantha, observe Chantha's car outside house, knock on door, defendant Dara answers and says Chantha is not there, officer asks to enter to look for Chantha, defendant agrees then says no, police smell burnt marijuana, enter, search, do not find Chantha but find drugs; held: police lacked probable cause to believe that Chantha was present at the time of entry even if they had probable cause to believe that Chantha lived there, State v. Hatchie, 161 Wn.2d 390, 392-93 (2007), thus arrest warrant did not authorize police to enter; police need not inform subject of right to refuse consent when serving an arrest warrant, distinguishing State v. Ferrier, 136 Wn.2d 103, 115-16 (1998), State v. Williams, 142 Wn.2d 17, 23-28 (2000), State v. Westvang, 184 Wn.App. 1 (2014); because record is unclear that police smelled the marijuana prior to the unlawful entry, there was no independent source of probable cause; lead opinion of four justices plus one in dissent hold that Ferrier warnings need not be given, concurring opinion of four justices would hold that Ferrier does apply, see: State v. Blockman, 190 Wn.2d 651 (2018).

.

State v. Jones, 186 Wn.App. 786 (2015)

Police observe defendant's vehicle pass over fog line an inch three times, correcting each time, stops for erratic lane travel, no other vehicle on roadway, observe gun, defendant admits to prior felony, is convicted of felon in possession; held: crossing line three times absent other traffic does not, under totality of circumstances, establish a basis to stop by itself, must be evidence of unsafe driving, State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646 (2015), distinguishing State v. McLean, 178 Wn.App. 236 (2013), but see: State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017), State v. Alvarez, 6 Wn.App.2d 398 (2018), State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020); I.

District of Columbia v. Wesby, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 577, 199 L.Ed.2d 453 (2018)

Police receive complaint about loud noise in a vacant house, knock, see people run and hide, house in complete disarray, arrest people for unlawful entry, after charges are dropped some sue police claiming that police lacked evidence that people inside were not supposed to be there; held: under totality test court is to examine the events leading up to the arrest, and then decide whether, viewed from the standpoint of an objectively reasonable police officer, is there probable cause, Maryland v. Pringle, 540 U.S. 366, 371, 124 S.Ct. 795, 157 L.Ed.2d 769 (2003), in light of condition of the house, the fact that people hid, Illinois v. Wardlow, 145 L.Ed.2d 570 (2000), police could reasonably have concluded that most homeowners do not live in near-barren houses, do not invite people over to use their living room as a strip club, to have sex in their bedroom, to smoke marijuana inside, and to leave their floors filthy, officers could thus infer that the partygoers knew their party was not authorized; 9-0.

State v. Perez, 5 Wn.App.2d 867 (2018)

Statute that previously only allowed a misdemeanor arrest if the offense occurred in the presence of the arresting officer, State v. Bravo Ortega, 177 Wn.2d 116 (2013), was amended to allow the fellow officer rule to apply to misdemeanor arrests that occurred in the presence of an officer, RCW 10.31.100(1) (2017); police observed defendant accompanying a woman who is seen shoplifting, discards concealed items when he sees store detective is sufficient to establish probable cause to arrest; I.

State v. Alvarez, 6 Wn.App.2d 398 (2018)

Respondent is stopped by a trooper after car wheels briefly cross over a fog line and onto an area not designated as a roadway, is cited for driving with wheels off roadway, RCW 46.61.670, trial court dismisses as car was driven "as nearly as practicable" within lane, State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646 (2008); held: Prado, id., only applies to driving on roadways lined for traffic, RCW 46.61.140, area over fogline is not a roadway thus any crossing over fogline establishes grounds to stop the vehicle, see: State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98 (2014), State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017), State v. Brooks, 2 Wn.App.2d 371 (2018); 2-1, III.

State v. Pines, 17 Wn.App.2d 483 (2021)

Officer recognizes defendant and was aware of a bulletin a month earlier stating he had a warrant, three officers follow him into a restaurant, tackle and handcuff him, observe his hand move towards his waistline, defendant says he has a gun, police seize gun, verify warrant, defendant is convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm; held: police failed to verify existence of warrant and acted on stale information, test for staleness is whether facts indicated information is recent and contemporaneous, see: State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 342 (1997) (7-days is not stale); I.

ARREST
Well-Founded Suspicion

Brown v. Texas, 61 L.Ed.2d 357 (1979)
Defendant's conviction under state law requiring identification upon a lawful police stop was improper where officer stopped defendant solely to ascertain identity and had no reasonable suspicion to believe defendant was engaged in criminal conduct; 9-0.

State v. Sykes, 27 Wn.App. 111 (1980)
Where informant tells police he observed drugs in defendant's car and that defendant would arrive at a place in his car to sell drugs and police corroborate by observing defendant's arrival, there is enough to stop vehicle; ordering defendant to step from car is a "de minimis" intrusion , Pennsylvania v. Mimms, 54 L.Ed.2d 331 (1977); 2-1.

State v. Melin, 27 Wn.App. 589 (1980)
Police, executing a search warrant on a residence, stop a car which approaches residence and search it; held: police may stop vehicles approaching scene to prevent interference, but may not search, therefore evidence suppressed; I.

State v. Thompson, 93 Wn.2d 838 (1980)
Proximity of defendant to others suspected of criminal activity does not raise reasonable suspicion and does not justify arrest; 9-0.

State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43 (1980)
Informant's tip is not enough to detain lacking indicia of reliability, State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015); fact that informant's name is disclosed is not enough to establish reliability, State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021), expands State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940 (1975), accord: State v. Walker, 66 Wn.App. 622 (1992), see also: State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997), but see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Stroud, 30 Wn.App. 392 (1981)
"Unfamiliar" vehicle parked in high crime area, police put on lights, order suspect from car, smell marijuana, search, find cocaine; held: initial stop was a seizure as a reasonable person would have believed s/he was not free to go, State v. Ganntt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011), insufficient objective facts that suspect was involved in criminal activity, fruits suppressed; accord: State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), cf.: State v. Smith, 154 Wn.App. 695 (2010); II.

State v. Selvidge, 30 Wn.App. 406 (1981)
Police are called to burglary, observe footprints with distinctive tread; 90 minutes later, police observe car parked in high crime area three blocks from burglary scene; car had been seen "prowling" for several hours before burglary; police stop car, ask defendants what they are doing, recognize one defendant from prior burglaries, ask to see their shoes, release defendants; upon further investigation, police determine that suspects' shoe treads match footprints; held:

police had sufficient articulable facts to support a well-founded suspicion to detain; suspects had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the tread pattern of shoes they wear in public; II.

Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S. 692, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981)

Police, executing warrant, encounter defendant leaving his residence, require him to return to house, detain him while searching, find drugs in house, then search defendant and find drugs on his person; held: existence of warrant justified detention of occupant of home while search is conducted and, upon finding contraband in house, justifies arrest and search of occupant on probable cause, but see: Bailey v. United States, 568 U.S. 186, 185 L.Ed.2d 19 (2013); this type of detention is "less intrusive than an arrest," Illinois v. McArthur, 148 L.Ed.2d 838 (2001), Muehler v. Mena, 544 U.S. 93, 161 L.Ed.2d 299 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Cole, 31 Wn.App. 501 (1982)

Police, knowing that suspect is from out of town, was carrying large amounts of cash, gave address of known drug offender, inquired about traveling to San Diego (known drug city), may have used traveler's checks to launder money, inquired about wiring $50,000 cash to undisclosed location, have well-founded suspicion of actual or potential criminal activity, and may stop suspect's vehicle and detain him; III.

State v. Montgomery, 31 Wn.App. 745 (1982)

Defendant screams obscenities at police officers, who try to calm him down to no avail; crowd gathers on sidewalk; police arrest defendant for disorderly conduct, find marijuana; held: no probable cause to arrest, as defendant has First Amendment right to scream obscenities; I, 2-1.

Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833 (1982)

In the absence of any corroborative information or observations, police may not stop a vehicle on the sole basis that a passing motorist points to a vehicle and announces that it is being driven by a drunk driver; accord: State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992), State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997), but see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008); I.

State v. Tocki, 32 Wn.App. 457 (1982)

Police stop defendant because he moves while in a parked vehicle, late at night, in a high crime area; held: no particularized objective basis for suspecting defendant of presently engaging in criminal activity, thus evidence suppressed, State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638 (1980), but see: State v. Gluck, 83 Wn.2d 424 (1974); III.

Seattle v. Urban, 32 Wn.App. 634 (1982)

Silent alarm plus truck emerging from behind store where alarm was plus officer's suspicions due to fact that business was closed permits police to pull over truck and detain for investigation; I.

State v. Quaring, 32 Wn.App. 728 (1982)

Police, responding to burglary in progress call, observe vehicle leave area with lights off, pull to side of road, whereupon police approach vehicle and ask defendant to step outside; held: no arrest, State v. Wakely, 29 Wn.App. 238 (1981), State v. Gluck, 83 Wn.2d 424 (1974), but investigative detention based upon well-founded suspicion; I.

State v. Swaite, 33 Wn.App. 477 (1982)

Police respond to burglary scene, get description of suspect, detain defendant after flight, seize knife from belt, patdown, find two cigarette holders, ask defendant his name, then learn cigarette holders did not belong to burglary victim; police then determine defendant gave false name and arrest him for obstruction, later learn that cigarette holders were stolen from another nearby burglary; held: since obstructing statute, RCW 9A.76.020 (1975), is unconstitutional, State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92 (1982), cigarette holders are suppressed, but police may testify that they found holders on defendant, as they were seen before the obstruction arrest; I.

State v. Friederick, 34 Wn.App. 537 (1983)

Police, knowing suspect meets general description of rapist, order him to stop; he flees; police chase, draw guns; held: description gave police well-founded suspicion to detain; when defendant fled, police could use reasonable force to stop him including guns and handcuffs, see: State v. Mitchell, 80 Wn.App. 143 (1995); I.

State v. Hoffman, 35 Wn.App. 13 (1983)

Police observe fight, one participant points to defendant and tells police defendant started fight, police demand identification, defendant refuses to comply, is arrested, resists; held: arrest was unlawful, State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92 (1982), but see: State v. Reeb, 63 Wn.App. 678 (1992), thus defendant could resist and assault 2° charge must be dismissed; I.

In re Armed Robbery, 99 Wn.2d 106 (1983)

Police, believing that a description of a robber fit a suspect, show montage to victim who states suspect bore a "striking resemblance" to robber; police obtain a show cause order to require suspect to appear in lineup; held: an individual may not be ordered to participate in a lineup where no probable cause exists to believe that suspect has committed the offense; dicta that police may not seize a suspect to obtain physical evidence (such as eyewitness identification) on less than probable cause, at 111; 9-0.

State v. Sweet, 36 Wn.App. 377 (1984)

Report of suspicious vehicle and suspect's proximity to vehicle and police finding vehicle is parked outside a business that was closed at night in an area not frequently travelled plus suspect ran when approached by police plus, when stopped, suspect found wearing gloves and holding a stocking cap on "a mild spring day" is a well-founded suspicion to detain, State v. Gluck, 83 Wn.2d 424 (1974); when suspect was transported to crime scene but rape victim described assailant before suspect arrived, suspect's description is not a fruit of arrest; I.

State v. Belanger, 36 Wn.App. 818 (1984)

Police need not have a well-founded suspicion or articulable facts to merely inquire about suspicious circumstances; uniformed, armed officer who approaches a citizen and engages him in conversation has not seized him, State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706 (1993), State v. Smith, 154 Wn.App. 695 (2010), cf.: State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), see: State v. Machado, 54 Wn.App. 771 (1989), State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268 (1997), State v. Johnson, 156 Wn.App. 82, 90-92 (2010), but see: State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20, abrogated, on other grounds, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012); II.

State v. Kennedy, 38 Wn.App. 41 (1984)

Neighbors complain of heavy traffic at a residence; informant reports defendant habitually purchased marijuana from residence, describes defendant's vehicle; police observe suspect vehicle enter and leave residence, stop vehicle, observe furtive gesture, observe baggie protruding from under seat, seize it with drugs; held: reasonable for officer to conclude defendant had just completed a drug transaction; III.

State v. Johnston, 38 Wn.App. 793 (1984)

After observing a man attempting to conceal himself while carrying an object from an open car into a home, police order all persons in home outside at gunpoint, after which suspect confesses to a burglary that occurred the night before; held: while the suspicious circumstance justified an investigative stop, police did not use the least intrusive means reasonably available to verify or dispel suspicion that a burglary was being committed; police did not need to use guns to investigate, thus confession suppressed, Florida v. Royer, 75 L.Ed.2d 229 (1983), Kaupp v. Texas, 155 L.Ed.2d 814 (2003); I.

State v. Owens, 39 Wn.App. 130 (1984)

Commission of a crime following an illegal arrest does not require suppression of the police officer's description of the crime; the illegality of the attempted arrest may provide a defense to the subsequent crime if the conduct was a normal and reasonable reaction to the attempted stop; III.

Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984)

Police enter suspect's home without a warrant and arrest for DUI, claiming hot pursuit; held: warrantless home arrest for a minor offense is not justified by hot-pursuit doctrine where there was no continuous pursuit, no threat to public safety, State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), cf.: State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991), Stanton v. Sims, 571 U.S. 3, 187 L.Ed.2d 341 (2013); 7-2.

Florida v. Rodriguez, 83 L.Ed.2d 165 (1984)

Police, observing suspects at airport act suspiciously, show badges, ask if they might talk, request consent to search bags, get consent and find drugs; held: asking suspects if they would step aside and talk implicates no Fourth Amendment interest; strange movements and contradictory answers to trained narcotics officers provide articulable suspicion for a seizure; 6-3.

State v. Samsel, 39 Wn.App. 564 (1985)

Radio broadcasts robbery committed by black male and Puerto Rican male running east, police see black male and white male enter cab one mile east of robbery, furtive gesture in cab, police block cab, order suspects out at gunpoint; held: sufficient, articulable facts to justify the investigative stop, as information and experience of police provided more than "inchoate hunch", State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445 (1991); because an armed robbery was being investigated the stop was reasonably related in scope to the circumstances, i.e., gunpoint stop and frisk approved, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733 (1984), State v. Mitchell, 80 Wn.App. 143 (1995), State v. Keller-Deen, 137 Wn.App. 396 (2007); III.

State v. Dorsey, 40 Wn.App. 459 (1985)

California police arrest suspect at request of Washington police, although arguably Washington police lacked probable cause to arrest for credit card theft, but did have a well-founded suspicion to detain; California police stop suspect disembarking from airplane, direct him to another area, observe him attempting to get rid of evidence, seize it, feel credit cards; held: California police actions were no more intrusive than a Terry stop would have permitted; see: State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591 (1992); upon feeling credit cards, police had probable cause; I.

State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985)

Unnamed citizen tells officer that a man in a bus station rest room stall has a gun, describes suspect; officer enters rest room, sees man who meets description, holds him at gun point, is told by suspect that suspect has a blank gun in his rucksack, handcuffs suspect, searches rucksack, finds starter pistol and handcuffs in rucksack; officer recalls a police bulletin concerning a crime committed with handcuffs, arrests defendant who, following further investigation, is charged and convicted of a robbery; held: investigatory stop was proper where an anonymous informant of undetermined reliability states he observed suspect carrying or displaying a gun in a public place, Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), but see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), cf.: State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992); where officer is told by suspect he has a gun in a container, officer may search container since releasing it to suspect would put officer in danger; arrest was unlawful as officer at best only suspected suspect of committing a crime, and recollection of police bulletin was too vague to support probable cause; I.

State v. Thornton, 41 Wn.App. 506 (1985)

Minutes after 3:30 a.m. robbery, police radio broadcasts report describing two suspects as "probably Caucasian," armed, one wearing eyeglasses, other wearing "bulky parka"; 11 blocks from robbery scene, police observe speeding vehicle, occupants meet description; police stop vehicle at gun point, observe robbery tools (gloves, tape, cuffs) in car, arrest defendant; held: police had reasonable suspicion to stop vehicle; drawn guns and ordering suspect out of vehicle did not exceed scope of Terry stop as report was that suspects were armed; length of stop was minimal, United States v. Sharpe, 84 L.Ed.2d 605 (1985), see: State v. Watkins, 76 Wn.App. 726, 729-31 (1995); observation of robbery tools provided probable cause; I.

State v. Harvey, 41 Wn.App. 870 (1985)

Radio reports burglary in progress, suspect black male with partial clothing description; police respond, unidentified taxi driver points at black male 12 blocks from burglary; police patdown suspect; held: investigative stop was proper, patdown was lawful as, "it is well known that burglars often carry weapons," State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992); statements during Terry stop, but prior to advice of rights, are admissible; I.

State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452 (1985)

Officer, investigating a vandalism call, approaches two people on bicycles six blocks from crime scene, asks to talk to them, then asks for identification, takes identification to his car to run a warrant check, then gets report on radio of bicycle theft, suspects' bicycles match description, arrests suspects; held: initial encounter was not a seizure, since there was nothing coercive about the encounter, officer did not use lights or sirens to stop suspects, State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706 (1993); once officer took identification, suspects were detained, State v. Barnes,

96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000), but see: State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 311 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), see: State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008); because officer had already seen the bicycles before the detention occurred, and no information was acquired from defendants following the initial detention, the unlawful seizure did not taint the evidence; cf.: State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 462-4 (1994); I.,

United States v. Hensley, 83 L.Ed.2d 604 (1985)

If police have a reasonable, articulable suspicion that a person has committed a completed felony, an investigatory stop is permissible, even in the absence of probable cause; if a "wanted flyer" is issued on the basis of articulable facts supporting a reasonable suspicion that the person wanted has committed an offense, then a Terry stop is permitted, State v. O'Cain, 108 Wn.App. 542 (2001), expanding Terry v. Ohio, 20 L.Ed.2d 889 (1968); 9-0.

United States v. Sharpe, 84 L.Ed.2d 605 (1985)

Police observe two trucks in tandem for 20 miles in known drug trafficking area, testify that trucks with campers are often used to transport marijuana, one truck heavily loaded with windows covered, take evasive action when drivers become aware police are following them held to establish articulable, reasonable suspicion that both trucks were engaged in marijuana trafficking; 20 minute detention to investigate is reasonable; test for permissible length of Terry stop: whether police diligently pursued a means of investigation that was likely to dispel or confirm suspicions quickly during which time it was necessary to detain the defendant; see: State v. Flores-Moreno, 72 Wn.App. 733, 740-1 (1994); 7-2.

Hayes v. Florida, 84 L.Ed.2d 705 (1985)

Absent probable cause police may not take a suspect to the station for fingerprinting; dicta that an investigative detention for fingerprinting in the field is lawful; 8-0 (holding), 6-2 (dicta).

State v. Sweet, 44 Wn.App. 226 (1986)

Report of suspicious vehicle plus police observing suspect flattened up against a building 3 feet from a pile of horse manure at 11:20 p.m. in a dark area somewhat isolated near the suspicious vehicle next to closed businesses plus suspect's flight as soon as he saw police vehicle establishes well-founded suspicion to detain; scope of detention was reasonable as suspect told police he was a lookout, amount of intrusion, while significant, was reasonable due to flight, frisk was proper as police observed ski mask, reasonably associated with burglary, but see: State v. Walker, 66 Wn.App. 622 (1992), State v. Gatewood, 163 Wn.2d 534 (2008), State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013), State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019), detention was reasonable as it took only 10-20 minutes; I.

State v. Mercer, 45 Wn.App. 769 (1986)

Police observe vehicle with dome light on in school parking lot at 3:30 a.m.; one individual, upon seeing patrol car, runs away, officer asks two remaining suspects for identification, observes mag wheels in vehicle, defendant says he purchased them, police make radio call, discover defendant did not purchase wheels, arrest defendant, search vehicle, find drugs; held: officer's inability to articulate the exact crime being committed does not make a suspicion a mere hunch; although circumstances must be more consistent with criminal than innocent conduct, reasonableness is measured not by exactitudes but by probabilities, State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445 (1991); scope of stop was reasonable; III.

State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986)

Police testify at suppression hearing that informant had given tips for several months, that informant is reliable, that one tip resulted in a warrant and conviction, that informant told officer that defendant purchased drugs from a certain house, that defendant drove a specific car, that defendant only went to that house to buy drugs, that officer had received complaints of frequent foot traffic at the house and that he saw defendant leave house and drive off in the car described by informant; held: a well founded suspicion to detain is established where "there is a substantial possibility that criminal conduct has occurred or is about to occur", United States v. Cortez, 66 L.Ed.2d 621 (1981); here, the activity was consistent with both criminal and noncriminal conduct, thus a brief detention was justified, see: State v. Watkins, 76 Wn.App. 726, 729-31 (1995), State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 194 (2009), cf.: State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57 (2010), State v. Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011), State v. Fuentes, 183 Wn.2d 149 (2015), State v. Weyand, 188 Wn.2d 804 (2017); 5-4.

State v. Guzman-Cuellar, 47 Wn.App. 326 (1987)

Police observe suspect, at 2:30 a.m., walk out of a residential driveway, cross street, enter another yard, stop suspect for trespass, determine that he meets description of homicide suspect, pat him down, cuff him, transport him to a tavern for a showup; held: initial stop was based upon sufficiently suspicious circumstances to justify detention even though officer had no report about a prowler; upon recognizing suspect as possible murder suspect, scope of investigation is broadened, State v. Santacruz, 132 Wn.App. 615 (2006), and transport to showup was reasonable; I.

State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230 (1987)

Police receive report that a person was casing a house, darted into a yard, tossed gloves away and ran; police respond to area, detain defendant who met description, frisk, handcuff and transport him to scene where he is identified; held (1) purpose of stop was legitimate, as police suspicion was focused on defendant, circumstances were sufficiently suspicious to detain, (2) amount of intrusion, while significant, was proper; handcuffing is appropriate where suspect is validly transported in police car, and (3) length of detention was reasonable, see also: State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268 (1997); police may transport suspect during a Terry stop where there is knowledge that a crime has been committed, but may not where defendant's conduct was suspicious but there has not been any report of a crime; 6-3.

State v. Williams, 50 Wn.App. 696 (1988)

Following anonymous call to police of an accident involving motorcycles falling off a particularly described vehicle, police stop vehicle meeting description, run warrant check, arrest driver on warrant who later confesses to stealing motorcycles; held: investigatory stop for hit and run and negligent driving was valid, Waid v. Department of Licensing, 43 Wn.App. 32 (1986), Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), but see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); warrant check during valid criminal investigatory stop which does not unreasonably extend stop is reasonable, State v. Kerens, 9 Wn.App. 448 (1973), State v. Madrigal, 65 Wn.App. 279 (1992), State v. Villarreal, 97 Wn.App. 636, 645 (1999); I.

Seattle v. Mesiani, 110 Wn.2d 454 (1988)

Stopping all vehicles at sobriety checkpoints to determine if drivers are under the influence violates CONST. Art. 1, § 21 and the Fourth Amendment; reverses Fury v. Seattle, 46 Wn.App. 110 (1986), but see: Michigan State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004), cf.: Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000), Schlegel v. Dep't of Licensing, 137 Wn.App. 364 (2007), see: State v. Thorp, 71 Wn.App. 175 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Anderson, 51 Wn.App. 775 (1988)

Police observe a known citizen waving at officer, pointing at another vehicle and gesturing like a snake; officer follows vehicle, observes weaving within the lane, stops vehicle, determines driver is under the influence, arrests; held: known informant was reliable, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 8 (1986), State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015), weaving gesture was more than a conclusory statement establishing an articulable suspicion justifying the stop, distinguishing Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833 (1982); cf.: State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997); III.

State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70 (1988)

Police observe suspects near an alley in a high crime area, walk up and ask what they are doing, then ask for names and birthdates, tell suspects to wait, run warrant check, discover outstanding warrant, arrest, search, find drugs; held: while requesting identification was not a seizure, State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), INS v. Delgado, 80 L.Ed.2d 247 (1984), State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997), State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), but see: State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509 (1990), telling defendant to wait was a detention without a well-founded suspicion, State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, supra., State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019); seizure of drugs resulted from officer's unlawful detention, thus suppressed, State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000), cf.: State v. Madrigal, 65 Wn.App. 279 (1992); I.

Michigan v. Chesternut, 100 L.Ed.2d 565 (1988)

Police in marked patrol car observe defendant run upon seeing car, police accelerate, catch up with and drive alongside defendant, who discards items, police pick up items, discover drugs, arrest; held: no seizure, since a reasonable person would not believe that he was not at liberty to ignore the police, State v. Toney, 60 Wn.App. 804 (1991), California v. Hodari D., 113 L.Ed.2d 690 (1991), Torres v. Madrid, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 989, 209 L.Ed.2d 190 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Dudas, 52 Wn.App. 832 (1988)

Police observe defendant in dark parking lot late at night when no businesses in area are open in high crime area, approach, learn defendant is looking for keys, ask for identification, take identification to patrol car, call in for warrants, find none, release defendant, moments later learn of warrant, find defendant, arrest, find drugs; held: initial demand for identification was reasonable, State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), INS v. Delgado, 80 L.Ed.2d 247 (1984), State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000); seizure of ID card was a seizure of defendant without articulable suspicion that criminal conduct had or would occur, State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, supra., State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019), but see: State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008); however, since police released defendant, and had already identified him lawfully, then the subsequent arrest was proper as untainted by the improper detention; I.

State v. Garza, 53 Wn.App. 49 (1988)

Unidentified witness reports burglary by Mexican male; police respond to scene, observe male run, detain him, whereupon suspect states, "you've got me," police cuff and transport to station, detain suspect for three hours, after which police verify burglary and arrest; held: initial stop was a valid Terry stop, continued detention due to flight and statement was valid, State v. Sweet, 44 Wn.App. 226, 230-31 (1986), State v. Swaite, 33 Wn.App. 477, 481 (1982), but see: State v. Gatewood, 163 Wn.App. 534 (2008), however, holding at station for three hours amounted to an arrest without probable cause, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 74 (1988), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000), thus suppressed; III.

State v. Belieu, 112 Wn.2d 587 (1989)

Five police officers, lacking probable cause but with a well founded suspicion, stop defendants' vehicle at gunpoint, knowing that weapons had been burglarized from residences in the area and having observed furtive gestures by suspects; held: police may use drawn guns in a Terry stop where a reasonably prudent person would be warranted in the belief that safety was in danger; here, force did not exceed the scope of Terry stop and thus did not convert the detention into an arrest, reversing State v. Belieu, 50 Wn.App. 834 (1988), c.f,: State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29 (2006); detailed analysis of scope of detention vs. arrest; accord: State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992); 9-0.

United States v. Sokolow, 104 L.Ed.2d 1 (1989)

Airline passenger whom police know paid cash for ticket, traveled under a name that did not match telephone number which passenger gave, had an original destination of Miami, a drug source city, stayed in Miami for 48 hours even though flight took 20 hours, appeared nervous, checked no luggage is stopped by DEA, detained, after dope dog reacted positively is arrested, searched; held: irrespective of drug courier profile, all factors together lead to reasonable suspicion to believe that suspect was transporting drugs even though each factor alone is consistent with innocent travel; 7-2.

State v. DeArman, 54 Wn.App. 621 (1989)

Police observe vehicle stopped at a stop sign for 45-60 seconds, activate emergency lights, vehicle begins to pull away, then pulls over, police find warrants, arrest, find drugs; held: defendant was seized upon activation of emergency lights, State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011); motionless at stop sign plus beginning to pull away when lights activated do not rise to well founded suspicion for Terry stop, State v. Stroud, 30 Wn.App. 392 (1981), State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638 (1980); community caretaker function, State v. Chisholm, 39 Wn.App. 864 (1985), does not justify search as officer knew vehicle was not disabled when it moved, cf.: State v. Madrigal, 65 Wn.App. 279 (1992); I.

State v. Pimintel, 55 Wn.App. 569 (1989)

Warrant authorizes search of premises and "Juan Doe, Mexican Male," 21 years old, 5'10", 165 pounds; police serve warrant, defendant enters room, is secured, reaches toward his left shirt pocket, police search, find drugs in pocket, officer testifies he did not believe defendant had weapon; held: defendant matched "Juan Doe," drugs found on premises, thus detention was valid; III.

State v. Mason, 56 Wn.App. 93 (1989)

Police respond to call to remove unwanted person from apartment, speak with resident who states suspect would not leave and had threatened to kill himself, officer was aware of a prior suicide attempt by suspect; police patdown suspect, find drugs, detain at police station; held: police may detain a person based upon suicidal history and present threat to kill self for interview by mental health professional, RCW 71.05.150(4); detaining suspect in a segregated holding room within campus police station does not violate RCW 71.05.020(16), which states that a jail is not an "evaluation and treatment facility"; III.

State v. Biegel, 57 Wn.App. 192 (1990)

Police observe defendant in high crime area drive up, park, converse with one of several persons standing on corner for 30 seconds, follow person into apartment building; police testify that was the normal mode of conduct for a drug transaction, detain defendant, search wallet without consent, call in identification, find warrant, patdown defendant, find drugs; held: police had sufficient evidence to make a Terry stop to identify defendant but seizing wallet was not a weapons search, which was the extent of the Terry search, thus drugs suppressed; III.

State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 304 (1990)

Police stop vehicle for speeding, determine driver is drunk, ask passenger if he wishes to drive vehicle from scene in lieu of impound, passenger agrees, officer orders passenger to return to and remain in vehicle, requests driver's license from passenger, runs computer check, finds warrant, arrests passenger, searches, finds drugs; held: directing passenger to remain in vehicle was not a detention, reversing State v. Mennegar, 53 Wn.App. 257 (1989), as a reasonable person would not have believed himself to be detained, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706 (1993), see: State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), State v. Johnson, 156 Wn.App. 82, 90-92 (2010), but see: State v. Gleason, 70 Wn.App. 13 (1993), as passenger had agreed to drive vehicle away; requesting passenger's license was reasonable, as passenger was free to refuse, State v. Mote, 129 Wn.App. 276 (2005), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004) State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), cf.: State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012); within community caretaking function to call in to determine if license was valid; see: Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), State v. Brown,see also: State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Conner, 58 Wn.App. 90 (1990)

Investigatory stop deemed valid where police knew that radio dispatch received call from person who identified herself as an employee of a business at a certain location, that a wallet had been stolen nearby within the hour, that suspect was at the business office being stalled by other employees, upon arrival, defendant met description, distinguishing State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43 (1980), in that person calling reported a crime, not just suspicious activity; citizen informant is inherently reliable even if calling on the telephone, State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015), but see: State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); patdown and removal of papers was reasonably related in scope to the reason for the stop; I.

Alabama v. White, 110 L.Ed.2d 301 (1990)

Police receive anonymous telephone tip that suspect would leave a particular apartment at a particular time in a certain vehicle, would go to a specific place and would possess drugs; police follow suspect, who acts in accordance with tip, detain her, she consents to search, drugs found; held: tip plus police corroboration, Illinois v. Gates, 76 L.Ed.2d 527 (1983), establish a well-founded suspicion to detain, Adams v. Williams, 32 L.Ed.2d 612 (1972), cf.: Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), but see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); 6-3.

California v. Hodari D., 113 L.Ed.2d 690 (1991)

Suspect sees police and runs, police chase without reasonable suspicion, suspect throws drugs while fleeing, is stopped and arrested, police recover drugs; held: absent the application of physical force or submission to a show of authority, no seizure for purposes of the Fourth Amendment occurs, Michigan v. Chesternut, 100 L.Ed.2d 565 (1988), Torres v. Madrid, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 989, 209 L.Ed.2d 190 (2021), see: United States v. Mendenhall, 64 L.Ed.2d 497 (1980), State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 344 (1997),; here, suspect was not seized until he was tackled, but see: State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Butler, 2 Wn.App. 2d 549, 560-61 (2018), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn.App.2d 641 (2019); 7-2.

Florida v. Bostick, 115 L.Ed.2d 389 (1991)

Police routinely board bus at scheduled stop and ask passengers for permission to search luggage, defendant grants permission, police seize drugs; held: no seizure where a reasonable innocent person would feel free to say no, United States v. Drayton, 153 L.Ed.2d 242 (2002); cramped confines of bus is but one factor in determining if consent is voluntary; accord: State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), but cf.: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Little, 116 Wn.2d 488 (1991)

Police receive report of loitering juveniles in large (500 resident) apartment complex which is posted with signs warning against loitering, observe several juveniles in area, respondent flees upon seeing officer provides "substantial grounds of criminal activity" to warrant detention; in companion case, officers conducting a "premise check" of same apartment complex spot group of juveniles standing around, police recognize none as residents, juveniles disperse as police approach provides reasonable grounds to believe criminal trespass was being committed justifying investigative stop, State v. Contreras, 92 Wn.App. 307 (1998), cf.: State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992), State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002); 7-2.

State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509 (1991)

Police patrolling 500-resident apartment complex that is posted with no loitering signs observe respondent, whom they do not recognize as a resident, leave an apartment, walk toward police then turn away and walk faster, play with his baseball hat, police approach him, ask if he lives there, respondent says yes, police observe baggie in hand, grab him, seize baggie, find drugs; four justices hold that police possessed sufficient reasonable suspicion to stop respondent to investigate him for criminal trespass; respondent's claim that he lived in complex, combined with police familiarity with the 500 residents, established probable cause to arrest for criminal trespass; cf.: State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992), State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002), State v. Keller-Deen, 137 Wn.App. 396 (2007); police knowledge that baggies are used to transport narcotics provided reasonable suspicion to believe respondent possessed drugs, thus police could demand that respondent turn over baggie; three justices hold that seizure was lawful as incident to arrest for criminal trespass; 7-2.

State v. Massey, 60 Wn.App. 131 (1991)

Homicide report states white male and female fleeing, police decide to stop all traffic along only escape route; officer sees two vehicles, realizes she can stop only one, chooses closer containing white male and two black males, detains defendant black male because he had been listed as a missing juvenile; held: decision to stop closer vehicle with white male was not arbitrary, supported by sufficient suspicion of criminal activity, minimal invasion of obtaining occupants' identification; II.

State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445 (1991)

Police observe defendant drive slowly through crime area with high incidence of gang activity, windows down in 40° weather, radio loud, meeting police profile of drive-by shootings; as police approached car, defendant turned down radio, observe furtive hand motions, see, seize gun; held: circumstances, to trained officer, were more consistent with criminal than innocent conduct; officers may do far more if suspect conduct endangers life or safety, initial intrusion was negligible, thus seizure was valid, State v. Mercer, 45 Wn.App. 769, 774-5 (1986), State v. Samsel, 39 Wn.App. 564 (1985), State v. McCord, 19 Wn.App. 250, 253 (1978); II.

State v. Toney, 60 Wn.App. 804 (1991)

Police observe youths in high crime area, youths run upon observing police, respondent breaks away from group, is followed by police, without sirens or lights, officer then follows respondent on foot, observes him discard a plastic bag in which police find drugs; held: police conduct would not have communicated to the reasonable person an attempt to capture or otherwise intrude upon respondent's freedom of movement, thus no arrest or detention occurred, Michigan v. Chesternut, 100 L.Ed.2d 565 (1988), State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996); I.

State v. Bennett, 62 Wn.App. 702 (1991)

Police observe vehicle park across from empty convenience store "in such a way as to go unnoticed," presence of juveniles in early morning hours, suspect stops at door of store when officer approaches rather than entering, police know of previous incidents at store, stop suspect for questioning, check for warrants, allow suspect to leave; minutes later, officer learns that suspect had recently stated he did not drive and had no car, police block car, check with radio, determine car is stolen; held: limited nature of stop at store door for brief questioning was based upon reasonable suspicion, State v. Kennedy, 38 Wn.App. 41, 46-7 (1984); blocking vehicle for further limited time to check plates based upon additional information was also reasonable; I.

State v. Reeb, 63 Wn.App. 678 (1992)

Gas station clerk calls police late at night, reports that six or seven young people had approached a white car parked nearby, exchanged something with passenger and left; police respond, locate car, stop it, ask defendant-driver for identification, check with radio, determine ten failures to appear from DOL, former RCW 46.64.020(3), arrest, search, find drugs; held: complaint from identified clerk provided sufficient information to justify inquiry and investigation, thus initial detention was lawful; III.

State v. Rowe, 63 Wn.App. 750 (1991)

Police, speaking with gang members, observe occupants of passing vehicle flash hand signal of rival gang which, officer testifies, sometimes leads to violence; police stop vehicle; held: mere expression of gang membership is not grounds for Terry stop; I.

State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992)

Police receive anonymous phone tip that man in gold Maverick brandished shotgun, police stop green Maverick, seize guns, drugs; held: because record is devoid of information whether informant was eyewitness, there is no basis of knowledge or reliability established, State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940 (1975), Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833 (1982), State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), nor other indicia of reliability, cf.: State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); although potential danger to public may be factor to consider, it cannot substitute for reliability of informant, State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), distinguishing State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985), see: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), but see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014); II.

State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992)

Police officer, pursuant to an agreement with public housing authority, arrest defendant for drug offense nearby, admonish defendant to stay out of housing complex; three weeks later, officer sees defendant on complex grounds, arrest, search, find drugs; held: officer's knowledge that defendant did not live in complex, plus prior admonishment not to return establishes an articulable suspicion that defendant might be trespassing but does not establish probable cause to arrest, thus absent further investigation, search was unlawful, see: State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509 (1991), State v. Little, 116 Wn.2d 448 (1991), State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208 (1995), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002), cf.: State v. Thompson, 69 Wn.App. 436 (1993); I.

State v. Madrigal, 65 Wn.App. 279 (1992)

Police observe defendant and a woman engaged in a heated argument, conclude defendant's body language was "overpowering," inquire of woman if there is a problem, she responds there was none, ask defendant for identification, discover warrants, arrest, search, find drugs; held: loud altercation established a reasonable and articulable suspicion of criminal activity justifying detention, distinguishing State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70 (1988); after a lawful investigatory stop, police may detain for a warrant check where duration of warrant check was two minutes, State v. Sinclair, 11 Wn.App. 523, 529 (1974), distinguishing State v. DeArman, 54 Wn.App. 621 (1989); 2-1, III.

State v. Walker, 66 Wn.App. 622 (1992)

Police radio reports individuals going door-to-door asking for people who do not live in area, police observe defendant who matches description, appears startled by police, stops on request, states he was looking for an apartment, is patted down, fruits of burglary found; held: no basis for stop, as trustworthiness of information was unknown to officers, State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43 (1980) , State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), cf.: State v. Maesse, 29 Wn.App. 643 (1981), State v. Alvarado, 56 Wn.App. 454 (1990), State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), see also: State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), but see: State v. Contreras, 92 Wn.App. 307 (1998), only corroboration was defendant appearing startled [flight alone is not enough, see: State v. Little, 116 Wn.2d 488, 504 (Utter, J., dissenting)]; even if stop was valid, patdown was not, as frisk occurred on residential sidewalk in middle of the afternoon, suspect alone with two police officers, thus facts do not support officers' safety concerns, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733 (1984), distinguishing State v. Sweet, 44 Wn.App. 226 (1986); I.

Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992)

Statute authorizing stop of a vehicle which has tab on license plate indicating that owner had been cited for driving without a license, RCW 46.16.710(3), does not violate Fourth Amendment or CONST. Art. 1, § 7, where sole purpose of stop is to ascertain if driver has a valid license, State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268, 270 (1997), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), see: State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), distinguishing Seattle v. Mesiani, 110 Wn.2d 454 (1988), Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), United States v. Brignoni-Ponce, 45 L.Ed.2d 607 (1975), see also: State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020); I.

State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 81 (1992)

Police drawing firearms during burglary investigation does not convert Terry stop to custodial arrest, State v. Belieu, 112 Wn.2d 587, 601-2 (1989), as it is well-known that burglars carry weapons, State v. Harvey, 41 Wn.App. 870, 875 (1985); I.

State v. Lowrimore, 67 Wn.App. 949 (1992)

Dispatch reports that suspect fought with her mother, possessed knives, threatened suicide; police arrive at scene, find defendant upset, denies intent to kill herself, detains defendant, searches, finds drugs; held: information and observation of defendant's highly unstable state justifies belief that she was suffering from a mental disorder, information about knives justifies belief that there was an imminent likelihood of serious harm permitting detention for possible civil commitment, RCW 71.05.150, State v. Lynd, 54 Wn.App. 18 (1989); I.

State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996)

Police observe defendant, who looks away, patrol car stops, defendant approaches, police ask where he is going, defendant answers appropriately, police ask for name, defendant produces identification, police run radio check, ask if he has drugs, defendant says no, ask if they may search, defendant says yes, police find drugs; held: point where defendant was asked if he had drugs amounts to seizure without well-founded suspicion, State v. Rodriguez, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1982), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000), State v.

Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), but see: State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), State v. Bailey, 154 Wn.App. 295 (2010), cf.: State v. Smith, 154 Wn.App. 695 (2010); consent obtained through exploitation of prior illegal detention is invalid unless free of taint, Taylor v. Alabama, 73 L.Ed.2d 314 (1982), State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388, 397-9 (1986); II.

State v. Koopman, 68 Wn.App. 514 (1992)

Where detention occurs in another state, choice of law to be applied depends upon legitimate interests of the parties, legitimate needs of law enforcement, protection of justified expectations, fairness, ease with which law may be ascertained, interests of certainty, predictability, uniformity of result and comity, United States v. Gerena, 667 F.Supp. 911, 914-5 (Defendant.Conn. 1987); III.

State v. Gleason, 70 Wn.App. 13 (1993)

Police observe white male in "low income Hispanic" neighborhood, approach, ask to talk, demand identification, observe bindle in hand, seize drugs; held: reasonable person in defendant's position would have believed he was not free to go, distinguishing State v. Mennegar, 114 Wn.2d 404 (1990), thus defendant was seized; disregarding racial incongruity, State v. Barber, 118 Wn.2d 335 (1992), there were no facts to support a Terry stop, thus suppressed and dismissed; cf.: State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706, 712 n. 8 (1993), State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), State v. Bailey, 154 Wn.App. 295 (2010); III.

State v. Lund, 70 Wn.App. 437 (1993)

With a well-founded suspicion, jailers detain a paralegal for smuggling drugs, seize her purse, move her to a reception area for four minutes, whereupon she produces drugs; held: a Terry stop, while limited to place, allows some movement of the suspect in the general vicinity without converting the detention to an arrest; movement may be for safety and security, Florida v. Royer, 84 L.Ed.2d 705 (1985)(dictum), to get out of the rain and promote safety of passing vehicles, United States v. Pino, 855 F.2d 357 (6th Cir. 1988), for purposes of identification, State v. Wheeler, 108 Wn.2d 230, 236-7 (1987), or to talk more conveniently, United States v. Richards, 500 F.2d 1025 (9th Cir. 1974); here, detention and movement was minimally intrusive and reasonable; where police make a valid seizure of a purse, then desire to obtain a search warrant, they may retain the purse for the time reasonably needed to secure a warrant, see: State v. Huff, 64 Wn.App. 641, 653 (1992); II.

State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706 (1993)

Officer observes defendant hurry away when he sees her, parks, asks to speak with him, when defendant turns towards officer, she tells him to remove his hands from his pockets and come toward her car, defendant throws baggie of drugs under her car; held: defendant's testimony that he did not believe he was under arrest or would be arrested, and that officer was polite establishes no seizure, as a reasonable person would have believed he was free to go, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693, 696 (1992), State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), State v. Belanger, 36 Wn.App. 818, 820 (1984), cf.: State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), State v. Bailey, 154 Wn.App. 295 (2010); police may, in an otherwise permissive encounter, ask individual to make his hands visible; 2-1, I.

State v. Thorp, 71 Wn.App. 175 (1993)

Police stop truck to check if it had a "specialized forest products permit," discover warrant, find marijuana; held: forest products industry is not a pervasively regulated industry, which would permit a search without a warrant, United States v. Biswell, 32 L.Ed.2d 87 (1972), Colonnade Catering Corp. v. United States, 25 L.Ed.2d 60 (1970), Washington Massage Found. V. Nelson, 87 Wn.2d 948 (1976), see: State v. Miles, 160 Wn.2d 236, 250 ¶¶ 24-26 (2007), thus stop was invalid; II.

State v. Randall, 73 Wn.App. 225 (1994)

Radio broadcasts armed robbery with description of two robbers, ten minutes later officer observes two males fitting description six blocks from robbery, suspects leave area upon observing police, officer finds suspect, stops him, pats down, feels hard object, seizes it, finds pipe and drugs; held: where an investigatory stop is based on information given by another person, the stop is valid if under totality of circumstances officer had reasonable suspicion that defendant was engaged in criminal activity, rejecting Aguilar-Spinelli and State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432 (1984) in Terry stop situations, State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 904 (2009); since reported offense was a violent, armed crime, requiring an in-depth analysis of reliability of the information by the officer would increase threat to public safety, State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985), see: State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940, 944-5 (1975), cf.: State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); here, investigatory stop and frisk was reasonable; but see: State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992); I.

State v. Cole, 73 Wn.App. 844 (1994)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, observe passenger not wearing seat belt, ask passenger for identification, passenger lacks written identification but provides name and birthdate, police remove passenger from vehicle, patdown passenger, later observe passenger slough drugs while being detained outside of vehicle; held: passengers need only provide name and address and sign citation, RCW 46.61.020(3), need not carry identification, State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706, 709 (1992); removing passenger from car converted infraction investigation to an unwarranted Terry stop, as officer had no suspicions nor a reasonable belief that defendant was armed and presently dangerous, State v. Collins, 121 Wn.2d 168, 173 (1993), see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004), cf.: State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), thus evidence obtained as result of seizure is suppressed, State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), but see: Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), cf.: State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181 (1998) State v. Chelly, 94 Wn.App. 254 (1999), Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653 (2000), State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001), State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), State v. Horace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); III.

State v. Alcantara, 79 Wn.App. 362 (1995)

Police officer observes defendant intently looking at a plastic bag in his hand, when defendant sees officer he turns away and makes shoving motions into pants, officer stops defendant and pats him down, seizing bag with drugs; held: stop was made to search pocket where officer suspected he might find evidence, not a weapon, thus search exceeded scope of

Terry stop, distinguishing State v. Rodriguez-Torres, 77 Wn.App. 687 (1995), State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591 (1992); I.

State v. Graham, 80 Wn.App. 137 (1995)

Uniformed, off-duty police officers working as security guards who make a narcotics arrest are public servants engaging in their official powers and duties for purposes of obstructing a public officer, RCW 9A.76.020(3), see: State v. K.L.B., 180 Wn.2d 735 (2014); I.

State v. Mitchell, 80 Wn.App. 143 (1995)

Police observe suspect openly carrying a semiautomatic weapon walking down street in urban, residential area at night, order suspect to stop and raise hands, police draw weapons, suspect tosses gun into shrubs; held: "[o]penly carrying such a weapon at that time and place was sufficient to warrant reasonable suspicion" that suspect was committing crime of unlawful display of firearm, RCW 9.41.270, at 147; the fact that the officer did not give unlawful display as a reason for the stop does not invalidate the stop, as reasonable suspicion is determined by an objective standard, Scott v. United States, 56 L.Ed.2d 168 (1978); police had reasonable fear of danger, thus drawing weapon did not convert Terry stop into arrest, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733, 740 n. 2 (1984), State v. Friederick, 34 Wn.App. 537, 542 (1983); cf.: State v. Pines, 17 Wn.App.2d 483 (2021); I.

State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996)

Police observe vehicle lawfully parked, see flicker of light from within, approach and ask driver, "where is the pipe?", driver hands drug pipe to officer, is arrested for paraphernalia, searched, other drugs found, trial court finds insufficient evidence to establish articulable suspicion for Terry stop and suppresses; held: determination of whether a seizure has occurred is a mixed question of law and fact reviewed de novo, overruling, in part, State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20, 24 (1992); focus to determine whether seizure occurred is not merely whether suspect felt free to leave but whether he felt free to terminate the encounter and refuse to answer, i.e., was police conduct coercive, Florida v. Bostick, 115 L.Ed.2d 389 (1991), United States v. Drayton, 153 L.Ed.2d 242 (2002); here, stipulated facts trial failed to establish details of the encounter to determine if it was coercive, thus suppression reversed as burden of proving that a seizure occurred is on defendant, see: State v. Mennager, 114 Wn.2d 304, 310 (1990), State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706, 708 (1993), State v. Toney, 60 Wn.App. 804, 806 (1991), State v. Knox, 86 Wn.App. 831 (1997); 7-2.

Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997)

Following stop for traffic infraction, police may order driver and passengers to exit vehicle, Pennsylvania v. Mimms, 54 L.Ed.2d 331 (1977), but see: State v. Mendez,137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), cf.: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); 7-2.

State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268 (1997)

Police observe vehicle whose owner they know had a revoked license and warrants, driver gets out and walks away, ignores directives to stop, officer grabs driver, tells him he's under arrest, then determines that it is the owner, finds drugs; held: police may stop driver of vehicle based on well-founded suspicion arising from evidence that owner has revoked license, State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020), but see: State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), grabbing suspect and stating suspect is under arrest does not convert stop into a custodial arrest, as police may use reasonable force to detain a suspect pending investigation, State v. Belanger, 36 Wn.App. 818 (1984); III.

State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 271 (1997)

Driver stops for identification at gate of military base, sentry smells alcohol, calls for military security officer who administers field sobriety tests, arrests, advises of implied consent rights, driver refuses breath test, Department of Licensing revokes license, driver appeals; held: "smell of alcohol on a driver's breath is a specific fact that raises a substantial possibility that the driver is in violation of drunk driving laws," at 279, thus detention at gate was lawful; II.

State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 342 (1997)

Police observe defendant driving, know that his license was suspended from a records check seven days earlier, activate emergency lights, defendant exits, closes door and walks away, is ordered to return to vehicle, defendant refuses, is arrested, police confiscate keys, search car, find illegal gun; held: seven-day-old information about suspended license constitutes articulable facts to support a detention, State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), State v. Pressley, 64 Wn.App. 591, 595 (1992), State v. Quintero-Qunitero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991), State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 531-33 (2003); arrest for DWLS is proper, see: State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685 (1992); II.

State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997)

Police maintain list of persons who have been cited for driving with suspended license, observe defendant driving, knows she is on list, ran DOL check day before and confirmed license was suspended, arrests for DWLS; held: under United States and Washington constitutions, there is no right to privacy in DOL records, State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 641-45 (2011), at least where police were not on a fishing expedition, thus stop was valid, State v. Perea, 85 Wn.App. 339, 342-3 (1997),State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268, 270 (1997), Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Quintero-Quintero, 60 Wn.App. 902 (1991), State v. McKinney, 148 Wn.2d 20 (2002); III.

State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997)

Driver of a truck with a company name on it indicates with hand signals to officer that car in front weaved, officer observes no infractions but stops car, after tests arrests defendant for DUI; held: name written on side of truck is not qualitatively different from a named but unknown telephone caller, insufficient to establish reliability of citizen informer, Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833, 835 (1982), State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-49 (1980), State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015), cf.: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 51 Wn.App. 775 (1988), 2-1; III.

State v. Rife, 133 Wn.2d 140 (1997)

Following a traffic stop (here, jaywalking), police may not detain for a warrant check as RCW 46.61.020 authorizes detention only for time necessary to identify, check license status and issue citation; reverses State v. Rife, 81 Wn.App. 258 (1996); legislatively overruled, RCW 46.61.020; 7-2.

State v. Knox, 86 Wn.App. 831 (1997)

Trooper observes state ferry worker unsuccessfully attempt to awaken a driver blocking vehicles, observes sleeping driver awaken, eyes watery, bloodshot in apparent stupor, motions driver to roll window down, smells odor of alcohol, driver starts vehicle, then asks, "where am I?," trooper turns engine off, has defendant leave vehicle, after field tests arrests for DUI; held: defendant failed to prove that trooper's motioning to roll down window and initial questions were a seizure, reasonable person would have believed he was free to go or could refuse to speak, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347, 352-3 (1996); II.

State v. Seitz, 86 Wn.App. 865 (1997)

Police observe defendant-passenger in vehicle speaking with a man on a sidewalk, do not observe drugs, money or anything else change hands, stop vehicle for traffic infraction, ask passenger to get out, she removes her purse, police tell her not to leave, police find drugs in driver's purse, ask passenger if she has drugs, she says she does, police look in passenger's purse; held: valid arrest of driver does not justify search of a purse known to belong to passenger where purse is not in the car but rather is on passenger's person outside the car, State v. Nelson, 89 Wn.App. 179 (1997), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), distinguishing State v. Fladebo, 113 Wn.2d 388 (1989); police telling passenger she could not leave is a seizure, here without any basis; II.

State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997)

Officer provides mechanical assistance to two men, asks to see identification, observes large amount of cash, asks where the money came from, is told by one he earned it on a ranch but doesn't remember where, other says he sold a car, lacks bill of sale but still has title, officer calls in names, discovers one has suspended license, other has no driving record at all, takes money and locks it in patrol car, obtains permission to search, finds drugs; held: request for identification and questioning relating to identity is not a seizure, State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), Immigration & Naturalization Serv. v. Delgado, 80 L.Ed.2d 247 (1984), State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), cf.: State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001); once police placed money in patrol car, defendants were seized, State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, supra., State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019), cf.: State v. Coyne, 566 (2000); officer did not arrest driver for driving with suspended license, thus search was not incident to arrest, distinguishing State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685, 691 (1992), there was no hope of discovering information about the driving offense from the search, State v. Cantrell, 70 Wn.App. 340 (1993), aff'd on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 183 (1994), there was no articulable suspicion, State v. Tijeriña, 61 Wn.App. 626 (1991), consent occurred immediately after the seizure, thus not vitiated; reverses State v. Armenta, 83 Wn.App. 118 (1996); 6-3.

State v. Dane, 89 Wn.App. 226, 231-2 (1997)

Prison officials receive anonymous note that defendant-visitor may smuggle drugs for her prisoner-husband who associates with inmates known to have drug problems in prison, defendant is nervous when questioned; held: officials had well founded suspicion to detain and question defendant, cf.: Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), but because WAC §§ 275-80-905, -915, -925 require prison investigators to ask for consent, expel if consent refused and allow local police to handle searches, which were not followed here, drugs suppressed; II, 2-1.

State v. Laskowski, 88 Wn.App. 858 (1997)

Officer, dispatched to vehicle prowl, sees six suspects matching description, some hesitate to remove hands from pockets, defendant is nervous, officer knows one suspect has a weapon history, patdown of all suspects discloses shotgun shell, officer then pats down defendant's backpack, feels long hard object, opens pack and finds shotgun; held: any reasonable basis supporting an inference that the investigatee or a companion is armed will justify a protective search for weapons, at 860, State v. Wilkinson, 56 Wn.App. 812, 818 (1990); totality of suspicious circumstances supported officer's belief that respondent was armed and dangerous, protective frisk may extend beyond a person to his area of immediate control if there is reasonable suspicion that suspect is dangerous and may gain access to weapon, State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 579, 582 (1986), State v. Bray, 143 Wn.App. 148 (2008), cf.: State v. Martinez, 135 Wn.App. 174 (2006); I.

State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998)

Police observe suspect in high crime area, make a "social contact" and get name, run records check, find drug priors, shine spotlight on suspect who discards materials, detain suspect, find imitation controlled substance; held: shining flashlight on suspect did not constitute such a show of authority that a reasonable person would not believe himself free to leave, but see: State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011), cf.: State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), State v. Butler, 2 Wn.App. 2d 549, 560-61 (2018), spotlight did not illuminate anything suspect sought to keep private as he was in the open on a public street, spotlight did not reveal the contraband he had concealed on his person, thus suspect was not seized, State v. Bailey, 154 Wn.App. 295 (2010), State v. Smith, 154 Wn.App. 695 (2010), State v. Johnson, 156 Wn.App. 82, 90-92 (2010); Washington declines to adopt United States Supreme Court test that because suspect did not submit to authority, no seizure occurred, California v. Hodari D., 113 L.Ed.2d 690 (1991). Torres v. Madrid, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 989, 209 L.Ed.2d 190 (2021); 7-2.

State v. Thomas, 89 Wn.App. 774 (1998)

Due to jail conditions, police policy is to cite and release for reckless driving unless driver is gang affiliated; defendant is arrested based upon erroneous gang affiliation designation, drugs found; held: where police have probable cause to arrest, court should not look at the reason police made the arrest, as police had the authority to arrest, State v. Reding, 119 Wn.2d 685, 695 (1992), State v. O'Neill, 110 Wn.App. 604 (2002); III.

State v. Thomas, 91 Wn.App. 195 (1998)

Officer approaches defendant-driver and passenger, asks for and receives defendant's identification, passenger says she has none, officer saw passenger drive earlier, calls in identification while holding defendant's license, asks defendant if he has weapons, he says he has a knife, officer has defendant and passenger leave car, observes hundreds of dollars of change scattered in car plus newspaper vendor's key on defendant, passenger says she and defendant were stealing from vending machines, police arrest, impound, find drugs; held: retaining identification was an unlawful seizure, State v. Dudas, 52 Wn.App. 832, 834-35 (1988),

State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008), State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019), but see: State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000), State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008), but officer's observations of coins, key and passenger's admission were separate from defendant's seizure, established probable cause to arrest, evidence was thus untainted by initial unlawful seizure; II.

State v. O'Day*, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998)

Police arrest driver, passenger told to leave vehicle, passenger's purse placed on hood, passenger is not suspected of a crime but police testify that she could not leave remote area, police ask if they may search purse, she consents, police find drugs; held: since purse was not in vehicle, it was not subject to search incident to arrest, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Seitz, 86 Wn.App. 865 (1997), State v. Nelson, 89 Wn.App. 179 (1997), see also: Wyoming v. Houghton, 143 L.Ed.2d 408 (1999), State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005), State v. Flores, 188 Wn.App. 305 (2015), cf.: State v. Lee, 7 Wn.App.2d 692 (2019); III.

State v. Contreras*, 92 Wn.App. 307, 314-17 (1998)

Police receive report of possible vehicle prowl of white car by unidentified male at an address, arrive in five minutes, find defendant in white car in front of address, defendant appears high, refuses to speak or raise hands or get out of car, is removed from car, won't cooperate with patdown, is handcuffed, placed in patrol car, told if he does not say who he is or why he was in the car he can be arrested for obstructing, defendant gives false name, is arrested for obstructing, drugs found; held: prompt response to scene plus defendant's noncooperation other than refusing to answer justifies investigatory stop, State v. Little, 116 Wn.2d 488 (1991), State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509 (1991); while refusal to answer is not sufficient grounds to arrest for obstruction, disobeying orders to put hands up, exit car, provide true name is sufficient, State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490, 497-98 (1990), State v. Mendez, 88 Wn.App. 785, 792-93 (1997), Sunnyside v. Wendt, 51 Wn.App. 846, 851-52 (1988), State v. Turner, 103 Wn.App. 515, 525-26 (2000), cf.: State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008); II.

State v. Mendez*, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, order passenger to stay in vehicle, passenger runs away, is convicted of obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020(1); held: absent reasonable suspicion or danger to officer, police may not detain passenger by obliging him/her to remain in vehicle, CONST. Art. I, § 7, distinguishing Maryland v. Wilson, 137 L.Ed.2d 41 (1997), reversing State v. Mendez, 88 Wn.App. 785 (1997), Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653 (2000), see: State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), State v. Horace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004), State v. Brown, 154 Wn.2d 787 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Chelly*, 94 Wn.App. 254 (1999)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, passenger is not wearing seat belt, lacks identification and states he never had identification, officer testifies at suppression hearing that in his experience it is unusual for an adult to state he never had identification and that he was likely to give a false name to conceal his identity, probably due to warrants, passenger is removed from vehicle, gives false name, false birthdate, correct social security number, police run warrant information, discover warrants, arrest passenger, search vehicle, find drugs; held: police had specific articulable facts to detain to ascertain true identity, as one stopped for infraction (seat belt violation) must identify self, RCW 46.61.021, officer had reason to believe passenger would give a false name, thus detention was proper, State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001), distinguishing State v. Cole, 73 Wn.App. 844 (1994), State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992); I.

State v. Almanza-Guzman, 94 Wn.App. 563 (1999)

Defendant enters gun show, fails to disable weapon as required at entrance, speaks Spanish to dealers-undercover border patrol agents and shows them his weapon, outside show defendant's vehicle is stopped by agents based upon his language and their knowledge that Washington rarely issues gun permits to aliens; held: language is not a proper consideration to justify an investigative stop, mere fact that state rarely issues gun permits to aliens is insufficient to suspect one of criminal activity; I.

State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), disapproved, in part, State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, 493-97 (2017)

Officer approaches defendant erroneously believing a warrant is outstanding, tells defendant there's a warrant and asks if he "would be willing to stick around while I check on it," defendant fidgets, puts hands in pocket, is searched, arrested but not charged for obstructing, drugs found; held: police communicating belief that there are lawful grounds to detain is coercive, encounter is not consensual, as a reasonable person so informed would not feel free to leave, evidence must be suppressed, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 10-11 (1997), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000), distinguishing State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706, 710 (1993), State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693, 695 (1992), State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455-56 (1985); unlawful detention is by definition not part of lawful police duties, thus arrest for obstructing was improper, but see: State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995), State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490 (1990), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); 2-1, III.

Illinois v. Wardlow, 145 L.Ed.2d 570 (2000)

Defendant, in high drug area, flees upon seeing police who chase, stop, frisk, find gun; held: unprovoked flight in high drug area is sufficiently indicative of wrongdoing to justify detention, District of Columbia v. Wesby, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 577, 199 L.Ed.2d 453 (2018), distinguishing Florida v. Royer, 75 L.Ed.2d 229 (1983); 5-4.

Florida v. J.L., 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000)

Anonymous call to police reports young black male at a bus stop wearing plaid shirt carrying a gun, police respond to specific bus stop, see black male in plaid shirt, frisk, find gun; held: anonymous tip that a person is carrying a gun, without more, is insufficient to justify a stop and frisk, distinguishing Alabama v. White, 110 L.Ed.2d 301 (1990), cf.: State v. Franklin, 41 Wn.App. 409 (1985), Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014), State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566 (2000)

Police are given a coat found by a citizen, defendants in car contact officer, one says that the coat is his, officer states he needs identification of both driver and passenger, officer testifies he was satisfied with driver's identification and ownership of coat, finds warrant for passenger, while retaining coat and driver's identification asks permission to search trunk which is granted, finds drugs; held: retaining coat and license was a seizure without authority, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70 (1988), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217 (1999), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2008), State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019), cf.: State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000), community caretaking function was complete when police were satisfied of ownership, State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509, 513 (1990), consent was tainted by the seizure, State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996); III.

State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000)

Two officers approach defendant, ask to see identification, defendant hands it to an officer who hands it to the other officer who writes down information and returns it to defendant after 30 seconds, discover warrant, arrest, find drugs; held: handing license to other officer would not have led a reasonable person to believe that he was not free to leave, thus initial consensual encounter did not ripen into unlawful detention, State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 10-11 (1997), State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), distinguishing State v. Thomas, 91 Wn.App. 195, 200-01 (1998), State v. Dudas, 52 Wn.App. 832, 834 (1988), see: State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2008), but see: State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019); I.

Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653 (2000)

Police stop car for infraction, observe passenger manipulating an article of clothing, order passenger to open window, which he refuses, pull passenger from car who then refuses to cooperate with search, is convicted of obstructing; held: whether it is reasonable to order a passenger to get out or remain in a car depends upon relative numbers of officers vs. vehicle occupants, behavior of occupants, time and place of stop, traffic at scene, officer's familiarity with occupants, State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208, 220-21 (1999); here, passenger's behavior justified ordering him out of car, State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001), State v. Horace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001); III.

State v. Cormier, 100 Wn.App. 457 (2000)

Police, serving a warrant, observe defendant at night ride by on bicycle several times, stop and stare, police approach, ask him to remove hands from pockets, defendant refuses, is told he will be arrested for obstructing, officers try to take him in custody, defendant strikes police who search and find drugs; held: police had no reasonable belief that defendant was armed, thus had no basis to stop; once defendant assaulted the officer, police had probable cause to arrest, State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460,, 50 A.L.R.5 921 (1995) State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1, 21-22 (1997), State v. McKinlay, 87 Wn.App. 394, 398-99 (1997), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017), and may search incident to that arrest, irrespective of the legality of the initial encounter; 2-1, III.

State v. Kinzy, 141 Wn.2d 373 (2000)

Police observe girl whom they believe to be 11-13 years old in high crime area late at night with adults known to be associated with drugs, hail her, she walks away, restrain her, observe drugs; held: community caretaking function may not be used as a pretext for a criminal investigation; balancing a citizen's privacy interest in freedom from police intrusion against public interest in having police perform caretaking, privacy must prevail, see: State v. Lawson, 135 Wn.App. 430 (2006), State v. Boisselle, 194 Wn.2d (2019), police may conduct noncriminal investigation as long as it is necessary and strictly relevant to performance of caretaking function; 5-4.

State v. Lemus, 103 Wn.App. 94, 101 (2000)

Following lawful traffic stop, police observation of suspected cocaine residue on driver's pants (white powder) plus odor of intoxicants is sufficient to detain, State v. Gonzales, 46 Wn.App. 388, 394-95 (1986); III.

City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000)

Police set up drug roadblock, stop a predetermined number of vehicles, ask for identification, look for signs of impairment, conduct open-view examination of cars, drug dog walks around vehicles, search if particularized suspicion develops; held: because primary purpose of stop is to detect evidence of ordinary criminal wrongdoing, as opposed to border, United States v. Martinez-Fuerte, 49 L.Ed.2d 1116 (1976), or sobriety checkpoints, Michigan Dept. of State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), drug roadblock violates Fourth Amendment, see: Delaware v. Prouse, 59 L.Ed.2d 660 (1979), Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Cook, 104 Wn.App. 186 (2001)

During traffic stop, officer asks passenger for name, passenger gives a name which officer knows is wrong, demands identification, passenger opens cigarette box where he keeps his license, drugs fall out; held: an officer's request for passenger's identification is "unlikely to constitute a Fourth Amendment seizure," State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1997), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), but see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), officer placing himself outside the passenger door so passenger couldn't leave is not a seizure where passenger never testifies that he wanted to leave, thus his freedom of movement was not restrained, but see: State v. Byrd, 110 Wn.App. 259 (2002), officer was justified in demanding identification when passenger lied about his identity, State v. Chelly, 94 Wn.App. 254, 261 (1999), cf.: State v. Barwick, 66 Wn.App. 706 (1992); II.

State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2008)

Police are maintaining status quo on a house while awaiting a warrant, car drives up, defendant is passenger, defendant exits, is told to stop, police request identification, defendant complies, officer uses hand-held radio to call, discovers warrant, arrests defendant, finds drugs; held: while police may stop and question persons approaching a place to be searched to determine their business at the location and to prevent them from interfering with the search, State v. Melin, 27 Wn.App. 589, 592 (1980), there is no authority allowing police to question persons approaching a scene where police have not yet obtained a warrant; even with a warrant, such a stop is not a license to detain and frisk all who approach, absent a reasonable articulable suspicion; while the initial request for identification was not a detention, State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1 (1997), State v. Aranguren, 42 Wn.App. 452, 455 (1985), State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575, 576 (2000), see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004), retaining identification during a warrants' check is a seizure, State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566, 572 (2000), State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), but see: State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010); here, defendant complied with all police requests, there was no basis to suspect him, thus drugs suppressed; 2-1, II.

State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001)

Officer runs license check, finds female owner's license is suspended, stops vehicle, discovers driver is male, asks for license, driver states his license is suspended, is arrested, searched, drugs found; held: while police may stop a vehicle when they learn owner's privilege to drive is suspended, RCW 46.20.349, Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), cf.: State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008), once police determine that driver is not the owner, they may not, absent more, continue to detain, State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); III.

State v. Reynolds, 144 Wn.2d 282 (2001)

Lone officer lawfully stops vehicle, observes coat in vehicle, lawfully arrests driver, passenger leaves car, officer asks passenger to stay in car, when officer returns to suspect's car and observes coat stuffed underneath car, searches it, finds drugs; held: police may order passenger into or out of vehicle only if officer has legitimate safety concerns, State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), factors include (1) number of officers vs. number of occupants; (2) time of day, (3) location of stop, (4) traffic at scene, (5) officer knowledge of occupants, and (6) whether officer arrested driver, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486 (1999), see: State v. Horace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), see: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); here, passenger abandoned coat without a causal nexus to alleged unlawful conduct by police, thus seizure of drugs from coat was lawful, cf.: State v. Reichenbach, 153 Wn.2d 126 (2004); 9-0.

State v. O'Cain, 108 Wn.App. 542 (2001)

Experienced narcotics officer observing two vehicles parked side-by-side in the middle of the day in a 7-11 parking lot, occupants conversing, none appear to be shopping has a hunch but not a well-founded suspicion that a narcotics transaction had occurred, Terry v. Ohio, 20 L.Ed.2d 889 (1968); I.

United States v. Arvizu, 151 L.Ed.2d 740 (2002)

In determining whether a police officer has a particularized and objective basis for suspecting legal wrongdoing, court should look to totality of the circumstances and should not reject factors merely because they have, by themselves, an innocent explanation; 9-0.

State v. Duncan, 146 Wn.2d 166 (2002)

Police observe defendant in a park next to open alcohol container, possession of an open container is a civil infraction (although police apparently believed it was a crime, at 173), pat him down, find contraband; held: police may not patdown a suspect for a non-criminal infraction, Terry v. Ohio is inapplicable for a non-traffic infraction, State v. Day, 161 Wn.2d 889

(2007); because defendant did not actually possess the container, the infraction did not occur in the presence of the officer, so police had no basis to stop defendant, RCW 7.80.050(2); 9-0.

State v. Byrd, 110 Wn.App. 259 (2002)

Police observe vehicle with expired tabs, observe trip permit in back window, pull over car to see if permit is valid, after stop officer observes equipment violation and that passenger is not wearing seat belt, discovers that permit is valid, finds warrant for passenger, arrests, searches, finds drugs; held: passenger has standing to challenge traffic stop, stopping vehicle to verify validity of trip permit is impermissible, equipment violation cannot justify stop since it was seen after the stop; I.

State v. McKinney, 148 Wn.2d 20 (2002)

In consolidated cases, police run license plate number in DOL database, discover that (1) driver's license is suspended, (2) a no-contact order exists and passenger is protected party, (3) driver has a warrant, all are arrested; held: drivers have no protected privacy interest in DOL driver's record pursuant to Fourth Amendment reasonable expectation of privacy analysis nor art. I, § 7 expectation of privacy which a citizen should be entitled to hold, State v. Myrick, 102 Wn.2d 506, State v. McCready, 123 Wn.2d 260, 270 (1994), State v. Harlow, 85 Wn.App. 557 (1997), State v. Hathaway, 161 Wn.App. 634, 641-45 (2011), distinguishing State v. Maxfield; affirms State v. Martin, 106 Wn.App. 850 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Wayman-Burks, 114 Wn.App. 109 (2002)

"Severely cracked windshield" justifies traffic stop, RCW 46.37.010(1); III.

State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003)

Officer observes car in parking lot of recently burglarized business, approaches, defendant says he drove there until his car broke, officer asks for identification, driver responds his license is suspended, officer asks defendant to step out of car, observes "cook spoon" on floor, asks repeatedly for consent to search which is eventually granted, police find drugs; held: approaching and asking for identification is not a seizure, State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Armenta, 134 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1997), State v. Cerillo, 122 Wn.App. 341 (2004), State v. Afana, 147 Wn.App. 843 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 169 (2010), effectively overruling State v. Markgraf, 59 Wn.App. 509 (1990); when asking defendant to step outside, officer had probable cause to arrest for driving while license suspended, thus defendant was seized at that point; observation of cook spoon meets plain view test; pursuant to CONST. art. I, § 7, a custodial arrest is a prerequisite to a search incident to arrest, because defendant was not arrested, drugs must be suppressed, overruling State v. Brooks, 57 Wn.2d 422 (1960), State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 127, 138 (1977), effectively overruling, in part, State v. Garcia, 35 Wn.App. 174 (1983), State v. McIntosh, 42 Wn.App. 573 (1986), State v. Brantigan, 59 Wn.App. 481 (1990), State v. Harrell, 83 Wn.App. 393 (1996); reverses State v. O'Neill, 104 Wn.App. 850 (2001); 5-4.

United States v. Drayton, 153 L.Ed.2d 242 (2002)

Police board bus, state they are looking for drugs, ask defendant "mind if I check you?," defendant agrees, patdown reveals drugs; held: police are not obliged to advise bus passengers of their right to refuse search as they were not seized, were free to leave, nothing said would suggest to a reasonable person that he was barred from leaving or refusing, Florida v. Bostick, 115 L.Ed.2d 389 (1991), but cf.: State v. Rankin, 151 Wn.2d 689 (2004); 6-3.

Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004)

A week after hit-an-run fatality, police set up checkpoint at place of collision, stop all cars for 10-15 seconds to ask drivers if they saw anything, hand out flyer, officer smells alcohol on defendant's breath, detain, perform tests, arrest; held: purpose of stop was not to determine if occupants were committing a crime, distinguishing City of Indianapolis v. Edmond, 148 L.Ed.2d 333 (2000), "special law enforcement concerns will sometimes justify highway stops without individualized suspicion," at 851, Michigan Dept. of State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), stops involved minimal intrusion and thus provided "little reason for anxiety or alarm," at 853, detention was thus valid under Fourth Amendment, State v. Silvernail, 25 Wn.App. 185 (1980), overruled, in part, on other grounds, State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982), but see: State v. Marchand, 104 Wn.2d 434 (1985); 6-3.

State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005)

Police randomly run defendant's plate, find that owner's license was suspended, stop vehicle, arrest driver-owner; held: police may stop a vehicle when they learn owner's privilege to drive is suspended, RCW 46.20.349, Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), cf.: State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81, 85 (2008), need not compare a description of the registered owner to the driver before proceeding, distinguishing State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001); III.

State v. Carlson, 130 Wn.App. 589 (2005)

Two "rough dressed, unkempt and dirty" men enter rural store, one purchases muriatic acid, the other purchases denatured alcohol, store manager reports to police the purchase, as his training taught him that when these items are mixed, along with others, one can manufacture methamphetamine, police stop defendants' car, discover pseudoephedrine, defendants are convicted of possession of pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture meth; held: while entering a store with a companion, splitting up and buying pseudoephedrine products may be enough for an investigative stop, here the activity was so innocuous, insufficient to support a Terry stop, cf.: State v. Keller-Deen, 137 Wn.App. 396 (2007); 2-1, III.

State v. Keller-Deen, 137 Wn.App. 396 (2007)

Defendant and cohort are seen making separate purchases of two meth precursor item, store detective "believed" cohort made previous precursor purchases, defendant and cohort meet in parking lot, scan parking lot, police recognize cohort from other purchases, car registered to defendant as being associated with other precursor purchases, police stop car, handcuff defendant-passenger, arrest driver for warrants, search, find drugs; held: facts support reasonable suspicion to conduct Terry stop, State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509 (1991), State v. Samsel, 39 Wn.App. 564, 570 (1985), see: State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445 (1991), distinguishing State v. Carlson, 130 Wn.App. 589, 593 (2005); III.

State v. Bee Xiong, 137 Wn.App. 720 (2007)

Police, serving a felony warrant on Kheng Xiong stop defendant who states, accurately, that he is the brother of the wanted person, lacks identification, defendant is handcuffed, police notice a hard object in pocket, defendant pulls away and states he does not wish to be searched, police pat him down, find pipe, search incident to arrest, find drugs; held: similarity of appearance between defendant and brother plus time to clarify initial identification plus fact that defendant was in wanted person's home plus bulge in pocket plus reaction when police tried to touch it justify initial search which led to pipe; 2-1, III.

State v. Day, 161 Wn.2d 889 (2007)

Police observe car illegally parked, approach and see defendant in driver's seat, holster on floor, defendant admits to a gun in car, police remove defendant, frisk, cuff, find gun in car, discover gun is stolen, search further and find drugs; held: where police merely suspect a civil infraction, there is no ground for a Terry stop and no grounds to frisk, State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638 (1980), State v. Duncan, 146 Wn.2d 166 (2002); reverses State v. Day, 130 Wn.App. 622 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Bee Xiong, 164 Wn.2d 506 (2008)

Police, serving a warrant on Kheng Xiong at his residence, defendant drives up, officer thinks he is Kheng Xiong, defendant is immediately handcuffed, frisked, tells police he is Bee Xiong, brother of Kheng Xiong, officer notices a bulge, touches the bulge, defendant pulls away and says he doesn't wish to be searched, police squeeze bulge, decide it is a "potential weapon," pull out drug pipe with drugs; held: because no specific facts support a reasonable belief that defendant was armed and presently dangerous, as defendant was handcuffed and made no suspicious movements, the frisk was unlawful, see: State v. Setterstrom, 163 Wn.2d 621 (2008), State v. Smith, 145 Wn.App. 268 (2008), reversing State v. Bee Xiong, 137 Wn.App. 720 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Bray, 143 Wn.App. 148 (2008)

Police observe defendant driving in fenced storage unit compound at 2:30 a.m., lights off, looking at doors of units, aware that defendant had been stopped two earlier times in same area, aware that burglaries had occurred nearby, detain defendant for 30 minutes, discovery wire cutters, twine, wire, miner's lamp, gloves, camouflage clothing, unit door broken, search defendant's van, find fruits of burglaries; held: Terry stop was valid as totality of circumstances establish particularized suspicion, State v. Laskowski, 88 Wn.App. 858 (1997), distinguishing State v. Martinez, 135 Wn.App. 174 (2006); length of investigation and detention was reasonably related in scope to the circumstances, defendant's explanation did nothing to dispel officers' suspicions, scope and duration of stop bay be extended if the investigation confirms police suspicions, State v. Williams, 102 Wn.2d 733, 738 (1984); III.

State v. Gatewood, 163 Wn.2d 534 (2008)

Defendant, sitting in bus shelter, widens eyes when he sees police, twists like he was trying to hide something, leaves bus shelter and jaywalks, police order him to stop, defendant continues walking, sloughs gun, police find drugs at bus shelter; held: insufficient for a Terry stop, all evidence suppressed, State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013), State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Rowell, 144 Wn.App .453 (2008)

Within minutes of early-morning shots fired call, officer observes defendant riding a bicycle fast in area of call, no others present, stopped by officer, defendant is nervous and fidgety, asked for identification, warrant discovered, arrested, drugs found; held: apparent flight was reasonably suspicious to justify a stop, State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 645 (2005), but see: State v. Bruton, 66 Wn.2d 111, 112 (1965), warrant check during an investigatory stop is an accepted, routine police procedure, State v. Madrigal, 65 Wn.App. 279, 283 (1992); 2-1, III.

State v. Mitchell, 145 Wn.App. 1 (2008)

Defendant reports that he was robbed, police ask him to remain at scene during the investigation, observe marijuana in his car, drug dog signals drugs in car, police search and find cocaine; held: brief detention of a potential witness to a crime is permitted by the Fourth Amendment, cf.: Florida v. Jardines, 569 U.S. 1, 185 L.Ed.2d 495 (2013); I.

State v. Vanderpool, 145 Wn.App. 81 (2008)

Police observe defendant drive, park, begin walking from car, ask for identification, defendant gives officer identification card, officer runs license check, finds license suspended, arrest, search, find drugs; held: asking for identification and running license check is not a seizure, State v. Dudas, 52 Wn.App. 832 (1988), State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575 (2000), but see: State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70 (1988), State v. Thomas, 91 Wn.App. 195 (1998), State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001); III.

State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008)

Officers observe car parked in open convenience store lot, park behind car, approach, ask for identification, driver asks to leave, police say no, run passenger's name, find warrant, search, find contraband; held: immobilizing car by blocking it and stating driver can't leave amounts to a seizure without reasonable articulable suspicion, State v. Thomas, 91 Wn.App. 195, 200-02 (1998), State v. Dudas, 52 Wn.App. 832, 834 (1988), State v. O'Day, 91 Wn.App. 244, 252 (1998), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn.App.2d (2019), thus contraband suppressed; III.

State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008)

Police observe pedestrian approached by a car, speak to occupants and walk away looking frightened, officer approaches woman who identifies herself and says occupants of car asked her to smoke crack with them, showing her bag of crack and pipe, police stop car, order passenger to exit, pipe falls from his person, arrest for drug parephernalia, search, find drugs; held: Aguilar-Spinelli test is inapplicable to a Terry stop, distinguishing State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432 (1984), totality of circumstances here was sufficient for police to stop car; I.

State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894 (2009)

In exchange for police not pursuing unrelated criminal charges, informant who had previously provided accurate information states that he had purchased drugs from defendant, describes defendant, his home and his truck, arranges to buy drugs, police follow defendant's truck toward place where he was to meet informant, stop him for speeding even though police acknowledge he was not speeding, smell marijuana, remove defendant from vehicle, drug dog reacts positively, defendant admits to drugs in car, police search and find drugs, trial court suppresses; held: an informant's track record of prior drug buys meets Aguilar/Spinelli test, State v. Fisher, 96 Wn.2d 962, 964 (1982), a higher standard than the totality of the circumstances required for a Terry stop, State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 432, 435-36 (1984), State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912, 916 (2008), State v. Randall, 73 Wn.App. 225, 228-29 (1994), thus stop here was valid, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986); informant's tips that are accurate but do not lead to arrests are sufficient, State v. Fisher, supra., at 965; determination that reasonable suspicion exists need not rule out the possibility of innocent conduct, United States v. Arvizu, 151 L.Ed.2d 740, 751-52 (2002); informant's motive to avoid prosecution is sufficient to support reliability, State v. Bean, 89 Wn.2d 468, 471 (1978), State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991), State v. Lopez, 70 Wn.App. 259 (1993), State v. Ollivier, 161 Wn.App. 307 (2011), 178 Wn.2d 813, 851 (2013), but see: State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021); the fact that defendant is subjected to a Terry stop by numerous police vehicles does not convert the stop to a custodial arrest, see: Arizona v. Johnson, 172 L.Ed.2d 694 (2009); a detaining officer may ask "a moderate number of questions during a Terry stop to … confirm or dispel the officer's suspicions without rendering the suspect 'in custody' for the purposes of Miranda," State v. Heritage, 152 Wn.2d 210, 218 (2004); I.

State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009)

Officer observes defendant walking, approaches, asks to talk, defendant says he's coming from his sister's house, doesn't know address, bulges in pockets, fidgety, hands in pocket, trooper approaches, officer asks to pat defendant down, telling him he is not under arrest, defendant agrees, officer feels hard cylinder, asks what it is, defendant responds it's his meth pipe, defendant is arrested, drugs found; held: while initial contact was not a seizure, State v. Bailey, 154 Wn.App. 295 (2010), sudden arrival of second officer, request to remove hands from pockets, request to frisk would all lead a reasonable person to feel he was not free to leave, State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012), State v. Butler, 2 Wn.App. 2d 549, 560-61 (2018), State v. Butler, 2 Wn.App. 2d 549, 560-61 (2018), cf.: State v. Smith, 154 Wn.App. 695 (2010), thus consent to search was obtained through exploitation of a prior illegal seizure requiring suppression; reverses State v. Harrington 144 Wn.App. 558 (2008), see: State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), United States v. Mendenhall, 64 L.Ed.2d 497 (1980), State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), cf.: State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706, 712 (1993), State v. Johnson, 156 Wn.App. 82, 90-92 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57 (2010)

Defendant visits a house identified as a drug house for two minutes early in the morning, drives off, is stopped by police, license suspended, searched, drugs found; held: police may not seize a person who visits a suspected drug house merely because the person was there at 3:20 a.m., State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693 (1992), State v. Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011), State v. Fuentes, 183 Wn.2d 149 (2015), State v. Weyand, 188 Wn.2d 804 (2017), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), reversing State v. Doughty, 148 Wn.App. 585 (2009); 6-3.

State v. Bailey, 154 Wn.App. 295 (2010)

Officer sees defendant walking on deserted street, asks if he "had a minute," defendant walks toward officer who asks where he's going, says he is going to a friend's, is asked for identification, defendant gives identification and says he has a warrant, officer verifies warrant, arrests, finds drugs; held: approach and request for identification "in the course of a casual conversation" is a social contact not a seizure, degree of intrusion is less than State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), distinguishing State v. Gleason, 70 Wn.App. 13 (1993) where tone of request plus presence of two officers created more of an "environment of investigation," see: State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Johnson, 156 Wn.App. 82,

90-92 (2010), State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011), cf.: State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012); III.

State v. Smith, 154 Wn.App. 695 (2010)

Police, with DOC officers, check on client in motel, ask visiting defendant and another to step outside, defendant leaves, other man does not, officer outside room asks for name, finds no warrants but eye color is different than description in computer, asks for identification, defendant hands a card with same eye color discrepancy, asks to look in wallet, finds drugs; held: defendant was not directed to remain in the area outside the motel room, officer's conduct was not threatening although other armed officers were present, request for identification is not a seizure, State v. Ellwood, 52 Wn.App. 70, 73 (1988), State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), holding identification in his presence is not a seizure, see State v. Hansen, 99 Wn.App. 575, 578-89 (2000); while "progressive intrusion" may amount to a seizure, State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656, 669 (2009), here defendant was not asked about illegal activity, there was no attempt to control his actions or frisk him, thus defendant was not seized before consenting to search of wallet; II.

State v. Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011)

Officer, in high prostitution area, observes defendant-driver talking to a female pedestrian, she gets in car, officer stops car, asks for identification, finds warrant, searches, finds drugs; held: investigatory stop must be justified at its inception, State v. Gatewood, 163 Wn.2d 534, 539 (2008), here "incomplete observations," lacking money change hands or overheard conversations or knowledge that either were involved in prostitution establish insufficient basis for Terry stop, State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57 (2010), State v. Gleason, 70 Wn.App. 13 (1983), State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693 (1992), State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013), State v. Fuentes, 183 Wn.2d 149 (2015), State v. Weyand, 188 Wn.2d 804 (2017), State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019, State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019); 2-1, III.

State v. Gantt, 163 Wn.App. 133 (2011)

Police observe van stopped, later see it again in front of a driveway with man walking towards residence, officer activates emergency lights and pull up behind van, after further investigation observe through van window property that had been stolen that night in a burglary, arrest, search; held: while illumination by a spotlight is not a sufficient show of authority, State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498 (1998), use of emergency lights constitutes a display of authority such that a reasonable person would believe he was seized, State v. DeArman, 54 Wn.App. 621 (1989), State v. Stroud, 30 Wn.App. 392, 396 (1981), more authority than a social contact, distinguishing State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012); 2-1, III.

State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 197-99 (2012)

Police stop vehicle for no headlights after dark, smell marijuana, search, find drugs, at hearing officer testifies it was dark, cold and icy, stop occurred 24 minutes after sunset, RCW 46.37.020 requires lights 30 minutes after sunset; held: officer reasonably believed an infraction was committed, thus Terry stop was valid, cf.: State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Young, 167 Wn.App. 922 (2012)

Officer asks defendant her name because her actions in a market were suspicious, defendant gives correct name, local warrant check is clear, defendant leaves, then two officers approach defendant with back against a wall at 45-degree angles from her, ask for social security number, open her bag to show she had not shoplifted, she walks away, police do a statewide warrant check, discover warrant, arrest, find drugs; held: police lacked a reason to suspect defendant was or would engage in criminal wrongdoing, any reasonable person in defendant's position, with back to a wall and police on either side would not feel free to leave without answering questions; II.

State v. Ibarra Guevara, 172 Wn.App. 184 (2012)

School resource officer observes students walking towards an area where students smoke marijuana five minutes before classes start, follows in patrol car, tops behind them, walks toward them, ask what they are doing, tells them he believes they are going to use drugs, ask to see contents of pockets, defendant empties pockets, officer observes baggie, asks what's in it, defendant says drugs, trial court concludes the stop was a "social contact;" held: request to search after voicing suspicion of drug suspicion is inconsistent with a social contact, defendant "would hardly have felt free to simply walk away," State v. Soto-Garcia, 68 Wn.App. 20 (1992), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347 (1996), State v. Harrington, 167 Wn.2d 656 (2009), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), cf.: State v. Nettles, 70 Wn.App. 706 (1993); III.

Bailey v. United States, 568 U.S. 186, 185 L.Ed.2d 19 (2013)

Police, about to serve a search warrant, observe defendant, meeting description of suspect, leave residence to be searched, follow him for a mile, detain him, patdown, find evidence; held: while police may detain individuals incident to a search warrant, Michigan v. Summers, 452 U.S. 692, 69 L.Ed.2d 340 (1981), once an individual has left the immediate vicinity of premises to be searched, detention must be justified by some other rationale; 6-3.

State v. Moreno, 173 Wn.App. 479 (2013)

Radio reports shots fired, police arrive at place reported, defendant's car is seen a block away, officer knew shots came in a specific gang neighborhood, driver is wearing shirt of rival gang, car "hurriedly leaving the alley," is sufficient for Terry stop; III.

State v. Bonds, 174 Wn.App. 553 (2013)

Police run random license plate check, learn from DOL that car had been sold and owner failed to change title within 45 days, RCW 46.12.101(6) (2008), a continuing misdemeanor offense, officer testifies he believed that he recognized passenger who he believed had a DOC warrant, stop car, learn that new owner had properly transferred title but discover no contact order between passenger and driver, defendant convicted of NCO violation; held: stop of the car for the transfer title violation was valid to investigate whether driver was registered owner, officer's belief that passenger had a warrant established a sufficient probability, enough to perform a traffic stop, officer's belief was based upon more than a hunch; neither reasons for the stop were pretextual; II.

Navarette v. California, 572 U.S. 393, 188 L.Ed.2d 680 (2014)

Anonymous citizen calls 911, reports a specific vehicle ran her off the road, provides license plate, police stop the vehicle, smell marijuana, search, find drugs; held: while an anonymous tip alone cannot justify an investigative stop, Florida v. J.L., 529 U.S. 266, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), caller's detailed eyewitness account establishes basis of knowledge, relaying a startling event supports veracity as does police corroborating that the vehicle was where the caller predicted, Alabama v. White, 496 U.S. 325, 110 L.Ed.2d 310 (1990), use of 911 supports veracity as it is traceable to the caller, thus stop was proper, see: State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015), but see: State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014); 5-4.

Heien v. North Carolina, 574 U.S. 54, 135 S.Ct. 530, 190 L.Ed.2d 475 (2014)
Defendant is driving with one burnt out brake light, sheriff asks to search car, finds drugs, state law does not require two brake lights; held: a reasonable mistake of law by a police officer (here, there was some ambiguity and inconsistency in the equipment code, see: Kagan, J., concurring) may constitutionally establish reasonable suspicion to stop a car, see also: Michigan v. DeFillippo, 443 U.S. 31, 61 L.Ed.2d 343 (1979), but see: State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); 8-1.

State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013)
Anonymous tip reports man with a gun, police observe defendant matching description, draw weapons, order defendant to ground, defendant does not comply, police shoot him and recover handgun, defendant is convicted of felon in possession; held: an informant's tip lacking reliability is not sufficient to justify an investigatory stop, Florida v. J.L., 529 U.S. 266, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Vandover, 63 Wn.App. 754 (1992); while an accurate description of a suspect's location and appearance is reliable, it must also be reliable in its assertion of illegality, Alabama v. White, 496 U.S. 325, 331-32, 110 L.Ed.2d 301 (1990), State v. Gatewood, 163 Wn.2d 534 (2008), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn. App. 2d 641 (2019); presence of a firearm in public alone is insufficient for an investigatory stop, Florida v. J.L., supra. at 272, State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019); I.

State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014)
Officer runs defendant's license plate, enters wrong letter, computer shows vehicle stolen, stops car, before approaching runs correct plate and discovers it was not stolen, approaches to tell her she can go but observes her toss item behind seat, uses flashlight, sees drugs; held: while police may reasonably but erroneously believe a violation occurred based upon objective facts, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177 (2012), and may reasonably rely on incorrect information provided by third parties, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64 (2004), they may not reasonably rely on their own mistaken assessment of material facts, State v. Mance, 82 Wn.App. 539 (1996), State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), to justify an investigation; here, after realizing his error officer ordered driver to remain in car, held her for several seconds while he checked the proper number, never turned off overhead lights, used flashlight to look in vehicle, all of which were improper; 2-1, III.

State v. Fuentes, 183 Wn.2d 149 (2015)
Two cases consolidated on appeal: State v. Sandoz: police observing a high drug crime apartment building for which they had a trespass agreement and know residents and their vehicles, see defendant who appears surprised, pale and shaking, police do not recognize vehicle, ask him "if he would mind stepping out of the vehicle," suspect admits he has a crack pipe, hands it to officer, is arrested for paraphernalia, during search police find drugs; held: startled reaction to police does not amount to a reasonable suspicion, State v. Gatewood, 163 Wn.2d 534, 540 (2008), nor does suspect being pale and shaking, unknown vehicle may justify a contact but is not connected with anything observed about defendant, trespass agreement does not mean a person is not an invited guest, State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57 (2010), State v. Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011), totality of circumstances do not justify a Terry stop, State v. Weyand, 188 Wn.2d 804 (2017); State v. Fuentes: police have made controlled buys from an apartment, observe high foot traffic at apartment, see suspect enter apartment, return to car, get a bag and returns to apartment, then leaves with same bag with less content, drives off, police stop vehicle, advise, defendant admits that she delivered drugs; held: establishes a reasonable suspicion for Terry stop, cf.: State v. Weyand, supra., distinguishing State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693 (1992), State v. Doughty, supra.; 5-4.

State v. Z.U.E., 183 Wn.2d 610 (2015)

911 caller states she observed a woman approximately 17 years old with a gun; held: an informant's report can justify an investigative stop when (1) the information available to the officer showed that the informant was reliable, or (2) when officer's observations corroborate either criminal activity or that informant's report was obtained in a reliable fashion, State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-48 (1980), State v. Lesnick, 84 Wn.2d 940, 944 (1975); named but otherwise unknown informant is not presumed reliable, State v. Sieler, supra. at 48, State v. Hopkins, 128 Wn.App. 855, 858-89 (2005), State v. Morrell, 16 Wn.App.2d 695 (2021, but see: State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015); multiple 911 callers providing similar information is a factor; informant's tip must contain objective facts of criminal activity to justify a detention, State v. Hopkins, supra. at 862-64; while possession of a gun by a minor is a crime, here there was not factual basis for the estimate of the age; affirms State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Howerton, 187 Wn.App. 357 (2015)

Citizen calls 911, identifies herself, says she witnessed car prowl by "black male, average build, 5'7", baggy black leather jacket and baggy pants," officer arrives six minutes later, observed man meeting description walking in same directly described by citizen who turns and walks away upon seeing officer, stops, cuffs, 911 caller says it's the car prowler; held: known citizen informants are presumptively reliable, State v. Gaddy, 152 Wn.2d 64, 73 (2004), but see: State v. Z.U.E., 178 Wn.App. 769 (2014), State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-48 (1980); eyewitness contemporaneously reporting "objective facts that indicated criminal rather than legal activity" reinforces reliability, at 368-69; call from a personal cell phone rather than a pay phone, see: State v. Saggers, 182 Wn.App. 832 (2014), enhances reliability; detailed observations of officer confirming 911 tip regarding description, direction of travel, "flight" are factors that support well-founded suspicion, State v. Marcum, 149 Wn.App. 894, 907-08 (2009); I.

State v. Flores, 186 Wn.2d 506 (2016)

Police receive anonymous report that a named person assaulted another with a gun, officer observes the suspect walking with defendant, order both down on their knees, both comply, after suspect is cuffed police order defendant to walk backwards towards them, defendant complies and states he has a gun, police seize gun, defendant is charged with felon in possession; held: police had reason to seize defendant to secure scene and assure defendant did not interfere with arrest of the suspect, State v. Parker, 139 Wn.2d 486, 497 (1999), State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), abrogated, on other grounds, Brendlin v. California, 551 U.S. 249, 168 L.Ed.2d 132 (2007), State v. Horrace, 144 Wn.2d 386 (2001), an objective rationale existed to seize the non-arrested defendant to secure the scene as officer was alone at first, recognized suspect as one who had held firearms, defendant and suspect were together and remained together, defendant volunteered that he had a gun and thus police had reasonable suspicion to further detain and seize the gun, State v. King, 89 Wn.App. 612 (1986); Terry "individualized reasonable articulable suspicion/armed and dangerous" rationale is inapplicable, apparently because defendant was not a suspect; court rejects an "automatic companion rule" which would allow all companions of any arrestee to be subject to a pat-down, requiring police to articulate an objective rationale to control the scene; reverses State v. Flores, 188 Wn.App. 305 (2015); 7-2.

State v. Weyand, 188 Wn.2d 804 (2017)

Police observe defendant leave a known drug house at 2:30 a.m., looks up and down the street twice then drives off, stopped, drugs found; held: a reasonable observer would not have grounds to believe that a crime was occurring or was about to occur, reliance upon "furtive movements" is "problematic;" reasonable suspicion must be individualized to the person being stopped, leaving a known drug house is no more than being located in a high crime area which is insufficient, State v. Larson 93 Wn.2d 638, 645 (1980), State v. Fuentes, 183 Wn.2d 149 (2015), State v. Richardson, 64 Wn.App. 693 (1992), State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57 (2010), State v. Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011), State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019), cf.: State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017)

Trooper observes defendant as she drove in the far right lane southbound on Interstate 5, as traffic to defendant's front and left come to a stop defendant drives two wheels of her vehicle over the fog line for approximately 200 feet, stopped and found to be under the influence; held: driving with wheels off roadway, RCW 46.61.670 (1977), applies rather than driving on roadways lined for traffic, RCW 46.61.140 (1965), which provides that car must be driven within lanes "as nearly as practicable," thus trooper had a reasonable basis to stop the vehicle, see: State v. Brooks, 2 Wn.App.2d 371 (2018), distinguishing State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646 (2008) and State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98, 107 (2014), State v. Alvarez, 6 Wn.App.2d 398 (2018); I.

State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484 (2017)

Following an illegal seizure by police a defendant's behavior obstructing (or assaulting) a police officer is not subject to suppression, State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460, 474-75 (1995), State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1, 10-14 (1982), State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, (1991), State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426, 429-31 (1985), disapproving, in part, State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217, 225 (1999); III.

State v. Butler, 2 Wn.App. ad 549, 560-61 (2018)

Police stop vehicle, another vehicle parks legally nearby and defendant-driver gets out, driver of stopped vehicle claims other driver hit his car, drove away and may have warrants, officer "commands" defendant to stop, he leaves area, officer broadcasts that defendant "fled" and probably has warrants, another officer views defendant at a residence, tells him "hey come talk to me," gets identification, discovers warrant, searches, finds drugs; held: initial command to stop of driver who was not a passenger of the vehicle stopped for traffic violation and was thus the equivalent of a pedestrian, command to stop was a detention, United States v. Mendenhall, 446 U.S. 544, 554, 100 S.Ct. 1870, 64 L.Ed. ad 497 (1980), State v. Young, 135 Wn.2d 498, 510 (1998), flight alone may not be a basis for a Terry stop, State v. Mendez, 137 Wn.2d 208 (1999), State v. Larson, 93 Wn.2d 638, 645 (1980), State v. Walker, 66 Wn. App. 622, 629 (1992), State v. Carriero, 8 Wn.App.2d (2019), there was no lawful basis to seize defendant; the later contact with the police was a continuation of the unlawful seizure, Mendez, supra., at 224; I.

State v. Muhammad, 4 Wn.App.2d 31 (2018)

Following homicide police view surveillance video, see a "distinctive" car approached by the victim shortly after which her body is found, three days later officer observes the distinctive car, identified defendant-driver and released him, resulting in further investigation and ultimately arrest and conviction; held: a Terry stop of a car is permitted where there is a substantial possibility that criminal conduct has occurred, is not limited to a crime in progress, State v. Snapp, 174 Wn.2d 177, 198 (2012), a temporary seizure of property based on a reasonable and articulable suspicion of criminal activity and the object's connection to a crime is lawful, United States v. Van Leeuwen, 397 U.S. 249, 25 L.Ed.2d 282 (1970), State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 605-06 (1996); reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019); III.

State v, Alexander, 5 Wn.App.2d 154 (2018)

Citizen report she saw a man punch a woman, describes both, officer detains man and woman meeting description, man identifies himself, officer runs name and discovers no contact order, woman denies assault, gives a false name, upon discovering her true name as protected party arrest defendant, trial court suppresses discovery of no contact order; held: initial investigatory stop was valid, following any valid stop police may run name for warrants; here, the Terry stop involved detention of an alleged assailant and victim, a very recent assault, a warrant check disclosing a protection order, admitted quarreling, and unwillingness to disclose the alleged victim's identity provided officer with sufficient reasonable suspicion to investigate whether the woman with defendant was the protected person, see: State v. Pettit, 160 Wn.App. 716 (2011), : State v. Allen, 138 Wn.App. 463 (2007), affirmed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018); I.

State v. Brown, 194 Wn.2d 972 (2019)

Driver uses turn signal, moves left into designated left turn lane, does not reactivate turn signal and makes the left turn, is stopped by police, processed for DUI; held: turn signal statute, RCW 46.61.305 (1975), requires a driver to signal intent to turn or change lanes on a public roadway, reversing State v. Brown, 7 Wn.App.2d 121 (2019), cf.: State v. Brown, 119 Wn.App. 473 (2003) , overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Tarango, 7 Wn.App.2d 425 (2019)

Citizen calls 911, identifies himself, reports that there is a man with a gun in a car in a parking lot, police observe car which drives off, police stop car, find gun, learn that defendant has a felony conviction, defendant is convicted of felon in possession of a firearm; held:

possession of a firearm in public is insufficient, standing alone, to support an investigatory stop, Florida v. J.L., 529 U.S. 266, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000), State v. Cardenas-Muratalla, 179 Wn.App. 307 (2013); III.

State v. Carriero, 8 Wn.App. 2d 641 (2019)

911 caller reports "suspicious vehicle" parked at the end of an alley, police, aware of burglaries, drive up behind vehicle blocking the alley with flashers but not emergency lights, ask for identification from both occupants, dispatch reports one occupant is a felon without warrants, the other has a warrant, arrest occupant with warrant, observe gun, arrest the felon, obtain search warrant and seize gun, defendant is charged and convicted of felon in possession of a firearm; held: a seizure occurs when the police immobilize a defendant, State v. Beito, 147 Wn.App. 504 (2008), State v. Coyne, 99 Wn.App. 566, 570 (2000), State v. Crane, 105 Wn.App. 301 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564 (2003), a reasonable person would have believed he was seized under these facts; mere presence in a high crime area does not rise to a reasonable suspicion to detain, State v. Weyand, 188 Wn2d 804 (2017), but see: State v. Dudas, 52 Wn.App. 832 (1988); a claim of "officer safety" cannot create a reasonable suspicion to detain; 2-1, III.

State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019)

Defendant and passenger are seated in vehicle in parking lot at 2:00 a.m., only exit was to back straight out, two officers approach on either side, one asks defendant, as a ruse, if the car belonged to another person, defendant responds that it's his car, officer asks for name and then identification, defendant hands id card, while one officer is running name for license and warrants other one notices a handgun, removes gun, removes defendant, learns defendant's license is suspended, has a warrant and is a felon, is charged with felon in possession of a firearm, trial court suppresses ruling that offices lacked sufficient grounds for a "social contact;" held: police need not have any basis for a social contact; under totality of circumstances, officers' approaching vehicle early in the morning, shining flashlight, using a ruse, asking for name and identification a reasonable person would believe he was seized, cf.: State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347, 351-52 (1996); fact that police experience tells them that a person in a car in a parking lot late at night in a high crime area might be using drugs is not a reasonable articulable suspicion of potential criminal activity, State v. Diluzio, 162 Wn.App. 585 (2011); I.

Kansas v. Glover, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1183, 206 L.Ed.2d 412 (2020)

Sheriff runs license plate check, discovers owner of vehicle's license is suspended, stops car, determines that driver is owner who is convicted of driving while an habitual traffic offender; held: police may pull over a car when the officer has learned that the owner's license is suspended, absent other evidence that negates the inference that the owner is driving, State v. Lyons, 85 Wn.App. 268 (1997), Seattle v. Yeager, 67 Wn.App. 41 (1992), State v. Phillips, 126 Wn.App. 584 (2005), see: State v. Penfield, 106 Wn.App. 157 (2001), State v. Creed, 179 Wn.App. 534 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Sum, 199 Wn.2d 627 (2022)

"[A] person has been seized as a matter of independent state law if, based on the totality of the circumstances, an objective observer could conclude that the person was not free to leave, to refuse a request, or to otherwise terminate a police encounter due to law enforcement's display of authority or use of physical force. For purposes of this analysis, an objective observer is aware that implicit, institutional, and unconscious biases, in addition to purposeful discrimination, have resulted in disproportionate police contacts, investigative seizures, and uses of force against BIPOC in Washington;" here, defendant, a person of color, was asleep in his car on a public street, awakened by a uniformed deputy sheriff who asked what he was doing there, "implying that they did not belong there," asked to whom the car belonged, requested identification to which defendant inquired "why," answered that there are a lot of stolen cars in the area, defendant gives a false name, deputy returns to his vehicle to check, defendant is charged with false reporting, an objective observer could conclude that if defendant had refused to identify himself and requested to be left alone he would not have been permitted to do so, thus was detained; 9-0.

ARSON

State v. Flowers, 30 Wn.App. 718 (1981)

Jury need not be unanimous as to which method of committing arson 1° defendant employed as long as there is substantial evidence of each mode charged; distinguishes State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980); I.

State v. Hobart, 34 Wn.App. 187 (1983)

Arson 2° and reckless burning 2° are not lessers of arson 1°; II.

State v. Plewak, 46 Wn.App. 757 (1987)

Arson, RCW 9A.48.020, is not vague; "manifestly dangerous" can include the presence of occupants, combustibility, proximity to other structures and the inherent danger to firefighters; II.

State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700 (1990)

A death that is caused by an arson fire before it is extinguished occurs "in furtherance of" the arson, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(c), and renders the arsonist liable of felony murder, reversing State v. Leech, 54 Wn.App. 597 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Picard, 90 Wn.App. 890, 900-2 (1998)

In arson case, burned house, evidence that portable heater was rigged by a human to ignite combustibles, movement of valuables out of house just before fire, over-insurance and defendant's proximity to fire establish corpus; court need not instruct jury that a fire is presumed accidental or natural, but see: State v. Kindred, 16 Wn.App. 138 (1976), State v. Smith, 142 Wash. 57, 58-9 (1927); II.

State v. Westling, 145 Wn.2d 607 (2002)

Defendant, angry at victim, sets victim's car on fire which spreads to two other cars, is convicted of three counts of arson; held: unit of prosecution for arson is maliciously causing a fire, thus one conviction is appropriate where one fire damages multiple automobiles, reversing State v. Westling, 106 Wn.App. 884 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Flinn, 119 Wn.App. 232, 241-42 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 154 Wn.2d 194 (2005)

Proof that defendant designed an incendiary device for purposes of wilful destruction is not an element of the crime of possession of an incendiary device, RCW 9.40.110, -120; I.

State v. Bainard, 148 Wn.App. 93. 105-10 (2009)

Defendant shoots and kills two people in a house then sets house on fire, is convicted, inter alia, of arson 1º, RCW 9A.48.020(1)(c); held: to prove that defendant caused a fire in a building in which "there shall be at the time a human being…," state must prove that the being was a living person; III.

State v. Sweany, 174 Wn.2d 909 (2012)

Arson 1°, RCW 9A.48.020(1)(b), -(d), by the means of causing a fire on property valued at $10,000 or more to collect insurance, refers to market value, not insured value; affirms State v. Sweany, 162 Wn.App. 223 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Boyer, 200 Wn.App. 7 (2017)

Witness testifies he observed respondent in an alley next to a store doing something with his hand, two minutes later a fire is observed where respondent was sitting although he was gone, is arrested later and confesses; held: substantial evidence supports conviction of reckless burning 2°, RCW 9A.48.050 (2011), corpus delicti for reckless burning is a fire that places property in danger and proof that the fire occurred "as a result of the actions of someone criminally responsible;" II.

State v. Moose, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 511 (2022)

Arson is not a concurrent statute with malicious mischief under the general-specific rule, see: State v. Ou, 156 Wn.App. 899-902-03 (2010), State v. Zheng, 18 Wn.App. 2d 316, 319 (2021), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); I.

ASSAULT

State v. Clinton, 25 Wn.App. 400 (1980)

Transferred intent instruction approved, see: State v. Frasquillo, 161 Wn.App. 907, 915-16 (2011); III.

State v. Hall, 95 Wn.2d 536 (1981)

Where two victims are alleged in the same count, may be error to charge in the conjunctive and instruct in the disjunctive, but harmless error here; 9-0..

State v. Claborn, 95 Wn.2d 629 (1981)

Assault 1° with intent to commit felony, RCW 9A.36.010(1)(a), may be proved as long as there is causal connection between assault and felony; felony need not be "inherently dangerous;" 9-0.

State v. Williams, 29 Wn.App. 86 (1981)

Assault 3° applies to arrest with or without a warrant or other court process; statute is not void for vagueness; court seems to limit application to criminal arrests only, and not to detention of children, mental patients or citizen arrests; III.

State v. Johnson, 29 Wn.App. 807 (1981)

Assault 2° is established when within shooting distance one points a loaded or apparently loaded gun at another, State v. Alvis, 70 Wn.2d 969 (1967), State v. Murphy, 7 Wn.App. 505 (1972); where apprehension of victim is an issue, it may be inferred when a gun is pointed at someone who does not know the gun is unloaded, State v. Frazier, 82 Wn.2d 628 (1972), State v. Stewart, 73 Wn.2d 701 (1968); II.

State v. Takacs, 31 Wn.App. 868 (1982)

In order to prove assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.020(1)(b), state must prove defendant knew he was inflicting grievous bodily harm; III.

State v. LeBlanc, 34 Wn.App. 306 (1983)

In assault-self-defense case jury must be instructed state has burden of disproving self-defense beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. McCullum, 98 Wn.2d 484 (1983); III.

State v. Maurer, 34 Wn.App. 573 (1983)

Assault may be proved where defendant led victim to believe injury was about to be inflicted with unlawful force and there was "apparent present ability to give effect to an attempt to inflict such injury"; there must be a showing of some overt act or "violence begun" as opposed to mere threats; victim's apprehension is gravamen, not actual power or intent of defendant to injure; II.

State v. Hoffman, 35 Wn.App. 13 (1983)

Police observe fight, one participant points to defendant and tells police defendant started fight, police demand identification, defendant refuses to comply, is arrested, resists; held: arrest was unlawful, State v. White, 97 Wn.2d 92 (1982), thus defendant could resist and assault 3° charge must be dismissed, but see: State v. Valentine, 132 Wn.2d 1 (1997), Spokane v. Hays, 96 Wn.App. 653, 661 (2000), State v. Cormier, 100 Wn.App. 457, 462-64 (2000), State v. Kolesnik, 146 Wn.App. 790, 809-10 (2008), State v. Mann, 157 Wn.App. 428 (2010), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017); I.

State v. Goree, 36 Wn.App. 205 (1983)

An arrestee's knowledge of the lawfulness of his arrest is not an element of assault 3°, RCW 9A.36.030(1)(a); see also: State v. Belleman, 70 Wn.App. 778 (1993); defendant's lack of knowledge of a lawfully issued warrant is not relevant; III.

State v. Singleton, 41 Wn.App. 71 (1985)

Where parental discipline defense, RCW 9A.16.020(5), is raised, reasonableness of force is judged by objective standard of what a reasonably prudent person would consider appropriate under the circumstances, as opposed to a subjective standard as applied in self-defense cases, State v. Schlichtmann, 114 Wn.App. 162 (2002); I.

State v. Ekkelkamp, 42 Wn.App. 375 (1985)

Potential invalidity of a warrant is not a defense to assault 3°, RCW 9A.36.030, where the warrant is valid on its face and there is no reason for officer to question the validity, Bender v. Seattle, 99 Wn.2d 582 (1983); I.

State v. Miller, 103 Wn.2d 792 (1985)

Assault 3° is not unconstitutionally vague; store employees have authority to use reasonable force to detain shoplifters; assault on a security officer in the course of an arrest is assault 3°, RCW 9A.36.030; 9-0.

State v. Stewart, 43 Wn.App. 744 (1986)

Assault on a jail custody officer booking defendant is assault 3°, RCW 9A.36.030(1)(a); III.

State v Tucker, 46 Wn.App. 642 (1987)

Reckless endangerment, RCW 9A.36.050, is not a lesser of assault 3°, RCW 9A.36.030; I.

State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007)

Defendant points unloaded rifle at victim in defendant's home, is convicted of assault 2° held: assault 2° and display of a firearm, RCW 9.41.270, are not concurrent statutes, State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994), see also: State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993), thus defendant was properly charged with assault; pointing an unloaded gun and threatening to blow away victim is sufficient evidence to prove intent to inflict bodily harm, State v. Krup, 36 Wn.App. 454, 461 (1984), State v. Maurer, 34 Wn.App. 573, 580 (1983); I.

State v. Ortiz, 52 Wn.App. 523 (1988)

In assault 3°, former RCW 9A.36.030(1)(a), proposed instructions on lawfulness of detention must carefully and accurately set forth law on probable cause and well founded suspicion or may be properly refused; I.

State v. Austin, 59 Wn.App. 186 (1990)

Element of assault 2°, former RCW 9A.36.020(1)(c), is intent to cause apprehension and fear, State v. Krup, 36 Wn.App. 454 (1984); refusal of trial court to permit defendant to testify as to his intent when he went for gun is due process violation; cf.: State v. Byrd, 125 Wn.2d 703 (1995); I.

State v. Brown, 60 Wn.App. 60 (1990)

"Torture" and "by design," RCW 9A.36.021(1)(g), are not vague; I.

State v. Washington, 64 Wn.App. 118 (1992)

In reckless endangerment 1°/drive-by shooting case, RCW 9A.36.045(2), inference of intent instruction is proper where court defines "reckless," defense does not request definition of "accident"; I.

State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992)

Diminished capacity is defense to assault 2° with deadly weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a); III.

State v. Carlson, 65 Wn.App. 153 (1992)

Pointing an unloaded, broken BB gun at a person is insufficient to support a conviction of assault 2° with a deadly weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(c), but is sufficient to support assault 4°, RCW 9A.36.041; Division I holds that since definition of assault 2° was amended in 1988 to eliminate language "with a weapon or other instrument likely to produce bodily harm," state must prove assault with a deadly weapon as defined in RCW 9A.04.110(6), cf.: State v. Hentz, 99 Wn.2d 538 (1983), State v. Bowman, 36 Wn.App. 798 (1984), State v. Majors, 82 Wn.App. 843, 846-7 (1996), State v. Taylor, 97 Wn.App. 123 (1999).

State v. Plano, 67 Wn.App. 674 (1992)

Name of assault victim is not an essential element which need be alleged in information; I.

State v. Allen, 67 Wn.App. 824 (1992), overruled, in part, State v. Brown, 140 Wn.App. 456 (2000)

Information alleging that defendant "did assault officer while officer was performing official duties" is sufficient where challenged for first time after verdict, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93, 106 (1991), see: State v. Tunney, 129 Wn.2d 336, 338-9 (1998); III.

State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993)

Assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.021(1) and unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), are not concurrent, as the latter lacks a mens rea element, State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Murphy, 7 Wn.App. 505 (1972), State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994); II.

State v. Ferreira, 69 Wn.App. 465 (1993)

In response to prior drive-by shooting, defendant directs others to drive to a house, knowing the others in the car would shoot up the house, no evidence that shooters saw anyone in house, defendant is convicted of accomplice to assault 1°; held: evidence insufficient to support a finding that shooters acted with intent to inflict great bodily harm, but is sufficient to support finding that they intended to create apprehension or fear to the likely occupants, thus defendant is guilty of assault 2°, cf.: State v. Woo Won Choi, 55 Wn.App. 895, 906 (1989), State v. Mancilla, 197 Wn.App. 631 (2017); reckless endangerment, RCW 9A.36.045, is not a lesser of assault 1°, State v. Rivera, 85 Wn.App. 296, 302 (1997); since state proved five people were in house and each feared serious bodily injury, state proved five counts of assault; III.

State v. Salamanca, 69 Wn.App. 817 (1993)

Transferred intent instruction in this drive-by shooting-assault 1° case "may have been superfluous" since there was evidence that defendant intended to inflict great bodily harm on all occupants of the car, thus specific intent can be inferred, State v. Delmarter, 94 Wn.2d 634, 638 (1980), State v. Frasquillo, 161 Wn.App. 907 (2011); Division III leaves open issue as to whether transferred intent can apply to a specific intent crime, see: State v. Cogswell, 54 Wn.2d 240 (1959).

State v. Belleman, 70 Wn.App. 778 (1993)

In assault 3° on a police officer, where arrest is lawful but defendant does not know he is being lawfully arrested, he does not have a right to self-defense nor to such an instruction, see: State v. Goree, 36 Wn.App. 205 (1983), Seattle v. Cadigan, 55 Wn.App. 30, 37 (1989); I.

State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 455 (1993)

Evidence is sufficient to prove simple assault, RCW 9A.36.041(1), where witness testifies she saw defendant appear to strike crying child-victim with a stick, victim sat quietly for the rest of the day which was unusual; evidence is sufficient to prove substantial bodily harm, RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b) for assault 2° where there are bruises consistent with being hit by a shoe, see: State v. Hovig, 149 Wn.App. 1 (2009), State v. Fry, 153 Wn.App. 235, 240-41 (2009), State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489 (2011), see also: State v. Weber, 137 Wn.App. 852, 861-62 (2007); I.

State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345, 352-9 (1993), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007)

Defendant fires gun at one person, bullet enters another sleeping person's window, who is awakened, covered with glass; held: intent to assault victim can be transferred to another, State v. Clinton, 25 Wn.App. 400, 403 (1980); here, second victim did not experience apprehension or fear before bullet entered window; lack of victim's knowledge is insufficient to support an assault by "reasonable fear and apprehension" charge, State v. Nichelson, 119 Wn.App. 855 (2003), distinguishing State v. Frazier, 81 Wn.2d 628, 630 (1972) (assault can be committed without victim's knowledge in attempted battery mode); fear and apprehension after the fact is insufficient, as it cannot be transferred along with the intent element; touching by the flying glass caused by defendant's shooting a bullet is a battery which can support an assault conviction; evidence was sufficient to establish elements of assault 2° with a deadly weapon, to wit (1) intentional act, with unlawful force, (2) with a weapon, and (3) resulting in unlawful touching, State v. Rivas, 97 Wn.App. 349 (1999), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Smith, supra.; I.

State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 455-9 (1994)

In assault 1° (intent to inflict great bodily harm) case, RCW 9A.36.011(1)(a), prisoner fighting with guard and attempting to take his gun is sufficient to convict; I.

State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994)

Assault 2° and unlawful display of weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), even if they have same elements, do not violate equal protection, see: State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993); two criminal statutes with identical elements but disparate penalties do not violate equal protection clause, United States v. Batchelder, 60 L.Ed.2d 755 (1979), Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189, 192 (1991), State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 730-32 (2014), overruling State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9 (1970); II.

State v. Wilson, 125 Wn.2d 212 (1994)

Defendant fires gun into tavern, missing intended victims but striking two unintended victims, is convicted of four counts of assault 1°, RCW 9A.36.011; held: once it is established that defendant intended to commit great bodily harm, statute provides that any unintended victim is assaulted if they fall within the terms and conditions of the statute, State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417, 431-33 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Elma, 138 Wn.App. 306, 314-19 (2007), see: State v. Elmi, 166 Wn.2d 209 (2009), State v. Abuan, 161 Wn.App. 135 (2011), State v. Mancilla, 197 Wn.App. 631 (2017); transferred intent is only applicable when a statute matches specific intent with a specific victim; reverses State v. Wilson, 71 Wn.App. 880, 887-90 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 74 Wn.App. 844 (1994)

Neither information charging felony murder-assault nor plea statement contain a mens rea element, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: assault itself indicates an intentional act, State v. Osborne, 102 Wn.2d 87, 94 (1984); II.

State v. Byrd, 125 Wn.2d 707 (1995)

In assault 2°, specific intent either to create apprehension of bodily harm or to cause bodily harm is an essential element, jury must be instructed that defendant intended to create apprehension of bodily harm; affirms State v. Byrd, 72 Wn.App. 774 (1994); see: State v. Krup, 36 Wn.App. 454 (1984), State v. Austin, 59 Wn.App. 186 (1990), State v. Jarvis, 160 Wn.App. 111, 118-19 (2011), accord: State v. Eastmond, 129 Wn.2d 497 (1996), cf.: State v. Esters, 84 Wn.App. 180 (1996) (assault by battery), State v. Daniels, 87 Wn.App. 149 (1997), State v. Hall, 104 Wn.App. 56, 61-63 (2000), State v. Cardenas-Flores, 194 Wn.App. 496, 510-15 (2016), 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Ratliff, 77 Wn.App. 522 (1995)

Victim is doused with urine, fears subsequent disease; defendant is charged with assault by touching (battery) or reasonable apprehension (common law assault), claims insufficiency as to common law assault as victim did not reasonably fear harm before he was touched; held: victim's fear of disease after contact from urine is sufficient to establish "an intentional act, with unlawful force, which creates a reasonable apprehension of serious bodily injury," distinguishing State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345, 352-9 (1993), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007); I.

State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995)

Where police unlawfully enter a constitutionally protected area and are assaulted, suppression of the assault is not a remedy, at 471-75, State v. Aydelotte, 35 Wn.App. 125, 131-2 (1983), State v. Crider, 72 Wn.App. 815, 819-20 (1994), State v. McKinlay, 87 Wn.App. 394, 398-9 (1997), State v. Cormier, 100 Wn.App. 457, 462-64 (2000), overruling State v. Apodaca, 67 Wn.App. 736 (1992), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017); in assault against a police officer, state may charge RCW 9A.36.031(1)(g) [assault on officer performing official duties] or RCW 9A.36.031(1)(a) [assault to prevent execution of lawful process or lawful apprehension] without violating equal protection, latter is not a special statute relative to the former, at 477-79, State v. Belleman, 70 Wn.App. 778, 784 (1993); police officer is involved in "official duties," RCW 9A.36.030(1)(g), encompassing all aspects of police officer's good faith performance of job-related duties, excluding conduct occurring when the officer is on a frolic of his or her own, at 478-79, State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 100 (1991), see: State v. Little, 116 Wn.2d 488, 496-97 (1991), State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217, 224-25 (1999), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); affirms State v. Mierz, 72 Wn.App. 783 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Esters, 84 Wn.App. 180 (1996)

In assault 2° by battery (consummated assault), RCW 9A.36.021 (1)(a), state must prove intentional touching and reckless infliction of substantial bodily harm, need not prove intent to harm, distinguishing State v. Byrd, 125 Wn.2d 707 (1995), State v. Eastmond, 129 Wn.2d 497 (1996); II.

State v. Kiser, 87 Wn.App. 126 (1997)

Assault of a child 1°, RCW 9A.36.120(b)(ii), requiring proof of an assault which causes substantial bodily harm preceded by a pattern or practice of assaults, does not require a unanimity instruction absent more than one distinct episodes of assault, Matter of Mulamba, 199 Wn.2d 488 (2022); I.

State v. Daniels, 87 Wn.App. 149 (1997)

In assault of a child 2°, RCW 9A.36.130, where the offense is committed by an actual battery, the definition of battery is not an element of the crime, thus failure to define battery to the jury is not reviewable for the first time on appeal, distinguishing State v. Byrd, 125 Wn.2d 707 (1995), State v. Eastmond, 129 Wn.2d 497 (1996); I.

State v. R.H.S., 94 Wn.App. 844 (1999)

In assault 2° (intentional assault/recklessly inflicting substantial bodily harm), RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a), defendant's testimony that he was unaware that a punch could break bones is excluded as irrelevant; held: "reckless" has both an objective and subjective component, State v.

Hovig, 149 Wn.App. 1 (2009), thus defendant's knowledge is relevant, thus court's exclusion of defendant's knowledge was erroneous, cf.: State v. Keend, 140 Wn.App. 858 (2007); I.

State v. Taylor, 97 Wn.App. 123 (1999)

Respondent holds BB gun to victims' heads, threatens to kill them, is convicted of assault 2° with a deadly weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(c); held: while a BB gun is not a deadly weapon per se, State v. Carlson, 65 Wn.App. 153, 161 n.10 (1992), and while there was no direct evidence that the BB gun was loaded, in light of the method in which the gun was "threatened to be used," RCW 9A.04.110(6), a reasonable trier of fact could find that it was "readily capable of causing death or serious bodily harm," distinguishing Carlson, supra; III.

State v. Rivas, 97 Wn.App. 349 (1999)

Defendant is charged with assault 2° with a weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(c), instruction defining assault lists three common law definitions (battery, attempted battery, assault), no unanimity instruction or special verdict is provided but all evidence establishes common law assault only; held: because evidence established only one of the alternative means and substantial evidence supported that alternative, unanimity instruction is not required, but see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007); I.

State v. Hiott, 97 Wn.App. 825 (1999)

Two boys shoot at each other with BB guns, one loses an eye, defendant is charged with assault, claims consent; held: while consent may be a defense during an athletic contest, State v. Shelley, 85 Wn.App. 24 (1997), see: State v. Whitfield, 132 Wn.App. 878, 898-99 (2006), State v. Jarvis, 160 Wn.App. 111, 120 (2011), shooting BB guns at each other is not a "generally accepted game" with "generally accepted rules," and shooting at a person with a BB gun is a breach of public policy, see: State v. Baxter, 135 Wn.App. 587, 598-603 (2006), State v. Weber, 137 Wn.App. 852 (2007), State v. Weber, 137 Wn.App. 852 (2007); II.

State v. Taylor, 140 Wn.2d 229 (2000)

Assault 4° complaint which alleges that defendant pushed, kicked and punched complainant is sufficient to inform defendant of intent element, where challenged prior to trial, as assault is sufficient to convey the element of intent, State v. Davis, 119 Wn.2d 657 (1992), State v. Chaten, 84 Wn.App. 85 (1996), State v. Hopper, 118 Wn.2d 151 (1992), reversing State v. Taylor, 91 Wn.App. 606 (1998), overruling State v. Robinson, 58 Wn.App. 599 (1990); 5-4.

State v. Brown, 140 Wn.2d 456 (2000)

In assault 3° on police officer, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(g), state need not allege or prove that defendant knew that victim was a law enforcement officer or that victim was performing official duties at the time of the assault, overruling, in part, State v. Allen, 67 Wn.App. 824 (1992), effectively overruling State v. Filbeck, 89 Wn.App. 113 (1997); affirms State v. Brown, 94 Wn.App. 327 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Hall, 104 Wn.App. 56 (2000)

Assault by battery does not require specific intent to inflict harm or cause apprehension, rather it requires intent to do the physical act constituting the assault, at 62, State v. Cardenas-Flores, 194 Wn.App. 496, 510-15 (2016), 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017); of the three means of assault

[(1) battery, (2) attempt to inflict injury, (3) placing victim in reasonable apprehension of injury], an attempted assault is a possible lesser to (1) and (3), at 63-64, State v. Music, 40 Wn.App. 423, 432 (1985), State v. Godsey, 131 Wn.App. 278, 281-88 (2006); III.

State v. Pierre, 108 Wn.App. 378 (2001)

Repeated kicking the head of a defenseless victim is sufficient to prove "force or means likely to produce death or great bodily harm," RCW 9A.36.011(1)(a), even where jury is hung on whether great bodily harm was actually inflicted; I.

State v. Atkinson, 113 Wn.App. 661, 666-68 (2002)

In defining "substantial bodily harm" for assault 2°, RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b), court instructs that "disfigurement means that which impairs or injures the beauty, symmetry, or appearance of a person or thing; that which renders unsightly, misshapen, or imperfect, or deforms in some manner," defense claims definition is overbroad and eliminates distinction between assault 2° and assault 4°; held: trial courts have "considerable discretion in wording jury instructions," State v. Castle, 86 Wn.App. 48, 62 (1997), definition here was accurate and merely supplemented and clarified statutory language; III.

State v. Freigang, 115 Wn.App. 496 (2002)

Where defendant is "obviously armed" and utters a threat to kill, there is sufficient evidence to prove assault 2º with a deadly weapon, State v. Murphy, 7 Wn.App. 505, 511 (1972), victim's lack of actual fear does not defeat these elements, at 505 n. 11; II.

State v. Nicholson, 119 Wn.App. 855 (2003), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007)

Defendant-father holds knife to baby, prosecutor is allowed to argue that mother's fear and apprehension is sufficient to prove common law assault prong of assault of a child; held: conviction of assault of a child 2° cannot be based upon the mother's fear and apprehension; I.

State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417, 431-33 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007)

Defendant fires one bullet into car containing three people, is convicted of three counts of assault 2°; held: firing once into vehicle with three people assaults three individuals, resulting in three units of prosecution, see: State v. Wilson, 125 Wn.2d 212, 220 (1994), State v. Elmi, 166 Wn.2d 209 (2009), and is not the same criminal conduct as there are three victims, State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 123 (1999); II.

State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592 (2006)

Assault 3º, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(f), is not vague, AT 598-600; neck pain for three hours and swelling and an abrasion is sufficient to prove "substantial pain" and "considerable suffering," State v. Fry, 153 Wn.App. 235, 240-41 (2009), see: State v. Robertson, 88 Wn.App. 836, 947 (1997); I.

State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006)

The crime of assault in violation of a court order, RCW 26.50.110(4), and assault 2º do not violate double jeopardy as legislature intended to punish separately both, see: State v.

Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 664, 665 (2006), and do not merge, State v. Novikoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 166 (2017), see: State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563, 571 (2005); convictions of assault 2º with intent to commit felony harassment and felony harassment do violate double jeopardy, see: State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 778 (2005), State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798 (2008); II.

State v. Baxter, 134 Wn.App. 587, 598-603 (2006)

Defendant, based upon Bible, attempts to circumcise his 8-year old son "in a dirty bathtub, with no medical training, using a hunting knife and animal wound cauterizing powder," trial court rejects consent instructions; held: consent is generally disfavored in assault cases, State v. Shelley, 85 Wn.App. 24 (1997), State v. Hiott, 97 Wn.App. 825 (1999), State v. Weber, 137 Wn.App. 852 (2007), State v. Lyon, 160 Wn.App. 111, 120 (2011), circumcision not performed by a trained professional violates public policy, the law disfavors the notion that a child can consent to medical treatment, cf.: State v. Koome, 84 Wn.2d 901, 911 (1975)(abortion), Smith v. Seibly, 72 Wn.2d 16 (1967); state may interfere with a parent's right to control religious upbringing of a child where physical harm is caused, see: State v. Norman, 61 Wn.App. 16, 24 (1991); II.

State v. Chavez, 134 Wn.App. 657, 666-68 (2006), 163 Wn.2d 262, 273-74 (2008)

Judicial definition of "assault" according to common law, See State v. Frazier, 81 Wn.2d 628, 631 (1972), State v. Rush, 14 Wn.2d 138, 139-40 (1942), State v. Shaffer, 120 Wash. 345, 348-50 (1922), Peasley v. Puget Sound Tug & Barge Co., 13 Wn.2d 485 (1942), does not violate separation of powers doctrine; II.

State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007)

The three common law definitions of assault in a jury instruction do not constitute alternative means of committing the crime of assault, and thus there need not be substantial evidence to support each of the three definitions, State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 89-90 (2005), State v. Christian, 18 Wn.App.2d 185 (2021), see: State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638 (2002), disapproving, in part,), State v., State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345 (1993), State v. Rivas, 97 Wn.App. 349 (1999), State v. Nicholson, 119 Wn.App. 855 (2003); affirms State v. Smith, 124 Wn.App. 417 (2004), disapproves, in part, State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345 (1993;); 5-4.

State v. Weber, 137 Wn.App. 852 (2007)

Consent is not a defense to assault between incarcerated persons, see: State v. Shelley, 85 Wn.App. 24, 29 (1997), State v. Hiott, 97 Wn.App. 825, 828 (1999), State v. Lyon, 160 Wn.App. 111, 120 (2011); III.

Postsentence Review of Leach, 161 Wn.2d 180 (2007)

Attempted assault 2º is not a crime against a person as it is not expressly listed in RCW 9.94A.411(2), and thus community custody is not authorized, RCW 9.94A.715, overruling Postsentence Review of Manier, 135 Wn.App. 33 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Hoeldt, 139 Wn.App. 225 (2007)

Depending upon circumstances of use, a dog can be a deadly weapon for purposes of assault 2°; here, defendant intentionally released his large, barking, growling dog to attack a police officer, thus evidence was sufficient; II.

State v. Blatt, 139 Wn.App. 555 (2007)

When charging assault 3°, RCW 9A.36.031(1), information need not allege and state need not prove that the charged act did not constitute assault 1° or 2°, see: State v. Ward, 148 Wn.2d 803 (2003), State v. Olsen, 187 Wn.App. 149 (2015), State v. Melland, 9 Wn.App.2d 786 (2019); II.

State v. Brooks, 142 Wn.App. 842 (2008)

"Unlawful force" is not an element of assault unless defense raises lawful use of force; III.

State v. Hovig, 149 Wn.App. 1, 7-13 (2009)

In assault of child 2º case, RCW 9A.36.130(1)(a), intentionally biting 4-month old child's face leaving a bruise that physician testifies would last 7-14 days is sufficient to prove both objective and subjective components of reckless element, RCW 9A.08.010(1), see: State v. Keend, 140 Wn.App. 858, 869 (2007), State v. R.H.S., 94 Wn.App. 844 (1999); serious bruising can rise to the level of substantial bodily injury, State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 455 (1993), State v. Salinas, 87 Wn.2d 112, 121-22 (1976), State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489, 501-06 (2011), cf.: State v. Miles, 77 Wn.2d 593 (1970); II.

State v. Elmi, 166 Wn.2d 209 (2009)

From outside, defendant shoots at his wife in living room, three children are in room, no one is injured, defendant is convicted of four counts of assault 1º; held: "[w]here a defendant intends to shoot into and to hit someone occupying a house…, he certainly bears the risk of multiple convictions when several victims are present, regardless of whether the defendant knows of their presence. And, because the intent is the same, criminal culpability should be the same where a number of persons are present but physically unharmed," at 218 ¶ 18, see: State v. Wilson, 125 Wn.2d 212 (1994), cf.: State v. Abuan, 161 Wn.App. 135, 154-60 (2011), see also: State v. Frasquillo, 161 Wn.App. 907 (2011); affirms State v. Elmi, 138 Wn.App. 306 (2007); 6-3.

State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632, 641-48 (2009)

In assault 2º/reckless infliction case, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a), where the mens rea elements are intentional assault and reckless infliction of substantial bodily harm, instruction defining reckless that includes "recklessness also is established if a person acts intentionally" is error as it relieves state of burden of proving that defendant acted recklessly if jury finds that defendant assaulted intentionally, State v. Goble, 131 Wn.App. 194, 202-04 (2005), see also: State v. Sibert, 168 2306, 315-17 (2010), but see: State v. Holzknecht, 157 Wn.App. 754 (2010), effectively overruling State v. Keend, 140 Wn.App. 848, 863-68 (2007), State v. Nordgren, 167 Wn.App. 653 (2012), cf.: State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489, 508-10 (2011); II.

State v. Holzknecht, 157 Wn.App. 754 (2010)

In assault of a child 2° case, instructions that make clear that a different mental state must be determined for each element (intent as to assault and recklessness as to infliction of substanital bodily harm), then instructions that also direct that recklessness is established if a person acts intentionally or knowingly do not create impermissible presumptions, State v. Sibert, 168 Wn.2d 306, 315-17 (2010), State v. Gerdts, 135 Wn.App. 720 (2007), State v. Nordgren, 167 Wn.App. 653 (2012), but see: State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632 (2009), see also: State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489, 508-10 (2011); II.

State v. Marohl, 170 Wn.2d 691 (2010)

Defendant forces victim to the floor, impact breaks his prosthetic arm and causes abrasions and bruises to victim's face, defendant is convicted of assault 3º; held: a floor is not an "instrument or thing likely to produce bodily harm," RCW 9A.36.031, State v. Shepard, 167 Wn.App. 887 (2012); a bare hand or arm is not a "weapon or other instrument or thing," State v. Altman, 23 Wn.App.2d 705 (2022), see: State v. Donofrio, 141 Wash. 132, 137-38 (1926); reverses State v. Marohl, 151 Wn.App. 469 (2009); 9-0.

State v. McKague, 172 Wn.2d 802 (2011)

Trial court's definition of "substantial" as "something having substance or actual existence" to support "substantial bodily harm/assault 2° was erroneous as it would make practically any demonstrable impairment or disfigurement a substanial injury no matter how minor; substanial, as used in RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a) (2007), signifies a degree of harm that is considerable and necessarily requires a showing greater than an injury merely having some existence, at 806 ¶ 8, "considerable in amount, value, or worth;" pain, by itself, is not substantial, at 807 n.3; Supreme Court expresses "no opinion whether a jury should be further instructed on the definition of "substantial," at 805 n.2; affirms State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489 (2011); per curiam.

State v. McKague, 159 Wn.App. 489, affirmed, 172 Wn.2d 802 (2011)

In assault 2°/substantial bodily harm case, scalp contusion, severe neck and shoulder pain, puffy face, bump on head, swelling around eye, abrasion of cheek, laceration to head are sufficient for "temporary but substantial disfigurement," RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b); dizziness, concussion without loss of consciousness is sufficient for "temporary substantial impairment of bodily part or organ function," at 501-06, RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b), State v. Hovig, 149 Wn.App. 1 (2009); recklessness instruction that reads "when recklessness as to a particular fact is required to establish an element of a crime, the element is also established if a person acts intentionally or knowingly" does not relieve state of burden, State v. Nordgren, 167 Wn.App. 653 (2012), curing problem in State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632 (2009), at 159 Wn.App. 508-10; 2-1, II.

State v. Jarvis, 160 Wn.App. 111, 118-19 (2011)

"[I]ntent required for assault is merely the intent to make physical contact with the victim, not the intent that the contact be a malicious or criminal act," at ¶ 11, State v. Hall, 104 Wn.App. 56, 62 (2000); II.

State v. Abuan, 161 Wn.App. 135, 154-60 (2011)

Evidence shows that defendant shot at a garage, victim specified in information is in the house next to the garage, defendant is convicted of assault 2°; held: absent a transferred intent instruction, evidence is insufficient where information specifies a victim as the intended victim and alleges that defendant assaulted another, see: State v. Elmi, 166 Wn.2d 209 (2009), State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97, 102 (1998), gun was not pointed directly at victim, see: State v. Miller, 71 Wn.2d 143 (1967); 2-1, II.

State v. Frasquillo, 161 Wn.App. 907 (2011)

Transferred intent instruction must include language that defendant acts with intent to assault a person but the act harms another or places another in apprehension of harm, at 915-16, State v. Elmi, 166 Wn.2d 209, 218 (2009); where there is evidence that defendant intended to assault more than one person in a drive-by shooting at a house, the act of shooting is a substantial step towards assaulting every person in the house, at 916-17, State v. Ferreira, 69 Wn.App. 465, 469-70 (1993); where a shooting into a house does not harm or place occupants in apprehension of harm, evidence is sufficient to prove attempted assault; transferred intent applies to attempted assault; II.

State v. Harris, 164 Wn.App. 377 (2011)

In assault of a child 1°, RCW 9A.36.120(1)(b)(1), defining "reckless" in instruction to include "wrongful act" is error as the crime requires proof that defendant recklessly disregarded that great bodily harm would occur, State v. Gamble, 154 Wn.App. 457 (2005), but see: State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 304-07 (2014); II.

State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 574-77 (2012)

In assault 2° by strangulation case, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(g) (2011), court need not instruct jury that defendant intended to obstruct blood flow or breathing where court instructs that, to convict, defendant intentionally assaulted victim by strangulation; I.

State v. Cortes Aguilar, 176 Wn.App. 264, 275-77 (2013)

Transferred intent need not be included in an assault information, State v. Clinton, 25 Wn.App. 400 (1980), State v. Wilson, 113 Wn.App. 122, 131 (2002); III.

State v. Bauer, 180 Wn.2d 929 (2014))

Defendant leaves loaded gun on dresser, 9-year old visitor takes gun to school and shoots another student, defendant is charged with assault 3° "[w]ith criminal negligence, causes bodily harm to another person by means of a weapon…," RCW 9A.36.031(1)(d) (2011), trial court denies Knapstad motion; held: legal cause in criminal cases is narrower than legal cause in tort cases; where gun was taken without owner's permission or knowledge and later used to cause injury legal causation is not satisfied, McGrane v. Cline, 94 Wn.App. 925 (1999), cf.: State v. Harris, 199 Wn.App. 137 (2017); reverses State v. Bauer, 174 Wn.App. 59 (2013); 6-3.

State v. Alcantar-Maldonado, 184 Wn.App. 215, 223-27 (2014)

RCW 9A.36.011(1) (1997), assault 1º with a firearm and intent to inflict great bodily harm, does not oblige state to prove that bodily injury be inflicted; III.

State v. Rodriquez, 187 Wn.App. 922, 930-334 (2015)

Assault 2° by strangulation, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(g) (2011), applies equally to complete and partial obstructions of a victim's ability either to breathe or to experience blood flow, victim having difficulty breathing is sufficient; I.

State v. Cardenas-Flores, 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017)

Assault 2° based on battery does not require specific intent to inflict substantial bodily harm, state need prove only that defendant intended to do the physical act constituting an assault, State v. Hall, 104 Wn.App. 56 (2000); in assault on a child by a parent court need not include "with unlawful force" in to convict instruction unless defense claims that the force used was lawful, see: WPIC 35.50 (2014) note and comment; reverses, on other grounds, State v. Cardenas-Flores, 194 Wn.App. 496 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Mancilla, 197 Wn.App. 631 (2017)

Defendant shoots into a house that is occupied, claims evidence is insufficient to show that he intended to assault a person; held: to prove assault state must offer evidence that defendant intended to harm an actual person, here circumstantial evidence was sufficient as cars were parked outside the residence at 4:00 a.m., distinguishing State v. Ferreira, 69 Wn.App. 465, 469 (1993); III.

State v. Shelley, 3 Wn.App.2d 196 (2018)

Defendant lives with girlfriend and her minor son, assaults girlfriend's son, is convicted of assault with domestic violence enhancement; held: for purposes of sentence enhancement RCW 9.94A.525(21) (2013) limits domestic violence as defined in RCW 9.94A.030(20) (2015) which includes children in common or children 16 years or older residing in the same household, RCW 9.94A.030(3) (2004); while victim's age here is not disclosed in opinion, by context it is less than 16 and thus domestic violence aggravator was improper; I.

State v. Melland, 9 Wn.App.2d 786 (2019)

Defendant is charged with assault 2°/RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a) (2011)/intentional assault and recklessly cause substantial bodily harm, evidence shows that he grabbed a phone complainant was holding and her finger broke; held: evidence is insufficient to show that defendant knew of a substantial risk and disregarded the risk that a wrongful act may occur, thus state failed to prove recklessness, RCW 9A.08.010(1)(c); I.

State v. Loos, 14 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020)

Defendant is charged with assault of a child 3°, is convicted of assault 4° as an inferior degree offense; held: assault 4° is not an inferior degree offense of assault 3° by criminal negligence, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(f) (2013), as assault 4° requires proof of intent; I.

State v. Birge, 16 Wn.App.2d 16 (2021)

Police officers advise mother to beat her misbehaving child with a belt, child is injured, officers are charged with official misconduct and assault of a child, RCW 9A.36.140(1), trial court dismisses; held: state's evidence, if true, is sufficient to establish a prima facie case of assault of a child as accomplices and official misconduct, RCW 9A.80.010(1); II.

State v. Christian, 18 Wn.App.2d 185 (2021)

Defendant is charged with assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(g), by strangulation and suffocation, no evidence at trial discusses suffocation, jury is instructed on both; held: strangulation and suffocation are means within a means and not alternative means; I.

State v. Griepsma, 17 Wn.App.2d 606 (2021)

For purposes of assault 3°, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(g), corrections officers employed by the county sheriff are law enforcement officers; custodial assault, RCW 9A.36.100(1), is not concurrent with assault 3°, thus state did not err in charging assault 3° of jail staff; I.

Matter of Mulamba, 199 Wn.2d 488 (2022)

Assault of a child 1° and 2° are alternative means crimes that do not require a unanimity instruction, State v. Kiser, 87 Wn.App. 126 (1997); 8-1.

State v. Altman, 23 Wn.App.2d 705 (2022)

Assault 3° with criminal negligence by means of a weapon or other instrument or thing likely to produce bodily harm, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(d) (2013), is not violated where the defendant used his hand only, State v. Marohl, 170 Wn.2d 691 (2010); II.

Matter of Arntsen, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL20726 (2023)

In road rage incident defendant walks towards complainant's car carrying a rifle aggressively, does not point the weapon at complainant, is convicted of assault 2° with a deadly weapon; held: while specific intent to create reasonable fear and apprehension of bodily injury may be inferred from pointing a gun, State v. Byrd, 125 Wn.2d 707, 713 (1995), but cannot be inferred from mere display of a gun, State v. Eastmond, 129 Wn.2d 497, 502-03 (1996), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Easterlin, 159 Wn.2d 203 (2006); I.

ASSAULT
Lesser Included/Lesser Degree Offenses

State v. Siverson, 40 Wn.App. 518 (1985)

Negligent driving is not a lesser of assault 2°, even if the assault was alleged to have been committed with a motor vehicle; elements of the lesser offense must invariably be inherent in the greater offense and be part of the same act; I.

State v. Partosa, 41 Wn.App. 266 (1985)

Unlawfully discharging a firearm, RCW 9.41.230, is not a lesser of assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.020; state concedes that unlawfully displaying a weapon, RCW 9.41.270, is a lesser of assault 3°; see: State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990), State v. Lucky, 128 Wn.2d 727 (1996); I.

State v. Sample, 52 Wn.App. 52 (1988)

Simple assault, former RCW 9A.36.040, is not lesser of assault 3° by criminal negligence; II.

State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 487 (1991)

Although unlawful display of weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), is lesser of assault 2°, State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564 (2000), where defendant did not offer evidence at trial that he intended to intimidate victim or he displayed gun in manner which would cause victim alarm, then defendant was not entitled to instruction, see: State v. Fernandez-Medina, 114 Wn.2d 448 (2000), State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004), but see: State v. Coryell, 197 Wn.2d 397 (2021), cf.: State v. Avington, 23 Wn.App.2d 847 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Daniels, 56 Wn.App. 646 (1990)

Assault 3° was properly not given as a lesser of assault 2° [grievous bodily harm with or without a weapon, former RCW 9A.36.020(1)(b)] because assault 2° requires a weapon, and because "it is inconceivable [defendant] did not knowingly inflict grievous bodily harm," distinguishing RCW 10.61.003; I.

State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993)

While unlawful display is a lesser of assault 2°, State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990), where defendant admits pointing shotgun at another, evidence does not support inference that only unlawful display statute was violated, see: State v. Fernandez-Medina, 114 Wn.2d 448 (2000), State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564 (2000), but see: State v. Coryell, 197 Wn.2d 397 (2021); II

State v. Ferreira, 69 Wn.App. 465 (1993)

In response to prior drive-by shooting, defendant directs others to drive to a house, knowing the others in the car would shoot up the house, no evidence that shooters saw anyone in house, defendant is convicted of accomplice to assault 1°; held: evidence insufficient to support a finding that shooters acted with intent to inflict great bodily harm, but is sufficient to support finding that they intended to create apprehension or fear to the likely occupants, thus defendant is guilty of assault 2°, State v. Frasquillo, 161 Wn.App. 907, 918 (2011), cf.: State v. Woo Won Choi, 55 Wn.App. 895, 906 (1989), see: State v. Mancilla, 197 Wn.App. 631 (2017); reckless endangerment, RCW 9A.36.045, is not a lesser of assault 1°, State v. Rivera, 85 Wn.App. 296, 302 (1997), State v. Prado, 144 Wn.App. 227, 242 (2008); III.

Seattle v. Wilkins, 72 Wn.App. 753 (1994)

Intentional simple assault is not a lesser of a local ordinance charging reckless or intentional assault in the alternative, as intent cannot be a lesser of reckless; I.

State v. Hurchalla, 75 Wn.App. 417 (1994), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000)

Unlawful display of a firearm, RCW 9.41.270, is not a lesser of assault 2°, State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1 (1993), State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174 (1991), but see: State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564 (2000), State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004); I.

State v. Herrera, 95 Wn.App. 328 (1999)

Assault 3° (resist lawful apprehension), RCW 9A.36.031(1)(a), is not a lesser of robbery; III.

State v. Laico, 97 Wn.App. 759 (1999)

Co-defendants are charged with assault 1°, principle claims self-defense, defendant seeks lesser of assault 4°, claiming he was not an accomplice of principal who acted with lawful force, since no crime would have been committed by the principal; held: evidence supports inference that only the lesser was committed; I.

State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000)

Assault 1° defendant points gun at victim who hears a click, defendant presents alibi defense and presents evidence through his own expert and cross-examination of state's expert that reasons other than pulling trigger may cause a click, trial court declines to instruct on inferior degree of assault 2°; held: a requested instruction on a lesser included or inferior degree offense should be given if the evidence would permit a jury to rationally find defendant guilty of the lesser offense and acquit him of the greater, State v. Warden, 133 Wn.2d 559, 563 (1997), see: State v. Coryell, 197 Wn.2d 397 (2021); while it is not enough that the jury might disbelieve the evidence pointing to guilt, State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59, 67 (1990), overruled on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479 (1991), here for purposes of the lesser analysis, the alibi defense may not preclude the court from instructing as to assault 2°, as jury could have disbelieved the alibi (which it did), but believe that defendant did not pull the trigger, State v. Hunter, 152 Wn.App. 30, 43-48 (2009), see: State v. McClam, 69 Wn.App. 885 (1993); reverses State v. Fernandez-Medina, 94 Wn.App. 263 (1999), overrules State v. Hurchalla, 75 Wn.App. 417 (1994), State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164 (1995); 8-1.

State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564, 569-71 (2000)

Defendant is charged with assault 2°, at bench trial court finds that defendant's capacity was diminished, acquits of assault 2° but convicts of unlawful display of a weapon; held: unlawful display is a legal lesser of assault 2°, State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59, 67 (1990), overruled on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 486-87 (1991); the manner in which defendant held the weapon warranted alarm for the safety of a police officer, coupled with evidence of defendant's diminished capacity to form the specific intent for assault, supports an inference that defendant committed only the offense of unlawful display of a weapon; III.

State v. Hall, 104 Wn.App. 56, 63-64 (2000)

Of the three means of assault [(1) battery, (2) attempt to inflict injury, and (3) placing victim in reasonable apprehension of injury], an attempted assault is a possible lesser to (1) and (3), not to (2), State v. Music, 40 Wn.App. 423, 432 (1985), State v. Godsey, 131 Wn.App. 278, 281-88 (2006); III.

State v. Walther, 114 Wn.App. 189, 192 (2002)

Assault 3° is a lesser degree offense of assault 1°, however where defendant uses a weapon, defendant is not entitled to instruction on assault 3° as a lesser, State v. Daniels, 56 Wn.App. 646 (1990); II.

State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 86-90 (2005)

Drunk defendant, charged with assault 2°/deadly weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(c), threatens and cuts victim with a sword, seeks lesser of assault 4°; held: while a sword is not a deadly weapon per se as defined in the enhancement statute, RCW 9.94A.602, court may consider circumstances of weapon's use, including intent and present ability of use, degree of force, part of body to which it was applied and physical injuries inflicted, State v. Shilling, 77 Wn.App. 166, 171 (1995); where record fails to support any rational inference that the assault was committed only with a non-deadly weapon, defendant is not entitled to the lesser instruction; II.

State v. Godsey, 131 Wn.App. 278, 288-90 (2006)

Resisting arrest, RCW 9A.76.040(1), is a lesser of assault 3º against a police officer, RCW 9A.36.030(1)(a), State v. Marshall, 37 Wn.App. 127, 128 (1984); III.

State v. Keend, 140 Wn.App. 858, 868-70 (2007)

Defendant punches victim, breaks jaw, is convicted of assault 2°/recklessly inflicts, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a), on appeal claims counsel was ineffective for not offering assault 4° as a lesser; held: absent evidence that supports defendant's theory that he did not recklessly inflict substantial bodily harm, evidence was insufficient to support an inference that defendant unlawfully touched victim but did not recklessly inflict serious harm; any reasonable person knows that punching someone in the face could result in a broken jaw which would constitute substantial harm, State v. R.H.S., 94 Wn.App. 844, 847 (1999), see: State v. Hovig, 149 Wn.App. 1 (2009); it is not enough to support a lesser that the jury might simply disbelieve the state's evidence, State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d 353, 355 (1995), State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360, 362 (1990); "not amounting to assault in the first degree," RCW 9A.36.021(1), is not an element of the crime that the state must prove or that the court must instruct, State v. Ward, 148 Wn.2d 803, 812-13 (2003), see: State v. Melland, 9 Wn.App.2d 786; II.

State v. Cuellar, 164 Wn.App. 701 (2011)

Resisting arrest is not a lesser of assault 3°; I.

ATTEMPT

State v. Stewart, 35 Wn.App. 552 (1983)

In attempted rape case, reversible error to fail to instruct jury that attempt must include "intent" and "substantial step," State v. Jackson, 62 Wn.App. 53 (1991), see: State v. Rhode, 63 Wn.App. 630 (1991), State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623, 635-38 (2013); I.

State v. Austin, 39 Wn.App. 109 (1984)

An attempt to obtain drugs by a forged prescription, RCW 69.50.403(2)(3), is a felony and does not fall under the general attempt statute, RCW 9A.28.020; I.

State v. Allen, 101 Wn.2d 355 (1984)

The level of culpability which must be proved for an attempted crime is that mental state which must be proved for the substantive offense; defense is entitled to have the mental state element defined for the jury; 5-4.

State v. Jackson, 62 Wn.App. 53 (1991)

Defendant orders 14-year old to lift up her skirt or he would kill her, backs her up but never touches her, is convicted of attempted rape 2°; held: evidence was sufficient, as it is doubtful that, under substantial step requirement, an overt act toward penetration is necessary to prove attempted rape, distinguishing State v. Meyer, 37 Wn.2d 759, 771 (1951); substantial step can be proved by (1) lying in wait, searching for or following the contemplated victim, (2) enticing or seeking to entice the victim to go to the place contemplated for the commission of the crime; and (3) unlawful entry of place where it is contemplated the crime will be committed, State v. Workman, 90 Wn.2d 443, 451 n. 2 (1978); I.

State v. Billups, 62 Wn.App. 122 (1991)

Defendant leans out his van window and says to juvenile, "I'll pay you a dollar if you'll come down to [a park] with me," hides when police approach; held: sufficient to convict of attempted kidnap 2°; attempt statute, RCW 9A.28.020, is neither vague nor overbroad; I, 2-1.

State v. Dunbar, 117 Wn.2d 587 (1991)

Murder 1° by creation of a grave risk of death, former RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), lacks element of intent, thus attempted murder is not a lesser, as attempted murder requires the specific intent to cause the death of another person; cf.: State v. Chhom, 128 Wn.2d 739 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Rhode, 63 Wn.App. 630 (1991)

"Attempt" in information encompasses and is sufficient to inform defendant that "substantial step" is element of the crime, State v. Smith, 49 Wn.App. 596, 599 (1987), State v. Gallegos, 65 Wn.App. 230 (1992), State v. Berglund, 65 Wn.App. 648 (1992), State v. Borrero, 97 Wn.App. 101 (1999); I.

State v. Gallegos, 65 Wn.App. 230 (1992)

An attempt is a lesser which need not be charged for trier of fact to convict; information which alleges defendant, "by forcible compulsion did attempt to engage in sexual intercourse" sufficiently establishes elements of intent and substantial step where challenged for first time on appeal; accord: State v. Berglund, 65 Wn.App. 648 (1992); I.

State v. Hale, 65 Wn.App. 752 (1992)

Defendant gives child 40 times sleeping pill dose, states she did it so they would go to sleep and never wake up; held: sufficient to establish substantial step for murder 1° as it is no defense that true facts render commission of a completed crime legally or factually impossible, RCW 9A.28.020(2), physician testified that dose could have been lethal; III.

State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332 (1992)

ER 404(b) "handiwork" evidence can establish intent requirement of attempted burglary; III.

State v. Lynn, 67 Wn.App. 339 (1992)

Police deliver counterfeit drugs to defendant who is convicted of attempted possession, RCW 69.50.407; held: impossibility is not a defense under the general attempt statute, RCW 9A.28.020, State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666, 679-80 (2002), or under the VUCSA attempt law, RCW 69.50.407, State v. Wojtyna, 70 Wn.App. 689 (1993), see: State v. Davidson, 20 Wn.App. 893, 898 (1979); I.

State v. Pacheco, 70 Wn.App. 27 (1993), reversed, 125 Wn.2d 150 (1994)

One can attempt to deliver a controlled substance where the sole accomplice is an undercover police informant who committed the crime, albeit with police permission, State v. Davidson, 20 Wn.App. 893, 897-8 (1978), State v. Peterson, 54 Wn.App. 75 (1989); II.

State v. Walsh, 123 Wn.2d 741, 747 (1994)

Neither legal nor factual impossibility is a defense to an attempted crime, State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666, 679-80 (2002), State v. Wilson, 158 Wn.App. 305, 316-20 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Grundy, 76 Wn.App. 335 (1994)

Officer approaches suspect, asks what he wants, suspect replies "coke," officer asks if suspect has money, suspect says yes, suspect is arrested, convicted of attempted possession of drugs; held: while there is sufficient evidence of intent, an overt act requires more than mere preparation; it must be "a direct, ineffectual act done toward commission of a crime and, where the design of a person to commit a crime is clearly shown, slight acts done in furtherance of this design will constitute an attempt," State v. Roby, 67 Wn.App. 741, 746-7 (1992); here, parties were still negotiating, insufficient evidence of overt act, cf.: State v. Wilson, 158 Wn.App. 305, 316-20 (2010), State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017); III.

State v. Aumick, 126 Wn.2d 422, 428-31 (1995)

Failure to require proof of intent and substantial step in to convict instruction for an attempt is constitutional error, State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017), affirming State v. Aumick, 73 Wn.App. 379, 384-6 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Chhom, 128 Wn.2d 739 (1996)

Rape of a child, RCW 9A.44.073, can support attempted rape of a child irrespective of the lack of a mens rea element in the greater offense, State v. Patel, 170 Wn.2d 476 (2010), distinguishing State v. Dunbar, 117 Wn.2d 587, 590 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845, 851-54 (2000)

Firing a gun once into a vehicle with two people in it is sufficient to prove two counts of attempted murder, even if there is no evidence that defendant knew the car was occupied by more than one person; II.

State v. Red, 105 Wn.App. 51 (2001)

Because manslaughter is not a specific intent crime, then attempted manslaughter is not a lesser of attempted murder; II.

State v. Borrero, 147 Wn.2d 353 (2002)

Attempted murder information fails to allege "substantial step," RCW 9A.28.020(1), defense moves to dismiss after state rests; held: "substantial step" is commonly understood from the word "attempt," thus defendant had sufficient notice, see also: Pers. Restraint of Borrero, 161 Wn.2d 532 (2007); 5-4.

State v. DeRyke, 149 Wn.2d 906 (2003)

In attempted rape 1° case, "to convict" instruction fails to set forth the degree of rape attempted, but other instruction defines rape 1°, and verdict form states that the crime charged is attempted rape 1°; held: while it was error to give "to convict" instruction without specifying degree, because no lessers were given, the error was harmless; affirms State v. DeRyke, 110 Wn.App. 815, 819-21 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Luther, 157 Wn.2d 63 (2006)

State proves defendant possessed photos of what appear to be minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, but state does not prove age of minors, court convicts defendant of attempted possessing depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, RCW 9.68A.070; held: while one cannot be found guilty of possession of child pornography unless it is proved to actually be child pornography, Ashcroft v. Free Speech Coalition, 152 L.Ed.2d 403 (2002), First Amendment does not preclude conviction of attempted possession without proof of age of the minors, United States v. Williams, 170 L.Ed.2d 650 (2008), see also: State v. Aljutily, 149 Wn.App. 286 (2009); affirms State v. Luther, 125 Wn.App. 176 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Reed, 150 Wn.App. 761, 769-70 (2009)

Attempted murder to convict instruction need not set forth the elements of murder where another instruction sets forth the elements of murder, State v. Besabe, 166 Wn.App. 872, 883-84 (2012), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 757-58 (2012), State v. Boswell, 185 Wn.App. 321, 335-37 (2014), State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 809-10 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018), State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021), State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021), State v. Canela, 199 Wn.2d 321 (2022); II.

State v. Wilson, 158 Wn.App. 305, 316-20 (2010)

Defendant engages in e-mail exchange with officer posing as a woman offering sex for money with herself and her teenage daughter, agrees to price and sex acts, agrees to a meeting place, is arrested in his car with the agreed sum, challenges sufficiency; held: evidence was sufficient to establish a substantial step, State v. Sivins, 138 Wn.App. 52, 62-65 (2007), State v. Townsend, 147 Wn.2d 666, 679 (2002); I.

State v. Oakley, 158 Wn.App. 544, 549-50 (2010)

Pointing a gun and attempting to fire it even though it jams is sufficient to prove attempted drive-by shooting; II.

State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623, 635-38 (2013)

Instructing jury that a substantial step is conduct that "strongly indicates" a criminal purpose rather than "strongly corroborates" does not relieve state of burden to prove intent; instructing jury that a substantial step must strongly indicate "a criminal purpose" as opposed to the specific criminal purpose is not error, State v. Eplett, 167 Wn.App. 660, 666 (2012), distinguishing State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000); II.

State v. Alexander, 184 Wn.App. 892 (2014)

Criminal attempt statute, RCW 9A.28.020 (2001), does not violate single subject and subject in title rules, CONST. Art. 2, § 19; II.

State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 809-10 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018)

In attempted murder 1° case, to convict instruction sets out elements of attempt, separate instruction defines murder 1°; held: in a charge of an attempted crime the to convict instruction need not set out all of the elements of the substantive crime where a separate instruction defines and includes all of the elements of the substantive crime, State v. DeRyke, 149 Wn.2d 906, 910 (2003), State v. Reed, 150 Wn.App. 761, 772 (2009), State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021), State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021), State v. Canela, 199 Wn.2d 321 (2022); I.

State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017)

Defendant-stepparent asks five-year old, in bedroom, to "suck on his spot," victim says no, defendant says "go ahead," victim says no again, defendant says okay, is charged with attempted rape of a child; held: in the context of defendant being a caretaker of young victim who "directs" victim to have sexual contact in an isolated place evidence is sufficient to prove attempt, State v. Jackson, 62 Wn.App. 53, 57 (1991), distinguishing State v. Grundy, 76 Wn.App. 335 (1994); I.

State v. Nelson, 191 Wn.2d 61 (2018)

Defendant enters pharmacy, at gunpoint demands drugs and money from pharmacist who says he lacks access to either, defendant leaves, is charged with attempted robbery, argues to trial court that an element of attempted robbery is that victim had ownership, representative, or possessory interest in the property, court declines to so instruct; held: elements in a prosecution of criminal attempt are (1) intent to commit a specific crime, and (2) any act which is a substantial step toward the commission of that crime, forcibly taking personal property from the person or his or her presence implies that that person, and not the defendant, has a superior possessory right to the item being taken, overruling State v. Richie, 191 Wn.App. 916 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Briggs, 18 Wn.App.2d 544 (2021)

Information alleging attempted violation of a no contact order must include mens rea element that defendant intended to commit the specific crime; I.

BILL OF PARTICULARS

State v. Dailey, 93 Wn.2d 454 (1980)

Failure to provide bill of particulars, where ordered, is grounds for CrR 8.3(b) motion to dismiss; 9-0.

State v. Maurer, 34 Wn.App. 573 (1983)

A bill of particulars is part of the state's pleading for purposes of pretrial factual consideration; pretrial motion to dismiss for factual insufficiency may properly be based on information and bill, State v. Morton, 83 Wn.2d 863 (1974), State ex rel. Clark v. Hogan, 49 Wn.2d 457 (1956); II.

State v. Holt, 104 Wn.2d 315 (1985)

Where information fails to allege a statutory element of the crime, defense may move to dismiss at any time; failure of the defense to request a bill of particulars does not waive the issue as a bill of particulars is not a part of the information and cannot cure a fundamentally defective information; a complete jury instruction cannot cure a defective information; 9-0.

State v. Peerson, 62 Wn.App. 755 (1991)

Where instructions fail to include names of victims set forth in bill of particulars, no error since defense would have been the same even if victims were named, thus no prejudice; I.

State v. Allen, 116 Wn.App. 454, 459-60 (2003)

Defendant is not entitled to a bill of particulars to explain whether state contends he was an accomplice or principal, as there is no distinction between accomplice or principal liability, the charging of one theory adequately apprises defendant of his liability for the other, State v. Molina, 83 Wn.App. 144, 148 (1996); III.

State v. Turner, 167 Wn.App. 871, 879-82 (2012)

Defendant grabs officer's waist during arrest process, after cuffing head butts officer, is convicted of assault 3°, on appeal argues defense counsel was ineffective for not demanding a bill of particulars as to which event was the assault; held: there was a continuing course of assaultive behavior, thus a bill of particulars would not have limited the prosecutor to one act, trial court was not obliged to grant a bill even if demanded; 2-1, III.

BURGLARY/CRIMINAL TRESPASS

State v. Mace, 97 Wn.2d 840 (1982)

Possession of recently stolen property, unless accompanied by other evidence of guilt, is not prima facie evidence of burglary; see: State v. Rodriquez, 20 Wn.App. 876 (1978), State v. Evans, 45 Wn.App. 678 (1986), State v. Ehrhardt, 167 Wn.App. 934, 939-41 (2012; 9-0.

State v. Mounsey, 31 Wn.App. 511 (1982)

Criminal trespass 2° is not a lesser of burglary 1°; III.

State v. Loucks, 98 Wn.2d 563 (1983)

Tracking dog evidence, while admissible, State v. Socolof, 28 Wn.App. 407 (1981), is not sufficient, without corroboration, to sustain conviction of burglary, reversing State v. Loucks, 32 Wn.App. 77 (1981); see: State v. Nicholas, 34 Wn.App. 775 (1983), State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 223 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 100 Wn.2d 607 (1983)

In burglary case, inference of intent instruction, RCW 9A.52.040, may not be given when defendant does not present evidence on the issue of intent; extensive discussion of various types and effects of presumptions; modified: State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1 (1985); see: State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98 (1995), State v. Deal, 128 Wn.2d 693 (1996); 6-3.

State v. Gilbert, 33 Wn.App. 753 (1983)

Burglary 1°, RCW 9A.52.020, is committed when defendant assaults any person while defendant is entering any dwelling, while he is in the dwelling or while he is in immediate flight from the dwelling, but see: State v. Gilbert, 68 Wn.App. 379 (1993), see: State v. Koss, 158 Wn.App. 8, 14-16 (2010), affirmed, on other grounds, 181 Wn.2d 493 (2014); III.

State v. Tyson, 33 Wn.App. 859 (1983)

Entering a detachable semitrailer, with intent to commit a crime, is burglary; I.

State v. Schneider, 36 Wn.App. 237 (1983)

Estranged wife arranges for others to break into husband's home, which was community property, argues no unlawful entry is possible; held: test for determining unlawfulness of entry is occupancy or possession, not ownership, State v. Klein, 195 Wash. 338, 342 (1938); I.

State v. Fryer, 36 Wn.App. 312 (1983)

Defendant enters building unlawfully but maintains his intent to commit a crime developed after entry; held: criminal intent for purposes of burglary may occur at the time of unlawful entry or at any time thereafter so long as defendant "remains unlawfully"; assault does not merge into burglary 1°, State v. Hunter, 35 Wn.App. 312 (1983), State v. Davison, 56 Wn.App. 554 (1990), State v. Davis, 90 Wn.App. 777, 783-5 (1998), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 677 (1979); but see: State v. Ortiz, 77 Wn.App. 790 (1995); I.

State v. McDaniels, 39 Wn.App. 236 (1984)

Suspects enter church during services, are ordered to leave, return later and steal a coat; held: although church was open to public, defendant was not licensed, invited or privileged to enter or remain, thus evidence sufficient to convict, accord: State v. Kutch, 90 Wn.App. 244 (1998), see: State v. Miller, 90 Wn.App. 720 (1998); II.

State v. Brown, 39 Wn.App. 549 (1984)

An accomplice need not have actual knowledge of the principal's being armed to be convicted of burglary 1°, but must have such knowledge to enhance penalty by a deadly weapon finding, following State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982), State v. Davis, 35 Wn.App. 506 (1983), but see: State v. Plakke, 31 Wn.App. 262 (1982), State v. Van Pilon, 32 Wn.App. 944 (1982); I.

State v. Loucks, 98 Wn.2d 563 (1983)

Tracking dog evidence, while admissible, State v. Socolof, 28 Wn.App. 407 (1981), is not sufficient, without corroboration, to sustain conviction of burglary, reversing State v. Loucks, 32 Wn.App. 77 (1981); 9-0.

State v. Steinbach, 101 Wn.2d 460 (1984)

Juvenile files alternative residential placement petition, RCW 13.32A.150, is placed by court in alternative residence; parent tells respondent she could not live at home, but could visit; ARP order does not order respondent out of home; held: no unlawful entry, thus no burglary of parent's home is possible; reverses State v. Steinbach, 35 Wn.App. 473 (1983); see: State v. Walsh, 57 Wn.App. 488 (1990), State v. Jensen, 57 Wn.App. 501 (1990); 5-4.

State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1 (1985)

The specific crime intended to be committed inside burglarized premises is not an element of burglary that must be included in the information, jury instructions, State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 196-99 (2014), or findings and conclusions except where the specific crime intended by the burglar is material to defendant's theory of the case, wherein a bill of particulars should be ordered, overruling State v. Johnson, 100 Wn.2d 607 (1983), cf.: Kreck v. Spalding, 721 F.2d 1229 (9th Cir. 1983); inference of intent instruction, RCW 9A.52.040, WPIC 60.05, is approved for burglary and attempted burglary cases except where defendant's conduct is patently equivocal, State v. Woods, 63 Wn.App. 588, 591-2 (1991), State v. Sandoval, 123 Wn.App. 1 (2004), see: State v. Grayson, 48 Wn.App. 667 (1987), State v. Rivas, 49 Wn.App. 677, 686 (1987), State v. Jackson, 51 Wn.App. 100 (1988); 6-3.

State v. Couch, 44 Wn.App. 26 (1986)

An enclosed area beneath a building is part of the building, RCW 9A.04.110(5), cf.: State v. Dunleavy, 2 Wn.App.2d 420, 427-31 (2018); II.

State v. Lira, 45 Wn.App. 653 (1986)

Statutory definition of building, RCW 9A.04.110(5), is not vague; I.

State v. Evans, 45 Wn.App. 678 (1986)

Mere possession of recently stolen property is not prima facie evidence of burglary, State v. Mace, 97 Wn.2d 840, 843 (1982); evidence of flight, attempts to dispose of evidence prior to arrest, improbable or false explanation by suspect, presence near the scene of the crime are sufficient, State v. Ehrhardt, 167 Wn.App. 934, 939-41 (2012); III.

State v. Soto, 45 Wn.App. 839 (1986)

Criminal trespass 1° is a lesser of burglary 2°; I.

State v. Southerland, 45 Wn.App. 885 (1986)

Defendant, charged with burglary 1°, testifies he was lawfully in the building and did not assault anyone; state's evidence asserts defendant was unlawfully in building, inconsistent as to an assault; court refuses criminal trespass 1° instruction; held: because jury could have believed some of defendant's testimony but not all of it, defense is entitled to trespass instruction as a lesser; aiming a firearm, RCW 9.41.230, is not a lesser of assault 2°; II.

State v. Hall, 46 Wn.App. 689 (1987)

Stealing a firearm during a burglary is sufficient to enhance from burglary 2° to burglary 1°, RCW 9A.52.020(1), State v. Hernandez, 172 Wn.App. 537 (2012), State v. Hernandez, 172 Wn.App. 537 (2012), but see: Pers. Restraint of Martinez, 171 Wn.2d 354 (2011), State v. Gotcher, 52 Wn.App. 350 (1988); accord: State v. Faille, 53 Wn.App. 111 (1988), State v. Speece, 56 Wn.App. 412 (1990); III.

State v. Peters, 47 Wn.App. 854 (1987)

Defendant admits to burglary, claims duress, excepts to court's failure to instruct as to trespass as a lesser; held: unless the evidence supports an inference that only the lesser crime had been committed, defendant is not entitled to an instruction on the lesser, distinguishing State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397 (1985); I.

State v. Kilponen, 47 Wn.App. 912 (1987)

State need not prove that a victim was inside a dwelling to prove burglary 1°; III.

State v. Scott, 48 Wn.App. 561 (1987)

While mere presence at scene of burglary is insufficient to convict as an accomplice, State v. Rotunno, 95 Wn.2d 931 (1981), In re Wilson, 91 Wn.2d 487 (1979), finding defendant in back seat of burglar's vehicle with the stolen property is sufficient, State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936 (2013); I.

State v. Grayson, 48 Wn.App. 667 (1987)

Evidence sufficient to establish intent to commit theft where defendant knocked on victim's door morning of offense, was aware house was occupied by a person he did not know, forced open door, fled upon discovery; I.

State v. Rivas, 49 Wn.App. 677 (1987)

Although information alleges that the intended crime was theft, to convict instruction need not specify same as the language in the information was mere surplusage, State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1 (1985), State v. McGary, 37 Wn.App. 856 (1984), cf.: Musacchio v.

United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), see: State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882 (1982), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998); I.

State v. Kolisynk, 49 Wn.App. 890 (1987)

Unlawful entry of a gas station building to turn on pumps in order to steal gas from pump located outside building is sufficient to convict of burglary as the entry was done with intent to commit theft of electricity and the service delivery system within the building; see: State v. Black, 86 Wn.App. 791, 794 (1997); I.

State v. Brown, 50 Wn.App. 873 (1988)

A fenced area is not a building for purposes of criminal trespass 1°, RCW 9A.52.070; I.

State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988)

Defendant is invited into residence to use telephone, after which he assaults victim; held: a limitation on or revocation of the privilege to be on premises may be inferred from the circumstances; here, once defendant finished with the telephone and grabbed victim, his privilege to be present was revoked, State v. Gohl, 109 Wn.App. 817, 823-24 (2001), reversing State v. Collins, 48 Wn.App. 95 (1987), State v. Lambert, 199 Wn.App. 51, 72-77 (2017), cf.: State v. Miller, 90 Wn.App. 720 (1998), State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003), disapproved, in part, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005), see: State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 872-77 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Faille, 53 Wn.App. 111 (1988)

Stealing an unloaded gun during a burglary is sufficient to enhance to burglary 1°; accord: State v. Speece, 56 Wn.2d 412 (1990), see also: State v. Chiariello, 66 Wn.App. 241 (1992); I.

State v. Jackson, 112 Wn.2d 867 (1989)

Inference of intent instruction, RCW 9A.52.040, WPIC 60.05, should not be given in attempted burglary case, see: State v. Bencivenga, 137 Wn.2d 703 (1999), State v. Brooks, 107 Wn.App. 925 (2001), but see: State v. Berglund, 65 Wn.App. 648 (1992); malicious mischief is not a lesser included offense of attempted burglary; 7-2 (inference), 9-0 (lesser).

State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360 (1990)

Defendant, charged with burglary 1°, testifies he did not commit a crime, objects to failure of trial court to instruct on lesser of burglary 2°; held: as there is no affirmative evidence in record that would support an inference that defendant was not armed during the burglary, once the jury found that he was the burglar, then defense is not entitled to instruction on lesser, State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990); effectively overrules State v. Wilson, 41 Wn.App. 397 (1985); accord: State v. Charles, 126 Wn.2d 353 (1995), see: State v. Fernandez-Medina, 114 Wn.2d 448 (2000), see: State v. Coryell, 197 Wn.2d 397 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Lucca, 56 Wn.App. 597 (1990)

Fingerprint on a broken out window at point of entry where window was not accessible to public, victim did not know defendant, is sufficient to convict of burglary even though no evidence was presented establishing whether fingerprint was on inside or outside of window or age of print, or placing defendant at or near residence at time of offense, distinguishing State v. Sewell, 49 Wn.2d 244 (1956), see: State v. Bridge, 91 Wn.App. 98 (1998); I.

State v. Howe, 116 Wn.2d 466 (1991)

A parental order prohibiting minor child from entering parent's home is sufficient to revoke privilege for purposes of unlawful entry element of burglary where parents have provided some alternative means of assuring that the parents' statutory duty of care is met, State v. Steinbach, 101 Wn.2d 460 (1984); affirms State v. Walsh, 57 Wn.App. 488 (1990) and State v. Jensen, 57 Wn.App. 501 (1990); reverses State v. Howe, 57 Wn.App. 63 (1990); see: State v. Woods, 63 Wn.App. 588 (1991), State v. Crist, 80 Wn.App. 511 (1996), State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Woods, 63 Wn.App. 588 (1991)

Mother arranges for son to live with another family, grants permission to enter home only when mother is present; defendant and son break door and enter home, act surprised that mother is home from work ill, run off; at trial, defendant testifies that son told him he was going in for a coat, son's property still in house; held: manner of entry supports sufficient evidence of unlawful entry; patently equivocal evidence of defendant and son's intent upon entry will not support inference of intent to commit crime, RCW 9A.52.030(1), State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1, 20 (1985), State v. Couch, 44 Wn.App. 26, 32 (1986), State v. Sandoval, 123 Wn.App. 1 (2004), thus burglary reversed; I.

State v. Berglund, 65 Wn.App. 648 (1992)

In attempted burglary 2°, fingerprint evidence establishing that burglar broke glass from outside then pulled more glass from window outward establishes entry, RCW 9A.52.010(2), thus inference of intent instruction, RCW 9A.52.040, WPIC 60.05, may be given, distinguishing State v. Jackson, 112 Wn.2d 867 (1988), see: State v. Bencivenga, 137 Wn.2d 703 (1999), State v. Brooks, 107 Wn.App. 925 (2001); I.

State v. Chiariello, 66 Wn.App. 241 (1992)

Mere threat to use a weapon, or searching in pocket for weapon without production of weapon, is insufficient to convict of burglary 1°, State v. Faille, 53 Wn.App. 111, 113 (1988), State v. Gotcher, 52 Wn.App. 350, 353 (1988), see: Pers. Restraint of Martinez, 171 Wn.2d 354 (2011); III.

State v. Gilbert, 68 Wn.App. 379 (1993)

An assault outside a burglarized dwelling does not elevate residential burglary to burglary 1°, but see: State v. Gilbert, 33 Wn.App. 753 (1983); I.

State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509 (1993)

Burglary in an attached garage is residential burglary, RCW 9A.52.025(1), State v. Neal, 161 Wn.App. 111 (2011), State v. Moran, 181 Wn.App. 316, 321-23 (2014), State v. McPherson, 186 Wn.App. 114 (2015); III.

State v. Hummell, 68 Wn.App. 538 (1993)

Where defendant testifies he was invited into residence by a person in possession and committed assault after the invitation, then assault 4° is a lesser of burglary 1°; II.

State v. Pollnow, 69 Wn.App. 160 (1993)

Where underlying crime is not alleged as an element, State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1 (1985), court need not define elements of underlying crime or instruct as to defenses to underlying crime; III.

Pers. Restraint of Ness, 70 Wn.App. 817 (1993)

While possession of recently stolen property alone is insufficient to support a burglary conviction, "slight corroborative evidence of other inculpatory circumstances" is sufficient, State v. Mace, 97 Wn.2d 840, 843 (1982); observation of defendant's car at area of burglary on day it occurred plus defendant's working a short distance from the burglaries plus flight from work release after burglary is sufficient, State v. Ehrhardt, 167 Wn.App. 934, 939-41 (2012); III.

State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993)

A bedroom within a single-family dwelling is not a separate building, RCW 9A.04.110(5), for purposes of burglary, distinguishing State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988), but see: State v. Crist, 80 Wn.App. 511 (1996), see also: State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 869 (1998), State v. Dunleavy, 2 Wn.App.2d 420, 427-31 (2018); II.

State v. Deitchler, 75 Wn.App. 134 (1994)

Defendant, working in police station, probes into evidence locker, is convicted of burglary of "a structure used for the deposit of goods," and thus a building, RCW 9A.04.110(5); held: a structure within a larger building will not be a separate building unless the larger building has two or more units separately secured or occupied; here, the police station was occupied by a single tenant, thus did not consist of two or more units, State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993), see: State v. Miller, 90 Wn.App. 720 (1998), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 869 (1998), State v. Dunleavy, 2 Wn.App.2d 420, 427-31 (2018); II.

State v. Gans, 76 Wn.App. 445 (1994)

A donkey is "goods," and thus a corral for the donkey is a building, RCW 9A.04.110(5); a fenced area is a building where it's primary purpose is to protect property within its confines, State v. Wentz, 149 Wn.2d 342 (2003), see also: State v. Engel, 166 Wn.2d 579 (2009) ,State v. Johnson, 159 Wn.App. 766 (2011); I.

State v. Brooks, 77 Wn.App. 516, 520-1 (1995)

Where burglary information alleges that defendant entered buildings, state must elect the building, or unanimity instruction must be given; III.

State v. Ortiz, 77 Wn.App. 790 (1995)

Assault merges into burglary 1°, State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 677 (1979), RCW 9A.52.050; Division III declines to follow Division I in State v. Davison, 56 Wn.App. 554, 561 (1990), State v. Fryer, 36 Wn.App. 312, 315 (1983), State v. Hunter, 35 Wn.App. 708, 717 (1983), State v. Davis, 90 Wn.App. 777, 783-5 (1998).

State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98 (1995)

Inference of intent instruction, RCW 9A.52.040, WPIC 60.05, is permissive, not mandatory, State v. Jackson, 112 Wn.2d 867, 875 (1989), which trial court must find is proved by a preponderance, not beyond a reasonable doubt, unless the inference is the sole and sufficient proof of an element, County Court of Ulster County v. Allen, 60 L.Ed.2d 777 (1979), overruling State v. Delmarter, 68 Wn.App. 770 (1993), but see: Schwendeman v. Wallenstein, 971 F.2d 313 (9th Cir. 1992); here, criminal intent flows more likely than not from defendants' unlawful entries; affirms State v. Brunson, 76 Wn.App. 24 (1994); see: State v. Deal, 128 Wn.2d 693 (1996), State v. Sandoval, 123 Wn.App. 1 (2004), but see: State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819 (2006); 7-1.

State v. Deal, 128 Wn.2d 693 (1996)

That portion of inference of intent instruction that reads "unless such entering or remaining shall be explained by evidence satisfactory to the jury to have been made without such criminal intent," RCW 9A.52.040, WPIC 60.05, is an impermissible production- and pursuasion-shifting instruction, State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819, 825-29 (2006), harmless here; accord: State v. Schloredt, 97 Wn.App. 780, 795-801 (1999); 7-2.

State v. Crist, 80 Wn.App. 511 (1996)

Minor child living at home is told not to enter parents' locked bedroom, breaks in and steals from bedroom, respondent claims evidence is insufficient to prove burglary; held: while respondent has a privilege to enter the family home, State v. Howe, 116 Wn.2d 466 (1991), the privilege does not extend to a bedroom from which respondent was expressly excluded, bedroom is a "dwelling," RCW 9A.52.010(3), for purposes of residential burglary, RCW 9A.52.025(1), but see: State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993), cf.: State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819, 823-25 (2006); II.

State v. Kutch, 90 Wn.App. 244 (1998)

Defendant is caught shoplifting, store security guard gives written and verbal notice banning entry into the mall, defendant returns and shoplifts, is convicted of burglary 2°; held: private property owner may restrict the use of its property to those purposes for which it is lawfully dedicated, as long as restrictions are not discriminatory, Adderley v. Florida, 17 L.Ed.2d 149 (1966), State v. McDaniels, 39 Wn.App. 236 (1984); verbal or written notice to exclude is sufficient, see: State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992); violation of notice revoking invitation was sufficient to prove unlawful entry element of burglary, State v. Bellerouche, 129 Wn.App. 912 (2005), see: State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003), disapproved, in part, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005); III.

State v. Miller, 90 Wn.App. 720 (1998)

Defendant drives into open car wash, breaks coin box and steals money, is convicted of burglary; held: it is immaterial whether defendant formulated intent to steal before or after he entered the car wash, as an entry or remaining in a business open to the public is not rendered unlawful by defendant's intent to commit a crime, State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003), disapproved, in part, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005), distinguishing State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988), State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993), State v. Deitchler, 75

Wn.App. 134 (1994), State v. McDaniels, 39 Wn.App. 236 (1984); to hold otherwise would convert every shoplift into burglary; III.

State v. Davis, 90 Wn.App. 777, 781-2 (1998)

One roommate, from outside home, gives defendant permission to enter apartment, defendant enters, is told to leave by another tenant when he pulls a gun, he remains, is convicted of burglary; held: defendant's license to enter was specifically revoked, thus evidence was sufficient to convict; trial court has discretion whether or not to apply burglary anti-merger statute, RCW 9A.52.050, see: Lessley, supra., at 780-1, State v. Kisor, 68 Wn.App. 610, 618 (1993); I.

State v. Allen, 90 Wn.App. 957 (1998)

Defendant is caught inside an empty public school classroom rifling a jacket, is convicted of burglary; held: school policy requires individuals arriving at school must report to office, defendant had no child in the class, thus he did not have a license, privilege or invitation to enter the classroom, see: State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993); III.

State v. Bridge, 91 Wn.App. 98 (1998)

Defendant's fingerprint is found on a store tag attached to a recently-purchased tool moved during burglary, no other evidence offered against defendant; held: if fingerprint evidence is the only evidence linking a defendant with a crime, state must present evidence that the object on which the fingerprint appears was inaccessible to defendant prior to the burglary, see: State v. Lucca, 56 Wn.App. 597, 599 (1990), see: State v. Todd, 141 Wn.App. 945 (2000); here, absent proof that the print could only have been impressed at the time the crime was committed, evidence is insufficient to support a burglary conviction; III.

State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 869 (1998)

In a multi-unit apartment complex, a secured storage locker large enough to accommodate a human being is a separate building, RCW 9A.04.110(5), State v. Dunleavy, 2 Wn.App.2d 420, 427-31 (2018), distinguishing State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993), State v. Deitchler, 75 Wn.App. 134 (1994); II.

State v. Grimes, 92 Wn.App. 973 (1998)

Defendant claims that strangers offered him money to assist them in moving furniture from a residence, offers good faith belief instruction, court declines; held: because court instructed jury that state must prove criminal intent, jury could have acquitted on defendant's lack of intent to steal, thus error, if any, was harmless; III.

State v. Bencivenga, 137 Wn.2d 703 (1999)

Defendant is observed in dark clothing at 3:30 am in snowstorm prying open door of restaurant, tells police he sought to win a bet that he could remove a pin on the door, is convicted of attempted burglary; held: if finder of fact concludes there is an alternative reasonable explanation for defendant's actions, then evidence is insufficient, but here trial court discarded one possible inference when it concluded that the inference was unreasonable under the circumstances, State v. Brooks, 107 Wn.App. 925, 928-32 (2001); nothing forbids a court from logically inferring intent from proven facts as long as it is satisfied the state has proved intent; trial court's finding that defendant's story was not believable and that defendant acted with intent was a rational inference based on the evidence, State v. Chacky, 177 Wash. 694, 696 (1934), State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98, 102 (1995), State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1, 10-11 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Brooks, 107 Wn.App. 925, 928-32 (2001)

Defendant is seen using screwdriver to try to enter apartment building, bypassing intercom, then enters complex through a gate and tries to open an apartment door with screwdriver, claims he was trying to get in to use bathroom, is convicted of attempted burglary; held: as long as court does not instruct as to inference of intent, State v. Jackson, 112 Wn.2d 867 (1989), but see: State v. Berglund, 65 Wn.App. 648 (1992), jury may still infer intent to commit a crime from the surrounding circumstances, which are sufficient here; I.

State v. Gohl, 109 Wn.App. 817, 823-34 (2001)

Victim tells defendant he cannot enter residence, defendant enters, asks for water, victim gives defendant water, defendant assaults her; held: defendant had no license to be in apartment, once he entered it was for limited purpose of getting water, State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253, 261 (1988), State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862- 872-77 (2005), State v. Lambert, 199 Wn.App. 51, 72-77 (2017), cf.: State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003), disapproved, in part, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005), thus evidence is sufficient to prove burglary, State v. Cordero, 170 Wn.App. 351 (2012); I.

State v. Wentz, 149 Wn.2d 342 (2003)

A fenced back yard is a building for purposes of burglary statute, RCW 9A.04.110(5), overruling State v. Flieger, 45 Wn.App. 667 (1986), see: State v. Engel, 166 Wn.2d 579 (2009); III.

State v. Snedden, 149 Wn.2d 914 (2003)

Defendant enters building from which he had been precluded and exposes himself, trial court dismisses burglary 2˚; held: indecent exposure is a crime against a person for purposes of burglary, State v. Lawson, 185 Wn.App. 349 (2014), cf.: State v. Kindell, 181 Wn.App. 844 (2014); affirms State v. Snedden, 112 Wn.App. 122 (2002); 8-1.

State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003), disapproved, in part, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005)

Police testify that it appears defendant was stealing parts from an open junkyard, having entered it by climbing over a fence, defendant testifies he entered the junkyard by the open gate, jury is instructed that they may convict if they find that defendant "entered or remained unlawfully," prosecutor argued that defendant could be convicted even if he entered the gate because he intended to steal; held: "enters unlawfully" and "remains unlawfully" are alternate means of committing burglary and, where both are charged, there must be substantial evidence to support both means unless the prosecutor elects one, see: State v. Sony, 184 Wn.App. 496 (2014), but see: State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005), State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 872-77 (2005), State v. Spencer, 128 Wn.App. 132 (2005), State v. Gonzales, 133 Wn.App. 236, 243-44 (2006); here, if the jury believed that defendant entered lawfully, then no burglary occurred, see: State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988), State v. Thompson, 71 Wn.App. 634

(1993), State v. Miller, 90 Wn.App. 720 (1998), State v. Kutch, 90 Wn.App. 244 (1998), State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 146 (2021); I

State v. Stinton, 121 Wn.App. 569 (2004)

Defendant, restrained from entering victim's home by protection order, enters home with permission of victim who later directs him to leave, defendant leaves then immediately re-enters, is charged with residential burglary, predicate crime being violation of the protection order; held: violation of a protection order is a crime against a person and is harassment, RCW 9A.46.060(36), thus violation of a protection order may be the intended crime necessary to prove burglary, State v. Spencer, 128 Wn.App. 132 (2005), see: State v. Wilson, 136 Wn.App. 596 (2007); II.

State v. Sandoval, 123 Wn.App. 1 (2004)

Drunk defendant kicks in front door of stranger's home, expresses surprise at seeing occupant, shoves occupant when confronted, at trial defendant's wife testifies that he has kicked in his own door when he has knocked and she did not answer immediately, court gives permissive inference of intent instruction, without objection; held: inference was the only evidence of intent, there was no fact, alone or in conjunction with others, from which entering with intent to commit a crime more likely than not could flow, State v. Woods, 63 Wn.App. 588 (1991), see: State v. Brunson, 128 Wn.2d 98 (1995), thus trial court erred in giving instruction, which was a due process violation, State v. Deal, 128 Wn.2d 693, 698 (1996), see also: State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819 (2006); III.

State v. McDonald, 123 Wn.App. 85 (2004)

Defendant burglarizes a house under reconstruction, at residential burglary trial, RCW 9A.52.025, court rejects lesser instruction for burglary 2°; held: burglary 2° is a lesser degree offense, RCW 10.61.003, of residential burglary; because a dwelling is defined as one "ordinarily used by a person for lodging," RCW 9A.04.110(7), jury could have found building was not a residence, trial court erred in refusing instruction, see: State v. Hall, 6 Wn.App.2d 238 (2018); II.

State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005)

Defendant enters building partially open to public, intrudes into private areas and steals, court instructs that defendant both "entered unlawfully" and "remained unlawfully," unanimity instruction is not given; held: where the initial entry is lawful but the scope of any implied or express privilege is exceeded by intruding into areas not open to the public, an instruction requiring either unlawful entry or remaining raises no unanimity concerns, as there is no evidence of unlawful entry and no rational juror could rely on the unlawful entry means to establish burglary, disapproving, in part, State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003), see: State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988), State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993), State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 872-77 (2005), State v. Spencer, 128 Wn.App. 132 (2005), State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 400, 409-10 (2006), State v. Gonzales, 133 Wn.App. 236, 243-44 (2006), State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 146 (2021); here, because prosecutor argued that jury should convict if it found that defendant entered the building with intent to steal, defendant was prejudiced, State v. Miller, 90 Wn.App. 720, 725 (1998); I.

State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 872-77 (2005)

Defendant enters house without permission, commits assault, in burglary 1° trial to convict instruction states "enters or remains unlawfully," no Petrich unanimity instruction is given; held: while "enters unlawfully" and "remains unlawfully" are alternative means, State v. Allen,127 Wn.App. 125 (2005), cf.: State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634, 636-40 (1993), State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988), they are not necessarily repugnant and, where evidence establishes that both unlawful entry and remaining occurred, lack of unanimity instruction is not error; an unlawful remaining can occur even after an unlawful entry; I.

State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 945 (2005)

Defendant, with sledgehammer and crowbar, covered with sheetrock dust, found inside of a building containing several offices after hours, outside doors damaged, window pane removed, holes smashed through one office into another, drawers rummaged, seeks trespass lesser to burglary; held: jury could not find that whoever entered the building did so without an intent to commit a crime therein, thus court did not err in refusing trespass instruction; II.

State v. Spencer, 128 Wn.App. 132 (2005)

In violation of no contact order, defendant enters victim's home, is convicted of residential burglary and violation of a no contact order; held: a no contact order violation is a continuing crime, State v. Stinton, 121 Wn.App. 569 (2004), satisfying the "intent to commit a crime...therein" element of burglary; I.

State v. J.P., 130 Wn.App. 887 (2005)

Real estate agent testifies that she has exclusive listing for house, she changed locks, she had only keys and that respondent was not authorized to be inside, defense claims property was abandoned and that state failed to prove he lacked permission; held: state need not call actual owner (here, a bank), circumstantial evidence was sufficient to prove lack of permission; abandonment is a defense to burglary since it is a defense to criminal trespass and negates the "unlawful presence" element, RCW 9A.52.090(1), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561, 570 (2002), but see: State v. Jensen, 149 Wn.App. 393, 398-401 (2009), State v. Olson, 182 Wn.App. 362 (2014), cf.: State v. Ayala Ponce, 166 Wn.App. 409 (2012), however here the house was vacant, not abandoned, thus trial court properly found state met its burden; III.

State v. Johnson, 132 Wn.App. 400 (2006)

A roofed, detached garage with no door is a building, at 406-09, RCW 9A.04.110(5); where defendant entered a building and steals, it is not error to instruct as to both the entering and remaining mean, and no unanimity instruction or election is required, at 409-10, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125 (2005), but see: State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 146 (2021); II.

State v. Cantu, 156 Wn.2d 819 (2006)

Juvenile, who sometimes lives at mother's home but was not living there on day in question, is seen breaking mother's locked bedroom door, items are found to be missing from bedroom, no evidence produced that mother expressly forbade son from entering bedroom, trial court finds respondent "failed to rebut the statutory presumption that he broke into his mother's bedroom with the intent to commit some crime;" held: while a juvenile's entry into a parent's home is not unlawful where the parent has not prohibited entry, State v. Steinbach, 101 Wn.2d 460, 463 (1984), the privilege to enter may be implied by a locked door, see also: State v. Crist, 80 Wn.App. 511 (1996), State v. Jensen, 57 Wn.App. 501 (1990); trial court treated the statutory inference of intent, RCW 9A.52.040, as mandatory, shifting burden to respondent, State v. Deal, 128 Wn.2d 693 (1996), thus reversed; reverses State v. Cantu, 123 Wn.App. 404 (2004); 8-1.

State v. Pittman, 134 Wn.App. 376 (2006)

In attempted burglary case, instructing jury from WPIC 100.01 (2d ed. 1994) that "a person commits the crime of attempted … burglary when, with intent to commit that crime, he or she does any act which is a substantial step toward the commission of that crime," while potentially confusing as it could be read as attempting to commit attempted burglary, State v. Smith, 131 Wn.2d 258, 263 (1997), is not clearly erroneous where to convict instruction accurately listed all elements, at 381-83; failure of defense counsel to offer attempted criminal trespass as a lesser is ineffective assistance, at 387-90, State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004), but see: State v. Hassan, 151 Wn.App. 209, 221 n. 6 (2009); I.

State v. Wilson, 136 Wn.App. 596, 604-12 (2007)

No contact order prohibits contact with complainant but not residence, defendant and complainant sign lease on house, cohabit, quarrel, defendant leaves and returns and assaults complainant, trial court dismisses charge of burglary 1º; held: dismissal was proper as defendant could not have burglarized his own residence; II.

State v. Powell, 139 Wn.App. 808, 814-16 (2007), rev'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 73 (2009)

In attempted burglary 1° case, victim's fear of defendant, prior threat to kill if she prevented him from seeing their son, defendant's dress outside victim's home in camouflage clothing, attempt to sneak into home is sufficient even though defendant had a right to see his son; 2-1, II.

State v. Brown, 162 Wn.2d 422, 430-35 (2007)

Defendant commits a burglary during which he finds a gun in a closet and moves it to a bed but is interrupted and leaves it behind, is convicted of burglary 1° with a firearm; held: evidence that a firearm was briefly in a burglar's possession and thus "merely loot," at 434 ¶ 27, without more, does not establish a nexus between defendant, the weapon and the crime, State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), see: State v. Hernandez, 172 Wn.App. 537 (2012); "defendant's intent or willingness to use the rifle is a condition of the nexus requirement that does, in fact, appear in Washington cases," at 434 ¶ 26; 5-4.

State v. Jensen, 149 Wn.App. 393 (2009)

Abandonment, RCW 9A.52.090(1), is not a defense to burglary, State v. Olson, 182 Wn.App. 362 (2014), but see: State v. J.P., 130 Wn.App. 887 (2005); II.

State v. Engel, 166 Wn.2d 572 (2009)

"Fenced area," RCW 9A.04.110(5), is limited to the curtilage of a building or structure that itself qualifies as an object of burglary, and must be completely enclosed either by fencing or a combination of fencing and other structures; 9-0.

State v. Devitt, 152 Wn.App. 907 (2009)

Following hit and run, police chase defendant who enters an apartment through an unlocked door, drinks tea with resident where defendant is arrested, trial court convicts for residential burglary based upon obstructing an officer as the "crime against a person or property therein, RCW 9A.52.025(1); held: obstructing is not a crime against a person or property under Sentencing Reform Act, RCW 9.94A.411(2)(a), cf.: State v. Lawson, 185 Wn.App. 349 (2014), nor was there evidence that defendant intended to commit that crime against the police when he entered the residence; III.

State v. Elmore, 154 Wn.App. 885, 899-901 (2010)

Burglary and felony murder/burglary may be punished separately even where the burglary is the predicate offense, per burglary antimerger statute, RCW 9A.52.050; II.

State v. Koss, 158 Wn.App. 8, 14-16 (2010), affirmed, on other grounds, 181 Wn.2d 493 (2014)

Defendant, on porch, punches victim after she opens door, is convicted of burglary 1°; held: whether assault occurred in or out of the house is a question for the jury, see also: State v. Gilbert, 68 Wn.App. 379 (1993), State v. Gilbert, 33 Wn.App. 753 (1983); III.

Pers. Restraint of Martinez, 171 Wn.2d 354 (2011)

Mere possession of a knife during a burglary is insufficient to enhance to burglary 1°, state must prove that it was "used, attempted to be used, or threatened to be used," RCW 9A.04.110(6), as a weapon, State v. Gotcher, 52 Wn.App. 350 (1988), overruling State v. Gamboa, 137 Wn.App. 650 (2007) , unless the weapon is a loaded or unloaded firearm, State v. Hall, 46 Wn.App. 689, 695 (1987), State v. Faille, 53 Wn.App. 111 (1988), State v. Hernandez, 172 Wn.App. 537 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 159 Wn.App. 766 (2011)

A locomotive is a building, RCW 9A.04.110(5), see: State v. Petit, 32 Wash. 129, 130 (1903); 2-1, II.

State v. Neal, 161 Wn.App. 111 (2011)

A tool room in an apartment building is a dwelling, RCW 9A.04.110(7), for purposes of residential burglary, RCW 9A.52.025(1), State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509, 513 (1993), because entire building is a dwelling, State v. Moran, 181 Wn.App. 316, 321-23 (2014), see: State v. McPherson, 186 Wn.App. 114 (2015); I.

State v. Sanchez, 166 Wn.App. 304 (2012)

Protection order prohibits defendant from being within 300 feet of complainant who invites defendant to her home, defendant commits a crime against her, is charged with burglary, trial court dismisses, State v. Knapstad, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986); held: victim's consent to entry into residence from which defendant is excluded by law does not make defendant's presence there lawful, thus trial court reversed, distinguishing State v. Wilson, 136 Wn.App. 596, 604-12 (2007), see: State v. Stinton, 121 Wn.App. 569 (2004); III.

State v. Ayala Ponce, 166 Wn.App. 409 (2012)

In burglary case, officer testifies that defendant told him that people in the shop he is accused of burglarizing let him in and that he believed they were employees, trial court instructs jury that it is a defense to the lesser of criminal trespass that defendant reasonably believed he was or would have been licensed to enter and that state has the burden of proving the absence of the defense, but court declines to instruct similarly on the greater burglary charge; held: statutory defense to criminal trespass, RCW 9A.52.090 (2011) is not applicable to burglary, State v. Cordero, 170 Wn.App. 351, 369-71 (2012), distinguishing State v. J.P., 130 Wn.App. 887 (2005), see: Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 56, 570 (2002); officer's testimony as to defendant's statement was sufficient to support instructing as to lesser of criminal trespass; III.

State v. Ehrhardt, 167 Wn.App. 934, 939-41 (2012)

While mere possession of stolen property is insufficient to establish burglary, State v. Mace, 97 Wn.2d 840 (1982), State v. Evans, 45 Wn.App. 678 (1986), a jury instruction saying same is misleading where it does not inform the jury that presence at the scene combined with possession of recently stolen property could be sufficient; 2-1, II.

State v. Cordero, 170 Wn.App. 351, 360-71 (2012)

Complainant is living in motel room with 14-year old daughter who invites defendant in in spite of complainant's disapproval of defendant's presence, known to both defendant and daughter, defendant flashes a gun, complainant calls police and tries to detain defendant who shoves complainant aside and leaves with daughter, is convicted of burglary 1°; held: evidence was sufficient to establish that daughter's invitation was ineffective in light of mother's known objection, thus state established element of unlawful entry; where initial entry was "clearly unlawful," defendant cannot be said to have any license or privilege to remain, State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125, 133-35 (2005), State v. Gohl, 109 Wn.App. 817, 823-34 (2001); the fact that complainant may have precluded defendant from leaving may exclude the period of her detention from the definition of "unlawfully remain," but here there was sufficient evidence to support the element for at least part of the time defendant was present, plus defendant was not entitled to ignore mother's order that he leave without the daughter; III.

State v. Moran, 181 Wn.App. 316, 321-23 (2014)

Defendant crawls underneath a house through an access door in the foundation, inaccessible from inside the home, and sabotages plumbing, is convicted of residential burglary; held: entire building is a dwelling for purposes of residential burglary, State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509 (1993), State v. Neal, 161 Wn.App. 111 (2011), see: State v. McPherson, 186 Wn.App. 114 (2015); I.

State v. Kindell, 181 Wn.App. 844 (2014)

Unlawful possession of a firearm is not a crime against a person or property for purposes of proving burglary, cf.: State v. Snedden, 149 Wn.2d 914, 919-23 (2003), State v. Lawson, 185 Wn.App. 349 (2014); II.

State v. Sony, 184 Wn.App. 496 (2014)

Intent to commit a crime against "a person or property," RCW 9A.52.025(1), are not alternative means, distinguishing State v. Gonzalez , 133 Wn.App. 236, 243 (2006), State v. Tresenriter, 101 Wn.App. 486, 490-94 (2000); I.

State v. Lawson, 185 Wn.App. 349 (2014)

Voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115(1) (2003), is a crime against a person or property for purposes of proving burglary, see: State v. Snedden, 149 Wn.2d 914, 919-22 (2003), distinguishing state v. Devitt, 152 Wn.App. 907, 912-13 (2009); where defendant commits a trespass and voyeurism and assaults a security guard elsewhere in the building in escaping there is sufficient evidence to prove burglary 1º; II.

State v. McPherson, 186 Wn.App. 114 (2015)

Defendant burglarizes a jewelry store with an apartment above it used for lodging, is convicted of residential burglary; held: whether a building constitutes a dwelling, RCW 9A.52.025 (2011), 9A.04.110 (2011), is a question of fact, State v. McDonald, 123 Wn.App. 85, 90-91 (2004), State v. Hall, 6 Wn.App.2d 238 (2018), see: State v. Moran, 181 Wn.App. 316, 321-23 (2014), State v. Neal, 161 Wn.App. 111, 113-14 (2011), State v. Murbach, 68 Wn.App. 509, 513 (1993); II.

State v. Joseph, 189 Wn.2d 645 (2017)

For purposes of criminal trespass 2°, RCW 9A.52.080(1), a vehicle is "premises," RCW 9A.52.010(6) (2011), RCW 9A.04.110(5); affirms State v. Joseph, 195 Wn.App. 737 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Jusila, 197 Wn.App. 908, 932-34 (2017)

In burglary 1° case under deadly weapon prong evidence is sufficient to prove firearm where state offers photographs of guns, witnesses testify that they found loaded rifles, no one testified that the rifles were operable, but that can be inferred from photos and testimony, State v. Mathé, 35 Wn.App. 572 (1983), State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 197-200 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012), State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016), State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 872-73 (2016); I.

State v. Lambert, 199 Wn.App. 51, 72-77 (2017)

Defendant is invited into home to visit victim, kills victim, goes to another home to steal gun, enters house then comes out, sees second victim in driveway and demands keys to garage, victim refuses, defendant kills him in driveway, claims insufficient evidence to support felony murder/burglary 1° as he did not remain unlawfully; held: a jury could reasonably infer that defendant's license to remain was revoked when defendant attacked first victim in home, State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 253 (1988); while, to prove felony murder, there must be evidence that the murder occurred in the course of or in furtherance of the burglary, RCW 10.95.020(11) (2003), there is insufficient evidence here that the second murder occurred in immediate flight from the burglary, State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 506-20 (2007), distinguishing State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 199-203 (2015); I.

State v. Dunleavy, 2 Wn.App.2d 420, 427-31 (2018)

A jail cell is a building, RCW 9A.04.110(5) (2011), for purposes of burglary, distinguishing State v. Thomson, 71 Wn.App. 634 (1993), see: State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 869 (1998); III.

State v. Hall, 6 Wn.App.2d 238 (2018),

Defendant is convicted of residential burglary, RCW 9A.52.025 (2011), for stealing from a house that was unoccupied for 16 months but had furniture; held: whether a building is a dwelling, RCW 9A.04.110(7) (2011), is a question of fact for the jury, State v. McDonald, 123 Wn.App. 85 (2004), State v. McPherson, 186 Wn.App. 114 (2015); II.

State v. Moreno, 198 Wn.2d 737 (2021)

Knowledge of the unlawfulness of entering or remaining is not an implied essential element of burglary; 9-0.

State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 146 (2021)

Burglary ("enters or remains unlawfully") is not an alternative means offense; Division II rejects holdings to the contrary in State v. Sony, 184 Wn.App. 496, 500 (2014), State v. Allen, 127 Wn.App. 125, 131 (2005), State v. Klimes, 117 Wn.App. 758 (2003); even if burglary is an alternative means offense where the jury is instructed as to both entering and remaining unlawfully, there is no evidence of entering unlawfully, and prosecutor elects in closing only remaining, defendant's right to a unanimous verdict is not violated; II.

COMPETENCY

State v. Crenshaw, 27 Wn.App. 326 (1980)

Competency is within discretion of trial court, State v. McCarthy, 193 Wn.2d 792 (2019), defense counsel's opinion as to client's competency is a factor, see: State v. Dufloth, 19 Wn.App.2d 347 (2021), lay witness may testify as to opinion of defendant's sanity; 2-1, I.

Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981)

In capital case, court appointed psychiatrist, sua sponte, to evaluate defendant's competency; psychiatrist reported defendant was competent; defendant convicted of murder; in penalty phase, state calls psychiatrist who testified that defendant was dangerous; jury imposed death penalty; court holds that testimony of psychiatrist violated defendant's Fifth Amendment privilege, as defendant was not advised of Miranda rights by psychiatrist and did not waive Sixth Amendment right to counsel, although defendant did not have right to counsel present during evaluation; 9-0.

State v. Swanson, 28 Wn.App. 759 (1981)

Retrograde amnesia, in the absence of a mental disease or defect, does not render a defendant incompetent to stand trial; I.

State v. Jones, 32 Wn.App. 359 (1982)

Defendant is competent to stand trial if she is able to testify, understand nature of charges, comprehend the mechanics or consequences of a trial, and to assist and confer with counsel, State v. Maryott, 6 Wn.App. 96 (1971); I.

State v. Wicklund, 96 Wn.2d 798 (1982)

RCW 10.77 applies to courts of limited jurisdiction for competency determinations, limited to 15-day commitment for observation.

State v. Higa, 38 Wn.App. 522 (1984)

Where a psychiatric evaluation determines that defendant is competent and defense counsel does not seek a formal competency hearing, no error is committed if court fails to hold a hearing; II.

Seattle v. Gordon, 39 Wn.App. 437 (1985)

Where defense counsel questions defendant's competency, trial court has considerable discretion to determine whether there was "reason to doubt" defendant's competency, State v. McCarthy, 193 Wn.2d 792 (2019), giving considerable weight to counsel's opinion, cf.: State v. Dufloth, 19 Wn.App.2d 347 (2021); here, defense counsel raised the competency issue for the first time at trial without an affidavit, making it appear that it was a trial tactic rather than a true concern; once court finds a reason to doubt, then court must appoint experts, RCW 10.77.060(1), State v. Fedoruk, 5 Wn.App.2d 317 (2018); accord: State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 900-3 (1991); I.

State v. Lover, 41 Wn.App. 685 (1985)

Defendant can be medicated against his will to gain competence to stand trial if it is pursuant to a court order following a hearing, improves defendant's competency, there is no less intrusive means, State v. Adams, 77 Wn.App. 50, 55-7 (1995), Riggins v. United States, 118 L.Ed.2d 479 (1992); I.

State v. Ortiz, 104 Wn.2d 479 (1985)

An ability to choose among alternative defenses is not a test for competency to stand trial, distinguishing State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983); accord, State v. Hahn, 106 Wn.2d 885, 893-4 (1986); State v. Minnix, 63 Wn.App. 494 (1991), State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 662 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Bebb, 44 Wn.App. 803, 108 Wn.2d 515 (1987)

In competency proceedings, court is not limited to the appointment of a sanity commission, RCW 10.77.010, et seq., but also retains the inherent authority in order to determine competency, State v. Wicklund, 96 Wn.2d 798 (1982) to order additional evaluations, see: State v. Heddrick, 166 Wn.2d 898 (2009), during which speedy trial rule is tolled, CrR 3.3(g)(1); III.

State v. Jones, 111 Wn.2d 239 (1988)

Statements to a psychologist with respect to competency are admissible at trial where defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, even where the statements were made prior to the NGI plea, State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983), State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 900-3 (1991), abrogated,in part, State v. Schierman, 192 Wn.2d 577 (2018)

Absent insanity defense, a mere motion to determine competency does not have to be granted absent a factual basis, Seattle v. Gordon, 39 Wn.App. 437, 441 (1985); defendant telling jailer that devil told him to drink blood to prove innocence plus wanting to fire defense counsel does not reach threshold to require competency hearing where defense declined to allow state's expert to evaluate defendant and defense was unable to arrange for defense expert to evaluate defendant, see: State v. Fedoruk, 5 Wn.App.2d 317 (2018); 6-3

Riggins v. Nevada, 118 L.Ed.2d 479 (1992)

Involuntary antipsychotic drugs may be administered to a pretrial detainee only where court finds that medication was medically appropriate and, considering less intrusive alternatives, essential for defendant's own safety or the safety of others, see: Washington v. Harper, 108 L.Ed.2d 178 (1990), Sell v. United States, 156 L.Ed.2d 197 (2003), State v. Mosteller, 162 Wn.App. 418 (2011); state may be able to justify medically appropriate involuntary treatment by establishing that it could not obtain an adjudication of defendant's guilt or innocence by less intrusive means (dicta), see: State v. Hernandez-Ramirez, 129 Wn.App. 504 (2005); 7-2.

Medina v. California, 120 L.Ed.2d 353 (1992)

State statute which places burden of proving incompetency to stand trial on defense by preponderance does not violate due process clause, State v. Hurst, 173 Wn.2d 597 (2012), cf.:

State v. P.E.T., 174 Wn.App. 590 (2013), 185 Wn.App. 891 (2015), see: State v. Coley, 180 Wn.2d 543 (2014); 7-2.

Cooper v. Oklahoma, 134 L.Ed.2d 498 (1996)

While a state may presume a defendant to be competent and require him to prove incompetence by a preponderance, Medina v. California, 120 L.Ed.2d 353 (1992), state may not require proof of competency by clear and convincing evidence, as it would permit state to try a defendant who is more likely than not incompetent, State v. Hurst, 173 Wn.2d 597 (2012); 9-0.

State v. E.C., 83 Wn.App. 523 (1996)

Juvenile court may dismiss with prejudice a case against an incompetent juvenile respondent in order to adequately respond to the needs of that offender as long as such dismissal poses no substantial danger to others; in general, RCW 10.77 should be followed for juveniles, although the Juvenile Justice Act takes precedence when a conflict arises; I.

Pers. Restraint of Fleming, 142 Wn.2d 853 (2001)

Where defense counsel has a psychological evaluation concluding that defendant is not competent, it is ineffective assistance not to raise competency with the trial court, and a subsequent guilty plea must be vacated; incompetency cannot be "waived," nor can there be a tactical decision not to raise it, see: State v. Marshall, 144 Wn.2d 266 (2001), cf.: State v. Heddrick, 166 Wn.2d 898 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Chance, 105 Wn.App. 291, 299 (2001)

Court may not consider a court-ordered competency evaluation in determining future dangerousness unless defendant was warned prior to the evaluation that it might be used at sentencing, Estelle v. Smith, 68 L.Ed.2d 359 (1981), see: State v. Bankes, 114 Wn.App. 280 (2002); II.

State v. Cox, 106 Wn.App. 487 (2001)

Stay of time for trial rule for competency determination, CrR 3.3(g)(1), begins when a party or the court makes an oral or written motion for a competency evaluation, State v. Harris, 122 Wn.App. 498 (2004), and ends when the court enters a written order finding defendant competent, which may be presented by defense counsel; II.

State v. Marshall, 144 Wn.2d 266 (2001)

Capital defendant pleads guilty, seeks to withdraw plea, calls experts who testify that defendant had brain abnormalities, trial court denies motion without appointing experts and convening formal competency hearing, RCW 10.77.060(1)(a); held: where a defendant moves to withdraw plea with evidence that defendant was incompetent when plea was entered, trial court must either grant the motion or appoint two experts and convene a hearing, see: State v. DeClue, 157 Wn.App. 787 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Lawrence, 108 Wn.App. 226, 231-33 (2001)

Mildly developmentally disabled defendant with a slow thought process who can communicate with counsel, albeit slowly, is competent, see: State v. Minnix, 63 Wn.App. 494, 499 (1991), within discretion of trial court, State v. Ortiz, 104 110 Wn.2d 479, 482 (1985), State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367, 383-84 (2007), State v. McCarthy, 193 Wn.2d 792 (2019); I.

Sell v. United States, 156 L.Ed.2d 197 (2003)

To order involuntary antipsychotic drugs, court must find (1) offense is a serious crime against a person or property, looking at facts of individual case and whether or not defendant will be civilly committed, (2) drugs would be substantially likely to render defendant competent and side effects are unlikely to interfere significantly with defendant's ability to assist counsel, (3) less intrusive treatments are unlikely to achieve the same result, and (4) administration of drugs is in the patient's best medical interest, see: Riggins v. Nevada, 118 L.Ed.2d 479 (1992), Washington v. Harper, 108 L.Ed.2d 178 (1990), State v. Hernandez-Ramirez, 129 Wn.App. 504 (2005), State v. Mosteller, 162 Wn.App. 418 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Webbe, 122 Wn.App. 683 (2004)

Defendant demands a jury trial on competency, RCW 10.77.090(4), defense counsel proposes to testify as to his opinion that defendant is not competent, trial court decides that, if counsel testifies, defendant has waived the attorney-client privilege, orders defense to turn over client interview notes to prosecutor as discovery, later appoints guardian ad litem to determine whether defendant should waive his privilege for purposes of competency hearing, guardian informs court that it is not in defendant's best interests to waive privilege, court orders prosecutors to return interview notes, defense counsel does not testify, defendant found competent, challenges involuntary waiver on appeal; held: trial court has inherent authority to appoint guardian ad litem; while court should have inquired of counsel whether defendant actually waived prior to ordering discovery of counsel's notes, because counsel was acting as a vigorous, loyal advocate, defendant must show prejudice for counsel's improperly allowing court to assume waiver when it did not exist; because defendant's testimony was consistent with notes, no prejudice occurred; I.

State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367, 381-85 (2007)

While DSHS must provide a developmental disabilities professional if any party advises the court that defendant may be developmentally disabled during the 15-day competency evaluation, RCW 10.77.060(1)(a), following a 90-day competency restoration commitment DSHS need not provide a developmental disability professional to evaluate defendant and any expert may testify as to absence of a developmental disability; even if a defendant is developmentally disabled, if he meets the competency requirements, trial court may find defendant competent, State v. Lawrence, 108 Wn.App. 226, 231-33 (2001); 2-1, II.

State v. Carneh, 149 Wn.App. 402 (2009)

Following dismissal without prejudice for incompetency, RCW 10.77.086, and civil commitment, state hospital advises that defendant has earned unaccompanied grounds privileges, state refiles charges and trial court commits for competency restoration; held: state may refile charges against an incompetent defendant where it has a good faith basis to believe that competency restoration will likely succeed; known incompetency does not bar refiling; trial court may order competency restoration treatment upon refiling; I.

State v. Anene, 149 Wn.App. 944 (2009)

During trial recess, defendant attempts suicide, is comatose, trial court resumes trial claiming defendant voluntarily absented himself; held: trial court was not obliged to order competency evaluation since comatose person is clearly incompetent, but continuing with trial of an incompetent person was a due process violation, Drope v. Missouri, 43 L.Ed.2d 103 (1975); II.

State v. Heddrick, 166 Wn.2d 898 (2009)

Defendant, after commitment for competency restoration, is found competent, later new defense counsel expresses doubt as to competency, trial court appoints psychologist requested by defense and orders state hospital to prepare a report, defense counsel later reports that her psychologist determined defendant is competent and declines production of a report, state psychologist's report is not entered into evidence and counsel withdraws competency motion, on appeal defendant claims statutory competency process was not followed and is thus a denial of due process; held: statutory competency procedures may be waived; a court need not follow statutory process where there is a stipulation to competency and counsel represents medical findings of competency, erasing doubt in the court's mind, State v. Israel, 19 Wn.App. 773 (1978), although competency in substance cannot be waived, Pers. Restraint of Fleming, 142 Wn.2d 853 (2001); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Jian Liu, 150 Wn.App. 484 (2009)

A fugitive is entitled to a competency hearing prior to extradition to determine if the fugitive is can assist counsel in raising or waiving the factual defenses to extradition; I.

State v. DeClue, 157 Wn.App. 787 (2010)

Defendant seeks to withdraw guilty plea, submits declaration that he was not competent due to medications, trial court holds evidentiary hearing at which nurse, defendant and relatives testify, court finds that claim of impairment was unpersuasive, declines to hold formal competency hearing and denies motion to withdraw plea; held: where evidence submitted in motion to withdraw a plea due to alleged incompetency, either in declaration or at a hearing, does not establish a "legitimate question of competency," State v. Marshall, 144 Wn.2d 266, 279 (2001), the court need not appoint two experts or hold a formal competency hearing; II.

State v. Mosteller, 162 Wn.App. 418 (2011)

Failure to object to court-ordered antipsychotic medication to restore competency waives challenge, distinguishing Riggins v. Nevada, 504 U.S. 127, 118 L.Ed.2d 479 (1992); here, record does not show that defendant was actually forced to take medication during trial precluding structural error analysis as to whether trial court must engage in an analysis pursuant to Sell v. United States, 539 U.S. 166, 156 L.Ed.2d 197 (2003); II.

State v. Hurst, 173 Wn.2d 597 (2012)

Commitment for restoration of competency for 180 days following two 90-day commitments is based upon court finding by a preponderance, not clear, cogent and convincing, meets due process clause requirements, Medina v. California, 505 U.S. 437, 445, 120 L.Ed.2d 353 (1976), affirming State v. Hurst, 158 Wn.2d 803 (2010), effectively overruling Born v.

Thompson, 154 Wn.2d 749, 755-57 (2005), distinguishing Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 334-35, 47 L.Ed.2d 18 (1976); 9-0.

State v. Lawrence, 166 Wn.App. 378, 385-89 (2012)

Court commits defendant for competency evaluation and, having been advised he may be developmentally disabled, orders that a DD professional evaluate, RCW 10.77.060(1)(a) (1974), evaluation finding him competent does not address developmental disabilities; held: where evaluation does not find defendant incompetent, there is no requirement that he be evaluated for developmental disabilities and no requirement that the evaluation otherwise address the issue; III.

State v. Sisouvanh, 175 Wn.2d 607 (2012)

Murder defendant, born in Laos, came to U.S. at age 5, graduated high school, obtained certified nursing assistant certificate after passing boards, is evaluated for competency, state's psychologist considers cultural competency, concludes defendant meets "norm-based testing approach" and that defendant is competent and malingering, defense psychologist testifies state psychologist failed to obtain sufficient background information and failed to learn enough about defendant's culture, court finds defendant competent; held: "a trial court could not properly accept the competency evaluation of an appointed expert who refused to acknowledge the importance of cultural competency and who failed to reasonably account for the need for cultural competency… [E]ven if an appointed expert acknowledges the importance of cultural competency, if the expert…fails to sufficiently account for the need for cultural competency in his or her evaluation…, the expert's evaluation will not meet minimum standards of adequacy," at 624-25 ¶31; here, state's expert was qualified, made a reasonable judgment that defendant was sufficiently aculturated to use Western-based testing; norm-based testing is appropriate if defendant has a college-level education in English and/or lived in U.S. for many years from a young age and is competent in English, and/or English is the primary language spoken at home and/or defendant has performed at average level and/or higher on national standardized tests; 9-0.

State v. Chao Chen, 178 Wn.2d 350 (2013)

Once a competency evaluation is filed it is presumed open to the public subject to individualized findings that the Ishikawa factors weigh in favor of sealing or redacting, State v. DeLauro, 163 Wn.App. 290 (2011); CONST. art. I, § 10 trumps RCW 10.77.210; 9-0.

State v. P.E.T., 174 Wn.App. 590 (2013), 185 Wn.App. 891 (2015)

Respondent is found incompetent resulting in dismissal, is later charged with a new crime, at competency hearing state expert testifies respondent is competent, trial court places burden of proving incompetence on respondent, finds him competent; held: common law presumes that one who is found incompetent remains so until adjudicated otherwise, State v. Coley, 180 Wn.2d 543 (2014); remedy is remand for trial court to first decide whether a meaningful hearing on defendant's competency at the prior proceeding is possible, if so court must determine if state rebutted presumption of incompetency, if not then remand for new trial if respondent is deemed competent; I.

State v. Coley, 180 Wn.2d 543 (2014)

After competency restoration period, Eastern State Hospital reports that defendant is competent, at competency hearing trial court places burden of proving his incompetence on defendant; held: 10.77 RCW legislative intent is to place the burden on the party challenging competency to prove by a preponderance that defendant is incompetent, State v. P.E.T., 185 Wn.App. 891 (2015); reverses State v. Coley, 171 Wn.App. 177 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Derenoff, 182 Wn.App. 458 (2014)

Insanity acquitee need not be restored to competency before or during a less restrictive alternative revocation hearing; II.

State v. Kidder, 197 Wn.App. 292 (2016)

Court finds jailed defendant incompetent, orders 90 day restoration, after defendant is not transported to state hospital court holds DSHS in civil contempt and sets date for her to be transported, she is not transported, 139 days after commitment order court dismisses without prejudice; held: " the court had the authority under former RCW 10.77.084(1)(c) to dismiss the criminal charge against Kidder without prejudice and the record establishes the State's failure to provide Kidder with restorative treatment within a reasonable time violated her right to due process," cf.: State v. Hand, 192 Wn.2d 289 (2018), State v. Luvert, 20 Wn.App.2d 133 (2021); I.

State v. Ortiz-Abrego, 187 Wn.2d 394 (2017)

After conviction court holds a competency hearing and concludes that defendant was not competent during the trial, based in part upon the judge's observations of defendant during trial, the lack of accommodation at trial that might have brought defendant to competency, the defendant's actual ability to understand the trial and defendant's capacity to understand; held: observations, actual ability to understand and consideration of possible accommodations are proper factors for a court to consider in determining whether defendant had the capacity to understand, see: State v. Fedoruk, 5 Wn.App.2d 317 (2018); 5-4.

State v. Lyons, 199 Wn.App. 235 (2017)

At forced medication hearing, Sell v. United States, 539 U.S. 166, 156 L.Ed.2d 197 (2003), defense seeks continuance to call its own expert who would testify to the resistance of delusional disorder to treatment with medication and that restoration of competency through medication often took a minimum of three to four months, trial court denies continuance and orders forced medication; held: denying defense motion to continue to call an expert who would present relevant admissible testimony on a material factor is a denial of procedural due process, McWilliams v. Dunn, 582 U.S. ___, 137 S.Ct. 1790, 198 L.Ed.2d 341 (2017); II.

State v. Hand, 192 Wn.2d 289 (2018)

Trial court finds jailed defendant incompetent, orders commitment for restoration within fifteen days, 61 days later is admitted to hospital, moves to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b); held: delay was a violation of substantive due process, Trueblood v. Wash. State Dep't of Social & Health Services. (Trueblood III), 822 F.3d 1037, 1042-43 (9th Cir. 2016), see: State v. Luvert, 20 Wn.App.2d 1331 (2021), but dismissal with prejudice is not a proper remedy, cf.: State v.

Kidder, 197 Wn.App., 197 Wn.App. 292 (2016); affirms State v. Hand, 199 Wn.App. 887 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Fedoruk, 5 Wn.App.2d 317 (2018)

Defendant is found competent pretrial, during trial his behavior deteriorates, defense counsel raises competency, trial judge only deals with whether defendant has waived presence by his behavior; held: where medical history, family history, conduct and demeanor and counsel's opinion all create a reason to doubt competency, it is error not to order a competency evaluation even during trial, see: In re Fleming, 142 Wn.2d 853, 861-67 (2001); II.

State v. McCarthy, 193 Wn.2d 792 (2019)

Defendant is found incompetent, committed, restored, found competent by a jury, at time of trial defendant reports delusions different than the prior delusions, court does not order further competency evaluation; held: under abuse of discretion standard, court did not err in failing to sua sponte order another competency evaluation; reverses State v. McCarthy, 6 Wash. App. 2d 94 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Dufloth, 19 Wn.App.2d 347 (2021)

Defendant writes to trial court stating that a competency evaluation had been ordered in another court, the evaluation was not done and that he was decompensating, defense counsel informs court that he is not raising competency, court does not order an evaluation; held: "any party" may move for a competency evaluation, RCW 10.77.060(1)(a) (2021), defendant is a party even if represented, record supports a reason to doubt competency thus trial court abused discretion; I.

State v. Luvert, 20 Wn.App.2d 133 (2021)

Trial court orders in-patient competency evaluation, after lengthy delay by DSHS to transport defendant trial court sets deadline, Department misses deadline, court finds DSHS in contempt and orders it to pay defendant $250 per day, retroactive to the 14th day after the evaluation was ordered; held: a contempt sanction is remedial, not punitive, if it allows the opportunity to purge, retroactive remedial sanctions are permitted as a sanction may be compensatory, RCW 7.23.030, Gronquist v. Dep't of Corr., 196 Wn.2d 564, 573 (2020); I.

State v. Vevea, 23 Wn.App.2d 171 (2022)

Criminal discovery rules, CrR 7.7, apply to competency restoration proceedings; I.

CONFRONTATION

Ohio v. Roberts, 65 L.Ed.2d 597 (1980)

At preliminary hearing, defense calls witness who becomes unavailable at trial, whereupon state introduces witness's testimony at preliminary hearing; held admissible as defense counsel had tested witness's testimony at the preliminary hearing with the equivalent of significant cross-examination; fact that defense counsel at trial was not same as that at preliminary makes no difference unless prior counsel is shown to be "ineffective"; sets forth what is constitutionally required to show "unavailability," at 613, but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592, 606-07 (2013); 6-3.

State v. Roberts, 25 Wn.App. 830 (1980)

In rape case, error to preclude defense from cross-examining witness's motivation by compulsion to cooperate with prosecutor; I.

State v. Pickens, 27 Wn.App. 97 (1980)

Where witness takes Fifth Amendment on cross, and denial of cross-examination prevents defendant from establishing bias, witness's direct testimony must be stricken; II.

State v. Socolof, 28 Wn.App. 407 (1981)

To admit tracking dog evidence, state must show (1) handler qualified, (2) dog trained in tracking humans, (3) dog is reliable, (4) dog placed on track where circumstances indicated the suspect has been and (5) trail not stale; does not violate confrontation clause, see: State v. Carlin, 40 Wn.App. 698 (1985), State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 223 (2012); I.

State v. Olson, 30 Wn.App. 298 (1981)

Defendant refuses to name potential co-conspirators on cross-examination, whereupon court strikes her direct testimony; held: court has four alternatives (1) strike testimony, (2) contempt, (3) instruct jury that it can consider defendant's refusal in determining credibility, and (4) no sanctions, all within court's discretion; II.

State v. Wagner, 36 Wn.App. 286 (1983)

Where tracking dog evidence is offered, defense is entitled to cautionary instruction prohibiting conviction upon such evidence alone, see: State v. Salinas, 169 Wn.App. 210, 223 (2012); where evidence requires corroboration, the jury must be so informed, State v. Crouch, 60 Wash. 450 (1910), State v. Hess, 86 Wash. 240 (1915), State v. Aton, 67 Wash. 485, 486 (1912); I.

State v. Goddard, 38 Wn.App. 509 (1984)

State obtains material witness warrant which is served, videotape deposition is taken, witness goes to California using a plane ticket purchased by state; held: videotape deposition was improperly admitted at trial, as state had not used good faith efforts to procure witness at trial, former CrR 4.6(d), ER 804; see: Barber v. Page, 20 L.Ed.2d 255 (1968), Ohio v. Roberts, 65 L.Ed.2d 597 (1980), RCW 10.55, State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003), but see:

State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330 (1991), cf.: State v. Hacherey, 160 Wn.2d 503, 520-24 (2007); I.

State v. Dibley, 38 Wn.App. 824 (1984)

State offered co-defendant's Statement of Defendant on Plea of Guilty at trial against defendant; co-defendant did not testify as it was part of his plea bargain that he would not be called to testify; held: co-defendant procured, by the plea bargain, his own unavailability, thus, state did not have to call him; plea statement was against interest, ER 804(b)(3), sufficiently corroborated by evidence of the crime, but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); II.

State v. Toomey, 38 Wn.App. 831 (1984)

Previously convicted co-defendant who asserts Fifth Amendment at defendant's trial and refuses to testify even when ordered is unavailable; court is not obliged to grant the witness immunity; II.

State v. Hieb, 39 Wn.App. 273 (1984)

Where state fails to establish unavailability of a witness and fails to produce the witness, hearsay which fits within an exception is inadmissible; defense need not call witness, as burden is on state, State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592, 606-07 (2013), harmless, State v. Hieb, 107 Wn.2d 97 (1986), see: State v. Whisler, 61 Wn.App. 126 (1991), cf.: State v. Lynn, 67 Wn.App. 339 (1992); 2-1, I..

State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277 (1984)

A witness's claim of privilege and failed attempts to subpoena a witness make that witness unavailable, Ohio v. Roberts, 65 L.Ed.2d 597 (1980); factors to be considered in determining indicia of reliability to admit extrajudicial statements include close proximity of conversation to the crime, whether statements were spontaneous and against declarant's personal interest, and whether there was apparent reason for declarant to lie, State v. Boost, 87 Wn.2d 447 (1976), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985)

Co-conspirator testifies for state but is not asked about statement he made in furtherance of conspiracy; trial court admits testimony of another witness as to what co-conspirator said, ER 801(d)(2)(v); held: because co-conspirator was available as witness, it violated defendant's right of confrontation to introduce co-conspirator's statement through third party even though it met test for co-conspirator exception, California v. Green, 26 L.Ed.2d 489 (1970); harmless here; 9-0.

United States v. Bagley, 87 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985)

Prosecutor fails to provide exculpatory impeachment evidence to defense; held: there is no distinction between impeachment evidence and substantive evidence where government fails to disclose it, Banks v. Dretke, 157 L.Ed.2d 1166 (2004); test for appellate court is whether there is a reasonable probability that had evidence been disclosed, result of trial would have been different; case is not subject to automatic reversal for violation of confrontation clause; 5-3.

Delaware v. Fensterer, 88 L.Ed.2d 15 (1985)

Admission of opinion testimony of an expert witness who was unable to recall the basis for his opinion does not violate confrontation clause; 7-2.

State v. Edmondson, 43 Wn.App. 443 (1986)

To determine if a hearsay declaration against penal interest that meets the test of ER 804(b)(3) violates the confrontation clause, trial court must consider (1) whether statement contains no express assertion of past fact, (2) whether declarant had personal knowledge of identity and role of other participants in the crime, (3) whether declarant's statement was founded on faulty recollection, (4) whether circumstances indicate that declarant was telling the truth, had a motive to lie and degree to which the statement opposed his penal interest, (5) declarant's general character, (6) whether more than one person heard the statement, and (7) relationship between declarant and the witness; court should not consider other evidence of guilt of defendant in determining admissibility of the hearsay; II.

State v. Portnoy, 43 Wn.App. 455 (1986)

Where co-defendant testifies and is impeached with his guilty plea, he may be cross-examined as to his motive to plead even if the testimony reveals to the jury the sentence the defendant would receive if found guilty; II.

State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

Where both parties stipulate that a child victim is incompetent to testify and defense counsel fails to challenge victim's ability to relate just impression of the facts at the time she made hearsay statements, then prosecutor has met burden of producing declarant, distinguishing State v. Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986) and State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984), see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); III.

Kentucky v. Stincer, 96 L.Ed.2d 631 (1987)

Excluding defendant, although not counsel, from hearing to determine competency of child witness held not to violate confrontation or due process clauses; 6-3.

State v. Cooley, 48 Wn.App. 286 (1987)

Confrontation clause is not violated where a declarant's out-of-court statement is admitted as long as declarant testifies as a witness, California v. Green, 26 L.Ed.2d 489 (1970), distinguishing State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 170 (1984); where a statement is properly admitted under the child hearsay statute, RCW 9.44.120, then confrontation rights are not violated, Ryan at 170, but see: Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990), cf.: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015); I.

State v. Dickenson, 48 Wn.App. 457 (1987)

"Whole impression or effect" of a witness's testimony is that defendant killed victim; defense request to impeach witness with a prior statement that the police killed victim is refused by trial court as not inconsistent, collateral; held: test for inconsistency is not words or phrases alone but whole impression or effect, i.e., on a comparison of the two utterances are they in effect inconsistent, or do they appear to have been produced by inconsistent beliefs?, State v. Newbern, 95 Wn.App. 277, 292-96 (1999); collateral test: could the fact have been brought into evidence for a purpose independent of the contradiction?; harmless here; see: State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 67-72 (1998); I.

State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988)

An adoptive admission of defendant does not violate confrontation clause, State v. Ta'afulisia, 21 Wn.App.2d 914 (2022), see also: State v. Hill, 6 Wn.App.2d 629 (2018); I.

United States v. Owens, 98 L.Ed.2d 951 (1988)

Assault victim testifies that he remembered identifying defendant as assailant in an interview with FBI, but does not remember the assailant nor could he recall who assaulted him; held: inability of victim to recall does not violate confrontation clause, as defense counsel had opportunity to cross-examine, State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 387-89 (2005), State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), see: Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774 (2014); 6-2.

Coy v. Iowa, 101 L.Ed.2d 857 (1988)

At statutory rape trial, court permitted a screen to be erected blocking complainant's view of defendant and vice versa; held: Sixth Amendment requires face to face confrontation, State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022), but see: Maryland v. Craig, 111 L.Ed.2d 666 (1990); 6-2.

Olden v. Kentucky, 102 L.Ed.2d 513 (1988)

Trial court refuses to permit rape defendant from cross-examining victim about her meretricious relationship which defendant maintained was the motive why victim lied about the rape; held: trial court violated defendant's confrontation rights to show motive to lie; 8-1.

State v. Palomo, 113 Wn.2d 789 (1989)

Excited utterance exception to hearsay rule, ER 803(a)(2), applies even though declarant is available as a witness and does not violate confrontation clause; 9-0.

State v. Dukes, 56 Wn.App. 660 (1990)

Denial of defense motion for lineup does not violate state or federal confrontation clauses; I.

Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990)

Physician testifies at trial to statements made to him by a three-year old regarding sexual abuse by her mother; held: absent a "firmly-rooted hearsay exception," hearsay statements are presumptively unreliable and inadmissible for confrontation clause purposes; this presumption may be overcome with particularized guarantees of trustworthiness drawn from the totality of circumstances surrounding the making of the statement; see: State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401, 416 (1992); bootstrapping by the use of corroborating evidence is not permitted; thus, physical evidence of abuse, opportunity of defendant to commit the crime and similar acts on another victim are irrelevant to a showing of particularized guarantees of trustworthiness; cf.: State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984), State v. Jones, 112 Wn.2d 488 (1989), State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990); 5-4.

Maryland v. Craig, 111 L.Ed.2d 666 (1990)

Use of live, one-way closed circuit television to take testimony of child sex abuse victim does not violate confrontation clause where trial court determines, following a hearing with expert testimony, that testimony by victim in courtroom will result in child suffering serious emotional distress such that the child cannot reasonably communicate, distinguishing Coy v. Iowa, 101 L.Ed.2d 857 (1988); accord: State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998), State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022), see: State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d 279 (2022); 5-4.

State v. Sosa, 59 Wn.App. 678 (1990)

Drug test lab report, certified under penalty of perjury, provided to defense at least 15 days prior to trial is admissible without further foundation if defendant has not served written demand to produce expert seven days prior to trial, CrR 6.13(b), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), cf.: State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014), unavailability need not be shown, State v. Kreck, 86 Wn.2d 112, 119 (1975); I.

State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991)

Uncharged, unavailable co-conspirator's taped statement is admitted over objection; held: because co-conspirator did testify at a suppression hearing and was questioned about taped statement, then defendant had opportunity to cross-examine; II.

State v. Whisler, 61 Wn.App. 126 (1991)

Ninety-four-year old theft complainant's physician informs state that she is ill and advises against travel, state informs court that it will not call her; pro se defendant is granted leave to depose complainant, state introduces deposition at trial; held: standard for unavailability due to illness to admit prior testimony, ER 804(a)(4), is that illness must be so severe as to render the witness's attendance "relatively impossible and not merely inconvenient;" prosecutor's contacting physician and providing affidavit to court as to physician's opinion establishes good faith effort to obtain witness's attendance, see: State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 170-71 (1984); prosecutor's affidavit recounting physician's opinion is admissible to determine unavailability, ER 1101(c)(3); deposition was admissible even though defendant was the proponent of the deposition (and, presumably, prosecutor cross-examined), as defendant had the "opportunity and similar motive" requirements of ER 804(b)(1); see also: State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985), State v. Sweeney, 45 Wn.App. 81 (1986), State v. Scott, 48 Wn.App. 561 (1987), State v. Aaron, 49 Wn.App. 735 (1987), State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330 (1991); I.

State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330 (1991)

Subpoenaed theft victim informs state he is going on vacation during trial, state's motion to continue trial is denied, state does not seek material witness warrant, takes deposition of victim, defense counsel, with defendant present, cross-examines, trial court admits videotape at trial over objection; held: defendant's presence and cross-examination met "central concern" of confrontation clause, Maryland v. Craig, 111 L.Ed.2d 666 (1990); defense was aware witness might not be present and had time to prepare, thus defense had full opportunity for effective cross, State v. Jenkins, 53 Wn.App. 228, 235-6 (1989), State v. Hewett, 86 Wn.2d 487 (1976); issuance of subpoena and fact that state did not indicate to witness he need not appear establishes good faith effort, State v. Tatum, 74 Wn.App. 81 (1994), see: State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003), State v. Hacherey, 160 Wn.2d 503, 520-24 (2007), distinguishing State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985); material witness warrant would have been a "hardship" on witness, unnecessary here; I.

State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779 (1991)

Co-defendant's statement implicating defendant is presumptively unreliable unless it bears sufficient indicia of reliability to rebut presumption, Lee v. Illinois, 90 L.Ed.2d 514 (1986), State v. Rice, 120 Wn.2d 549, 567 (1993); corroboration by admission of defendant plus other evidence at trial supporting the statement are factors to be considered in supporting trustworthiness, State v. Hoskinson, 48 Wn.App. 66, 71-2 (1987); but see: Cruz v. New York, 95 L.Ed.2d 162 (1987) [unclear from Greer opinion whether co-defendant testified at trial], cf.: State v. St Pierre, 111 Wn.2d 105 (1988); I.

White v. Illinois, 116 L.Ed.2d 848 (1992)

Spontaneous declarations and medical examination exceptions to hearsay rule do not violate confrontation clause, State v. O'Cain, 169 Wn.App. 228 (2012), prosecution need not produce declarant, trial court need not find unavailability, United States v. Inadi, 89 L.Ed.2d 390 (1986), State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 482-4 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Lynn, 67 Wn.App. 339 (1992)

Where defense fails to challenge a claim of unavailability at trial where witness is charged with a crime, then the likelihood of the witness actually being unavailable is extremely likely, and defense may not raise the issue for the first time on appeal, distinguishing State v. Hieb, 39 Wn.App. 273 (1984), rev'd, 107 Wn.2d 97 (1986); I.

State v. Estabrook, 68 Wn.App. 309 (1993)

Trial court requires pro se defendant to submit written questions to the court, which were asked of a developmentally disabled child victim; held: because defendant failed to object, defendant had actual control over the questions asked, and the procedure did not impact the jury's perception that defendant was representing himself, defendant's right of self-representation was not violated, see: McKaskle v. Wiggins, 79 L.Ed.2d 122 (1984) but see: State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022); Division II did not directly address confrontation clause issues.

State v. Mannhalt, 68 Wn.App. 757 (1992)

While right to confront witnesses includes cross-examination to identify a witness with his community so that independent testimony may be sought and offered of his reputation for veracity in his own neighborhood, Alford v. United States, 75 L.Ed.2d 624 (1931), trial court may deny disclosure of witnesses' addresses where there is evidence that witnesses' safety was in danger, Smith v. Illinois, 19 L.Ed.2d 956 (1968)(White, J., concurring); I.

State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798 , 809-12 (1993)

In child sex abuse case, prosecutor's comment in closing that defendant stared at victim during trial is unconstitutional comment on defendant's right of confrontation, harmless here; I.

State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994)

Child hearsay statements are admissible under the medical diagnosis exception, ER 803(a)(4), even if the child declarant does not understand that the statements were necessary for medical diagnosis if corroborating evidence supports the statements, and it appears unlikely that the child fabricated, In re S.S., 61 Wn.App. 488, 503 (1991), State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214, 222-3 (1989), trial court should identify on the record the specific evidence, drawn from the totality of circumstances, on which it relies to determine reliability, see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); here, fearfulness, spontaneity are factors which would be difficult for a three-year old to consciously invent; while child hearsay/medical diagnosis exception, as interpreted in Washington, is not a firmly rooted exception, particularized guarantees of trustworthiness here establish that the statements did not violate confrontation clause, State v. O'Cain, 169 Wn.App. 228 (2012), see: Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990), White v. Illinois, 116 L.Ed.2d 848 (1992), State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 482-4 (1998), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 182-84 (2001), State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77 (1997), op. withdrawn, in part, State v. Carol M.D., 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999); I.

State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179 (1996)

Trial court precludes cross-examination of assault complainant that she lied under oath about her drug use in a related civil case; held: because complainant was on probation, her prior false testimony provided her a motive to lie as to recent drug use, thus the evidence was relevant; the state's interest of insuring a just trial and preventing an acquittal based on prejudice against the victim's history of drug abuse is compelling but, because other evidence of drug use was admitted, the balance is in favor of admissibility, see: State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1, 15-6 (1983), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.2d 335, 348-56 (2005), State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017), State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017), State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023), cf.: State v. Burnam, 4 Wn.App.2d 368 (2018); I.

State v. Connie J.C., 86 Wn.App. 453 (1997)

Trial court admits co-defendant's guilty plea form, containing co-defendant's confession, at defendant's trial, no showing co-defendant was unavailable; held: a confession is not a public record, RCW 5.44.040, as it is not a routine daily product of government and business, admission deprives defendant of right to cross-examine; III.

State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998)

Six-year old child molestation complainant is permitted to testify via one-way closed-circuit television, RCW 9A.44.150(1); held: confrontation clauses are not violated where, following a hearing, substantial evidence establishes that child complainant under the age of ten would suffer serious emotional distress that would prevent her from reasonably communicating at trial if required to testify in presence of defendant, Maryland v. Craig, 111 L.Ed.2d 666 (1990), affirming State v. Foster, 81 Wn.App. 444 (1996); CONST. Art. I, §22 provides greater protection to defendants than Sixth Amendment to United States Constitution, overruling sub nom., in part, State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994), but live video is the functional equivalent of "face-to-face," cf.: State v. Ulestad, 127 Wn.App. 209 (2005), State v. Sweidan, 13 Wn.App.2d 53 (2020), State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022), State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d 279 (2022); 5-4.

Lilly v. Virginia, 144 L.Ed.2d 117 (1999)

Trial court admits nontestifying accomplice's entire confession that contains some statements against accomplice's penal interest and others that inculpate defendant; held: admission of accomplice's "untested" statement violates defendant's right to confront; 9-0 (4 concurring opinions).

State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999)

Where no objection to child hearsay is taken, appellate court will only review admissibility pursuant to confrontation clause; where complainant on stand denies that she was molested and only hearsay accounts of her prior statements are admitted, there is no confrontation clause violation as witness was subject to cross-examination, State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 387-89 (2005), see: State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 744-45 (2007), *cf.:*distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997), see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); affirms State v. Clark, 91 Wn.App. 69 (1998); 7-2.

State v. Ayala, 108 Wn.App. 480 (2001)

Defendant is accused of kidnapping for ransom, offers evidence that 14-year old victim was part of extortion plot against his father, trial court precludes defense and cross-examination; held: acquiescence of a kidnap victim less than 16 years old is statutorily excluded as a defense, RCW 9A.40.020(2)(b); confrontation clause does not oblige a court to allow cross-examination on irrelevant issues: 2-1, III.

State v. Darden, 145 Wn.2d 612 (2002)

In drug case, surveillance officer testifies to his height from street and location relative to transaction observed but court overrules defendant's objection to the specific location; held: there is no surveillance location privilege, court's restriction violated defendant's right to confront, see: State v. Reed, 101 Wn.App. 704 (2000); reverses State v. Darden, 103 Wn.App. 368 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 148 Wn.2d 122 (2002)

In rape of child case, trial court finds that 5-year old child is unavailable due to her emotional state, social worker testifies that she could testify in a "quiet reassuring environment," defense requests that she testify via closed-circuit television, RCW 9A.44.150(9), trial court declines stating that county lacks the facilities, admits child hearsay; held: before a court can find that a child victim is unavailable for purposes of admitting her hearsay statements, RCW 9A.44.120, it must consider the use of closed-circuit television if there is evidence that the child may be able to testify in an alternative setting, see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177

(2004); if equipment is not readily available, court may consider whether the cost of bringing in outside equipment is unreasonable; reverses State v. Smith, 108 Wn.App. 581 (2001); 9-0.

State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402, 408-15 (2003)

Following mistrial, state discovers its witnesses moved to Mexico or Texas, makes efforts to locate witnesses, mails subpoenas, contacts family members to no avail, trial court admits former testimony at second trial, ER 804(b)(1); held: party need not exercise due diligence, distinguishing State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574 (1988), or invoke out of jurisdiction summons, ch. 10.55 RCW, where witness' presence is unknown, see: State v. Sweeney, 45 Wn.App. 81, 86 (1986), cf.: State v. Rivera, 51 Wn.App. 556 , 560 (1988), as long as the party exercises good faith and reasonable efforts; where state adds a charge between trials, former testimony is admissible, within discretion of trial court, as long as motive and incentive to cross-examine are substantially the same; affirms State v. DeSantiago, 108 Wn.App. 581 (2001); 7-2.

Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004)

In attempted murder case, police take statements from defendant's wife describing incident; at trial, defense invokes marital privilege, court admits wife's statement against penal interest; held: testimonial statements are inadmissible at trial unless declarant testifies at trial or defense was previously able to cross-examine declarant; "testimonial" statements include ex parte in-court testimony or its functional equivalent, such as affidavits, custodial examinations, prior testimony that defendant was unable to cross-examine or similar pretrial statements that declarants would reasonably expect to be used prosecutorially, including those made under circumstances which would lead an objective witness reasonably to believe that the statement would be available for use at a later trial, see: State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2007), Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006); overrules reliability test of Ohio v. Roberts, 65 L.Ed.2d 597 (1980), State v. Koslowski, 166 Wn.2d 409 (2009); reverses State v. Crawford, 147 Wn.2d 424 (2002); see: White v. Illinois, 116 L.Ed.2d 848 (1992) (Thomas, J., concurring); 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004)

In child rape case, prosecutor tells 5-year old witness that, if she wants, she can say "I don't know" if she doesn't remember or "I don't want to talk about it" if she doesn't want to answer, witness answers most questions on direct but says she does not remember to some questions and declines to answer others; on cross, witness says she doesn't remember to some questions but never says she doesn't want to talk about it; held: while it is improper for prosecutor to give a witness permission to refuse to testify, "I don't remember" is a constitutionally acceptable response, United States v. Owens, 98 L.Ed.2d 951 (1988); because witness did not refuse to answer any defense questions, no confrontation clause violation occurred, State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152, 158 (1999), see: State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 387-89 (2005), State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774 (2014); fractured opinion.

Pers. Restraint of Markel, 154 Wn.2d 262, 268-73 (2005)

Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), does not apply retroactively to cases on collateral review, Pers. Restraint of Hacheney, 169 Wn.App. 1 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Ulestad, 127 Wn.App. 209 (2005)

Trial court finds that child molestation complainant may testify via closed circuit television, places complainant and attorneys is separate chambers, defendant, judge and jury remain in courtroom, court directs that if counsel wishes to object, judge will "lean through the door" to the room where attorneys are, hear objection and rule from bench; held: RCW 9A.44.150(h) requires that defendant must "communicate constantly" with defense counsel, here communication was delayed, not constant, to talk to jury defendant had to signal in front of jury and interrupt the trial; because court did not strictly follow the constant communication requirement, error is reversible without a showing of prejudice, distinguishing State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022); 2-1, II.

State v. Moses, 129 Wn.App. 718 (2005)

Homicide victim's statement to a health care provider for purposes of treatment is not testimonial, distinguishing Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), where there was no "prosecutorial purpose" to the examination, State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1 (2005), State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592 (2013), State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019), cf.: State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 789-92 (2006); statement to a social worker did not implicate Crawford as it was not introduced for the truth of the matter asserted but to show why the social worker contacted CPS; I.

State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1, 10-13 (2005)

Child abuse victim's statement to a private family practice physician that defendant hit him is not testimonial, State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019), cf.: State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 789-92 (2006), State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592 (2013); II.

State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006)

Child molestation victim is asked on direct examination about touching, says "me forgot" to all questions, does remember talking to police but not what she said, trial court admits her hearsay statements; held: because the witness took the stand, testified, was asked about the sexual contact and her hearsay statements, defense had opportunity to cross-examine, no confrontation clause violation occurred, Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774 (2014), State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997); affirms State v. Price, 127 Wn.App. 193 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Shafer, 156 Wn.2d 381 (2006)

Incompetent 3-year old's statement to her mother is not testimonial; test is whether a reasonable person in declarant's position would expect that her statement would be used in prosecuting the crime, but see State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019) (overruling "declarant-centric test with "primary purpose" test), see: State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592 (2013); statement from same declarant to a family friend who had served as a police informant was not testimonial as the testifying witness was not acting for any law enforcement agency at the time she talked to declarant; trial court did not err in applying reliability factors, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 175-76 (1984), for admissibility under child hearsay statute; 8-1.

State v. Williams, 131 Wn.App. 488, 493-94 (2006)

Co-conspirator's statement, ER 801(d)(2)(v), is not testimonial, State v. Chambers, 134 Wn.App. 853, 859-62 (2006); III.

State v. Benefiel, 131 Wn.App. 651 (2006)

Certified copy of a judgment and sentence is not testimonial, State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 71-75 (2014); III.

State v. Mohamed, 132 Wn.App. 58 (2006)

Victim reports domestic violence assault to 911 operator, recants at trial, at pretrial hearing state elicits from victim prior acts of domestic violence, defense examines victim, as on direct, about the 911 call and the recanted events, victim then disappears and is deemed unavailable, trial court admits former testimony: assuming, without deciding, that the 911 call was testimonial, Division I holds that, at the preliminary hearing, counsel had an adequate opportunity and motive to examine the witness as to her credibility, since trial court had to determine if her recantation was credible, distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997); "where the witness was recanting her out of court statements, the protection of the confrontation clause was not undermined by requiring the defendant to conduct a direct examination," at 68 ¶ 25, ER 804(b)(1), see: State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006).

Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006)

Complainant calls 911, "hysterical and crying," operator asks what's happening, complainant responds "he's jumpin' on me again," operator asks who and whether he had been drinking, complainant identifies assailant, trial court admits 911 tape; held: "statements are nontestimonial when made in the course of police interrogation under circumstances objectively indicating that the primary purpose of the interrogation is to enable police assistance to meet an ongoing emergency. They are testimonial when the circumstances objectively indicate that there is no such ongoing emergency, and that the primary purpose of the interrogation is to establish or prove past events potentially relevant to later criminal prosecution," at 237, State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 919-20 (2007), State v. James, 138 Wn.App. 628, 638-42 (2007), State v. Burke, 196 Wn.2d 712 (2021), here, the 911 caller was speaking about events as they were actually happening rather than describing past events, Lilly v. Virginia, 144 L.Ed.2d 117 (1999) (plurality opinion), State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877 (2015), the elicited statements were necessary to be able to resolve the present emergency rather than learn what happened in the past, including operator's effort to establish identity of assailant, State v. Pugh, 167 Wn.2d 825 (2009), State v. Bird, 136 Wn.App. 127, 134-38 (2006), State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 503-04 (2007), State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 562-71 (2012), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 156-57 (2013), State v. Perez, 181 Wn.App. 321 (2014), see State v. Ohlson, 162 Wn.2d 1 (2007), State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592, 602-07 (2006), State v. Koslowski, 166 Wn.2d 409 (2009), Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015); affirms State v. Davis, 116 Wn.App. 81 (2003), 154 Wn.2d 291 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 789-92 (2006)

Nurse who examines child molestation complainant and takes statement identifying perpetrator is unavailable to testify due to family emergency, state calls nurse's supervisor to read her report to the jury; held: because nurse created her report under circumstances that would lead an objective witness to believe that the statements would be available for use at a later trial, and because medical providers are required to file reports with law enforcement where they have reasonable cause to believe abuse or neglect of a child, RCW 26.44.030(1)(a), nurse's report was testimonial, reading it in evidence violates confrontation clause, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), cf.: State v. Moses, 129 Wn.App. 718 (2005), State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1, 10-13 (2005), State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592 (2013), State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019), harmless here; II.

State v. Chambers, 134 Wn.App. 853 (2006)

Undercover police observe van pull to house, passenger walks to house, tells officer he has the money for drugs and asks how much, passenger walks back to van, speaks with driver, gets money from driver, returns to officer, pays, gets drugs, driver is arrested, at trial officer testifies to what passenger said; held: statement by a coconspirator does not violate confrontation clause, State v. Williams, 131 Wn.App. 488 (2006), Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 195-96 (2004), as an objective witness would not reasonably believe that his statements to an undercover police officer would laer be available for use at trial; II.

State v. Bird, 136 Wn.App. 127, 134-38 (2006)

While excited utterance is a hearsay exception, where there is no ongoing emergency when police question witness and questions are intended to determine how a crime was committed and who did it, statements are testimonial and inadmissible, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), see: State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 501-04 (2007), State v. Perez, 181 Wn.App. 321 (2014); II.

State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 520-24 (2007)

Three subpoenaed witnesses advise that they will be out of the country at trial, state takes depositions with defendant present, trial court admits depositions at trial; held: while a witness' absence from the jurisdiction, without more, is not enough to satisfy the confrontation clause, Barber v. Page, 20 L.Ed.2d 255 (1968), here prosecutor did not tell witnesses they need not appear, distinguishing State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985), trial court's finding that it would have been a hardship for witnesses to appear and trial court's reasonable inference that even then witnesses would not have returned meet confrontation clause requirements, State v. Allen, 94 Wn.2d 860, 866 (1980), State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402, 411 (2003), see: Pers. Restraint of Hacheney, 166 Wn.2d 322 (2012), distinguishing State v. Aaron, 49 Wn.App. 735 (1987); 7-2.

State v. Watt, 160 Wn.2d 626 (2007)

Harmless error analysis applies to a confrontation clause violation pursuant to Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), State v. James, 138 Wn.App. 628, 641-42 (2007), State v. Gonzales Flores, 164 Wn.2d 1, 18-19 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2007)

Where trial court finds by clear, cogent and convincing evidence that defendant was responsible for a declarant's unavailability, here by murder, doctrine of forfeiture by wrongdoing results in defendant forfeiting his right of confrontation of the declarant's testimonial hearsay, State v. Fallentine, 149 Wn.App. 614, 619-23 (2009), State v. Dobbs, 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014), State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673 (1992), but see: Giles v. California, 171 L.Ed.2d 488 (2008), State v. Fraser, 170 Wn.App. 13, 19-24 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Ohlson, 162 Wn.2d 1 (2007)

Police arrive pursuant to a 911 call, declarant states, in response to questions, that defendant yelled at her, then returned and tried to hit her with a car, does not testify but trial court admits statements; held: while excited utterances are not per se nontestimonial, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224, 243-44 (2006), overruling, in part, State v. Ohlson, 131 Wn.App. 71, 84 (2005), here the statements were made within minutes of the assault, contemporaneously with the events described albeit not as they were occurring, involved a threat to harm in light of defendant's return to the scene once already, were necessary to resolve a present emergency, and were the product of informal interrogation, thus were not testimonial, State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 562-71 (2012), State v. Perez, 181 Wn.App. 321 (2014), see: State v. Pugh, 167 Wn.2d 825 (2009), State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877 (2015); 8-0.

State v. Tyler, 138 Wn.App. 120 (2007)

Police observe man and woman fighting, separate them, woman expresses fear, says defendant will kill her if she testifies, does not appear at intimidating a witness trial, court admits her statements to police; held: because exigency was terminated when police separated defendant and victim, statement was for the primary purpose of establishing past events and thus were testimonial, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 919-20 (2007), State v. Koslowski, 166 Wn.2d 409 (2009), see: State v. Pugh, 167 Wn.2d 825 (2009), State v. Burke, 196 Wn.2d 712 (2021), cf.: State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 562-71 (2012); "doctrine of forfeiture," requiring that one who obtains the absence of a witness by wrongdoing forfeits the constitutional right to confront, is inapplicable here because it cannot be raised for the first time on appeal, but see: State v. Mason, supra., at 924-27; III.

Pers. Restraint of Hegney, 138 Wn.App. 511, 543-47 (2007)

A co-defendant's properly redacted statement, Bruton v. United States, 20 L.Ed.2d 476 (1968), that is admitted at trial is not considered a witness against defendant, and thus does not violate confrontation clause, State v. Moses, 193 Wn.App. 341 (2016), see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), Richardson v. Marsh, 95 L.Ed.2d 176 (1987), Gray v. Maryland, 140 L.Ed.2d 294 (1998), State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171, 206-13 (2014), reversed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016); II.

State v. Perez, 139 Wn.App. 522, 526-30 (2007)

In absence of jury, trial court expresses concern that complaining witness is under the influence "of something," inquires, witness denies, trial court precludes defense from cross-examining witness as to whether he is under the influence while testifying; held: abuse of discretion for trial court to preclude examination of a witness regarding whether or not he is under the influence while testifying where the witness had given confused and inarticulate testimony and where trial court observed that he appeared confused and disoriented, cf.: State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512, 532-34 (2015); II.

Giles v. California, 171 L.Ed.2d 488 (2008)

Where trial judge finds that defendant committed a wrongful act that resulted in unavailability of witness at trial, here homicide, doctrine of forfeiture by wrongdoing does not overcome confrontation clause preclusion of victim's unconfronted out of court testimony unless evidence establishes that defendant engaged in conduct designed to prevent the witness from testifying, State v. Fraser, 170 Wn.App. 13, 19-24 (2012), but see: State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2007), see: State v. Fallentine, 149 Wn.App. 614, 619-23 (2009), State v. Dobbs, 167 Wn.App. 905 (2012), 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014); 6-3.

State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 751-53 (2009)

In child sex abuse case, trial court permits defense to inquire of victim's mother about her general bias against defendant because of a rancorous divorce, but precludes evidence about details of financial disputes arising during the divorce; held: while a defendant has a right to put specific reasons motivating a witness' bias before the jury, defendant does not have the right to prove specific facts behind the motivation, State v. Brooks, 25 Wn.App. 550, 551-52 (1980), and court has the discretion to limit the evidence as speculative and remote; 9-0.

Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 557 U.S. 305, 129 S.Ct. 314, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009)

Lab reports showing that material seized was cocaine are testimonial and violate the confrontation clause, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (20120, State v. Lee, 159 Wn.App. 795, 813-19 (2011), see: State v. Schroeder, 164 Wn.App. 164 (2011), cf.: CrR 6.13(b), State v. Sosa, 59 Wn.App. 678 (1990), State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014), State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736, 745-48 (2014), aff'd, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015), State v. Farnworth, 199 Wn.App. 185, 202-05 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 468 (2018), Seattle v. Wiggins, 23 Wn.App.2d 401 (2022); while documents kept in the regular course of business may be admitted at trial, "that is not the case if the regularly conducted business activity is the production of evidence for use at trial," at 328, Palmer v. Hoffman, 87 L.Ed.2d 645 (1943); 5-4.

State v. Koslowski, 166 Wn.2d 409 (2009)

Police respond to robbery call, officer observes complainant "extremely emotional and very upset," through questions she explains that suspect is not present and describes details of the offense, complainant dies before trial; held: four factors to determine where primary purpose of police interrogations is for ongoing emergency to establish or prove past events: (1) was speaker speaking about current events as they were occurring, requiring police assistance, or describing past events? (2) would a reasonable listener conclude that speaker was facing an ongoing emergency that required help? (3) what was the nature of what was asked and answered; viewed objectively, were the elicited statements necessary to resolve a present emergency or show what had happened in the past? (4) what was the level of formality of the interrogation?, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), see: : State v. Burke, 196 Wn.2d 712 (2021); here, complainant was describing events that occurred, no reason to believe that robber might return, while complainant was frightened there was no reason to think she faced further threat with police present, police questions were to learn past facts, not to resolve a present emergency, questioning was less formal than interrogation in a police station, thus admission of statements violated confrontation clause, State v. Pugh, 167 Wn.2d 825

(2009), cf.: State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 562-71 (2012), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 156-57 (2013), State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877 (2015); "the emotional state has little relevance to the question whether the individual's statements are testimonial," at 424 ¶ 26; 6-3.

State v. Pugh, 167 Wn.2d 825 (2009)

Victim calls 911, says defendant "was beating me up," "he's walking away," describes defendant, says he's "just outside" and "[h]e's beating me up," when asked then says she can no longer see him, trial court admits 911 call; held: while parsing call out of context suggests at some point victim was describing past events, call was intended for immediate safety and medical assistance, questions by operator, including identity of suspect were, objectively viewed, an effort to establish identity so officers might know if they would be encountering a "violent felon," thus statements were nontestimonial under Sixth Amendment, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 562-71 (2012), State v. Perez, 181 Wn.App. 321 (2014), State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877 (2015); res gestae statements are not per se inadmissible under CONST. art. I, § 22; 8-1.

State v. Alvarez-Abrego, 154 Wn.App. 351, 362-69 (2010)

In child abuse case, court admits doctor's testimony that victim's mother told doctor that victim's sister, who was not called to testify, told her that victim had been thrown against the wall; held: while child hearsay statements made to a family member are not testimonial, State v. Shafer, 156 Wn.2d 381 (2006), State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 448-51 (2007), see: Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015), there must be "some threshold evaluation of the underlying circumstances to meet the constitutional strictures," at 364 ¶ 29, not established here; II.

State v. Price, 154 Wn.App. 480 (2009)

A note found near homicide victim in her handwriting declaring that defendant shot her for "fooling around" is admissible as a dying declaration, ER 804(b)(2), evidence that victim was shot for another reason than "fooling around" does not preclude admissibility, goes to weight; declaration was addressed to her daughter, thus it is not testimonial; I.

Michigan v. Bryant, 562 U.S. 344, 179 L.Ed.2d 93 (2011)

Police respond to man shot dispatch, find victim wounded, ask what happened, who shot him, where shooting occurred, victim answers, later dies, trial court admits victim's answers as excited utterances; held: in determining whether a statement is testimonial, court should objectively ascertain the primary purpose of the interrogation by examining the statement and all of the circumstances in determining whether an emergency exists, looking at the type and scope of danger posed to the victim, the police and the public, and not just the intent of the police in interrogating the declarant; here, there was an ongoing emergency as an armed shooter, whose motive was unknown, was at large within minutes of the shooting, police did not know the circumstances in which the shooting occurred or whether the public or police were in danger, questions were necessary to allow police to assess the situation, the threat to their own safety and the public, it was not a structured interrogation, thus statements were not testimonial, Davis v. Washington, 547 U.S. 813, 158 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), State v. Reed, 168 Wn.App. 553, 562-71 (2012), Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015); 6-2.

Bullcoming v. New Mexico, 564 U.S. 647, 180 L.Ed.2d 610 (2011)

In DUI case, court admits lab report stating blood alcohol concentration through an analyst familiar with testing procedures but who neither participated in nor observed the test on the blood sample; held: lab report is testimonial, Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 552 U.S. 1256, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), accused is entitled to confront the analyst who made the certification, see: State v. Schroeder, 164 Wn.App. 164 (2011), substituting another knowledgeable analyst does not meet the Sixth Amendment confrontation requirement, but see: State v. Manion, 173 Wn.App. 610 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Lee, 159 Wn.App. 795, 813-19 (2011)

Trial court admits cell phone records, without objection, via an affidavit of the custodian that attests to their authenticity, RCW 10.96.030; held: while an affidavit that contains factual assertions offered as substantive evidence to prove a crime violate confrontation clause, Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 557 U.S. 305, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), an affidavit of authenticity is not testimonial; I.

State v. Mares, 160 Wn.App. 558 (2011)

In violation of no contact order case, victim does not appear at trial, court admits certified copy of her driver's license by way of certified letter from Department of Licensing records custodian stating that the attached license is for "Knopff, Brittany," which is the name of victim; held: although letter from records custodian states name of complainant, it is not testimonial as it attests only to the existence of a certain public record, custodian did not attest that the license belonged to "any particular Brittany Knopff" nor that the photograph on the license was the victim of the crime, State v. Bajardi, 3 Wn.App.2d 726, 729-33 (2016), cf.: State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); I.

State v. Turnipseed, 162 Wn.App. 60 (2011)

Videotaped deposition of state's ballistics' expert is played for jury due to witness unavailability, defects in the recording cause portions, including portions of cross-examination, to be inaudible, no stenographic record made at the time of the deposition; held: without some record of what cross-examination was lost, court assumes a confrontation violation occurred, but here there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different, thus error was harmless, State v. Moses, 129 Wn.App. 718, 732 (2005), Harrington v. California, 395 U.S. 250, 23 L.Ed.2d 284 (1969); depositions in criminal cases may be videotaped but stenographic record should be made simultaneously at expense of noting party, CrR 4.6(c), CR 30(b)(8)(E); III.

State v. Caton, 163 Wn.App. 659 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.App. 659 (2011)

In failure to register as a sex offender case, admission at trial of defendant's registration form containing sheriff's classification of him as a level II sex offender does not violate confrontation clause here as sheriff testified that he classified defendant as a level II offender after reviewing defendant's records, thus error, if any, is not manifest, cf.: State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); II.

State v. Schroeder, 164 Wn.App. 164 (2011)

Court admits lab report without objection, argues confrontation clause violation on appeal; held: defendant has burden of raising a confrontation clause objection and has burden to demand presence of test report expert, CrR 6.13(b), Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 557 U.S. 305, 129 S.Ct. 2527, 2541, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), failure to object or demand waives confrontation rights, State v. O'Cain, 169 Wn.App. 228 (2012), State v. J.K.T., 11 Wn.App.2d 544 (2019), State v. Burns, 193 Wn.2d 190, 207 (2019); Division III fails to address effective assistance issue in published portion of opinion.

State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012)

Certifications as to the existence or nonexistence of public records are testimonial, Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 557 U.S. 305, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), State v. Rainey, 180 Wn.App. 830, 843-45 (2014), overruling State v. Kirkpatrick, 160 Wn.2d 873 (2007) and State v. Kronich, 160 Wn.2d 893 (2007), cf.: State v. Lee, 159 Wn.App. 795, 813-19 (2011), State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932, 948-52 (2014), rev., on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016), State v. Farnworth, 199 Wn.App. 185, 202-05 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 468 (2018); affirms State v. Jasper, 158 Wn.App. 518 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Hummel, 165 Wn.App. 749, 774-77 (2012)

Witnesses testify at trial that they did an internet search and were unable to locate the victim; held: while a motion in limine regarding the scientific validity of evidence of internet searches may have been appropriate, the witnesses were all subject to cross-examination and thus confrontation clause is not implicated; I.

State v. Hayes, 165 Wn.App. 507, 514-20 (2011)

Record establishes that defense recognized the existence of a confrontation clause issue, failed to object and then raised issue for first time on appeal, RAP 2.5(a)(3); held: a manifest constitutional issue deliberately not litigated at trial is waived and may not be raised on direct appeal, State v. Walton, 76 Wn.App. 364, 368-70 (1994), Johnson v. United States, 87 L.Ed. 704 (1943), State v. Valladares, 99 Wn.2d 663, 666-72 (1983), State v. White, 83 Wn.App. 770, 776 (1996), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 761 (1998), State v. Garbaccio, 151 Wn.App. 716, 730-31 (2009), see: State v. O'Cain, 169 Wn.App. 228 (2012), see also: State v. Trout, 125 Wn.App. 313 (2005); I.

Williams v. Illinois, 567 U.S. 50, 183 L.Ed.2d 90 (2012)

State lab expert testifies that a DNA profile produced by an outside laboratory matched a profile that state lab produced using a sample of defendant's blood, based on business records stating that swabs taken from victim were sent to outside lab and returned; held: an expert may express an opinion that is based on facts that the expert assumes, but does not know, to be true, expert may explain the facts on which expert's opinion is based without testifying to the truth of those facts which are not hearsay and do not violate confrontation clause, State v. Manion, 173 Wn.App. 610 (2013); outside lab report was produced before any suspect was identified, was not sought to obtain evidence against defendant and thus does not violate confrontation clause; expert's testimony that the outside lab's sample came from the victim is admissible in a bench trial but not a jury trial; 5-4 (plurality opinion).

State v. Hubbard, 169 Wn.App. 182 (2012)

In violation of no contact order trial court admits clerk's minute entry from sentencing on prior conviction that defendant was served with no contact order in open court; held: certified public record memorializing facts as they occur in court, without reference to future litigation, is not testimonial, State v. Hart, 195 Wn.App. 449, 460 (2016), abrogated, on other grounds, State v. Burns, 193 Wn.2d 190 (2019), but see: State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); II.

State v. O'Cain, 169 Wn.App. 228 (2012)

Hearsay statements made for purposes of medical treatment do not violate U.S. or state confrontation clauses, CONST., Art. I, § 22, Michigan v. Bryant, 562 U.S. 344, 179 L.Ed.2d 93 (2011); confrontation clause objection cannot be raised for first time on appeal, State v. J.K.T., 11 Wn.App.2d 544 (2019), State v. Burns, 193 Wn.2d 190, 207 (2019); I.

State v. Fraser, 170 Wn.App. 13, 19-24 (2012)

In homicide case, trial court admits victim's statement to police three months earlier that he feared defendant, gives limiting instruction that statement is admitted for victim's state of mind, not for truth; held: statement that survives a hearsay challenge does not, per se, survive a confrontation clause challenge, State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 922 (2007); here, the statement was used to prove victim feared defendant, thus it was not only for state of mind, violated confrontation clause; harmless here; I.

State v. Doerflinger, 170 Wn.App. 650 (2012)

Treating physician testifies that he suspected a nose fracture, ordered CT scan, based upon radiology results and consultation with radiologist he confirmed, over objection, nasal fracture; held: out of court statements that are related by an expert solely to explain the assumptions on which an opinion rests are not testimonial and fall outside the scope of the confrontation clause, Williams v. Illinois, 567 U.S 50, 183 L.Ed.2d 89 (2012), see: State v. Manion, 173 Wn.App. 610 (2013), and was properly admitted as a business record, State v. Ziegler, 114 Wn.2d 533 (1990); I.

State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592 (2013)

Domestic violence victim, during treatment in emergency room, tells medical personnel, with police officer present, that her boyfriend hit her, victim does not testify at trial, court admits statement; held: statement to medical personnel is nontestimonial (1) where made for diagnosis and treatment, (2) where there is no indication that witness expected statement to be used at trial, (3) the doctor does not work for the state, but see: State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019) (abrogating three-factor test in favor of primary purpose test); here, a reasonable person would believe that the statement made in the presence of a police officer would be used as evidence, distinguishing State v. Sandoval, 137 Wn.App. 532, 537 (2007), State v. Moses, 129 Wn.App. 718, 729-30 (2005), officer was actively collecting evidence, thus state "failed to meet its burden in proving that [the] statements were nontestimonial;" where state does not call a witness whose hearsay statement is admitted and does not establish a good faith effort to secure the presence of the witness, then the witness is not unavailable, at 606-07, State v. Beadle, 173 Wn.2d 97, 107-

13 (2011), State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402, 410-11 (2003), cf.: State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673, 686-89 (1992), harmless here; I.

State v. Manion*,* 173 Wn.App. 610 (2013)

DNA analyst is unavailable, court admits testimony of technical peer reviewer who conducted "an independent review of the DNA evidence and gave her independent opinion" consistent with the unavailable witness; held: experts can "partially rely" on the reports of others, ER 703, without violating confrontation clause, cf.: State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014), Seattle v. Wiggins, 23 Wn.App.2d 401 (2022), distinguishing Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 558 U.S. 305, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), Bullcoming v. New Mexico, 564 U.S. 647, 180 L.Ed.2d 610 (2011), Williams v. Illinois, 567 U.S. 50, 183 L.Ed.2d 89, (2012), State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736, 745-48 (2014) , aff'd, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015); I.

State v. Lui*,* 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014)

Medical examiner, not present during autopsy, testifies to cause of death based upon photographs of autopsy, makes some statements from the autopsy report, including temperature, and recites from the report negative result of toxicology report; DNA expert, who did not participate or observe DNA testing testifies from a report that she could not eliminate defendant as donor, defense objects to both under confrontation clause; held: confrontation clause applies where an expert testifies against the defendant with some capacity to inculpate defendant, see: State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736, 745-48 (2014) , aff'd, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015), State v. Ramirez, 7 Wn.App.2d 277 (2019); DNA evidence is not inculpatory until a human analyst uses expertise to interpret readings, create a profile that incriminates defendant; here, the expert was the appropriate witness to introduce the DNA evidence, and was the only DNA witness "against" the defendant, who does not have confrontation rights with respect to chain of custody, authenticity of the sample or accuracy of the testing device; pathologist who took temperature readings did not provide evidence against the defendant, as it had no relevance until interpreted by the testifying medical examiner; toxicology results did tend to inculpate defendant, thus confrontation right was violated, Seattle v. Wiggins, 23 Wn.App.2d 401 (2022), albeit harmless here; 5-4.

State v. Dobbs*,* 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014)

Before and after arrest, defendant threatens victim who fails to appear at trial, court finds by clear, cogent and convincing evidence that defendant's acts caused victim's absence, admits hearsay statements; held: doctrine of forfeiture by wrongdoing is applicable, court may consider acts before and after state initiated criminal proceedings, Giles v. California, 554 U.S. 353, 377, 171 L.Ed.2d 488 (2008), lack of a direct statement from victim that she feared harm as a result of testifying is not required as long as court concludes that it was highly likely why victim did not appear, hearsay statements need not meet a hearsay exception, State v. Fallentine, 149 Wn.App. 614, 623-24 (2009), State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673 (1992), as defendant waived his hearsay objection; affirms State v. Dobbs, 167 Wn.App. 905 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Pearson*,* 180 Wn.App. 576 (2014)

To prove school bus route stop enhancement in VUCSA case, state offers testimony from county Director of Geographic Information Systems who produces a map showing bus stops provided by the school district, RCW 69.50.435(5) (2003), trial court strikes special verdict finding that map was wrongly admitted; held: map is prepared, per the statute, for use in a criminal proceeding and is thus testimonial, defendant had right to confront the official who supplied the information, confrontation clause was violated; III.

State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 780-84 (2014)

In molestation case prosecutor asks child complainant about school, relatives, peripheral details but doesn't ask if she recognizes defendant or about touching, witness did not testify that defendant touched her or that she told interviewers that defendant touched her, she did not testify she didn't remember, State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630, 649 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), trial court admits child hearsay describing offense; held: when a witness is not questioned about the alleged criminal act or prior statement, the cross-examiner has nothing to confront and is caught between the "constitutionally impermissible Catch-22 of calling the child for direct or waiving his confrontation rights," State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152, 158 (1999), cf.: State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), thus conviction reversed, State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 432 (1997); I.

State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932, 948-51 (2014), reversed., on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016)

Affidavit from Department of Licensing attesting that notice of license revocation was mailed to defendant is testimonial, Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 51, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), but because it is admitted to establish whether the license revocation complied with due process, a legal question, rather than an element of the crime, defendant's confrontation rights were not violated, distinguishing State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); I.

State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266 (2014)

En route to a controlled buy detective overhears informant's side of telephone call with defendant and testifies, over objection, that he "understood" that there were arrangements to buy drugs, state arguing that it wasn't hearsay but was admitted to explain "how he contacted" [sic] and for detective's state of mind; held: detective's mental condition was not relevant, State v. Lowrie, 14 Wn.App. 408 (1975), State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277, 279-81 (1990), State v. Johnson, 61 Wn.App. 539, 545 (1991), State v. Edwards, 131 Wn.App. 611, 614 (2006), State v. Gonzalez-Gonzalez, 193 Wn.App. 683, 688-91 (2016), *State v. Rocha,*21 Wn.App.2d 26 (2022), thus statement was both hearsay and violated confrontation clause; III.

State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106, 124-32 (2014)

Over objection, court admits severed co-defendants' statements through police witnesses "to explain why the police were pursuing" the identity of a person leading to the arrest of defendant, instructed jury to consider statements "only for the purpose of determining their involvement in the charged crime," State v. Mason, 127 Wn.App. 554, 566 (2005); held: statements were testimonial, a statement is not immunized from confrontation clause challenge simply because it is not offered for the truth of the matter, State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 921-22 (2007), courts must guard against backdoor admission of inadmissible hearsay statements that violate confrontation clause; an officer may describe context and background of investigation so long as the testimony does not incorporate out of court statements, State v. O'Hara, 141 Wn.App. 900, 910 (2007), reversed, on other grounds, 167 Wn.2d 91 (2009); here, only relevant purpose for introducing the statements was to establish defendant's culpability, reversed; II.

State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736, 745-48 (2014) , aff'd, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015)

In DUI case breath-alcohol technician and custodian of records of quality assurance procedures testifies that the device used to test defendant met quality assurance procedures performed by a non-testifying technician and that simulator solution was properly prepared and replaced according to maintenance records; held: where records are offered that were not made to establish facts at defendant's trial they are not testimonial, State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014), distinguishing Bullcoming v. New Mexico, 564 U.S. 647, 180 L.Ed.2d 610 (2011); here, the testing about which the technician testified were not made to identify or inculpate the defendant, thus confrontation clause was not violated, State v. Ramirez, 7 Wn.App.2d 277 (2019); II.

State v. Perez, 184 Wn.App. 321 (2014)

Prison inmate, in distress with ligature around neck, tells guards defendant strangled him within minutes of the incident, refuses to testify, trial court admits statement as nontestimonial and excited utterance; held: objective evaluation demonstrates that primary purpose of questioning by guard was to respond to ongoing medical emergency and assess risk of harm to other inmates and corrections officers, thus statement falls under ongoing emergency exception to confrontation clause, Michigan v. Bryant, 562 U.S. 344, 179 L.Ed.2d 93 (2011); I.

State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 71-75 (2014)

State confrontation clause, CONST. art. I, § 22, is co-extensive with Sixth Amendment, State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457, 469 (2014); certified copy of an Idaho judgment and sentence was not created in anticipation of litigation or to prove a fact at trial, is inherently trustworthy, thus is not testimonial, State v. Benefiel, 131 Wn.App. 651, 655-56 (2006); III.

Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015)

Teacher asks 3-year old about abrasions, child says defendant did it, doesn't testify at trial but statements are admitted; held: while statements to non-police witnesses are not categorically non-testimonial, under "primary purpose" test this statement was not for the purposes of creating evidence, rather it was to protect a child; statements by very young children will rarely, if ever, implicate the Confrontation Clause, State v. Streepy, 199 Wn.2d 487, 493-97 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Lozcano, 188 Wn.App. 338, 366-68 (2015)

Witness invokes right to remain silent, trial court admits statement witness made to police during interrogation to show defendant's "intent" and "knowledge;" held: statement made to law enforcement during interrogation for the purpose of proving past events violate defendant's right to confront, Davis v. Washington, 547 U.S. 813, 821, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006); III.

State v. Starbuck, 189 Wn.App. 740, 759-60 (2015)

Silent 911 call from homicide victim's telephone contemporaneous with the homicide is not testimonial; III.

State v. Robinson, 189 Wn.App. 877 (2015)

911 caller reports robbery as it happens, caller, while identified, does not testify, court admits contents of call; held: where speaker is speaking about current events as they were actually occurring, a reasonable listener would conclude that speaker was facing ongoing emergency, questions and answers were necessary to resolve the present emergency and not what happened in the past, level of formality of the interrogation is less then statements are not testimonial, State v. Koslowski, 166 Wn.2d 409, 417-19 (2009), statement need not be by the victim; I.

State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016)

In joint trial civilian testifies that codefendant bragged that he and "a friend" burglarized a business, motion to sever denied but not renewed, no objection made to statement; held: because statement was not testimonial Bruton doctrine was not violated as statement is outside the scope of the confrontation clause, trial court apparently instructed jury not to use statement of codefendant against defendant, severance was not required; affirms State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.App. 534 (2015); 5-4.

State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673 (2016)

Trial court's finding that defendant's crudely coded jail phone calls persuaded victim and victim's mother to move to Mexico, establishing forfeiture by wrongdoing, authorizing admission of victim's testimonial hearsay statements including child hearsay, State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2000), State v. Dobbs, 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014); I.

State v. Moses, 193 Wn.App. 341 (2016)

In joint trial codefendant's redacted statement does not violate confrontation clause where statement is facially neutral, free of deletions or blanks, accompanied by limiting instruction, State v. Larry, 108 Wn.App. 894 (2001), Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200, 208, 95 L.Ed.2d 176 (1987), and where references to codefendant were not inculpatory; II.

State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016)

In child rape case court admits recorded victim interview, when victim testifies state inquires about sex assault but does not inquire about whether victim made the previously admitted hearsay statement, defense counsel cross-examines about the incident and about the hearsay statement, defense argues for the first time on appeal that confrontation clause was violated because court admitted recorded statement but questioning on direct was not broad enough to subject her to cross-examination; held: cross-examination about the interview was within the scope of direct, ER 611(B), State v. Montgomery, 95 Wn.App. 192, 198-99 (1999), State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 173-75 (2001), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 780-84 (2014), both the hearsay statement and victim's testimony were inculpatory; III.

State v. Arredondo, 188 Wn.2d 244, 267-71 (2017)

At offer of proof state's witness testifies he has problems with depression, concentration, comprehension, anxiety, distrust of other people, hypervigilance, PTSD, substance abuse, but none impact long term memory, trial court finds that his issues do not affect his ability to recall or describe, precludes defense from inquiring during trial; held: witness did not display any readily apparent mental deficiencies, distinguishing State v. Perez, 139 Wn.App. 522 (2007), State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301(1981), absent evidence that witness was under influence at time of incident or at time of testifying, State v. Tigano, 63 Wn.App. 336, 344 (1991), trial court did not abuse discretion, State v. Darden, 145 Wn.2d 612 (2002); trial court should apply the following factors to assess whether past mental health issues are permissible on cross-examination: 1) the nature of the psychological problems; 2) whether the witness suffered from the condition at the time of the events to which the witness will testify; 3) the temporal recency or remoteness of the condition; affirms State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512, 532-34 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017)

In child sex abuse case defense seeks to cross-examine complainant who would admit that she made a prior false rape accusation against another, trial court limits cross to false accusation, precludes cross that the accusation was about rape; held: court had discretion to exclude as the accusation of rape against another has minimal probative value, State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832, 859, 988 P.2d 977 (1999); see also State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.2d 335, 349, 119 P.3d 806 (2005), evidence intended to paint the witness as a liar is less probative than evidence demonstrating a witness' bias or motive to lie in a specific case, distinguishing State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179, 186-87, 920 P.2d 1218 (1996); the prejudicial value in the state's interest to protect rape victims outweighs the probative value to the defendant in light of court admitting the fact that complainant made a false accusation, cf.: State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713 (2010), State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179 (1996) , State v. Barnes, 54 Wn.App. 536 (1989), State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832, 858-60 (1999), State v. Blair, 3 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018), State v. Case, 13 Wn.App.2d 657 (2020), State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Farnworth, 199 Wn.App. 185, 202-05 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 468 (2018)

A defendant cannot claim a confrontation clause violation if the court admits the defendant's own out of court statements; the right of confrontation exists as to accusations of third parties implicating a criminal defendant, not a criminal defendant implicating himself; 2-1, III.

State v. Streepy, 199 Wn.2d 487 (2017)

Police respond to domestic violence call, detain and handcuff suspect due to aggressiveness, talk to victim who describes assault, talk to victim's 7-year old son who describes assault, court admits son's statement to police, son does not testify, court precludes defense from inquiring of victim's immigrations status; held: a reasonable person would not conclude that child's statement was for the primary purpose of providing a substitute for testimony, Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 2180, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015); even though statements were in the past tense statements were made contemporaneously with the events described, State v. Ohlson, 162 Wn.2d 1, 17 (2007); fact that defendant was handcuffed was due to officer safety, police did not have probable cause to arrest until after child's statement; ruling that defense could not inquire as to victim's immigration status was not an abuse of discretion as victim testified in offer of proof that she was unaware of the "U Visa" procedure which might allow a domestic violence immigrant to remain in the United States until after the incident, thus her immigration status was not relevant see also: State v. Romero-Ochoa, 193 Wn.2d 341 (2019), cf.: State v. Bedada, 13 Wn.App.2d 185 (2020); I.

State v. Horn, 3 Wn.App.2d 302 (2018)

Defendant threatens domestic partner with death, court admits ER 404(b) evidence of prior threats to support victim's reasonable fear, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), excludes defense offer that after the charged incident defendant and victim got engaged and travelled together; held: 3-step test for right to present a defense analysis: (1) evidence must be at least minimally relevant, (2) if relevant burden shifts to state to show that relevant evidence is so prejudicial as to disrupt the fairness of the fact-finding process at trial, State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713, 720 (2010), (3) the state's interest in excluding prejudicial evidence must also be balanced against the defendant's need for the information sought, and relevant information can be withheld only if the state's interest outweighs the defendant's need, State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021); here, considering judicial recognition of battered woman's syndrome, State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591, 597 (1984), specifically cycles of domestic violence in which victim forgives hoping that the violence will not recur, trial court's exclusion of evidence of engagement and trip with defendant was not minimally relevant, was not an abuse of discretion; II.

State v. Blair, 3 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018)

In rape case trial court permits defense to cross-examine victim about her knowledge that respondent was on probation and that she knew what he was on probation for but excludes cross as to her knowledge that respondent's probation was due to his history of sex offenses; held: trial court did not abuse discretion in limiting cross-examination, did not violate right to present a defense, cf.: State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021); II.

State v. Burns, 193 Wn.2d 190, 206-211 (2019)

Failure to object to confrontation clause violation waives the issue; 9-0.

State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019)

Victim's statements to medical providers in emergency room and later statements to primary care provider and wound care medical team, including identity of person who assaulted him, were not testimonial as primary purpose was for treatment; when the primary purpose is to respond to an ongoing emergency its purpose is not to create a record for trial; factors to be considered are whether or not there is an emergency, informality of the situation; statements made to someone who is not principally charged with uncovering and prosecuting crimes are significantly less likely to be testimonial, Ohio v. Clark, 578 U.S. 237, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015), State v. Burke, 196 Wn.2d 712 (2021); victim's signing medical release to allow records to go to police and prosecutors does not defeat primary purpose; victim's statements to police officers after defendant was arrested are more likely testimonial, cf.: Michigan v. Bryant, 562 U.S. 344, 179 L.Ed.2d 93 (2011); primary purpose test supersedes "declarant-centric" test, State v. Shafer, 156 Wn.2d 381 (2006) and "three-factor" test, State v. Sandoval, 137 Wash. App. 532, 537 (2007), State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592, 599-600 (2013) ; affirms State v. Scanlan, 2 Wn.App.2d 715 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Ramirez, 7 Wn.App.2d (2019)

Technician extracts cell phone data from phone found at crime scene which connects co-defendants to each other, technician does not testify, state calls another technician from same office who explains how the data was extracted based upon the first technician's report, does not testify to the contents of the report, trial court admits the report and a detective testifies to how the data connects the co-defendants; held: while the first technician was a witness, he was not a witness against the defendants, the report was not inculpatory or testimonial thus did not violate confrontation clause, State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014), State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736, 745-48 (2014), aff'd, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015); II.

State v. Richardson, 12 Wn.App.2d 657 (2020)

Statement of co-conspirator is not testimonial, State v. Sanchez-Guillen, 135 Wn.App. 636, 641-45 (2006); III.

State v. Sweidan, 13 Wn.App.2d 53 (2020)

State's witness in Michigan, under subpoena, RCW 10.55.060, submits unsworn statement that she cannot appear in person, in-home caregiver for ill mother, physician writes that mother needs continuous medical care for which witness needs to be present, court permits, over objection, live video testimony; held: confrontation clause entitles a defendant to "meet the witnesses . . . face-to-face," CONST. art. I, § 22, although considerations of public policy and necessities of the case, in narrow circumstances, may preempt the right of a physical face to-face encounter, Maryland v. Craig, 497 U.S. 836, 845-46, 110 S. Ct. 3157, 111 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1990), trial court must render a case-specific finding that (1) excusing the presence of the witness necessarily furthers an important public policy, and (2) the procedure otherwise assures the reliability of the testimony, State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998), State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d. 279 (2022); here, state failed to establish the necessity to present the witness' testimony by video, no evidence that the witness was unable to find another caregiver, but see: State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022); trial court should enter findings of fact and declare on record the details of how the video is set up, who can see the screens; harmless here; III.

State v. Bedada, 13 Wn.App.2d 185 (2020)

In domestic violence case court precludes defense from inquiring of complainant-wife about her knowledge that defendant is not a citizen and thus, if convicted, would be deported; held: while ER 413(a) puts limits on admissibility of immigration status, precluding defense from eliciting evidence of defendant's immigration status because it might be prejudicial to defendant is abuse of discretion, cf.: State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021); evidence of potential consequences that flow from conviction may have probative value; demonstrating bias arguably based upon the key witness' desire that defendant be deported is an important element of the right to present a defense, State v. Carballo17 Wn.App.2d 337 (2021); I.

State v. Case, 13 Wn.App.2d 657 (2020)

In domestic violence case complainant provides police with sworn statement detailing defendant's assault, at trial she recants and testifies she does not remember the incident, defense counsel elicits on cross that she is not afraid of defendant and not afraid to testify, trial court sustains objections to questions about whether or not she was threatened in order to get her to testify, whether she found it difficult to testify and whether she was concerned about being charged with perjury; held: while the court erred in sustaining relevance objections to threats which would have made it more probable that she was telling the truth at trial and would have affected her credibility, to establish a Sixth Amendment violation the excluded evidence must have extremely high probative value, State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017), State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 812 (2019); here, defense was still able to argue that complainant's recantation was genuine, thus error was harmless under non-constitutional standard, State v. Barry, 183 Wn.2d 297, 317 (2015); II.

State v. Burke, 196 Wn.2d 712 (2021)

Rape victim speaks with "sexual assault nurse examiner" hours after medical treatment, nurse testifies that her exam has a forensic and medical component, complainant signed consent that evaluation would include collection of evidence, nurse, while not a law enforcement employee, was collecting evidence for prosecution, complainant dies before trial, court admits statements as non-testimonial; held: an objective evaluation of the circumstances of the interrogation reveals that the primary purpose was to guide the provision of medical care, sexual assault nurse examiners are not principally charged with uncovering and prosecuting criminal behavior, State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753, 766 (2019), Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 245, 135 S. Ct. 2173, 192 L. Ed. 2d 306 (2015); while the nurse was not gathering information in response to an ongoing emergency, she is not a law enforcement officer, statements were made primarily for medical purposes and thus were non-testimonial; while the victim's description of the suspect was testimonial, its admission was harmless based upon other evidence of identification; other than the identification, the statements admitted, while hearsay, were for the purpose of medical treatment, trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting them, ER 803(a)(4); reverses State v. Burke, 6 Wn.App.2d 950 (2018); 9-0 (3-justice concurrence would hold that the statements were all testimonial but admission was harmless).

State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021)

In attempted murder case trial court precludes defense from cross-examining key state's witness regarding his work for the police as a confidential informant in exchange for not filing felony cases against him, allows defense to ask a single misleading question about working for the police; held: a trial court violates a defendant's Sixth Amendment rights when it effectively hides the fact that the prosecution's key witness worked as a confidential informant for the same police department that investigated the case, the right to present evidence of a witness' bias is essential to the fundamental constitutional right of a criminal defendant to present a complete defense, which encompasses the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses, State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713, 720 (2010), State v. Darden, 145 Wn.2d 612, 620 (2002), Washington v. Texas, 388 U.S. 14, 23, 87 S. Ct. 1920, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1019 (1967); harmless here; 9-0.

State v. Carballo, 17 Wn.App.2d 337 (2021)

During interrogation by police key witness denies knowledge of the crime until police threaten her with deportation, defense seeks to cross-examine her as to her deportation fear impacting her testimony, trial court excludes it, ER 413; held: the right to confront to show bias and the right to present a defense trumps ER 413(a) where exclusion would "result in a violation of a defendant's constitutional rights," ER 413(a)(5), State v. Bedada, 13 Wn.App.2d 185 (2020); while the rule requires a written motion, ER 413(a)(1), a procedural rule cannot be wielded as a sword to defeat the constitutional rights of the accused, State v. Grant, 10 Wn.App. 468 (1974); I.

State v. Brownlee, 18 Wn.App.2d 1 (2021)

Complainant fails to appear at trial, the state having mailed a subpoena, attempted personal service and obtained a material witness warrant, court finds that complainant is unavailable and that defendant's jail phone calls to a third party asking her to "fix" his situation, that he can't say much over the phone, that he had sent letters and thus she knows what to do, and that victim won't show up, trial court finds that victim is unavailable and that defendant procured her unavailability and thus waived confrontation rights; held: substantial evidence supported the finding that it is highly probable that complainant didn't appear due to defendant's action, thus forfeiture by wrongdoing allows admission of victim's hearsay statements, State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2007), State v. Dobbs, 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014), State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673 (1992); II.

Hemphill v. New York, 595 U.S. ___, 142 S.Ct. 681, 211 L.Ed.2d 534 (2022)

At murder trial defense elicits evidence that a pistol like the murder weapon was found in an unavailable other person's home, trial court rules that defense opened the door and admits the other person's unsworn plea statement to rebut defendant's theory that the other person committed the murder; held: the opening the door rule is a procedural rule, not a confrontation clause exception, see: Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 557 U.S. 305, 129 S.Ct. 314, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009) ; 8-1.

State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022)

Molestation victim and caretaker are permitted to testify remotely, state submits medical declarations that victim is immunocompromised, susceptible to COVID and that caretaker is also immunocompromised and if she contracted COVID victim would almost certainly be infected; held: trial court's finding that remote testimony is medically necessary, gravity of risk is high, testimony is reliable, c.f.: State v. Sweidan, 13 Wn.App.2d 53 (2020); while remote witness should be able to see the jury and defendant, it is not necessary to fulfill the strictures of confrontation clause; I.

Seattle v. Wiggins, 23 Wn.App.2d 401 (2022)

At DUI trial toxicologist who tested blood is unavailable, city offers testimony of the "reviewing toxicologist" who co-signed the report but was not present during testing, did not perform tests, and confirmed that he did not sign the report under penalty of perjury as the only person who performed the work can attest to the fact that it was done, trial court refuses to admit the testimony as the witness did not engage in independent inquiry; held: toxicologist who did the testing was the witness "against" the defendant, testimony of reviewer violated defendant's confrontation clause right, Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 558 U.S. 305, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), Bullcoming v. New Mexico, 564 U.S. 647, 180 L.Ed.2d 610 (2011), distinguishing State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014)(DNA evidence); I.

State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022)

In child molestation case with pro se defendant trial court requires that defendant write out questions and that his standby counsel read them to the complainant; held: in order to modify courtroom procedures to prevent a face-to-face confrontation between witness and defendant court must analyze why such changes are necessary and what impact they will have on defendant's rights, State v. Foster,

135 Wn.2d 441 (1998), Maryland v. Craig, 497 U.S. 836, 845-46, 110 S. Ct. 3157, 111 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1990), State v. D.K., 21 Wn.App.2d 342 (2022), Coy v. Iowa, 101 L.Ed.2d 857 (1988) State v. Estabrook, 68 Wn.App. 309 (1993), State v. Ulestad, 127 Wn.App. 209 (2005); II.

State v. Milko, 21 Wn.App.2d 279 (2022)

During pre-vaccine COVID-19 pandemic trial court enters detailed findings allowing two witnesses from out of state to testify via video; held: defendant's right to confront may be satisfied absent a face-to-face confrontation where denial of such confrontation is necessary to further an important public policy; here, at the time of the trial there was uncertainty as to whether air travel was safe, trial courts must critically analyze on a case by case basis the issue of necessity for remote testimony, which was satisfied here, Maryland v. Craig, 497 U.S. 836, 845-46, 110 S. Ct. 3157, 111 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1990) State v. Foster, 135 Wn.2d 441 (1998); II.

State v. Ta'afulisia, 21 Wn.App.2d 914 (2022)

At the behest of the police a relative secretly records a conversation with defendant and his co-defendant where, in response to inquiries, co-defendant confesses to homicide, states both were involved, defendant remains silent, trial court admits statement as non-testimonial; held: while the relative's motive in recording the conversation was that the recording would be used by the police, neither defendant nor co-codefendant were aware of the motive, thus the statements were not testimonial, Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 249, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015); "when the primary purpose test is applied to an utterance unknowingly made by a co-conspirator, co-defendant or accomplice to an informant the informant's secret purpose in gathering or recording evidence for possible use at a later trial does not transform such an utterance into 'a solemn declaration made for the purpose of proving some fact,'" interrogator's purpose in asking questions does not control, an objective viewer, aware of the circumstances, would reasonably credit the utterer's motives a having greater weight than the conflicting motives of others, at 937-39; I.

State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022)

In assault trial victims claimed that they did not know each other prior to the incident, defense offers evidence that they were seen together months prior to the assault and that they were trespassing, trial court admits the evidence that they were together but that the trespass was more prejudicial than probative; held: when defendant asserts that a ruling violates his right to present a defense, the two-part analysis is to review the ruling for abuse of discretion and then consider de novo if there is a violation of the Sixth Amendment, State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 797 (2019); here, court properly exercised discretion; for step two, the exclusion of the trespassing did not rise to a constitutional violation; if a rule of evidence or procedure interferes with a defendant's right to cross-examine and confront then the evidence should not be excluded, did not happen here as defense still could show that victims lied about knowing each other, see: Chambers v. Mississippi, 410 U.S. 284, 93 S. Ct. 1038, 35 L. Ed. 2d 297 (1973), Davis v. Alaska, 415 U.S. 308, 94 S. Ct. 1105, 39 L. Ed. 2d 347 (1974), State v. Jennings, 199 Wash.2d 53 (2022), State v. Chicas Carballo, 17 Wash. App. 2d 337 (2021); I.

CONSPIRACY AND CO-CONSPIRATOR HEARSAY EXCEPTION

State v. Langworthy, 92 Wn.2d 148 (1979)

Where substantive crime (delivery of drugs) necessarily involves two persons, and where no more than two persons are alleged to be involved in the agreement to commit the crime, conspiracy will not lie as a separate offense; reverses State v. Langworthy, 20 Wn.App. 822 (1978); accord: State v. McGonigle, 144 Wash. 252 (1927), State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993); 9-0.

Albernaz v. United States, 67 L.Ed.2d 275 (1981)

Where a defendant is convicted of two counts of conspiracy which arise from a single conspiracy having multiple objectives, consecutive sentences may be imposed; 9-0.

State v. Putnam, 31 Wn.App. 156 (1982)

A defendant cannot be charged with promoting prostitution 2° by advancing prostitution, RCW 9A.88.08(1)(b) and conspiracy to promote prostitution, RCW 9A.28.040, as the specific statute (promoting prostitution) excludes the general (conspiracy); I.

State v. Miller, 35 Wn.App. 567 (1983)

Testimony by a witness about statements made by conspirators is not hearsay because it is offered to prove the "verbal acts," see: State v. Rangel-Reyes, 119 Wn.App. 494, 498 (2003), in forming the conspiracy, and is not subject to the rule requiring independent proof of a conspiracy before the statements are admissible; statements of a co-conspirator are admissible after the state has made a prima facie case of conspiracy, ER 801(d)(2)(v); I.

State v. Valladeres, 99 Wn.2d 663 (1983)

Where two persons are charged with conspiring solely with each other, verdicts in a joint trial finding one person guilty and one not guilty are inconsistent and the guilty verdict is invalid; here, defendant may have "conspired" with police agents, but he was not so charged; 9-0.

State v. Culver, 36 Wn.App. 524 (1984)

Defendant charged with conspiracy and substantive offenses; co-defendant's statements inculpating defendant are admitted; held: where trial court determines there is evidence that establishes or tends to establish conspiracy, then co-conspirator's statements are admissible, State v. McGonigle, 144 Wash. 252, 258 (1927), State v. Langworthy, 20 Wn.App. 822, 836 (1978); I.

State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277 (1984)

Co-conspirator statements, ER 801(d)(2)(v), are admissible even if no conspiracy is charged if court determines that there is substantial evidence, independent of the statements themselves, of the existence of a conspiracy and at least slight evidence of the participation of the person against whom the statements are to be admitted, State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 612-5 (1993), State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 663-5 (1997); but see: Bourjaily v. United States, 97 L.Ed.2d 144 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Anderson, 41 Wn.App. 85 (1985), rev'd on other grounds, 107 Wn.2d 745 (1987)

In determining whether the state has established a prima facie case of conspiracy to admit a statement of a co-conspirator, ER 801(d)(2)(v), the court may not consider the statement itself; a co-conspirator's statements are not made during the course of and in furtherance of the conspiracy if they consist of casual, retrospective comments about past events; but see: Bourjaily v. United States, 97 L.Ed.2d 144 (1987), State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 614-5 (1993); II.

State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985)

Prior to the admission of hearsay statements per the co-conspirator exception, ER 801(d)(2)(v), trial judge must find that there is evidence, other than the hearsay statements, which establishes a conspiracy by a preponderance, State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277 (1984), State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 222-25 (2006), but see: Bourjaily v. United States, 97 L.Ed.2d 144 (1987) 9-0.

State v. Brown, 45 Wn.App. 571 (1986)

Where conspiracy information charges defendant with conspiring with specific individuals, and does not allege there are other unknown or uncharged co-conspirators, then the "to convict" instruction must name the individuals with whom defendant is alleged to have conspired, State v. Jain, 151 Wn.App. 117 (2009), see: Pers. Restraint of Hegney, 138 Wn.App. 511, 522-24 (2007); I.

United States v. Inadi, 89 L.Ed.2d 390 (1986)

Government need not establish unavailability of a co-conspirator as condition for admission of conspirator's out-of-court statements as long as the statements were made in the course of and in furtherance of the conspiracy, Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(E); 7-2.

State v. Hawthorne, 48 Wn.App. 23 (1987)

Drug conspiracy must be charged under RCW 69.50.407, and may not be charged under general conspiracy statute, RCW 9A.28.040; an overt act or substantial step is not an element of a drug conspiracy, RCW 69.50.407, see also: United States v. Shabani, 130 L.Ed.2d 225 (1994), Whitfield v. United States, 160 L.Ed.2d 611 (2005), but see: State v. Piñeda-Piñeda, 164 Wn.App. 653, 667-71 (2010); I.

Bourjaily v. United States, 97 L.Ed.2d 144 (1987)

In determining whether the government has established a conspiracy by a preponderance to admit a co-conspirator's statement, Fed. R.Evid. 801(d)(2), the court may consider independent evidence of the conspiracy and the co-conspirator's statement per Fed. R. Evid. 104(a); cf., State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277 (1984), State v. Anderson, 41 Wn.App. 85 (1985), State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985); but see: State v. Pierre, 111 Wn.2d 105 (1988); 6-3.

State v. Estorga, 60 Wn.App. 298 (1991)

Uncharged, unavailable co-conspirator's taped statement is admitted over objection; held: because co-conspirator did testify at a suppression hearing and was questioned about taped statement, then defendant had opportunity to cross-examine; II.

State v. Smith, 65 Wn.App. 468 (1992)

Defendant agrees to drive co-defendant to another city so that co-defendant can collect on a debt and also so co-defendant can deliver LSD; held: by agreeing to drive co-defendant with prior knowledge that purpose was to sell LSD is sufficient to prove conspiracy to deliver LSD, RCW 69.50.407, 9A.28.040(1); because defendant encouraged the sale by assuring buyer of potency of drug, evidence is sufficient to establish "agreement and concerted action" requirement of conspiracy, State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 284-87 (2002) ; I.

State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 612-15 (1993)

Co-conspirator's statements are admissible, ER 801(d)(2)(v), where court determines a conspiracy existed and defendant is a member of the conspiracy, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 419-20 (1985), even if the conspiracy in question is not charged in the information, as long as defendant has notice, and even if the conspiracy lasts beyond the charging period, State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 284-5 (1984); while casual, retrospective statements of past events do not fall within the co-conspirator exception, State v. Anderson, 41 Wn.App. 85, 105, rev'd in part on other grounds, 107 Wn.2d 745 (1987), statements relating to past events are admissible if they facilitate the criminal activity of the conspiracy, see: State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 663-5 (1997), State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 280-83 (2002); here, statements of co-conspirator that were veiled threats by defendant which included inculpatory statements are admissible; I.

State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 473-7 (1994)

"Substantial step" requirement for conspiracy, RCW 9A.28.040(1), need not be limited to conduct which is more than mere preparation; definition of substantial step in conspiracy case is not the same as in attempt, RCW 9A.28.020(1), WPIC 100.05, State v. Smith, 80 Wn.App. 462, 467-8 (1996), see: Yates v. United States, 1 L.Ed.2d 1356 (1957); if any co-conspirator exhibits conduct which strongly indicates a criminal purpose, that is sufficient to show the conspiracy exists; affirms State v. Dent, 67 Wn.App. 656 (1992).

State v. Jacobson, 74 Wn.App. 715, 723-4 (1994)

Wharton's rule: where a crime requires the participation of two persons, and no more than two persons are involved in the agreement to commit the crime, the charge of conspiracy will not lie, see: Gebardi v. United States, 77 L.Ed. 206 (1932), State v. Miller, 131 Wn.2d 78 (1997); here, defendant agreed to sell property to another, in spite of a TRO prohibiting same, but, since the crime of theft can be committed by one person, and because the sale was to two buyers, Wharton's rule is inapplicable; I.

State v. Pacheco, 125 Wn.2d 150 (1994)

A conspiracy conviction under RCW 9A.28.040 and 69.50.407 is not valid where defendant conspires solely with an undercover police officer, as a genuine agreement with at least one other co-conspirator is required, reversing State v. Pacheco, 70 Wn.App. 27 (1993); 5-4.

State v. Atkinson, 75 Wn.App. 515, 518-21 (1994)

Drug informant's statements to police officer in the course of buying drugs in cooperation with police are not admissible under co-conspirator exception, ER 801(d)(2)(v), as they were not made in the course of and in furtherance of conspiracy, but were made in opposition of a conspiracy; harmless here; I.

State v. Halley, 77 Wn.App. 149 (1995)

To admit co-conspirator's statement, ER 801(d)(2)(v), court must determine, by a preponderance, at 152 n.5, that a conspiracy existed and defendant was a member, State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 222-25 (2006), but state need establish no more than an agreement made by two or more persons confederating to do an unlawful act, State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 663-5 (1997); Wharton's rule, to the effect that a conspiracy to commit a crime that necessarily requires the participation of two people cannot exist unless a third party was involved in the agreement, is only applicable in proving the substantive offense of conspiracy, and is inapplicable in determining the admissibility of hearsay; I.

State v. Miller, 131 Wn.2d 78 (1997)

Conspiracy to deliver a controlled substance must allege the involvement of a person in addition to those involved in the delivery, i.e., more than two persons, which instructions must reflect, State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), State v. Langworthy, 92 Wn.2d 148, 152 (1979), see: State v. Morgan, 163 Wn.App. 341 (2011), see also: State v. McCarty, 140 Wn.2d 420 (2000), State v. Mendoza-Solorio, 108 Wn.App. 823, 829-33 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000)

Defendant and co-conspirator participate in a criminal enterprise which includes stealing, stripping, repurchasing and reselling stolen vehicles, are convicted of three counts of conspiracy; held: a single agreement to commit a series of crimes by the same conspirators in which each crime is only one step in the advancement of the scheme as a whole constitutes only one violation of the conspiracy statute, as the legislature intended that there be but a single unit of prosecution, Braverman v. United States, 87 L.Ed. 23 (1942), State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), cf.: State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007); 9-0.

State v. McCarty, 140 Wn.2d 420 (2000)

Drug conspiracy information which fails to allege involvement of more than two people is insufficient, State v. Miller, 131 Wn.2d 78, 91 (1997), even where raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Mendoza-Solorio, 108 Wn.App. 823, 829-33 (2001), cf.:State v. Morgan, 163 Wn.App. 341 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Stein, 144 Wn.2d 236 (2001)

In conspiracy case, court instructs as to statutory accomplice liability, RCW 9A.08.020, and further that defendant may be liable for the substantive acts of others upon proof that defendant was a co-conspirator, another co-conspirator committed the substantive crime as a reasonably foreseeable consequence of the conspiracy, and was a member or the conspiracy at the time of the offense, Pinkerton v. United States, 90 L.Ed. 1489 (1946); held: Pinkerton doctrine is inapplicable under Washington's statutory scheme which requires proof that a co-conspirator know what crime his co-conspirators are committing, State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 510-11 (2000), State v. Cronin, 142 Wn.2d 568, 579 (2000), thus instructions permitting conviction of a defendant-conspirator regardless of whether or not he had knowledge of the crimes is error, State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 274-80 (2002); affirms State v. Stein, 94 Wn.App. 616 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Mendoza-Solorio, 108 Wn.App. 823, 829-33 (2001)

Drug conspiracy information which fails to allege involvement of more than two people is insufficient, State v. Miller, 131 Wn.2d 78, 91 (1997), even where raised for first time on appeal, State v. McCarty, 140 Wn.2d 420 (2000), cf.:State v. Morgan, 163 Wn.App. 341 (2011), and cannot be supplemented with the names of co-conspirators after trial; III.

State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 280-83 (2002)

Co-defendant testifies, over objection, that defendant committed a robbery, showed co-defendant roll of money, said he got a tip for robbery from third co-defendant and that they were "getting better scores," trial court admits statement under co-conspirator exception, ER 801(d)(2)(v), finding it was made to induce further participation in the conspiracy; held: while casual, retrospective statements of past events do not fall within co-conspirator exception, see: State v. Baruso, 72 Wn.App. 603, 612-15 (1993), declarant's intent to induce further participation may be inferred from the encounter; even if it was inadmissible on that basis, statement was admissible as it advised testifying co-defendant of the conspiracy's progress and that it was still operating; I.

United States v. Jimenez Recio, 154 L.Ed.2d 744 (2003)

Police seize drugs from a truck, convince driver to turn, use driver to turn over truck to the people who were to get the drugs, convict receipients of truck of conspiracy; held: federal conspiracy does not end automatically when the object of the conspiracy becomes impossible to achieve; 8-1.

State v. Williams, 131 Wn.App. 488, 494-97 (2006)

Defendant and others plan to rob victim, take substantial steps, robs and shoots him, is convicted, inter alia, of conspiracy to commit robbery and burglary, co-conspirator's statements admitted at trial; held: one plan is one crime irrespective of the number of statutory offenses are planned, thus only one count of conspiracy can survive, State v. Knight, 134 Wn.App. 103, 109-10 (2006), 162 Wn.2d 806 (2008); co-conspirator's statement, ER 801(d)(2)(v), is not testimonial, at 493-94, State v. Chambers, 134 Wn.App. 853, 859-62 (2006); III.

State v. Sanchez-Guillen, 135 Wn.App. 636, 641-45 (2006)

Defendant shoots and kills police officer, tells his mother what he did and seeks her help fleeing, mother tells witness what son said and asks witness for assistance to get son to Mexico, state calls witness to testify what mother said defendant did; held: mother and son conspired to flee from justice, mother's statement to witness was thus a statement made by a co-conspirator which, to be admitted, need not be to a conspirator, ER 801(d)(2)(v), State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 283-84 (1984); state is not obliged to give pretrial notice every time it seeks to offer a co-conspirator's statement; co-conspirator's statement is not testimonial, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 195-96 (2004), State v. Richardson, 12 Wn.App.2d 657 (2020); III.

State v. Piñeda-Piñeda, 154 Wn.App. 653 (2010)

Controlled substance conspiracy, RCW 69.50.407, is concomitant with general conspiracy, RCW 9A.28.020, thus state must plead and prove substantial step, overruling, in part, State v. Casarez-Gastelum, 48 Wn.App. 112 (1987) and State v. Hawthorne, 48 Wn.App. 23 (1987), harmless here when raised for first time on appeal as defendant was also convicted of delivery; I.

State v. Stark, 158 Wn.App. 952, 961-63 (2010)

Defendant met with others to obtain guns, they all go to family home, defendant kills husband, is convicted of murder and conspiracy; held: conspiracy may be proved by statements, acts, conduct or concert of action, proof may be circumstantial, State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 284 (2002), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 743-45 (2012), sufficient here; where information names co-conspirators they must be named in to convict instruction, State v. Brown, 45 Wn.App. 571, 577 (1986); III.

State v. Morgan, 163 Wn.App. 341, 344-47 (2011)

Conspiracy to intimidate a witness information that does not allege "intent that conduct constituting a crime be performed," RCW 9A.28.040(1) (1997), is sufficient where it alleges attempt to influence testimony as common meaning of attempt includes intent; failure to allege that defendant agreed with one or more persons is not fatal to information because the term conspiracy implies involvement of two or more people and the term conspire means to make an agreement to do an act, cf.: State v. McCarty, 140 Wn.2d 420 (2000), State v. Mendoza-Solorio, 108 Wn.App. 823, 829-33 (2001); 2-1, I.

Smith v. United States, 568 U.S. 106, 184 L.Ed.2d 570 (2013)

Where withdrawal is an affirmative defense to conspiracy, statute allocating burden to prove withdrawal on defendant does not violate Due Process clause; 9-0.

State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1, 391 P.3d 409, 417-18 (2017)

Firearm enhancement applies to conspiracy; 8-0.

State v. Sandoval, 189 Wn.2d 811 (2018)

Conspiracy to commit murder by extreme indifference, RCW 9A.32.030(l)(b), is a cognizable crime; 5-4.

CONTEMPT

State v. Heiner, 29 Wn.App. 193 (1981)

Full discussion of contempt power of court where witness refuses to testify after immunity is granted; civil contempt, RCW 7.20, is coercive, thus no fixed sentence may be imposed, see: Moreman v. Butcher, 126 Wn.2d 36 (1995); in criminal contempt, RCW 9.23.010, defendant is entitled to a trial by jury; see: Taylor v. Hayes, 41 L.Ed.2d 897 (1974); I.

United States v. Thoreen, 653 F.2d 1332 (9th Cir. 1981)

Throughout government's case, defense counsel had someone other than defendant seated at counsel table; witness identified nondefendant; counsel held in contempt; held: counsel was unethical and contemptuous.

State v. Martin, 36 Wn.App. 1 (1983)

Civil contempt, RCW 7.20.040, must be based upon an affidavit, and record must demonstrate egregious circumstances and that all less restrictive alternatives have failed, State v. Norlund, 31 Wn.App. 725, 729 (1982); criminal contempt, state must file an information or complaint, State v. Heiner, 29 Wn.App. 193, 198 (1981); in a proceeding the purpose of which is other than determining guilt of contempt, a court is without authority, absent an appropriate pleading, to find a party in contempt for an act committed outside its presence, Dimmick v. Hume, 62 Wn.2d 407, 409 (1963); Storkey v. Storkey, 40 Wn.2d 307 (1952); Schaefer v. Schaefer, 36 Wn.2d 514 (1950); I.

Marriage of Nielsen, 38 Wn.App. 586 (1984)

Indirect contempt is based on acts committed outside presence of the court; if the judge lacks personal knowledge of the elements, the contempt is indirect even though contemner admits the act in open court; for indirect contempt, contemner is entitled to notice, a hearing and counsel, Cooke v. United States, 69 L.Ed. 767 (1925); II.

Seventh Elect Church v. Rogers, 102 Wn.2d 527 (1984)

Where counsel makes claim of privilege in good faith, trial court should stay sanctions for (and possibly finding of) contempt pending appellate review, Dike v. Dike, 75 Wn.2d 1 (1968), State v. Rogers, 3 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Boatman, 104 Wn.2d 44 (1985)

An order finding a defendant in civil contempt, RCW 7.20.010, must contain a purging clause setting forth the act to be performed, see: Interest of M.B., 101 Wn.App. 425 (2000), State v. A.C.H., 116 Wn.App. 158 (2003); 9-0.

Graves v. Duerden, 51 Wn.App. 642 (1988)

Court may exercise its inherent contempt authority where statutory contempts are inadequate and may use inherent contempt to punish summarily contemptuous conduct occurring in presence of the court, to enforce orders or judgments in aid of the court's jurisdiction and to punish violations of orders or judgments, Keller v. Keller, 52 Wn.2d 84 (1957), see: Dependency of A.K., 162 Wn.2d 632 (2007); III.

State v. John, 69 Wn.App. 615 (1993)

To punish for disobedience of a consent decree, criminal contempt proceedings, including right to jury trial, must be pursued as it is intended to punish past behavior, RCW 7.21.010(1)(b), In re King, 110 Wn.2d 793, 799 (1988), Interest of Rebecca K., 101 Wn.App. 309 (2000), State v. A.C.H., 116 Wn.App. 158 (2003); III.

State v. Miller, 74 Wn.App. 334, 342-5 (1994)

Failure to provide court-ordered handwriting exemplar is subject to civil contempt confinement, which may continue until the court is certain that contemner will never comply with the order, In re King, 110 Wn.2d 793 (1988); the mere passage of time does not convert the confinement to a punitive action; contemner's unequivocal refusal to comply does not bind the trial court to release her, King, supra, at 804; I.

State v. Hobble, 126 Wn.2d 283, 292-303 (1995)

Witness refuses to testify over an order to do so and, after trial, is sentenced to a term in jail; held: a refusal to answer questions as a witness is the kind of behavior for which summary contempt proceedings are appropriate, United States v. Wilson, 44 L.Ed.2d 186 (1975), State v. Buddress, 63 Wash. 26, 32 (1911), RCW 7.21.050(1); judgment of contempt should recite that the contempt was seen or heard by the judge and thoroughly recite the facts of the contempt; providing contemner with the opportunity to speak at disposition satisfies statutory requirement that court allow contemner to speak in mitigation, supra., Templeton v. Hurtado, 92 Wn.App. 847 (1998); imposition of sentence for contempt one week after the underlying criminal trial ended met the statutory requirement that "[t]he judge shall impose the sanctions immediately after the contempt of court or at the end of the proceeding," supra, where adjudication of contempt was made immediately; no right to jury trial under state or federal constitutions for direct contempt; the contempt is not remedial, RCW 7.21.030, as contemner is unable to purge the contempt, nor is it punitive, RCW 7.21.040, as contempt was not commenced by complaint or information, State v. Sims, 1 Wn.App.2d 472, 478-80 (2017), rev. granted, 415 P.3d 1201 (2018); 7-2.

Pounders v. Watson, 138 L.Ed.2d 976 (1997)

Counsel's repeated questions about punishment in spite of admonishments and orders by the court to stop are subject to summary contempt as "contumacious conduct disruptive of judicial proceedings and damaging to the court's authority. Advocacy that is 'fearless, vigorous, and effective'. . . does not extend to disruptive conduct in the course of trial and in knowing violation of a clear and specific direction from the trial judge;" 7-2.

Templeton v. Hurtado, 92 Wn.App. 847 (1998)

Before imposing sanction for direct contempt, RCW 7.21.050(1), court must give contemner opportunity to speak in mitigation and enter written findings specifying the act the court found contemptuous, State v. Hobble, 126 Wn.2d 283, 295 (1995), but cf.: State v. Dennington,, 12 Wn.App.2d 845 (2020); I.

Detention of Broer, 93 Wn.App. 852 (1998)

A court order cannot be collaterally attacked in a contempt proceeding arising from its violation unless the order was entered by a court that lacked inherent authority or jurisdiction; an order is void when the court lacks subject matter and in personam jurisdiction; a court lacks subject matter jurisdiction when it attempts to decide a type of controversy that it has no authority to adjudicate, Marley v. Department of Labor & Indus., 125 Wn.2d 533 (1994); a court does not lose jurisdiction by interpreting the law erroneously; orders enforcing unconstitutional prior restraint, State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 364, 369-70 (1984), and orders compelling disclosure of materials protected by the attorney-client privilege, Seattle N.W. Sec. Corp. v. SDG Holding Co., 61 Wn.App. 725 (1991), Dike v. Dike, 75 Wn.2d 1 (1968), are void; I.

State v. S.H., 95 Wn.App. 741 (1999), op. withdrawn and superseded on reconsideration, 102 Wn.App. 468 (2000)

Defense counsel waits until day of juvenile fact-finding hearing, then moves for diversion, trial court grants diversion, imposes $50 sanction for seeking diversion when witnesses were present; held: a trial court has inherent authority to sanction litigation conduct upon a finding of bad faith, Wilson v. Henkle, 45 Wn.App. 162, 174 (1986), Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 65 L.Ed.2d 488 (1980), but see: State v. Gassman, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012); bad faith includes waiting until trial to agree to diversion; I.

State v. Dugan, 96 Wn.App. 346 (1999)

Prosecutor asks defendant during cross-examination if he used marijuana in response to defendant's testimony that he was a "health nut," defense objection is sustained, trial court holds prosecutor in contempt; held: direct contempt, RCW 7.21.010(1)(a), lies for intentional "disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior…tending to impair [court's] authority, or to interrupt the due course of a trial"; asking a factually accurate improper question resulting in a fleeting interruption is not contempt, distinguishing State v. Caffrey, 70 Wn.2d 120, 122-23 (1966), State v. Zioncheck, 171 Wash. 388, 392-93 (1933), In re Willis, 94 Wash. 180, 183-84 (1917), State v. Buddress, 63 Wash. 26, 30 (1911), Hedican v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co., 21 Wash. 488, 490 (1899); II.

State v. Noah, 103 Wn.App. 29, 45-47 (2000)

In contempt proceedings, a law may not be collaterally attacked as unconstitutional, Walker v. City of Birmingham, 18 L.Ed.2d 1210 (1967), nor may the underlying court order, the violation of which led to contempt, be collaterally attacked since contempt judgment will stand even if the order violated was erroneous or is later ruled invalid, Detention of Broer v. State, 93 Wn.App. 852, 858 (1998), except where the underlying order is void, which only occurs where the court issuing the order lacks jurisdiction to enter the order, Pearce v. Pearce, 37 Wn.2d 918 (1951); I.

State v. Cox, 109 Wn.App. 779 (2002)

Trial court orders defendant in custody whereupon he escapes from courtroom, upon return is held in summary contempt, later is charged with and pleads guilty to escape; held:

because contempt and escape have separate elements, they are not the same offense and defendant can be punished for each, United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993); II.

State v. Berty, 136 Wn.App. 74 (2006)

During argument on an objection before the jury, defense counsel states that the witness is lying, objection is sustained, during closing argument defense counsel argues that there were motives for the complainant's dissembling and that "I wish I could tell you all of the motives," repeats for the jury that he had previously said victim was lying, trial court announces it will hold a sanctions hearing, finds counsel in contempt two months later and fines him $750 for each comment; held: summary contempt, RCW 7.21.050, within the courtroom may be imposed after the proceeding, thus sanction here was timely; violations of court orders flouting court's authority are punishable, maximum penalty is $500 per incident; II.

Interest of J.L., 140 Wn.App. 438 (2007)

In truancy case, trial court imposes 2 days in detention and suspends 4 days; held: civil contempt must provide for the opportunity to purge immediately, not for past behavior, In the Interest of M.B., 101 Wn.App. 425 (2000); writing a "substantial paper with a subject matter reasonably related to the nature and cause of the contempt" is a possible purge condition; imposing a specific amount of time in custody is criminal contempt, which requires a full panoply of due process rights; II.

Dependency of A.K., 162 Wn.2d 632 (2007)

Before a dependency court may exercise inherent power to hold juvenile in contempt, it must first find that remedies for criminal contempt, RCW 7.21.040, are inadequate (plurality opinion); 5-4.

State v. Jordan, 146 Wn.App. 395 (2008)

Defense counsel fails to appear for a hearing, trial court finds him in contempt in his absence; held: both due process clause and RCW 7.21.050 require an opportunity to be heard before court may impose summary contempt; "an attorney absenting himself from the courtroom when his case is called for trial does not commit contempt in the court's presence," at 403 ¶ 11, State v. Winthrop, 148 Wash. 526, 531 (1928), but see: State v. Hatten, 70 Wn.2d 618, 621 (1967); II.

State v. Gassman, 175 Wn.2d 208 (2012)

Two months after learning that police believed the offense date was two days after the charge in the original information, state moves to amend, knowing that defense had planned an alibi defense for the original date, trial court denies motion to dismiss but imposes $2000 sanction on prosecutor, state appeals; held: while trial court need not make a specific finding of bad faith, State v. S.H., 102 Wn.App. 468, 479 (2000), a finding that state's conduct was "careless and not purposeful," plus concessions of defense at oral argument that defendant was aware of possible amendment, did not need a continuance, is insufficient to impose sanction, see: In re Firestorm 1991, 129 Wn.2d 130, 139 (1996); reverses, in part, State v. Gassman, 160 Wn.App. 12 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Salazar, 170 Wn.App. 486 (2012)

Defendant acts out in court, judge finds "inherent contempt," sends defendant to jail until he apologizes, later imposes 30 days consecutive to sentence for crime; held: before relying upon inherent contempt powers, trial court must first find that statutory remedial or punitive contempt procedures and remedies, RCW 7.21.050 are inadequate, Dependency of A.K., 162 Wn.2d 632 (2007); 2-1, II.

State v. Rogers, 3 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018)

Defendant sends letter of apology to complainant and offer to pay her to drop charges to complainant's daughter who gives letter to complainant who gives the letter to defense counsel and tells prosecutor that she did so, counsel is then removed from case, court serves that lawyer with a subpoena duces tecum to produce the letter, lawyer moves to quash arguing that he learned of the letter from his client and thus the letter is privileged and that it is a confidence or secret, RPC 1.6, refuses to comply with subpoena, is held in contempt; held: lawyer did not obtain the letter as a result of direct or confidential communication with his client, even if client had some discussion with counsel about the letter it is not privileged, is not a confidence and even if it is a secret RPC 1.6(b) authorizes disclosure pursuant to a court order, distinguishing State ex. rel. Sowers v. Lowell, 64 Wn.2d 828 (1964); because the claim of privilege was made in good faith contempt is vacated, Seventh Elect Church in Israel v. Roger, 102 Wn.2d 527 (1984), Dike v. Dike, 75 Wn.2d 1, 448 (1968); I.

State v. Sims, 193 Wn.2d 86 (2019)

Oral order of remedial or civil contempt is effective immediately, need not be written, although a written order is necessary for appellate review, Templeton v. Hurtado, 92 Wn.App. 847 (1998), State v. Dailey, 93 Wn.2d 454, 458-59 (1980); affirms, in part, State v. Sims, 1 Wn.App.2d 472, 481-83 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Dennington, 12 Wn.App.2d 845 (2020)

In court contemnor "rudely" comments on lawyer's physical appearance, turns back on judge, tells judge he does not respect court, judge holds him in contempt and imposes 30 days consecutive to whatever sentence he receives; held: where court is in session and contemnor has been admonished and persists in behavior then summary contempt is appropriate, RCW 7.21.050 (2009) as it presented a direct threat to the authority and dignity of the court and to maintaining proper decorum during court proceedings; failure of court to permit contemnor to speak in mitigation requires remand, Templeton v. Hurtado, 92 Wn.App. 847 (1998); I.

State v. Luvert, 20 Wn.App.2d 133 (2021)

Trial court orders in-patient competency evaluation, after lengthy delay by DSHS to transport defendant trial court sets deadline, Department misses deadline, court finds DSHS in contempt and orders it to pay defendant $250 per day, retroactive to the 14th day after the evaluation was ordered; held: a contempt sanction is remedial, not punitive, if it allows the opportunity to purge, retroactive remedial sanctions are permitted as a sanction may be compensatory, RCW 7.23.030, Gronquist v. Dep't of Corr., 196 Wn.2d 564, 573 (2020); I.

CONTINUANCES

State v. Gowens, 27 Wn.App. 921 (1980)

Failure to issue a subpoena demonstrates lack of due diligence and is not grounds for continuance; I.

State v. James, 30 Wn.App. 520 (1981)

Trial court abused its discretion when it denied state's motion to reopen a suppression hearing and for a continuance, see also: Detention of G.V., 124 Wn.2d 288 (1994); I.

State v. Kelly, 32 Wn.App. 112 (1982)

Defendant, having had two prior continuances for substitution of counsel, moves for a continuance two days prior to trial to seek appointment of an expert to determine diminished capacity defense, having previously been provided another expert for such a defense; held: no abuse of discretion denying continuance as defendant did not show due diligence; I.

State v. Nitschke, 33 Wn.App. 521 (1982)

State's mailing of subpoena plus telephone contact with witness, witness' relatives and witness' probation officer establish due diligence permitting continuance of trial, distinguishing State ex rel. Nugent v. Lewis, 93 Wn.2d 80 (1980), State ex rel. Rupert v. Lewis, 9 Wn.App. 839 (1973), but see: Bellevue v. Vigil, 66 Wn.App. 891 (1992), cf.: Kent v. Sandhu, 159 Wn.App. 836 (2011); I.

State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 553 (1983)

Denial of continuance where counsel was appointed one day prior to commencement of robbery 1° trial was abuse of discretion, State v. Hartwig, 36 Wn.2d 598, 601 (1950); State v. Burri, 87 Wn.2d 175, 181 (1976); III.

State v. Purdom, 106 Wn.2d 745 (1986)

State's motion to amend information on day of trial from conspiracy to deliver drugs to accomplice is granted, defense motion for continuance is denied; held: when information is amended on day of trial, continuance should be granted if requested, State v. Jones, 26 Wn.App. 1, 6 (1980); 6-3.

State v. Hartley, 51 Wn.App. 442 (1988)

Denial of continuance proper where counsel failed to request a subpoena until a day before trial, failed to interview witness and failed to confirm she would testify, State v. Smith, 56 Wn.2d 368, 370 (1960); I.

State v. Day, 51 Wn.App. 544 (1988)

Continuing trial, apparently beyond expiration date, so that defendant's wife may procure a dissolution and thereby have the capacity to testify against defendant approved, as unavailability of a witness is grounds for a continuance where there is a valid reason for the unavailability, there is reasonable grounds to believe the witness will become available in a reasonable time, and where there is no substantial unfair or unjust prejudice, see: State v. Torres, 111 Wn.App. 323 (2002), Stae v. Iniguez, 167 Wn.2d 273, 294 (2009), Kent v. Sandhu, 159 Wn.App. 836 (2011); III.

State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574 (1988)

A mailed subpoena is a nullity in juvenile court, as it does not conform with JuCR 1.4, CR 45(c), CrR 4.8, and thus is not grounds for due diligence, cf.: CrRLJ 4.8(c), State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003); a continuance beyond the expiration date, JuCR 7.8(b), to obtain a witness who was not properly served is an abuse of discretion, State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998), reversing State v. Adamski, 49 Wn.App. 371 (1987); cf.: State v. McPherson, 64 Wn.App. 705 (1992); 5-3.

State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989)

Trial court orders informant disclosed, investigator searches for informant for five days unsuccessfully, court denies continuance to find informant; held: where continuance is requested to locate witness, accused must show that the witness can probably be found if granted and that due diligence has been used; test on appeal is whether defendant was denied a fair trial because defendant would not have been convicted had the witness testified; III.

State v. Wake, 56 Wn.App. 472 (1989)

One day before trial, court grants, beyond expiration date, state's motion for continuance because unsubpoenaed crime lab expert would be out of town, no reason given for his unavailability; held: because prosecutor knew of problem two weeks before trial and thus could have sought to advance the trial date, and because witness had not been subpoenaed, State v. Alford, 25 Wn.App. 661, 665 (1980); State v. Yuen, 23 Wn.App. 377, 379 (1979); State v. Smith, 56 Wn.2d 368, 370 (1960); State v. Toliver, 6 Wn.App. 531, 533 (1972), State v. Denton. 21 Wn.App.2d 437 (2022), continuance beyond expiration date was abuse of discretion, but see: State v. McPherson, 64 Wn.App. 705 (1992), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 582-85 (2001), State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d. 420 (2017); III.

State v. Gould, 58 Wn.App. 175 (1990)

Newly discovered adverse evidence is not grounds for a continuance where defense makes no showing it could procure evidence to controvert or other prejudice, distinguishing State v. Oughton, 26 Wn.App. 74 (1980); I.

State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992)

On morning of trial, court permits state to amend from assault 2° (bodily injury) to assault 2° (deadly weapon), defense moves for continuance "to prepare a defense," motion denied; held: because defense failed to indicate any defense to amended charge that was not available as a defense to the prior charge, no prejudice was shown, thus continuance motion was properly denied; III.

State v. McPherson, 64 Wn.App. 705 (1992)

Officer acknowledges to prosecutor that he was served with subpoena through interagency mail procedure normally used by prosecutor's office; officer states he is going on vacation; prosecutor sends note to defense counsel advising he would seek continuance, defense denies receiving message until two days before trial; on trial date, court grants continuance beyond expiration date, later denies motion to dismiss; held: where subpoena was received by police witness, then there was due diligence, distinguishing State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574 (1988); interagency mail procedure is reasonable where officer in fact receives the subpoena in spite of JuCR 7.8 and CR 45(c); while sending a note to opposing counsel and assuming lack of response constitutes acquiescence is insufficient notice, here officer failed to notify prosecutor of vacation until day he left, foreclosing opportunity to preserve his testimony, but see: State v. Wake, 56 Wn.App. 472 (1989), State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 582-85 (2001); I.

Bellevue v. Vigil, 66 Wn.App. 891 (1992)

Domestic violence victim fails to appear in response to subpoena, phone is disconnected, city moves for continuance and material witness warrant, after two-day continuance without witness appearing, court dismisses; held: while due diligence and availability of witness within reasonable time are not explicitly required under CrRLJ 3.3(d)(8), court may consider these factors in exercise of discretion; while State ex rel. Nugent v. Lewis, 93 Wn.2d 80 (1980) has been distinguished by State v. Henderson, 26 Wn.App. 187 (1980) and State v. Nitschke, 33 Wn.App. 521 (1982), allowing court to continue cases where witness fails to respond to a subpoena, in light of time for trial period having expired, court did not abuse discretion in denying city's motion to continue, Kent v. Sandhu, 159 Wn.App. 836 (2011); I.

State v. Nguyen, 68 Wn.App. 906 (1993)

Subpoenaed witness called to active military duty is grounds for a continuance, CrR 3.3(h)(2), beyond expiration date absent prejudice; I.

State v. Duggins, 121 Wn.2d 524 (1993)

Juvenile Court grants two-day continuance within time for trial period, JuCR 7.8, as officer had not responded to subpoena that was not personally served; held: because defendant was tried within speedy trial period, there are no bases for dismissal under speedy trial rule, Seattle v. Clewis, 159 Wn.App. 842 (2011); affirms, in part, State v. Duggins, 68 Wn.App. 396 (1993).

State v. Early, 70 Wn.App. 452 (1993)

While a denial of a continuance to substitute retained counsel may deprive a defendant of his right to counsel of choice, Wheat v. United States, 100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988), in the absence of substantial reasons a late request should generally be denied, especially if it may delay the trial, State v. Chase, 59 Wn.App. 501, 506 (1990); trial court must consider diligence, due process, the need for an orderly procedure, impact on trial, whether prior continuances have been granted, State v. Barnes, 58 Wn.App. 465, 471 (1990), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991); here, one state's witness had been "turned" and had a tenuous relationship with prosecution, prior continuances had been granted, thus no abuse of discretion in denying continuance; III.

State v. Watkins, 71 Wn.App. 164 (1993)

Absence of standby counsel is justification for continuance of trial beyond expiration date; continuance in the absence of pro se defendant does not infringe right of self-representation; I.

State v. Tatum, 74 Wn.App. 81 (1994)

Trial court denies defense motion to continue for a witness's failure to appear because the subpoena issued was for a prior trial date; held: subpoenas remain in effect beyond the specific date for which they are issued and impose a continuing duty to appear until discharged by the court, even where trial date for which the subpoena was issued is continued, CR 45(g), CrR 6.12(b), State v. Iniguez, 143 Wn.App. 845 (2008), rev'd, on other grounds, 167 Wn.2d 273 (2009), cf.: State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330, 337 (1991), thus court erred in denying continuance, harmless here; I.

State v. Lopez, 74 Wn.App. 264, 268-9 (1994)

Defendant seeks continuance of trial and signs time for trial waiver, no interpreter present but counsel represents defendant is sufficiently fluent to understand, defendant later claims waiver was involuntary; held: where defendant requests continuance, defense has the burden of showing an abuse of discretion in granting the continuance, see: State v. Dowell, 16 Wn.App. 583, 588 (1976), State v. Livengood, 14 Wn.App. 203, 209 (1975); trial court reasonably relied upon representations of counsel that defendant understood proceedings; I.

State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919 (1995)

Defendant offers to plead guilty at arraignment, prosecutor's motion to continue arraignment in order to provide defense further discovery is granted over defense objection, before next arraignment prosecutor amends to a greater charge; held: because defendant was not "substantially prejudiced in the presentation of the defense," CrR 3.3(h)(2), at the time the continuance was granted, then the continuance was proper; 6-2.

State v. Campbell, 78 Wn.App. 813, 820 (1995)

Failure to grant continuance is abuse of discretion only if result of trial would probably have been different or denial was for untenable reasons, State v. Angulo, 69 Wn.App. 337, 341-2 (1993); II.

State v. Honton, 85 Wn.App. 415, 422-4 (1997)

After trial court determines defendant may waive counsel, having told defendant a continuance will not be granted, defendant moves for continuance to prepare; held: where last-minute motion to proceed pro se is made for purpose of delay, court can recognize it as such and deny continuance, see: State v. Fritz, 21 Wn.App. 354, 365 (1978); III.

State v. Hairychin, 136 Wn.2d 862 (1998)

Prosecutor arranges for defense counsel to interview complainant, does not subpoena complainant who moves out of state, prosecutor obtains continuance beyond expiration date; held: a continuance may be granted if state's evidence is unavailable, prosecutor has exercised due diligence, and there are reasonable grounds to believe evidence will be available within reasonable time, JuCR 7.8(e)(2)(ii), due diligence requires proper issuance of subpoenas, State v.

Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574, 578 (1988), State v. Duggins, 121 Wn.2d 524, 525 (1993), thus continuance was improperly granted; cf.: State v. Bible, 77 Wn.App. 470 (1995); per curiam.

State v. Downing, 151 Wn.2d 265 (2004)

In child molestation case, defense learns "moments before" competency hearing that complainant was told about and met other victims of defendant; following finding of competency, defense contacts an expert to testify that contact with other victims could taint complainant's testimony, defense motion for continuance for expert testimony is denied; held: while defense counsel was diligent, trial court's determination that the "maintenance of orderly procedure outweighed the reasons favoring a continuance, such as surprise and due process" was a proper exercise of discretion, also considering possible detriment to the child, RCW 10.46.085, see: State v. Eller, 84 Wn.2d 90 (1974), State v. Miles, 77 Wn.2d 593, 597 (1970), State v. Hurd, 127 Wn.2d 592, 594 (1995); while denying a continuance where a material witness, having been served with a subpoena, failed to appear may be a denial of due process, State v. Edwards, 68 Wn.2d 246 (1966), here because the complainant's statements before the alleged taint were consistent afterwards, no due process violation occurred; 8-1.

State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007)

At a readiness hearing the week before the scheduled trial date well within expiration date, state announces that it is ready then advises that it only has one prosecutor and two cases are set for the same day, trial court states that state will need to find some alternative, on trial date state moves to continue for same reason, trial court identifies another prosecutor who is not in trial, state refuses to reassign, trial court dismisses; held: while prosecutor is not obliged to reassign a case when the originally assigned lawyer becomes unavailable, State v. Heredia-Juarez, 119 Wn.App. 150, 154-55 (2003), where trial court determines whether reassignment is feasible and necessary in a particular situation and considers the complexity of the case and seriousness of the charge, and state has made no showing of a diligent attempt to solve the problem, denial of a continuance is within court's discretion, cf.: State v. Raper, 47 Wn.App. 530, 535 (1987), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721, 728-29 (2003), State v. Downing, 151 Wn.2d 265, 272-73 (2004); dismissal is a proper remedy where there is no last-minute emergency beyond the control of the state, see: State v. Koerber, 85 Wn.App. 1 (1996); court need not apply CrRLJ 8.3(b) arbitrary action or government misconduct analysis; trial court may dismiss even though time is left before time for trial expiration date, see: State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373, 391-93 (2009), Seattle v. Clewis, 159 Wn.App.842 (2011); 2-1, I.

CORPUS DELICTI

State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 41 (1982)

Mens rea element of a felony need not be proved by independent evidence prior to trial use of a defendant's confession when that element of crime charged provides merely the degree of the generic crime charged; need not establish "intent to commit a felony" to establish corpus delicti of assault 1°, State v. Burnette, 78 Wn.App. 952 (1995); II.

State v. Sellers, 39 Wn.App. 799 (1985)

Corpus delicti for homicide is (1) fact of death and (2) responsibility of a criminal agency for death; causal connection between defendant and crime is not required; no body need be found; II.

State v. Komoto, 40 Wn.App. 200 (1985)

Corpus delicti for felony hit and run, RCW 46.52.020, does not include identity, distinguishing State v. Hamrick, 19 Wn.App. 417, 420 (1978), as defendant's physical condition is not an element of the crime; I.

Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569 (1986)

Corpus delicti must be established to corroborate an admission or confession irrespective of whether or not the statement was custodial, reversing, in part, Bremerton v. Corbett, 42 Wn.App. 45 (1985); in DUI case, corpus is met by proof that defendant was driving while intoxicated; standard for corpus delicti is that there be sufficient circumstances to support a logical and reasonable inference that defendant was driving, but see: State v. Flowers, 99 Wn.App. 57 (2000); while mere evidence that defendant was at scene of accident and was registered owner of vehicle may not be sufficient, additional factors such as other person present unable to start vehicle, defendant seen earlier driving the vehicle, injuries to defendant consistent with blood on driver's side of vehicle are sufficient, State v. Hendrickson, 140 Wn.App. 913 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Acheson, 48 Wn.App. 630 (1987)

Indecent liberties: proof of identity of perpetrator is not an element of corpus delicti; II.

State v. Quillin, 49 Wn.App. 155 (1987)

In homicide case, proof of disappearance of victim, defendant's possession of victim's vehicle and possessions and testimony that defendant had told another that he was going to meet the victim shortly before disappearance establishes corpus; II.

State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988)

In homicide case, corpus may be established by physical evidence as interpreted by expert testimony and by circumstantial evidence that supports a logical and reasonable inference that victim died by criminal means; confession is admissible as long as state later proves corpus, State v. Hummel, 165 Wn.App. 749 (2012); I.

State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1990)

In possession with intent to deliver drugs case, evidence of possession of several baggies containing a total of 1.4 grams marijuana and observation of defendant in several brief conversations in area known for drug trafficking is insufficient to establish corpus, State v. Whalen, 131 Wn.App. 58 (2005), cf.: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); I.

State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775 (1990)

In attempted murder case, $1500 cash in defendant's pocket, concealed knife strapped to leg, pair of handcuffs on co-defendant's person, loaded gun, two knives, ammunition, pistol in passenger compartment of car, knives, bow and arrows, shotgun, pellet gun, ammunition, shovel, pickax, bag of lime in trunk plus officer's observations that car was illegally parked at 1 a.m. in park, absence of apparent driver, nervous agitation and lack of cooperation of third suspect establish corpus delicti, thus confession is admissible; corpus delicti rule does not require that state prove, absent confession, that murder had been attempted, rather the state must produce evidence of sufficient circumstances which would support a logical and reasonable deduction that a substantial step had been taken to criminally end someone's life; reverses State v. Smith, 54 Wn.App. 467 (1989); see: State v. Flowers, 99 Wn.App. 57 (2000), State v. Powers, 124 Wn.App. 92 (2004); 6-3.

State v. Riley, 121 Wn.2d 22 (1993)

Observation of hacking activity plus phone trace to defendant's home establish corpus for computer trespass; 7-0.

State v. Vangerpen, 71 Wn.App. 94 (1993), overruled on other grounds, 125 Wn.2d 782 (1995)

Detained driver with a loaded, cocked revolver hidden under leg which he attempted to reach when questioned by police establishes corpus for attempted murder 1°, State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775, 780 (1990), State v. Barajas, 143 Wn.App. 24, 35-37 (2007); evidence establishing corpus need not exclude every reasonable hypothesis consistent with the crime not having occurred, Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 578 (1986); thus, even though facts could support equally logical alternative inference of assault, assuming facts in light most favorable to state, corpus of murder is established by prima facie evidence; assuming that there must be corroborative evidence of each element of the crime to establish the corpus, Smith v. United States, 99 L.Ed. 192 (1954), the cocked gun is sufficient to establish premeditation; I.

State v. Sjogren, 71 Wn.App. 779 (1993)

Corpus delicti for DUI is established where evidence shows defendant was present at the scene of accident in close proximity to vehicle registered to defendant, only other person who could have been driving was passed out in the crew cab behind the front seats, Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 579 (1986), State v. Hendrickson, 140 Wn.App. 913 (2007); III.

State v. Thompson, 73 Wn.App. 654 (1994)

To prove corpus in homicide case where no body is found, state may offer evidence of victim's habit and character to establish circumstantial evidence of the fact of death by a criminal agency, as it is not being introduced to show that victim acted in conformity with a particular character or habit trait on a particular occasion, ER 404(a); where character and habit evidence established that victim never missed appointments, never had been gone for more than 24 hours, was a good housekeeper, took care of her pets, and other evidence established that she was missing, did not feed her cat, house was messy, a strong inference is raised that she died and that her death was sudden and caused by criminal means; see: State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988), State v. Lung, 70 Wn.2d 365, 371 (1967), State v. Hummel, 165 Wn.App. 749 (2012); I.

State v. Solomon, 73 Wn.App. 724 (1994)

Identity is not an element of the corpus of possession of drugs, distinguishing Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 574 (1986), State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775, 781 (1990), unlike reckless driving, DUI, attempt, conspiracy, perjury; I.

State v. C.D.W., 76 Wn.App. 761 (1995)

In rape case, where only evidence of penetration is established by defendant's confession, it is ineffective assistance not to object to the confession, cf.: State v. Angulo, 148 Wn.App. 642 (2009); III.

State v. Wright, 76 Wn.App. 811, 816-9 (1995), overruled, in part, State v. Allen, 130 Wn.2d 640 (1996)

Identity is an element of the corpus delicti of VUFA, former RCW 9.41.040(4), Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 574 (1986), as the element of a prior conviction cannot be proved without identifying a particular person; I.

State v. Burnette, 78 Wn.App. 952 (1995)

In felony murder case, proof of underlying robbery is not part of the corpus to admit confession, see: State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 41, 48 (1982); even if robbery is an element of corpus, evidence that victim had money and had purchased items an hour before he was stabbed and had no money on his body establishes that money was lost through criminal agency; I.

State v. DuBois, 79 Wn.App. 605 (1995)

Evidence independent of confession that theft defendant did not purchase cigarettes and that security guard recovered a pack of cigarettes from her after she left the store is insufficient to establish corpus, at 609-11; evidence in burglary of an open window at a school shop and the presence of items in defendant's living room similar to materials in the shop is insufficient to establish corpus of burglary; I.

State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640 (1996)

Pathologist testifies infant's death could have been caused by SIDS or by manual interference with her breathing, defendant-baby-sitter arranges for care of her own children, gives away her possessions, later confesses; held: corpus delicti of manslaughter must include more than a failure to rule out criminality, none of defendant's confessions or admissions may be considered as guilt absent corroboration, insufficient independent evidence of manslaughter, cf.: State v. Baxter, 134 Wn.App. 587, 595-98 (2006), State v. Young, 196 Wn.App. 214 (2016), see: State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311 (2006); 8-1.

State v. Dodgen, 81 Wn.App. 487 (1996)

Where defendant fails to make a corpus delicti objection to a confession, moves instead to dismiss at close of state's case, then presents evidence on his behalf, reviewing court will look to the evidence as a whole to determine whether corpus was established, State v. Mathis, 73 Wn.App. 341 (1994), State v. Chavez, 65 Wn.App. 602, 605 (1992), State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 909, 914 (1990); corpus of rendering criminal assistance/homicide is independent proof that a homicide victim was concealed by someone other than the person who committed the murder, at 493; I.

State v. Ray, 130 Wn.2d 673 (1996)

In child molestation case, evidence independent of statements establishes nude defendant accompanied child to her room, returned to his room upset and crying and called his sexual deviancy counselor, insufficient to establish corpus (9-0); Supreme Court expressly affirms corpus delicti rule, declines to adopt federal "trustworthiness" standard, Opper v. United States, 99 L.Ed.2d 101 (1954), State v. Dow, 168 Wn.2d 243 (2010); 8-1.

State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 485 (1998)

Admissible hearsay statements are sufficient to corroborate a confession, State v. Biles, 73 Wn.App. 281, 285 (1994); I.

State v. Picard, 90 Wn.App. 890, 900-2 (1998)

In arson case, burned house, evidence that portable heater was rigged by a human to ignite combustibles, movement of valuables out of house just before fire, over-insurance and defendant's proximity to fire establish corpus; evidence of corpus must be prima facie, need not be enough to convict or even send case to jury, State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 656 (1996), State v. Baxter, 134 Wn.App. 587, 595-98 (2006); II.

State v. Dyson, 91 Wn.App. 761 (1998)

Statement made during and part of the crime itself is not excludable under corpus delicti rule, State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 295-97 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014), which applies to confessions, expressions of guilt as to a past act, cf.: State v. Miller, 35 Wn.App. 567 (1983); I.

State v. Liles-Heide, 94 Wn.App. 569 (1999)

Defendant's motion to dismiss DUI case claiming insufficient evidence, absent her confession, that she was driving, is denied, State v. Hamrick, 19 Wn.App. 417 (1978), at trial defendant testifies that she drove and is convicted; held: once defendant offers evidence, appellate court will review sufficiency of the corpus based upon all of the evidence to determine if there is sufficient evidence to support the crime, State v. Dodgen, 81 Wn.App. 487, 492-94 (1996), State v. McPhee, 156 Wn.App. 44, 59-62 (2010), see: State v. Kerry, 34 Wn.App. 674 (1983), State v. Baeza, 100 Wn.2d 487 (1983); I.

State v. Phillips, 94 Wn.App. 829 (1999)

In violation of a no contact order case, return of service of the order establishes the knowledge element to permit into evidence defendant's admission that he knew of the order; I.

State v. Flowers, 99 Wn.App. 57 (2000)

In attempt to elude case, police observe motorcycle "doing donuts," signal to stop with lights and siren, rider looks at officer, speeds away and flees before apprehension at scene, defendant later confesses; held: evidence supports an inference that someone attempted to elude, thus establishing corpus; the showing required for a corpus delicti depends on the evidence, not on the statutory elements; "[t]here are no 'certain crimes' for which identity is always a part of corpus delicti," at 61, distinguishing Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 574 (1986), State v. Smith, 115 Wn.2d 775, 781 (1990); II.

State v. Pineda, 99 Wn.App. 65 (2000)

In child homicide case, evidence independent of defendant's statement that child was a healthy nine-day old prior to death, that autopsy report showed nothing, that defendant-mother was dressed at death and did not show emotion after death is insufficient to establish corpus; coroner's testimony that but for defendant's statement he would have said that cause of death is SIDS but that his opinion is homicide by smothering due to defendant's statement is insufficient, as it was not based upon facts wholly independent of the alleged confession; II.

State v. James, 104 Wn.App. 25, 35-38 (2000)

Corpus of bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170(2), is (1) being released from custody by court order and (2) failing to appear; defendant's signature on order setting conditions of release and notice of trial date are not "statements" but evidence of his presence in court when ordered to appear at trial; II.

State v. Bernal, 109 Wn.App. 150 (2001)

Fourteen-year old dies of heroin overdose, defendant admits selling him heroin day before, is charged with homicide by controlled substance and distributing a controlled substance to a minor; held: absent independent evidence that decedent obtained the heroin by delivery as opposed to stealing it, finding it or some other means, corpus delicti is lacking, cf.: State v. Zilyette, 163 Wn.App. 124, 128-31 (2011); 2-1, II.

State v. C.M.C., 110 Wn.App. 285 (2002)

Owner of car testifies that her car was stolen and that respondent did not have permission to ride in it, respondent argues that her confession is inadmissible because state did not prove knowledge element; held: corpus was established when state proved that a crime was committed, respondent's identity and mens rea is not required to be proved independent of her confession, State v. Cardenas-Flores, 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017), State v. Young, 196 Wn.App. 214 (2016), see: State v. Flowers, 99 Wn.App. 57, 61 (2000); I.

State v. Pietrzak, 110 Wn.App. 670 (2002)

Defendant's statements prior to homicide that he wanted to kill victim can corroborate post-crime statements for purposes of establishing corpus, see: State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 295-97 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014), challenge to corpus during defense case is timely, State v. McConville, 122 Wn.App. 640, 647-51 (2004); III.

State v. McConville, 122 Wn.App. 640 (2004)

Even where defense stipulates to the admissibility of a confession, defense may raise corpus objection up to the time defense rests, State v. Pietrzak, 110 Wn.App. 670 (2002); I.

State v. Rooks, 130 Wn.App. 787, 801-06 (2005)

Homicide victim's body is found months after death, medical examiner cannot determine cause of death and cannot rule out drug overdose and strangulation, defendant seeks to exclude his confession that he strangled victim; held: independent evidence of defendant's domestic violence against victim, sudden disappearance, custody dispute, unusual circumstances of victim's absence including left keys and purse, State v. Thompson, 73 Wn.App. 654 (1994), all lead to reasonable and logical inference that her death was the result of a criminal act establishing corpus delicti; "where there is more than one reasonable and logical inference as to the cause of death, if one inference is more consistent with the independent evidence than another, it might make the other inference less likely or reasonable," State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 660-61 (1996), State v. Hummel, 165 Wn.App. 749 (2012); I.

State v. Whalen, 131 Wn.App. 58 (2005)

Defendant steals several boxes of pseudoephedrine, admits he was going to manufacture meth; held: mere possession of pseudoephedrine is insufficient to establish corpus of possession with intent to manufacture, RCW 69.50.440, State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 330-33 (2006), see: State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1990), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), but see: RCW 69.50.440, State v. Moles, 130 Wn.App. 461 (2005), cf.: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); 2-1, II.

State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311 (2006)

Defendant 1 steals packs of cold medicine, removes tablets from packages, when arrested admits he was going to give them to someone to manufacture methamphetamine, is charged with unlawful possession of pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture meth, former RCW 69.50.440; held: mere possession is insufficient to establish corpus of possession with intent, State v. Whalen, 131 Wn.App. 58 (2005); defendant 2 is arrested for driving while license suspended, search incident to arrest finds three bottles of ephedrine and coffee filters, admits he would use the ephedrine to manufacture meth, is charged with possession of ephedrine with intent, RCW 69.50.440; held: coffee filters provide additional corroboration to establish possession with intent, State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), thus statement is admissible; defendant 3 enters residence of a friend, finds a visitor, takes a DVD player claiming he was borrowing it, visitor and defendant argue and fight, defendant later admits he didn't have permission, at trial owner of DVD player testifies defendant had permission to take it, defendant is convicted of attempted robbery; held: because independent evidence supported hypotheses of both guilt and innocence, the corpus is insufficient and statement is inadmissible, State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 660 (1996), but see: State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017); 7-2.

State v. Hendrickson, 140 Wn.App. 913 (2007)

Corpus delicti for DUI is established where independent evidence shows car is registered to defendant who is only person in area, smell of alcohol, eyes watery and bloodshot, face flushed, see: State v. Sjogren, 71 Wn.App. 779 (1993); trial court may permit introduction of the defendant's statements before the state has completed its evidence of the prima facie case on the condition that the state present the corroborating evidence at a later time or risk dismissal; III.

State v. Page, 147 Wn.App. 849 (2008)

Defendant is arrested and booked, at jail tells police there's a gun in his house, police allow defendant to call his brother to ask him to get the gun, police drive to the house, see brother coming out who tells police "I didn't touch the gun," defendant is charged with VUFA, no gun is offered, no corpus objection is made; held: failure to raise corpus delicti may be raised for first time on appeal, State v. Cardenas-Flores, 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017), as ineffective assistance, but construed in favor of the state, evidence was sufficient to establish a reasonable and logical inference that a gun had been in defendant's home, thus corpus was established; II.

State v. Angulo, 148 Wn.App. 642 (2009)

In child rape case, defendant confesses to penetration, victim testifies to molestation but not penetration, court admits confession; held: the corpus delicti rule focuses on a criminal act, not the elements of the crime charged, State v. Boyer, 200 Wn.App. 7 (2018); victim's testimony established that a criminal act of the same basic nature as the charged offense occurred, sufficient to admit the confession; 2-1, III.

State v. Dow, 168 Wn.2d 243 (2010)

RCW 10.58.035, which directs that where a victim is dead or incompetent a defendant's statement is admissible "if there is substantial independent evidence that would tend to establish the trustworthiness of the confession" is constitutional, but deals only with admissibility and not sufficiency, thus there still must be sufficient evidence independent of a confession to support a conviction, see: State v. Young, 196 Wn.App. 214 (2016); 9-0.

State v. McPhee, 156 Wn.App. 44, 59-62 (2010)

After a corpus motion is denied, if defendant offers substantive evidence, including his own testimony that establishes the corpus, he cannot prevail on appeal, State v. Pietrzak, 110 Wn.App. 670, 680 (2002), State v. Liles-Heide, 94 Wn.App. 569, 572 (1999); III.

State v. Young, 196 Wn.App. 214 (2016)

Corpus for murder is fact of death and a causal connection between death and a criminal act, State v. Hummel, 165 Wn.App. 749 (2012); state need not prove every element of a crime independent of defendant's confession, distinguishing State v. Dow, 168 Wn.2d 243 (2010); apparently holds that state need not prove specific mens rea element before statement is admissible; III.

State v. Cardenas-Flores, 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017)

Corpus delicti may be raised for the first time on appeal as it "permeates" sufficiency of the evidence in addition to the evidentiary foundation required before admission of a confession; corpus delicti rule does not require state to present independent evidence of the mens rea element of a crime where the mens rea element merely establishes the degree of the crime, State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 41, 48 (1982), State v. Hummel, 165 Wn.App. 749, 764-65 (2012), State v. Young, 196 Wn.App. 214 (2016), distinguishing dicta in State v. Dow, 168 Wn.2d 243, 254

(2010); in child assault case evidence, independent of confession, that infant's femur fracture occurred while child was in defendant's control, child was "nonambulatory" and thus could not have caused his own injury, femur fracture requires more force than what would occur in normal everyday life and fracture was likely caused by compression and torsion all establish sufficient evidence that the offense occurred; reverses, in part, State v. Cardenas-Flores, 194 Wn.App. 496 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Hotchkiss, 1 Wn.App.2d 275 (2017)

Pursuant to search warrant police seize 8.1 g. methamphetamine and $2150 cash from defendant's home, defendant admits intent to deliver, at trial defendant testifies that the money was rent and salary, argues insufficient evidence to support corpus delicti so statement should not have been admitted; held: "[the same general rules for sufficiency of evidence to convict apply for corroborating evidence under the corpus delicti rule;" while mere possession of a large amount of drugs is insufficient to establish corpus, where there is at least one more factor, here money, then evidence is sufficient, see: State v. Brown, 68 Wn.App. 480 (1993), State v. Hutchins, 73 Wn.App. 211, 216 (1994), State v. Davis, 79 Wn.App. 591 (1995), State v. Mejia, 111 Wn.2d 892 (1989), State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414 (1975), State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 767-9 (1995), State v. Miller, 91 Wn.App. 181, 186 (1998), State v. Niggard, 154 Wn.App. 641, 647-49 (2010), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 290-91 (2010), State v. Sprague, 16 Wn.App.2d 213 (2021); while defendant's "innocent" explanation for the money might arguably call for the suppression of defendant's confession to the police pursuant to State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311, 329 (2006), State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 660 (1996), here there was still sufficient evidence to convict, Worswick, J., concurring; II.

State v. Sprague, 16 Wn.App.2d 213 (2021)

Police serve search warrant, seize 9-10 grams of meth, a homemade pipe, a metal container with methamphetamine residue, a scale, and a bundle of plastic grocery bags, defendant confesses to dealing, is convicted of possession with intent to deliver; held: quantity alone is insufficient to establish intent to deliver, State v. Cobelli, 56 Wn.App. 921 (1990), possession of other items is consistent with both innocence and guilt as to intent to deliver, thus evidence is insufficient to establish corpus of the charged crime, State v. Brockob, 159 Wn.2d 311 (2006), State v. Aten, 130 Wn.2d 640, 660 (1996), State v. Cardenas-Flores, 189 Wn.2d 243 (2017), thus statements were improperly admitted, however the evidence absent the confession established a prima facie case of possession with intent to deliver, thus there was sufficient evidence to convict, State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 290-91 (2010), State v. Lane, 56 Wn.App. 286 (1989), State v. Simpson, 22 Wn.App. 572, 575 (1979); unlike the corpus delicti analysis, the sufficiency of the evidence analysis does not involve evaluation of hypotheses of innocence; II.

COUNSEL
Conflict of Interest

State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701 (1981)

Joint representation of co-defendants is not error per se, see: Pers. Restraint of Gomez, 180 Wn.2d 337 (2014), particularly where court explains hazards to defendants who do not object; see also: Burger v. Kemp, 97 L.Ed.2d 638 (1987); II.

State v. Lingo, 32 Wn.App. 638 (1982)

Where co-defendants are represented by one attorney, court does not have obligation to inquire into possible conflict; burden rests on trial counsel to raise appropriate concerns; when no objection is raised, actual conflict must be readily apparent in order for claim of ineffective assistance to be successful; see: State v. Alexis, 21 Wn.App. 161 (1978), State v. Ningham, 23 Wn.App. 826 (1979), Burger v. Kemp, 97 L.Ed.2d 638 (1987), State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44, 53-4 (1995); II.

In re Richardson, 100 Wn.2d 669, 677 (1983)

At trial, it was learned that a witness who was called by the defense to testify to matters that would incriminate the witness, was represented by defendant's attorney; Supreme Court remands personal restraint petition, holding that a trial court commits reversible error if it knows or reasonably should know of a particular conflict into which it fails to inquire, State v. McDonald, 143 Wn.2d 506 (2001), State v. Santacruz-Hernandez, 139 Wn.App. 328 (2001), State v. Chavez, 162 Wn.App. 431 (2011), but see: State v. Dhaliwal, 150 Wn.2d 559 (2003), Mickens v. Taylor, 152 L.Ed.2d 291 (2002), State v. Regan, 143 Wn.App.419 (2008); on remand, defense need not demonstrate prejudice, but court must determine if an actual conflict of interest existed, State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44, 53-4 (1995); cf.: State v. White, 80 Wn.App. 406, 413-4 (1996); 6-2.

State v. Anderson, 42 Wn.App. 659 (1986)

Defense counsel moves to withdraw because a state's witness had previously been represented by a lawyer from counsel's office, and counsel intended to examine witness as to his intoxication which could result in revocation of the witness's probation, court denies counsel's motion to withdraw; held: no actual conflict, since counsel's examination of the witness is based upon facts discovered in preparation for defendant's case, not as a result of the prior representation of the witness, see: State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 38, 47 (1994), State v. Vicuna, 119 Wn.App. 26 (2003), State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 559-60 (2012), Pers. Restraint of Gomez, 180 Wn.2d 337 (2014); I.

State v. James, 48 Wn.App. 353 (1987)

Where counsel represents co-defendants, and must choose whether or not to put on evidence that will help one defendant and harm another, there is an actual conflict of interest; no prejudice must be shown to require a new trial, State v. Robinson, 79 Wn.App. 383 (1995); cf.: State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44, 53-4 (1995); III.

State v. Hatfield, 51 Wn.App. 408 (1988)

At trial, public defender informs court that an adverse witness, whom defendant was blaming for the offense, was represented by another public defender from same office, court denies motion to withdraw, but appoints outside counsel for the witness to advise witness about Fifth Amendment privilege; held: if trial court knows or should know about a potential conflict, it must inquire to determine if an actual conflict exists; failure to inquire mandates reversal; here, the trial court's appointment of other counsel plus defense counsel's vigorous defense establish she did not actively represent conflicting interests which adversely affected her performance, cf.: State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44, 53-4 (1995), see: Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 474-76 (1998); I.

Wheat v. United States, 100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988)

Trial court may refuse to permit counsel to represent defendant where counsel represented co-defendants, even where all clients waive right to conflict-free counsel; 5-4.

State v. Martinez, 53 Wn.App. 709 (1989)

Public defense office represents defendant and severed co-defendant who does not testify at defendant's trial because counsel says testimony would be harmful to defendant; held: trial court has no duty to initiate an inquiry into the propriety of multiple representation unless there are special circumstances such that the trial court knows or reasonably should know that a particular conflict exists, Cuyler v. Sullivan, 64 L.Ed.2d 333 (1980), State v. White, 80 Wn.App. 406, 413-4 (1996); where there is no showing that counsel actively represented conflicting interests and that an actual conflict adversely affected counsel's performance, then defendant received effective assistance of counsel, State v. Graham, 78 Wn.App. 44, 53-4 (1995), State v. Dhaliwal, 150 Wn.2d 559 (2003), Mickens v. Taylor, 152 L.Ed.2d 291 (2002); 2-1.

State v. Early, 70 Wn.App. 452 (1993)

Former law partner with whom counsel maintains a business relationship previously represented victim in unrelated criminal matters; held: because counsel stated he had never viewed victim's files or done any legal work for victim and was not in law partnership with victim's attorney at time of trial, then proscriptions of RPC 1.9 were not violated, and disqualification was not required, see: Intercapital Corp. v. Intercapital Corp., 41 Wn.App. 9, 11 (1985); III.

State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 38 (1994)

Respondent is charged with child molestation, nine days before expiration date, state endorses a witness who had previously been represented by an attorney in the same public defender office as respondent's counsel, trial court excludes the witness's testimony due to conflict and late notice, state seeks discretionary review; held: RPC 1.9(a) requires withdrawal in a matter where a former client has been represented by the same attorney in the same or a substantially related matter; substantially related means that the court must determine whether any factual matter in the former representation is so similar to any material factual matter in the new representation that a lawyer would consider it useful in advancing the interests of the client in the latter representation, Wolfram, Modern Legal Ethics § 7.4.3 at 370 (1986), Modern Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 1.9 cmt., at 38 (1989); here, the record establishes that representation of witness and the respondent are totally unrelated, disqualification is unwarranted, RPC 1.9(a); RPC 1.9(b) prohibits counsel from using confidences or secrets to the disadvantage of former client; here, it is apparent that cross-examination of the former client will involve inquiry into prior convictions, which are available in discovery, and are not based upon confidences or secrets, State v. Anderson, 42 Wn.App. 659, 664 (1986), Teja v. Saran, 68 Wn.App. 793, 799 (1993), thus, trial court erred in concluding that withdrawal of counsel or exclusion of the witness was required, accord: State v. Ramos, 83 Wn.App. 622, 628-33 (1996), see: State v. Vicuna, 119 Wn.App. 26 (2003), State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 559-60 (2012); I.

State v. Robinson, 79 Wn.App. 383 (1995)

Where counsel fails to call a helpful witness who is also his client, there is no presumption of effectiveness, new trial is required, State v. James, 48 Wn.App. 353, 369 (1987); I.

State v. White, 80 Wn.App. 406 (1995)

Counsel is appointed to represent defendant Shim, reads police report, meets with a relative but not with defendant, who retains private counsel; same appointed counsel is then appointed to represent co-defendant White, both are convicted, both maintain reversal is necessary due to conflict of interest; held: although appointed counsel may have violated RPC 1.7(b), no actual conflict of interest existed, since counsel never spoke with Shim; trial court had no duty to inquire where the potential conflict was not brought to the court's attention, mere fact that appointed counsel entered an appearance in court file is not notice, cf.: State v. McDonald, 96 Wn.App. 311, 316-21 (1999), aff'd 143 Wn.2d 506 (2001), distinguishing In re Richardson, 100 Wn.2d 669 (1983), breach of RPC 1.7 and 1.9 do not warrant reversal absent prejudice, State v. Tjeersdma, 104 Wn.App. 878, 885 (2001), where raised for first time on appeal; II.

State v. Ramos, 83 Wn.App. 622, 628-33 (1996)

In VUCSA case, public defender seeks leave to withdraw as the public defender's agency had previously represented a witness against defendant in a theft case, witness waives privilege in open court, trial court grants leave to withdraw; held: trial court erred, as the prior representation was unrelated to the current charge, RPC 1.9(a), prior theft case was public record and defense failed to present any evidence that cross-examination of the witness would involve inquiry into confidences or secrets, State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 38 (1994), see: State v. Vicuna, 119 Wn.App. 26 (2003); where witness waived privilege, counsel is relieved from restraints on cross-examination which might have otherwise arisen, see: In re Richardson, 100 Wn.2d 669 (1983); I.

Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 142 Wn.2d 710, 721-32 (2001)

In evaluating whether an irreconcilable conflict exists between counsel and client, appellate court will look to (1) extent of the breakdown of communication and the breakdown's effect on the representation the client actually receives, (2) adequacy of trial court's inquiry into the conflict, and (3) timeliness of motion, see: State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668 (1997), State v. Schaller, 143 Wn.App. 258 (2007), State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 457-58 (2012), State v. Davis, 3 Wn.App.2d 763, 790-91 (2018); 8-1.

State v. McDonald, 143 Wn.2d 506 (2001)

Before trial, defendant sues standby counsel/public defender in federal court, prosecutor's office represents counsel who moves to withdraw, trial court declines to substitute counsel; held: when the trial court knows or should know of a conflict of interest between defendant and standby counsel, it must conduct an inquiry into the nature and extent of the conflict and, after such inquiry, the court may remove standby counsel, failure to make an inquiry and take action constitutes reversible error and prejudice will be presumed, In re Pers. Restraint of Richardson, 100 Wn.2d 669, 677 (1983), State v. Regan, 143 Wn.App. 419 (2008), but see: State v. Dhaliwal, 150 Wn.2d 559 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Tjeerdsma, 104 Wn.App. 878 (2001)

Defendant discovers after conviction that his lawyer was a contract municipal prosecutor, key witnesses at defendant's trial were police from same municipality; held: where an alleged conflict is raised after trial, prejudice is presumed only if defendant shows that counsel (1) actively represented conflicting interests and (2) the actual conflict adversely affected counsel's performance, State v. Davis, 141 Wn.2d 798, 860-64 (2000), Strickland v. Washington, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984), Mickens v. Taylor, 152 L.Ed.2d 291 (2002); here, counsel's duty, per the contract, was to the municipality, not the individual police officers, had never advised or represented any of the witnesses, thus there was no showing counsel had actively represented conflicting interests; violation of RPC is not grounds for reversal, State v. White, 80 Wn.App. 406, 412-13 (1995); I.

Mickens v. Taylor, 152 L.Ed.2d 291 (2002)

After trial, defendant discovers his lawyer represented victim immediately prior to his murder, defense seeks rule of automatic reversal; held: where trial judge fails to inquire into a conflict which s/he knows or reasonably should know exists, Cuyler v. Sullivan, 64 L.Ed.2d 333 (1980), reversal is only required where defense establishes that the conflict adversely affected his counsel's performance; 5-4.

State v. Vicuna, 119 Wn.App. 26 (2003)

Defense counsel's statement that a conflict exists because of the ability to call witnesses is insufficient to allow trial court to determine if a conflict in fact exists, trial court should hold in camera hearing with sealed record or ask more general questions to make such a determination, see: State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 38, 42 (1994), State v. Anderson, 42 Wn.App. 659 (1986), State v. Ramos, 83 Wn.App. 622 (1996); I.

State v. Dhaliwal, 150 Wn.2d 559 (2003)

Defense counsel previously represented two defense witnesses and a prosecution witness, trial court inquires of defendant about conflict with defense witnesses, fails to inquire about state's witness, nor did trial court advise defendant that he was entitled to a conflict-free attorney, that he could receive outside legal advice about waiving, and that he could "ask questions;" held: colloquy was inadequate, see: In re Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467 (1998), State v. Regan, 143 Wn.App. 419 (2008), as it did not establish a knowing, voluntary and intelligent waiver, was not "targeted at the conflict issue;" reversal is only required where defendant asserts a conflict of interest and shows that the conflict adversely affected trial counsel's performance, Mickens v. Taylor, 152 L.Ed.2d 291 (2002); here, there is no evidence that the actual conflict adversely affected counsel's performance, State v. Robinson, 79 Wn.App. 386, 394 (1995), Cuyler v. Sullivan, 64 L.Ed.2d 333 (1980), counsel thoroughly examined witnesses that counsel had previously or was currently representing, failure to object was tactical, defendant failed to meet burden of proving actual conflict that adversely affected counsel's performance; remand is not required absent actual conflict and resulting adverse consequences, cf.: State v. Kitt, 9 Wn.App.2d 235 (2019), distinguishing Wood v. Georgia, 67 L.Ed.2d 220 (1981); affirms State v. Dhaliwal, 113 Wn.App. 226 (2002); failure to adequately brief precludes state constitutional analysis; 9-0.

State v. MacDonald, 122 Wn.App. 804, 812-14 (2004)

In rape case, trial court disqualifies retained counsel because he was attorney of record for rape complainant's mother in dissolution; held: under "factual context" analysis, see: State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 38, 43-44 (1994), trial court must (1) reconstruct scope of facts involved in former representation and project scope of facts that will be involved in second representation, (2) assume that lawyer obtained confidential client information about all facts within scope of former representation, and (3) determine whether any factual matter in the former representation is so similar to any material factual matter in the latter representation that a lawyer would find it useful in assisting the client in the latter representation; actual receipt of impeaching information from complainant's mother is not the standard for disqualification, Wheat v. United States,100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988); here, it must be assumed that counsel received personal information about complainant from the client-mother, a witness for the state in rape case, thus trial court properly disqualified counsel, State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 22-23 (2007); II.

State v. Jensen, 125 Wn.App. 319, 329-35 (2005)

In child molestation case, it may be a conflict where defense counsel is facing separate child molestation charges brought by the same prosecutor, counsel had at least a duty to disclose, remedy is remand for trial court to determine if an actual conflict existed and if it adversely affected his representation of defendant; II.

State v. Rooks, 130 Wn.App. 787, 795-801 (2005)

Where a law office represents a defendant and another client in custody who is considering providing state with information that defendant confessed to him in jail, counsel must seek to withdraw, trial court need not provide the clients with an opportunity to waive the conflict, see: Wheat v. United States, 100 L.Ed.2d 140, 150-152 (1988); ex parte in-chambers hearing to discuss conflict does not violate defendant's right to be present, see: State v. Berrysmith, 87 Wn.App. 268, 273-74 (1997); I.

State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 22-23 (2007)

Trial court disqualifies retained counsel when it learns that rape victim had consulted with a member of counsel's firm to discuss a civil suit regarding the criminal offense; held: trial court does not abuse discretion when it disqualifies an attorney due to a serious potential for a conflict of interest, State v. MacDonald, 122 Wn.App. 804, 812-13 (2004), Wheat v. United States, 100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988); trial court is not limited in its exercise of discretion to actual conflict of interest; III.

State v. Stenson, 143 Wn.App. 258 (2007)

Defendant is not entitled to new counsel on the basis of a breakdown in communications where he simply refuses to cooperate with his attorneys, State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 457-58 (2012); I.

State v. Regan, 143 Wn.App. 419 (2008)

In bail jumping case, state calls supervising counsel to testify while defendant is represented by subordinate acting as primary counsel; held: trial court's failure to obtain waiver from defendant or engage in inquiry as to whether defense counsel's testimony is both necessary and unobtainable from other sources, State v. Sullivan, 60 Wn.2d 214 (1962), Pers. Restraint of Richardson, 100 Wn.2d 669, 677 (1983), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Dhaliwal,150 Wn.2d 559, 568 (2003), requires automatic reversal; 2-1, III.

State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 359-65 (2010)

Defendant assaults defense counsel in front of the jury, trial court denies motion to withdraw, finding that the assault was calculated to create a conflict in order to force a mistrial; held: a defendant's misconduct towards his attorney does not necessarily create an actual conflict; where a defendant intentionally creates a conflict of interest, the defendant may be deemed to have forfeited the right to the assistance of counsel free of the conflict created; I.

State v. Chavez, 162 Wn.App. 431 (2011)

Defense counsel advises court that he has a conflict of interest, court permits him to withdraw from one count that was severed but not on other counts, defendant pleads guilty then seeks to withdraw plea, court appoints another lawyer who files what he calls an Anders brief, Anders v. California, 386 U.S. 738, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967), declaring there are no non-frivolous grounds to withdraw plea, trial court denies motion; held: combination of conflict that was inadequately developed by trial court, Mickens v. Taylor, 535 U.S. 162, 167, 152 L.Ed.2d 291 (2002), Holloway v. Arkansas, 435 U.S. 475, 55 L.Ed.2d 426 (1978) plus new counsel's effective abandonment of defendant's motion requires remand for trial court to take a "second look at the motion to withdraw" the plea; 2-1, III.

State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 457-64 (2012)

One-sided breakdown in communication does not entitle defendant to a new lawyer, State v. Schaller, 143 Wn.App. 258, 271 (2007), State v. Wood, 19 Wn.App.2d 743 (2021); disagreement over trial strategy does not entitle defendant to a new lawyer, State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 734 (1997), State v. Davis, 3 Wn.App.2d 763, 790-91 (2018), as trial tactics are properly entrusted to counsel, not defendant; I.

State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 559-60 (2012)

In homicide case, defendant intends to blame a third party who had been represented 28 times by the same public defender agency, moves to disqualify public defender as the agency possessed confidential information of the third party's drug and alcohol use, third party testifies he rarely drinks and never uses methamphetamines; held: because there is nothing in the record to show that public defender agency had any confidential information about other suspect's history that could have been used to impeach, motion to disqualify was properly denied, see: State v. Anderson, 42 Wn.App. 659 (1986), State v. Hunsaker, 74 Wn.App. 38 (1994), State v. vicuna, 119 Wn.2d 26 (2003); II.

State v. Sanchez, 171 Wn.App. 518, 550-62 (2012)

Defense counsel, at own expense, fly potential juvenile witnesses out-of-state, trial court disqualifies counsel; held: while at the time of disqualification there was no evidence that relocation would be admissible at trial, the potential admissibility if further evidence of defendant's involvement was developed that trial court did not abuse discretion, see: State v. Kosanke, 23 Wn.2d 211 (1945); specter of criminal charges against counsel was a tenable reason supporting disqualification; III.

Pers. Restraint of Gomez, 180 Wn.2d 337, 348-50 (2014)

In child abuse case dependency proceeding defense counsel represents co-respondent after which defendant is charged with homicide by abuse, at criminal trial no evidence is offered that counsel's prior client abused the victim; held: a theoretical conflict of interest is "insufficient to impugn a criminal conviction," Cuyler v. Sullivan, 446 U.S. 335, 350, 64 L.Ed.2d 333 (1980), violation of RPCs do not "embody the constitutional standard for effective assistance of counsel," State v. White, 80 Wn.App. 406, 412-13 (1995), but are mere guides for determining what is reasonable; here, there was no significant risk that the representation of one client was materially limited by the lawyer's representation of the other, RPC 1.7(a)(1), (2); 5-4.

State v. Reeder, 181 Wn.App. 897, 908-11 (2014)

Attorney in defense counsel's law office previously gave legal advice to defendant's sister on a civil matter which may have been similar to the current fraud charge, never opened a file, trial court denies new counsel, orders Chinese wall, orders counsel not to speak to each other about prior representation; held: absent any interest sister had that was adverse to his own or any facts showing that the attorneys did not impose a proper Chinese wall or that the wall did not resolve any alleged conflict, no prejudice or even conflict was shown, see: State v. Stenger, 111 Wn.2d 516, 522-23 (1988); I.

State v. O'Neil, 198 Wn.App. 537 (2017)

For purposes of a pretrial motion state seeks to interview a lawyer who is supervised by defendant's attorney who seeks to withdraw, trial court authorizes the interview and finds no conflict; held: a significant risk exists that representation of defendant would be materially affected by the personal interests of the supervisor under RPC 1.7(a)(2) should the lawyer being supervised be a witness for the state, defendant is entitled to counsel where there is no such risk thus trial court abused its discretion in denying the motion to withdraw; I.

State v. Kitt, 9 Wn.App.2d 235 (2019)

In homicide case evidence showed that defendant shot a bystander but intended to shoot a rival gang member who had been represented by defendant's counsel who advised trial court of conflict, arguing that he cannot attack the character and reputation of his former client, court denies motion to withdraw; held: counsel had confidential information that he could not use in defending his client, raised it before the trial court and thus had an actual conflict of interest requiring reversal, distinguishing State v. Dhaliwal, 150 Wn.2d 559, 573 (2003); II.

State v. Wood, 19 Wn.App.2d 743 (2021)

Defense counsel receives a letter from a third party incriminating the defendant, does not provide it to defendant and, upon demand of the state, turns it over to the prosecutor, seeks to withdraw because he could be called as a witness for the defense to testify that defendant did not provide the letter, and because the client had lost confidence, trial court denies motion to withdraw as the case was already in progress, jury having been selected, and orders that the letter not be introduced into evidence; held: a defense attorney has an obligation to turn over, after a reasonable period of time, inculpatory evidence not received from the client or an agent of the client, State ex rel. Sowers v. Olwell, 64 Wn.2d 828, 833 (1964), and does not violate the duty of loyalty to the client or RPC 1.6 and 1.8; an attorney can be called as a witness about an uncontested issue, RPC 3.7(a), although here counsel would not need to testify as the court suppressed the letter; a general loss of confidence in trial counsel is insufficient to justify a motion to withdraw, particularly considering scheduling issues, State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 730-37 (1997), State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 457-64 (2012), State v. Davis, 3 Wn.App.2d 763, 790-91 (2018); I.

COUNSEL
Effective Assistance

State v. Jones, 33 Wn.App. 865, 872-73 (1983)

After losing a motion, defense counsel refuses to participate in the rest of the trial; held: "[t]he decision by defendants' trial attorneys here, not to examine or call witnesses, or give closing arguments is best depicted as tactical…[Conscious unprofessional conduct and involuntary ineptitude] should be kept distinct even though admittedly both may prejudice the client. To equate the two would provide an improper incentive to use unprofessional conduct as a means to secure mistrials or reversals of convictions having as the end the delay of a valid conviction or the possible escape from prosecution. United States v. Altamirano, 633 F.2d 147, 150–51 (9th Cir.1980) (footnotes omitted). In addition, the record shows trial counsel represented defendants zealously during the many weeks of the two trials before they decided to cease functioning, and that defendants acted as co-counsel during the trial. Finally, we note the trial judge characterized counsels' conduct as strategic. All these factors indicate defendants had effective representation;" I.

State v. Bradbury, 38 Wn.App. 367 (1984)

Defense counsel calls severed co-defendant, who takes the 5th; held: no ineffective assistance as no showing of prejudice, Strickland v. Washington, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984), State v. Ermert, 94 Wn.2d 839, 849 (1980); III.

State v. Stark, 48 Wn.App. 245 (1987)

Court need not appoint substitute counsel merely because defendant claims ineffective assistance, State v. Sinclair, 46 Wn.App. 433 (1986), State v. Staten, 60 Wn.App. 163 (1991), State v. Rosborough, 62 Wn.App. 341 (1991), State v. Martin, 149 Wn.App. 689, 701-02 (2009), State v. Lindsey, 188 Wn.App. 233, 248-50 (2013), but see: State v. Young, 60 Wn.App. 95 (1991); I.

State v. James, 48 Wn.App. 353 (1987)

Failure of defense counsel to communicate a plea bargain offer to defendant is ineffective assistance of counsel, Pers. Restraint of McCready, 100 Wn.App. 259 (2000), State v. Drath, 7 Wn.App.2d 255 (2018), see also: State v. Holm, 91 Wn.App. 429, 435-39 (1998), Pers. Restraint of James, 190 Wn.2d 686 (2018), see: State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450 (2017); where defense counsel discloses his subjective belief that his client may commit perjury without a firm basis and without first communicating his suspicions to his client, there is an actual conflict of interest, see also: State v. Berrysmith, 87 Wn.App. 268 (1997); where counsel represents co-defendants, and must choose whether or not to put on evidence that will help one defendant and harm another, there is an actual conflict of interest; no prejudice must be shown to require a new trial; III.

State v. Martinez, 53 Wn.App. 709 (1989)

Public defense office represents defendant and severed co-defendant who does not testify at defendant's trial because counsel says testimony would be harmful to defendant; held: trial court has no duty to initiate an inquiry into the propriety of multiple representation unless there are special circumstances such that the trial court knows or reasonably should know that a particular conflict exists, Cuyler v. Sullivan, 64 L.Ed.2d 333 (1980); where there is no showing that counsel actively represented conflicting interests and that an actual conflict adversely affected counsel's performance, then defendant received effective assistance of counsel, State v. Dhaliwal, 150 Wn.2d 559 (2003); 2-1.

State v. Garrett, 124 Wn.2d 504 (1994)

Defense counsel's deliberate tactic to push trial court "beyond the limits of tolerance" is not a basis for reversal for ineffective assistance of counsel, State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 811-12 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018); 8-1.

State v. McFarland, 127 Wn.2d 322 (1995)

Failure to move to suppress evidence is not per se deficient representation, overruling State v. Tarica, 59 Wn.App. 368, 374 (1990); where a search is challenged for the first time on appeal, appellant must show, from the record, actual prejudice, i.e., that the trial court likely would have granted the motion if made; reverses State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57 (1994), overrules, in part, State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804 (1994), see: State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619 (1999), State v. Rainey, 107 Wn.App. 129 (2001), State v. Horton, 136 Wn.App. 29 (2006), State v. Trujillo, 153 Wn.App. 454 (2009); 7-0.

State v. Maurice, 79 Wn.App. 544, 550-03 (1995)

In vehicular homicide case, failure of counsel to have vehicle inspected where defendant insisted a mechanical malfunction caused him to lose control is deficient performance; III.

State v. Thomas, 128 Wn.2d 553 (1996)

A mere assertion, on appeal, that defense counsel prevented defendant from testifying is insufficient to require an evidentiary hearing, see: In re Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 317 (1994), State v. Robinson, 138 Wn.2d 753 (1999), State v. Rainey, 107 Wn.App. 129 (2001), State v. Lee, 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Doogan, 82 Wn.App. 185 (1996)

Trial court giving a "to convict" instruction proposed by defense counsel that includes an uncharged alternative means for committing the crime is ineffective assistance where the error undermines confidence in the outcome, State v. Bray, 52 Wn.App. 30, 34 (1988), State v. Rodriguez, 122 Wn.App. 180 (2004), see: State v. Aho, 137 Wn.2d 736, 744-46 (1999), State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 341-44 (2007); I.

State v. Bandura, 85 Wn.App. 87, 94-7 (1997)

Counsel submits lesser included offense instructions, defendant claims he must consent on the record; held: because lessers may be offered on request of the state, the defense or on the court's own initiative, defendant has no right to be tried only on the offense charged; II.

State v. Glenn, 86 Wn.App. 40 (1997)

Presumption that counsel was effective, State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 665 (1993), Pers. Restraint of Mockovak, 194 Wn.App. 310 (2016), applies to a legal intern, APR 9, as long as the intern complied with the requirements of APR 9; II.

State v. Berrysmith, 87 Wn.App. 268 (1997)

Trial court holds in camera hearing with defense counsel, following which court allows counsel to withdraw because counsel believed that defendant would commit perjury at trial; held: the question for the court is whether the lawyer reasonably believes defendant will commit perjury and not whether client in fact intends to commit perjury, at 275; while counsel's "gut level" suspicion is not enough to authorize withdrawal, here counsel established a firm factual basis; defendant has no constitutional right to be represented by an attorney who reasonably believes he will commit perjury, at 276; see also: State v. James, 48 Wn.App. 353, 366-7 (1987), State v. Fleck, 49 Wn.App. 584, 586 (1987) RPC 1.6, 1.15, 3.3; counsel should bring to court's attention his/her belief before defendant testifies rather than seek to withdraw afterwards, at 279, Nix v. Whiteside, 89 L.Ed.2d 123 (1986); I.

State v. Holm, 91 Wn.App. 429, 434-39 (1998)

Prosecutor mails defense counsel guilty plea offer expiring at omnibus hearing which, if accepted, would result in sentence range of one-three months, defense counsel does not receive offer, never discusses with defendant pleading nor does defense counsel initiate plea bargaining, defendant misses numerous appointments with defense counsel, following trial defendant is sentenced to 75 months; held: under the facts of this case, counsel was not ineffective in failing to negotiate a plea offer or discuss the possibility with defendant; "situations might arise in which defense counsel must engage in plea bargaining without first consulting with the client," at 439, but here, defendant's failure to keep appointments precluded discussions; I.

State v. Saunders, 91 Wn.App. 575 (1998)

In drug case, defense counsel elicits defendant's prior drug conviction during direct testimony, not having moved to exclude it, State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701, 706-13 (1997), and having no tactical reason for offering it; held: ineffective assistance; II.

State v. Alires, 92 Wn.App. 931, 936-39 (1998)

In response to general question, "does anybody believe Hispanics are more likely to commit crimes," six jurors raise their hands, one of the jurors is questioned and is not seated, other five are not questioned individually, indicate they would be fair, defense counsel does not excuse the jurors, defendant claims ineffective assistance; held: jurors indicated they would be fair and impartial, counsel made a "trial decision" not to pursue the topic because it was unlikely court would excuse jurors for cause, and did not want to risk antagonizing jurors, thus counsel was effective; 2-1, III.

State v. Cloud, 95 Wn.App. 606, 611-16 (1999)

In a post-trial motion regarding ineffective assistance of trial counsel, it is error to permit trial counsel to intervene as a party; I.

State v. Garza, 99 Wn.App. 291 (2000)

Following escape attempt, jail guards seize legal materials from inmates, trial court concludes that documents were read, finds no prejudice and that state acted in good faith, denies dismissal; held: remanded for superior court to enter findings as to whether security concerns justified reading legal materials, precise articulation of what guards were looking for and why it might have been contained in legal materials and why reading was required; if security concerns did not justify specific level of intrusion, there is a presumption of prejudice, State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808 (2014), State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018); even if there is no presumption of prejudice, defense may prove prejudice by demonstrating that evidence gained will be used at trial or that prosecution is using confidential information pertaining to defense strategies or that intrusions destroyed defendants' confidence in counsel or that intrusion will otherwise give state unfair advantage; even if prejudice is established, dismissal is not necessarily the appropriate remedy, e.g., suppression may resolve the prejudice; see: State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371, 373-74 (1963), 5 A.L.R.3rd 1352 (1963), State v. Granacki, 90 Wn.App. 598, 601-2 (1998) , State v. Blizzard, 195 Wn.App. 717, 732-33 (2016); III.

Pers. Restraint of McCready, 100 Wn.App. 259 (2000)

Defendant rejects plea offer to a lesser charge, is convicted of greater, proves that counsel did not advise him that mandatory minimum sentence after trial would be ten years, although he was advised that standard range would be more than ten years; held: because defendant might have accepted the plea offer had he known that he could not have obtained an exceptional sentence less than ten years, he was prejudiced by the insufficient advice of counsel, thus remanded for retrial; 2-1, III.

State v. S.M., 100 Wn.App. 401, 409-13 (2000)

Where a legal assistant provides the only substantive advice to respondent regarding a guilty plea, and respondent only meets with counsel moments before the plea is entered, then defendant has been deprived of counsel; II.

Pers. Restraint of Fleming, 142 Wn.2d 853 (2001)

Where defense counsel has a psychological evaluation concluding that defendant is not competent, it is ineffective assistance not to raise competency with the trial court, and a subsequent guilty plea must be vacated; incompetency cannot be "waived," nor can there be a tactical decision not to raise it; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Brett, 142 Wn.2d 868 (2001)

When defense counsel knows or has reason to know of a capital defendant's medical and mental problems that are relevant to making an informed defense theory, defense counsel has a duty to conduct a reasonable investigation into medical and mental health, have such problems fully assessed and, if necessary, retain qualified experts to testify, failure to do so is ineffective assistance, State v. Fedoruk, 184 Wn.App. 866, 878-84 (2014), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 142 Wn.2d 710, 732-57 (2001)

Counsel's decision to "admit guilt" in penalty phase of capital trial falls "within the exclusive province of the lawyer," at 736, 1 ABA, STANDARDS FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE std. 4-5.2 (2nd ed. Supp. 1986), see: State v. Molina, 16 Wn.App.2d 908 (2021), but see: McCoy v. Louisiana, 584 U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 1500, 200 L.Ed.2d 821 (2018); failure or refusal of counsel to call witnesses requested by the defendant is not, by itself, ineffective assistance, as the decision to call witnesses rests with counsel, not with the defendant, at 741, Taylor v. Illinois, 98 L.Ed.2d 798 (1988), State v. Piche, 71 Wn.2d 583, 590 (1967); see: State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668 (1997); 8-1.

Glover v. United States, 148 L.Ed.2d 604 (2001)

Sentencing guideline error, not raised at sentencing or on appeal, is prejudicial, Strickland v. Washington, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Hernandez-Hernandez, 104 Wn.App. 263 (2001)

At sentencing, where defense presents mitigating factors but does not seek an exceptional sentence, counsel was effective, as trial court had authority to impose exceptional sentence on its own, but see: State v. McGill, 112 Wn.App. 95 (2002); III.

State v. Wicker, 105 Wn.App. 428 (2001)

Failure of counsel to timely comply with client's request to file a motion for revision 2 'from a trial before a commissioner is ineffective assistance; I.

State v. Silva, 106 Wn.App. 586 (2001)

Defense counsel's conceding guilt during closing argument to some charges for strategic purpose is not ineffective assistance, cf.: Wiley v. Sowders, 647 F.2d. 642, 644 (6th Cir. 1981); I.

State v. Lopez, 107 Wn.App. 270, 275-78 (2001)

In unlawful possession of firearm case, RCW 9.41.040, state offers no evidence of prior conviction of serious offense in its case-in-chief, defense counsel neglects to move to dismiss, defendant testifies and admits to prior serious offense; held: no tactical or strategic reason could flow from counsel's failure, defendant was prejudiced, thus reversed; III.

State v. McGill, 112 Wn.App. 95, 101-02 (2002)

Failure to cite relevant caselaw in support of an exceptional sentence is ineffective assistance, depriving trial court of making an informed decision, but see: State v. Hernandez-Hernandez, 104 Wn.App. 263 (2001), State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 957-58 (2013); I.

State v. Shaver, 116 Wn.App. 375, 381-85 (2003)

Counsel's failure to learn that defendant had a prior out-of-state drug conviction and thus failure to move in limine to exclude defendant's impeachment is ineffective assistance; 2-1, III.

State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003)

In rape of a child trial, complainant denies on direct that she had previously engaged in sexual intercourse, defense does not ask on cross to explain or deny her pretrial statement to the contrary, defense allows witness to be excused, ER 612(b), offers extrinsic evidence of inconsistency which is refused because witness was not given opportunity to explain or deny, ER 613(b); held: because foundation for impeachment may be laid during cross or after extrinsic evidence is admitted by recalling the witness, State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63-72 (1998), counsel's performance was deficient; failure to object to prosecutor's closing that state believes defendant lied is ineffective assistance, see: State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340, 343-44 (1985), rev'd, on other grounds, 111 Wn.2d 641 (1988); II.

State v. Rodriguez, 121 Wn.App. 180, 184 (2004)

Proposing a flawed self-defense instruction is ineffective assistance, State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009), but see: State v. Lucero, 140 Wn.App. 782, 785-87 (2007), 152 Wn.App. 287, 291-92 (2009); III.

State v. Webbe, 122 Wn.App. 683 (2004)

Defendant demands a jury trial on competency, RCW 10.77.090(4), defense counsel proposes to testify as to his opinion that defendant is not competent, trial court decides that, if counsel testifies, defendant has waived the attorney-client privilege, orders defense to turn over client interview notes to prosecutor as discovery, later appoints guardian ad litem to determine whether defendant should waive his privilege for purposes of competency hearing, guardian informs court that it is not in defendant's best interests to waive privilege, court orders prosecutors to return interview notes, defense counsel does not testify, defendant found competent, challenges involuntary waiver on appeal; held: trial court has inherent authority to appoint guardian ad litem; while court should have inquired of counsel whether defendant actually waived prior to ordering discovery of counsel's notes, because counsel was acting as a vigorous, loyal advocate, defendant must show prejudice for counsel's improperly allowing court to assume waiver when it did not exist; because defendant's testimony was consistent with notes, no prejudice occurred; I.

Florida v. Nixon, 160 L.Ed.2d 565 (2004)

In capital murder case, defendant neither approves nor protests defense counsel's disclosed strategy to admit the crime during the fact-finding stage and focus on mitigation during penalty phase; held: there is no presumption of deficient performance where counsel's representation does not fall below an objective standard of reasonableness, Strickland v. Washington, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984), where counsel has discussed potential strategies with the defendant who does not expressly consent to a tenable strategy, cf.: McCoy v. Louisiana, 584 U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 1500, 200 L.Ed.2d 821 (2018), State v. Molina, 16 Wn.App.2d 908 (2021), distinguishing United States v. Cronic, 80 L.Ed.2d 657 (1984); 8-0.

State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713 (2005)

In unlawful possession of firearm case, trial court instructs that state must prove knowledge, State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357, 366 (2000), and gives defense proposed instruction on unwitting possession; held: because jury was misled to believe defendant had the burden, defendant was prejudiced by ineffective assistance; 2-1, III.

State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 605-10 (2005)

Failure of defense counsel to investigate child luring defendant's claim that he was where he was in order to make a doctor's appointment rather than trolling to lure children where, after trial, evidence is shown that defendant did have such an appointment is ineffective assistance; failure to object to hearsay that defendant did not have such an appointment is ineffective assistance; II.

State v. Cross, 156 Wn.2d 580, 605-10 (2006)

In capital penalty phase, defense presents mental health evidence over defendant's objection; held: details of strategy are generally for counsel, not the client, to decide; when the relationship between lawyer and client completely collapses, the refusal to substitue new counsel is a violation of Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance, Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 142 Wn.2d 710, 722 (2001), however there is a difference between a complete collapse and mere lack of accord, see: Morris v. Slappy, 75 L.Ed.2d 610 (1983), State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709, 729 ¶ 43 (2006), State v. Schaller, 143 Wn.App. 258 (2007) , State v. Lindsey, 188 Wn.App. 233, 248-50 (2013), State v. Elwell, 199 Wn.2d 256 (2022); 5-4.

State v. Riofta, 134 Wn.App. 669, 692-96 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 166 Wn.2d 358 (2009)

Failure of defense counsel to seek DNA testing here was not ineffective assistance as legitimate tactical reasons support the decision, specifically that there was significant evidence of guilt and that counsel "likely feared that Riofta's DNA would be discovered…inculpating Riofta beyond a reasonable doubt," but see: CrR 3.1(f)(2); II.

State v. Crawford, 159 Wn.2d 86 (2006)

Neither prosecutor nor defense counsel are aware before trial that out-of-state priors were strikes, defense is aware of out-of-state conviction but does not investigate it to determine if it's a strike, defendant rejects plea bargain believing standard range is 57-75 months, is convicted at trial and sentenced to life without parole; held: failure to investigate and advise defendant of mandatory minimum sentence, while deficient, is not ineffective assistance, as defense failed to "affirmatively prove prejudice, not simply show that the 'errors had some conceivable effect on the outcome,'" Strickland v. Washington, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984), but see: Pers. Restraint of Crawford, 150 Wn.App. 787 (2009), State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450 (2017), Pers. Restraint of James, 190 Wn.2d 686 (2018); reverses State v. Crawford, 128 Wn.App. 376 (2005); 5-4.

State v. B.J.S., 137 Wn.App. 622, 631-33 (2007)

After juvenile is found guilty of burglary at a trial, defense counsel moves for a deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127(1), and, when informed that the motion was untimely, respondent alleges ineffective assistance; held: while counsel's failure to advise client properly fell below an objective standard of reasonableness, satisfying first prong of Strickland v. Washington, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984), there is nothing to show that the juvenile court judge would have deferred disposition had he moved for it in a timely fashion, thus respondent did not establish the prejudice prong, see: State v. Cox, 109 Wn.App. 937, 941 (2002); II.

State v. Varnell, 137 Wn.App. 925, 931-33 (2007)

Defense counsel has implied authority to waive procedural matters on client's behalf, here a drug court termination hearing where defendant asked in open court to be terminated, see: State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919, 922 (1995), State v. Fanger, 34 Wn.App. 635, 637 (1983); II.

Pers. Restraint of Elmore, 162 Wn.2d 236, 259-61 (2007)

While counsel is obliged to object to shackling of defendant, Pers. Restraint of Davis, 152 Wn.2d 647, 699 (2004), shackling here was harmless as he was only shackled on first day of penalty phase jury selection, trial strategy was to demonstrate remorse and accept responsibility, but see: State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020); 8-1.

Pers. Restraint of Hubert, 138 Wn.App. 924 (2007)

Defendant is convicted of attempted rape 2º for raping a drunk woman, defense counsel fails to offer instruction on the defense that defendant reasonably believed the person was not mentally incapacitated, RCW 9A.44.030(1); held: it is ineffective assistance for counsel to fail to advance a defense authorized by statute where there is evidence to support the defense, State v. Powell, 150 Wn.App. 139 (2009); I.

State v. B.J.S., 140 Wn.App. 91, 100-02 (2007)

Defense counsel erroneously advises respondent that he is eligible for a deferred disposition, RCW 13.40.127(1), if convicted after a trial; held: in light of trial court's comments in favor of rehabilitation, it is likely it would have "preferred" a deferred disposition, thus counsel's error establishes prejudice; II.

State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357, 375-77 (2007)

While it is ineffective assistance for an attorney to actually prevent a defendant from testifying, defendant must prove the attorney refused to allow him to testify in the face of defendant's unequivocal demands that he be allowed to testify, State v. Robinson, 138 Wn.2d 753 (1999), see also: State v. Lee, 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020); I.

State v. Castro, 141 Wn.App. 485, 492-93 (2007)

In child molestation case, defense counsel does not challenge for cause a juror who disclosed during voir dire that she had been molested but declared she could be impartial; held: it is a legitimate trial strategy not to challenge a juror who states she can be impartial; III.

State v. Hicks, 163 Wn.2d 477, 486-89 (2008), overruled, State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

Defense counsel informing a jury in a non-capital murder case that the death penalty is not an option, State v. Townsend, 142 Wn.2d 838 (2001), State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 929 (2007), and failing to object when the trial court and prosecution make a similar reference is ineffective assistance, but see: State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 774-81 (2012), State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641 (2017), harmless here; 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Reise, 146 Wn.App. 772, 786-89 (2008)

Defendant's claim that defense counsel misinformed him of the sentence that would be imposed is not a basis to withdraw a plea where the guilty plea statement and the court at the time of entry of the plea correctly advised defendant of the range; alleged misinformation about good time is a collateral consequence and, absent a showing that defendant would not have pled guilty otherwise is not a basis to withdraw plea, State v. Stowe, 71 Wn.App. 415, 418-22 (1997), State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844 (2002); 7-2182 (1993); defendant's claim that defense counsel told him he would be paroled, which is a direct consequence of a plea, is "so outrageous that it is not credible on its face," at 789 ¶ 28; II.

Knowles v. Mirzayance, 173 L.Ed.2d 251 (2009)

Counsel's recommending withdrawal of insanity plea that he "reasonably believed was a claim doomed to fail," even with nothing to lose by pursuing it, is not ineffective assistance; 9-0.

State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 883-88 (2009)

Failure to seek severance of counts where there is a reasonable probability that trial court would have granted the motion and outcome at a separate trial would have been different is ineffective assistance; 6-3.

State v. Kyllo, 166 Wn.2d 856 (2009)

If instructional error is the result of ineffective assistance of counsel, the invited error doctrine does not preclude review, State v. Aho, 137 Wn.2d 736, 745 (1999), but see: State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533 (1999), Seattle v. Patu, 147 Wn.2d 717 (2002); in a non-homicide self defense case, where defense proposes and court gives an "act on appearances" instruction, WPIC 17.04, but substitutes "injury" with "great bodily injury," it is ineffective assistance; 9-0.

State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66, 89-94 (2009)

Failure to request a limiting instruction for ER 404(b) evidence may be a legitimate tactical decision and thus is not ineffective assistance, State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 762-63 (2012), State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708, 719-21 (2014); II.

Pers. Restraint of Nichols, 151 Wn.App. 262, 272-75 (2009)

Where counsel moves to suppress evidence on one ground but does not anticipate a law change on a different ground, it is not ineffective assistance, State v. Nichols, 161 Wn.2d 1, 15 (2007), State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 551 (1999); I.

State v. A.N.J., 168 Wn.2d 91 (2010)

Twelve-year old respondent pleads guilty to child molestation 1°, counsel having erroneously advised respondent that he "believes" the conviction may be removed from his record, only speaks to respondent in the presence of his parents, does no investigation, trial court fails to ascertain if respondent understood that mere contact with the genitals of another is not sufficient to prove the crime; held: juvenile sex offenses never go away, RCW 9.94A.525(2) (2008), while failure to advise that the conviction would remain on respondent's record may not rise to a manifest injustice itself, where respondent is misinformed, he should be allowed to withdraw his plea; failure of counsel to consult with a client in a confidential manner is a factor that may be considered in determining whether a plea is voluntary; public defense contract that requires counsel to pay investigative, expert and conflict fees out of the defender's fees is evidence of ineffective assistance; 9-0.

State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 364-70 (2010)

In this murder 1° case, it was not objectively unreasonable for counsel to pursue a strategy of acquittal only and not request a murder 2° lesser instruction, State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011), State v. Hassan, 151 Wn.App. 209 (2009), State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 539-44 (2018), distinguishing, State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004), State v. Pittman, 134 Wn.App. 376, 387-90 (2006); I.

Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86 178 L.Ed.2d 624 (2011)

Habeas petitioner argues that defense counsel failed to consult blood evidence experts; held: appellate courts must avoid second-guessing counsel's assistance, Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 689, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984), should evaluate conduct from counsel's perspective at the time; "[e]ven if it had been apparent that expert blood testimony could support Richter's defense, it would be reasonable to conclude that a competent attorney might elect not to use it," 178 L.Ed.2d at 644; "[j]ust as there is no expectation that competent counsel will be a flawless strategist or tactician, an attorney may not be faulted for a reasonable miscalculation or lack of foresight or for failing to prepare for what appear to be remote possibilities," 178 L.Ed.2d at 646, see also: Premo v. Moore, 562 U.S. 115, 178 L.Ed.2d 649 (2011); 8-0.

State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011)

In murder case, counsel submits manslaughter lessers then withdraws them, defendant agrees on the record upon inquiry of the court, counsel argues self defense and reasonable doubt, defendant is convicted, appeals claiming ineffective assistance for failure to request lessers; held: decision whether or not to seek lessers is a tactical decision by counsel with consultation with client, defendant's waiver does not preclude a claim of ineffective assistance; choosing not to request lessers is a tactical decision by counsel and is not ineffective assistance; counsel's decision to proceed with an all or nothing approach is a proper tactic regardless of the lesser penalty of the lesser, State v. Conway, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 257 (2022), cf.: State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 539-44 (2018), reversing State v. Grier, 150 Wn.App. 619 (2009), overruling State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 243 (2004), State v. Pittman, 134 Wn.App. 376, 387-90 (2006); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Monschke, 160 Wn.App. 479 (2011)

Defense counsel's strategic decision to call an expert with whom counsel meets right before trial is not ineffective even if the witness volunteers information from the stand which arguably damages defendant; there is no absolute requirement that counsel interview witnesses before trial, Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 488 (1998), Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 142 Wn.2d 710, 754-57 (2001); II.

State v. Larson, 160 Wn.App. 577, 589-90 (2011)

Failure to subpoena a jailed co-defendant who had pleaded guilty inculpating defendant but who also made statements exculpating defendant is not ineffective assistance as it was a reasonable tactic, balancing positive effect of exculpatory evidence against negative effect of prior incriminating evidence; III.

State v. Chavez, 162 Wn.App. 431 (2011)

Defense counsel advises court that he has a conflict of interest, court permits him to withdraw from one count that was severed but not on other counts, defendant pleads guilty then seeks to withdraw plea, court appoints another lawyer who files what he calls an Anders brief, Anders v. California, 386 U.S. 738, 18 L.Ed.2d 493 (1967), declaring there are no non-frivolous grounds to withdraw plea, trial court denies motion; held: combination of conflict that was inadequately developed by trial court, Mickens v. Taylor, 535 U.S. 162, 167, 152 L.Ed.2d 291 (2002), Holloway v. Arkansas, 435 U.S. 475, 55 L.Ed.2d 426 (1978), plus new counsel's effective abandonment of defendant's motion requires remand for trial court to take a "second look at the motion to withdraw" the plea; 2-1, III.

Missouri v. Frye, 566 U.S. 134, 182 L.Ed.2d 379 (2012)

Where prosecutor makes a formal plea offer, favorable to the defendant, with a fixed expiration date, counsel's failure to communicate the offer to the client is ineffective assistance; to get relief, defendant must show a reasonable probability he would have accepted the plea offer and that there is a reasonable probability that the prosecutor would not have withdrawn it and that the trial court would have accepted the offer; formal plea offers may be made part of the record; 6-3.

Lafler v. Cooper, 566 U.S. 156, 163, 132 S.Ct. 1376, 182 L.Ed.2d 398 (2012)

Counsel communicates a favorable plea offer to client and advises client to reject it, defendant is convicted and receives a harsher sentence, parties concede on appeal that counsel's advice to reject the plea offer was based upon an erroneous reading of the law and thus was ineffective; held: where ineffective advice leads to a plea offer's rejection, conviction at trial and a harsher sentence, defendant must show that there is a reasonable probability that defendant would have pleaded guilty and that the sentence would have been less; remedy may be resentencing or, if the plea offer was to a lesser charge, court may order prosecutor to reoffer the plea proposal, State v. Drath, 7 Wn.App.2d 255 (2018); court leaves open the scenario that, after the plea is rejected, prosecutor learns of new information about defendant's culpability; 5-4.

State v. Perez, 166 Wn.App. 55, 61-63 (2012)

In eluding case, defendant testified that he did not see lights or hear a siren, defense counsel did not request an instruction on the affirmative defense that a reasonable person would not believe the signal to stop was given by a police officer, RCW 46.61.024(2) (2010); held:

defendant must show that counsel's failure to request the instruction was other than tactical, defendant would have had to prove the affirmative defense, state had to prove that conduct was willful; III.

State v. Chetty, 167 Wn.App. 432 (2012)

Following stipulated facts trial in 2004, defendant-resident alien does not appeal, after deportation proceedings are commenced defendant seeks to extend perior of time to appeal, avers that counsel did not advise that he was deportable, that counsel said an appeal was a waste of time, and that if immigration issues arose I should not volunteer information; held: failure to provide advice on deportation consequences of a plea being ineffective assistance, State v. Sandoval, 171 Wn.2d 163 (2011), Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), see: Chaidez v. United States, 568 U.S. 342, 185 L.Ed.2d 149 (2013), failure to so advise may impact proper advice regarding right to appeal, remanded for evidentiary hearing as to whether counsel's performance was deficient and whether defendant knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently waived right to appeal, see: State v. Chetty, 184 Wn.App. 607 (2014); I.

State v. Gomez Cervantes, 169 Wn.App. 428 (2012)

In a motion to vacate a judgment and sentence, CrR 7.8, a bare statement that "counsel did not inform him of the immigration implications of his plea" is insufficient to show the "deficient performance" prong to establish ineffective assistance, see: Pers. Restraint of Rice, 117 Wn.2d 876, 886 (1992); III.

State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 393-400 (2012)

Prior to child molestation trial, state offers a SSOSA, defense counsel explains the offer to defendant and recommends against it, defendant is convicted, argues inadequate advice; held: while effective assistance extends to plea negotiations, Lafler v. Cooper, 566 U.S. 156, 163, 132 S.Ct. 1376, 182 L.Ed.2d 398 (2012), Missouri v. Frye, 566 U.S. 134, 182 L.Ed.2d 379 (2012), Pers. Restraint of James, 190 Wn.2d 686 (2018), see: Burt v. Titlow, 571 U.S. 12, 187 L.Ed.2d 348 (2013), State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450 (2017), where evidence establishes that counsel reasonably evaluated the evidence and where defendant does not show a reasonable probability that he would have accepted a plea agreement, counsel's representation does not prejudice defendant; where counsel does not submit instructions for a lesser included offense, defendant's assertion that counsel did not consult him and his post-trial declaration that he would have asked counsel to seek a lesser is hindsight, absent evidence in the record of a failure to consult, defense has not established the counsel's performance was deficient, State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011); II.

Pers. Restraint of Morris, 176 Wn.2d 157, 165-68 (2012)

Appellate counsel's failure to raise a public trial right violation is ineffective assistance, but see: Pers. Restraint of Speight, 182 Wn.2d 103 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Coggin, 182 Wn.2d 115 (2014), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Eagle, 195 Wn.App. 51 (2016), but see: Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S. Ct. 1899, 1905, 198 L. Ed. 2d 420 (2017), Pers. Restraint of Salinas, 189 Wn.2d 747 (2018); 5-4.

Hinton v. Alabama, 571 U.S. 263,188 L.Ed.2d 1 (2014)

Defense counsel, erroneously believing that there was a cap on what could be appropriated to hire an expert, retains a one-eyed firearms examiner who is badly impeached on cross; held: while selection of an expert witness is a strategic decision that is "virtually unchallengeable," counsel's error of law which caused him to retain an expert that counsel agreed was inadequate was ineffective assistance; per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Gomez, 180 Wn.2d 337 (2014)

Failure of counsel to meet prevailing professional standards, here Washington Defender Association's Standards for Public Defense Services, endorsed by WSBA Board of Governors, may serve as a guide for determining what is reasonable but is not a checklist for evaluating attorney performance, at 351-52; allegation that defense counsel used unqualified interpreters in speaking with defendant is not error unless defense shows defendant was prejudiced, at 353-54; where counsel obtains an expert who generally supports defense theory of the case it is not ineffective assistance if counsel did not search the entire country for experts or find multiple witness who could provide the most favorable opinion, at 356-57; 5-4.

State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708 (2014)

Failure of defense counsel to request a limiting instruction regarding a prior conviction is presumed to be a reasonable tactical decision; 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of D'Allesandro, 178 Wn.App. 457 (2013)

Failure to raise a valid public trial issue in a petition for review from direct appeal is ineffective assistance; II.

State v . Cobos, 178 Wn.App. 692 (2013), aff'd, on other grounds, 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014)

Defendant moves to represent himself at sentencing, before court approves defense counsel agrees to offender score of 9, at sentencing defendant objects to offender score, court offers continuance for state to prove priors, defendant declines, court accepts counsel's agreement; held: counsel's agreement while defendant's motion to represent himself was improper, Haller v. Wallis, 89 Wn.2d 539, 547 (1978), as an attorney can waive substantive rights only with specific authorization, State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919, 922 (1995), Graves v. P.J. Taggares Co., 94 Wn.2d 298, 303 (1980), State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 553, 556-57 (1983); III.

State v. Kloepper, 179 Wn.App. 343, 354-56 (2014)

Officer testifies that defendant's photograph is in a system used to record contacts with police, counsel does not object; held: the decision of when or whether to object is a "classic example of trial tactics. Only in egregious circumstances, on testimony central to the State's case, will the failure to object constitute incompetence of counsel," State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754, 763 (1989); 2-1, III.

State v. Carson, 179 Wn.App. 961, 972-80 (2014)

In 3-count child rape case with identical to convict instructions defense counsel objects to unanimity instruction, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State

v. Kitchen, 110 Wn.2d 403 (1988), arguing it's unnecessary and confusing, trial court doesn't so instruct, on appeal defense raises ineffective assistance; held: invited error doctrine precludes claiming error, State v. Corbett, 158 Wn.App. 576, 585-92 (2010), counsel's decision was a reasonable trial strategy; 2-1, II.

State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.App. 92, 105-07 (2014)

Over objection of the defendant, defense counsel recommends high end of standard range which court imposes; held: "even assuming defense counsel's performance was deficient," defense fails to show prejudice as sentencing judge considered factors supporting a more lenient sentence and exercised its broad discretion thus defendant failed to show a reasonable probability that any defective performance affected the sentence, State v. Goldberg, 123 Wn.App. 848, 853 (2004); I.

Pers. Restraint of Ramos, 181 Wn.App. 743 (2014)

Defendant pleads guilty to theft 1° in 1997, told in plea statement that a plea of guilty may result in deportation, filed PRP seeking to vacate plea maintaining counsel did not inquire as to immigration consequences and that he is subject to mandatory deportation; held: Court of Appeals role is to decide "on our own" if defendant's conviction is one for an "aggravated felony," an immigration lawyer's opinion is not binding as questions of law are not the subject of expert testimony; as fraud and deceit "did not infect" defendant's theft per probable cause affidavit or plea, crime is not an aggravated felony nor does it involve moral turpitude, if the law is not succinct and straightforward, counsel must provide only a general warning of a risk of adverse immigration consequences, Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 369, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), see: State v. Sandoval, 171 Wn.2d 163 (2011), thus counsel was not ineffective, PRP denied; III.

Woods v. Donald, 575 U.S. 312, 135 S.Ct. 464, 191 L.Ed.2d 464 (2015)

Counsel's brief absence from court during testimony regarding codefendants is not a per se violation of the Sixth Amendment; per curiam.

Pers. Restraint of Yung-Cheng Tsai, 183 Wn.2d 91 (2015)

Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), requiring counsel to provide advice about risk of deportation, is retroactive in Washington, Pers. Restraint of Orantes, 197 Wn.App. 737 (2017), Pers. Restraint of Garcia-Mendoza, 196 Wn.2d 836 (2021), distinguishing Chaidez v. United States, 568 U.S. 342, 185 L.Ed.2d 149 (2013); affirms Pers. Restraint of Jagana, 170 Wn.App. 32 (2012); 5-4.

State v. Maynard, 183 Wn.2d 253 (2015)

Charge filed before respondent turns 18, defense fails to seek extension of jurisdiction, court dismisses after respondent's birthday, charge is refiled in adult court which dismisses for ineffective assistance of counsel; held: because juvenile court did not lose jurisdiction because of pre-accusatorial delay, State v. Dixon, 114 Wn.2d 857, 860-61 (1990), here the charge was filed affording respondent opportunity to seek extension, thus delay is not a basis to dismiss; counsel was ineffective, defendant was prejudiced, remedy is to remand for further proceedings in accordance with Juvenile Justice Act, state is ordered to reoffer plea proposal of deferred disposition, trial court may impose a juvenile disposition, State v. Posey, 174 Wn.2d 131 (2012), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Dalluge, 152 Wn.2d 772 (2004); reverses, in part, State v. Maynard, 178 Wn.App. 413 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Jones*,* 183 Wn.2d 327 (2015)

Failure to interview identified witnesses is deficient performance absent some reason from defense counsel why the witnesses were not interviewed; an uninformed or unreasonable failure to interview a witness is not a strategic decision to which courts must defer; here, the case involved a credibility contest and, while the state's witnesses outnumbered defense witnesses even if the uninterviewed witnesses had been called, there is a reasonable probability that it would have affected the outcome, undermining supreme court's confidence in the verdict rejecting self-defense claim; 5-4.

State v. Carson*,* 184 Wn.2d 207 (2015)

In 3-count child rape case with identical to convict instructions defense counsel objects to unanimity instruction, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State v. Kitchen, 110 Wn.2d 403 (1988), arguing it's unnecessary and confusing, trial court doesn't so instruct, on appeal defense raises ineffective assistance; held: invited error doctrine precludes claiming error, State v. Corbett, 158 Wn.App. 576, 585-92 (2010), counsel's decision was a reasonable trial strategy; affirms State v. Carson, 179 Wn.App. 961, 972-80 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Fedoruk,184 Wn.App. 866, 878-884 (2014)

Shortly before trial defense moves for continuance to pursue mental illness defense, defendant having been previously acquitted of crimes by reason of insanity and having been civilly committed, trial court denies continuance; held: failure to investigate a mental health defense where the record establishes the crime was bizarre, a competency evaluation showed a major mental illness and a history of mental illness is ineffective assistance, Pers. Restraint of Brett, 142 Wn.2d 868 (2001), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); II.

State v. West*,* 185 Wn.App. 625 (2015)

Failure to make a motion to acquit, RCW 10.77.080 (1998), is not ineffective assistance where, here, jury rejected defendant's insanity defense; III.

State v. Lawler*,* 194 Wn.App. 275 (2016)

Juror expresses doubt that he can be objective, defense counsel does not challenge for cause or exercise peremptory challenge; held: because defense cannot establish the absence of any conceivable legitimate tactic for not excusing a juror defense has not overcome the presumption of effective performance; II.

Pers. Restraint of Eagle*,* 195 Wn.App. 51 (2016)

Arraignment on amended information in chambers violates public trial right absent Boneclub findings but on collateral review defense must show prejudice, Pers. Restraint of

Speight, 182 Wn.2d 103 (2014), absent here; while failure to raise a public trial issue on direct appeal is ineffective assistance and prejudice need not be proved by defense, Pers. Restraint of Speight, 182 Wn.2d 103 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Morris, 176 Wn.2d 157, 166 (2012), remedy is not automatically a new trial, Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S. Ct. 1899, 1905, 198 L. Ed. 2d 420 (2017), Pers. Restraint of Salinas, 189 Wn.2d 747 (2018), unless the public trial right was violated during the trial itself, State v. Rainey, 180 Wn.App 830, 843 (2014), Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 81 L.Ed.2d 31 (1984), most defendant is entitled to is a public arraignment; I.

State v. Ortiz, 196 Wn.App. 301 (2016)

Failure to raise a meritorious knock and announce violation is ineffective assistance; III.

Pers. Restraint of Caldwell's, 187 Wn.2d 127, 140-43 (2016)

In murder by extreme indifference case, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b) (1990), defense counsel's failure to request self-defense instruction and instead argues excusable homicide is a legitimate trial tactic; one cannot "kill by accident and claim that the homicide was justifiable." State v. Brightman, 155 Wn.2d 506, 525, 122 P.3d 150 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Flores, 197 Wn.App. 1 (2016)

Defendant is represented by a lawyer who does not meet the Standards for Indigent Defense (SID), CrR 3.1 ff., requisite experience; held: violation of SID is evidence of deficient performance but does not constitute ineffective assistance per se; III.

Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S. Ct. 1899, 1905, 198 L. Ed. 2d 420 (2017)

While violation of open courts doctrine is structural error, when raised in the context of ineffective assistance because it was not preserved defense must prove prejudice, State v. Salinas, 189 Wn.2d 747 (2018); 7-2.

State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450 (2017)

Defense counsel, unaware that conviction of any felony with a deadly weapon enhancement is a strike offense, RCW 9.94A.030(33)(t) (2000), -.570 (2016), does not plea bargain, defendant is convicted of lesser assault 3° with a deadly weapon, sentenced to life without parole; held: where failure to plea bargain is based on ignorance of the law and failure to advise of the potential consequences of failing to negotiate, prejudice is demonstrated and counsel is ineffective, State v. James, 48 Wn.App. 353 (1987), cf.: State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379 (2012), State v. Crawford, 159 Wn.2d 86, 100 (2006), Pers. Restraint of James, 190 Wn.2d 686 (2018), see: State v. Drath, 7 Wn.App.2d 255 (2018); affirms State v. Estes, 193 Wn.App. 479 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641 (2017), overruled, State v. Pierce, 195 Wn.2d 230 (2020)

In non-capital murder case court invites counsel to handle issue of telling jury it's not a death penalty case as appropriate, state informs some jurors during individual voir dire, defense does not object; held: absent proof of prejudice informing jury that a murder case is not a death penalty case is not ineffective assistance, but see: State v. Townsend, 142 Wn.2d 838, 846-49 (2017); 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Sanchez, 197 Wn.App. 686 (2017)

At arraignment on aggravated murder charge counsel does not appear, photographers are present and film, court enters not guilty plea for defendant, case is based, in part, on eyewitness identification, witness may have seen press coverage before identification is made; held: arraignment is a critical stage, Hamilton v. Alabama, 368 U.S. 52, 82 S.Ct,. 157, 7 L.Ed.2d 114 (1961), Powell v. Alabama, 287 U.S. 45, 57, 69, 53 S.Ct. 55, 77 L.Ed. 158 (1932), CrR 3.1(b)(1), failure to provide counsel is arguably structural error, but see: State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018), but constitutional harmless error analysis applies, absent a risk of waiving rights or foregoing defenses it is harmless, see: State v. Jackson, 66 Wn.2d 24 (1965); record does not establish what was filmed or broadcast from the arraignment, defense cross-examined eyewitness about possible misidentification, thus error, if any, was harmless; III.

McCoy v. Louisiana, 584 U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 1500, 200 L.Ed.2d 821 (2018)

Defendant denies guilt to counsel and testifies to innocence in spite of overwhelming evidence to the contrary, counsel argues to jury that defendant committed the crime but seeks lesser, jury convicts of greater; held: Sixth Amendment guarantees a defendant the right to choose the objective of his defense and to insist that his counsel refrain from admitting guilt, even when counsel's experienced-based view is that confessing guilt offers the defendant the best chance to avoid the death penalty, cf.: State v. Molina, 16 Wn.App.2d 908 (2021), distinguishing Florida v. Nixon, 160 L.Ed.2d 565 (2004); counsel's admission of a client's guilt over the client's express objection is error "structural in kind;" 6-3.

State v. Lopez, 190 Wn.2d 104, 410 P.3d 1117 (2018)

Trial judge grants new trial, finding that defense counsel was depressed which severely handicapped his performance, failed to appear in court regularly, failed to complete investigation and request funding to complete investigative tasks that he had ordered, based upon judge's observations of counsel at trial, evidence from counsel's mental health provider, and testimony of investigator; held: while mental illness alone is not a basis to find ineffective assistance but coupled with poor trial performance and failure to adequately investigate supports motion for a new trial; 5-4.

State v. Linville, 191 Wn.2d 513 (2018)

Defendant is convicted of one count of "leading organized crime," in violation of Washington's Criminal Profiteering Act (CPA), RCW 9A.82.060(l)(a), plus 137 other offenses, some of which were crimes listed in RCW 9A.82.010(4) as predicate offenses, which, when combined, form the requisite "pattern of criminal profiteering" on which the umbrella crime called "leading organized crime" is based but some of these 137 other offenses were not listed in RCW 9A.82.010(4) as predicate crimes, RCW 9A.82.085 ("joinder bar") prohibits joinder of non-predicate crimes in a single prosecution, defense does not move to sever, defendant claims ineffective assistance on appeal; held: while the statutory list of predicate profiteering crimes is exclusive and thus defendant would have had a right to a severance, the record fails to reflect why defense counsel failed to object, which could have been tactical to avoid separate convictions and sentencings which can only be established by collateral attack; reverses State v. Linville, 199 Wn.App. 461 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Salas, 1 Wn.App.2d 931, 947-52 (2018)

Where defendant makes an incriminating statement to a physician examining him, and defense counsel does not object, defense has been ineffective; I.

Pers. Restraint of Burlingame, 3 Wn.App.2d 600 (2018)

Defendant is charged with rape 3°, defense counsel has discovery prior to arraignment, defendant wants to plead guilty but is advised not to because defense counsel thought state might amend to a gross misdemeanor, defendant declines to enter a plea, trial court enters plea of not guilty, state later is granted leave to amend to rape 2° to which defendant pleaded guilty and is sentenced to indeterminate life sentence; held: CrR 4.2(a) provides a defendant with the right to plead guilty at arraignment, State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1, 4 (1980), "[g]iven the evident risk of an amendment to a higher charge, the strength of the State's evidence for the higher charge, its harsh consequences, and Mr. Burlingame's demonstrated interest in pleading guilty at arraignment, we conclude that competent counsel would have advised Mr. Burlingame of his one-time right to plead guilty as charged without the agreement of the prosecutor—even if the lawyer's recommendation was that Mr. Burlingame not plead guilty," at 610; III.

State v. Davis, 3 Wn.App.2d 763 (2018)

Failure to provide defendant with a copy of discovery is not ineffective assistance as a represented defendant does not have the right to discovery, CrR 4.7(h)(3) (2007), or access to a law library; while CrR 4.7(a)(1)(iv) requires the state to disclose "to the defendant" any expert reports," providing same to counsel meets that requirement, at 783-86; I.

State v. Backemeyer, 5 Wn.App.2d 841 (2018)

During deliberations jury sends out questions which clearly establish that they did not understand the self defense instructions, defense counsel agrees with suggestion that court answer the questions with "read your instructions;" held: where a jury indicates that it does not understand a jury instruction, court must eliminate the confusion, . Bollenbach v. United States, 326 U.S. 607, 612-13, 66 S.Ct. 402, 90 L.Ed. 350 (1946), cf.: State v. Sutton, 18 Wn.App.2d 38 (2021), and counsel's failure to ask court to re-instruct to clear up the confusion is ineffective assistance; 2-1, III.

State v. Drath, 7 Wn.App.2d 255 (2018)

After conviction and sentence to 128 months new counsel moves for a new trial, at hearing evidence shows that defendant was offered a plea to 50 months which, she testifies, she "would have considered," various defense counsel testify that they misadvised as to sentence range if convicted; held: deprivation of the ability to make an informed decision due to counsels' errors is prejudicial ineffective assistance, Lafler v. Cooper, 566 U.S. 156, 163, 132 S.Ct. 1376, 182 L.Ed.2d 398 (2012), State v. Estes, 188 Wn.2d 450, 457 (2017), test is whether there is a reasonable probability, lower than a preponderance, that the result would have been different, defendant need not say that she definitely would have pleaded guilty; remedy is remand for either resentencing or for an order requiring prosecutor to reoffer the plea proposal, trial court may reject the plea bargain and, if so, judgment and sentence stands; 2-1, II.

Garza v. Idaho, 568 U.S. __ , 139 S.Ct. 738, 203 L.Ed.2d 77 (2019)

Defendant pleads guilty, in plea form gives up right to appeal, tells trial counsel to file appeal, trial counsel declines stating that defendant waived; held: an appeal waiver doesn't give up the right to appeal all issues, thus counsel was ineffective for failure to file notice of appeal, Roe v. Flores-Ortega, 528 U. S. 470 (2000), Roe v. Flores-Ortega, 528 U. S. 470 (2000); 6-3.

State v. Vazquez, 198 Wn.2d 239 (2021)

In drug case counsel's failure to object to impeachment with prior drug convictions is not reasonable regardless of whether or not it is strategic, Roe v. Flores-Ortega, 528 U.S. 470, 481, 120 S. Ct. 1029, 145 L. Ed. 2d 985 (2000); counsel's failure to object to prosecutor's questioning witnesses that they were testifying even though they had been threatened, not by defendant, is ineffective as questions were improper bolstering, State v. Bourgeois, 133 Wn.2d 389 (1997)

State v. Molina, 16 Wn.App.2d 908 (2021)

In assault 2° case counsel argues in favor of a lesser, on appeal defendant claims ineffective assistance for not pursuing self defense; held: counsel's trial strategy is not ineffective assistance where defendant does not expressly object to counsel, see: Florida v. Nixon, 160 L.Ed.2d 565 (2004), cf.: McCoy v. Louisiana, —— U.S. ——, 138 S. Ct. 1500, 200 L. Ed. 2d 821 (2018); here, counsel did not negate defendant's autonomy by overriding his desired defense objective because he never asserted any such objective; I.

State v. Davis, 17 Wn.App.2d 264 (2021)

In response to defense counsel's question on cross witness arguably volunteers damaging information, defense counsel does not object to non-responsive answer; held: a decision to avoid emphasizing testimony with an objection can be purely tactical and entirely reasonable; I.

Pers. Restraint of Ayerst, 17 Wn.App.2d 356 (2021)

Defense counsel at trial is licensed in Idaho and was working under the supervision of a Washington attorney, after conviction WSBA files a complaint alleging he was not authorized to practice in Washington; held: while structural error applies to representation by a person who has never been licensed in any jurisdiction, here petitioner has not demonstrated that counsel's licensing problems were sufficient severe to require reversal, see: Seattle v. Ratliff, 100 Wn.2d 212 (1983), State v. Edison, 61 Wn.App. 530 (1991), at least for collateral relief; III.

State v. Clark, 17 Wn.App.2d 794 (2021)

Failure to move to change venue to a county with more Black people when representing a Black person is not ineffective assistance; failure to raise a novel argument does not render counsel's performance constitutionally ineffective, State v. Brown, 159 Wn.App. 366, 371-72 (2011), State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541 (2022); II.

State v. Elwell, 21 Wn.2d 914 (2022)

Defendant seeks new counsel as present counsel declined to bring a motion to suppress, concluding it was not "viable," defendant filed motion to suppress pro se, counsel agrees to question witnesses and argue the motion which is denied (albeit granted on appeal); held: a motion to suppress is a matter of strategy to be decided by counsel, not the client; here the hybrid type of representation was properly allowed even though defendant did not seek hybrid representation; a conflict over strategy is not the same as a conflict of interest, State v. Cross, 156 Wn.2d 580, 607 (2018) absent a complete collapse of the attorney-client relationship; counsel's failure to bring the motion to suppress is at most ineffective assistance, not a conflict of interest; 9-0.

Matter of Pheth, 20 Wn.App.2d 326 (2022)

Defendant's self-serving affidavit claiming that he told he trial counsel that he could not understand the interpreter is insufficient to establish prejudice where defendant makes no effort to obtain his trial counsel's version; I.

State v. Conway, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 257 (2022)

Foregoing a lesser-included offense instruction is a strategic decision and is thus not ineffective assistance, State v. Grier, 171 Wn.2d 17 (2011), cf.: State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 539-44 (2018); III.

State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023)

Defendant initiates a fight, arguably withdraws and disengages from it, victim follows defendant who has backed up against a wall, victim throws a "hard punch," defendant shoots and kills victim, court gives first aggressor instruction, defense counsel does not offer instruction on revived self-defense; held: "the right of self-defense is revived as to the aggressor if that person in good faith withdraws from the aggression in such time and manner as to clearly apprise the other person that they intend to disengage in further aggression," State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609 (1990), State v. Craig, 82 Wn.2d 777 (1973), counsel was ineffective for failing to propose such an instruction; I.

COUNSEL
Right to

State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436, remanded, 66 L.Ed.2d 240, aff'd, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980)
Must have access to attorney in DUI before taking breath test, see: Seattle v. Wakenight, 24 Wn.App. 48 (1979), Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991), State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001), State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), see: State v. Federov, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015); 9-0.

Seattle v. Box, 29 Wn.App. 109 (1981)
Police arrest DUI suspect, who calls his lawyer; lawyer has client tell police he will be at precinct in 20 minutes; upon arrival, lawyer is told client had been released when in fact client had been transported to jail; reversed as defendant denied reasonable access to counsel, see: Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991); I.

State v. Halbakken, 30 Wn.App. 834 (1981)
State has no burden to provide counsel following DUI arrest unless defendant requests counsel; I.

Tacoma v. Myhre, 32 Wn.App. 661 (1982)
Defendant arrested at 10:00 p.m. for DUI, is permitted by police to call his attorney's office, receives no answer; defendant requests permission to call his mother who has attorney's home phone, request refused by police; held: additional call would not have burdened police and was necessary to permit defendant to contact counsel, thus dismissed, State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012), but see: Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991); II.

Seattle v. Carpenito, 32 Wn.App. 809 (1982)
Following a DUI arrest, police must provide a defendant with access to a telephone and access to a telephone book in order to contact an attorney, police need not specifically provide defendant with the telephone number for the public defender, see; State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012); I.

Seattle v. Ratliff, 100 Wn.2d 212 (1983)
Trial court, in preventing an APR 9 legal intern from consulting with his supervisor prior to trying a case in a court of limited jurisdiction, denied defendant his right to counse, cf.: State v. Edison, 61 Wn.App. 530 (1991); 9-0.

Morris v. Slappy, 75 L.Ed.2d 610 (1983)
Right to counsel does not include right to "meaningful attorney-client relationship"; 9-0.

State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984)

Negligent homicide suspect does not have right to counsel when blood sample was taken, as she had not been formally charged, Kirby v. Illinois, 32 L.Ed.2d 411 (1972), Schmerber v. California, 16 L.Ed.2d 908 (1966); see: State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991); 9-0.

State ex. rel. Juckett v. Evergreen District Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984)

When DUI suspects are arrested, they must be advised of their Miranda right to counsel prior to taking breath test, and must be provided access to counsel if requested; if Miranda warnings are given, defendant need not again be advised of right to counsel prior to taking breath test, see: State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001); prior to the issuance of a citation, no Sixth Amendment right to counsel exists, however defendant does have right to counsel pursuant to JCrR 2.11(c); 9-0.

State v. Long, 104 Wn.2d 285 (1985)

Indigent defendant charged with a nonjailable crime (here, negligent driving, RCW 46.61.525) is not entitled to court appointed counsel; right to court appointed counsel is not co-extensive with right to jury trial; 9-0.

Maine v. Moulton, 88 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985)

After indictment, co-defendant, a secret government informant, records via body wire statements of defendant made to counsel; held: even though police may have had other legitimate reasons to record defendant's statements (i.e., threats to kill the state's witnesses), use of defendant's incriminating statements at trial violated his Sixth Amendment right to counsel, see also: Pers. Restraint of Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 911-2 (1998), State v. Whitaker, 133 Wn.App. 199, 218-22 (2006); 5-4.

State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012)

While CrR 3.1(c)(2) requires police to provide suspect with access to telephone and number of public defender at earliest opportunity, 45 minutes after arrest defendant confesses, thus police lacked opportunity to provide him with access to telephone, State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 363-70 (2010), see: State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018), but see: State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407 (1997), State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001); II.

State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986)

Defense moves to suppress handwriting exemplar provided by defendant after her attorney had requested that he be present during questioning, and after defendant had informed police she wanted her attorney present; held: while police action is to be "deplored," Sixth Amendment right to counsel is not the basis for suppression of nontestimonial evidence; I.

Airway Heights v. Dilley, 45 Wn.App. 87 (1986)

Defendant, arrested for DUI, requests counsel before deciding whether or not to take breath test; police, defendant and defendant's wife make several calls, cannot reach attorney, police do not give defendant 24-hour public defender number; held: reasonable but unsuccessful attempts to contact counsel for defendant satisfy his right to counsel; III; accord: Bellevue v. Ohlson, 60 Wn.App. 485 (1991), Seattle v. Sandholm, 65 Wn.App. 747 (1992).

Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986)

Failure of police to inform defendant of counsel's telephone call during interrogation did not affect validity of defendant's waiver of Fifth Amendment right to remain silent and right to have counsel present, State v. Bradford, 95 Wn.App. 935 (1999); Sixth Amendment right to counsel does not attach until charges are filed, thus interference by police of counsel's attempts to contact her client is not unlawful; police lying to counsel that defendant would not be interrogated does not violate due process clause; 6-3.

Kuhlmann v. Wilson, 91 L.Ed.2d 364 (1986)

Police place informant in defendant's cell with instructions to listen to defendant but not ask any questions; defendant confesses, informant testifies; held: Sixth Amendment right to counsel not violated where informant listens and reports defendant's confession, but does not question him; 6-3.

State v. Prok, 107 Wn.2d 153 (1986)

Defendant is involved in an accident, is extremely intoxicated and injured, police transport defendant to jail and determine that his condition is due to intoxication not injury, advise of Miranda rights, but defendant does not speak English and does not understand his right to counsel; held: defendant was not taken into custody, JCrR 2.11(c), until police determined he was drunk, not injured (even though he was taken to jail), thus right to counsel did not accrue until that point; because state conceded defendant was not able to understand right to counsel and state conceded that police violated defendant's right to be so advised, remedy is suppression of evidence following custody, not dismissal, distinguishing Tacoma v. Heater, 67 Wn.2d 733 (1966), State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436 (1980), reversing State v. Prok, 42 Wn.App. 166 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Conlin, 49 Wn.App. 593 (1987)

Probationer has a procedural, not a constitutional, right to counsel at revocation hearing, CrR 7.5(b), thus need not knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently waive counsel; trial court should hold a brief colloquy regarding right to counsel, risks of self-representation and penalty; II.

State v. Sargent, 111 Wn.2d 641 (1988)

Following murder conviction defendant is interviewed by probation officer for presentence report, not advised of Miranda rights, confesses, conviction is reversed on appeal, confession is used at retrial; held: P.O. was a state official, defendant was in custody, failure to advise violated defendant's Fifth Amendment rights, thus reversed, State v. Everybodytalksabout, 161 Wn.2d 702 (2007); reverses State v. Sargent, 49 Wn.App. 64 (1987); 6-2.

State v. Glessner, 50 Wn.App. 397 (1988)

Police take blood sample from seriously injured vehicular homicide suspect without first advising him of right to counsel; held: due to defendant's condition, it was not feasible to advise defendant of right to counsel prior to taking blood, State v. Prok, 107 Wn.2d 153 (1986); I.

Perry v. Leeke, 102 L.Ed.2d 624 (1989)

After defendant completed direct examination, trial court takes 15 minute recess, judge sua sponte orders defense counsel not to consult with defendant; held: during a short recess while defendant is testifying, defendant does not have the constitutional right to consult with counsel, distinguishing Geders v. United States, 47 L.Ed.2d 592 (1976) (court cannot prohibit consultation with counsel during overnight recess); 6-3.

Seattle v. Koch, 53 Wn.App. 352 (1989)

DUI arrestees ask to speak with counsel, are given access to telephone but officer remains in room, neither defendant nor counsel request privacy; held: since defendants did not request privacy nor establish prejudice, see: State v. Federov, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015), rights pursuant to CrRLJ 3.1(c)(2) were not violated; I.

State v. Shattuck, 55 Wn.App. 131 (1989)

Where defendant asks to speak to a specific attorney and police attempt to contact that attorney, police are not obliged to suggest other attorneys or to tell defendant that public defender is available as long as defendant has been advised of right to public defender; I.

State v. Visitacion, 55 Wn.App. 166 (1989)

Post-indictment confessions in the absence of counsel are admissible upon proof of a knowing, voluntary and intelligent waiver of counsel; Miranda warnings will suffice, Patterson v. Illinois, 101 L.Ed.2d 261 (1988), see: Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004); counsel's relying upon a witness's statement to police without attempting to contact or interview the witness falls below professional norms, Hawkman v. Parratt, 661 F.2d 1161 (8th Cir. 1981), thus remanded for fact finding hearing; I.

Seattle v. Orwick, 113 Wn.2d 823 (1989)

Following arrest for obstructing, defendant demands an attorney, CrRLJ 3.1(c), which is not provided; trial court dismisses, finding defendant was prejudiced in that an attorney might have been able to locate witnesses for defense; held: defendant's claim that an attorney could find witnesses was speculation, insufficient to support a finding of prejudice; reverses Seattle v. Orwick, 53 Wn.App. 53 (1988), see: Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991), State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Trull, 56 Wn.App. 795 (1990)

Juvenile, charged with malicious mischief, facing a standard range of no detention is nevertheless entitled to appointment of counsel, as incarceration is a possible penalty for the offense, McInturf v. Horton, 56 Wn.2d 704 (1975); I.

Michigan v. Harvey, 108 L.Ed.2d 293 (1990)

While a confession made in violation of a defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel is inadmissible in state's case-in-chief, Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), but see: Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009), it is admissible in rebuttal to impeach defendant's testimony, Kansas v. Ventris, 173 L.Ed.2d 801 (2009); 6-3.

State v. Royer, 58 Wn.App. 778 (1990)

At arraignment, defendant requests and is given counsel, following which defendant is advised by police, signs a waiver, makes incriminating statements; held: after defendant's assertion, at arraignment, of Sixth Amendment right to counsel, any waiver of the defendant's right to counsel for subsequent police-initiated interrogation is invalid, Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), but see: Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009), relative to the specific charge for which defendant was arraigned, Texas v. Cobb, 149 L.Ed.2d 321 (2001), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 818-20 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 897-900 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012); II.

State v. Chase, 59 Wn.App. 501 (1990)

A motion to continue trial to retain counsel of choice may be denied if it will result in delay of the trial, State v. Garcia, 92 Wn.2d 647, 655-6 (1979); II.

Minnick v. Mississippi, 112 L.Ed.2d 489 (1990)

Once an arrestee has requested counsel, s/he may not be reinterrogated in the absence of counsel even if suspect has consulted with counsel, unless accused initiates conversation; 6-2.

McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158 (1991)

Defendant is arrested for robbery, advised of Miranda warnings, does not request counsel but refuses to answer questions, is later arraigned with counsel; police later readvise and question defendant about unrelated murder, defendant confesses; held: request for counsel at arraignment is offense-specific under the Sixth Amendment, Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), but see: Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009), and does not preclude police-initiated interrogation regarding other matters absent a Fifth Amendment demand for counsel, Texas v. Cobb, 149 L.Ed.2d 321 (2001), Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 818-20 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 897-900 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Aamold, 60 Wn.App. 175 (1991)

Receipt of a verdict is likely a critical stage requiring counsel, harmless here where jury was polled, no irregularity apparent; I.

State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364 (1991)

Where an unretained attorney telephoned the police station during interrogation and asked to leave a message for defendant to call him, Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986), and where defendant, after Miranda rights, agreed to confess to murder in exchange for a promise not to charge aggravated murder, then statement is voluntary and admissible, State v. Bradford, 95 Wn.App. 935 (1999); 8-1.

Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991)

Remedy for denial of counsel in violation of JCrR 2.11 [CrRLJ 3.1(b)] in DUI case is suppression of any evidence acquired after the violation, not dismissal, overruling State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436, vacated and remanded, 66 L.Ed.2d 240, aff'd on remand, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980), see: State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991)

Vehicular homicide suspect does not have right to counsel before blood sample is taken under CONST. Art. 1, § 22 or CrR 3.1, as suspect does not have the right to refuse the blood sample, State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 281-83 (1996), see: State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984); 7-2.

Bellevue v. Ohlson, 60 Wn.App. 485 (1991)

Following DUI arrest, defendant asks for counsel, officer calls defendant's attorney six times, phone busy for 20 minutes, calls three different public defenders, reaches two answering machines, no answer at third; held: officer made every reasonable effort to provide access to counsel, thus CrRLJ 3.1 is satisfied even though actual contact is not effected, Seattle v. Wakenight, 24 Wn.App. 48, 51 (1979) see also: Seattle v. Sandholm, 65 Wn.App. 747 (1992), State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407 (1997), cf.: State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012) ; I.

State v. Edison, 61 Wn.App. 530 (1991)

After arraignment but before trial, defense counsel is suspended for failure to meet CLE requirements, and then reinstated; held: having a lawyer who is suspended is not a per se violation of right to counsel, distinguishing Seattle v. Ratliff, 100 Wn.2d 212 (1983)(counsel was never licensed); no prejudice, thus no error, Pers. Restraint of Ayerst, 17 Wn.App.2d 356 (2021); I.

State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779 (1991)

Request for counsel to a public defense indigency screener is insufficient to require termination of interrogation, Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), as it was not expressed to law enforcement personnel, McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158, 169 (1991), State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462 (1989); jail personnel and police conspire to keep suspect and counsel apart, police refuse counsel's request to see suspect or advise him she was present, suspect confesses after Miranda waiver; held: Miranda advice and waiver is dispositive of Fifth Amendment and CONST. Art. 1, § 3 claims, Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986), State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364 (1991); while police deliberately thwarted CrR 3.1 right to counsel, harmless here; I.

Seattle v. Sandholm, 65 Wn.App. 747 (1992)

DUI suspect asks to call his out-of-town attorney at suspect's expense, police refuse but allow him to talk to a public defender, after which defendant demands again to talk to his own attorney, refused, defendant refuses to take breath test, trial court dismisses; held: CrRLJ 3.1(c) is satisfied when police put suspect in touch with a public defender even if suspect demands his own attorney; CrRLJ 3.1 does not contemplate a right of access to counsel of choice, thus reversed; I.

State v. P.B.T., 67 Wn.App. 292 (1992)

Juvenile has the right to have counsel present at predisposition interview where respondent is concerned about his Fifth Amendment rights with respect to closely related pending charges; counsel's role is only to assist client in preserving right against self-incrimination with respect to the closely related pending charge; I.

State v. Early, 70 Wn.App. 452 (1993)

While a denial of a continuance to substitute retained counsel may deprive a defendant of his right to counsel of choice, Wheat v. United States, 100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988), in the absence of substantial reasons a late request should generally be denied, especially if it may delay the trial, State v. Chase, 59 Wn.App. 501, 506 (1990); trial court must consider diligence, due process, the need for an orderly procedure, impact on trial, whether prior continuances have been granted, State v. Barnes, 58 Wn.App. 465, 471 (1990), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 117 Wn.2d 701 (1991); here, one state's witness had been "turned" and had a tenuous relationship with prosecution, prior continuances had been granted, thus no abuse of discretion in denying continuance; III.

State v. Teller, 72 Wn.App. 49 (1993)

DUI suspect is advised, inter alia, "if you cannot afford an attorney you are entitled to have one appointed by the court," argues she should have been told she had right to public defender before she took breath test; held: warnings were adequate under constitution, Duckworth v. Eagan, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989), California v. Prysock, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981), Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S. 50, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010), distinguishing State v. Creach, 77 Wn.2d 194, 198 (1969) and State v. Tetzlaff, 75 Wn.2d 649 (1969), and CrRLJ 3.1, State v. Wurm, 32 Wn.App. 258 (1982), aff'd sub nom. State ex rel. Juckett v. Evergreen Dist. Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984), State v. Halbakken, 30 Wn.App. 834, 836 (1981); III.

State v. Roth, 75 Wn.App. 808, 823-27 (1994)

Defendant retains two attorneys, lead counsel is unavailable for voir dire due to another trial, court grants a continuance, lead counsel remains unavailable, court obliges secondary counsel to commence voir dire, directs that transcripts be prepared for lead counsel before peremptory challenges; held: right to retained counsel of choice is not of the same force as other aspects of the right to counsel; "only an unreasoning and arbitrary insistence upon expeditiousness in the face of a justifiable request for delay violates defendant's right," Morris v. Slappy, 75 L.Ed.2d 610 (1983), Ungar v. Sarafite, 11 L.Ed.2d 921 (1964), State v. Hampton, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015); factors (1) whether court had granted previous continuance at defendant's request, (2) whether defendant has some legitimate cause for dissatisfaction with counsel, even though short of incompetent representation, (3) whether available counsel is prepared, and

(4) prejudice, State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 631-34 (2005); while defense need not establish actual prejudice, its absence is a factor which may be considered by trial court; I.

State v. Harrell, 80 Wn.App. 802 (1996)

Motion to withdraw guilty plea is a critical stage requiring counsel or valid waiver of counsel; implicit in trial court's decision to hold a hearing on a motion to withdraw plea is a finding that sufficient facts were alleged to warrant a hearing, but see: State v. Winston, 105 Wn.App. 318 (2001), State v. Forest, 125 Wn.App. 702, 707-08 (2005); I.

State v. Bandura, 85 Wn.App. 87, 97-8 (1997)

Defendant seeks continuance of sentencing for new counsel, trial court denies continuance, allows present counsel to withdraw and requires defendant to proceed pro se; held: sentencing is a critical stage, court cannot relieve counsel and require a nonwaiving defendant to proceed without counsel; II.

State v. Mills, 85 Wn.App. 285 (1997)

Indigent defendants are not entitled to appointed counsel to assist in filing a motion for discretionary review following RALJ decision in superior court, nor to a verbatim report of court of limited jurisdiction proceedings at public expense, Richland v. Kiehl, 87 Wn.App. 418 (1997); I.

State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 730-37 (1997)

Defendant requests other appointed counsel as current counsel was unwilling to accuse another of the homicide, counsel argued that it was inadmissible and tactically dangerous in death penalty case; held: attorney-client conflicts justify grant of a substitution only when counsel and defendant are so at odds as to prevent presentation of an adequate defense, State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 766 (1995), factors include (1) the reasons given for the dissatisfaction, (2) court's own evaluation of counsel, and (3) effect of substitution on scheduling, State v. Stark, 48 Wn.App. 245, 253 (1987), State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179, 200-01 (2004), State v. Schaller, 143 Wn.App. 258 (2007), State v. Wood, 19 Wn.App.2d 743 (2021), see: Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 142 Wn.2d 710 (2001); 8-0.

Richland v. Kiehl, 87 Wn.App. 418 (1997)

Indigent misdemeanor defendant is not entitled to appointment of counsel at public expense unless a motion for discretionary review of RALJ decision is granted, State v. Mills, 85 Wn.App. 285 (1997), RCW 10.73.150, although defendant is entitled to waiver of filing fee; III.

State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407 (1997)

After Miranda warnings, defendant requests counsel, police cease interrogation but do not contact a lawyer, defendant later waives Fifth Amendment right to counsel and confesses; held: pursuant to CrR 3.1(c)(2), police are obliged to make reasonable efforts to contact an attorney "at the earliest opportunity," or state must show why such efforts could not have been made, State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018), or that defendant knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily waived right to counsel, Bellevue v. Ohlson, 60 Wn.App. 485, 487 (1991), Seattle v. Wakenight, 24 Wn.App. 48, 49-50 (1979), distinguishing State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012), State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012), but see: State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 363-70 (2010); harmless here; II.

State v. Thompson, 93 Wn.App. 364 (1998)

Indigent defendant is entitled to counsel at public expense to appeal a motion to vacate a judgment, as a party has the right to appeal such an order, RAP 2.2(a)(10), and an indigent is entitled to counsel when filing an appeal "as a matter of right," RCW 10.73.150(1), State v. Larranaga, 126 Wn.App. 505 (2005); I.

State v. Corn, 95 Wn.App. 41, 56-64 (1999)

Attorney retained by arrested suspect's relative asks to speak to suspect, police refuse as suspect had not requested counsel; held: Fifth Amendment right to counsel is not invoked until suspect requests counsel, Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986), State v. Earls, 116 Wn.2d 364 (1991); right to counsel pursuant to CrR 3.1(c)(2) is not activated until the accused requests an attorney, State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407, 413 n.2 (1997), State v. Bradford, 95 Wn.App. 935 (1999); III.

State v. Hunter, 100 Wn.App. 198 (2000)

After conviction, defense discovers that its investigator was working as a paid informant for the government in an unrelated case, seeks dismissal; held: because investigator had not even an implicit agreement with government with respect to the case at bar, nor did government have the ability to control his undertaking, In re Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 912 (1998), the investigator was not a government agent, State v. Whitaker, 133 wn.App. 199, 218-222 (2006), thus no government misconduct occurred, distinguishing State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371 (1963), State v. Granacki, 90 Wn.App. 598 (1998); I.

Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 142 Wn.2d 710 (2001)

Trial court is not obliged to appoint other counsel to represent defendant at a hearing on defendant's motion to substitute counsel where counsel assists defendant in preparing his motion for substitution, at 737-39; see: State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668 (1997); 8-1.

Lackawanna County Dist. Attorney v. Coss, 149 L.Ed.2d 608 (2001)

Failure to appoint counsel for an indigent is a unique constitutional defect rising to the level of a jurisdictional defect which can be raised in a habeas corpus petition where the remedy might be barred on other bases, Custis v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 517 (1994).

State v. Winston, 105 Wn.App. 318 (2001)

Eleven months after plea and sentencing, defendant moves pro se in trial court for withdrawal of plea, trial court grants hearing and denies motion, defendant appeals, seeking counsel; held: an application for post-conviction relief other than a first direct appeal is not a critical stage for which there is a constitutional right to counsel, Pennsylvania v. Finley, 95 L.Ed.2d 539 (1987), mere fact that trial court scheduled a hearing at defendant's request does not imply that there is a basis for such a hearing, CrR 7.8(c)(2), State v. Forest, 125 Wn.App. 702

(2005), but see: State v. Larranaga, 126 Wn.App. 505 (2005), distinguishing State v. Harrell, 80 Wn.App. 802 (1996); I.

State v. Jaquez, 105 Wn.App. 699, 712-17 (2001)

After arrest, defendant invokes his right to counsel, police attempt to display defendant to victim for a showup, defendant refuses to leave police car and hides face, state seeks to offer refusal as evidence of guilt; held: while there is no constitutional right to counsel at a post-arrest showup, Kirby v. Illinois, 32 L.Ed.2d 411 (1972), see: State v. Bradford, 95 Wn.App. 935, 947-48 (1999), defendant, having requested counsel, does have a right pursuant to CrR 3.1(c)(2) to have the police contact an attorney, State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407, 413-14 (1997), State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 363-70 (2010); absent a showing that the showup or trial would have been different if he had been able to contact counsel, error was harmless; II.

State v. Erickson, 108 Wn.App. 732 (2001)

Defendant, represented by counsel, initiates discussion with police and makes statements; held: non-coerced, custodial, defendant-initiated statements made without police interrogation fall outside the general rule prohibiting custodial interrogation following invocation of Sixth Amendment right to counsel, distinguishing State v. Stewart, 113 Wn.2d 462 (1989), Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), cf.: Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009); III.

Alabama v. Shelton, 152 L.Ed.2d 888 (2002)

Court may not impose a suspended sentence upon an unrepresented defendant, since incarceration may occur if probation is revoked, Argersinger v. Hamlin, 32 L.Ed.2d 530 (1972), although an unrepresented defendant may be fined if no jail term is possible, Scott v. Illinois, 59 L.Ed.2d 383 (1979); 5-4.

State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002)

Police advise DUI suspects that they have a right to talk to an attorney before answering questions, trial courts suppress breath tests; held: CrRLJ 3.1, which requires that police advise arrestees of right to counsel as soon as practicable, was violated because advice here provided that the right to a lawyer accrues not when suspect is arrested but rather when arrestee is questioned, State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436 (1980), affirmed on remand, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980), State ex rel. Juckett v. Evergreen District Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984), Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991); because no defendant here alleged that, but for the improper advice he or she would have requested counsel before submitting to breath test, error was harmless, reversing State v. Templeton, 107 Wn.App. 141 (2001); 5-4.

State v. DeVries, 109 Wn.App. 322 (2001), rev'd, on other grounds, 149 Wn.2d 842 (2003)

Denial by trial court of closing argument in bench trial violates Sixth Amendment; III.

State v. Robinson, 153 Wn.2d 689 (2005)

Defendant is not entitled to counsel at public expense at a motion to withdraw a guilty plea after sentencing, see: State v. Davis, 125 Wn.App. 59 (2004), unless the trial court makes a preliminary finding that there are grounds for relief; 7-2.

State v. Larranaga, 126 Wn.App. 505 (2005)

Six months after sentencing, defendant files a motion for resentencing, CrR 7.8(b)(1), -(4), arguing ineffective assistance and abuse of discretion in denying DOSA, trial court denies resentencing, finds defendant indigent but denies counsel on appeal; held: denial of a motion to vacate or amend a judgment, RAP 2.2(a), is appealable as a matter of right, thus defendant is entitled to counsel, RCW 10.73.150(1), State v. Thompson, 93 Wn.App. 364, 368-69 (1998), although defendant is not entitled to appointed counsel during the initial hearing on the CrR 7.8 motion, State v. Winston, 105 Wn.App. 318, 325 (2001), State v. Forest, 125 Wn.App. 702, 707-08 (2005), but see: State v. Smith, 144 Wn.App. 860 (2008); II.

State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 631-34 (2005)

During voir dire, defendant claims conflict with appointed counsel, that they were not representing him the way he wants, that he does not feel able to communicate with them, that they did not see him enough times in jail and had not yet interviewed a witness, and that defendant is "looking around" for retained counsel that his mother may pay for, counsel state that they saw him 7-10 times in jail, trial court denies new counsel and continuance; held: "essential aim of the Sixth Amendment is to guarantee an effective advocate...not to ensure that a defendant will inexorably be represented by his or her counsel of choice," Wheat v. United States, 100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988), but see: State v. Hampton, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015); while a defendant need not demonstrate that current counsel is ineffective, State v. Roth, 75 Wn.App. 808, 823-27 (1994), trial court did not abuse discretion in light of fact that defendant did not establish he could afford counsel, he did not have counsel ready to go to trial, day of trial continuances are not favored, State v. Chase, 59 Wn.App. 501, 506 (1990), defendant failed to articulate a legitimate cause for substituting counsel, disputes over trial strategy or a general dissatisfaction with counsel are not sufficient reasons to substitute counsel, State v. Varga, 151 Wn.2d 179, 200 (2004), State v. Cameron, 47 Wn.App. 878, 882-83 (1987); II.

United States v. Gonzalez-Lopez, 165 L.Ed.2d 409 (2006)

Erroneous deprivation of a criminal defendant's choice of retained counsel entitles him to a new trial, harmless error analysis is inapposite, see: State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 22-23 (2007), State v. Castillo-Lopez, 192 Wn.App. 741 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 22-23 (2007)

Trial court disqualifies retained counsel when it learns that rape victim had consulted with a member of counsel's firm to discuss a civil suit regarding the criminal offense; held: trial court does not abuse discretion when it disqualifies an attorney due to a serious potential for a conflict of interest, State v. MacDonald, 122 Wn.App. 804, 812-13 (2004), Wheat v. United States, 100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988); trial court is not limited in its exercise of discretion to actual conflict of interest; III.

Rothgery v. Gillespie County, 171 L.Ed.2d 366 (2008)

Sixth Amendment right to counsel applies when an accused is brought before a magistrate for probable cause determination, Gerstein v. Pugh, 43 L.Ed.2d 54 (1975), and setting of bail even where no prosecutor is involved; 8-1.

Kansas v. Ventris, 173 L.Ed.2d 801 (2009)

Police place informant in represented, charged defendant's cell who elicits a confession, trial court allows cellmate to impeach defendant's testimony; held: statement obtained in violation of Sixth Amendment is admissible to impeach, Harris v. N.Y., 28 L.Ed.2d 1 (1971), State v. Simpson, 95 Wn.2d 170, 180 (1980); 7-2.

Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009)

Where defendant is arraigned and requests or is supplied counsel automatically, courts must not presume that a subsequent waiver of counsel preceeding interrogation is invalid, overruling Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986); 5-4.

State v. Perrow, 156 Wn.App. 322 (2010)

Defendant consults with counsel who asks him to prepare a narrative for counsel, police serve search warrant on defendant's home, seize narrative, defendant informs police that it is privileged, police take narrative to precinct, read and analyze, give it to prosecutor who charges defendant with child molestation, trial court dismisses; held: seized writings were privileged, RCW 5.60.060(2)(a), regardless of whether defendant was charged or not when prepared, Dietz v. John Doe, 131 Wn.2d 835, 843 (1997), thus seizure was a violation of the privilege and dismissal was a proper remedy, State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371 (1963), in light of egregious violation, police were informed that the materials were privileged but seized and analyzed them anyway, trial court's conclusion that suppression is inadequate is properly within its discretion, see: State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808 (2014), State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018); 2-1, III.

State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 364-70 (2010)

Defendant, told he is not under arrest, invokes right to counsel, police terminate interview, defendant leaves, later defendant learns he is a suspect, surrenders and is arrested, defendant is not questioned but confesses after being reminded he had invoked; held: police need not interrupt booking process to facilitate a call to counsel, CrR 3.1(c)(2), State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154 (1986), overruled, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012), distinguishing State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407, 413-14 (1997), State v. Jaquez,105 Wn.App. 699, 712-17 (2001), State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018), unless booking process is "unduly protracted," or arrest is for DUI; I.

State v. Hawkins, 164 Wn.App. 705, 714-15 (2011)

A defendant's motion for a ministerial correction to a sentence is not a critical stage, defendant has no constitutional right to an attorney in post-conviction proceedings, Pers. Restraint of Gentry, 137 Wn.2d 378, 390 (1999), Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 752, 115 L.Ed.2d 640 (1991); I.

State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012)

Police arrest defendant, question him about one crime then accuse him of murder, defendant states, "[i]f you're…trying to say I'm doing it I need a lawyer. I'm gonna need a lawyer because it wasn't me," defendant is booked, jail policy is to call public defender home number after hours if a lawyer is demanded, five hours later defendant asks to speak with detectives again, makes statements that are used at murder trial, trial court finds that statement was equivocal and posted business number for public defender plus use of phone was adequate; held: "gonna need a lawyer" is an unequivocal request for counsel, State v. Nysta, 168 Wn.App. 30, 40-42 (2012), conditional language did not render request for counsel equivocal, police were obliged to make reasonable efforts to put defendant in touch with a lawyer, CrR 3.1(c)(2), mere access to a phone is not reasonable, Tacoma v. Myhre, 32 Wn.App. 661, 664 (1982), cf.: Seattle v. Wakenight, 24 Wn.App. 48, 51 (1979), Seattle v. Carpenito, 32 Wn.App. 80-9, 813 (1982), State v. Gasteazoro-Paniagua, 173 Wn.App. 751 (2013); II.

State v. McCarthy, 178 Wn.App. 90, 96-102 (2013)

During deliberations, jury asks for masking tape and a tape measure, trial court provides them without consulting counsel; held: responding to a jury request for non-evidentiary materials is not a critical stage of a trial at which defendant has a right to counsel, State v. Jasper, 158 Wn.App. 518, 538-39, aff'd, 174 Wn.2d 96, 121-24 (2012), but see: State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501, 508-09 (1983); II.

State v. Hampton, 184 Wn.2d 656 (2015)

Defendant is appointed counsel following arraignment, at "trial call" defendant reports he is dissatisfied with appointed counsel who is ready for trial, retained counsel appears and moves to substitute and for a continuance, trial court denies continuance so retained counsel declines to substitute; held: reasons for dissatisfaction with appointed counsel is a factor to be considered in ruling on motion to substitute, State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617,, 632 (2005), State v. Roth, 75 Wn.App. 808, 825 (1994); trial court did not abuse discretion given that defendant did not make his request until the trial date, trial had already been continued once, victim opposed the continuance and defendant did not explain his dissatisfaction with appointed counsel, State v. Castillo-Lopez, 192 Wn.App. 741 (2016), cf.: United States v. Gonzalez-Lopez, 548 U.S. 140, 165 L.Ed.2d 409 (2006); reverses, in part, State v. Hampton, 182 Wn.App. 805 (2014); 8-1.

State v. Federov, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, asks to speak with counsel, asks for privacy when counsel is contacted on telephone, Seattle v. Koch, 53 Wn.App. 352 (1989), State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436 (1980), affirmed on remand, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980), trooper remains in room but testifies at suppression hearing that he did not hear defendant's conversation, counsel "felt unable … to ask open-ended questions;" held: CrR 3.1 right to counsel is limited, not coextensive with Sixth Amendment right to counsel, right to private consultation is to be weighed against legitimate safety and practical concerns; affirms State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Schierman, 192 Wn.2d 577 (2018)

"[I]f the accused is not in front of a judge, not confronted by the procedural system, not confronted by the adversary, and not really confronted at all, then the right to counsel does not attach. In this case, the trial court established a hardship determination procedure that afforded both parties an opportunity to object. One of the steps in that procedure was that the lawyers could view juror hardship determinations—some of which came in online and some of which came in on paper—in the jury administrators' office. The State and the defense did go to that office, but they went separately. They looked at declarations there, just as they might look at declarations in the privacy of their own offices. Then, based on their record review, they informed the administrator and the judge about whether a hearing was necessary. Every time a party requested a hearing, the request was granted. Thus, this is not a situation where the State was represented at an adversarial proceeding and the defendant was not," at ¶¶ 67-74.

State v. Scherf, 192 Wn.2d 350 (2018)

Defendant-prisoner is arrested for murder of guard, asks for counsel, is not placed in touch with a lawyer, CrR 3.1, until next day, later is provided a lawyer, consults and confesses in spite of counsel's advice; held: while police have a court-rule obligation to put an arrestee in touch with counsel, State v. Kirkpatrick, 89 Wn.App. 407 (1997), State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 548 (2012), delay here was justified as police had to obtain a search warrant, had to lockdown the prison, akin to booking procedures which excuse delay to obtain counsel, State v. Mullins, 158 Wn.App. 360, 369-70 (2010); even if rule was violated it was harmless here as defendant was provided an attorney before he confessed, State v. Wade, 44 Wn.App. 154, 159 (1986), abrogated, on different grounds, In re Pers. Restraint of Carrier, 173 Wn.2d 791 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Irby, 3 Wn.App.2d 247 (2018)

Jail guards read letters defendant wrote to counsel, trial court denies motion to dismiss placing burden of proving prejudice on defendant, distinguishing between investigating state actors and custodial state actors; held: misconduct by law enforcement and misconduct by jail guards is an artificial distinction, where any state actor eavesdrops on attorney-client communication there is a presumption of prejudice which state must overcome beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Cory, 62 Wn.2d 371, 378 (1963), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 811 (2014), State v. Perrow, 156 Wn. App. 322, 332 (2010), State v. Garza, 99 Wn. App. 291, 301 (2000), State v. Granacki, 90 Wn.App. 598, 603-04 (1998), on remand if court finds prejudice then remedy may be dismissal, suppression of evidence, disqualification of specific prosecutors or entire office or exclusions of witnesses tainted by the misconduct; I.

State v. Anderson, 19 Wn.App.2d 556 (2021)

Defendant appears at resentencing by video from prison with his attorney on the telephone from a separate location, during the hearing defendant asks a question, court tells him to confer with counsel and adjourns; held: without some method of consulting privately with counsel there is a constitutional violation, albeit harmless here, see: State v. Gonzales-Morales, 138 Wb,2d 374, 376-77 (1999); III.

State v. M.N.H., 199 Wn.2d 337 (2022)

At a juvenile court community supervision revocation hearing respondent has the statutory right to counsel, RCW 13.40.140, reversing, in part, State v. M.N.H., 19 Wn.App. 281, 285-86 (2021); per curiam.

State v. Charlton, 23 Wn.App.2d 150 (2022)

At a first preliminary appearance, CrR 3.2.1(e)(1), CrRLJ 3.2.1, arrestee is entitled to counsel, Rothgery v. Gillespie Cnty., Tex., 554 U.S. 191, 198 (2008), but the first appearance is not a critical stage even though bail is set; the second appearance is a critical stage, but failure to provide counsel is harmless error, see: In re Sanchez, 197 Wn.App. 686 (2017), even if it structural error; II.

COUNSEL ## Waiver

State v. Garcia, 92 Wn.2d 647 (1979)

Trial court need not advise defendant of right to proceed pro se; 8-0.

State v. Hoff, 31 Wn.App. 809 (1982)

Pro se defendant is not entitled to special consideration by trial court, and "must bear the consequences of his or her own representation and cannot on appeal complain of the quality of the defense"; II.

State v. Johnson, 33 Wn.App. 15 (1982)

After defendant was found ineligible for appointed counsel, he persisted in stating he could not afford retained counsel; held: defendant's failure to obtain retained counsel was a waiver of the right to counsel, defendant having been informed of consequences of self-representation, see: State v. Nordstrom, 89 Wn.App. 737 (1998); I.

State v. Dougherty, 33 Wn.App. 466 (1982)

Defendant seeks to fire his appointed attorney, court refuses, but permits defendant to proceed pro se; held: where a defendant seeks to discharge court-appointed counsel, "a penetrating and comprehensive examination by the court of the defendant's allegation will serve as the basis of whether different counsel needs to be appointed . . . within the sound discretion of the trial court," State v. Shelton, 71 Wn.2d 838, 840 (1967), State v. Lytle, 71 Wn.2d 83 (1967), State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 763-7 (1995), State v. Schaller, 143 Wn.App. 258 (2007), cf.: State v. Witherspoon, 171 Wn.App. 271, 292-93 (2012), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 875 (2014); here, inadequate inquiry into pro se representation; accord: State v. Brittain, 38 Wn.App. 740 (1984); III.

State v. Barker, 35 Wn.App. 388 (1983)

Where a defendant requests to proceed as co-counsel, court need not insure that defendant is aware of the disadvantages of self-representation; I.

State v. Hightower, 36 Wn.App. 536 (1984)

Defendant does not have constitutional right to act as co-counsel; I.

State v. Imus, 37 Wn.App. 170 (1984)

Illiterate defendant who unequivocally requests the right to represent himself must be permitted to do so; I, 2-1.

Bellevue v. Acrey, 103 Wn.2d 203 (1984)

Colloquy on the record is required to establish a waiver of counsel; colloquy must reflect accused's understanding of the charge and maximum penalty, State v. Howard, 1 Wn.App.2d 420 (2017), that accused must conduct defense within the rules, and disadvantages of proceeding without counsel, see: State v. Chavis, 31 Wn.App. 784 (1982), State v. Silva, 108 Wn.App. 536

(2001), Iowa v. Tovar, 158 L.Ed.2d 209 (2004); accord: Renton v. Willard, 44 Wn.App. 525 (1986), State v. Buelna, 83 Wn.App. 658 (1996); 7-2.

McKaskle v. Wiggins, 79 L.Ed.2d 122 (1984)

Standby counsel for pro se defendant may participate in trial, even over defendant's objection, when participation is outside presence of the jury; participation in the presence of the jury is not absolutely barred as long as it is invited by defendant or "within reasonable limits;" 6-3.

State v. Christensen, 40 Wn.App. 290 (1985)

Pro se defendant was advised by trial court of right to counsel, maximum penalty, colloquy established that defendant had 11th grade education and could read and write English; held: inadequate colloquy for waiver of counsel, as defendant was not advised of technical aspects of conducting a defense, of rules regarding preservation of error, that presenting a defense is not just a matter of telling one's story; defendant's lack of participation in voir dire, minimal cross-examination, etc., establishes defendant did not make a knowing and intelligent waiver of counsel, State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022),see also: State v. Smith, 50 Wn.App. 524 (1988), but see: Iowa v. Tovar, 159 L.Ed.2d 209 (2004); III.

State v. Strodtbeck, 46 Wn.App. 26 (1986)

Where defendant was represented by counsel at a previous trial on the same charge, then defendant is aware of the dangers of self-representation at a second trial even absent a colloquy; I.

State v. Sinclair, 46 Wn.App. 433 (1986)

On day of trial, defendant requests substitute counsel for his public defender, claiming counsel had lied and refused to research, trial court concludes there was no basis for substituting counsel, tells defendant that he may represent himself or proceed with his public defender; defendant proceeds pro se, court advises defendant he is bound by rules of evidence, periodically assists defendant during trial; held: where indigent defendant fails to provide court with legitimate reasons for new counsel, he may be forced to continue with appointed counsel or to proceed pro se, State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496 (2010), State v. Staten, 60 Wn.App. 163 (1991), State v. Stutzke, 2 Wn.App.2d 927, 937-38 (2018); waiver of right to counsel is unequivocal when he expresses a preference for acting pro se over all alternatives to which he is legally entitled; indigent defendant may not force new counsel by filing a complaint with the Bar Association; I.

State v. Hahn, 106 Wn.2d 885 (1986)

Mentally ill but competent defendant is held to same standard for waiver of counsel as other defendants', i.e., is decision intelligent and voluntary; trial court must conduct an inquiry designed to assure defendant has been fully informed of alternatives available, comprehends the consequences of self-representation and freely chooses to waive counsel, State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983) (but overruling n. 3 at 746), accord: State v. Honton, 85 Wn.App. 415, 418-22 (1997), State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844 (2002), but see: Indiana v. Edwards, 171 L.Ed.2d 345 (2008), , State v. Englund, 186 Wn.App. 444 (2015), see: Pers. Restraint of Rhome, 172 Wn.2d 654 (2011), State v. Lawrence, 166 Wn.App. 378 (2012), State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 807 (2020), State v. Sabon, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 Wn.App. 600 (2022); reverses State v. Hahn, 41 Wn.App. 876 (1985); 9-0.

State v. Harris, 48 Wn.App. 279 (1987)

Motions to proceed as co-counsel are not favored, and should only be granted where there has been a substantial showing that cause of justice will thereby be served; I.

Patterson v. Illinois, 101 L.Ed.2d 261 (1988)

After indictment, defendant is interviewed by police, advised of Miranda warnings, waives, confesses; held: accused may waive Sixth Amendment right to counsel if properly advised by police, who are not barred from initiating interrogation, see: Fellers v. United States, 157 L.Ed.2d 1016 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Hegge, 53 Wn.App. 345 (1989)

Pro se defendant's lack of preparedness is not grounds for depriving him of his pro se status, State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844 (2002); a complete breakdown of communication between defendant and counsel mandates granting counsel's motion to withdraw, see: State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 457-58 (2012); III.

State v. Nicholas, 55 Wn.App. 261 (1989)

Incarcerated pro se defendant may be denied physical access to law library where a lawyer is appointed to obtain materials for defendant; where pro se defendant permits standby counsel to act as his attorney at trial and does not reassert his desire to represent himself, he has waived his right to proceed pro se; I.

State v. Chase, 59 Wn.App. 501 (1990)

A motion to continue trial to retain counsel of choice may be denied if it will result in delay of the trial, State v. Garcia, 92 Wn.2d 647, 655-6 (1979); II.

McNeil v. Wisconsin, 115 L.Ed.2d 158 (1991)

Defendant is arrested for robbery, advised of Miranda warnings, does not request counsel but refuses to answer questions, is later arraigned with counsel; police later readvise and question defendant about unrelated murder, defendant confesses; held: request for counsel at arraignment is offense-specific under the Sixth Amendment, Michigan v. Jackson, 89 L.Ed.2d 631 (1986), but see: Montejo v. Louisiana, 173 L.Ed.2d 955 (2009), Texas v. Cobb, 149 L.Ed.2d 34 (2001), and does not preclude police-initiated interrogation regarding other matters absent a Fifth Amendment demand for counsel, Edwards v. Arizona, 68 L.Ed.2d 378 (1981), State v. Hahn, 162 Wn.App. 885, 892-900 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, State v. Hahn, 174 Wn.2d 126 (2012); 6-3.

State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369 (1991)

Defendant fires two appointed attorneys, demands third, trial court, after lengthy colloquy addressing defenses, disadvantages, consequences and details of pro se representation, requires defendant to choose between second attorney and representing self; held: following proper refusal to appoint other counsel, State v. Staten, 60 Wn.App. 163 (1991), State v. Sinclair, 46 Wn.App. 433 (1986), United States v. Wheat, 100 L.Ed.2d 140 (1988), court may pose option that defendant either remains with current attorney or proceed pro se as long as colloquy shows defendant understands seriousness of charge, maximum penalty, State v. Howard, 1 Wn.App.2d 420 (2017), existence of technical procedural rules, State v. Silva, 108 Wn.App. 536 (2001), State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496 (2010), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013), see: State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008), State v. James, 138 Wn.App. 628, 635-37 (2007), State ex rel. Schmitz v. Knight, 142 Wn.App. 291 (2007); once waiver of counsel is made, defendant may not later demand appointment of counsel as a matter of right, State v. Imus, 37 Wn.App. 170 (1984), State v. Pablo Navarro, 188 Wn.App. 550, 557-58 (2015), see: State v. Barker, 75 Wn.App. 236, 238-42 (1994), State v. Bolar, 118 Wn.App. 490, 515-17 (2003), State v. Modica, supra. At 443-46; 9-0.

State v. Estabrook, 68 Wn.App. 309 (1993)

Trial court requires pro se defendant to submit written questions to the court, which were asked of a developmentally disabled child victim; held: because defendant failed to object, defendant had actual control over the questions asked, and the procedure did not impact the jury's perception that defendant was representing himself, defendant's right of self-representation was not violated, see: McKaskle v. Wiggins, 79 L.Ed.2d 122 (1984); II.

State v. Joyner, 69 Wn.App. 356 (1993)

Defendant, denied appointed counsel due to wife's income, is advised of right to appointed counsel, right to challenge indigency determination in court, fact that trial is governed by formal rules and procedures to which defendant would be held, disadvantages of self-representation, defendant agrees to represent self; held: while trial court may not blindly defer to an erroneous indigency determination by a designee (here, King County Office of Public Defense), consideration of defendant's wife's income was proper, RCW 10.101.020(2), distinguishing CrR 3.1(d)(1), court fully advised defendant who waived right to retained counsel; I.

Godinez v. Moran, 125 L.Ed.2d 321 (1993)

Competency standard for waiving counsel is the same as competency to be tried, i.e., sufficient present ability to consult with counsel with a reasonable degree of rational understanding plus a rational as well as factual understanding of the proceedings, but see: Indiana v. Edwards, 171 L.Ed.2d 345 (2008), State v. Englund, 186 Wn.App. 444 (2015), State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 807 (2020), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Rhome, 172 Wn.2d 654 (2011), State v. Lawrence, 166 Wn.App. 378 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Osborne, 70 Wn.App. 640 (1993)

Trial court permits defendant to fire appointed counsel just before trial, denies motion to continue to obtain counsel; held: absent advice of the dangers and disadvantages of self-representation, there was no implied waiver of counsel, State ex rel. Schmitz v. Knight, 142 Wn.App. 291 (2007), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022), thus reversed; II.

State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690, 698-99 (1995)

Defendant objects to defense counsel's request for a continuance, states 'he is "prepared to go for myself," and "I'm not even prepared about that. . .[t]his is out of my league"'; held: in context, the statements were not an unequivocal assertion of the right to self-representation, State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 730-43 (1997), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 585-88 (2001), but see: State v. Curry, 191 Wn.2d 475 (2018), State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Breedlove, 79 Wn.App. 101 (1995)

Twelve days before trial, defendant files motion to dismiss counsel and proceed pro se with standby counsel, court sets hearing on last court day before trial date at which defendant asks for a continuance to prepare his own defense, all motions denied; held: where request to proceed pro se is made shortly before or at trial, trial court must exercise discretion by balancing defendant's interest in self-representation and society's interest in the orderly administration of justice, at 107; to deny motion, court must find either that the motion is made for improper purposes, i.e., unjustifiable delay, or that granting the request would obstruct the orderly administration of justice, at 108, State v. Paumier, 155 Wn.App. 673, 686-88 (2010), affirmed, on other grounds, 176 Wn.2d 29 (2012); when court is put on notice that defendant wishes self-representation but delays ruling, timeliness of request is measured from date of initial request, at 109; court may not infer improper motive from a simultaneous continuance motion that is not a condition of his request to proceed pro se, at 109; continuance request is not a bar to motion, at 109-110; see: State v. Fritz, 21 Wn.App. 354 (1978), State v. Kender, 21 Wn.App. 622, 624 (1978), State v. Jordan, 39 Wn.App. 530, 541 (1985), State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844 (2002); II.

State v. Canedo-Astorga, 79 Wn.App. 518, 523-7 (1995)

Defendant validly waives counsel, standby counsel is appointed, during trial defendant demands that standby counsel take over, standby counsel expresses need for "not a short" recess to prepare, court denies defendant's demand; held: once counsel is waived, it is within trial court's discretion whether to reappoint counsel, State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 376-7 (1991), State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434, 443-46 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008), defendant's ineptitude itself does not dictate reappointment, trial court properly denied reappointment due to proposed delay, State v. Fisher, 188 Wn.App. 924 (2015); II.

Tacoma v. Bishop, 82 Wn.App. 850 (1996)

Defendant appears at three trial dates without counsel, claiming he didn't have time to get one, trial court denies last continuance motion and obliges defendant to proceed to trial pro se; held: while a defendant may waive the right to counsel by dilatory behavior, State v. Stutzke, 2 Wn.App.2d 927, 937-38 (2018), defendant must be first warned about the risks and disadvantages of self-representation, thus denial of continuance was abuse of discretion, State v. Nordstrom, 89 Wn.App. 737 (1998), State ex rel. Schmitz v. Knight, 142 Wn.App. 291 (2007), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022), see: State v. Afeworki, 189 Wn.App. 327 (2015) II.

State v. Buelna, 83 Wn.App. 658 (1996)

Presence of standby counsel does not obviate the need to engage in full colloquy by court to determine intelligent and knowing waiver of counsel, see: State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369 (1991); II.

State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 737-43 (1997)

Where defendant requests substitute counsel or to proceed pro se, trial court may look at record as a whole to determine if defendant's waiver of counsel is unequivocal, see: State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434 (2006) , State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496 (2010), , aff'd, on other grounds, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008)State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013); 8-1.

State v. Romero, 95 Wn.App. 323 (1999)

While defendant may waive right to counsel on appeal, State v. Rafay, 167 Wn.2d 644 (2009), until he has done so he may not file pleadings in an appellate court other than a pro se supplemental brief, RAP 10.1(d), as there is no right to hybrid representation at trial or on appeal, see: Martinez v. Court of App. Of Cal., 145 L.Ed.2d 597 (2000); III.

Martinez v. Court of App. of Cal., 145 L.Ed.2d 597 (2000)

Defendant does not have constitutional right to represent self on appeal, distinguishing Faretta v. California, 45 L.Ed.2d 562 (1975), but see: State v. Rafay, 167 Wn.2d 644 (2009); 9-0.

Spokane v. Hamlett, 98 Wn.App. 841 (2000)

At each pretrial hearing, defendant expresses desire to represent himself, court engages in full colloquy on waiver of counsel 16 days before trial, on RALJ appeal, superior court dismisses, holding colloquy was not timely; held: defendant's desire to represent himself was consistent throughout proceedings, when colloquy was held he did not request continuance, thus colloquy was timely; III.

State v. Silva, 107 Wn.App. 605 (2001)

A pro se pretrial detainee has a right of reasonable access to state-provided resources to prepare a meaningful defense, CONST., art. I, § 22; what measures are necessary to constitute reasonable access lie within sound discretion of trial court after considering nature of charge, complexity of issues, need for investigation, orderly administration of justice, fair allocation of resources, security, conduct of accused, see: State v. Fritz, 21 Wn.App. 354, 359-63 (1978); whether an investigator must be appointed must be determined by trial court after considering needs of the case; inmate need not be granted access to a direct dial telephone where all of defendant's needs can be met by a jail collect-only telephone; unless otherwise ordered by trial court, standby counsel is not required to actually perform research and errands on behalf of a pro se defendant; standby counsel may be ordered by the court to act as liaison between accused and court including confirming motions, coordinating discovery and interviews, providing forms, assisting in securing an investigator, if necessary, and any other duties logically associated with appointed counsel that would satisfy accused's right of access to tools necessary to prepare an adequate defense; I.

State v. Bolar, 118 Wn.App. 490, 515-17 (2003)

One month before trial, court grants defendant right to proceed pro se with standby counsel, trial begins and is then recessed for months, defendant decides to accept counsel, later seeks to proceed pro se again which trial court denies; held: because trial had begun, trial court had discretion to grant or deny defendant's request to proceed pro se, State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 376-77 (1991), but see: State v. Paumier, 155 Wn.App. 674, 686-88 (2010), affirmed, on other grounds, 176 Wn.2d 29 (2012); I.

Iowa v. Tovar, 158 L.Ed.2d 209 (2004)

At arraignment, trial court advises defendant, who expresses a desire to waive counsel and plead guilty, of his right to counsel, maximum and minimum penalties and elements of the crime, accepts plea, defendant seeks to set it aside; held: Sixth Amendment does not oblige trial court to advise a defendant, seeking to plead guilty without counsel, of the risk that a viable defense may be overlooked or that waiving counsel deprives defendant of opportunity to obtain an independent opinion on whether, under facts and law, it is wise to plead guilty; "[t]he constitutional requirement is satisfied when the trial court informs the accused of the nature of the charges against him, of his right to be counseled regarding his plea, and of the range of allowable punishments," at 216; 9-0.

State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 427-30 (2004)

During colloquy on waiver of counsel, trial court's failure to advise defendant of elements of crime and possible defenses is not error where record establishes that defendant was aware of the nature of the charges, distinguishing State v. Silva, 108 Wn.App. 536 (2001); I.

State v. Hemenway, 122 Wn.App. 787 (2004)

Trial court may properly deny a defendant's demand to represent himself where defendant engages in disruptive behavior, State v. Bolar, 118 Wn.App. 490, 516 (2003), as long as court performs a proper colloquy and analyzes facts and circumstances on the record, distinguishing State v. Barker, 75 Wn.App. 236, 241-42 (1994); II.

State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008)

Defense counsel seeks continuance over defendant's objection, defendant demands to proceed pro se, trial court engages in full colloquy and grants motion, state adds count later; held: when a defendant makes a clear and knowing request to proceed pro se, such a request is not rendered equivocal by the fact that the defendant is motivated by something other than a singular desire to conduct his own defense, State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 378-79 (1991), State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496 (2010), State v. Curry, 191 Wn.2d 475 (2018). cf.: State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561 (2001), State v. Luvene, 127 Wn.2d 690 (1995), State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013); reappointment of counsel after a valid waiver is within discretion of trial court, State v. DeWeese, supra., at 376-77, State v. Canedo-Astorga, 79 Wn.App. 518, 525-27 (1995), State v. Fisher, 188 Wn.App. 924 (2015), addition of new charge is a factor weighing in favor of granting the motion, although it is still within trial court's discretion to find that other circumstances militated in favor of denying the request, at 444 n. 4; trial court is not required to engage in an additional colloquy where information is amended, at 446 ¶¶ 29-30, see State v. Phan, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 522 P.3d 105 (2022); I.

State ex rel. Schmitz v. Knight, 142 Wn.App. 291 (2007)

Prior to civil contempt hearing which may result in incarceration, contemnor persists in demanding counsel but appeared numerous times without counsel, trial court finds contemnor forfeited right to counsel; held: waiver of counsel by conduct does not conform to the Sixth Amendment unless contemnor is first warned of the consequences, including the risks of proceeding pro se, Tacoma v. Bishop, 82 Wn.App. 850 (1996), State v. Osborne, 70 Wn.App. 640 (1993), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022), see: In re Welfare of G.E., 116 Wn.App. 326, 337-38 (2003), State v. Afeworki, 189 Wn.App. 327 (2015), State v. Stutzke, 2 Wn.App.2d 927, 937-38 (2018); I.

Indiana v. Edwards, 171 L.Ed.2d 345 (2008)

States may insist upon representation by counsel for competent defendants who still suffer from severe mental illness to the point where they are not competent to conduct trial proceedings by themselves, see: Pers. Restraint of Rhome, 172 Wn.2d 654 (2011), State v. Lawrence, 166 Wn.App. 378 (2012), State v. Englund, 186 Wn.App. 444 (2015), State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 807 (2020), distinguishing Faretta v. California, 45 L.Ed.2d 562 (1975), but see: State v. Hahn, 106 Wn.2d 885 (1986), State v. Honton, 85 Wn.App. 415, 418-22 (1997), State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844 (2002); 7-2.

State v. Rafay, 167 Wn.2d 644 (2009)

Defendant has a state constitutional right to represent himself on appeal, cf.: Martinez v. Court of App. Of Cal., 145 L.Ed.2d 597 (2000) ; 9-0.

State v. Pugh, 153 Wn.App. 569 (2009)

Defendant, appearing pro se with standby counsel, seeks to withdraw guilty plea, argues on appeal that standby counsel was ineffective for not obtaining affidavits or serving subpoenas; held: standby counsel is not obligated to perform research and errands unless ordered by the court, State v. Silva, 107 Wn.App. 605 (2001), court here ordered counsel to assist defendant in preparing motion to withdraw plea which counsel completed, record does not even show that defendant asked standby counsel to help obtain witnesses; II.

State v. Paumier, 155 Wn.App. 673, 686-88 (2010), affirmed, on other grounds, 176 Wn.2d 29 (2012)

After jury is selected but before it was sworn, defendant asks to represent himself, does not seek a continuance, trial court denies it as untimely; held: while court has some discretion to deny self-representation on the eve of or during trial, State v. Breedlove, 79 Wn.App. 101 (1995), timeliness should not operate as a bar to defendant's right to defend pro se; absent evidence that trial would be delayed it is an abuse of discretion to deny the unequivocal demand; 2-1, II.

Pers. Restraint of Rhome, 172 Wn.2d 654 (2011)

When a mentally ill defendant seeks to waive counsel, trial court is not independently obliged to determine whether defendant is mentally competent to proceed pro se, State v. Lawrence, 166 Wn.App. 378 (2012), State v. Phan, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 522 P.3d 105 (2022); courts may inquire further into a defendant's ability to waive counsel when mental health concerns are present, see: Indiana v. Edwards, 554 U.S. 164, 171

L.Ed.2d 345 (2008), State v. Kolocotronis, 73 Wn.2d 92 (1968), State v. Hahn, 106 Wn.2d 885 (1986), , State v. Englund, 186 Wn.App. 444 (2015), State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 807 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Lawrence, 166 Wn.App. 378 (2012)

While trial court has discretion to consider a defendant's known mental illness in determining if he is competent to represent himself, it is not required to do so, particularly where there is no present behavior to suggest defendant is mentally incompetent to represent himself, State v. Phan, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 522 P.3d 105 (2022), see: Indiana v. Edwards, 554 U.S. 164, 171 L.Ed.2d 345 (2008), Pers. Restraint of Rhome, 172 Wn.2d 654 (2011), State v. Englund, 186 Wn.App. 444 (2015), see: State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 867 (2020); III.

State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 465-69 (2012)

Purposeful disruptive misconduct may be grounds to deny pro se status, State v. Hemenway, 122 Wn.App. 787, 792-96 (2004), State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 867 (2020), distinguishing State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496, 509 (2010); I.

State v. Mehrabian, 175 Wn.App. 678, 690-95 (2013)

Defendant expresses dissatisfaction with appointed counsel, retains a lawyer, later asks to proceed pro se with retained counsel as standby counsel which court approves after colloquy, later retained counsel is granted leave to withdraw since he was not being paid, court readvises defendant that he has no right to standby counsel, that court will not appoint standby counsel, gives defendant the chance to get a public defender, defendant declines and says he will represent himself; held: a desire to proceed pro se partly because defendant is dissatisfied with counsel does not constitute an equivocal request, State v. Curry, 191 Wn.2d 475 (2018) ,State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434, 442 (2006), aff'd, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008), State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 742 (1997), distinguishing State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561 (2001); "when a defendant makes a clear and knowing request to proceed pro se, such a request is not rendered equivocal by the fact that the defendant is motivated by something other than a singular desire to conduct his or her own defense," State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 378 (1991); I

State v. Floyd, 178 Wn.App. 402 (2013)

Defendant, representing himself with standby counsel, refers during closing to several facts not in evidence, is admonished, continues to attempt to offer evidence through statements to the jury, trial court excuses jury, defendant promises to avoid further disruption, court declines another chance, finds defendant was intentionally disrupting the trial, over defense and state's objection revokes pro se status, standby counsel gives closing argument raising a defense different that the one defendant was raising (defendant: victim injured herself; counsel: convict only of lesser as injuries were not substantial); held: trial court may revoke pro se status where it finds, and the record supports, intentional disruptive conduct, State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496 (2010); trial court should consider the fact that forcing counsel on a defendant may force an unwanted defense, see: State v. Coristine, 177 Wn.2d 370, 376-77 (2013), here revocation was not manifestly unreasonable; II.

State v . Cobos, 178 Wn.App. 692 (2013), aff'd, on other grounds, 182 Wn.2d 12 (2014)

Defendant moves to represent himself at sentencing, before court approves defense counsel agrees to offender score of 9, at sentencing defendant objections to offender score, court offers continuance for state to prove priors, defendant declines, court accepts counsel's agreement; held: counsel's agreement while defendant's motion to represent himself was improper, Haller v. Wallis, 89 Wn.2d 539, 547 (1978), as an attorney can waive substantive rights only with specific authorization, State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919, 922 (1995), Graves v. P.J. Taggares Co., 94 Wn.2d 298, 303 (1980), State v. Sain, 34 Wn.App. 553, 556-57 (1983); III.

State v. Coley, 180 Wn.2d 543, 559-62 (2014)

A trial court may defer a decision on self-representation pending a competency determination as long as there has been a proper referral for evaluation and treatment, State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496, 510 (2010), State v. Sabon, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 600 (2022); defendant's moved to proceed pro se which was deferred pending competency hearing, after defendant is found competent, following filing by defendant of a "Motion for Order to Speculate Right to Self Defense," trial court expressed that it did not understand the motion, defendant replies with an unrelated question about plea bargaining, trial court did not abuse discretion in denying defendant's equivocal request to represent himself; 7-2.

State v. Englund, 186 Wn.App. 444 (2015)

Defendant asks to represent himself, trial judge orders him to file a written motion, at next hearing with no written motion court engages in colloquy, defendant answers tangentially, court finds defendant lacked capacity to understand and follow rules, denies self-representation, counsel later moves for reconsideration, court denies it because it wasn't filed timely; held: trial court may consider defendant's capacity to represent himself and deny self-representation, see: Indiana v. Edwards, 554 U.S. 164, 171 L.Ed.2d 345 (2008), Pers. Restraint of Rhome, 172 Wn.2d 654 (2011), State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 867 (2020), but see: State v. Hahn, 106 Wn.2d 885 (1986); dissent distinguishes ability v. capacity to represent oneself; 2-1, II.

State v. Fisher, 188 Wn.App. 924 (2015)

Defendant waives counsel, is provided standby counsel shortly before trial, when state rests defendant demands counsel, standby reports he is unprepared to proceed and moves for a mistrial, arguing defendant is "mentally incapable" of self-representation, denied; held: no evidence supported the claim that defendant was mentally incapable of representing himself, distinguishing State v. Bebb, 108 Wn.2d 515 (1987), standby counsel is not obliged to be prepared to take over representation on a moment's notice, see: State v. McDonald, 143 Wn.2d 506, 511 (2001), rather standby counsel's role is to provide technical information, trial court did not abuse discretion; II.

State v. Afeworki, 189 Wn.App. 327, 344-51 (2015)

Defendant demands to proceed pro se, court engages in full colloquy finding valid waiver, defendant later is granted leave to change his mind and court appoints counsel, at trial defendant again demands to represent himself which is denied as untimely, defendant threatens counsel, judge warns him that if he continues he will be forced to represent himself, defendant threatens counsel again, court refuses to appoint other counsel, engages in colloquy whereupon defendant waives counsel, next day defendant demands new counsel, court denies it and obliges defendant to represent himself; held: where defendant is made aware of the risks of self-representation he may lose his right to counsel through forfeiture or waiver by conduct, Tacoma v. Bishop, 82 Wn.App. 850, 856 (1996), see: State ex rel. Schmitz v. Knight, 142 Wn.App. 291 (2007), State v. Osborne, 70 Wn.App. 640 (1993), In re Welfare of G.E., 116 Wn.App. 326, 337-38 (2003), Dependency of E.P., 136 Wn.App. 401 (2006), State v. Stutzke, 2 Wn.App.2d 927, 937-38 (2018), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 252 (2022); 2-1, I.

State v. Howard, 1 Wn.App.2d 420 (2017)

Waiver of the right to counsel is invalid if the trial court does not inform the defendant of the maximum penalty for the charged crime State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 376-77 (1991), State v. Silva, 108 Wn.2d. 536, 541-42 (2001), and the defendant is not otherwise aware of the maximum penalty, State v. Sinclair, 46 Wash. App. 433, 437, 730 P.2d 742 (1986); II.

State v. Curry, 191 Wn.2d 475 (2018)

Expressing frustration with his attorney's motion for a continuance, defendant asserts he has "no choice" but to represent himself because he wishes to assert his right to a speedy trial, court engages in colloquy, defendant asserts that his waiver is not voluntary, court accepts waiver of counsel; held: while defendant's waiver was motivated by his frustration with delays by counsel, the court's colloquy established that the waiver was unequivocal, trial court did not abuse discretion; reverses State v. Curry, 199 Wn.App. 43 (2017); 9-0 (see concurrence regarding arguably inconsistent decisions).

State v. Stutzke, 2 Wn.App.2d 927, 937-38 (2018)

Over the course of three years defendant fired his first public defender to proceed pro se, then asked for and received new public defender, later alleged that the new lawyer was intoxicated in court and refused to meet with the lawyer, court previously advised defendant of the consequences of proceeding pro se and warned defendant that the right to counsel will be lost if defendant engages in dilatory conduct or misconduct, defendant refused to come to court and complained to county risk management about counsel, court allows counsel to withdraw and requires defendant to proceed without counsel; held: defendant received requisite warnings, through his conduct defendant forfeited right to counsel, Tacoma v. Bishop, 82 Wn.App. 850 (1996), State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 379 (1991), State v. Afeworki, 189 Wn.App. 327, 346 (2015), State v. Sinclair, 46 Wn.App. 433, 437 (1986), State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022); III.

State v. Davis, 195 Wn.2d 571 (2020)

At trial, after court denies pro se defendant's motions for continuance and standby counsel, defendant becomes extremely disruptive, demands to leave, after court cautions defendant and informs him that if he leaves he will not be able to cross-examine state's witnesses defendant continues to disrupt and leaves courtroom, trial proceeds, on appeal defendant claims right to be present was violated and he was denied right to counsel to cross-examine witnesses; held: " trial judges who are confronted with disruptive, "contumacious, stubbornly defiant defendants must be given sufficient discretion to meet the circumstances of each case. No one formula for maintaining the appropriate courtroom atmosphere will be best in all situations," Illinois v. Allen, 397 U.S. 337, 343, 90 S. Ct. 1057, 25 L. Ed. 2d 353 (1970), State v. Chapple, 145 Wn.2d 310, 318 (2001); while court would have been justified in removing defendant due to his disruptive behavior, here defendant's repeated demands to absent himself amounts to a waiver of the right to be present, see: State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369, 381 (1991); reverses State v. Davis, 6 Wn.App. 43 (2018); 6-3.

State v. Palmer, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 252 (2022) (2022)

Defendant, with court's permission, fires three lawyers after which court requires that he represent himself with standby counsel; held: defendant's behavior was not "extremely dilatory," see: Tacoma v. Bishop, 82 Wn.App. 850 (1996), Dependency of E.P., 136 Wn.App. 401, 405-406 (2006), no evidence he was threatening or abusive or refused to communicate with lawyers, was not advised of the dangers of proceeding pro se, State v. Christensen, 40 Wn.App. 290 (1985), or that he will lose the right to counsel if he engages in dilatory tactics or misconduct, thus defendant did not waive the right to counsel; op. at 18 Wn.App. 825 (2021) withdrawn; II.

State v. Sabon, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 Wn.App. 600 (2022)

Defendant seeks to proceed pro se, judge asks for a reason, defendant states that counsel isn't raising issues he wishes to raise, states that he is suffering from "untreated mental issues," court finds that request was equivocal and he was not competent to waive; held: motion to proceed pro se was timely and unequivocal, frustration with counsel's performance does not render the request equivocal, State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434 (2006), aff'd on other grounds, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008), court failed to engage in waiver colloquy to determine if waiver is knowingly, voluntary and intelligent, State v. Burns, 193 Wn.2d 190 (2019), State v. Madsen, 168 Wn.2d 496 (2010), absent competency evaluation court erred in determining defendant was incompetent to waive counsel, Madsen, id., at 510, State v. Hahn, 106 Wn.2d 885 (1986), State v. Coley, 180 Wn.2d 543, 559-62 (2014); I.

State v. Phan, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL17958603 (2022)

After full colloquy defendant waives counsel after which information is amended to add another felony, at bench trial defense is diminished capacity due to mental illness, rejected by court, defendant maintains court should have sua sponte conducted another colloquy on self-representation due to added charge and mental illness; held: fact that maximum penalty changed due to added charge, which was not included in the waiver colloquy, does not invalidate the waiver or require further colloquy; adding a new charge does not obligate the court to engage in further colloquy on waiver of counsel, State v. Modica, 136 Wn.App. 434, 444-53 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 164 Wn.2d 83 (2008); trial court has no duty to inquire into a defendant's mental health when assessing validity of waiver of counsel and no duty to reassess validity of waiver absent any indication that defendant is not competent to stand trial, State v. Lawrence, 166 Wn.App. 378 (2012), Pers. Restraint of Rhome, 172 Wn.2d 654 (2011); "[w]hen a trial court sua sponte induces a pro se defendant to engage in a second colloquy, the purpose of which is to get the pro se defendant to second-guess the defendant's original unequivocal decision to waive counsel, the defendant's choice is not "be[ing] honored," Faretta v. California, 422 U.S. 806, 834, 95 S. Ct. 2525, 45 L. Ed. 2d 562 (1975); I.

DEADLY WEAPON/FIREARM

State v. Theroff, 95 Wn.2d 385 (1980)

Special allegations must be included in the information or they cannot be used to enhance penalty, but see: State v. Henthorn, 85 Wn.App. 235 (1997); 6-3.

State v. Claborn, 95 Wn.2d 629 (1981)

Where defendant fired at police with a .357, failure to instruct that state must prove firearm beyond a reasonable doubt, is harmless error; accomplice may have sentence enhanced even if s/he never touched firearm; 9-0.

State v. Rieger, 96 Wn.2d 546 (1981)

Deadly weapon and firearm special verdicts should not be submitted to jury unless there is specific evidence providing a reasonable basis by which trier of fact could find actual or constructive possession; reverses State v. Rieger, 26 Wn.App. 321 (1980); 7-2.

State v. Hauck, 33 Wn.App. 75 (1982)

Defendant was convicted of robbery 1° but found not to have been armed with a deadly weapon; the only evidence of a weapon was of a 6-3/4" knife (by statute a deadly weapon); defendant argued inconsistent verdicts; held: jury could have believed defendant "displayed" a deadly weapon per robbery 1° statute RCW 9A.56.200, but was not "armed with" such a weapon per deadly weapon statute RCW 9.95.015, 9.95.040; III.

State v. Goforth, 33 Wn.App. 405 (1982)

Two witnesses testify defendant displayed what appeared to be a shotgun and that they are familiar with shotguns; held: prima facie case established, State v. Pam, 30 Wn.App. 471 (1981), State v. Bowman, 36 Wn.App. 798, 803 (1984), State v. McKee, 141 Wn.App. 22, 30-32 (2007); I.

State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982)

Jury must be instructed that, in order to return a special verdict finding defendant armed with a deadly weapon and/or firearm, it has to find that unarmed defendant knew his/her co-defendant was so armed; distinguishes State v. Willis, 5 Wn.App. 441 (1971), State v. Silvernail, 25 Wn.App. 185 (1980); accord: State v. Davis, 39 Wn.App. 916 (1985), see: , State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015), but see: State v. Bilal, 54 Wn.App. 778 (1989), State v. Pulido, 68 Wn.App. 59 (1992) ; 5-4.

State v. Beaton, 34 Wn.App. 125 (1983)

Where a pistol is used, court may instruct jury that a pistol is a deadly weapon, and need not give WPIC 2.07; where defendant is charged with robbery with a firearm (as opposed to "appeared to be a firearm"), court need not instruct jury that firearm, for special verdict, must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, distinguishing State v. Tongate, 93 Wn.2d 751 (1980); II.

State v. Harvey, 34 Wn.App. 737 (1983)

Deadly weapon statute, RCW 9.95.040, when applied to robbery 1°, does not violate double jeopardy clause; accord, State v. Woods, 34 Wn.App. 750 (1983); State v. Harris, 34 Wn.App. 649 (1983); I

State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865 (1983)

Robber puts hand in pocket and threatens "I have this" to get money from victim who believes pocket contains a firearm; held: evidence was sufficient to establish element "displays what appears to be a firearm," former RCW 9A.56.200(1)(b), State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533, 537-39 (2000), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.2d 662, 674-77 (2000), State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001), State v. Jennings, 111 Wn.App. 54, 62-66 (2002); III.

State v. Thomas, 35 Wn.App. 161 (1983)

Defendant receives suspended sentence, RCW 9.92.060, for assault, completes probation and has civil rights restored, RCW 9.92.066 is charged with felon in possession of pistol, RCW 9.41.040; held: restoration of civil rights following suspended sentence will not prevent subsequent conviction of Uniform Firearms Act prosecution, RCW 9.41.040, State v. S.G., 11 Wn.App.2d 74 (2019); I.

State v. Mathé, 35 Wn.App. 572 (1983)

Where no gun is recovered, but a proper State v. Tongate, 93 Wn.2d 751 (1980) instruction is given, court will not reverse firearm finding for insufficient evidence, even though there is no direct evidence as to whether gun was "real and operable", State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.App. 151, 158-63 (1999), rev'd, on other grounds, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 197-200 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012), State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016), State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 872-73 (2016), State v. Jusila, 197 Wn.App. 908, 932-34 (2017), but see: State v. Pierce, 155 Wn.App. 701, 714 (2010), effectively overruled, State v. Olsen, 10 Wn.App.2d 731 (2019); I.

State v. Pam, 98 Wn.2d 748 (1983)

Failure to give Tongate instruction where weapon was never recovered or fired was error, reversing State v. Pam, 30 Wn.App. 471 (1981), see: State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990); 9-0.

Dickeson v. New Banner Institute, Inc., 74 L.Ed.2d 845 (1983)

1968 Gun Control Act (felon in possession), 18 USC § 922(g) and (h) applies to state defendants whose deferred sentence was dismissed; 5-4.

State v. Bowman, 36 Wn.App. 798 (1984)

Witness's testimony that she believed gun was real plus defendant's threat to shoot is sufficient evidence to support a firearm finding, State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.App. 151, 158-63 (1999), rev'd, on other grounds, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 197-200 (2011) , affirmed, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012); I.

State v. Alferez, 37 Wn.App. 508 (1984)

State amends information to add special allegations, sends copy to defense counsel but defendant is not arraigned on amended information; held: may not enhance penalty without actual notice, thus remanded for resentencing, State v. Theroff, 95 Wn.2d 385 (1980); III.

State v. Rahier, 37 Wn.App. 571 (1984)

When defendant is charged with special allegations that defendant used a firearm, jury should be instructed that a firearm is a deadly weapon as a matter of law; first sentence of WPIC 2.07, RCW 9.95.040 should be deleted; defense may be precluded from arguing that an unloaded firearm is not a deadly weapon; II.

State v. Gore, 101 Wn.2d 481 (1984)

Following defendant's conviction of felon in possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.040, his prior burglary was reversed for insufficiency; held: to prove VUFA, state must prove validity of prior conviction, State v. Swindell, 101 Wn.2d 481 (1984), State v. Summers, 120 Wn.2d 801 (1993); reverses State v. Gore, 35 Wn.App. 62 (1983); 9-0.

State v. Davis, 101 Wn.2d 654 (1984)

Accomplice to robbery 1° may be convicted even if s/he did not know the principal was armed, State v. McChristian, 158 Wn.App. 392, 399-40 (2010), affirming State v. Davis, 35 Wn.App. 506 (1983), reversing State v. Plakke, 31 Wn.App. 262, 266 (1982) and State v. McKeown, 23 Wn.App. 582, 591-93 (1979); to enhance with special allegations accomplice must know principal was armed, State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982) see: , State v. Hayes, 182 Wn.2d 556 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Theilken, 102 Wn.2d 271 (1984)

Deadly weapon/firearm enhancement provisions, RCW 9.41.025, RCW 9.95.040, may apply to unintentional crimes such as manslaughter; 9-0.

State v. Hall, 40 Wn.App. 162 (1985)

Witness testifies defendant held a knife "a little bigger than a penknife" to her neck; held: sufficient for deadly weapon finding; I.

State v. Reid, 40 Wn.App. 319 (1985)

Double jeopardy clause does not prohibit deadly weapon/firearm enhancement for substantive offense of violation of uniform firearm act, State v. Harris, 102 Wn.2d 148 (1984); Missouri v. Hunter, 74 L.Ed.2d 535 (1983); II.

State v. Barnes, 42 Wn.App. 56 (1985)

To prove possession of a weapon by a prisoner, RCW 9.94.040, state need not prove validity of underlying conviction; I.

State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986)

For sentence enhancement purposes, RCW 9.95.040(1) and former RCW 9.41.025, a defendant is "armed with" a deadly weapon when he is arrested in his vehicle for VUCSA and there is a loaded gun under the driver's seat, cf.: State v. Mills, 80 Wn.App. 231 (1995), see:

State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882 (1999), State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), State v. Gurske, 120 Wn.App. 63 (2004), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018); III.

McLaughlin v. United States, 90 L.Ed.2d 15 (1986)

An unloaded handgun is a "dangerous weapon," 18 USC. §2113(d); 9-0.

State v. Sullivan, 47 Wn.App. 81 (1987)

An unloaded firearm is a deadly weapon, RCW 9.94A.125, for purposes of sentence enhancement, former RCW 9.94A.310(3), [recodified as RCW 9.94A.533, 9.94A.825], State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.App. 151, 156-63 (1999), rev'd, on other grounds, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), see also: State v. Faust, 93 Wn.App. 373 (1998), State v. Bernier, 110 Wn.App. 639 (2002), State v. Raleigh, 157 Wn.App. ; II.

State v. Randle, 47 Wn.App. 232 (1987)

A defendant is armed with a deadly weapon if it is readily available and accessible for either offensive or defensive purposes, RCW 9A.52.020; accomplice need not know principal is armed to be convicted of burglary 1°, State v. Brown, 36 Wn.App. 549 (1984); I.

State v. Coe, 109 Wn.2d 832 (1988)

Mere threat to use deadly weapon, without actually displaying same, is sufficient to convict of rape 1°, State v. Hentz, 99 Wn.2d 538 (1983), see: State v. Bright, 129 Wn.2d 257, 265-73 (1996), State v. Majors, 82 Wn.App. 843, 846-7 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Faille, 53 Wn.App. 111 (1988)

Stealing an unloaded gun during a burglary is sufficient to enhance to burglary 1°, State v. Hall, 46 Wn.App. 689 (1987), State v. Hernandez, 172 Wn.App. 537 (2012), see: Personal Restraint of Martinez, 171 Wn.2d 354 (2011), but see: State v. Gotcher, 52 Wn.App. 350 (1988), State v. Chiariello, 66 Wn.App. 241 (1992); I.

State v. Anderson, 54 Wn.App. 384 (1989)

Knowledge that a gun is loaded is not an element of carrying a loaded pistol in a vehicle without a license, RCW 9.41.050(3), State v. Pinkham, 2 Wn.App.2d 411 (2018), see: State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000); III.

State v. Bilal, 54 Wn.App. 778 (1989)

Post SRA, jury need not be instructed that, to return special verdict, defendant knew co-defendant was armed, legislatively reversing State v. McKim, 98 Wn.2d 111 (1982); I, 2-1.

State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59 (1990)

Where court gives reasonable doubt instruction, but fails to instruct that firearm must be found beyond reasonable doubt, error may be harmless, distinguishing State v. Tongate, 93 Wn.2d 751 (1980); 9-0.

State v. Thierry, 60 Wn.App. 445 (1991)

Statute prohibiting carrying loaded pistol in any vehicle absent license, RCW 9.41.050(3), does not require proof that defendant had gun on his person; II.

Seattle v. Riggins, 63 Wn.App. 313 (1991), op. withdrawn, 68 Wn.App. 934 (1993)

Ordinance prohibiting carrying of any fixed-blade knife, with exemptions, SMC § 12A.14.080(B), is not unconstitutional infringement on right to bear arms, CONST., Art. 1, § 24, nor is it overbroad; I.

State v. Carlson, 65 Wn.App. 153 (1992)

A BB gun is not a deadly weapon per se, but it is a question of fact as to whether or not it is readily capable of causing substantial bodily harm, RCW 9A.04.110(6), see: State v. Taylor, 97 Wn.App. 123 (1999); I.

State v. Chiariello, 66 Wn.App. 241 (1992)

Mere threat to use a weapon, or searching in pocket for weapon without production of weapon, is insufficient to convict of burglary 1°, State v. Faille, 53 Wn.App. 111, 113 (1988), State v. Gotcher, 52 Wn.App. 350, 353 (1988), see: Personal Restraint of Martinez, 171 Wn.2d 354 (2011); III.

State v. Summers, 120 Wn.2d 801 (1993)

In VUFA trial, defense may challenge present use of prior conviction, State v. Gore, 101 Wn.2d 481 (1984); initial defense burden is to offer a colorable, fact-specific argument supporting the claim of constitutional error in prior conviction, after which state bears burden of proving that predicate conviction is constitutionally sound, even where prior conviction was based upon a jury verdict affirmed on appeal; failure to assign burden of disproving lawful use of force to state invalidates present use of prior homicide conviction; 9-0.

State v. Cook, 69 Wn.App. 412 (1993)

For sentence enhancement, former RCW 9.94A.310(3) [recodified as 9.94A.533], court must define a deadly weapon as one capable of producing death, RCW 9.94A.125, WPIC 2.07, inflicting injury is insufficient, State v. Thompson, 88 Wn.2d 546, 549 (1977), harmless here; I.

State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993)

In VUCSA case, an unloaded rifle found under defendant's bed, without more, is insufficient to qualify as "armed," which requires having a weapon accessible and readily available for offensive or defensive purposes, State v. Call, 75 Wn.App. 866 (1994), State v. Mills, 80 Wn.App. 231 (1995), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 891-97 (1999), State v. Gurske, 155 Wn.2d 134 (2005), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 102-05 (2007), cf.: State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986), State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 508, 513-4 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998), State v. Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018), but see: State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 882-83 (1998), State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712, 726-29 (2004), State v. Neff, 163 Wn.2d 453, 461-65 (2008); 8-0.

Seattle v. Ballsmider, 71 Wn.App. 159 (1993)

Ordinance prohibiting discharging a firearm, SMC § 12A.28.050, may set maximum penalty of one year in jail, RCW 9.41.290, 9.41.300(2)(a); I.

State v. Ruff, 122 Wn.2d 731 (1993)

RCW 9.41.040(4), which prohibits one acquitted by reason of insanity from ever possessing a short firearm, violates equal protection clause, as one who is convicted of a violent felony may apply for restoration of that right, Morris v. Blaker, 118 Wn.2d 133 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111, 124-26 (1994)

Deadly weapon enhancement, RCW 9.94A.125, does not deny defendant constitutional right to keep and bear arms, CONST. Art. 1, § 24, State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986); gun sitting on table next to defendant, even if it is unloaded in a bag, is sufficient to enhance where a loaded clip is also in the bag, State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018), cf.: State v. Mills, 80 Wn.App. 231 (1995), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 891-97 (1999), State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712, 726-29 (2004), see: State v. Gurske, 155 Wn.2d 134 (2005), State v. Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005); I.

State v. Hernandez-Mercado, 124 Wn.2d 368 (1994)

RCW 9.41.170, prohibiting unlicensed possession of a firearm by an alien who has not declared an intent to become a United States citizen, is neither preempted by federal law nor violative of equal protection clause; 9-0.

State v. Spencer, 75 Wn.App. 118 (1994)

Unlawful display of a weapon, former RCW 9.41.270(1), does not unconstitutionally restrict the right to bear arms, CONST. Art 1, § 24, see: State v. Montana, 129 Wn.2d 583 (1996), Seattle v. Evans, 184 Wn.2d 856 (2015); carrying a visibly loaded AK-47 assault rifle, head down, walking briskly, avoiding eye contact with passers-by, at night in a residential area falls within statute's core, applying a reasonable person standard into the statutory phrase, "warrants alarm," State v. Maciolek, 101 Wn.2d 259 (1984); I.

State v. Samaniego, 76 Wn.App. 76 (1994)

Defendant is arrested in vehicle with drugs, four-inch blade knife is wedged between driver's seat and armrest; held: knife over three inches is per se a deadly weapon , RCW 9.94A.125, defendant was armed for enhancement purposes due to placement of knife, State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986), cf.: State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 891-97 (1999); I.

State v. Myles, 127 Wn.2d 807 (1995)

Concealed weapons statute, RCW 9.41.250, which prohibits "furtively carry[ing] with intent to conceal" a weapon does not require an overt movement to conceal, reversing State v. Myles, 75 Wn.App. 643 (1994); carrying a kitchen knife in an inner pocket at 1:00 a.m. "in the presence of other people in an inhospitable situation" is sufficient to convict, cf.: State v. Echeverria, 85 Wn.App. 777, 784 (1997); 6-3.

State v. Watkins, 76 Wn.App. 726, 731-2 (1995)

In VUFA case, RCW 9.41.040(4), where prior conviction occurred before VUFA statute was adopted, there is no ex post facto violation where crime which constituted a violation of the firearms statute occurred after the VUFA law became effective, State v. Schmidt, 143 Wn.2d 658 (2001); I.

State v. Wright, 76 Wn.App. 811, 816-9 (1995)

Identity is an element of the corpus delicti of VUFA, former RCW 9.41.040(4), Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 574 (1986), as the element of a prior conviction cannot be proved without identifying a particular person; I.

State v. Shilling, 77 Wn.App. 166, 171-2 (1995)

A bar glass used by defendant to strike victim in the head causing lacerations, stitches, embedding of glass shard in head, is sufficient to prove use of a deadly weapon for assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.021(1), see: State v. Banagan, 102 Wn.App. 754, 760-62 (2000), State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 87-88 (2005), cf.: State v. Skenandore, 99 Wn.App. 494 (2000); I.

State v. Mills, 80 Wn.App. 231 (1995)

Gun found with drugs in a motel room rented by defendant several miles from where defendant was arrested is not readily available and easily accessible for enhancement, RCW 9.94A.125, -.310(3)(c), State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 891-97 (1999), State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712, 726-29 (2004), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 102-05 (2007), distinguishing State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986), State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111, 124-6 (1994), but see: State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), cf.: State v. Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005); II.

State v. Lucky, 128 Wn.2d 727 (1996)

Unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270, is not a lesser of assault 2°, as there are alternative means of committing the crime of assault 2°, and every element of the proposed lesser is not a necessary element of the greater, State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1, 4 (1993), State v. Curran, 116 Wn.2d 174, 183 (1991), State v. Hurchalla, 75 Wn.App. 417 (1994), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), even though defendant was only charged with assault 2° with a deadly weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(c), but see: State v. Boggett, 103 Wn.App. 564 (2000); 7-2.

State v. Bright, 129 Wn.2d 257, 265-73 (1996)

Where rape 1° complainant testifies that defendant-police officer remained armed with his handgun in holster but did not threaten to use it, there is sufficient evidence to support the deadly weapon element, RCW 9A.44.040(1)(a), reversing State v. Bright, 77 Wn.App. 304, 309-10 (1995); see: State v. Lubers, 81 Wn.App. 614, 619-21 (1995); 6-3.

Seattle v. Montana, 129 Wn.2d 583 (1996)

City ordinance prohibiting carrying, concealed or unconcealed, a fixed blade knife, SMC § 12A.14, does not violate CONST. Art. 1, § 24, ("right…to bear arms in defense"), as it is a reasonable arms regulation under city's police power, as the ordinance includes occupational and recreational exceptions, SMC § 12A.14.100(A), (B) and (C), Seattle v. Evans, 184 Wn.2d 856

(2015), see: State v. Spencer, 75 Wn.App. 118 (1994); court does not reach issue of whether knives in question are "arms" as counsel failed to engage in state constitutional law analysis, State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54 (1986), but see: State v. Mayfield, 192 Wn.2d 871 (2019); ordinance is neither vague nor overbroad; 4-2-3.

State v. Majors, 82 Wn.App. 843, 846-7 (1996)

In attempted kidnapping 1° case, defendant points BB gun at victim, orders her into car or he would blow her head off, victim testifies she doubted that the gun could shoot bullets; held: while a BB gun is not capable of causing death or serious injury, the threat to use deadly force is sufficient to establish a substantial step, victim's disbelief does not negate substantial step; I.

State v. Russell, 84 Wn.App. 1 (1996)

Defendant is charged with two counts of VUFA, former RCW 9.41.040(1), for possessing two guns found in his car, statute prohibits possession by a felon of "any firearm"; held: "any" is ambiguous, thus statute must be construed in favor of defendant, State v. Wissing, 66 Wn.App. 745, 753 (1992), "any" means all embracing, equivalent to "all" or "every," State ex rel. Evans v. Brotherhood of Friends, 41 Wn.2d 133, 145 (1952), thus only one count will lie; statute subsequently amended, RCW 9.41.040(7); II.

State v. Reed, 84 Wn.App. 379 (1996)

In VUFA case, state need not prove that defendant knew his firearm possession was illegal, ignorance of the law not being a defense, State v. Patterson, 103 1005 (1984), State v. Semakula, 88 Wn.App. 719 (1997), State v. Blum, 1221 Wn.App. 1 (2004), State v. Moore, 121 Wn.App. 889 (2004), State v. Mitchell, 190 Wn.App. 919, 927-30 (2015), distinguishing Staples v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 608 (1994), State v. Williams, 158 Wn.2d 904 (2006), but see: State v. Leavitt, 107 Wn.App. 361 (2001), State v. Minor, 162 Wn.2d 796 (2008), State v. Breitung, 155 Wn.App. 601, 619-25 (2010), State v. Garcia, 198 Wn.App. 527 (2017); the fact that defendant's prior felony conviction occurred before state law required defendants to be given notice at sentencing, RCW 9.41.040, -047, does not violate equal protection; accord: State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 77 (2005), State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713, 719-21 (2005), State v. Stevens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 469 (2007); II.

State v. McKinley, 84 Wn.App. 677 (1997)

In VUFA case, former RCW 9.41.040(1)(a)[1995], a prior juvenile adjudication of robbery constitutes a conviction, see: In re A,B,C,D,E, 121 Wn.2d 80, 87 (1993), State v. Wright, 88 Wn.App. 683 (1997); I.

State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 508 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998)

Where drug defendant handles firearm at time of delivery and that it was on top of refrigerator, loaded, easily accessible from place of delivery, then defendant is "armed" for purposes of deadly weapon enhancement, RCW 9.94A.125, .310(3), State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986), State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 882-83 (1998), State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002); distinguishes State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270, 281 (1993); II.

State v. Echeverria, 85 Wn.App. 777, 783-4 (1997)

Police find throwing star and gun under driver's seat of car respondent was driving, star not visible from outside, gun is visible, respondent convicted of "furtively carrying with intent to conceal any dangerous weapon," for star, RCW 9.41.250, minor in possession of gun, RCW 9.41.040; held: sufficient to convict of gun charge, as gun was in plain sight and thus reasonable to infer defendant possessed or controlled the gun that was within his reach, State v. Turner, 103 Wn.App. 515 (2000), State v. Staley, 123 Wn.2d 794, 798 (1994), State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27, 29-30 (1969), State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 383-88 (2001), but see: State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 746-48 (2012); "there was no evidence before the court that possession of a throwing star is prohibited," further no evidence that defendant "carried" the star, as "carrying includes having the dangerous weapon on one's person, not just having it in one's hand," State v. Myles, 127 Wn.2d 807, 813 (1995), State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383, 388 (1990); III.

State v. Broadaway, 133 Wn.2d 118, 123-9 (1997)

Initiative 159, RCW 9.94A.602, providing for 60-month firearm enhancement, satisfies title and single subject requirements of CONST. Art. II, § 19, State v. Barnett, 91 Wn.App. 671, 674 (1998), aff'd, on other grounds, 139 Wn.2d 462 (1999), State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 340-42 (2003), see: State v. Holm, 91 Wn.App. 429, 439-40 (1998), State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 699-702 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Archambault, 86 Wn.App. 711 (1997)

First offender sentencing option, RCW 9.94A.120(5), is not available for a defendant convicted of burglary 2° with a firearm, former RCW 9.94A.310(3) [recodified as 9.94A.533]; II.

State v. Barajas, 88 Wn.App. 387 (1997)

Possession with intent to deliver in a school zone doubles the maximum sentence, RCW 69.50.435(a), thus when such a defendant is armed, the firearm enhancement period, former RCW 9.94A.310(3)(a) [recodified as 9.94A.533], depends upon the enhanced maximum sentence, State v. Blade, 126 Wn.App. 174 (2005), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 426-30 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007); III.

State v. Wright, 88 Wn.App. 683 (1997)

Unlawful firearm possession statute, RCW 9.41.010, prohibits possession of a firearm by a juvenile previously convicted in juvenile court of a serious offense, State v. Cheatham, 80 Wn.App. 269 (1996), State v. McKinley, 84 Wn.App. 677 (1997); I.

State v. Semakula, 88 Wn.App. 719 (1997)

In unlawful firearm possession case, RCW 9.41.010, state need not prove defendant knew his firearm possession was illegal, State v. Reed, 84 Wn.App. 379 (1996), State v. Blum, 121 Wn.App. 1 (2004), State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 77 (2005), State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713, 719-21 (2005), State v. Stevens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 468-69 (2007), see: State v. Mitchell, 190 Wn.App. 919, 927-30 (2015), State v. Nielsen, 14 Wn.App.2d 446 (2020), but see: State v. Leavitt, 107 Wn.App. 361 (2001), State v. Moore, 121 Wn.App. 889 (2004), State v. Minor, 162 Wn.2d 798 (2008), State v. Breitung, 155 Wn.App. 601, 619-25 (2010),State v. Garcia, 198 Wn.App. 527 (2017); I.

Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239 (1998)

Firearm enhancements, RCW 9.94A.310(3), run consecutive to the underlying sentence for the crime to which they apply, but when two or more offenses each carry firearm enhancements, they need not run consecutively to each other, State v. Conover, 183 Wn.2d 706 (2015), subject to the concurrent/consecutive determination pursuant to RCW 9.94A.400, reversing State v. Lewis, 86 Wn.App. 716 (1997), accord: State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 795-97 (1998), see: State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845, 859-61 (2000), but see: RCW 9.94A.533(3)(e), State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003), State v. Callihan, 120 Wn.App. 620 (2004), State v. Mandanas, 168 Wn.2d 84 (2010), see also: State v. Barnett, 21 Wn.App.2d 469 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Meggyesy, 90 Wn.App. 693, 706-10 (1998)

Jury finds, by special verdict, that defendant was armed with a deadly weapon, court enhances based on firearm, defense claims there must be a specific firearm allegation and finding; held: firearm enhancement, former RCW 9.94A.310(3) [recodified as 9.94A.533], is not an element of the crime, but is a sentence enhancement, court determines appropriate enhancement, State v. Thorne, 129 Wn.2d 736 (1996), see: State v. Rai, 97 Wn.App. 307 (1999), State v. Olney, 97 Wn.App. 913 (1999), not jury; I.

Muscarello v. United States, 141 L.Ed.2d 111 (1998)

Phrase "carries a firearm" during drug trafficking transaction, 18 USC § 924(c)(1), for enhancement purposes, includes knowing possession in locked glove compartment or trunk; 5-4.

State v. Weed, 91 Wn.App. 810 (1998)

VUFA, RCW 9.41.040(1)(b), precludes possession of a firearm by anyone convicted of any felony anytime and of a domestic violence misdemeanor committed on or after 1 July 1993; II.

State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 884-86 (1998)

Defendant is convicted of VUCSA and six counts of unlawful possession of firearms 1º for six guns found in meth lab, trial court counts each firearm conviction as a separate offense; held: RCW 9.41.040 provides that each firearm unlawfully possessed shall be a separate offense, thus charging decision was proper, however sentencing is controlled by RCW 9.94A.400, Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239, 245 (1998), which was not amended by the initiative, State v. Smith, 99 Wn.App. 510 (1999), State v. Roose, 90 Wn.App. 513 (1998); since possession of the guns (1) had same criminal intent, (2) at same time and place, and (3) involved same victim, they involved the same criminal conduct, State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 508, 511 (1997), rev'd on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998), State v. Murphy, 98 Wn.App. 42, 50-52 (1999), State v. McReynolds, 104 Wn.App. 560, 581-82 (2000), State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003), State v. Stockmyer, 136 Wn.App. 212 (2006); II.

State v. Faust, 93 Wn.App. 373 (1998)

Firearm inoperable due to mechanical defect meets the definition of a firearm, RCW 9.41.010(1), for penalty enhancement, RCW 9A.36.021, RCW 9.94A.125, State v. Anderson, 94

Wn.App. 151, 158-63 (1999), rev'd, on other grounds, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), State v. Padilla, 95 Wn.App. 531 (1999), State v. Berrier, 110 Wn.App. 639 (2002), State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016), distinguishing State v. Pam, 98 Wn.2d 748, 753-54 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Brown, 111 Wn.2d 124 (1988), State v. Tongate, 93 Wn.2d 751, 753 (1980), see also: State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 489-97 (2009), , State v. Olsen, 10 Wn.App.2d 731 (2019), but see: State v. Pierce, 155 Wn.App. 701, 714 (2010), State v. Raleigh, 157 Wn.App. 728 (2010); II.

State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.App. 151 (1999), rev'd, on other grounds, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000)

Where officers testify that the gun they found was loaded and appeared real, gun had serial number and was admitted at trial, there is sufficient evidence to find it is a firearm even if not test fired, State v. Bowman, 36 Wn.App. 798, 803 (1984), State v. Mathe, 35 Wn.App. 572, 581-82 (1983), State v. Sullivan, 47 Wn.App. 81, 84 (1987), State v. Hattori, 19 Wn.App. 74, 82 (1978), State v. McKee, 141 Wn.App. 22, 30-32 (2007), State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 197-200 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012) I.

State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 891-97 (1999)

Police serve drug warrant, arrest defendant in apartment, find gun in a cabinet 5-6 feet from where defendant was handcuffed, jury finds deadly weapon enhancement, RCW 9.94A.125; held: because defendant was cuffed and the gun was well outside his reach, it was not easily accessible and the required proximity nexus was absent, thus sentence enhancement must be reversed, State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111, 124-26 (1994), State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986), State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712, 726-29 (2004), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 102-05 (2007), see: State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012), cf.: State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007), but see: State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 881-83 (1998), State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), State v. Willis, 153 Wn.App. 366 (2005); I.

State v. Padilla, 95 Wn.App. 531 (1999)

A disassembled firearm that can be rendered operational with reasonable effort and within a reasonable time period is a firearm, RCW 9.41.010(1), State v. Berrier, 110 Wn.App. 639 (2002), State v. Wade, 133 Wn.App. 855, 872-73 (2006), State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 489-97 (2009), State v. Raleigh, 157 Wn.App. 728 (2010), cf.: State v. Faust, 93 Wn.App. 373 (1998); I.

State v. Shepherd, 95 Wn.App. 787 (1999)

A motor vehicle is not a deadly weapon for purposes of sentence enhancement, RCW 9.94A.125, State v. Ross, 20 Wn.App. 448 (1978), but see: State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450, 458 (2001); II.

State v. Brown, 139 Wn.2d 20, 25-29 (1999)

Deadly weapon enhancement, former RCW 9.94A.310(4) [recodified as 9.94A.533], is mandatory, not subject to an exceptional sentence downward, State v. Flett, 98 Wn.App. 799, 805-08 (2000), State v. Mandefero, 14 Wn.App.2d 825 (2020); 5-4.

State v. C.Q., 96 Wn.App. 273 (1999)

A starter pistol having no bore through its barrel is not a dangerous weapon, RCW 9.41.250, where it is merely possessed, thus is insufficient to prove possessing a dangerous weapon on school facilities, RCW 9.41.280; I.

State v. Rai, 97 Wn.App. 307 (1999)

Where jury finds that defendant was armed with a deadly weapon, and the evidence is uncontested that the weapon is a firearm, then court must enhance based upon firearm enhancement, former RCW 9.94A.310(3) [recodified as 9.94A.533], State v. Olney, 97 Wn.App. 913 (1999), see: State v. Meggyesy, 90 Wn.App. 693, 706-10 (1998); I.

State v. Murphy, 98 Wn.App. 42, 48-49 (1999)

Convictions of multiple counts of theft of firearm or unlawful possession of firearms must run consecutively, RCW 9.41.040(6), State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 342-43 (2003); II.

State v. Wadsworth, 139 Wn.2d 724 (2000)

Statute prohibiting weapons in a courthouse, RCW 9.41.300(1), which delegates to "local judicial authority" to designate and mark those areas where weapons are prohibited does not violate separation of powers doctrine; 7-2.

State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000)

"Knowing possession" is an element of unlawful possession of a firearm 2°, RCW 9.41,040(1)(b), reversing State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.App. 151 (1999), State v. Jones, 106 Wn.App. 40 (2001), see: State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 384-86 (2001), Seattle v. Briggs, 109 Wn.App. 484, 490-94 (2002), State v. Banks, 149 Wn.2d 38 (2003), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221, 227-31 (2003), State v. Warfield, 119 Wn.App. 871 (2003), State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 494-97 (2009), cf.: State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 171-72 (2009), State v. Pinkham, 2 Wn.App.2d 411 (2018); 5-4.

State v. Skenandore, 99 Wn.App. 494, 498-501 (2000)

A 2½-3 foot "spear" made of writing paper rolled into a rigid shaft bound with dental floss, affixed to a golf pencil which is thrust at a prison guard leaving pencil marks on the victim's shirt and nonabraded indentions on his chest that faded within hours of an assault is insufficient to prove use of a deadly weapon for assault 2°, distinguishing State v. Shilling, 77 Wn.App. 166, 171-2 (1995), cf.: State v. Barragan, 102 Wn.App. 754, 760-62 (2000); II.

State v. Leatherman, 100 Wn.App. 318 (2000)

Defendant's sentence is enhanced due to possession of a dagger; held: deadly weapon enhancement statute, RCW 9.94A.125, which dictates that a dagger is a deadly weapon per se, but a knife is only a deadly weapon per se if its blade exceeds three inches, is not vague, as a dagger is designed for stabbing and a knife is designed for cutting; I.

State v. Hahn, 100 Wn.App. 391, 394-97 (2000)

Defendant pleads guilty to assault with deadly weapon enhancement, to wit: hands and feet, at sentencing defendant argues he cannot be sentenced to the enhancement because, under these facts, hands and feet do not meet the statutory definition of a deadly weapon, RCW 9.94A.125; held: where a guilty plea is entered knowingly and voluntarily, factual deficiencies underlying the agreement will not invalidate it, In re Pers. Restraint of Barr, 102 Wn.2d 265, 269-71 (1984), State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354, 357-58 (1980), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450, 458 (2001), where defendant receives some benefit from the bargain, see also: State v. Zumwalt, 79 Wn.App. 124 (1995), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Bisson, 121 Wn.2d 507, 520 n.5 (2006), but see: Pers. Restr. of Call, 144 Wn.2d 315 (2001); II.

State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533, (2000)

Robbery instruction defining "what appears to be a firearm" as "exhibit or show what appears to be a firearm to the view of the victim or to otherwise manifest by words and actions the apparent presence of a firearm even though it is not actually seen by the victim" is accurate, at 537-39, State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865, 868-69 (1983), see: Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.App. 662, 674-77 (2000), State v. Jennings, 111 Wn.App. 54, 62-66 (2002), but see: RCW 9A.56.200, and is not a comment on the evidence; stating "I have a gun" and patting hip is sufficient, at 540, cf.: State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001); I.

Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.App. 662, 674-77 (2000)

"I have nitroglycerine in my coat…give me money or I'll blow up the bank" is insufficient to prove "displays what appeared to be a … deadly weapon" as a threat without any physical manifestation indicating a weapon is robbery 2°, not robbery 1°, State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001), State v. Jennings, 111 Wn.App. 54, 62-66 (2002), see: State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533, (2000), State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865, 868-69 (1983), but see: RCW 9A.56.200; II.

State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 97-98 (2000)

Jury hangs on deadly weapon allegation, defendant is sentenced without it, new trial granted on appeal, state re-alleges deadly weapon allegation, jury finds defendant was armed; held: federal double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial of sentencing enhancement upon retrial after successful appeal; II.

State v. Turner, 103 Wn.App. 515 (2000)

Where there is evidence that there is control of a vehicle and knowledge of a firearm inside it, then there is a reasonable basis for "knowing constructive possession," State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), and sufficient evidence to go to the jury, State v. Echeverria, 85 Wn.App. 777, 783 (1997), distinguishing State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969), see: State v. Cantabrana, 83 Wn.App. 204 (1996), State v. Reid, 40 Wn.App. 319, 325-26 (1985), State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 746-48 (2012), State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013); II.

State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845, 859-61 (2000)

For serious violent offenses, RCW 9.94A.400(1)(b), firearm enhancements must be served consecutively to the base sentence and to each other, State v. Mandanas, 168 Wn.2d 84 (2010), see: State v. Callihan, 120 Wn.App. 620 (2004), distinguishing In re Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239, 250 (1998) cf.: State v. Conover, 183 Wn.2d 706 (2015); II.

State v. Radan, 143 Wn.2d 323 (2001)

Defendant is charged with unlawful possession of firearm, RCW 9.41.040, predicate felony was from Montana which automatically restores firearm rights upon termination of state disposition, defendant proves he was discharged early upon a finding that defendant will not present risk to victim; held: while automatic restoration of right to possess a firearm will not act as a "finding of rehabilitation," here the finding is an "other equivalent procedure," thus dismissal affirmed, see: State v. Harrison, 181 Wn.App. 577 (2014), see also: Nelson v. State, 120 Wn.App. 470 (2003), Woodward v. State, 4 Wn.App.2d 789 (2018); reverses State v. Radan, 98 Wn.App. 652 (1999); 5-4.

State v. Schmidt, 143 Wn.2d 658 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of a felony in 1988, at which time the law did not forbid a felon to possess a rifle; in 1994, legislature amended RCW 9.41.040 to prohibit a person previously convicted of a felony to possess a rifle; defendant is convicted of felon in possession for having a rifle in 1997; held: while 1994 amendment is both criminal and punitive, thus subject to ex post facto analysis, Kansas v. Hendricks, 138 L.Ed.2d 501 (1997), here the 1994 statute only punishes future conduct, thus no ex post facto violation, State v. Watkins, 76 Wn.App. 726, 731-32 (1995), State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 124-30 (2012); affirms State v. Schmidt, 100 Wn.App. 297 (2000); 5-4.

State v. Krajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 384-86 (2001)

Unlawful possession of firearm information, RCW 9.41.040(1)(b), which alleges that defendant "unlawfully and feloniously" possessed firearm, but which fails to allege "knowingly" is sufficient when raised after trial, State v. Nieblas-Duarte, 55 Wn.App. 376, 378 (1989), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357, 366-67 (2000), see: State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 533-36 (2003), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221 (2003); II.

State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001)

Respondent is found in apartment, police find gun in back bedroom closet, photographs of respondent taped to wall of closet, some of his clothes in room, savings account deposit books in his name in shoebox by bed, court finds constructive possession; held: evidence is insufficient to conclude respondent exercised dominion and control over the premises, State v. Partin, 88 Wn.2d 899, 906 (1977), State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27, 31 (1969), State v. Hagen, 55 Wn.App. 494 (1989), State v. George, 146 Wn.App. 906, 919-24 (2008), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 746-48 (2012), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013), but see: State v. Ibarra-Erives, 23 Wn.App.2d 596 (2022); III.

State v. Krzeszowski, 106 Wn.App. 638 (2001)

After felon's civil rights were restored, legislature adopts statute prohibiting a serious offender from possessing any firearm, defendant is convicted of possession of shotgun and rifle; held: prohibition was not an ex post facto law as it applies to possession of firearms in the future, see: Rivard v. State, 168 Wn.2d 775 (2010); knowledge that possession of a firearm is unlawful is not an element, State v. May, 100 Wn.App. 478, 482 (2000), State v. Blum, 121 Wn.App. 1 (2004), State v. Stevens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 468-69 (2007); while an express representation by government that defendant could possess firearms would be entrapment by estoppel, see: State v.

Locati, 111 Wn.App. 222 (2002), here the court that restored defendant's civil rights did not affirmatively represent that he could possess a rifle; I.

State v. Leavitt, 107 Wn.App. 361 (2001)

Defendant pleads guilty to domestic violence misdemeanor, sentencing court fails to advise defendant of firearms prohibition, RCW 9.41.047(1), leading him to believe that after probation he can possess firearms again; at subsequent arrest defendant volunteers that he has firearms in his car, is convicted of illegal possession of firearms; held: while knowledge of the illegality of firearm possession is not an element of the crime, State v. Semakula, 88 Wn.App. 719, 726 (1997), where defendant demonstrates actual prejudice from sentencing court's failure to comply with statute's mandate, due process clause requires dismissal, State v. Moore, 121 Wn.App. 889 (2004), State v. Breitung 155 Wn.App. 606, 619-25 (2010), cf.: State v. Blum, 121 Wn.App. 1, 5 (2004), State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713, 719-21 (2005), State v. Esquivel, 132 Wn.App. 316 (2006), State v. Minor, 162 Wn.2d 796 (2008), State v. Stevens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 468-69 (2007), State v. Mitchell, 190 Wn.App. 919, 927-30 (2015), see: State v. Garcia, 198 Wn.App. 527 (2017); II.

State v. Summers, 107 Wn.App. 373, 383-88 (2001)

Firearm is found under felon's pillow, defendant claims weapon belongs to a friend, might have defendant's fingerprints as he had handled it in the past, trial court declines to instruct that possession does not entail only a momentary handling or that fleeting possession is not unlawful; held: while possession is more than passing control and momentary handling, without more, is insufficient to prove possession, evidence of momentary handling, when combined with other evidence such as dominion and control of premises or motive to hide the item from police, is sufficient to prove possession; even passing control of contraband is not legal, it is merely insufficient to prove possession, see: State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969), State v. Werry, 6 Wn.App. 540 (1972), State v. Bowman, 8 Wn.App. 148 (1972), State v. Staley, 123 Wn.2d 794 (1994), see: State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013); II.

State v. Scherz, 107 Wn.App. 427 (2001)

In robbery case, defendant tells teller "I have a hand grenade in my pocket and I need a thousand dollars," defendant is convicted of robbery 1° for "displaying what appeared to be a … deadly weapon;" held: verbal threat without any physical display is insufficient to prove "display," Pers. Restraint of Bratz, 101 Wn.App. 662, 674-77 (2000), cf.: State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533 (2000), State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865 (1983); III.

State v. Cuble, 109 Wn.App. 362 (2001)

Jury instruction for unlawful possession of firearm charge must allege mens rea element of knowledge, State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 533-36 (2003), see: State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221, 222-31 (2003), but see: State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 171-72 (2009), even if raised for the first time on appeal; trial court's instructing as to unwitting possession does not cure error, even where the instruction was proposed by defense; II.

Seattle v. Briggs, 109 Wn.App. 484, 490-94 (2001)

Ordinance prohibiting carrying a weapon "concealed on his or her person" does not have an implied element of knowledge, distinguishing State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), see: State v. Pinkham, 2 Wn.App.2d 411 (2018); I.

State v. Berrier, 110 Wn.App. 639 (2002)

Enhancing illegal possession of a short-barreled shotgun, RCW 9.41.190(1), with a deadly weapon allegation for the same shotgun violates equal protection clause as legislature exempted enhancements for machine guns, no rational basis for the distinction; II.

State v. Locati, 111 Wn.App. 222 (2002)

Court rejects defendant's proposed estoppel instruction based upon defendant's claim that his now deceased CCO told him he could possess a hunting rifle; held: to allow a defense based on misleading government conduct or estoppel, defendant must show his reliance was objectively reasonable considering source of information and whether defendant received inconsistent information from the same or different sources, see: State v. Leavitt, 107 Wn.App. 361, 371-73 (2001); here, because police officers subsequently told defendant he could not possess rifle, defense is unavailable, cf.: State v. Moore, 121 Wn.App. 889 (2004); III.

State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002)

Police serve warrant for manufacturing marijuana, find defendant at bottom of stairs ten feet from a loaded revolver hung on a wall, defendant is convicted of VUCSA with deadly weapon enhancement; held: defendant, at arrest, was a few seconds from the gun, thus evidence is sufficient to prove the deadly weapon allegation as there was a nexus between defendant, the weapon and the underlying crime, State v. Sabala, 44 Wn.App. 444 (1986), State v. Taylor, 74 Wn.App. 111, 124-26 (1994), State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 508 (1997), rev'd, on other grounds, 135 Wn.2d 365 (1998), State v. Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018), distinguishing State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), State v. Mills, 80 Wn.App. 231 (1995), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 891-97 (1999), cf.: State v. Gurske, 155 Wn.2d 134 (2005), State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 102-05 (2007), but see: State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712, 726-29 (2004), State v. Brown, 162 Wn.2d 422, 430-35 (2007); affirms State v. Schelin, 104 Wn.App. 48 (2000); 4-1-2-1[fractured opinion].

State v. Cramm, 114 Wn.App. 170 (2002)

Trial court may order forfeiture of a firearm possessed by a person at the time of arrest for any felony, whether or not it is used or displayed, RCW 9.41.098(1); I.

State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402, 415-21 (2003)

Where jury enters special verdicts finding both a firearm, RCW 9.94A.510(3) and a separate deadly weapon, RCW 9.94A.510(4), the enhancements must run consecutively to each other as well as to the base sentence, State v. Spandel, 107 Wn.App. 352 (2001), State v. Fast, 90 Wn.App. 952 (1998), State v. Callihan, 120 Wn.App. 620 (2004), cf.: Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239 (1998), State v. Conover, 183 Wn.2d 706 (2015) ; reverses, in part, State v. DeSantiago, 108 Wn.App. 855 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Thomas, 150 Wn.2d 666 (2003)

Defendant is convicted of two counts of robbery 2° with firearm allegations, is sentenced to concurrent terms for robbery, consecutive firearm enhancements, State v. Price, 103 Wn.App. 845, 859-61 (2000), sentence thus exceeds ten years; held: because the maximum sentence for two class B felonies is twenty years, as they can run consecutively, and because firearm enhancements must run consecutively to the base sentences and to each other, RCW 9.94A.310, 9.94A.420, sentence here does not exceed maximum, overruling State v. Harvey, 109 Wn.App. 157 (2001); affirms State v. Thomas, 113 Wn.App. 755 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Marcum, 116 Wn.App. 526, 533-36 (2003)

Because knowledge is an implied element of unlawful possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.040(1), State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), where information charges defendant with unlawful possession but description of the offense in the information fails to use word "unlawfully" or "knowingly," the information is insufficient, even on appeal, distinguishing State v. Kajeski, 104 Wn.App. 377, 381-82 (2001), see: State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221, 227-31 (2003), but see: State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 171-72 (2009); III.

State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221, 227-31 (2003)

Failure to instruct jury that knowledge is an element of unlawful possession of a firearm, State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 358 (2000), is subject to harmless error analysis, Neder v. United States, 144 L.Ed.2d 35 (1999), State v. Brown, 147 Wn.2d 330 (2002), State v. Stouse, 119 Wn.App. 793 (2004), State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 171-72 (2009); I.

State v. Huested, 118 Wn.App. 92 (2003)

Consecutive time for deadly weapon enhancements for rape 1° and burglary 1° for the same weapon does not violate double jeopardy clause, RCW 9.94A.510; I.

Smith v. State, 118 Wn.App. 464 (2003)

A person convicted of indecent liberties and other crimes enumerated in RCW 9.41.040(4) may only have firearm rights restored by pardon or annulment, see also: State v. Masangkay, 121 Wn.App. 904 (2004); III.

State v. Smith, 118 Wn.App. 480 (2003)

Abode exception to unlawful display, RCW 9.41.270(3)(a) (1994), does not apply where defendant displays a weapon in his backyard, State v. Owens, 180 Wn.App. 846 (2014), but see: State v. Haley, 35 Wn.App. 96 (1983); I.

State v. Spiers, 119 Wn.App. 85, 91-95 (2003)

That portion of RCW 9.41.040(1)(b) which prohibits one from owning a gun while free on bond pending trial is an unconstitutional infringement on the right to bear arms, CONST. art. I, § 24; II.

State v. Howell, 119 Wn.App. 644, 649-50 (2003)

In unlawful possession of firearm case, RCW 9.41.040(1)(a), jury should not be instructed that "dominion and control may be immediately exercised," as state need not prove that the firearm was readily accessible; I.

State v. Warfield, 119 Wn.App. 871 (2003)

Knowledge of possession or control is an implied element of possession of an unlawful firearm, RCW 9.l41.190(1), State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 413-15 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007); II.

Nelson v. State, 120 Wn.App. 470 (2003)

Expungement of a juvenile record, former RCW 13.50.050(11), restores right to possess a firearm, Woodward v. State, 4 Wn.App.2d 789 (2018), see also: State v. Radan, 143 Wn.2d 323 (2001), State v. Schmidt, 143 Wn.2d 658 (2001), Nakatani v. State, 109 Wn.App. 622 (2001), State v. Harrison, 181 Wn.App. 577 (2014), State v. S.G., 11 Wn.App.2d 74 (2019); I.

State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712 (2004)

Unlawful possession of a firearm 2°, RCW 9.41.040(1)(b), is an alternative means offense committed when a felon owns, possesses or controls a firearm, disapproved in part,: State v. Barboza-Cortes, 194 Wn.2d 639 (2019), and, where information charges some of the alternatives, jury should not be instructed on more than the charged alternatives, at 718-21, State v. Williamson, 84 Wn.App. 37, 42 (1996); for deadly weapon enhancement, jury must be instructed that they must find a nexus between defendant, weapon and crime, at 726-29, State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562, 577 (2002)(Alexander, C.J., concurring), but see: State v. Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395-422-24 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 250 (2007), State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401, 409-10 (2007), cf.: State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862,, 877-79 (2005); II.

State v. Callihan, 120 Wn.App. 620 (2004)

Firearm enhancements run consecutively, former RCW 9.94A.310, recodified as RCW 9.94A.533(3)(e), even where substantive offenses constitute the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), State v. Mandanas, 168 Wn.2d 84 (2010), distinguishing In re Post Sentencing Review of Charles, 135 Wn.2d 239, 250 (1998), cf.: State v. Conover, 183 Wn.2d 706 (2015), see also" State v. Barnett, 21 Wn.App.2d 469 (2022); III.

State v. Smith, 123 Wn.App. 417, 433-35 (2004)

Defendant fires one bullet into car containing three people, is convicted of three counts of assault 2° with three firearm enhancements, is sentenced to three consecutive 36 month terms for the enhancements; held: trial court had no discretion but to impose consecutive terms for three enhancements, State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402, 418 (2003), State v. Mandanas, 168 Wn.2d 84 (2010), court could not merge the convictions, *State v. Vladovic,*99 Wn.2d 413, 421 (1983); II.

State v. Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005)

Evidence establishes that defendant commits a burglary, in getaway vehicle is a pistol which defendant handles while driving from the burglary, trial court instructs that state must prove defendant was armed which means "readily available for offensive or defensive purposes," jury finds that enhancement was proved; held: instructions adequately required that jury find a nexus between the defendant, the crime and the firearm, express nexus language is not required, Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401, 409-10 (2007), see: State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), State v. Mills, 80 Wn.App. 231, 233 (1995), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 886-87 (1999), State v. Schelin,147 Wn.2d 562, 563-64 (2002), State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712 (2004), State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 877-79 (2005), State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007); 6-3.

State v. Barnes, 153 Wn.2d 378 (2005)

Knowledge of the presence of a firearm is not a requirement of a deadly weapon enhancement allegation and need not be included in the enhancement instruction, State v. Woolfolk, 95 Wn.App. 541, 550-51 (1999), State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 430-31 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 895-96 (1999); 6-3.

State v. Sweeney, 125 Wn.App. 77 (2005)

A juvenile burglary conviction does not "wash" for purposes of serving as a predicate offense for an unlawful possession of a firearm 1° conviction, RCW 9.41.040(1)(a) even if it washes for purposes of the offender score; fact that at the time of the juvenile conviction it was not a crime to possess a firearm thereafter does not excuse to the crime enacted later and does not violate due process; courts are not required to notify all felons convicted before 1994 to give notice prescribed in RCW 9.41.047, State v. Reed, 84 Wn.App. 379, 385-86 (1997); knowledge that possession of a firearm is illegal is not an element of the crime, State v. Locati, 111 Wn.App. 222, 225 (2002), State v. Stevens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 467-69 (2007); III.

State v. Winings, 126 Wn.App. 75, 87-89 (2005)

For purposes of proving assault 2° with a deadly weapon, RCW 9A.36.021, "deadly weapon" is defined pursuant to RCW 9A.04.110 and not from the deadly weapon enhancement statute, RCW 9.94A.602; where instructions explicitly define a deadly weapon "for purposes of a special verdict" in accordance with the enhancement statute, there is no error; II.

Small v. United States, 161 L.Ed.2d 651 (2005)

Federal felon in possession of firearm statute, 18 USC § 922(g)(1), which make it unlawful for anyone to possess a firearm if s/he has been convicted of a felony in "any court" only applies to convictions in United States courts; 5-3.

State v. Recuenco, 154 Wn.2d 156 (2005), 163 Wn.2d 428 (2008)

Where jury finds deadly weapon enhancement, trial court may not enhance further for a firearm, as that issue was not submitted to the jury, Apprendi v. New Jersey, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000), State v. Williams, 147 Wn.App. 479 (2008), State v. Bainard, 148 Wn.App. 93, 100-05 (2009), State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.2d 889 (2010), cf.: State v. Vazquez, 200 Wn.App. 220 (2017), but see: State v. Pharr, 131 Wn.App. 119 (2006), State v. Nguyen, 134 Wn.App. 863, 869-71 (2006), State v. Tessema, 139 Wn.App. 483 (2007), State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85, 90-91 (2008), see: Washington v. Recuenco, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006); not retroactive, Pers.

Restraint of Rivera, 175 Wn.2d 155 (2012), but see: State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Gurske, 155 Wn.2d 134 (2005)

Defendant is arrested for driving while license suspended, during inventory search of his truck police find a gun, in a backpack behind driver's seat which defendant could not have reached without exiting truck or moving to passenger seat, also find drugs, defendant is convicted of VUCSA while armed with a deadly weapon; held: because evidence failed to establish that the pistol was easily accessible and readily available for use for offensive or defensive purposes, the enhancement was improper, State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 102-05 (2007), distinguishing State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), see also: State v. Rooth, 129 Wn.App. 761, 773-74 (2005), cf.: State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488, 494 (2007), State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018); reverses State v. Gurske, 120 Wn.App. 63 (2004); 9-0.

State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007)

Where a drug sentence is doubled due to priors, RCW 69.50.408, a new statutory maximum is created and the length of the firearm enhancement is calculated based upon the new maximum, State v. Cyr, 195 Wn.2d 492 (2020), here a 60 month enhancement for a 20 year maximum, State v. Barajas, 88 Wn.App. 387, 388 (1997), State v. Blade, 126 Wn.App. 174 (2005), at 426-30; II.

State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713 (2005)

In unlawful possession of firearm case, trial court instructs that state must prove knowledge, State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357, 366 (2000), and gives defense proposed instruction on unwitting possession; held: because jury was misled to believe defendant had the burden, defendant was prejudiced by ineffective assistance, see: State v. Michael, 160 Wn.App. 528 (2011); failure of juvenile court to advise respondent at time of disposition that he may not possess a firearm does not mislead a defendant in violation of due process rights, at 720, distinguishing State v. Leavitt, 107 Wn.App. 361, 372-73 (2001), State v. Moore, 121 Wn.App. 889, 896 (2004), but see: State v. Breitung, 155 Wn.App. 606, 619-25 (2010); 2-1, III.

State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 877-79 (2005)

For special allegation enhancement, jury should be instructed of nexus requirement, State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712 (2004), error may be harmless, see: State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007); I.

State v. Cubias, 155 Wn.2d 549 (2005)

Consecutive sentences for multiple firearm enhancements need not be submitted to a jury, State v. Kinney, 125 Wn.App. 778 (2005), distinguishing Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004); 5-4.

State v. Wade, 133 Wn.App. 855, 872-73 (2006)

An inoperable firearm may still be a deadly weapon and firearm to support a conviction of assault 2º, State v. Berrier, 110 Wn.App. 639, 645 (2002), State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016), see also: State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 489-97 (2009); II.

State v. Wolf, 134 Wn.App. 196 (2006)

In unlawful possession of firearm case, defendant stipulates that he had previously been convicted of a serious offense, Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574(1997), parties agree that fact of stipulation would be included in a jury instruction, stipulation is not read to jury during presentation of evidence, defense claims insufficiency; held: by stipulating, defense waived the right to put the state to its burden of proof on the element to which he stipulated, State v. Stephens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 466 (2007); I.

Washington v. Recuenco, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006)

Where jury finds deadly weapon enhancement but trial court enhances further for a firearm in possible violation of Apprendi v. New Jersey, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000), it is not structural error precluding harmless error analysis, see: Pers. Restraint of Eastmond, 173 Wn.2d 632 (2012), State v. Vazquez, 200 Wn.App. 220 (2017), but see: State v. Recuenco, 163 Wn.2d 428 (2008), State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.2d 889 (2010); not retroactive, Pers. Restraint of Rivera, 175 Wn.2d 155 (2012), but see: State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); 5-4.

State v. Nguyen, 134 Wn.App. 863 (2006)

Firearm enhancements do not violate double jeopardy even where the use of a weapon is an element of the crime, State v. Pentland, 43 Wn.App. 808, 811-12 (1986), State v. Caldwell, 47 Wn.App. 317, 320 (1987), State v. Tessema, 139 Wn.App. 483 (2007), State v. Kelley, 168 Wn.2d 72 (2010), State v. Toney, 149 Wn.App. 787, 797-98 (2009); although there is no specific statutory procedure for imposition of a firearm enhancement, deadly weapon enhancement procedure, RCW 9.94A.602, will work to allow a jury to find a firearm enhancement, State v. Anderson, 144 Wn.App. 85, 90-91 (2008), State v. Vazquez, 200 Wn.App. 220 (2017), distinguishing State v. Recuenco, 154 Wn.2d 156 (2005), rev'd on other grounds, 165 L.Ed.2d 466 (2006), see: State v. Recuenco, 163 Wn.2d 428 (2008), State v. Williams, 147 Wn.App. 479 (2008), State v. Bainard, 148 Wn.App. 93, 100-05 (2009); I.

State v. Williams, 158 Wn.2d 904 (2006)

To prove possession of an unlawful firearm, RCW 9.41.010(6), 9.41.190(1), state must prove defendant knowingly possessed the firearm and knew, or should have known, the characteristics of the firearm that make the firearm illegal see: State v. Warfield, 119 Wn.App. 871 (2003), cf.: Staples v. United States, 128 L.Ed.2d 608 (1994), harmless here; affirms State v. Williams, 125 Wn.App. 335 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Easterlin, 159 Wn.2d 203 (2006)

Defendant is found in a car with drugs in his sock and a gun on the seat next to him, pleads guilty to VUSA and felon in possession of a firearm, appeals enhancement; held: while state must establish a nexus among defendant, the weapon and the crime, State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712 (2004), nexus is not an element which state must explicitly plead and prove, State v. Johnson, 185 Wn.App. 655, 672-78 (2015), see: State v.

Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005), State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401, 409-10 (2007), factual basis for plea here was sufficient for trial court to accept plea; affirms State v. Easterlin, 126 Wn.App. 170 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Stockmyer, 136 Wn.App. 212 (2006)

Guns found in different rooms in the same house are found in different "places" for purposes of the same criminal conduct test, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), see: State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 885-86 (1998); II.

State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488 (2007)

Defendant calls police to report an intruder, caller says he is armed, when police arrive discover no intruder but find drugs, loaded rifle, arrest defendant in front yard "far from his weapons in his house," no nexus instruction is requested by defense, defendant found guilty of VUCSA while armed; held: because defendant did not ask for a nexus instruction, he is not entitled to seek relief on the ground of instructional error, State v. Willis, 153 Wn.2d 366 (2005), cf.: State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 877-79 (2005), State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712 (2004), Pers. Restraint of Reed, 137 Wn.App. 401, 409-10 (2007); evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant was armed in light of his phone call saying he was armed, presence of loaded gun, drug operation pervaded the house so jury could readily have found that the weapons were there to protect the criminal enterprise, see: State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 883 (1998), distinguishing State v. Gurske, 155 Wn.2d 134 (2005); 9-0.

State v. O'Neal, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007)

Evidence was sufficient to find firearm enhancement to drug case where police find 20 guns, most in two gun safes, one locked, one unlocked, plus a loaded rifle in one bedroom and a loaded pistol in another, see also: State v. Neff, 163 Wn.2d 453, 461-65 (2008);; affirms State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395 (2005); 7-2.

State v. Fleming, 136 Wn.App. 678 (2007)

Trial court has discretion to instruct jury with respect to deadly weapon or firearm enhancement, RCW 9.94A.602, State v. Nguyen, 134 Wn.App. 863 (2006); II.

State v. Ague-Masters, 138 Wn.App. 86, 102-05 (2007)

Police, serving search warrant, arrest defendant at front door, find meth lab in detached shed, no evidence of lab in house, find guns locked in a safe in house; held: evidence insufficient to show that the firearms in the safe were easily accessible and readily available, thus enhancement reversed, State v. Valdobinos, 122 Wn.2d 270 (1993), State v. Johnson, 94 Wn.App. 882, 894-95 (1999), distinguishing State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874 (1998); II.

State v. Carter, 138 Wn.App. 350 (2007)

Machine gun possession, RCW 9.41.190(1) and -.010(7), is not a crime unless state proves that an ammunition supply device was present at the scene, cf.: State v. Releford, 148 Wn.App. 478, 492 (2009); II.

State v. Peterson, 138 Wn.App. 477 (2007)

Defendant uses a 3-inch knife to damage an unoccupied vehicle in the course of stealing a stereo, is convicted of malicious mischief while armed with a deadly weapon; held: a 3-inch knife is not "longer than three inches," RCW 9.94A.602, thus is not a deadly weapon per se; the knife otherwise qualifies as a deadly weapon if it has the capacity to inflict death and defendant uses it in a way likely to produce death or may easily and readily produce death; here, absent another person's presence, evidence is insufficient to prove the enhancement; II.

State v. Hoeldt, 139 Wn.App. 225 (2007)

Depending upon circumstances of use, a dog can be a deadly weapon for purposes of assault 2°; here, defendant intentionally released his large, barking, growling dog to attack a police officer, thus evidence was sufficient; II.

State v. McKee, 141 Wn.App. 22, 30-32 (2007)

Evidence is sufficient to prove a firearm enhancement where victim testifies as to the weight and feel of the gun, seeing a "peripheral something to my head," the way defendant wielded the gun combined with evidence that defendant did have access to real guns, State v. Goforth, 33 Wn.App. 405, 412 (1982), State v. Bowman, 36 Wn.App. 798, 803 (1984), State v. Jusila, 197 Wn.App. 908, 932-34 (2017); I.

State v. Brown, 162 Wn.2d 422, 430-35 (2007)

Defendant commits a burglary during which he finds a gun in a closet and moves it to a bed but is interrupted and leaves it behind, is convicted for burglary 1° with a firearm; held: evidence that a firearm was briefly in a burglar's possession and thus "merely loot," at 434 ¶ 27, without more, does not establish a nexus between defendant, the weapon and the crime, State v. Schelin, 147 Wn.2d 562 (2002), see: State v. Brown, 172 Wn.App. 537 (2012); "defendant's intent or willingness to use the rifle is a condition of the nexus requirement that does, in fact, appear in Washington cases," at 434 ¶ 26; 5-4.

District of Columbia v. Heller, 171 L.Ed.2d 637 (2008)

Local ordinance prohibiting possession of handguns in the home violates Second Amendment, see also: Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 136 S.Ct. 1027, 194 L.Ed.2d 99 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Neff, 163 Wn.2d 453, 461-65 (2008)

Police find meth lab in garage and loaded guns in locked safe and another loaded gun in a tool belt hanging from rafters, surveillance cameras, court enhances for firearms; held: "there are lawful places to keep guns other than in a methamphetamine lab equipped with counter-surveillance cameras watching for police or intruders," State v. O'Neal, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007); 8-1.

State v. Minor, 162 Wn.2d 796 (2008)

At juvenile court disposition, pre-printed form with felony firearm prohibition is not checked, respondent is later convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm; held: by failing to check the firearm prohibition box, the court affirmatively represented to respondent that the prohibition did not apply to him, violating statutory notice requirement, RCW 9.41.047(1), thus VUFA conviction reversed and dismissed, State v. Leavitt, 107 Wn.App. 361 (2001), State v. Breitung, 155 Wn.App. 606, 619-25 (2010), cf.: State v. Semakula, 88 Wn.App. 719 (1997), State v. Reed, 84 Wn.App. 379 (1996), State v. Mitchell, 190 Wn.App. 919, 927-30 (2015); reverses, in part, State v. Minor, 133 Wn.App. 636 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Brooks, 142 Wn.App. 842, 848-49 (2008)

Defining deadly weapon for an enhancement using "substantial bodily harm" rather than "serious bodily injury" or "substantial bodily injury" is adequate; II.

State v. Hunter, 147 Wn.App. 177, 189-93 (2008)

Statute making it unlawful for a person convicted of a juvenile sex offense to possess a firearm for life, RCW 9.41.040(4), does not violate Second Amendment, District of Columbia v. Heller, 171 L.Ed.2d 637 (2008), or CONST., art. I, § 24; I.

State v. Williams, 147 Wn.App. 479 (2008)

Information contains firearm allegation but court submits deadly weapon special verdict to jury; held: jury finding that defendant was armed with a deadly weapon does not permit the court to enhance as if it were a firearm, State v. Bainard, 148 Wn.App. 93, 100-05 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 149 Wn.App. 223 (2009), as the jury verdict is not harmless, State v. Recuenco, 163 Wn.2d 428, 441-42 (2008), State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.2d 889 (2010), but see: State v. Vazquez, 200 Wn.App. 220 (2017); not retroactive, Pers. Restraint of Rivera, 175 Wn.2d 155 (2012), but see: State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); III.

United States v. Hayes, 172 L.Ed.2d 816 (2009)

Gun Control Act, 18 U.S.C. § 921 et seq., which prohibits possession of a firearm by persons previously convicted of a misdemeanor domestic violence offense, does not require that the predicate crime have as an element a domestic violence relationship as long as government proves at the firearm trial the domestic relationship beyond a reasonable doubt; 7-2.

State v. Pedro, 148 Wn.App. 945, 944-52 (2009)

Firearm enhancement, RCW 9.94A.533(3), does not violate assault 1º defendant's equal protection rights because it exempts some crimes involving use of a gun from enhancements but not assault 1º; I.

State v. Simms, 151 Wn.App. 677 (2009), 171 Wn.2d 244 (2011)

When seeking to double the length of confinement for a firearm enhancement where defendant has a prior firearm enhancement, RCW 9.94A.533(3)(d) (2009), state need not plead or prove beyond a reasonable doubt the prior enhancement, Blakeley v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 303, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), nor does the new enhancement violate double jeopardy; I.

State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 163-72 (2009)

Information alleges firearm allegation, court submits deadly weapon special verdict to jury, court enhances for firearm; held: failure to instruct as to firearm allegation that is alleged in information is harmless error if it is clear that the jury would have returned a "yes" to a firearm special verdict, but see: State v. Williams, 147 Wn.App. 479 (2008), State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.2d 889 (2010); VUFA instructions that fail to include "knowing" possession, State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357, 366 (2000), is harmless where jury found defendant guilty of a crime while armed, see: State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 221, 227-31 (2003); I.

State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.2d 889 (2010)

Where jury is instructed and finds by special verdict that defendant was armed with a deadly weapon, court may not impose firearm enhancement, which can never be harmless, State v. Williams, 147 Wn.App. 479 (2008), overruling State v. Pharr, 131 Wn.App. 119 (2006), but see: Pers. Restraint of Eastmond, 173 Wn.2d 632 (2012), cf.: State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); overrules, sub silentio, State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 163-66 (2009); 6-3.

State v. Kelley, 168 Wn.2d 72 (2010)

Firearm enhancement does not violate double jeopardy when an element of the underlying offense is use of a firearm, State v. Caldwell, 47 Wn.App. 317 (1987), State v. Nguyen, 134 Wn.App. 863 (2006); analysis is not changed by Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004); affirms State v. Kelley, 146 Wn.App. 370 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Mandanas, 168 Wn.2d 84 (2010)

Firearm enhancements run consecutively even where substantive offenses consitute the same criminal conduct, RCW 9.94A.533(3)(e) (2009), State v. Callihan, 120 Wn.App. 620 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Sieyes, 168 Wn.2d 276 (2010)

Second Amendment applies to the states, McDonald v. Chicago, 561 U.S. 742, 177 L.Ed.2d 894 (2010); 8-1.

State v. Hammock, 154 Wn.App. 630 (2010)

A hollowed-out bolt in which a bullet is inserted which fires when hit with a hammer is a firearm for firearm enhancement and unlawful possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.010(1) (2001); II.

State v. Breitung, 155 Wn.App. 606, 619-25 (2010)

Where sentencing court fails to give defendant mandatory notice of firearm prohibition, RCW 9.41.047(1), and there is no evidence that defendant has otherwise acquired actual knowledge of the prohibition, conviction for unlawful possession of a firearm is invalid, State v. Leavitt, 107 Wn.App. 361, 366-68 (2001), see: State v. Garcia, 198 Wn.App. 527 (2017), cf.: State v. Mitchell, 190 Wn.App. 919, 927-30 (2015), but see: State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713, 720 (2005); 2-1, II.

State v. Pierce, 155 Wn.App. 701, 713-14 (2010)

To enhance with a firearm finding, state must offer evidence that the firearm was operable, but see: State v. Mathé, 35 Wn.App. 572 (1983), State v. Faust, 93 Wn.App. 373 (1998), State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016), , State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 872-73 (2016), State v. Jusila, 197 Wn.App. 908, 932-34 (2017), cf.: State v. Raleigh, 157 Wn.App. 728 (2010); Division II rejects it's holding in State v. Olsen, 10 Wn.App.2d 731 (2019).

State v. Raleigh, 157 Wn.App. 728 (2010)

A rusty gun with a round in the chamber, a working safety and slide which, with some repair to the firing pin, is made operable is a firearm, RCW 9.41.040(1)(a), for purposes of felon in possession; "[w]hether an object is a 'firearm'…is a question of statutory interpretation" reviewed de novo, at 734; II.

Pers. Restraint of Martinez, 171 Wn.2d 354 (2011)

Mere possession of a knife during a burglary is insufficient to enhance to burglary 1°, state must prove that it was "used, attempted to be used, or threatened to be used," RCW 9A.04.110(6), as a weapon, State v. Gotcher, 52 Wn.App. 350 (1988), overruling State v. Gamboa, 137 Wn.App. 650 (2007) , unless the weapon is a loaded or unloaded firearm, State v. Hall, 46 Wn.App. 689, 695 (1987), State v. Faille, 53 Wn.App. 111 (1988), State v. Hernandez, 172 Wn.App. 537 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Michael, 160 Wn.App. 522 (2011)

It is not ineffective assistance of counsel for defense attorney not to offer an unwitting possession instruction in unlawful possession of a firearm case because knowledge is an element state must prove while burden on unwitting possession is on defense, State v. Rowell, 138 Wn.App. 780 (2007), State v. Carter, 127 Wn.App. 713, 718 (2005); III.

State v. Carter, 161 Wn.App. 532 (2011)

Statutory exemptions to possession of unlawful weapon, RCW 9.41.190(2), are affirmative defenses not elements of the crime, State v. Moses, 79 Wn.2d 104, 110 (1971), because the facts lie within the knowledge of the defendant, see: State v. Fry, 142 Wn.App. 456, 460-61 (2008); federal license permitting defendant to repair machine guns does not authorize him to personally possess a machine gun; II.

State v. Damiani, 162 Wn.App. 1 (2011)

Superior court judge, at sentencing, does not have authority to authorize a felon to possess a firearm during military service; II.

State v. Webb, 162 Wn.App. 195, 203-05 (2011)

Defendant robs store with toy gun, victim testifies he first believed it was a gun, then decided it was plastic, defendant is convicted of robbery 1°; held: "displays what appears to be a firearm," RCW 9A.56.200(1)(a)(ii), focuses on the victim's point of view, State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533, 537 (2000), State v. Henderson, 34 Wn.App. 865, 868 (1983), does not require that victim's perception that it was a firearm must continue throughout the course of the robbery; 2-1, III.

State v. R.P.H., 173 Wn.2d 199 (2011)

Court terminating sex offender registration requirement is the equivalent of a "certificate of rehabilitation" requiring restoration of right to possess firearms. State v. Radan, 143 2 323 (2001), see: State v. Harrison, 181 Wn.App. 577 (2014); 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Eastmond, 173 Wn.2d 632 (2012)

Rule that a firearm enhancement, when jury only finds deadly weapon, can never be harmless, State v. Williams-Walker, 167 Wn.2d 889, 901 (2010), does not apply to a PRP, State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017); 7-2.

State v. Guzman Nuñez, 174 Wn.2d 707 (2012)

Jury must be unanimous to find that state did not prove special sentencing allegations, overruling State v. Bashaw, 169 Wn.2d 133 (2010), State v. Goldberg, 149 Wn.2d 888, 894 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Ibrahim, 164 Wn.App. 503, 510-15 (2011)

Statute which prohibits a resident legal alien from possessing a firearm, former RCW 9.41.170, violates equal protection clause; III.

State v. Chouinard, 169 Wn.App. 895 (2012)

Defendant, found in back seat of car owned by another within reaching distance of the gun, states he knew gun was there, is convicted of felon in possession of a firearm; held: mere proximity and knowledge of presence of a gun in a car is insufficient to prove constructive possession, State v. Hagen, 55 Wn.App. 494 (1989), State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001), State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004), State v. Shumaker, 142 Wn.App. 330 (2007); II.

State v. Jorgenson, 179 Wn.2d 145 (2013)

Prohibiting firearm possession by someone released on bond after court finds probable cause to believe the person has committed a serious offense, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a)(iv) (2011), does not violate Second Amendment nor CONST. art I, § 24; 5-4.

State v. Soto, 177 Wn.App. 706 (2013)

Firearm enhancement, RCW 9.94A.533(3) (2013), does not apply to an unranked felony, RCW 9.94A.505(2)(b) (2010); III.

State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708 (2014)

At unlawful possession of firearm trial defense counsel stipulates that defendant had previously been convicted of a serious offense, Old Chief v. United States, 519 U.S. 172, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997), informs court that defendant does not agree, trial judge concludes that it's tactical; held: while court may presume that counsel's stipulation to an element of a crime is with defendant's consent, where defendant expressly objects trial court may not accept the stipulation, reversing, in part, State v. Humphries, 170 Wn.App. 777 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Mata, 180 Wn.App. 108 (2014)

Defendant is convicted of unlawful possession of the same firearm on the same day in Pierce and Yakima Counties; held: unlawful possession of a firearm is a course of conduct crime rather than a discrete act, State v. Kenyon, 150 Wn.App. 826 (2009), while an interruption in possession of a particular firearm might result in different possessions, see: State v. Chouap, 170 Wn.App. 114, 125 (2012), here there was no evidence that the possession was ever interrupted, thus second prosecution violated double jeopardy clause; III.

State v. Owens, 180 Wn.App. 846 (2014)

Defendant displays a rifle in his back yard, charged with unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270 (1994), trial court refuses instruction "the act did not occur in the defendant's place of abode, RCW 9.41.270(3); held: a back yard is not "in his or her place of abode," thus the instruction was properly refused, see: State v. Haley, 35 Wn.App. 96 (1983), State v. Smith, 118 Wn.App. 480 (2003); failure of statute to define "place of abode" does not render the statute vague; II.

State v. Harrison, 181 Wn.App. 577 (2014)

California certificate of rehabilitation qualifies under RCW 9.41.040(3) (2011) to preclude a conviction of felon in possession of a firearm in Washington, see: State v. Radan, 143 Wn.2d 323 (2001), State v. R.P.H., 173 Wn.2d 199 (2011); 2-1, III.

State v. Mitchell, 190 Wn.App. 919, 927-30 (2015)

Lack of notice of firearm prohibition is an affirmative defense to unlawful possession of a firearm, defendant must prove by a preponderance that he did not receive either oral or written notice that it was illegal for him to possess a firearm, State v. Breitung, 173 Wn.2d 393, 403 (2011), State v. Garcia, 198 Wn.App. 527 (2017); a statement of defendant on plea of guilty that contains notice of firearm prohibition is sufficient to prove written notice, state does not have burden of proving oral notice, see: State v. Minor, 162 Wn.2d 796 (2008); I.

Seattle v. Evans, 1184 Wn.2d 856 (2015)

Ordinance prohibiting carrying a fixed blade knife in public, SMC 12A.14.080, does not violate federal constitutional right to bear arms, Seattle v. Montana, 129 Wn.2d 583 (1996), distinguishing District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 171 L.Ed.2d 637 (2008); a knife does not qualify as "arms;" affirms Seattle v. Evans, 182 Wn.App. 188 (2014); 5-4.

Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 136 S.Ct. 1027, 194 L.Ed.2d 99 (2016)

Stun gun is protected by the Second Amendment, District of Columbia v. Heller, 171 L.Ed.2d 637 (2008), per curiam.

State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016)

For purposes of firearm enhancement, RCW 9.41.010(9) (2015), 9.94A.533(3), a device must be capable of being fired, either instantly or with reasonable effort and within a reasonable time, but evidence that a device appears to be a real gun and is being wielded in committing a crime is sufficient circumstantial evidence that it is a firearm even if it is not recovered, State v. Faust, 93 Wn.App. 373 (1998), State v. Padilla, 95 Wn.App. 531 (1999) , State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 872-73 (2016), State v. Jusila, 197 Wn.App. 908, 932-34 (2017), , State v. Olsen,

10 Wn.App.2d 731 (2019) but see: State v. Pierce, 155 Wn.App. 701 (2010), cf.: State v. Recuenco, 163 Wn.2d 428 (2008); III.

State v. Horton, 195 Wn.App. 202, 217-21 (2016)

A withheld adjudication following a guilty plea in Florida counts as a felony conviction for purposes of felon in possession of a firearm in spite of Florida law's concluding that it is not a conviction in Florida; II.

State v. Haggin, 195 Wn.App. 315 (2016)

Multiple current convictions for unlawful possession of firearms run concurrently unless there also is a current conviction for theft of a firearm or possession of a stolen firearm, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(c) (2015); III.

State v . Wences, 189 Wn.2d 675 (2017)

Deadly weapon special verdict, court imposes firearm enhancement, defendant had absconded in 2005 but was tried after Pers. Restraint of Eastmond, 173 Wn.2d 632, 634 (2012) held that a sentencing court cannot impose a firearm enhancement on a deadly weapon finding which applies to all cases on direct review, rule applies even though defendant had absconded, but see: State v. Handy, 27 Wash. 469, 470-71 (1902), State v. Mosley, 84 Wn.2d 608 (1974); 6-3.

State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47 (2017)

Defendant is convicted of burglary, ten counts of theft of a firearm and three counts of unlawful possession of a firearm, is sentenced to standard range sentences concurrent to the burglary but the firearm convictions consecutive to each other, defendant claims on appeal that court failed to recognize its power to impose concurrent mitigated sentences; held: pursuant to Pers. Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007), State v. Graham, 181 Wn.2d 878 (2014), trial court had discretion to impose mitigated concurrent sentences, regardless of language in RCW 9.412.040(6) that firearm sentences shall run consecutively "notwithstanding any other law," *cf.: State v. Miller, 185 Wn.2d 111 (2016), State v. Brown, 13 Wn.App.2d 288 (2020), if the court finds that the presumptive sentence is clearly excessive; 6-3; not retroactive, Pers. Restraint of Henriques, 14 Wn.App.2d 199 (2020).

State v. Jusila, 197 Wn.App. 908, 932-34 (2017)

In burglary 1° case under deadly weapon prong evidence is sufficient to prove firearm where state offers photographs of guns, witnesses testify that they found loaded rifles, no one testified that the rifles were operable, but that can be inferred from photos and testimony, State v. Mathé, 35 Wn.App. 572 (1983), State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 197-200 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012), State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016), State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 872-73 (2016); I.

State v. Garcia, 198 Wn.App. 527 (2017)

In VUFA case, because prior judgment and sentence and sentencing proceedings lacked evidence that defendant was advised of the firearm prohibition trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(c); held: generally an affirmative defense must be submitted to the trier of fact where the burden is on defense; here, where state has other evidence of defendant's knowledge of the firearm prohibition trial court erred in dismissing, see: State v. Breitung, 173 Wn.2d 393 (2011); I.

State v. Clark, 200 Wn.App. 20 (2017)

Court issues domestic violence protection order which requires a surrender of firearms, police find guns in defendant's storage locker, is convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a)(ii)(C)(ll), which states that it is unlawful to possess a firearm if the underlying DVPO "explicitly prohibits the use...of physical force," and here the order does not mention "physical force;" held: protective order need not parrot the language of the statute to be sufficient as long as it clearly prohibits force, thus evidence was sufficient to convict; I.

State v. Vazquez, 200 Wn.App. 220 (2017)

Defendant is charged with assault while armed with a firearm, RCW 9.94A.533(3) (2015), instructions only address deadly weapon finding but define a firearm as a deadly weapon, special verdict is for a firearm enhancement which jury finds; held: because this was an instructional error and not a sentencing error harmless error analysis applies, harmless here, see: State v. Recuenco, 163 Wn.2d 428, 437 (2008), but see: State v. Williams, 147 Wn.App. 479 (2008); III.

State v. Garcia, 191 Wn.2d 986 (2018)

In VUFA case, because prior judgment and sentence and sentencing proceedings lacked evidence that defendant was advised of the firearm prohibition trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(c); held: where state has other evidence of defendant's knowledge of the firearm prohibition trial court erred in dismissing, see: State v. Breitung, 173 Wn.2d 393 (2011); affirms State v. Garcia, 198 Wn.App. 527 (2017); 6-3.

State v. Sassen Van Elsloo, 191 Wn.2d 798 (2018)

Police find drugs in car, firearm in cargo hold, defendant-driver is charged with VUCSA with firearm enhancement; held: evidence was sufficient (1) that a firearm was easily accessible and readily available for offensive or defensive purposes during the commission of the crime and (2) that a nexus exists among the defendant, the weapon, and the crime. State v. Eckenrode, 159 Wn.2d 488, 493, (2007); here, the firearm was close enough to establish nexus, distinguishing State v. Gurske, 155 Wn.2d 134,138 (2005); 6-3.

State v. Pinkham, 2 Wn.App.2d 411 (2018)

Possession of a loaded rifle in a vehicle, RCW 77.15.460(1) (2014), is a strict liability offense, distinguishing State v. Anderson, 141 Wn.2d 357 (2000), State v. Anderson, 54 Wn.App. 384 (1989); III.

State v. Dennis, 191 Wn.2d 169 (2018)

Defendant is convicted for a felony in 1991, then goes fifteen years crime-free, is convicted for a misdemeanor in 2014, later petitions for reinstatement of firearm rights; held: any five year crime-free period, regardless of a later conviction, requires court to reinstate right to possess firearms, RCW 9.41.040(4)(a)(ii)(A) (2018); reverses State v. Dennis, 200 Wn.App. 654 (2017); 6-3.

State v. Rios, 431 Wn.App.2d 1016 (2018)

Defendant is convicted of assault 2°/deadly weapon, CW 9A.36.021(1)(c) (2011), following trial in which some witnesses testified he possessed a gun, trial court orders that he register as a firearm offender as he was convicted of a "felony firearm offense," RCW 9.41.330 (2016); held: a general verdict of assault with a deadly weapon is insufficient to find that defendant was convicted of a firearm offense, thus trial court erred in ordering registration; II.

State v. Olsen, , 14 Wn.App.2d 731 (2019)

State need not prove that a firearm, RCW 9.41.010(9) (2015), is operable to be considered a firearm for purposes of unlawful possession of a firearm 1°, .: State v. Raleigh, 157 Wn.App. 728 (2010), State v. Mathé, 35 Wn.App. 572 (1983), State v. Faust, 93 Wn.App. 373 (1998), overruling State v. Pierce, 155 Wn.App. 701, 713-14 (2010); II.

State v. S.G., 11 Wn.App.2d 74 (2019)

A dismissed juvenile deferred disposition remains a conviction for purposes of restoration of firearm rights, RCW 9.41.040(3); I.

State v. Brown, 13 Wn.App.2d 288 (2020)

Sentencing court does not have the authority to impose, as an exceptional sentence, concurrent firearm enhancements, RCW 9.94A.533(3)(e) (2018), for an adult, State v. Brown, 120 Wn.2d 20, 29 (1999) distinguishing Pers Restraint of Mulholland, 161 Wn.2d 322 (2007), State v. Houston-Sconiers, 188 Wn.2d 1 (2017), see: State v. Monschke, 197 Wn.2d 305 (2021); I.

State v. Nielsen, 14 Wn.App.2d 446 (2020)

In attempted felon in possession of a firearm case, RCW 9.41.040(1) (2020), state must prove, and instructions must reflect, that defendant intended to possess a firearm, not that defendant intended to unlawfully possess a firearm, State v. Minor, 162 Wn.2d 798 (2008), State v. Semakula, 88 Wn.App. 719 (1997); I.

State v. Mandefero, 14 Wn.App.2d 825 (2020),

While court may have discretion to impose mitigated sentence based upon youth even if defendant is over 18 at the time of the crime, State v. O'Dell, 183 Wn.2d 680 (2015), and thus can impose an exceptional sentence for a firearms related offense, it may not impose an exceptional sentence for firearm enhancements, RCW 9.94A.533(3)(e) (2019), State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47, 55 (2017), State v. Brown, 139 Wn.2d 20, 25-29 (1999); I.

State v. Flores, 18 Wn.App.2d 486 (2021)

Alien in possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.171, which does not contain an explicit mental state element, requires proof of knowing possession, State v. Bash, 130 Wn.2d 594 (1996), State v. Blake, 197 Wn.2d 170 (2021), State v. Bash, 130 Wn.2d 594 (1996); I.

State v. Wright, 19 Wn.App.2d 37 (2021)

Firearm enhancements must run consecutive to each other for adults, distinguishing State v. McFarland, 189 Wn.2d 47 (2017) which permits mitigated concurrent sentences for unlawful possession of a firearm; III.

State v. Gouley, 19 Wn.App.2d 185 (2021)

In felon in possession case state presents evidence that the recovered shotgun lacked a bolt but that a bolt is readily available, only way to tell if the gun is operable is to fire it which wasn't done here, defense claims insufficiency; held: whether a firearm can be rendered operational is immaterial to whether it is a firearm, RCW 9.41.010(9), state must show that the firearm is a "gun in fact, not a toy gun, and the real gun need not be loaded or even capable of being fired to be a firearm," State v. Faust, 93 Wn.App. 373, 380 (1998), State v. Olsen, 10 Wn.App.2d 731 (2019); II.

State v. Flannery, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 517 (2022)

Defendant is charged with domestic violence assault accompanied by a no contact order, RCW 10.99.040(2)(a), and order which prohibits him from possessing firearms, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a)(iii) (2020), objects to order that he surrender firearms on Fifth Amendment grounds; held: noncompliance with the firearm surrender order which subjects a defendant to a criminal charge violates the privilege against self-incrimination and thus firearm surrender statutory scheme is unconstitutional; scheme also violates Fourth Amendment; II.

DIMINISHED CAPACITY/VOLUNTARY INTOXICATION

State v. Edmon, 28 Wn.App. 98 (1981)

Where mens rea elements are intent or knowledge per RCW 9A.08.010(1)(a) and (b), element may be negated by expert testimony of mental disorder preventing formation of intent or knowledge at the time of crime if proper foundation is laid; sets forth in detail foundational requirements, accord: State v. Thamert, 45 Wn.App. 143 (1986), State v. Jones, 64 Wn.App. 134 (1992), State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992), but see: State v. Ellis, 136 Wn.2d 498 (1998); 2-1

State v. Collins, 30 Wn.App. 1 (1981)

Voluntary intoxication is defense to murder and manslaughter 1°, but not to manslaughter 2°; III.

State v. Eaton, 30 Wn.App. 288 (1981)

Court required defendant to testify before psychiatrist could testify as to intoxication defense as opinion was based upon defendant's recounting of incident; held: reversed, as violates intent of ER 703 and possibly defendant's 5th Amendment rights; II.

State v. Simmons, 30 Wn.App. 432 (1981)

Voluntary intoxication is a defense to taking and riding a motor vehicle, as knowledge is an element, State v. Robinson, 78 Wn.2d 479 (1970); evidence that defendant had been drinking, plus lay testimony "suggesting that his ability to acquire the requisite mental state had been impaired" requires instructions, WPIC 18.10; II.

State v. Carter, 31 Wn.App. 572 (1982)

Error to instruct jury that defense has burden of proving voluntary intoxication by preponderance, as defense of voluntary intoxication merely negates an element of the offense; I.

State v. Lottie, 31 Wn.App. 651 (1982)

To establish a valid involuntary intoxication defense to arson, defendant must show a loss of his faculties, such that he could not form the mental state to knowingly cause a fire, but see: State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 568-74 (2014); claim of a blackout after voluntarily consuming drugs and alcohol is not sufficient evidence to raise involuntary intoxication as a defense; I.

State v. Corwin, 32 Wn.App. 493 (1982)

Fact that a defendant is an alcoholic with organic brain syndrome does not support a contention of involuntary intoxication; there is no difference between voluntary and involuntary intoxication as to crimes that require proof of specific intent (here, robbery), but see: State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 568-74 (2014); I.

State v. Brooks, 97 Wn.2d 873 (1982)

Remand for new trial where defense expert was not permitted to testify re: effect of defendant's voluntary intoxication on his ability to premeditate murder.

State v. Washington, 36 Wn.App. 792 (1984)

Evidence that defendant was intoxicated is enough to support voluntary intoxication instruction, State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981), State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 81-85 (2011), reversing State v. Washington, 34 Wn.App. 410 (1983); I.

State v. Mathews, 38 Wn.App. 180 (1984)

In robbery case with voluntary intoxication defense, trial court refused to permit defense psychiatrist to testify that defendant's alcoholism was caused by post-traumatic stress syndrome; held: PTSS was not causally connected to a lack of specific intent, thus exclusion was proper, State v. Edmon, 28 Wn.App. 98 (1981), see: State v. Bottrell, 103 Wn.App. 706 (2000); I.

State v. Commodore, 38 Wn.App. 244 (1984)

Diminished capacity is a defense to both intent and premeditation elements in murder 1°; I.

State v. Sandomingo, 39 Wn.App. 709 (1985)

To obtain an intoxication instruction, there must be substantial evidence that defendant was intoxicated and that defendant was affected by the alcohol, State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981), State v. Simmons, 30 Wn.App. 432 (1981), cf.: State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 81-85 (2011).; II.

State v. Smissaert, 41 Wn.App. 813 (1985)

Court prohibits defense expert from testifying as to defendant's mental state and to voluntary intoxication, although it instructs jury as to voluntary intoxication; held: admission of expert testimony is within sound discretion of trial court, Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993); effects of alcohol are commonly known, thus expert's testimony was unnecessary, see: State v. Kruger, 116 Wn.App. 685, 691-93 (2003); I.

State v. Fuller, 42 Wn.App. 53 (1985)

State need not prove the absence of intoxication; prior opinion, State v. Fuller, 39 Wn.App. 104 (1984) requiring a special instruction setting forth state's burden of proof regarding intoxication is reversed; accord: State v. Sam, 42 Wn.App. 586 (1986), State v. James, 47 Wn.App. 605 (1987), State v. Sao, 156 Wn.App. 67, 76-77 (2010); I.

State v. Thamert, 45 Wn.App. 143 (1986)

Within trial court's discretion to exclude testimony of a psychiatrist and a nurse who spoke with defendant, but cannot meet all nine foundational requirements of State v. Edmon, 28 Wn.App. 98, 102-3 (1981), see: State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 459-65 (1999), but see: State v. Ellis, 136 Wn.2d 498, 504 (1998), State v. Atsbeha, 142 Wn.2d 904, 913-14 (2001), State v. Acosta, 123 Wn.App. 424 (2004); I.

State v. Poulsen, 45 Wn.App. 706 (1986)

Where an indigent defendant makes a clear showing that his mental state will be a significant factor at trial, trial court must appoint a psychiatric expert to assist in the defense; II.

State v. Hansen, 46 Wn.App. 292 (1986)

Where evidence establishes that drug intoxication produced a mental disorder that affected ability to form mental state, voluntary intoxication instruction is sufficient, and court need not instruct specially on diminished capacity, State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440 (1993); cf.: State v. Hackett, 64 Wn.App. 780, 787 n. 3 (1992); I.

State v. Brewton, 49 Wn.App. 589 (1987)

Before trial, defense informs state that it is raising insanity and diminished capacity defenses, state is given access to psychiatric reports, after which defense withdraws insanity defense and demands return of records; trial court denies return of records, but prohibits state from using admissions of defendant contained in the reports; held: diminished capacity, like insanity, injects the issue of defendant's mental state, and thus disclosure of medical records is proper, with excision of incriminating statements; II.

State v. Coates, 107 Wn.2d 882 (1987)

State does not have the burden of disproving voluntary intoxication, RCW 9A.16.090, as it is not a defense but is merely evidence which bears upon the mental state; jury should be precluded from considering intoxication where the mens rea element is criminal negligence; 6-3.

State v. Nuss, 52 Wn.App. 735 (1988)

As soon as defendant asserts diminished capacity as a defense, state is entitled to psychiatric reports from defense, court may order defendant to be interviewed by a state's expert; defense counsel may be present at the interview, but may not participate; defendant may not claim Fifth Amendment privilege at interview as it is waived by raising the defense, although may be reclaimed if defense withdraws diminished capacity defense and does not call experts; III.

State v. Hutchinson, 111 Wn.2d 872 (1989)

Where defense states diminished capacity may be a defense, court may order psychiatric evaluation by a state's expert, during which defense counsel may be present but may not inhibit examination, State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 273-77 (2012), cf.: State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 877 (1998), but see: State v. Cochran, 102 Wn.App. 480, 483-86 (2000); defendant may refuse to answer any question that might incriminate him or lead to evidence of an incriminating nature, State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004); at trial, opinions, observations and statements are admissible as to nonincriminatory statements by defendant, but observations and statements (other than opinions) as to incriminatory statements by defendant are not admissible; an observation or statement is not incriminatory merely because it tends to show the defendant is sane or had sufficient capacity to commit the crime, State v. Craney, 347 N.W.2d 668, 673 (Iowa, 1984); 9-0.

State v. Gough, 53 Wn.App. 619 (1989)

Evidence which supports an insanity defense does not necessarily justify a diminished capacity instruction; to obtain diminished capacity instruction, there must be some evidence to explain how defendant's mental condition related to his inability to achieve a culpable mental state; II.

State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992)

Diminished capacity is a defense to assault 2° with a deadly weapon, RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a); absent a logical connection between diagnosed disorders (here, acute anxiety and significant depression) and ability to form intent, it is proper for court to exclude expert testimony, State v. Griffin, 100 Wn.2d 417, 418-9 (1983); III.

State v. Stumpf, 64 Wn.App. 522 (1992)

Expert testimony is required to establish existence of mental disorder and causal connection between disorder and diminished capacity; to supplement expert testimony, lay witness may testify to establish defendant's mental state where (1) witness had sufficient acquaintance with defendant or had sufficient time to observe defendant, (2) witness testifies, at least in a general way, as to the peculiar facts and circumstances on which her conclusion is based, and (3) testimony refers to defendant's mental condition at or close to the time witness made observation and at or close to time of offense; III.

State v. Hackett, 64 Wn.App. 780 (1992)

Where there is sufficient evidence to establish drug intoxication such that defendant is unable to form intent, trial court must give voluntary intoxication instruction, WPIC 18.10, State v. Zamora, 6 Wn.App. 130 (1971), distinguishing State v. Hansen, 46 Wn.App. 292 (1986); definition of intent, inclusion of intent in "to convict" instruction and counsel's arguing same does not render failure to instruct harmless; I.

State v. Gallegos, 65 Wn.App. 230 (1992)

Defense is entitled to voluntary intoxication instruction if (1) crime has a mens rea element other than criminal negligence, State v. Coates, 107 Wn.2d 882 (1987), (2) substantial evidence of drinking, and (3) defense presents evidence that drinking affected defendant's ability to acquire required mental state; here, lay testimony that defendant was highly intoxicated is insufficient, State v. Gabryschak, 83 Wn.App. 249 (1996), State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304 (2006), but see: State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 81-85 (2011), cf.: State v. Rice, 102 Wn.2d 120 (1984); I.

State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440 (1993)

Where diminished capacity is premised wholly or partly on voluntary intoxication, one instruction can be adequate to permit defendant to argue defendant's theory of the case, State v. Hansen, 46 Wn.App. 292 (1987); 8-0.

State v. Brown, 78 Wn.App. 891 (1995)

Voluntary intoxication is not defense to rape, State v. Swagerty, 60 Wn.App. 830, 833-4 (1991), see: State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304 (2006); II.

State v. Warden, 80 Wn.App. 448 (1996)

In murder trial, where there is sufficient evidence that defendant had diminished capacity to intend to cause death of victim, then defendant is entitled to instructions on lesser included offenses of manslaughter 1° and manslaughter 2°, State v. Colwash, 15 Wn.App. 530 (1976), aff'd, 88 Wn.2d 468 (1977), State v.Berge, 25 Wn.App. 433 (1980), State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981), see: State v. Schaffer, 135 Wn.2d 355 (1998); I.

Montana v. Egelhoff, 135 L.Ed.2d 361 (1996)

State statute which requires instructing jury that it may not consider voluntary intoxication in determining mens rea does not violate due process, see also: Clark v. Arizona, 165 L.Ed.2d 842 (2006), Kahler v.. Kansas, 589 U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1021, 206 L.Ed.2d 312 (2020); 6-3.

State v. Jones, 82 Wn.App. 871 (1996)

Multiple personality disorder does not rise to diminished capacity where the core personality is unaware and not in control of the alter personality and where there is no evidence that the alter personality's capacity was diminished, State v. Wheaton, 121 Wn.2d 347 (1993), see: State v. Greene, 139 Wn.2d 64 (1999); III.

State v. Gabryschak, 83 Wn.App. 249 (1996)

Defense need not present any evidence and may still be entitled to voluntary intoxication instruction as long as evidence presented by state and elicited during cross-examination contains substantial evidence of defendant's drinking and of the effects of alcohol on defendant's mind or body, State v. Thomas, 109 Wn.2d 222, 231 (1987), State v. Kruger, 116 Wn.App. 685, 691-93 (2003), but see: State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 81-85 (2011); here, defendant responded consistently to police requests to enter building, establishing he understood requests, attempted to flee upon arrest indicating he knew he was arrested, knew he was going to jail, no evidence that his speech was slurred or that he stumbled or appeared confused or was disoriented, thus voluntary intoxication instruction properly refused, State v. Priest, 100 Wn.App. 451, 453-55 (2000), State v. Finley, 97 Wn.App. 129 (1999), see: State v. Coates, 107 Wn.2d 882, 891 (1987), State v. Rice, 102 Wn.2d 120, 122-3 (1984), State v. Brooks, 97 Wn.2d 873, 876-7 (1982), State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616, 623 (1981), State v. Guilliot, 106 Wn.App. 355, 365-66 (2001), State v. Thomas, 123 Wn.App. 771 (2004), State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 534-39 (2018); I.

State v. Hamlet, 133 Wn.2d 314 (1997)

Where defense raises diminished capacity, court may order defense to disclose name, reports and statements of a defense psychiatrist who interviewed defendant but whom defense stated it would not call as a witness, State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457 (1990); abuse of discretion to admit testimony that the psychiatrist was first retained by the defense, harmless here; 8-1.

State v. Ellis, 136 Wn.2d 498 (1998)

Expert testimony demonstrating a mental disorder that impairs defendant's ability to form specific intent to commit a crime may be sufficient to meet ER 702 requirements for admissibility of expert testimony, State v. Mitchell, 102 Wn.App. 1 (2000); foundational requirements of State v. Edmon, 28 Wn.App. 98 (1981), are expressly not adopted, see: State v.

Thamert, 45 Wn.App. 143 (1986), State v. Jones, 64 Wn.App. 134 (1992), State v. Davis, 64 Wn.App. 511 (1992), State v. Atsbeha, 142 Wn.2d 904 (2001), State v. Bottrell, 103 Wn.App. 706 (2000); 7-2.

State v. Mitchell, 102 Wn.App. 21 (2000)

Psychologist testifies at assault 3° trial that defendant suffered from paranoid schizophrenia, a disorder capable of diminishing defendant's capacity to know that complainants were police but that he could not say with reasonable certainty that defendant's mental disorder actually diminished his capacity at the time of the incident, only that it was possible, trial court excludes testimony, ER 702; held: expert's opinion must be helpful to the trier of fact in assessing defendant's mental state, State v. Greene, 139 Wn.2d 64, 73 (1999); the opinion is helpful if it explains how the mental disorder relates to the asserted impairment; it is not necessary that the expert state an opinion that the disorder actually did produce the impairment, only that it could have and, if so, how the disorder operates, see: State v. Ellis, 136 Wn.2d 498 (1998), thus evidence should have been admitted, State v. Bottrell, 103 Wn.App. 706 (2000), cf.: State v. Thomas, 123 Wn.App. 771 (2004); I.

State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564, 569-71 (2000)

Defendant is charged with assault 2°, at bench trial court finds that defendant's capacity was diminished, acquits of assault 2° but convicts of unlawful display of a weapon; held: unlawful display is a legal lesser of assault 2°, State v. Fowler, 114 Wn.2d 59, 67 (1990), overruled on other grounds, State v. Blair, 117 Wn.2d 479, 486-87 (1991); the manner in which defendant held the weapon warranted alarm for the safety of a police officer, coupled with evidence of defendant's diminished capacity to form the specific intent for assault, supports an inference that defendant committed only the offense of unlawful display of a weapon; III.

State v. Bottrell, 103 Wn.App. 706 (2000)

In premeditated murder case, where expert testifies that defendant suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), that as a result of PTSD she experienced flashbacks during the homicide and that the flashbacks impaired her ability to act with intent to kill, it is error to exclude the testimony, State v. Ellis, 136 Wn.2d 498 (1998), State v. Mitchell, 102 Wn.App. 21 (2000); where there is sufficient evidence that defendant intended to commit robbery and that the PTSD did not interfere with that intent, then diminished capacity is not available as to felony murder; II.

State v. Atsbeha, 142 Wn.2d 904 (2001)

In drug delivery case, physician offers testimony that, while defendant could perform a simple task upon request, such as getting something and bringing it to the person asking, in an unstructured, real world situation his ability to form the intent was diminished, trial court excludes evidence as insufficient to establish inability to form specific intent; held: it was not an abuse of discretion for trial court to exclude testimony as the evidence established that defendant could form the intent to deliver, State v. Guilliot, 106 Wn.App. 355 (2001), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); reverses State v. Atsbeha, 96 Wn.App. 654 (1999); 6-3.

State v. Cienfuegos, 144 Wn.2d 222 (2001)

In escape case, psychologist testifies defendant was in withdrawal, wasn't rational or reasonable, probably didn't know what he was doing or that he was escaping; held: sufficient to warrant diminished capacity instruction, WPIC 18.20; where counsel is able to argue lack of proof of intent, failure to offer specific diminished capacity instruction is not ineffective assistance, distinguishing State v. Thomas, 109 Wn.2d 222, 232 (1987), State v. Warden, 133 Wn.2d 559, 564 (1997); 5-4.

State v. Guilliot, 106 Wn.App. 355, 359-66 (2001)

In intentional murder case, court refuses defense offer of psychiatric testimony that defendant has narcissistic personality traits that tends to make him "deny physical defects," that there is a "logical bridge" between this and defendant's tendency to have insulin reactions; held: trial court did not abuse its discretion in ruling that personality disorder evidence was not helpful to jury, ER 702, see: State v. Atsbeha, 142 Wn.2d 904, 921(2001), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020); II,

State v. Kruger, 116 Wn.App. 685 (2003)

In assault case, evidence that defendant was drunk, experienced "blackout vomiting," slurred speech and imperviousness to pepper spray was sufficient to justify voluntary intoxication instruction, WPIC 18.10, State v. Gabryschak, 83 Wn.App. 249 (1996), State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74-81 (2011), even without an expert witness, see: State v. Smissaert, 41 Wn.App. 813, 815 (1985); failure of defense to propose a voluntary intoxication instruction was ineffective assistance; 2-1, II.

State v. Harris, 122 Wn.App. 547 (2004)

Where defendant testifies that he had smoked crack cocaine and fired gun at victim in fear, he has not presented evidence that his intoxication prevented him from acquiring required mental state, thus trial counsel was not ineffective for failure to except to court's refusal to instruct on voluntary intoxication, State v. Everybodytalksabout, 145 Wn.2d 456, 479 (2002); II.

State v. Acosta, 123 Wn.App. 424 (2004)

To rebut defense expert, court admits expert's testimony which includes a recitation of defendant's arrest and conviction record to support expert's opinion that defendant has antisocial personality disorder, not diminished capacity; held: an expert can testify regarding basis for opinion for limited purpose of showing how he reached his conclusion only if the probative value of the basis for that opinion is not substantially outweighed by its prejudicial nature, State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440, 452-53 (1993); here, even if expert could reasonably rely on defendant's criminal history, jury should not have heard it, ER 403, as probative value is far outweighed by danger of unfair prejudice; II.

State v. Thomas, 123 Wn.App. 771 (2004)

Expert's proposed testimony that defendant may have had diminished capacity because of voluntary intoxication, that it was possible she was in a blackout when victim was stabbed was insufficient to admit as witness could not state, to a reasonable medical certainty, that defendant suffered from a mental disorder that impaired her ability to form intent or that, if she were in a blackout, the blackout affected her ability to form the requisite specific intent, State v.

Mitchell, 102 Wn.App. 21 (2000); trial court properly instructed jury as to voluntary intoxication, as no expert is required, State v. Kruger, 116 Wn.App. 685, 692-93 (2003); I.

State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304 (2006)

Voluntary intoxication is a defense to child molestation, as "for the purpose of gratifying sexual desire," RCW 9A.44.010(2), is a specific intent requirement, whether or not it is an element of the crime, see: State v. Lorenz, 152 Wn.2d 22, 34-35 (2004); affirms State v. Stevens, 127 Wn.App. 269 (2005); 5-4.

Clark v. Arizona, 165 L.Ed.2d 842 (2006)

State law which limits expert testimony about a defendant's mental incapacity to an insanity defense but not on the element of mens rea does not violate due process, see also: Kahler v.. Kansas, 589 U.S. ___, 140 S.Ct. 1021, 206 L.Ed.2d 312 (2020); 5-4.

State v. Johnson, 150 Wn.App. 663 (2009)

Instructing jury that "evidence of a mental disease, disorder or defect may be taken into consideration in determining whether the defendant had the capacity to form the intent to commit" the crime is approved, distinguishing State v. Atsbeha, 142 Wn.2d 904 (2001), State v. Ellis, 136 Wn.2d 498 (1998); I.

State v. Sao, 156 Wn.App. 67, 76-77 (2010)

Voluntary intoxication and diminished capacity do not add an additional element akin to self-defense, thus defense is not entitled to a burden shifting instruction, State v. James, 47 Wn.App. 605, 608 (1987), State v. Marchi, 158 Wn.App. 823, 833-36 (2010); II.

State v. Walters, 162 Wn.App. 74, 81-85 (2011)

Physical manifestations of intoxication alone may be sufficient to support a voluntary intoxication instruction even absent direct evidence that intoxication affected defendant's mental state, State v. Rice, 102 Wn.2d 120 (1984), State v. Brooks, 97 Wn.2d 873 (1982), State v. Jones, 95 Wn.2d 616 (1981), cf.: State v. Gabryschak, 83 Wn.App. 249 (1996), State v. Webb, 161 Wn.App. 195, 208-11 (2011); where there is direct evidence that defendant's mental state was not impaired (here, defendant's statement that he would assault victim and then did so), failure to give an instruction is harmless error; 2-1, III.

State v. Webb, 161 Wn.App. 195, 208-11 (2011)

Evidence shows defendant was intoxicated, enters store with an altered toy gun, tells clerk he is stealing to provide for his daughter due to hard times, after robbery calls his AA sponsor to say he robbed the store, trial court refuses voluntary intoxication instruction; held: viewed in a light most favorable to the defendant, defense failed to "reasonably and logically connect the defendant's intoxication with the asserted inability to form the required level of culpability," State v. Gabryschak, 83 Wn.App. 249, 252-53 (1996), thus court did not err in refusing instruction, cf.: State v. Webb, 162 Wn.App. 74,, 81-85 (2011); 2-1, III.

State v. Martin, 169 Wn.App. 620 (2012)

Wife shoots husband after he confesses to an affair, trial court admits expert testimony as to defendant's depressive disorder and histrionic personality disorder and their effect on dissociation in support of diminished capacity defense but excludes "betrayal trauma theory" evidence as not generally accepted in the scientific community; held: like "rape trauma syndrome," betrayal trauma theory does not pass the Frye test, see: State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987), distinguishing Carlton v. Vancouver Care, LLC, 155 Wn.App. 151, 164 (2010); I.

Kansas v. Cheever, 571 U.S. 87, 187 L.Ed.2d 519 (2013)

Pursuant to statute court orders psychiatric evaluation, defense raises voluntary intoxication defense and calls expert, state calls court-ordered expert to rebut; held: where defendant puts his mental state at issue state may call a court-ordered expert to rebut which does not violate defendant's Fifth Amendment privilege, Buchanan v. Kentucky, 483 U.S. 402, 423–424, 97 L.Ed.2d 336 (1987); 9-0.

State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 568-74 (2014)

Involuntary intoxication is a complete defense but must rise to the level of insanity, State v. Mriglot, 88 Wn.2d 573, 575 (1977); I.

State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641 (2017)

Defense affirmatively states that it is not raising diminished capacity defense, trial court excludes expert psychological testimony which defense offers "to rebut the State's mens rea evidence;" held: diminished capacity must be declared pretrial, State v. Harris, 122 Wn.App. 619, 622 (1989), CrR 4.7(b)(2)(xiv), failure to do so precludes expert testimony; "observation testimony" about relevant facts tending to rebut mens rea evidence is admissible; while the state is always required to prove the defendant's actual culpable mental state, it is not automatically required to prove the defendant's capacity to form a culpable mental state; such capacity is presumed unless the defendant places it at issue, State v. Johnson, 150 Wn.App. 663, 671 (2009); 5-4.

State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 534-39 (2018)

In kidnapping case while there was evidence of defendant's methamphetamine intoxication, there was no evidence that defendant was unable to form the required level of culpability thus counsel's failure to propose a voluntary intoxication instruction was not ineffective assistance; unlike alcohol intoxication expert testimony is required because the effects of methamphetamine intoxication are not generally known, distinguishing State v. Thomas, 123 Wn.App. 771, 782 (2004), State v. Gabryschak, 83 Wn.App. 249 (1996), State v. Thomas, 109 Wn.2d 222, 231 (1987); II.

State v. Pratt, 11 Wn.App.2d 450 (2019), affirmed, on other grounds, 198 Wn.2d 849 (2021)

Trial court prohibits testimony of psychologist to testify that defendant may have had "sexsomnia," which involves people engaging in sex during sleep to support defendant's claim of lack of volition; held: while sleepwalking may constitute a defense, State v. Utter, 4 Wn.App. 137, 141-42 (1971), it is not akin to diminished capacity and must be proved by the defense by a preponderance, State v. Deer, 175 Wn.2d 725, 734 (2012), court properly excluded the testimony as expert could not testify that defendant had the disorder; 2-1, II.

State v. Taylor, 18 Wn.App.2d 568 (2021)

Instruction on diminished capacity must include all of the relevant mental states; I.

DISCOVERY

State v. Smith, 15 Wn.App. 716 (1976)

CrR 4.7 does not require state to disclose purpose or tactical use of exhibit, at least without specifying undue prejudice; II.

Seattle v. Apodaca, 18 Wn.App. 802 (1977)

Police intelligence files may be viewed in camera, State v. Jones, 96 Wn.App. 369 (1999); I.

State v. Oughton, 26 Wn.App. 74 (1980)

State must provide defendant with discovery as soon as state discovers evidence; failure to do so is error; if defendant moves for continuance, should be granted; III.

State v. Johnston, 27 Wn.App. 73 (1980)

Defendant cannot be ordered to disclose testimonial information to state by a discovery order; in embezzlement case court may not order defendant to disclose "all manner of personal financial holdings she may have received;" II.

State v. Thacker, 94 Wn.2d 276 (1980)

Suppression is not remedy for failure to provide discovery, State v. Lewis, 19 Wn.App. 35 (1978), State v. Dailey, 23 Wn.App. 233 (1979); State v. Brown, 48 Wn.App. 654, 658 n. 3 (1987), State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531 (1991), but see: State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 879-84 (1998), State v. Beliz, 104 Wn.App. 206, 211-12 (2001), State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1, 12 (2003), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50, 78-81 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980)

If state inexcusably fails to provide discovery until shortly before trial, forcing defendant to either waive speedy trial rule or go to trial unprepared, prejudice may result and case shall be dismissed if defendant can prove by preponderance that interjection of new facts into case when state has not acted with due diligence will compel defendant to choose between prejudicing either right to speedy trial or effective assistance of counsel, State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50, 78-81 (2010), but see: State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 578-85 (2001), State v. Barry, 184 Wn.App. 790 (2014), see: State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 327-29 (1996), State v. Ramos, 83 Wn.App. 622, 634-39 (1996); 8-0.

State v. Bradfield, 29 Wn.App. 679 (1981)

Sanctions under CrR 4.7(h)(7) for violation of discovery rules discretionary with trial court; I.

State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445 (1982)

If the state gathers evidence which it intends to use in rebuttal, it must furnish such statements to the defense, CrR 4.7(a)(1)(i); State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414 (1975), cf.: State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 288-90 (1996); III.

State v. Vavra, 33 Wn.App. 142 (1982)

Prosecutor failed to reveal to defense that a witness had informal immunity and that prosecutor would appear at witness's sentencing in another county and speak on his behalf; held: prejudicial error; III.

State v. Bartholomew, 98 Wn.2d 173 (1982)

Defense discovers after trial that state's star witness took and flunked a polygraph; held: where undisclosed evidence demonstrates that the state's case included perjury and that the prosecution knew or should have known of the perjury, reversal should be granted if there is any reasonable likelihood that the perjured testimony could have affected the verdict, United States v. Agurs, 49 L.Ed.2d 342 (1976), however polygraph evidence is not reliable, so this test was not met here; where a pretrial request is made for "specific evidence" which was not disclosed, test is whether the evidence withheld "could have affected the outcome"; here, no request was made, thus test is whether defendant can establish if new evidence would establish a reasonable doubt which did not otherwise exist; 8-1.

State v. Jones, 33 Wn.App. 865 (1983)

Mistrial is proper remedy for failure of state to provide discovery, CrR 4.7(h)(7)(i); I.

State v. Rinaldo, 36 Wn.App. 86 (1983)

Defendant served subpoena duces tecum on newspaper for exculpatory information in its files; newspaper moved to quash alleging that sources were confidential; held: CONST. Art. 1, § 5 provides absolute privilege of nondisclosure of confidential news sources, as long as privilege is not "abused"; concurring opinion holds defendant failed to meet threshold requirement to compel in camera review, as defendant failed to show likelihood that newspaper's files contained exculpatory information and failed to exhaust reasonable alternative sources; 2-1, I.

Barfield v. Seattle, 100 Wn.2d 878 (1984)

Police internal investigation files are not privileged in a tort action, and shall be produced if the test of relevancy for pre-trial discovery is met, CR 26(b)(1), State v. Jones, 96 Wn.App. 369 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984)

Dilatory presentation of discovery is not grounds for suppression of evidence, State v. Thacker, 94 Wn.2d 276, 280 (1980), State v. Lewis, 19 Wn.App. 35, 47-48 (1978), but see: State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863 (1998), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50, 78-81 (2010); dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), is an extraordinary remedy appropriate only if defendant's right to a fair trial has been prejudiced in a manner which could not be remedied by a new trial, State v. Whitney, 96 Wn.2d 578 (1981), State v. Baker, 78 Wn.2d 327, 332-33 (1970), cf.: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984)

While witness statements must be provided to the defense, CrR 4.7(a)(1)(i), police reports are not necessarily discoverable where court determines that portions are work product, State v. Music, 79 Wn.2d 699, 713 (1971); prosecutor must provide defense with information that witnesses had been hypnotized; fact that police had not informed prosecutor that witnesses were hypnotized does not excuse failure to provide this to defense; prosecutor must provide details of exculpatory information; providing name and address of a potentially exculpatory witness, without more, violates CrR 4.7(a)(3); 9-0.

State v. Boot, 40 Wn.App. 215 (1985)

Trial court granted defense motion for a lineup, CrR 4.7(b)(2), which was never held, defense never sought order to compel or other sanctions, CrR 4.7(h)(7)(i); held: failure to seek order to compel waives right to assign error on appeal; I.

State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986)

State discloses to defense name of its expert on the morning of trial, which is begun after expiration date, CrR 3.3(d)(8); defense moves for exclusion of state's expert, State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980); held: exclusion of witness is not proper remedy where there is no showing that counsel was unprepared to meet the witness's testimony, and the only claim of prejudice is the right to a speedy trial; I.

State v. Garcia, 45 Wn.App. 132 (1986)

Eyewitness to homicide tells prosecutor that her original statement identifying defendant was false, prosecutor fails to disclose this to defense; witness later recants her recantation, trial court holds prosecutor's notes of this interview was work product and not exculpatory as it was a lie; held: prosecutor must, at the moment of discovery or confirmation, State v. Oughton, 26 Wn.App. 74, 79 (1980), disclose substance of oral statements to defense, CrR 4.7(a)(1)(i), State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004), irrespective of state's belief as to the veracity of the statement; work product only consists of opinions, theories or conclusions of investigating or prosecuting agencies, CrR 4.7(f)(1); a lawyer's notes are not per se work product, State v. DeWilde, 12 Wn.App. 255, 257 (1974); harmless here; I.

State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692 (1986)

Assertions by the defense that police internal investigation files "may" contain information critical to the defense or "might" lead to other evidence is insufficient to trigger an in camera review of the files, State v. Blackwell, 120 Wn.2d 822, 828 (1993), see also: State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525 (1993), State v. Youde, 174 Wn.App. 873 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Espinosa, 47 Wn.App. 85 (1987)

Denial of discovery of rape crisis center's interview notes with victim following an in camera review will only be reversed for abuse of discretion, RCW 70.125.065, see: State v. Diemel, 81 Wn.App. 44 (1996); presence of a police officer during the interview does not waive the privilege, State v. Gibson, 3 Wn.App. 596 (1970), RCW 70.125.060, distinguishing State v. Wilder, 12 Wn.App. 296 (1974); see: State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525 (1993); I.

State v. Strandy, 49 Wn.App. 537 (1987)

Trial court may order defense to turn over to state a tape recorded interview of a state's witness; interview was not work product; II.

State v. Brewton, 49 Wn.App. 589 (1987)

Before trial, defense informs state that it is raising insanity and diminished capacity defenses, state is given access to psychiatric reports, after which defense withdraws insanity defense and demands return of records; trial court denies return of records, but prohibits state from using admissions of defendant contained in the reports; held: diminished capacity, like insanity, injects the issue of defendant's mental state, and thus disclosure of medical records is proper, with excision of incriminating statements; II.

Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 94 L.Ed.2d 40 (1987)

State statute creates qualified privilege in youth services agency's investigation files; defendant, charged with child abuse, seeks discovery of those files; held: under due process analysis, defendant has the right, upon making a general discovery request, to have trial court review file to determine if it has information that would probably change outcome of trial, State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 791-801 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), but see: State v. Diemel, 81 Wn.App. 44 (1996); defense counsel has no separate right to examine the confidential information absent a court's in camera review; 5-4.

State v. Ahlfinger, 50 Wn.App. 466 (1988)

Where rape crisis center employee uses notes to refresh recollection while testifying, ER 612 does not mandate disclosure to defense counsel absent in camera review, RCW 70.125.065, nor does failure to disclose violate confrontation clause; I.

State v. Gonzalez, 110 Wn.2d 738 (1988)

During deposition of rape complainant, defense counsel asks for names of all persons with whom she had sexual intercourse, which she refuses to answer; trial court suppresses her testimony, effectively terminating case; held: rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020, does not apply to pre-trial discovery; only material information may be discovered by criminal deposition, CrR 4.6(a); CR 26(b)(1) is not applicable in criminal cases; defense failed to establish materiality, as prior sexual intercourse is not probative of consent except where there is evidence that complainant is indiscriminately promiscuous, State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1, 10-11 (1983), see: State v. Sheets, 128 Wn.App. 149 (2005), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 791-801 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); Supreme Court states, in dicta, that, even where materiality is shown, trial court may deny discovery if it determines that harm to the complainant outweighs usefulness to defendant; 9-0.

State v. Nuss, 52 Wn.App. 735 (1988)

As soon as defendant asserts diminished capacity as a defense, state is entitled to psychiatric reports from defense, court may order defendant to be interviewed by a state's expert; defense counsel may be present at the interview, but may not participate; defendant may not claim Fifth Amendment privilege at interview as it is waived by raising the defense, although may be reclaimed if defense withdraws diminished capacity defense and does not call experts; III.

State v. Yates, 111 Wn.2d 793 (1988)

Trial court may order defense to disclose statements, signed or unsigned, recorded or written, given by potential prosecution witnesses during interviews with defense counsel or defense investigators; notes taken during the interviews and summaries of interviews prepared by defense counsel or investigators are not discoverable unless counsel or the investigator are called at trial to impeach; where defense maintains that the statements contain work product, then trial court should review materials in camera; 6-3.

State v. Clark, 53 Wn.App. 120 (1988)

Four-year old indecent liberties victim refuses to answer defense counsel's questions in interviews, trial court dismisses; held: right to interview a witness does not include a right to a successful interview, at least where unavoidable difficulties prevent the interview; here, before dismissing, trial court should have held a hearing to determine competency of victim, and to determine admissibility of hearsay pursuant to child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120 and, if child was incompetent and hearsay statements were inadmissible, then dismissal would be proper; I.

State v. Hutchinson, 111 Wn.2d 872 (1989)

Trial court may not order defense expert witnesses to prepare reports that do not exist, although defense counsel can be compelled to disclose in writing the testimony that such expert witnesses can be expected to relate at trial; where defense states that diminished capacity may be a defense, court may order a psychiatric evaluation by a state's expert, during which defense counsel may be present, but see: State v. Cochran, 102 Wn.App. 480, 483-86 (2000), but may not inhibit the examination; defendant may refuse to answer any question that might incriminate him or lead to evidence of an incriminating nature, State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004), State v. Haq, 166 Wn.App. 221, 273-77 (2012), see: State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Coleman, 54 Wn.App. 742 (1989)

Prosecutor's providing telephone numbers for witnesses on the day of trial is not grounds for dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), as a continuance was still a possible remedy, see: State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); while state is obligated to fulfill its discovery responsibilities, the defendant also has a responsibility to investigate and prepare; I.

State v. Dukes, 56 Wn.App. 660 (1990)

Trial court did not abuse discretion by denying defense motion for lineup in drug sale to undercover officer case; CrR 4.7(b)(2)(i) is directory, not mandatory; II.

State v. Gould, 58 Wn.App. 175 (1990)

Surprise, standing alone without unfair prejudice, is not a ground for exclusion of evidence under ER 403; I.

State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457 (1990)

Defense retains psychiatrist who interviews defendant for insanity defense, defense discloses that it will not call this psychiatrist, whereupon state seeks discovery of reports and serves psychiatrist with subpoena to testify at trial; held: attorney-client privilege does not extend to testimony of psychiatrist when defendant raises insanity as a defense, State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1, 20 (1982), defendant's request to prove insanity waives right to raise a Fifth Amendment challenge to state's use of evidence obtained through that examination to rebut the defense, Powell v. Texas, 106 L.Ed.2d 551, 556 (1989), see: State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004), by use of psychiatrist by state or by court-ordered disclosure of psychiatrist's reports, Buchanan v. Kentucky, 97 L.Ed.2d 336 (1987), Kansas v. Cheever, 571 U.S. 87, 187 L.Ed.2d 519 (2013), see: State v.Bankes, 114 Wn.2d 280 (2002), court to order disclosure of written reports in possession of defense which have been prepared by defense psychiatrists who examine defendant on issue of sanity where an insanity defense is raised, irrespective of defense decision not to call psychiatrist who prepared report, State v. Hamlet, 133 Wn.2d 314 (1997); work product doctrine, in a criminal case, applies only to "opinions, theories or conclusions" of defense counsel, CrR 4.7(f)(1), and does not extend to reports and testimony of experts, as CR 26 does not apply to criminal cases; 7-2.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

State need not disclose all prosecution theories to defense; 9-0.

State v. Farmer, 116 Wn.2d 414 (1991)

Trial court may deny discovery of state's knowledge of jurors' prior verdicts; 9-0.

State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531 (1991)

Trial court suppresses defense witness for failure of defense to provide prosecutor with summary of witness' testimony; held: suppression is not a remedy for failure to provide discovery, but see: State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 879-84 (1998), State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1, 12 (2003), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50, 78-81 (2010), record was preserved as prosecutor provided court with substance of proposed testimony; affidavit submitted in motion for new trial was sufficient to provide timely offer of proof; 9-0.

State v. Terrovonia, 64 Wn.App. 417 (1992)

To compel discovery to develop a claim of selective prosecution, defense must establish some evidence tending to show the essential elements of the claim beyond unsupported allegations, State v. Bridges, 91 Wn.App. 102, 105-7 (1998), United States v. Armstrong, 134 L.Ed.2d 687 (1996); III.

Pers. Restraint of Rice, 118 Wn.2d 876 (1992)

Prosecution retains psychiatrist for capital penalty phase, psychiatrist diagnoses defendant as having a disorder which psychiatrist does not reveal to prosecutor or defense; held: if prosecutor did not know of diagnosis, it had no duty to inquire further or to disclose, and thus there is no Brady v. Maryland, 10 L.Ed.2d 215 (1963) due process violation, State v. Mullen, 172 Wn.2d 881 (2011); 7-1.

State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 728 (1992)

Informant provides information leading to search and finding of drugs; before trial, defense discloses it will call informant as a defense witness, informant testifies inconsistently with information he provided police, state impeaches informant with a receipt he signed for money he received for the information, which is first defense learns that state had information from informant, trial court grants new trial; held: CrR 4.7(a)(1)(v), which obliges state to disclose documents it "intends to use" applies if state is aware of the document and there is a reasonable possibility that the document will be used at any phase of the trial, including impeachment and rebuttal, State v. Falk, 17 Wn.App. 905 (1977), State v. Linden, 89 Wn.App. 184 (1997), State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 879-80 (2003), see: State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004), but see: State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 288-90 (1996); granting new trial was within trial court's discretion; III.

State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992)

Where state provides discovery late, forcing defense to move to continue beyond expiration date or go to trial unprepared, trial court has discretion whether or not to dismiss, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412, 428 (1985), State v. Greene, 49 Wn.App. 49 (1987), see: State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017), distinguishing State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980), State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 763 (1990), but see: State v. Mora-Lopez, 22 Wn.App.2d 922 (2022), defense must prove that it was "impermissibly prejudiced" by interjection of new facts to prevail, State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 578-85 (2001), see: State v. Ramos, 83 Wn.App. 622, 634-9 (1996), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 13-15 (2006), State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009), State v. Barry, 184 Wn.App. 790 (2014); 2-1, I.

State v. Blackwell, 120 Wn.2d 822 (1993)

Defense counsel's assertion that an officer is racist is insufficient by itself to require disclosure of police personnel files absent an affidavit or representation that officer was racially motivated in the case before the court; 9-0.

State v. Mannhalt, 68 Wn.App. 757 (1992)

While right to confront witnesses includes cross-examination to identify a witness with his community so that independent testimony may be sought and offered of his reputation for veracity in his own neighborhood, Alford v. United States, 75 L.Ed.2d 624 (1931), trial court may deny disclosure of witnesses' addresses where there is evidence that witnesses' safety was in danger, Smith v. Illinois, 19 L.Ed.2d 956 (1968)(White, J., concurring); I.

State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525 (1993)

Rape crisis center's notes of victim interview are not absolutely privileged, as 42 USC. § 10604(d) does not preempt RCW 70.125; defense affidavit that interview notes "may contain details which may exculpate" accused is insufficient to overcome qualified privilege, thus no in camera review is required; see: State v. Diemel, 81 Wn.App. 44 (1996); 8-0.

State v. Knutson, 121 Wn.2d 766 (1993)

In rape of a child 3° case in which defense was misrepresentation of age, trial court refused to disclose a note in victim's medical file that victim had been "prostituting in the past"; held: under due process analysis, Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 94 L.Ed.2d 40 (1987), disclosure of the note before trial, even if admissible, would not, to a reasonable probability, change the outcome of the case, State v. Chavez, 76 Wn.App. 293 (1994), since the defense could not have been consent; 7-0.

State v. Norby, 122 Wn.2d 258 (1993)

Trial court consolidates numerous charged and uncharged defendants in order to hear preaccusatorial delay issues, orders state to answer interrogatories about state's investigations and charging policies and number of cases involved in prosecutor's backlog, state appeals; held: CrR 4.7 is not supplemented by the civil rules and is exclusive, State v. Gonzalez, 110 Wn.2d 738, 744 (1988); to obtain discovery beyond which the state intends to use, defense must establish "materiality to the preparation of the defense," cf.: Seattle v. Lange, 18 Wn.App.2d 139 (2021), State v. Putman, 21 Wn.App.2d 36 (2022), and reasonableness, CrR 4.7(e), State v. Blackwell, 120 Wn.2d 822, 826-8 (1993), State v. Youde, 174 Wn.App. 873 (2013); here, defense failed to establish prejudice in the delay, materiality or reasonableness; 8-0.

State v. Miller, 74 Wn.App. 334, 340-2 (1994)

To order defendant to provide handwriting exemplar, CrR 4.7(b)(2), state need only demonstrate a reasonable necessity as opposed to an absolute necessity; refusal to provide a court-ordered exemplar is subject to civil contempt confinement; I.

State v. Chavez, 76 Wn.App. 293 (1994)

Reversal for nondisclosure is only required if there is a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed, the result would have been different, United States v. Bagley, 87 Wn.2d 481 (1985), State v. Knutson, 121 Wn.2d 766, 772 (1993), State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 650 (1993); test applies in all cases of nondisclosure, including prosecutor's knowing failure to disclose, whether or not defense made a specific request for the evidence; III.

State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 875-8 (1995)

Physical evidence that was never in possession or control of police or prosecutor is outside scope of discovery rules, CrR 4.7(a)(4); II.

State v. Diemel, 81 Wn.App. 464 (1996)

Defense seeks in camera review of rape-victim's post-offense counseling records, alleging that victim had said she had been in abusive relationship previously, might have discussed her intoxication at time of this offense and might have admitted to consent, trial court denies review of records; held: trial court did not abuse discretion in denying in camera review as defense showing was largely speculative, evidence of alcohol consumption was otherwise available, State v. Espinosa, 47 Wn.App. 85, 88 (1987), State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525, 550 (1993), cf.: Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 94 L.Ed.2d 40 (1987), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 791-801 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); I.

State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 288-90 (1996)

"Genuine" rebuttal witness need not be disclosed in advance of trial, State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 654 (1990), State v. White, 74 Wn.2d 386, 394-5 (1968), but see: State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 728 (1992), State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445 (1982), State v. Falk, 17 Wn.App. 905

(1977), State v. Harris, 14 Wn.App. 414 (1975), see: State v. Linden, 89 Wn.App. 184 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Hamlet, 133 Wn.2d 314 (1997)

Where defense raises diminished capacity defense, trial court may order defense to disclose name, reports and statements of a defense psychiatrist who interviewed defendant but whom defense stated it would not call as a witness, State v. Pawlyk, 115 Wn.2d 457 (1990); there are no discovery distinctions between insanity and diminished capacity cases, State v. Hutchinson, 111 Wn.2d 872, 880-1 (1989), see: Kansas v. Cheever, 571 U.S. 87, 187 L.Ed.2d 519 (2013); affirms State v. Hamlet, 83 Wn.App. 350 (1996).

State v. Linden, 89 Wn.App. 184 (1997)

During defendant's testimony in which he denied using cocaine, state informs court it received a police report one day before confirming defendant was arrested for possession of cocaine, defense motion for suppression and mistrial denied, court grants recess to next day, allows state to impeach defendant, who testifies that he "could not respond" to the police report; held: failure to disclose the police report was a discovery violation, as there was a "reasonable possibility" that state would use the report if defendant testified, state is required to provide reports it "intends to use," CrR 4.7(a)(v), State v. Falk, 17 Wn.App. 905, 908 (1977), State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 728 (1992), State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 879-80 (2003), State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004), cf.: State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 288-90 (1996); recess rather than mistrial was within court's discretion, State v. Falk, supra., see: State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 520-23 (2010); I.

State v. Copeland, 89 Wn.App. 492, 496-9 (1998)

Prosecutor fails to disclose local impeachable conviction of witness; held: where conviction record is in prosecutor's office, accessible to all members of the staff, then deputy's failure to disclose is misconduct, regardless of inadvertence, State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 728, 733 (1992), State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004), distinguishing State v. Frederick, 32 Wn.App. 624 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 100 Wn.2d 550 (1983); II.

State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863 (1998)

Suppression is a remedy for a defendant's ongoing, willful refusal to undergo a court-ordered mental examination, CrR 4.7(h)(7)(i), Taylor v. Illinois, 98 L.Ed.2d 798 (1988), distinguishing State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531 (1991); factors to consider in deciding whether to exclude (1) effectiveness of less severe sanctions, (2) impact of witness preclusion on the evidence at trial and outcome of the case, (3) extent to which prosecution will be surprised or prejudiced by the witness's testimony, and (4) whether the violation was willful or in bad faith, at 882-3, see: State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1, 12 (2003), State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004), State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 520-23 (2010), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50, 78-89 (2010), State v. Ruelas, 7 Wn.App.2d (2019); 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Pirtle, 136 Wn.2d 467, 485-87 (1998)

Police officer testifies at trial about a statement made by defendant, not included in police reports, officer claims he remembered the statement while testifying; held: state did not violate discovery rules as prosecutor had no knowledge of the statement; 9-0.

Strickler v. Greene, 144 L.Ed.2d 286 (1999)

Officer's notes, undisclosed before trial, state that victim considers crime to be trivial, at trial victim testifies she was in terror; held: three components of Brady violation (1) exculpatory, (2) nondisclosure, and (3) prejudice; here, petitioner proved (1) & (2), but there is not a reasonable probability that conviction or death sentence would have been different had these materials been disclosed, thus affirmed; 7-2.

State v. Jones, 96 Wn.App. 369 (1999)

Internal investigation files from a police department's shooting review board hearing on the incident in question must be reviewed in camera before trial court determines that the files are privileged, RCW 5.60.060(5), Barfield v. Seattle, 100 Wn.2d 878 (1984), Cook v. King County, 9 Wn.App. 50, 52-54 (1973), Seattle v. Apodaca, 18 Wn.App. 802, 803 (1977); internal investigation files are not exempt from discovery in a criminal case under Public Disclosure Act, RCW 42.17.310(1)(d), distinguishing Cowles Publishing Co. v. State Patrol, 109 Wn.2d 712 (1988); I.

State v. Greiff, 141 Wn.2d 910 (2000)

In second trial following hung jury, police officer changes testimony materially, prosecutor fails to advise defense prior to second trial, defense states in opening what it expected officer to testify to, mistrial motion denied; held: while state's failure to advise defense of change of testimony is a discovery violation, CrR 4.7(a)(1)(i), State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 520-23 (2010), denial of mistrial was within trial court's discretion, instruction that jury should disregard remarks of counsel unsupported by the evidence was sufficient, State v. Hopson, 113 Wn.2d 273, 284 (1989); 5-4.

State v. Beliz, 104 Wn.App. 206, 211-12 (2001)

State notifies defense of witnesses just before trial, defense motion to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b), is denied but court excludes witnesses' testimony; held: remedy short of dismissal was not an abuse of discretion, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 879-84 (1998), State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1, 12 (2003), Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230 (2010), State v. Ruelas, 7 Wn.App.2d (2019), but see: State v. Thacker, 94 Wn.2d 276 (1980); III.

State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91, 104, rev'd, on other grounds, 150 Wn.2d 536 (2003)

State's failure to produce a victim for defense interview, where state has exercised diligence, is neither a discovery violation nor prosecution misconduct, see: State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003); III.

State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003)

Defense obtains court order, shortly before expiration date, for prosecutor to arrange for interview with state's witnesses, interviews do not occur prior to deadline, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(b); held: while defense has the right to interview a witness in advance of trial, State v.

Burri, 87 Wn.2d 175, 181 (1976), here no misconduct occurred due to short time period for prosecutor to seek deposition or material witness warrant, State v. Hoffman, 115 Wn.App. 91 (2003); trial court ignored "intermediate remedial steps," State v. Koerber, 85 Wn.App. 1, 4 (1996), of releasing defendant to extend time for trial expiration date or suppression of evidence, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 880-84 (1998), aff'd, 147 Wn.2d 197, 202-06 (2002), Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230 (2010), cf.: State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007), see: State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009); affirms State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1 (2003); 8-1.

Banks v. Dretke, 157 L.Ed.2d 1166 (2004)

Prior to trial, state advises defense counsel that it will provide all discovery without requiring motions, 18 years after defendant sentenced to death state provides, pursuant to court order, evidence that one witness was a paid informant, another witness had been intensively coached, at trial both witnesses denied their involvement with state, which prosecutor did not correct; held: "[w]hen police or prosecutors conceal significant exculpatory or impeaching material in the State's possession, it is ordinarily incumbent on the State to set the record straight," at 1180; 7-2.

State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004)

During trial, state discloses to defense exculpatory evidence that defendant did not possess the firearm in question at the time of the crime, even after disclosure, state cross-examines defendant to infer that he is lying about the time of possession, jury hangs, court declares mistrial, state re-notes case for trial, amends information to allege more serious charges from same incident, trial court finds prejudicial misconduct and dismisses, state appeals; held: trial court's finding that untimely revelation of exculpatory evidence constituted misconduct and a due process violation, In re Pers. Restraint of Gentry, 137 Wn.2d 378, 396 (1999), was not an abuse of discretion; government misconduct may be so outrageous that it exceeds the bounds of fundamental fairness, barring subsequent prosecution, State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 18 (1996), State v. Solomon, 3 Wn.App.2d 895 (2018), see: State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 347-52 (2014); had defendant moved for a mistrial when the exculpatory evidence was revealed, he could not have argued that retrial would be barred by double jeopardy unless he could have proved state intended to provoke a mistrial, Oregon v. Kennedy, 72 L.Ed.2d 416 (1982), State v. Juarez, 115 Wn.App. 881, 888 (2003), thus dismissal was appropriate; III.

State v. White, 126 Wn.App. 131 (2005)

A subpoena duces tecum must be served upon every party, CrR 4.8, CR 5, 26(c), 45; I

State v. Gregory,158 Wn.2d 759, 781-801 (2006)

In rape case with consent defense, trial court refuses in camera review of victim's dependency files; held: defense claim that victim was engaging in prostitution, had previously engaged in prostitution and if victim was currently engaged in prostitution would be reflected in dependency files was sufficient to require an in camera inspection of those files, Pennsylvania v. Ritchie, 94 L.Ed.2d 40 (1987), cf.: State v. Diemel, 81 Wn.App. 464 (1996); where victim in interview told defense counsel that her last drug use was in 1999 but dependency file shows she admitted to drug use in 2000, defense was denied the opportunity for discovery and impeachment, ER 608(b); 8-1.

Pers. Restraint of Hegney, 138 Wn.App. 511, 535-36 (2007)

Records in possession and knowledge of a probation officer and DSHS, not known to prosecutor, are not within prosecutor's duty to disclose to defense, see: State v. Frederick, 32 Wn.App. 624, 627, (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 100 Wn.2d 550 (1983), overruled, in part, on other grounds, Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999); II.

State v. Lord, 161 Wn.2d 276 (2007)

State discloses a report indicating that victim's family had hired a tracking dog search, does not have or disclose name of dog handler, after first trial is reversed on other grounds, defense investigation finds name of dog handler who has possibly exculpatory evidence; held: state disclosed what it had, was not obliged to investigate further, defense could have uncovered the full story through a diligent investigation, thus defense did not establish that state withheld exculpatory evidence; 7-2.

State v. Boyd, 160 Wn.2d 424 (2007)

Where police seize a computer from defendant, defense is entitled to a mirror image copy of the hard drive for testing, State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50 (2010), subject to a protective order, State v. Dingman, 149 Wn.App. 648, 659-65 (2009), State v. Grenning, 169 Wn.2d 47 (2010); 8-1.

State v. Brooks, 149 Wn.App. 373 (2009)

Dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), is a remedy where state inexcusably fails to provide discovery, trial court grants continuances as an alternative to dismissal but discovery is still not forthcoming, state has burden of considering other alternatives besides continuances before trial court dismisses, State v. Chichester, 141 Wn.App. 446 (2007); II.

State v. Dingman, 149 Wn.App. 648 (2009)

State seizes computers from defendant, make mirror-image copies via a law enforcement program, defense seeks copies in a different program or access to the computers themselves, state objects claiming defense might damage the hard drives, court denies discovery; held: absent proof of a need for restrictions, rather than a mere claim or allegation, defense is entitled to access to the hard drives themselves, State v. Boyd, 160 Wn.2d 424 (2007), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50 (2010), particularly where state has a mirror-image and thus any alteration can be detected by the state; II.

State v. Garcia-Salgado, 170 Wn.2d 176 (2010)

In rape case, court orders cheek swab for DNA analysis pursuant to CrR 4.7(b)(2)(vi), no warrant obtained; held: cheek swab is a search which may be made pursuant to discovery rules if supported by probable cause based on oath, cf.: State v. Reeder, 184 Wn.2d 805 (2015), but see: Carpenter v. United States, 585 U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2206, 201 L.Ed.2d 507 (2018), State v. Phillip, 9 Wn.App.2d 464 (2019); here, record is unclear whether trial court had a sworn statement before it, so remanded; reverses State v. Garcia-Salgado, 149 Wn.App. 702 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 520-23 (2010)

In child abuse case, defense endorses victim's physician as a fact witness to testify to observation of victim's injuries and lack of injuries, state's motion to suppress his opinion testimony about causation is granted by trial court for failure to provide discovery; held: defense is obliged to inform state of the "substance of any oral statements," CrR 4.7(b)(1), failure to inform state that witness would testify, in addition to treatment, about causation violates the rule, see: State v. Greiff, 141 Wn.2d 910, 919 (2000); while suppression may be a remedy for failure to provide discovery, and surprise is a factor, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 881-84 (1998), Taylor v. Illinois, 484 U.S. 400, 415 n. 19 (1988), here trial lasted three weeks after physician testified, trial court should have postponed his testimony to allow state to interview and locate another expert to prevent prejudicial surprise, excluding causation testimony strongly undermined defense, counsel's failure appeared to be an oversight rather than a willful or bad faith violation; II.

State v. Krenik, 156 Wn.App. 314 (2010)

During drug trial, detective testifies that there was undisclosed DEA video surveillance of defendant's home and that he told prosecutor about it a week earlier, defense motion for mistrial is denied; held: state has an affirmative duty, without a request, to disclose electronic surveillance, CrR 4.7(a)(2); prosecutor may not withhold information that it deems not material if it is required by the rules; to justify dismissal, CrR 8.3(b), 4.7(h)(7), defendant must show actual prejudice, here prejudice was speculative; because defense counsel did not request a continuance, noncompliance with discovery rule by state was not prejudicial error, State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445, 455-56 (1982), only remedy sought by defense was a mistrial, no indication that time for trial period would have expired had court granted a request for a continuance, State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810, 814 (1980); I.

State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50 (2010)

Federal Adam Walsh Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3509(m), does not preempt CrR 4.7, state is obliged to provide child pornography discovery to defense counsel, State v. Boyd, 160 Wn.2d 424 (2007); where state intentionally engaged in misconduct by refusing to produce evidence after being ordered to do so and then removed the evidence from the trial court's jurisdiction, dismissal or suppression may be an appropriate remedy, State v. Grenning, 169 Wn.2d 47, 60 (2010); II.

State v. Mankin, 158 Wn.App. 111 (2010)

Defense counsel seeks to interview police who agree but refuse to be recorded, trial court orders depositions, state appeals; held: defense interviews of police witnesses are not private conversations under RCW 9.73.030(1)(b); a refusal of an officer to be recorded is not a de facto refusal to discuss the case, thus trial court lacks authority to order a deposition, CrR 4.6(a); II.

State v. Mullen, 171 Wn.2d 881 (2011)

State expert witness in criminal case testifies at a deposition in a related civil case in which state is not a party, defense is aware of civil case, does not subpoena records, claims testimony was inconsistent; held: state is obliged to disclose material, exculpatory evidence in its possession, Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 10 L.Ed.2d 215 (1963), and in the possession of law enforcement, Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419, 437, 131 L.Ed.2d 490 (1995), and in the possession of others working on the state's behalf, State v. Lord, 161 Wn.2d 276, 292 (2007), but is not obliged to volunteer information it does not possess or of which it is unaware; where defense has enough information to find the material on its own, there is no suppression by the government, State v. Lord, supra. at 293; evidence is material only if there is a reasonable probability the result would have been different, United States v. Bagley, 473 U.S. 667, 682, 87 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985), Turner v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1885, 198 L. Ed. 2d 443 (2017), see: Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 174 Wn.2d 474 (2012), which is an intermediate test which does not require defense to demonstrate that the evidence would have resulted in acquittal; 9-0.

State v. Shelmidine*,* 166 Wn.App. 107 (2012)

Prosecutor's policy of refusing to plea bargain if defense demands name of confidential informant does not violate due process clauses, does not preclude defense counsel from providing effective assistance, State v. Moen, 150 Wn.2d 221 (2003); II.

State v. Kipp*,* 171 Wn.App. 14, 31-33 (2012), reversed, on other grounds, 179 Wn.2d 718 (2014)

Defense discloses witness six days before trial, trial court suppresses; held: on balance, factors in State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 883 (1998), support trial court's discretion, while a half day recess to interview and investigate tilt towards admissibility, witness' testimony was duplicated by other witnesses, prosecution is prejudiced by having to interview and find rebuttal witnesses close to trial, defense "could have avoided the late disclosure," thus was willful; 2-1, II.

State v. Youde*,* 174 Wn.App. 873 (2013)

Defendant subpoenas information from tribal police, trial court does not determine materiality of discovery, tribe's motion to quash based upon sovereign immunity is granted, trial court dismisses, CrR 8.3(b); held: a trial court must determine that discovery is material before granting a motion to dismiss based on the unavailability of compulsory process; issuance of a subpoena, by itself, does not establish materiality, opposing party need not object to a subpoena to preserve the issue of materiality; I.

State v. Brown*,* 178 Wn.App. 950 (2014)

Pecunious defendant demands free copy of 911 tape, state offers to allow defense to listen and record tape or buy a copy; held: CrR 4.7 requires parties to disclose discovery, absent proof of indigency state need not provide copies gratis, see: State v. Boyd, 160 Wn.App. 420, 435 (2007); III.

State v. Merrill*,* 183 Wn.App. 749 (2014)

Victims sign "Notice of Victim's Intent to Rely on RCW 7.69.030(10)" exercising their right to have victim's advocate present at any prosecution or defense interview, defense counsel contacts victim and informs prosecutor about what was said, prosecutor states that he will consider sanctions, defense counsel contacts victim again to discuss prosecutor's sanction threat, trial court sanctions counsel for bad faith discovery misconduct; held: at the second contact counsel knew he was "not allowed" to contact victim without an advocate, RCW 7.69.030 applies to contact with victims to gain information to defend oneself from charges of misconduct, trial court's finding of bad faith in spite of counsel's claim that he was acting on the advice of supervisors and that his contact was not excused under the "safe harbor" provision of the victim's right statute was not an abuse of discretion, thus sanctions affirmed; III.

State v. Vance, 184 Wn.App. 902 (2014)

State obtains search warrant based upon a federal investigation, defense seeks to interview federal agents whom state will not call as witnesses, trial court authorizes subpoenas for depositions, United States Attorney informs defense counsel that he must comply with 28 CF.R. § 16.21 et seq. and 6 CF.R. § 5.44 et seq., cf.: United States v. Bahamonde, 445 F.3d 1225 (2006), and submit a "scope and relevancy letter," defense does not comply, trial court excises information in warrant affidavit provided by federal officials and suppresses; held: CrR 4.7(a) does not oblige state to produce federal agents for interviews, federal sovereignty precludes state court enforcing subpoenas on federal agents; II.

State v. Bessey, 191 Wn.App. 1 (2015)

Absent a "formal written request" defendant has no obligation to produce documentary evidence, CrR 4.7(b)(2)(x); II.

State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017)

In DUI case defense demands name of toxicologist state will call, state provides eight names, state contacts crime lab which does not respond, day before trial state narrows list to three, at trial defense moves to exclude testimony of toxicologist whom state intended to call, defense declines to move to continue as defendant chooses not to waive right to speedy trial, trial court denies motion to exclude, on RALJ appeal superior court reverses; held: while state's disclosures establish mismanagement, trial court considered all of the circumstances including nature of witness' testimony, fact that defense had five months to prepare following the initial disclosure, thus trial court's decision was not manifestly unreasonable and denial of suppression was not an abuse of discretion, see also: State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980), State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 763 (1990), State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997), cf.: State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992), State v. Ruelas, 7 Wn.App.2d 887(2019); reverses State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 194 Wn.App. 234 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Rogers, 3 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018)

Defendant sends letter of apology and offer to pay her to drop charges to complainant's daughter who gives letter to complainant who gives the letter to defense counsel and tells prosecutor that she did so, counsel is then removed from case, court serves that lawyer with a subpoena duces tecum to produce the letter, lawyer moves to quash arguing that he learned of the letter from his client and thus the letter is privileged and that it is a confidence or secret, RPC 1.6, refuses to comply with subpoena, is held in contempt; held: lawyer did not obtain the letter as a result of direct or confidential communication with his client, even if client had some discussion with counsel about the letter it is not privileged, is not a confidence and even if it is a secret RPC 1.6(b) authorizes disclosure pursuant to a court order, distinguishing State ex. rel. Sowers v. Lowell, 64 Wn.2d 828 (1964); because the claim of privilege was made in good faith contempt is vacated, Seventh Elect Church in Israel v. Roger, 102 Wn.2d 527 (1984), Dike v. Dike, 75 Wn.2d 1, 448 (1968); I.

State v. Davis, 3 Wn.App.2d 763, 783-86 (2018)

Failure to provide defendant with a copy of discovery is not ineffective assistance as a represented defendant does not have the right to discovery, CrR 4.7(h)(3) (2007), or access to a law library; while CrR 4.7(a)(1)(iv) requires the state to disclose "to the defendant" any expert reports," providing same to counsel meets that requirement; I.

State v. Ruelas, 7 Wn.App.2d 887 (2019)

Two days into jury trial defense discloses expert witness, trial court excludes the evidence; held: court considered and balanced the factors, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 881 (1998), a continuance would have required jury to return in weeks and "likely would have forgotten much of the evidence," would burden court's ability to manage its calendar, defense had eight months to prepare, state was surprised thus court properly exercised discretion to exclude even though defense apparently did not act willfully or in bad faith, see: State v. Wilson, 149 Wn.2d 1, 12 (2003), State v. Carneh, 153 Wn.2d 274 (2004), State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 520-23 (2010), State v. Norris, 157 Wn.App. 50, 78-89 (2010); III.

Seattle v. Lange, 18 Wn.App.2d 139 (2021)

In DUI case police disclose to city that blood test analyst had erred in another case that caused a false positive, city discloses it to defense "days before trial," trial court suppresses blood test results for discovery violation, city seeks writ; held: CrRLJ 47(a)(3) mandates disclosure of any information which tends to negate guilt, impeachment information meets that test, unlike a constitutional Brady issue the rules do not require proof of materiality before mandating disclosure as long as the information sought is discoverable under the rules, suppression is a proper remedy within discretion of the trial court, CrRLJ 4.7(g)(7)(i) does not require proof of prejudice; I.

State v. Asaeli, 17 Wn.App.2d 697 (2021)

Defendant is not entitled to post-conviction discovery under CrR 4.7, and does not have a due process right to post-conviction discovery, In re Pers. Restraint of Gentry, 137 Wn.2d 378, 390-91 (1999); II.

State v. Mora-Lopez, 22 Wn.App.2d 922 (2022)

Trial court finds government mismanagement for filing witness list four days before trial and concludes defendant was prejudiced and dismisses finding prejudice to defendant's right to a speedy trial, relying upon State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229 (1997), erroneously calculating expiration date two weeks after witness list was disclosed; held: trial court properly exercised discretion finding mismanagement, CrR 8.3(b), but because expiration date was more than a month after the list was filed due to prior continuance, CrR 3.3(b)(5), State v. Farnsworth, 133 Wn.App. 1, 11-12 (2006), the court's conclusion that the mismanagement resulted in actual prejudice due to speedy trial violation was error, Michielli, supra, was decided under prior CrR 3.3; I.

State v. Vevea, 23 Wn.App.2d 171 (2022)

Criminal discovery rules, CrR 7.7, apply to competency restoration proceedings; I.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

State v. Horton*, 54 Wn.App. 837 (1989)

Fact that prosecutor can charge defendant with violation of a domestic violence protection order, RCW 26.50.110(1), or contempt, former RCW 7.20.020, does not violate equal protection as the contempt is civil; I.

State v. Raines, 55 Wn.App. 459 (1989)

Police respond to domestic violence call, observe male through window, knock on door, female answers, denies problem, police ask to speak to male, female denies male is present, police ask to enter, female does not object, steps back, police enter; female shuts inside door, states it is her room, police state they will investigate, female does not object, police open door, see suspect, drugs; held: failure to object and stepping aside is more than mere acquiescence, but see: State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746, 756-59 (2011); failure to object is an implied waiver; entry of bedroom was justified by exigent circumstance in response to domestic violence report in light of fact that police knew suspect was violent; 2-1, I.

State v. Yoder, 55 Wn.App. 632 (1989)

Juvenile calls police to report her mother being assaulted by mother's boyfriend; upon arrival, mother says she was not assaulted, police enter to speak with juvenile, observe drugs; held: police were obliged to investigate and take a complete report under domestic violence law, RCW 10.99.030; mother's claim she was not assaulted was not dispositive, police required to investigate further, thus police were justified in the intrusion, inadvertently discovered drugs; II.

State v. Sims, 77 Wn.App. 236, 238-41 (1995)

Hearsay statement of a domestic violence victim made during medical treatment attributing fault to an abuser may be admissible, ER 803(a)(4), where identity of abuser is reasonably pertinent to treatment, State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1, 13-16 (2005), State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592, 601-08 (2006), State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 787-92 (2006), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 745-47 (2007), including changing relationship patterns and avoiding threatening situations in the future, State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477 (1998), State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 639-41 (2005), see: State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214 (1989), State v. Owens, 78 Wn.App. 897, 901-2 (1995); confrontation clause issue not argued, thus not addressed; I.

State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996)

In felony no contact order violation case, RCW 10.99.040(4), -.050(2), trial court admits prior assault conviction by defendant on victim pursuant to ER 609, state cross-appeals; held: prior assaults on domestic violence victim by same defendant are admissible pursuant to ER 404(b) as relevant to assess victim's credibility to explain why she minimized the incident, State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011), State v. Harris, 20 Wn.App.2d 153 (2021), but see: State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006), State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), as domestic violence victims fear retaliation by abusers, mistrust the judicial system, remain with abusers, so that jury will "evaluate credibility with full knowledge of the dynamics of a relationship marked by domestic violence and the effect such a relationship has on the victim," at 108, within discretion of trial court, see: State v. Wilson, 60 Wn.App. 887 (1991), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 310-11 (2005), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017); I.

Jacques v. Sharp, 83 Wn.App. 532 (1996)

Domestic violence protection order directs that respondent stay out of the Magnolia neighborhood of Seattle, police arrest respondent in Magnolia; held: police may only arrest for violation of those restraint provisions in a protection order that restrain respondent from acts of domestic violence, exclusion from residence or contact, RCW 26.50.060(1); only remedy for violation of other provisions of protection order is contempt, not arrest, but see; State v. Chapman, 140 Wn.2d 436 (2000); I.

State v. Dejarlais, 136 Wn.2d 939 (1998)

Consent is not a defense to violating a protection order, RCW 26.50.110(1), affirming State v. Dejarlais, 88 Wn.App. 297 (1997), see: State v. Bunker, 169 Wn.2d 571 (2010), State v. Yelovich, 191 Wn.2d 774 (2018); 9-0.

Seattle v. Megrey, 93 Wn.App. 391 (1998)

A person restrained by an antiharassment order may not send a demand letter, not required in the course of litigation, to the person protected by the order; I.

State v. Phillips, 94 Wn.App. 829 (1999)

In violation of a no contact order case, return of service of the no contact order is a public record, RCW 5.44.040, see: State v. Bolen, 142 Wash. 653, 663 (1927), State v. Hines, 87 Wn.App. 98, 101 (1997); I.

State v. Rodman, 94 Wn.App. 930 (1999)

Pre-trial domestic violence no contact order, RCW 10.99.040, is enforceable whether defendant is released or in jail; I.

State v. Anaya, 95 Wn.App. 751 (1999)

No contact order issued at arraignment, RCW 10.99.040, does not survive dismissal of the criminal charge, cf.: State v. Schultz, 146 Wn.2d 540 (2002); I.

Bellevue v. Jacke, 96 Wn.App. 209 (1999)

Husband and wife separate, husband moves into apartment, defendant-wife enters and remains in husband's apartment without permission and, when husband attempts to remove her, she kicks him, is charged with assault, trial court holds that because marriage was not "defunct," apartment was community property, defendant had right to be there and thus had right to resist husband's attempt to remove her, city seeks discretionary review; held: community property principles are irrelevant to determination of guilt in a criminal case, one spouse's right to possession of real or personal property may be superior to that of another spouse, State v. Webb, 64 Wn.App. 480, 490 (1992), see: State v. Coria, 146 Wn.2d 631 (2002); I.

State v. Azpitarte, 140 Wn.2d 138 (2000)

Assault 2° is not a predicate crime elevating a no-contact order violation from a misdemeanor to a felony, RCW 10.99.040(4), reversing State v. Azpitarte, 95 Wn.App. 721 (1999), see: State v. Ward, 148 Wn.2d 803 (2003), but see: State v. Olsen, 187 Wn.App. 149 (2015); per curiam.

State v. Chapman, 140 Wn.2d 436 (2000)

Defendant, with two prior domestic violence no-contact order convictions, violates order excluding him from coming within a mile of complainant's residence, is convicted of felony violation of domestic violence protection order, RCW 26.50.110(5); held: trial court had the authority to prohibit defendant from coming within a geographical distance or area of a named person's residence as "other relief…necessary for…protection," RCW 26.50.060(1)(e), violation of which is a crime, RCW 26.50.110(5), distinguishing Jacques v. Sharp, 83 Wn.App. 532 (1996); reverses State v. Chapman, 94 Wn.App. 495 (1999); 9-0.

Spence v. Kaminski, 103 Wn.App. 325 (2000)

A permanent protection order, issued after notice and a hearing, does not require an allegation of recent domestic violence, ch. 26.50 RCW, although a temporary protection order, issued ex parte, does require an allegation of recent violence or threat or other circumstances constituting "irreparable injury", RCW 26.50.070(4); III.

State v. O.P., 103 Wn.App. 889 (2000)

A "domestic violence" designation in an information does not charge a different offense from the underlying substantive crime, State v. Goodman, 108 Wn.App. 355, 358-59 (2001), State v. Hagler, 150 Wn.App. 196 (2009); I.

State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650 (2001)

Defendant is convicted of violating a no contact order against his wife, children present during offense, sentencing court orders no contact with wife and children; held: state failed to demonstrate that the order prohibiting defendant from contacting his children was reasonably necessary to prevent the children from witnessing domestic violence, thus order deprived defendant of his fundamental right to parent, State v. Sanford, 128 Wn.App. 280, 288-89 (2005), State v. Torres, 198 Wn.App. 685 (2017), see: State v. Letourneau, 100 Wn.App. 424 (2000), but see: State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 31-35 (2008), State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106 (2007), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923, 941-44 (2008), State v. Cortes Aguilar, 176 Wn.App. 264, 277-78 (2013); while supervised visitation may have been appropriate as a condition of sentence, generally a criminal sentencing court is not a proper forum; I.

State v. Karas, 108 Wn.App. 692 (2001)

Procedures provided in Domestic Violence Protection Act, RCW 29.50, authorizing issuance of orders for protection meet procedural due process requirements; permanent orders for protection may be issued by commissioners, see: RCW 2.24.040, CONST. Art. IV, § 23; II.

State v. Osalde, 109 Wn.App. 94 (2001)

Repeated threats to kill domestic partner and testimony at sentencing from victim about psychological abuse is sufficient to establish aggravating factor of ongoing pattern of domestic violence involving psychological abuse, see: State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191 (2001); I.

State v. Schultz, 146 Wn.2d 540 (2002)

Defendant is charged with assault, pretrial no-contact order is issued, defendant is convicted, judgment and sentence reads that the no-contact order shall remain in effect, defendant is later convicted of violating that order; held: pretrial no-contact order, RCW 10.99.040, may continue in effect after conviction where court indicates in sentence that it is "extended," State v. Luna, 172 Wn.App. 881 (2013), see: RCW 10.99.050; affirms State v. Schultz, 106 Wn.App. 328 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Coria, 146 Wn.2d 631 (2002)

Husband who damages property owned by himself and his wife damages property of another for purposes of malicious mischief statute, RCW 9A.48.080(1)(a), see: State v. Pike, 118 Wn.2d 585 (1992), State v. Webb, 64 Wn.App. 480 (1992), State v. Birch, 36 Wn.App. 405 (1984), Bellevue v. Jacke, 96 Wn.App. 209 (1999), State v. Wooten, 178 Wn.2d 890 (2013); reverses State v. Coria, 105 Wn.App. 51 (2001); 8-1.

State v. Sisemore, 114 Wn.App. 75 (2002)

Officer sees defendant walking with woman protected by domestic violence order, later arrests defendant; at trial, woman testifies they were not walking together, trial court convicts of willful violation of protection order; held: evidence was sufficient to establish that defendant knowingly violated the order because they were "walking together," irrespective of a lack of evidence about who approached whom, see: State v. Clowes, 104 Wn.App. 935, 940-42 (2001), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Nonog, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010); trial court may consider the fact that defendant did not defend on basis of accidental contact, rather that the contact did not occur; II.

State v. Sutherland, 114 Wn.App. 133 (2002)

No-contact order incorrectly cites ch. 10.99, RCW, rather than ch. 26.50, defendant is convicted of violating it; held: because there is no risk of mistake or prejudice, the order is valid; I.

State v. O'Brien, 115 Wn.App. 599 (2003)

Juvenile court has authority to issue no contact order as part of disposition order; III.

State v. Ward, 148 Wn.2d 803 (2003)

Violation of a court order, former RCW 10.99.050(2), which makes the offense a felony if the violation is an assault "that does not amount to assault in the first or second degree" does not require the state to prove the absence of a felony assault, State v. Dukowitz, 62 Wn.App. 418, 422 (1991), State v. Chino, 117 Wn.App. 531, 541-42 (2003), State v. Keend, 140 Wn.App. 858, 870-72 (2007), State v. Heutink, 12 Wn.App.2d 336 (2020), see: State v. Azpitarte, 140 Wn.2d 138 (2001) unless defendant is also charged with assault 1° or assault 2°, see: State v. Olsen, 187

Wn.App. 149 (2015), State v. Melland, 9 Wn.App.2d 786 (2019); any assault connected with a no contact order violation is a felony; affirms State v. Ward, 108 Wn.App. 621 (2001); where no contact order precludes telephone contact and evidence establishes that defendant called complainant's home, complainant's wife answered call and defendant conveyed information about complainant yet wife does not testify that she told complainant, evidence is sufficient to convict; 6-3.

State v. Davis, 116 Wn.App. 81, 90-96 (2003), aff'd, 154 Wn.2d 291 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006)

In felony no contact order violation case, court gave to convict instruction without assault language, defined assault separately, instructed about finding an assault in special verdict instruction and special verdict form; held: instructional bifurcation "benefits the defendant," and is better practice, State v. Oster, 147 Wn.2d 141 (2002), cf.: State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020); as long as all elements are properly instructed, they need not be included in a single to convict instruction; accord: State v. Mills, 154 Wn.2d 1 (2005)("threat to kill" elevating harassment to felony may be included in special verdict, need not be in to convict instruction); I.

State v. Rice, 116 Wn.App. 96 (2003)

Defendant is convicted of felony no contact order violation, RCW 26.50.110(5), having two previous convictions on the same day and in same judgment and sentence; held: two prior guilty pleas to domestic violence offenses which are contained within a single judgment and sentence is sufficient to establish two previous convictions, distinguishing State v. Jones, 138 Wash. 110 (1926), defendant need not have opportunities for rehabilitation between priors; I.

Tacoma v. Cornell, 116 Wn.App. 165 (2003)

Defendant is charged with violating a protection order that was in existence on the day of the offense but was vacated as improperly issued prior to the filing of the criminal charge; held: prosecutor may charge a defendant for violating an order during the time the order is valid and in effect, but may not charge after the order has been vacated, even if the violation occurred while the order was in effect; II.

State v. Wilson, 117 Wn.App. 1 (2003)

No contact order violation enhanced to felony due to two prior violations, former RCW 26.50.110(5), does not violate ex post facto clause because priors preceded enactment; I.

State v. Turner, 118 Wn.App. 135 (2003)

An order of protection issued pursuant to RCW 26.09.060 may serve as the basis of a criminal charge if violated, need not contain the warning set forth in RCW 26.50.035(1)(c); II.

State v. Carmen, 118 Wn.App. 655 (2003)

To prove felony violation of a no contact order, RCW 26.50.110(5), state must offer trier of fact evidence that defendant has two prior convictions of violating a no contact order; trial court must determine, as a question of law, whether the prior convictions were issued under one of the statutes listed in RCW 26.50.110(5) as a predicate to admissibility of the judgments and sentences, State v. Gray, 134 Wn.App. 547 (2006), State v. Chambers, 157 Wn.App. 465 (2010),

State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005), State v. Snapp, 119 Wn.App. 614, 623-26 (2004), see: State v. Case, 187 Wn.2d 85 (2017); I.

Auburn v. Solis-Marcial, 119 Wn.App. 398 (2003)

Defendant is served with temporary protection order which notifies him of the hearing and states that failure to appear may result in the court granting relief, fails to appear, violates order, claims no notice; held: knowledge of a protection order, not personal service, is an element of the crime, trier of fact could find that defendant knew of the order, thus pretrial dismissal reversed; I.

State v. Snapp, 119 Wn.App. 614 (2004)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, court issues domestic violence no contact order, defendant is later charged with violating the order, information does not allege "willfully;" held: court issued no contact order under a separate pending domestic violence case where court had previously withdrawn the order, court is authorized to amend conditions of release due to change of circumstances, CrR 3.2(k)(1); because information alleged that defendant violated the order "feloniously," and alleged that defendant hit or kicked victim, it is sufficient to notify defendant that he acted willfully, State v. Robbins, 15 Wn.App. 108, 113 (1976); information need not specify degree of assault; validity of the no contact order is not an element of the crime, see: State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005), State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019); II.

State v. Powers, 124 Wn.App. 92 (2004)

In domestic violence protection order trial, RCW 26.50.110(5), complainant's 911 call to report defendant's violation and describing defendant to assist in apprehension is admitted at trial; held: trial court must assess the 911 call as testimonial or nontestimonial and whether the statement originates from interrogation, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); here, because the call was not made to protect the victim from defendant, her hearsay statements were testimonial and erroneously admitted when she became unavailable at trial, State v. Pugh, 167 Wn.2d 825 (2009), cf.: State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 919-20 (2007), State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 501-04 (2007), but see: Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006); II.

State v. Felix, 125 Wn.App. 575 (2005)

A judicial finding that a crime constituted domestic violence need not be submitted to a jury, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), as it does not increase punishment, State v. Winston, 135 Wn.App. 400 (2006), see: State v. Ortega, 131 Wn.App. 591, 595 (2006); firearm prohibition following misdemeanor domestic violence conviction is not punishment, State v. Schmidt, 143 Wn.2d 658 (2001); I.

State v. Mills, 154 Wn.2d 1 (2005)

In felony harassment case, trial court puts "threat to kill" element in special verdict, not in to convict instruction; held: "where the legislature has established a statutory framework which defines a base crime which is elevated to a greater crime if a certain fact is present, a trial court may, consistent with the guaranties of due process and trial by jury, bifurcate the elevating fact into a special verdict form," at 10 ¶ 19, State v. Oster, 147 Wn.2d 141 (2002); here, because it was unclear that the threat to kill had to be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, felony conviction was in error; reverses State v. Mills, 116 Wn.App. 106 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005)

Existence of a no contact order is an element of the crime of violating such an order, but the validity is a question of law to be determined by the court, State v. Case, 187 Wn.2d 85 (2017), State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019); an invalid, vague or otherwise inapplicable no contact order is inadmissible, State v. Chambers, 157 Wn.App. 465 (2010), affirming State v. Miller, 123 Wn.App. 92 (2004), State v. Gray, 134 Wn.App. 547 (2006), overruling Seattle v. Edwards, 87 Wn.App. 305 (1997), State v. Marking, 100 Wn.App. 506 (2000), see: State v. Turner, 156 Wn.App. 707 (2010), Seattle v. May, 171 Wn.2d 857 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Iverson, 126 Wn.App. 329 (2005)

In no contact order violation case, victim does not appear at trial, court admits jail photo and booking records including victim's height, weight and address on officer's testimony that although he does not work for the jail and has not control over the accuracy of entries by other officers, he regularly uses the booking records system, enters data and pictures into the system and routinely relies upon the data; held: a photograph is not an oral or written assertion, and is thus not hearsay; because the identifying information is routine based upon perceptions of persons booking her or her own statements, the information is reliable and admissible, State v. Christopher, 114 Wn.App. 858, 862-64 (2003), distinguishing State v. Tharp, 26 Wn.App. 184, 186 (1980), overruled, in part, State v. Monson, 113 Wn.2d 833 (1989); victim's stating her own name was admitted solely for authentication and is thus not hearsay; I.

State v. Spencer, 128 Wn.App. 132 (2005)

In violation of no contact order, defendant enters victim's home, is convicted of residential burglary and violation of a no contact order; held: a no contact order violation is a continuing crime, State v. Stinton, 121 Wn.App. 569 (2004), satisfying the "intent to commit a crime...therein" element of burglary; I.

State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006)

In assault case, prior assaults by defendant on his wife are admissible to show that complainant was afraid of defendant and to explain her inconsistent reports to the police, ER 404(b), State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996), State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011), State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295 (2014), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017), see: State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014); III.

State v. Ortega, 131 Wn.App. 591, 595 (2006)

Domestic violence with multiple incidents of sexual abuse over a prolonged period of time is a jury question, Blakely v. Washington, 159 low (2004), see: State v. Felix, 125 Wn.App. 575 (2005); III.

State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006)

Victim recants at trial, claims she lied to police, trial court admits other acts of violence committed by defendant on victim, instructs jury that it may consider the prior incidents for the limited purpose of assessing credibility of victim; held: where victim recants, fails to timely report abuse or minimizes accusations, then evidence of prior abuse is relevant and potentially admissible, ER 404(b), to illuminate the victim's state of mind at the time of the inconsistent act, including state of mind at the time of the witness' trial testimony, State v. Wilson, 60 Wn.App. 887 (1991), State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006), State v. Harris, 20 Wn.App.2d 153 (2021), provided court gives an adequate limiting instruction telling jury it can consider abuse to assess an alleged victim's state of mind at the time of the inconsistent act, not to determine victim's credibility, distinguishing State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996), see: State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011), State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017); II.

State v. Esquivel, 132 Wn.App. 316 (2006)

Tribal restraining order that does not contain state statutory notice of criminal penalties and notice that consensual contact is prohibited, RCW 26.50.035(1)(c), must be given full faith and credit; due process does not defeat the validity of the order; III.

State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 663, 667-71 (2006)

Felony violation of a no contact order and assault from a single incident, where the assault is the factor that causes the no contact order to be a felony, RCW 26.50.110(4), were intended by the legislature to have separate punishments, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 771 (2005), thus do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006), State v. Novikoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 166 (2017); I.

State v. Van Tuyl, 132 Wn.App. 750 (2006)

Mailing a TRO, CR 5(b)(2)(A), entered in a marriage dissolution proceeding is sufficient to establish the notice requirement for conviction of violation of the order in spite of actual notice language of RCW 26.09.050(2); II.

State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006)

The crime of assault in violation of a court order, RCW 26.50.110(4), and assault 2º do not violate double jeopardy as legislature intended to punish separately both, see: State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 664, 665 (2006), and do not merge, see: State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563, 571 (2005), State v. Novikoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 166 (2017); convictions of assault 2º with intent to commit felony harassment and felony harassment do violate double jeopardy, see: State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 778 (2005), State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814 (2013); II.

State v. Washington, 135 Wn.App. 42, 49 (2006)

Imprisoned defendant is visited by the protected person on a no contact order; held: evidence was sufficient to establish willful violation of no contact order; I.

State v. Wilson, 136 Wn.App. 596, 604-12 (2007)

No contact order prohibits contact with complainant but not residence, defendant and complainant sign lease on house, cohabit, quarrel, defendant leaves and returns and assaults complainant, trial court dismisses charge of burglary 1º; held: dismissal was proper as defendant could not have burglarized his own residence; II.

State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 337-40 (2007)

Information alleging interfering with reporting of domestic violence, RCW 9A.36.150, need not identify victim and the underlying domestic violence crime where other counts in the information do so, State v. Nonog, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010), cf.: State v. Holcomb, 200 Wn.App. 54 (2017); III.

State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008)

In domestic violence assault case, evidence of prior acts of violence known to victim is admissible to prove the element of assault that victim reasonably feared bodily injury, State v. Ragin, 94 Wn.App. 407 (1999), State v. Barragan, 102 Wn.App. 754 (2000), State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295 (2014), even if defendant did not dispute the element, as state has burden of proving all elements; where victim recants, prior acts of violence against victim are admissible so jury can evaluate her credibility, State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996), State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006), State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006), State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), see: State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32, 47 (2016), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017), State v. Harris, 20 Wn.App.2d 153 (2021), see also: State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011); 6-3.

State v. Becklin, 163 Wn.2d 519 (2008)

Complainant testifies that, following issuance of no contact order, two people drive defendant's car past her home, two weeks later defendant follows her home, defendant is convicted of felony stalking, RCW 9A.46.110(1), after jury inquires whether a person can be stalked through a third party and court answers, "yes;" held: trial court's answer was a correct statement of the law, "course of conduct," as defined by legislature, contemplates that stalking could include direction or manipulation of third parties, RCW 10.14.020, both parties argued the theory to the jury, cf.: State v. Ransom, 56 Wn.App. 712, 714 (1990), State v. Davenport, 100 Wn.2d 757 (1984), thus trial court did not abuse discretion in further instructing the jury in response to the jury question; reverses State v. Becklin, 133 Wn.App. 610 (2006); 6-3.

State v. Bunker, 144 Wn.App. 406, 421-22 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 571 (2010)

In no contact order case, victim's willingness to be in defendant's presence is grounds for a mitigated sentence; I.

State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 598-600 (2008)

Protection order forbids defendant from knowingly coming within one mile of his niece or her residence, defendant goes to niece's mother's home, testifies he "assumed" she lived there, niece testifies she lived there off and on but was not present when defendant was arrested; held: reasonable trier of fact could find defendant violated order; II.

State v. Nonog, 145 Wn.App. 802, 811-13 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010)

Interfering with the reporting of domestic violence, RCW 9A.36.150(1), is an alternative means crime (calling 911 or obtaining medical assistance or reporting to any law enforcement official), State v. Christian, 18 Wn.App.2d 185 (2021), but where state alleges all three means and only offers evidence as to one, there is no possibility jury convicted on a mean unsupported by the evidence; I.

United States v. Hayes, 172 L.Ed.2d 816 (2009)

Gun Control Act, 18 U.S.C. § 921 et seq., which prohibits possession of a firearm by persons previously convicted of a misdemeanor domestic violence offense, does not require that the predicate crime have as an element a domestic violence relationship as long as government proves at the firearm trial the domestic relationship beyond a reasonable doubt; 7-2.

State v. Hagler, 150 Wn.App. 196 (2009)

Designating an offense as "domestic violence" in a jury instruction is error as the fact of the designation does not assist the jury and might be prejudicial, harmless here, see: State v. O.P., 103 Wn.App. 889, 892 (2000); I.

State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300 (2009)

Domestic violence no contact order violation under former RCW 26.50.110(1) (2006) did not require that state prove acts or threats of violence, merely contact, see: State v. Wofford, 148 Wn.App. 870 (2009); where defendant sent two e-mails to victim who read them the same day, two counts do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Brown, 159 Wn.App. 1, 9-13 (2010), see: State v. Parmelee, 108 Wn.App. 702, 705-06 (2001); II.

Pers. Restraint of Rainey, 168 Wn.2d 367 (2010)

Defendant is convicted of kidnapping 1° of his 3-year old daughter and harassing his estranged wife, sentencing court imposes lifetime no contact order with each; held: crime-related prohibition, including a no contact order, may be imposed for the maximum of the crime irrespective of the period of community custody, State v. Armendariz, 160 Wn.2d 106, 118-20 (2007), cf.: State v. Granath, 200 Wn.App. 26 (2017), 190 Wn.2d 548 (2018), need not be decided by a jury; while a no contact order of some duration was appropriate as reasonably necessary to protect daughter from further victimization, court provided no reason for the duration, thus remanded for court to address parameters of the order under the "reasonably necessary" standard, State v. Howard, 182 Wn.App. 91, 100-03 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Nonog, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010)

One count in information charging interfering with reporting, RCW 9A.36.150, need not name the underlying domestic violence crime if other counts do so when challenged for first time on appeal, State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 337-40 (2007), cf.: State v. Holcomb, 200 Wn.App. 54 (2017), overruling State v. Clowes, 104 Wn.App. 935, 940-42 (2001); affirms State v. Nonog, 145 Wn.App. 802 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Turner, 156 Wn.App. 707 (2010)

A no contact order that contains the language that violation is a crime, as required by RCW 10.99.040(b) (2010), is admissible, even if the language only appears on the back of the order in violation of GR 14(a); I.

State v. Bunker, 169 Wn.2d 571 (2010)

Any no-contact order violation is a crime whether or not the mandatory arrest provision is applicable, RCW 26.50.110 (2000), see: RCW 26.50.110 (2007); affirms State v. Bunker, 144 Wn.App. 406 (2008); 8-1.

State v. Schultz, 170 Wn.2d 746 (2011)

Police respond to call about neighbors yelling, arrive at apartment, hear man and woman with raised voices, knock, defendant-woman answers, appears agitated and flustered, denies anyone is there, when challenged she calls for man who emerges from bedroom, defendant steps aside and opens door wider, police enter, notice neck is red and blotchy, defendant denies anything physical, fidgets and picks up things, is warned not to, continues to pick up things, officer notices handgun and marijuana pipe, asks to search for drugs, defendant agrees, is arrested for use of drug paraphernalia, revokes consent to search, police obtain warrant, seize drugs; held: domestic violence is an important factor in evaluating subjective belief of officer that someone needs assistance and in assessing reasonableness of belief of an imminent threat of injury, see: State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.App. 409 (2001), State v. Menz, 75 Wn.App. 351 (1994), here there was insufficient evidence that an emergency existed, thus warrantless entry was improper, acquiescence is not consent; 5-4.

Seattle v. Brown, 171 Wn.2d 847 (2011)

Defendant charged with violation of a domestic violence protection order is collaterally barred from challenging the validity of the protection order; trial court should exclude orders that are void, don't apply to the defendant or the charged conduct and orders "that cannot be constitutionally applied to the charged conduct (e.g., orders that fail to give the restrained party fair warning of the relevant prohibited conduct)," at 854 ¶ 10, State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005); no contact order that states that violation is a criminal offense under ch. 26.50, RCW, is adequate under the due process clause to give notice that violation is a crime where it states that a violator may be arrested; 6-3.

State v. Brown, 159 Wn.App. 1 (2010)

Multiple convictions of no contact order violations on separate days do not violate double jeopardy, State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300 (2009); proper to elevate no contact order violation to a felony even if priors occurred under former version of RCW 26.50.110, State v. Bunker, 169 Wn.2d 571, 582 (2010); I.

State v. Martin, 169 Wn.App. 620 (2012)

Wife shoots husband after he confesses to an affair, trial court admits expert testimony as to defendant's depressive disorder and histrionic personality disorder and their effect on dissociation in support of diminished capacity defense but excludes "betrayal trauma theory" evidence as not generally accepted in the scientific community; held: like "rape trauma syndrome," betrayal trauma theory does not pass the Frye test, see: State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987), distinguishing Carlton v. Vancouver Care, LLC, 155 Wn.App. 151, 164 (2010); I.

State v. Veliz, 176 Wn.2d 849 (2013)

A domestic violence protection order with a child visitation provision is not a "court-ordered parenting plan" required to prove custodial interference 1°, RCW 9A.40.060(2) (1998), see: State v. Pesta, 87 Wn.App. 515 (1997); only a document created under ch. 26.09 RCW qualifies; reverses State v. Veliz, 160 Wn.App. 396 (2011); 5-4.

State v. Luna, 172 Wn.App. 881 (2013)

Municipal court issues pretrial no contact order, after conviction at sentencing court informs defendant that the order remains extant, checks box on judgment and sentence marked "NCO," defendant is charged with violation of that no contact order, trial court dismisses; held: pretrial no contact order may be extended following conviction, State v. Schultz, 146 Wn.2d 540 (2002), RCW 10.99.040(3) (2010), oral notice to defendant at sentencing plus checking the box that reads "NCO" is sufficient to satisfy defendant's due process right to notice; III.

State v. Cortes Aguilar, 176 Wn.App. 264, 277-78 (2013)

Defendant murders his wife in daughters' presence, assaults daughter, is ordered to have ten year no contact with all of his children; held: trial court set forth reasons, state had a compelling interest in protecting children from reliving emotional trauma, defendant blamed victim, defendant can regain contact when children are more mature, distinguishing State v. Ancira, 107 Wn.App. 650 (2001), see: State v. Torres, 198 Wn.App. 685 (2017); III.

State v. W.S., 176 Wn.App. 231 (2013)

Following adjudication, juvenile court may issue a domestic violence no contact order for the maximum period of the offense which may extend beyond respondent's 18th or 21st birthday; I.

State v. Sweat, 180 Wn.2d 156 (2014)

In domestic violence case, aggravating factor of pattern of psychological, physical or sexual abuse, RCW 9.94A.535(h)(i) (2011), does not require proof that the prior incidents of abuse involved the same victim; affirms State v. Sweat, 174 Wn.App. 126 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014)

In domestic violence no contact order case complainant testifies no violence occurred, no other statements of complainant are offered, trial court admits evidence of prior domestic violence episodes to impeach complainant's testimony; held: while evidence of prior misconduct may be admissible to enable jury to assess credibility of complainant who gave conflicting statements about defendant's conduct, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 186 (2008), State v. Harris, 20 Wn.App.2d 153 (2021), absent conflicting statements by the witness probative value is outweighed by unfair prejudice, State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358, 363 (1982), see: State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32, 47 (2016); "we decline to extend Magers to cases where there is no evidence of injuries to the alleged victim and the witness neither recants nor contradicts prior statements," at 925 ¶ 16; 8-1.

State v. McDonald, 183 Wn.App. 272 (2014)

RCW 9.94A.626(21) provides that if a present conviction is for a felony domestic violence offense where DV "as defined in RCW 9.94A.030" is pleaded and proved then prior convictions for "repetitive domestic violence offense[s]" count as points, RCW 9.94A.030(20) defines DV as having "the same meaning as defined in RCW 10.99.020 and 26.50.010," legislature intended "and" to mean "or," State v. Ross, 188 Wn.App. 768 (2015); I; Division II agrees, State v. Kozey, 183 Wn.App. 692 (2014); Division III agrees, State v. Hodgins, 190 Wn.App. 437 (2015).

State v. Rodriguez*,* 183 Wn.App. 947 (2014)

Defendant pleads guilty to a felony DV no contact order violation and a misdemeanor DV no contact order violation which occurred at the same time but with different protected parties, sentencing judge counts the misdemeanor as a prior conviction and thus a point; held: a misdemeanor no contact order violation is a "prior conviction" for purposes of the SRA, RCW 9.94A.525(21)(c), as current offenses count as prior convictions, RCW 9.94A.589(1)(a), and the misdemeanor is a repetitive domestic violence offense, RCW 9.94A.030(41); II.

State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 550, 556-60 (2015)

Instruction regarding domestic violence aggravating factor, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(h)(i) (2008), that states that a "prolonged period of time means more than a few weeks" is a comment on the evidence, distinguishing State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 203 (2001), cf.: State v. Hood, 196 Wn.App. 127, 136-37 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Johnson, 185 Wn.App. 655, 666-70 (2015)

Both misdemeanor and felony stalking, RCW 9A.46.110 (2013), require harassing or following on two or more separate occasions, State v. Kintz, 169 Wn.2d 537, 548 (2010); I.

State v. Olsen*,* 187 Wn.App. 149 (2015)

When a defendant is convicted of assault 1° or assault 2°, that conviction generally cannot serve as the predicate to a no contact order violation/felony, RCW 26.50.110(4) (2013), State v. Ward, 148 Wn.2d 803, 812 (2003), State v. Azpitarte, 140 Wn.2d 138, 141 (2000), but a jury can convict a defendant for felony violation of a court order, despite having also convicted the defendant of second degree assault, when the former is predicated upon reckless conduct that creates a substantial risk of death or serious bodily injury to another, see: State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006); III.

State v. Pablo Navarro, 188 Wn.App. 550, 553-56 (2015)

A no-contact order issued as part of a sentence, RCW 9.94A.030(10), may be issued for maximum term of the crime, and are not limited to the victims of the crime, State v. Warren, 165 Wn.2d 17, 32-34 (2009); I.

State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870, 884-86 (2015)

A domestic violence protection order, RCW 10.99.040(2)(a) is improper to protect a victim-child if the defendant does not have a biological or parent-child relationship with the child; if the child's parent lives with defendant but never married him and the child is not an offspring of defendant than she cannot be a victim within the meaning of RCW 10.99.020(8), distinguishing State v. Cortes Aguilar, 176 Wn.App. 264 (2013); III.

State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016)

In unlawful imprisonment/domestic violence case prior acts of violence are admissible, ER 404(b), to prove lack of consent and intimidation, State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 744-45 (2009), State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 116 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 183 (2008), but not to bolster victim's credibility absent inconsistent testimony, at 47, State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), but see: State v. Harris, 20 Wn.App.2d 153 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Whittaker, 192 Wn.App. 395, 401-09 (2016)

Looking into victim's window or door on two occasions separated by several minutes is sufficient for jury to find the "repeated" element of stalking, RCW 9A.46.110(1) (2013), State v. Kintz, 169 Wn.2d 537 (2010); I.

State v. Case, 187 Wn.2d 85 (2017)

Where defendant stipulates to prior no contact order violations so that jury does not hear details failure of state to prove that the priors involved orders issued pursuant to the specific statutes listed in RCW 26.50.110 does not invalidate the priors as the trial court determined as a matter of law that they were sufficient, reversing State v. Case, 189 Wn.App. 422 (2015); 7-2.

State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333, 339-44 (2017)

Felony violation of a domestic violence no contact order alleging both assault and two previous no contact order convictions, RCW 26.50.110(4), -(5) (2015), is an alternative means crime, jury need not be unanimous as to which means; 6-3.

State v. Clark, 200 Wn.App. 20 (2017)

Court issues domestic violence protection order which requires a surrender of firearms, police find guns in defendant's storage locker, is convicted of unlawful possession of a firearm, RCW 9.41.040(2)(a)(ii)(C)(ll), which states that it is unlawful to possess a firearm if the underlying DVPO "explicitly prohibits the use...of physical force," and here the order does not mention "physical force;" held: protective order need not parrot the language of the statute to be sufficient as long as it clearly prohibits force, thus evidence was sufficient to convict; I.

State v. Holcomb, 200 Wn.App. 54 (2017)

Information charging interfering with reporting of domestic violence, RCW 9A.36.150 (1996), must set forth the underlying crime of domestic violence, even when challenged for the first time on appeal, cf.: State v. Nonog, 169 Wn.2d 220 (2010), State v. Laramie, 141 Wn.App. 332, 337-40 (2007); III.

State v. Granath, 190 Wn.2d 548 (2018)

Defendant is convicted in district court of a domestic violence offense, court orders no contact as a condition of sentence with a probation period of two years and enters a separate domestic violence no contact order, RCW 10.99.050 (2000), that reads "This no-contact order expires on: _____. Five years from today if no date is entered," two years later conditions of sentence are complete and court closes the case but declines to vacate the domestic violence NCO; held: standalone no contact order lasts only as long as the sentence actually imposed regardless of the sentencing court's authority to set a longer period of jurisdiction, here five years, RCW 3.66.068(1)(a) (2013); affirms State v. Granath, 200 Wn.App. 26 (2017); 8-1.

State v. Yelovich, 191 Wn.2d 774 (2018)

No contact order issued, defendant assaults victim, is charged with felony violation of a no contact order enhanced by the assault, claims she stole his phone from his car and he chased her to recover it, court declines to instruct on defense of property, RCW 9A.16.020(3) (1986); held: a no contact order must be followed, State v. Dejarlais, 136 Wn.2d 939, 969 (1998), defense of property is not available as a defense regardless of the fact that assault is an element of the crime; affirms State v. Yelovich, 1 Wn.App.2d 38 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Novikoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 166 (2017)

Assault 4° and violation of a no contact order based upon the same act do not violate double jeopardy and do not merge, RCW 26.50.110(4) (2015), State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 663 (2006), State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006); III.

State v. Shelley, 3 Wn.App.2d 196 (2018)

Defendant lives with girlfriend and her minor son, assaults girlfriend's son, is convicted of assault with domestic violence enhancement; held: for purposes of sentence enhancement RCW 9.94A.525(21) (2013) limits domestic violence as defined in RCW 9.94A.030(20) (2015) which includes children in common or children 16 years or older residing in the same household, RCW 9.94A.030(3) (2004); while victim's age here is not disclosed in opinion, by context it is less than 16 and thus domestic violence aggravator was improper; I.

State v. Horn, 3 Wn.App.2d 302 (2018)

Defendant threatens domestic partner with death, court admits ER 404(b) evidence of prior threats to support victim's reasonable fear, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), excludes defense offer that after the charged incident defendant and victim got engaged and travelled together; held: 3-step test for right to present a defense analysis: (1) evidence must be at least minimally relevant, (2) if relevant burden shifts to state to show that relevant evidence is so prejudicial as to disrupt the fairness of the fact-finding process at trial, State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713, 720 (2010), (3) the state's interest in excluding prejudicial evidence must also be balanced against the defendant's need for the information sought, and relevant information can be withheld only if the state's interest outweighs the defendant's need, State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 343 (2021); here, considering judicial recognition of battered woman's syndrome, State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591, 597 (1984), specifically cycles of domestic violence in which victim forgives hoping that the violence will not recur, trial court's exclusion of evidence of engagement and trip with defendant was not minimally relevant was not an abuse of discretion; II.

State v. Joseph, 3 Wn.App.2d 365, 370-74 (2018)

Assault 3° where the defendant has caused "substantial pain" and "considerable suffering" to the same victim, is "of a similar nature" to the other crimes listed in RCW 9A.44.060, and falls within the legislature's intent to punish thus although the crime was not specifically listed in RCW 9A.44.060, the crime is a qualifying predicate crime under RCW 9A.46.020(2)(b)(i) to enhance to felony harassment; I.

State v. Brush, 5 Wn.App.2d 40 (2018)

Domestic violence/ongoing pattern of psychological abuse aggravator, RCW 9.94A.535(3)(h), is not overbroad; sentence aggravators are not subject to vagueness challenges, State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 461 (2003), State v. Burrus, 17 Wn.App.2d 162 (2021); II.

State v. Phillips, 431 Wn.App.2d 1056 (2018)

As a condition of domestic violence sentence trial court orders no contact with adult victim over defendant's objection that such an order will make it impossible for him to visit his infant child while in prison; held: trial court had discretion to order no contact with victim, regardless of defendant's constitutional right to parent; I.

State v. Taylor, 193 Wn.2d 691 (2019)

In felony no contact order case defendant offers to stipulate that there was a no contact order and that defendant was aware of it so that jury would not see the order, Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997), State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63 (1998), trial court denies stipulation and admits the order; held: because a no contact order provides the specific restrictions on defendant, is closely related to the felony no contact order charge, is evidence of multiple elements of that crime, an probative value "far outweighs" any danger of unfair prejudice, trial court did not abuse discretion, State v. Ortega, 134 Wn.App. 617, 624-25 (2006), State v. Nguyen, 10 Wn.App.2d 797 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019)

Validity of out-of-state no contact order is not an element of the offense, State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005); I.

State v. Robinson, 8 Wn.App.2d 629 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of violation of a no contact order enhanced to a felony by two prior misdemeanor no contact order violations, RCW 26.50.110(5) (2017), to which he had pleaded guilty albeit the two stemmed from a single incident which was originally charged as a felony but through plea negotiations defendant agreed to plead to two counts, one straight plea, the other to take advantage of the plea bargain, acknowledging that there was no factual basis; held: while a defendant may plead guilty to an amended charge if there is no factual basis as long as there is a factual basis for the original charge, State v. Bao Sheng Zhao, 157 Wn.2d 188 (2006), State v. Wilson, 16 Wn.App.2d 537 (2021), a defendant cannot be convicted of two crimes based on a single act and a single original charge as it violates the double jeopardy clause, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 662 (2011); while a guilty plea precludes a collateral attack unless there is a double jeopardy violation; I.

State v. Heutink, 12 Wn.App.2d 336 (2020)

Stalking statute, RCW 9A.46.110(1) (2013), contains phrase "under circumstances not amounting to a felony attempt of another crime," defense argues that it is an essential element that must be pleaded and proved; held: legislative intent is that stalking and some other attempted felony should not lead to punishment for both, and thus it is not an element, State v. Ward, 148 Wn.2d 803 (2003); I.

State v. Case, 13 Wn.App.2d 657 (2020)

In domestic violence case complainant provides police with sworn statement detailing defendant's assault, at trial she recants and testifies she does not remember the incident, defense counsel elicits on cross that she is not afraid of defendant and not afraid to testify, trial court sustains objections to questions about whether or not she was threatened in order to get her to testify, whether she found it difficult to testify and whether she was concerned about being charged with perjury; state calls mental health counselor as an expert to testify that domestic violence victims somewhat commonly recant; held: while the court erred in sustaining relevance objections to threats which would have made it more probable that she was telling the truth at trial and would have affected her credibility, to establish a Sixth Amendment violation the excluded evidence must have extremely high probative value, State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017), State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 812 (2019); here, defense was still able to argue that complainant's recantation was genuine, thus error was harmless under non-constitutional standard, State v. Barry, 183 Wn.2d 297, 317 (2015); expert's testimony was not improper as he did not comment directly on complainant's credibility as witness did not link his testimony to the facts of the case, State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263, 280 (1988), State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990), but see: State v. Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 314 (2005); I.

State v. Marjama, 14 Wn.App.2d 803 (2020)

Aggravator of domestic violence in the presence of minor children, RCW 9.94A.535(h)(2) (2019), applies if only one child is present; II.

State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021)

Defendant has three no contact orders with the same victim, contacts her once and is convicted of three counts of violation of a no contact order; held: multiple convictions under a single statute based on a single act violate double jeopardy clause; I.

State v. Christian, 18 Wn.App.2d 185 (2021)

Interfering with the reporting of domestic violence, RCW 9A.36.150 (1996), is a strict liability crime; I.

State v. Briggs, 18 Wn.App.2d 544 (2021)

Information charging no contact order violation, RCW 10.99.050(2)(a), that does not include mens rea element of "willfulness" is deficient even when raised for the first time on appeal; information alleging attempted violation of a no contact order must include mens rea element that defendant intended to commit the specific crime; I.

State v. Harris, 20 Wn.App.2d 153 (2021)

In no contact order case victim recants, trial court allows state to cross-examine her regarding a prior assault; held: prior assault to challenge a recanting victim's credibility is admissible within court's discretion where court offers a limiting instruction and, on the record, identifies the purpose of the evidence, whether it proves an element of the crime and weighs probative value against prejudicial effect, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), cf.: State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), expert testimony is not required, see: State v. Case, 13 Wn.App.2d 657, 678 (2020); I.

State v. Abdi-Issa, 199 Wn.2d 163 (2022)

Defendant kills his date's dog, is convicted of animal cruelty with a domestic violence aggravator; held: domestic violence statute, RCW 10.99.020(4), "includes, but is not limited to" specific crimes as domestic violence offenses, while the dog is the direct victim, the statutory definition of victim includes any person who has sustained injury as a direct result of the crime charged, RCW 9.94A.030(54), domestic violence aggravator was properly applied; 7-2.

State v. Smalley ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL195252 (2023)

A no-contact order may be entered for the maximum penalty of the crime from the date of sentencing, defendant is not entitled to credit for time served; III.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY/COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL

(see also: MERGER)

State v. Kenney, 23 Wn.App. 220 (1979)

Double jeopardy precludes retrial where court dismisses information after state's case, then sua sponte amends, Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013); state must move to amend, see: State v. Johnston, 100 Wn.App. 126, 132-33 (2000); II.

In re Butler, 24 Wn.App. 175 (1979)

A guilty plea to robbery 2°, assault 2°, same evidence, violates double jeopardy, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814 (2013), but see: State v. Tanberg, 121 Wn.App. 134 (2004), set aside assault 2°; III.

State v. McClelland, 24 Wn.App. 689 (1979)

At bench trial, court acquits, changes mind and convicts; held: no double jeopardy, see: Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013); I, 2-1.

Illinois v. Vitale, 65 L.Ed.2d 228 (1980)

Negligent homicide prosecution not barred by prior conviction of failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident provided that negligent homicide did not always entail proof of failure to reduce speed; 5-4.

State v. Jones, 26 Wn.App. 1 (1980)

No double jeopardy if mistrial granted upon court's finding of manifest necessity and there was no abuse of discretion, State v. Graham, 91 Wn.App. 663 (1998); here, defendant asked for and got new counsel after jury sworn; I.

State v. Agren, 28 Wn.App. 1 (1980)

Defendant charged with assault 2°, convicted of lesser simple assault, new trial granted and re-tried on assault 2°, held: barred by double jeopardy clause, can only be retried on simple assault; II.

Hudson v. Louisiana, 67 L.Ed.2d 30 (1981)

Where trial judge grants a new trial due to insufficient evidence, double jeopardy clause bars retrial.

State v. Escobar, 30 Wn.App. 131 (1981)

Defendant, convicted of DUI, is later charged and convicted of negligent homicide relating to same incident; state had not completed investigation at time of DUI trial; held: double jeopardy does not prevent prosecution for a greater offense subsequent to a prosecution for a lesser offense which constitutes an element of the greater offense if evidence sufficient to prove the greater offense was previously not available to the state despite its exercise of due diligence, Brown v. Ohio, 53 L.Ed.2d 187 (1977), State v. Higley, 78 Wn.App. 172 (1995), State v. McMurray, 40 Wn.App. 872 (1985), but see: State v. Culp, 30 Wn.App. 879 (1982); III.

State v. Funkhouser, 30 Wn.App. 617 (1981)

Where a defendant is acquitted at trial, state may be barred by collateral estoppel from using the evidence adduced at first trial against defendant at a subsequent trial on different charges if the evidence sought to be used in the second trial was necessarily determined in defendant's favor by the previous acquittal; II.

State v. Culp, 30 Wn.App. 879 (1982)

Defendant, convicted of DUI and negligent driving, is later charged with negligent homicide, held: DUI and negligent driving is lesser of negligent homicide, thus double jeopardy clause bars prosecution; conflicts with State v. Escobar, 30 Wn.App. 131 (1981); II.

State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 680 (1982)

Defendant charged with multiple counts of promoting prostitution for having multiple prostitutes working for him may be convicted on each count but must receive concurrent sentences, see: State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), but see: State v. Barnee, 187 Wn.2d 375 (2017); II.

State v. Turner, 31 Wn.App. 843 (1982)

Double jeopardy clause does not apply where defendant robs two people at same time, gets property from each, State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993); II.

State v. Anderson, 96 Wn.2d 739 (1982)

Defendant is convicted in 1977 of murder 1° by "extreme indifference," RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b); conviction is reversed on appeal, defendant is then charged with murder 1° by premeditation, Supreme Court orders information dismissed without prejudice, as state failed to join the related offenses of premeditated murder 1° with murder 1° by extreme indifference, CrR 4.3(c)(3); Supreme Court holds state is not barred by double jeopardy clause from charging defendant with any lesser included offense (murder 1°, manslaughter), as the original reversal was not based upon insufficiency of the evidence, but rather upon inapplicability of the statute [extreme indifference does not apply where the defendant intended the death of the particular victim], State v. Anderson, 94 Wn.2d 176 (1980)]; see: State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424 (1992), State v. Canfield, 13 Wn.App.2d 410 (2020); 6-3.

State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159 (1982)

Judge inquires of a jury whether there is any possibility of reaching a verdict by 1:30 am, having deliberated since 11:10 am the previous day; jury reports there is no possibility, court declares a mistrial; held: "extraordinary and striking circumstances" must exist before a judge can declare a hung jury; jury's acknowledgement of a hopeless deadlock meets test; here, court's inquiries were insufficient to establish that jury was genuinely deadlocked, thus mistrial was improperly declared, and retrial is prohibited by double jeopardy clause, see: State v. Fish, 99 Wn.App. 86, 90-92 (1999), see also: Renico v. Lett, 559 U.S. 766, 176 L.Ed.2d 678 (2010) , State v. Strine, 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983)

Kidnapping does not merge into robbery 1°, State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.2d 926 (1982), State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57, 66-9 (1994), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), cf., State v. Allen, 94 Wn.2d 860, 864 (1980) (dicta to contrary reversed), but see: State v. Muhammad, 451 Wn.2d 1060 (2019), see: State v. Rivera, 85 Wn.App. 296, 301-3 (1997), State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820, 828-33 (2012), but see: State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), State v. Lindsay, 171 Wn.App. 808, 840-48 (2012), reversed, on different grounds, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); double jeopardy does not prohibit consecutive sentences for robbery 1° and kidnapping; 5-4.

State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501 (1983)

Defendant, convicted of racketeering in federal court, is charged in state court with conspiracy to commit murder 1° and conspiracy to commit arson 2°; RCW 10.45.040 prohibits prosecution in state court of persons acquitted or convicted in another state or country (construed to include federal court) of crimes "founded upon the act or omission with respect to which he is upon trial"; although the state charges are not lessers of racketeering because elements of state charges are permissive, not necessarily included in racketeering, actual use of a permissive element makes it a lesser for purposes of double jeopardy analysis; because arson case was included in racketeering charge, it is dismissed; see: In re Cook, 114 Wn.2d 802 (1990), State v. Mathers, 77 Wn.App. 487 (1995); 9-0.

Missouri v. Hunter, 74 L.Ed.2d 535 (1983)

Defendant is convicted of robbery and "armed criminal action" on same facts in one trial; state statute mandates that sentences shall run consecutively; held: with respect to cumulative sentences imposed in a single trial, double jeopardy does no more than prevent the sentencing court from prescribing greater punishment than the legislature intended; 7-2.

State v. Browning, 38 Wn.App. 772 (1984)

State argues to jury that an instruction is misleading, whereupon court declares a mistrial sua sponte; held: no manifest necessity for mistrial, abuse of discretion by trial court prohibits retrial, see: State v. Graham, 91 Wn.App. 663 (1998), State v. Robinson, 146 Wn.App. 471 (2008); II.

State v. Russell, 101 Wn.2d 349 (1984)

Defendant initially charged with intentional murder 1°; at first trial, jury acquits, hangs on lesser of murder 2°; state amends to add felony-murder (assault) as alternative to murder 2° (intent); held: CrR 4.3 provides for dismissal of charge if defendant has been previously tried on a related charge; pursuant to CrR 4.3, a previous trial includes a mistrial following a hung jury; felony murder is a related charge to intentional murder, but see: State v. Havens, 70 Wn.App. 251 (1993), cf.: State v. Ahluwalia, 143 Wn.2d 527 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984)

Defendant charged with one count each statutory rape and indecent liberties; victim-granddaughter testifies to numerous incidents; defense moves to require state to elect counts and to elect which incident is to be relied upon to convict; held: mere fact that victim is the same is not enough to call offense a continuing offense or transaction; state must elect or jury must be instructed that they must be unanimous as to which incident has been proved, modifying State v. Workman, 66 Wash. 292 (191l), State v. Irby, 187 Wn.App. 183, 197-99 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984)

Defendant is convicted of two bank robberies for forcibly taking bank money from two tellers at same time; held: possession or custody is the requirement, not ownership, thus no double jeopardy violations; see: State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987), State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993), State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164, 167-71 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000), cf.: State v. Tvedt, 116 Wn.App. 316 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Cockrell, 102 Wn.2d 561 (1984)

Remand for new trial due to improper denial of affidavit of prejudice does not violate defendant's right against being placed twice in jeopardy, as original judge lacked jurisdiction; 9-0.

State v. LeFever, 102 Wn.2d 777 (1984)

Dismissal of habitual criminal proceedings for insufficiency may not be reconsidered unless it was initially tentative or subject to further consideration, Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013); 8-l.

Arizona v. Rumsey, 467 U.S. 203, 81 L.Ed.2d 164 (1984)

Defendant is convicted of capital murder and at separate sentencing hearing court finds no aggravating factors and sentences to life; state appeals, state appellate court remands for new sentencing hearing whereupon defendant is sentenced to death; held: since state's capital sentencing proceeding is like a trial, double jeopardy clause bars death sentence since initial sentence constituted an acquittal of the death penalty; 7-2.

Ohio v. Johnson, 81 L.Ed.2d 425 (1984)

Defendant charged with murder pleads guilty over state's objection to manslaughter, whereupon court dismisses murder charge as violation of double jeopardy; held: guilty plea to lesser included offense while charges on greater offense remain pending is not an implied acquittal implicating the double jeopardy clause; 7-2.

Richardson v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 242 (1984)

Following a hung jury, defendant has no valid double jeopardy claim to prevent retrial, as there has been no termination of original jeopardy, regardless of sufficiency of the evidence; 7-2.

Payne v. Virginia, 82 L.Ed.2d 801 (1984)

Where conviction of a greater crime (murder) cannot occur without conviction of the lesser crime (robbery), the double jeopardy clause bars prosecution for the lesser crime after conviction of the greater; 9-0.

State v. Howell, 40 Wn.App. 49 (1985)

Where jury convicts, after which trial court arrests judgment and dismisses for failure to prove venue, appellate court can reinstate verdict, since defendant was already convicted and court is merely reinstating verdict, not retrying case, United States v. Wilson, 43 L.Ed.2d 232 (1975); III.

State v. Mahoney, 40 Wn.App. 514 (1985)

Suspect assaults, injures wife, then robs husband by threatening wife; held: no double jeopardy violation, since assault and robbery were distinct acts; I.

Heath v. Alabama, 88 L.Ed.2d 387 (1985)

Double jeopardy clause does not bar two different states from convicting a defendant for the same crime; 7-2.

State v. Mershon, 43 Wn.App. 132 (1986)

State is barred by the double jeopardy clause from seeking revision from a commissioner's acquittal, RCW 2.24.050, see: Smith v. Massachusetts, 160 L.Ed.2d 914 (2005); II.

State v. Rudy, 105 Wn.2d 921 (1986)

Due process clause does not prohibit state from prosecuting defendant who was convicted in federal court for the same crime; RCW 10.43.040 prohibits prosecution in state court for the same act, however such prosecution is proper where state court determines that there are different factual elements than those involved in the federal prosecution, In re Cook, 114 Wn.2d 802 (1990); here, neither burglary nor kidnapping were identical or included in the Hobbs Act conviction, 18 USC. § 1951 (1982); see: State v. Ivie, 136 Wn.2d 173 (1998), State v. Moses, 145 Wn.2d 370 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Netling, 46 Wn.App. 461 (1987)

Defendants, charged with possession of a controlled substance and delivery of the same substance, plead guilty to possession, seek dismissal of the delivery pursuant to double jeopardy analysis and RCW 10.43.050; held: state is not precluded from continuing prosecution of a greater offense where defendant pleads guilty to a lesser included offense as long as the lesser is not a lesser degree, see: State v. Padilla, 84 Wn.App. 523 (1996); state and federal double jeopardy clauses provide the same protection; II.

State v. Davis, 47 Wn.App. 91 (1987)

When an offense is proven which elevates another crime to a higher degree, an additional conviction for that offense cannot be allowed to stand unless it involves a separate and distinct injury not merely incidental to crime of which it forms an element; here, assault 1° merges into robbery 1°, State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671 (1979), State v. Chesnokov, 175 Wn.App. 345

(2013), but see: State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 873-78 (2003), State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 802-24 (2004); I.

Ricketts v. Adamson, 97 L.Ed.2d 1 (1987)

Defendant, charged with capital murder, agrees to testify against co-defendants which he does, state permits defendant to plead to murder 1°; when co-defendant's convictions are reversed, defendant declines to testify again; state Supreme Court vacates defendant's conviction, whereupon defendant agrees to testify, rejected by state which convicts defendant of capital murder; held: defendant, breached plea bargain, voiding it; defendant knowingly entered plea bargain thus waived double jeopardy claim; defendant's subsequent offer to testify was of "no moment," as murder 1° conviction had already been vacated; 5-4.

Lockhart v. Nelson, 102 L.Ed.2d 265 (1988)

Where an appellate court determines that evidence was erroneously admitted at trial and that remaining evidence that was admitted was insufficient to convict, double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial with additional evidence, State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202 (1992); 6-3.

State v. Duncan, 111 Wn.2d 859 (1989)

Defendant, pending murder charges in Washington, is convicted of capital murder in Arkansas; in Arkansas trial, Washington charge is proved in sentencing phase as an aggravating factor; trial court in Washington dismisses murder charge on double jeopardy grounds; pending appeal before Washington appellate court, Arkansas Supreme Court reverses, state moves, RAP 7.2(e), and is granted leave to seek vacation of dismissal in trial court; trial court reverses its dismissal and reinstates charge; held: double jeopardy clause does not bar prosecutions by different states for same act, Heath v. Alabama, 88 L.Ed.2d 387 (1985); RCW 10.43.040 does not prohibit prosecution in Washington as Arkansas did not charge or convict defendant for the same act, cf.: State v. Dennis, 67 Wn.App. 863 (1992), see: State v. Ivie, 136 Wn.2d 173 (1998), State v. Moses, 145 Wn.2d 370 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Hopson, 113 Wn.2d 273 (1989)

Double jeopardy clauses of state and federal constitutions do not bar retrial following mistrial granted where a government investigator, who was not an officer of the court, twice violated an order in limine prohibiting testimony about defendant's prior record, as the misconduct was inadvertent and not consciously designed to prejudice defendant, Oregon v. Kennedy, 72 L.Ed.2d 416 (1982), Oregon v. Kennedy, 666 P.2d 1316 (1983), cf.: Oregon v. Rathbun, 600 P.2d 392 (1979), see: State v. Lewis, 78 Wn.App. 739 (1995), State v. Martinez, 121 Wn.App. 21 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Moore, 54 Wn.App. 211 (1989)

Convictions for possession of more than 40 grams of marijuana and manufacturing marijuana do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Jones, 25 Wn.App. 746 (1980); I.

State v. Larson, 56 Wn.App. 323 (1989)

Where a consecutive sentence is reversed on appeal and new concurrent sentence is equivalent to the total time on the reversed consecutive sentence, no double jeopardy violation, because defendant appealed original case; a legal sentence on a multiple count charge may be increased to effectuate the trial court's original sentencing scheme when that scheme is upset by successful legal action of defendant, Pennsylvania v. Goldhammer, 88 L.Ed.2d 183 (1985), Jones v. Thomas, 105 L.Ed.2d 322 (1989), see: State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); I.

Dowling v. United States, 107 L.Ed.2d 708 (1990)

At bank robbery trial at which robber wore a mask and was with another man, government introduces evidence of which defendant had previously been acquitted, that defendant entered a woman's house two weeks after robbery, wearing a mask with the same other man; held: collateral estoppel does not bar the testimony as the prior acquittal did not determine an ultimate issue in the present case, distinguishing Ashe v. Swenson, 25 L.Ed.2d 469 (1970), and because government did not have to prove in present trial that the prior bad act occurred beyond a reasonable doubt, United States v. One Assortment of 89 Firearms, 79 L.Ed.2d 361 (1984), State v. Stein, 140 Wn.App. 43, 61-65 (2007); defendant failed to demonstrate that acquittal at first trial represented a jury determination that he was not one of the men who entered the woman's home, see: Yeager v. United States, 174 L.Ed.2d 78 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Moi, 184 Wn.2d 575 (2015), Bravo-Fernandez v. United States, 580 U.S. 5, 137 S.Ct. 352, 196 L.Ed.2d 242 (2016), Currier v. Virginia, 585 U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2144, 201 L.Ed.2d 650 (2018); 6-3.

State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990)

Dependency court finds state failed to meet burden of establishing that defendant sexually abused his stepdaughter; following filing of statutory rape charge, trial court denies motion to dismiss on collateral estoppel grounds; held: test for collateral estoppel (1) issues are identical, (2) prior case ended in final judgment on merits, (3) parties were the same or in privity with prior party, and (4) application of doctrine will not work an injustice, Beagles v. Seattle-First National Bank, 25 Wn.App. 925, 929 (1980); collateral estoppel applies where prior adjudication was civil, current one is criminal, Yates v. United States, 1 L.Ed.2d 1356 (1957), Harris v. Washington, 30 L.Ed.2d 212 (1971); here, urgency and narrow focus of dependency proceedings, lack of prosecution resources and jury trial establish that public policy is against application of doctrine, State v. Williams, 132 Wn.2d 248 (1997), State v. Vasquez, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002), State v. Longo, 185 Wn.App. 804 (2015), but see: Harris v. Washington, supra, reversing State v. Harris, 78 Wn.2d 894 (1971); I.

State v. Souza, 60 Wn.App. 534 (1991)

Following bench trial, court convicts and enters findings of fact that omit a material element; held: where there is evidence in the record to support the missing element, remedy is remand for entry of further findings without the introduction of new evidence, State v. Jones, 34 Wn.App. 848 (1983), State v. Greco, 57 Wn.App. 196, 205 (1990), State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619, 625 (1998), distinguishing State v. Jacobson, 36 Wn.App. 446, 450 (1983), but see: State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368 (1994); 2-1, I.

State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424 (1992)

Trial court permits amendment mid-trial to an offense that is not a lesser, defendant convicted; Supreme Court holds that while conviction on non-lesser is reversed, defendant may be retried on that charge, not barred by double jeopardy clause as conviction was not reversed for insufficiency, State v. Anderson, 96 Wn.2d 739 (1982), but see: State v. Dallas, 126 Wn.2d 324 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Laviollette, 118 Wn.2d 670 (1992)

Defendant pleads guilty to theft in district court, is later convicted of burglary in which underlying crime was the theft; held: burglary trial court relied on conduct (theft) for which defendant had already been convicted, thus double jeopardy precludes burglary conviction, but see: United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993); accord: State v. Watkins, 70 Wn.App. 245 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Rich, 63 Wn.App. 743 (1992)

After jury is sworn, defendant fails to appear; at state's request, over defense counsel's objection, court commences trial, during which no witness identifies defendant; after both parties rest, defendant appears; trial court gives defense choice of allowing state to reopen or mistrial, defense objects to both, trial court grants sua sponte mistrial; held: no manifest necessity or emergency existed that justified discharge of jury, thus mistrial over defense objection amounts to an acquittal, State v. Connors, 59 Wn.2d 879, 883 (1962), State v. Juarez, 115 Wn.App. 881 (2003), State v. Sheets, 128 Wn.App. 149 (2005), State v. Robinson, 146 Wn.App. 471 (2008), see also: State v. Graham, 91 Wn.App. 663 (1998); II.

State v. Kirk, 64 Wn.App. 788 (1992)

Jury returns no verdict on greater offense, convicts of lesser, State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991); trial court discharges jury without consent of defendant and without determination of "extraordinary and striking" circumstances (such as jury acknowledgment of a hopeless deadlock on greater offense), State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159, 162 (1982), state re-notes greater offense for trial, defense seeks discretionary review; held: mere acknowledgment that jurors were unable to agree on greater offense is insufficient to allow discharge of jury, thus defendant's right to be protected from double jeopardy was violated, Green v. United States, 2 L.Ed.2d 199 (1957), see: State v. Fish, 99 Wn.App. 86, 90-92 (1999), State v. Linton, 122 Wn.App. 73 (2004), 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006), but see: State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 656-8 (1997), State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009; III.

State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992)

Defendant is convicted of delivery of drugs and possession with intent to deliver, evidence having established that defendant delivered drugs, possessed more drugs upon arrest; held: because jury was not instructed that the possession with intent to deliver charge could only apply to the drugs still in defendant's possession at arrest and not to the actual delivery, the offenses merge, see: State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 421 (1983), State v. Burns, 114 Wn.2d 314, 319 (1990), State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563 (2005), but see: State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 320, 333-4 (1994), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995), State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 816-8 (1994), thus remanded for new trial on possession with intent charge; concurrent sentences doctrine does not apply since SRA offender score on delivery increased due to possession with intent conviction, sentence imposed was not within standard range for delivery alone; I.

State v. Austin, 65 Wn.App. 759 (1992)

Where juvenile court fails to enter finding regarding mens rea element, and where record supports the missing element, then remand is the remedy, but see: State v. PeBa, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992), State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368 (1994), State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998); double jeopardy clause precludes remand only where record is devoid of any evidence to support the omitted finding; I, 2-1.

State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202 (1992)

Where evidence is admitted on a procedural error [here, lab test reports, CrR 6.13(b)], and the evidence would have been sufficient if procedural error had not occurred, retrial is not precluded by double jeopardy clause, Lockhart v. Nelson, 102 L.Ed.2d 265 (1988); III.

State v. Soderholm, 68 Wn.App. 363 (1993)

State serves defendant with noncriminal notice of infraction for performing work while not registered as a contractor, RCW 18.27.270, defendant pays fine in an untimely manner, defendant is charged and convicted for criminal unregistered contracting, RCW 18.27.020, based upon same incident; held: because the prior proceeding was not pursued to a final result, the "same evidence" test of State v. Roybal, 82 Wn.2d 577 (1973) and Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932) is not applicable; I.

United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993)

Defendant 1, on PR on condition of no crimes, is arrested for a drug offense, found guilty of criminal contempt for violating release terms, and moves to dismiss the drug charge on grounds that indictment violates double jeopardy clause; defendant 2, found in contempt for violating a civil protection order, moves to dismiss subsequent assault charge on victim arising from same incident; held: where two offenses for which defendant is punished or tried cannot survive the "same elements" test, double jeopardy bar applies, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932); same elements test: whether each offense contains an element not contained in the other; "same conduct" test, Grady v. Corbin, 109 L.Ed.2d 548 (1990) is overruled; (fractured opinion).

State v. Watkins, 70 Wn.App. 245 (1993)

Defendant pleads guilty to DUI in district court, later felony flight charge, from same incident, is dismissed by trial court; held: where state maintains that it will prove reckless driving elements of felony flight without reference to defendant's intoxication, then different conduct is being proved, distinguishing Grady v. Corbin, 109 L.Ed.2d 548 (1990), overruled by United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993), thus double jeopardy clause is not violated; Grady v. Corbin does not establish a "same transaction" test, State v. Laviollette, 118 Wn.2d 670 (1992); III.

State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993)

Defendants commit residential robbery, stealing property of both husband and wife, charged with two counts; held: no double jeopardy violation where defendant robs from husband and wife; deprivation of any ownership interest, including an undivided share, will support a robbery conviction, as will a taking from one having custody or possession, State v. Turner, 31 Wn.App. 843 (1982), State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987), cf.: State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705 (2005); doctrine of merger only applies where one offense is a statutory lesser of the other, State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 677 n. 4 (1979); crimes against multiple victims are not subject to doctrine of merger, State v. Hudlow, 36 Wn.App. 630, 633 (1984), State v. Clapp, 67 Wn.App. 263, 275 (1992); I.

State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 824-6 (1993)

Child molestation 1°, RCW 9A.44.083, and rape of a child 1°, RCW 9A.44.073, are not the same offense, since each requires the state to prove an element that the other does not, In re Fletcher, 113 Wn.2d 42, 47 (1989), and do not merge, as the latter is not a lesser of the former, State v. Speece, 115 Wn.2d 360, 362 (1990); where two offenses are legally and factually distinct, even though both may have occurred during the same incident, failure to provide a unanimity instruction does not violate double jeopardy clause or doctrine of merger; I.

State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368 (1994)

Where findings of fact fail to address an element of the crime, remedy is dismissal, State v. PeBa, 65 Wn.App. 711, 715 (1992), but see: State v. Souza, 60 Wn.App. 534 (1991), State v. Austin, 65 Wn.App. 759 (1992), State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998); III.

State v. Gocken*, 72 Wn.App. 908 (1994)

Plea to use of drug paraphernalia, RCW 69.50.412(l), does not bar prosecution for possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver, as each statute requires proof of a fact which the other does not, United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993), Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932); III.

State v. Cabrera, 73 Wn.App. 165, 169-70 (1994)

To prove out-of-state priors at SRA sentencing, state offers, over objection, prior Washington judgments which contain findings of fact that out-of-state convictions were part of defendant's criminal history; held: collateral estoppel does not bar defendant from challenging priors, as there was no evidence defendant objected at prior proceeding, thus court cannot conclude that the identical issue was raised; I.

State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 57, 66-9 (1994)

Attempted robbery and kidnapping do not merge and do not violate double jeopardy clause where tried together, as the offenses are not the same in law and in fact, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 423-3 (1983), State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 63 (2005), State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013); II.

State v. Crisler, 73 Wn.App. 219 (1994)

Defendant pleads guilty to conspiracy to commit theft, is later tried for accomplice to theft for same incident; held: under the same elements test, United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556, 573 (1993), Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), double jeopardy clause does not bar second prosecution as conspiracy requires element of intent, accomplice liability requires knowledge, conspiracy requires that any conspirator take a substantial step, accomplice requires that defendant solicit, command, aid or agree; guilty plea is a conviction, RCW 9.94A.030(9), see: Tembruell v. Seattle, 64 Wn.2d 503, 510 (1964); III.

State v. Clark, 124 Wn.2d 90, 95-102 (1994)

Combination of criminal punishment and civil forfeiture of home do not violate double jeopardy clause of United States Constitution, United States v. Ursery, 135 L.Ed.2d 549 (1996), see: State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Carter, 74 Wn.App. 320, 333-4 (1994), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 127 Wn.2d 836 (1995)

Defendant is convicted of delivery and possession with intent to deliver, claims double jeopardy clause is violated as jury was not instructed regarding merger; held: because prosecutor clearly distinguished the charges during trial, jury was instructed she was being tried for two separate crimes, both parties during closing argued two separate acts, no double jeopardy violation, State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 816-8 (1994), distinguishing State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681, 691 (1992); I.

State v. Maxfield, 125 Wn.2d 378, 399-401 (1994), rev'd, on other grounds, Pers. Restraint of Maxfield, 133 Wn.2d 332 (1997)

Defendant is convicted of manufacturing marijuana and possession with intent to deliver; held: a double jeopardy challenge to multiple punishment within the same prosecution uses Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932) same elements test rather than United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556, 573 (1993)(successive prosecutions); here, each offense contained different elements, thus they are not the same offense, State v. Gocken, 127 Wn.2d 95 (1995).

State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 816-8 (1994)

Defendant is charged as an accomplice to delivery of drugs and as an accomplice to possession with intent to deliver, "to convict" instructions do not distinguish between the two incidents; held: absent evidence of jury confusion as to the factual basis for each count, where separate crimes are charged, evidence is presented on each charge and the argument clearly distinguishes, then no double jeopardy violation exists, distinguishing State v. Garcia, 65 Wn.App. 681 (1992) (jury sent out note indicating confusion); I.

State v. Zwiefelhofer, 75 Wn.App. 440 (1994)

Jury announces acquittal, is polled and is discharged, after which jurors state foreperson erred and should have written "guilty" on one count, court reverses verdict and sentences; held: once acquittal is announced and jurors pass from trial court's control, "correction" of verdict violates defendant's double jeopardy rights; II.

State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995)

Incest and rape, from a single act, are intended by legislature to be separate crimes, and do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013), , State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016), see: State v. Timothy K., 107 Wn.App. 784 (2001); double jeopardy analysis applies even if sentences run concurrently, overruling, in part, State v.

Johnson, 96 Wn.2d 926 (1982), State v. Bonds, 98 Wn.2d 1 (1982), see: State v. Hull, 83 Wn.App. 786, 792-4 (1996), State v. Frohs, 83 Wn.App. 803 (1996), State v. Rivera, 85 Wn.App. 296 (1997), but see: State v. Eaton, 82 Wn.App. 723, 729 (1996), State v. Lynch, 93 Wn.App. 716, 723-27 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Mathers, 77 Wn.App. 487 (1995)

Defendant is convicted of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and theft of guns in Oregon, and taking and riding a motor vehicle and theft 2° in Washington; held: statutory prohibition against double jeopardy between states, RCW 10.43.040, requires that successive trials involve the same act and the same offense, State v. Caliguri, 99 Wn.2d 501, 513-4 (1983); here, taking and riding is the same as the Oregon offense, but thefts are not as Washington requires intent to deprive while in Oregon defendant was convicted for knowingly retaining a firearm which he knew was the subject of theft, and thus are not, in fact, the same, In re Cook, 114 Wn.2d 802, 816 (1990), see: State v. Ivie, 136 Wn.2d 173 (1998), State v. Moses, 145 Wn.2d 370 (2002), State v. Rivera-Santos, 166 Wn.2d 722 (2009); III.

Witte v. United States, 132 L.Ed.2d 351 (1995)

Defendant is convicted of a marijuana felony, sentencing judge takes into consideration cocaine importation activities in enhancing sentence, after which defendant is charged with same cocaine importation, trial court dismisses; held: the use of relevant conduct to increase the punishment of a charged offense does not punish the offender for the relevant conduct, Williams v. Oklahoma, 3 L.Ed.2d 516 (1959), thus does not violate double jeopardy clause; 8-1.

State v. Alvarez, 128 Wn.2d 1 (1995)

Where evidence is sufficient but trial court's findings are not, proper remedy is remand, not dismissal, State v. Souza, 60 Wn.App. 534 (1991), State v. Royal, 122 Wn.2d 413 (1993), see: State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619 (1998), overruling State v. PeBa, 65 Wn.App. 711 (1992), State v. BJS, 72 Wn.App. 368 (1994); affirms State v. Alvarez, 74 Wn.App. 250 (1994); 6-3.

State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262, 273-85 (1995)

Civil forfeiture of proceeds traceable to a criminal violation does not constitute punishment under the Fifth Amendment; plurality declines to decide double jeopardy issue in companion case, remands for trial court determination whether property forfeited was proceeds, at 284-85, see: United States v. Ursery, 135 L.Ed.2d 549 (1996), State v. Catlett, 133 Wn.2d 355 (1997); 3-3-3.

State v. Higley, 78 Wn.App. 172, 178-81 (1995)

Defendant is charged with DUI following accident, petition for deferred prosecution is granted, prosecutor later learns accident victim was seriously injured, on state's motion district court dismisses DUI, defendant is charged and convicted of vehicular assault; held: defendant was not put to trial when deferred prosecution was entered, thus jeopardy did not attach, Serfass v United States, 43 L.Ed.2d 265 (1975), United States v. Martin Linen Supply Co., 51 L.Ed.2d 642 (1977), Pers. Restraint of Swagerty, 186 Wash. 2d 801, 813-14 (2016); even if jeopardy had attached, defendant could be prosecuted for greater offense where the evidence sufficient to prove the greater offense was not previously available despite exercise of due diligence, State v.

Escobar, 30 Wn.App. 131 (1981), State v. McMurray, 40 Wn.App. 872 (1985), Brown v. Ohio, 53 L.Ed.2d 187 (1977); due diligence does not oblige police or prosecutor to recontact victim about extent of injuries after she has been discharged from hospital following accident with no apparent serious injury; II.

State v. Bryant, 78 Wn.App. 805 (1995)

Manufacturing marijuana, RCW 69.50.401(a)(1)(ii), and making a building available for the manufacture of a controlled substance, RCW 69.53.010(1), are not the same offense for double jeopardy analysis as they do not satisfy same elements test, United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993); here, defendant was acquitted of manufacturing, jury hung on making building available, evidence admitted at first trial regarding manufacturing is admissible at retrial on making building available under double jeopardy analysis, court declines to address collateral estoppel as it was not raised at trial; II.

State v. Kassahun, 78 Wn.App. 938 (1995)

Defendant is charged with murder and assault, is acquitted of assault, hung on murder; at retrial on murder, defense offer of evidence of acquittal is refused, trial court gives first aggressor instruction, WPIC 16.04, which arguably referred to the previously acquitted assault; held: collateral estoppel doctrine requires that evidence of acquittal be admitted, distinguishing State v. Tarman, 27 Wn.App. 645, 652 (1980), and that jury receive an instruction as to the issue-preclusion consequences of the acquittal; first aggressor instruction must be crafted to preclude argument that defendant's aggression towards assault victim negates self-defense; I.

State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164, 167-71 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000)

Felony murder (assault) and assault 2° are the same in law, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 423 (1983), but here are not the same in fact even though they arise from same transaction, Vladovic, supra, at 423, thus double jeopardy clause does not bar conviction and punishment for both, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 (1995), State v. Timothy K., 107 Wn.App. 784 (2001), distinguishing State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987), assault is not a lesser included offense of felony murder, State v. Davis, 121 Wn.2d 1, 6 (1993); charges do not merge, State v. Wanrow, 91 Wn.2d 301, 312 (1978), State v. Goodrich, 72 Wn.App. 71, 78-9 (1993), State v. Leonard, 183 Wn.App. 532 (2014), remanded, on other grounds, 184 Wn.2d 505 (2015); I.

State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755, 760-03 (1995)

Defendant is arrested after buying cocaine from police, more cocaine is found on his person, is convicted of two counts; held: defendant possessed cocaine in a continuous, uninterrupted series of events during a relatively short period of time, thus double jeopardy clause precludes conviction of two counts, State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997), State v. Chenoweth, 127 Wn.App. 444, 462-63 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 160 Wn.2d 454 (2007), State v. Villanueva-Gonzalez,180 Wn.2d 975 (2014), distinguishing State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441, 443 (1991), State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142 Wn.2d 165 (2000); III.

United States v. Ursery, 135 L.Ed.2d 549 (1996)

Government forfeits a house where marijuana was present, subsequently convicts owners of crimes; held: in rem civil forfeitures do not constitute punishment, thus defendant was not placed in jeopardy in the civil forfeiture proceeding against his house, distinguishing United States v. Halper, 104 L.Ed.2d 487 (1989); State v. Lynch, 84 Wn.App. 467, 471-7 (1996), see: State v. Catlett, 133 Wn.2d 355 (1997), State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262 (1995); 8-1.

State v. Hardesty, 129 Wn.2d 303 (1996)

Defendant is sentenced, serves his time, only remaining matter is payment of costs, prosecutor reports to trial court that defendant lied about priors, trial court concludes defendant committed fraud and resentences to more time; held: a defendant who defrauds the trial court has no expectation of finality merely because he has completed the "undeservedly short sentence," double jeopardy clause does not preclude resentencing, see: United States v. DiFrancesco, 66 L.Ed.2d 328 (1980), reversing, in part, State v. Hardesty, 78 Wn.App. 593 (1995); to set aside a served sentence, state must file a motion and affidavit, CrR 7.8(c), and prove all the elements of fraud, CrR 7.8(b)(3), by clear and convincing evidence; 9-0.

State v. Corrado, 81 Wn.App. 640, 643-62 (1996)

Defendant is acquitted of attempted murder 1°, convicted of lesser attempted murder 2°, conviction is reversed because state never filed a charging document, thus court lacked jurisdiction, State v. Corrado, 78 Wn.App. 612 (1995), state files information charging attempted murder 1°; held: jeopardy attached and terminated with respect to attempted murder 1°, as defendant was tried and acquitted irrespective of lack of jurisdiction, jeopardy has not terminated as to attempted murder 2°, thus defendant can be retried, State v. Gamble, 137 Wn.App. 892, 901 (2007), 168 Wn.2d 161 (2010), see: State v. Barnes, 146 Wn.2d 74 (2002), State v. Rogers, 146 Wn.2d 55, 56-60 (2002); II.

State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98, 110-1 (1996)

Defendant is found to have violated community supervision by violating no contact order, felony no contact order violation is filed, RCW 10.99.040(4), -.050(2), defendant moves to dismiss claiming double jeopardy; held: CONST., Art. 1, § 9, is coextensive with United States Constitution double jeopardy clause, State v. Gocken, 127 Wn.2d 95, 107 (1995), an order of confinement for community supervision violation does not preclude subsequent criminal prosecution, State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997); I.

State v. Molina, 83 Wn.App. 144, 146-67 (1996)

Defendants rob a store with two clerks, take money from one cash register, are convicted of two counts of robbery; held: when robbery occurs in a commercial establishment, multiple counts are identical in fact when victims exercise joint control over the property taken but there is no separate taking from each individual, thus double jeopardy clause bars conviction on two counts, State v. Johnson, 48 Wn.App. 531 (1987), distinguishing State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 665 (1984), State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993), see: State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705 (2005), cf.: State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164, 167-71 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Fernandez-Medina, 141 Wn.2d 448 (2000); I.

State v. Hull, 83 Wn.App. 786, 792-4 (1996)

Theft and L&I fraud, RCW 51.48.020(2), are the same offenses for double jeopardy purposes, as the legislature intended L&I fraud to be a more specific species of theft, see: State v. Potter, 31 Wn.App. 883, 888 (1982), State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 778-80 (1995), State v. Timothy K., 107 Wn.App. 784 (2001); III.

State v. Padilla, 84 Wn.App. 523 (1996)

Defendant is charged in the alternative with assault 1° and with assault 2° with a deadly weapon allegation, trial court accepts guilty plea, over state's objection, to assault 2°, dismisses assault 1°; held: where defendant is acquitted or convicted of a crime, RCW 10.43.050 precludes trial for the same crime in another degree, unless second charge is a lesser included offense, State v. Netling, 46 Wn.App. 461 (1987), State v. Ahluwalia, 143 Wn.2d 527 (2001); weapons allegation does not convert assault 2° into a lesser of assault 1°, thus dismissal affirmed; III.

United States v. Watts, 136 L.Ed.2d 554 (1997)

Defendant is convicted on one count, acquitted on another, sentencing court finds facts on acquitted count by preponderance and adds points based on that count in imposing sentence; held: acquittal does not preclude government from relitigating an issue in a subsequent action governed by a lower standard of proof, Dowling v. United States, 107 L.Ed.2d 708 (1990), McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 91 L.Ed.2d 67 (1986), but see: Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L. Ed. 2d 314 (2013), Williams v. New York, 93 L.Ed. 1337 (1949); 7-2.

State v. McLendon, 131 Wn.2d 853 (1997)

Defendants are arrested for DUI, breath tests exceed .10, Department of Licensing issues probationary licenses, RCW 46.61.502; held: administrative issuance of probationary licenses is not punishment under double jeopardy clause; 5-4.

State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 237-9 (1997)

Merger doctrine is inapplicable pretrial, can only apply where defendant is convicted of multiple counts; 9-0.

State v. Williams, 132 Wn.2d 328 (1997)

At DSHS administrative hearing, defendant is found to have been overpaid public assistance, ordered to repay, state charges defendant with welfare fraud, defense seeks dismissal; held: purposes underlying administrative hearings and criminal trials are wholly distinct, state would suffer an injustice if collateral estoppel doctrine were to apply, reversing State v. Williams, 78 Wn.App. 593 (1995), see: State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990), State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268 (1980), State v. Gary J.E., 99 Wn.App. 258 (2000), State v. Vasquez, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002), State v. Longo, 185 Wn.App. 804 (2015); 7-2.

State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 271 (1997)

Revocation of driver's license is not punishment under double jeopardy clause, State v. Scheffel, 82 Wn.App. 872, 879 (1973), Rowe v. Department of Licensing, 88 Wn.App. 781 (1997), cf.: State v. Hopkins, 109 Wn.App. 558 (2001); II.

State v. Rivera, 85 Wn.App. 296 (1997)

Defendant fires 14 shots into service station, is convicted of three counts of assault 1° and seven counts of reckless endangerment 1°; test to determine if double jeopardy clause is violated (1) does either statute authorize multiple convictions for the same act?, (2) would proof of either charge prove the other offense (same evidence test)?, and (3) did legislature intend to inflict only a single punishment?, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 776-80 (1995), State v. Timothy K., 107 Wn.App. 784 (2001); here, statutes do not expressly authorize multiple convictions, assault requires proof of intent, reckless endangerment proof of recklessness, thus elements differ, legislature did not intend to punish both crimes by a single punishment, see: State v. Lynch, 93 Wn.App. 716, 723-27 (1999); III.

State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 650-54 (1997)

Civil complaint against defendant alleging violation of criminal profiteering act, RCW 9A.82.100, is dismissed for lack of evidence, defendant is convicted later of leading organized crime, RCW 9A.82.060(1)(a), trial court denies motion to dismiss based upon collateral estoppel; held (1) issues were not identical, as civil action requires proof defendant was successful in obtaining gains, criminal action does not require that defendant succeeded, (2) defense failed to provide record of civil proceeding, thus appellate court cannot determine that earlier litigation was a final judgment on merits, LeMond v. Dep't of Licensing, 143 Wn.App. 797 (2008), (3) parties were in privity, and (4) application of doctrine would work an injustice against state as incarceration is a goal of criminal law which is unavailable in a civil action, State v. Longo, 185 Wn.App. 804 (2015); II.

State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997)

Defendant, on SRA community supervision with condition of no new crimes, is charged with a felony and admits to the community supervision violation, which is later stricken; held: a community supervision violation is not a criminal prosecution for double jeopardy purposes, State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98, 111 (1996), distinguishing United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993), see: State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268, 276 (1980), Standlee v. Smith, 83 Wn.2d 405, 407 (1974), State v. Collins, 121 Wn.App. 16 (2004); I.

State v. Catlett, 133 Wn.2d 355 (1997)

Civil forfeiture of a car used in a drug transaction is not punishment under CONST. Art. I, § 9, United States v. Ursery, 135 L.Ed.2d 549 (1996), State v. Cole, 128 Wn.2d 262 (1995), reversing State v. Catlett, 81 Wn.App. 791 (1996); 5-4.

State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997)

At traffic stop, defendant is found with drugs in his car, sock and pocket, is convicted of possession and possession with intent to deliver; held: double jeopardy clause applies if offenses are legally identical and based on same act or transaction, Kansas v. Hendricks, 138 L.Ed.2d 501 (1997); offenses are not legally identical if each offense contains an element not contained in the other, State v. Gocken, 127 Wn.2d 95, 101 (1995); possession of drugs does not contain an element not found in possession with intent to deliver, thus the offenses are identical, see: State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898, 904-07 (2000), State v. Chenoweth, 127 Wn.App. 444, 462-63 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 160 Wn.2d 454 (2007); defendant's possession here was based upon one transaction "in a continuous, uninterrupted series of events," State v. Lopez, 79

Wn.App. 755, 763 (1995), thus possession charge must be dismissed, distinguishing State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441 (1991), see: State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142 Wn.2d 165 (2000); II.

Hudson v. United States, 139 L.Ed.2d 450 (1997)

Bankers are civilly fined and debarred for violation of federal banking statutes, later criminally prosecuted for same conduct; held: Congress intended civil fines and debarment sanctions to be civil, sanctions imposed were not so punitive in form and effect as to render them criminal despite Congress's intent to the contrary, United States v. Ward, 65 L.Ed.2d 742 (1980), United States v. Ursery, 135 L.Ed.2d 549 (1996), revocation of a privilege voluntarily granted, such as debarment, is free of punitive criminal element, Helvering v. Mitchell, 82 L.Ed.2d 917 (1938), debarment does not approach imprisonment, Flemming v. Nestor, 4 L.Ed.2d 1435 (1960), deterrence as a goal does not render a sanction criminal, thus double jeopardy clause is not violated, disavowing analysis in United States v. Halper, 104 L.Ed.2d 487 (1989); 9-0.

State v. Knutson, 88 Wn.App. 677 (1997)

School suspension for assault is not solely punitive, thus does not preclude conviction of assault, State v. McClendon, 131 Wn.2d 853, 867-8 (1997); I.

Monge v. California, 114 L.Ed.2d 615 (1998)

At sentencing, trial court finds defendant previously was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon, thus imposes "three strikes" sentence, appellate court reverses sentence based upon insufficiency of evidence of deadly weapon, state seeks remand for "retrial" on issue of deadly weapon; held: in a noncapital sentencing, double jeopardy clause does not preclude remand and rehearing on a prior conviction allegation, distinguishing Bullington v. Missouri, 68 L.Ed.2d 270 (1981); 8-1.

State v. Taylor,90 Wn.App. 312, 317-9 (1998)

Assault 2° (putting another in apprehension) and kidnapping 2° (by the use or threatened use of deadly force) do not contain the same elements, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 (1995), as one can kidnap using deadly force by directing force against another, and one can assault without abducting, thus concurrent charges do not offend double jeopardy clause; II.

State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998)

Defendant is found with small amounts of marijuana in his car and in his store, is convicted of two counts of possession; held: where the same drug is found within defendant's dominion and control at the same time, then double jeopardy clause precludes conviction of multiple counts, Bell v. United States, 99 L.Ed.2d 905 (1955), State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721 (2003), State v. Chenoweth, 127 Wn.App. 444, 462-63 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 160 Wn.2d 454 (2007), unless legislature has "intended to punish a person multiple times for simple possession based upon the drug being stashed in multiple places," at 635 ("unit of prosecution"), see: State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 112-19 (1999), State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000), State v. Soonalole, 99 Wn.App. 207 (2000), State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2000), State v. Diaz-Flores, 148 Wn.App. 911 (2009), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142 Wn.App. 165 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Graham, 91 Wn.App. 663 (1998)

During bench trial, judge realizes and discloses that he works for complainant, defense does not agree to allow judge to continue, judge disqualifies himself and declares a mistrial; held: mistrial necessitated by recusal in accordance with CJC 3(D)(1) constitutes a manifest necessity, see: State v. Eldridge, 17 Wn.App. 270, 276 (1977), State v. Jones, 26 Wn.App. 1 (1980), absent bad faith, see: State v. Browning, 38 Wn.App. 772 (1984), State v. Rich, 63 Wn.App. 743 (1992), jeopardy has not terminated and trial may proceed before a different judge; II.

State v. Traicoff, 93 Wn.App. 248, 252-57 (1998)

Following remand, trial court changes sentence from one to two years community placement, based upon erroneous sentence originally imposed, not addressed in original appeal; held: double jeopardy clause does not bar a court from correcting its sentencing error by increasing severity of a sentence to conform to mandatory provisions of a statute, Bozza v. United States, 91 L.Ed. 818 (1947), United States v. DiFrancesco, 66 L.Ed.2d 328 (1980); I.

State v. Sweet, 91 Wn.App. 612, 616-17 (1998), aff'd, 138 Wn.2d 466 (1999)

Under same elements test, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), double jeopardy does not bar convictions of assault 1º and burglary 1º because in order to commit assault a defendant does not need to enter or remain unlawfully in a building; II.

State v. Lynch, 93 Wn.App. 716 (1999)

Malicious harassment and assault 4° merge in spite of malicious harassment's antimerger clause, one cannot commit malicious harassment without committing simple assault, distinguishing State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), State v. Worl, 74 Wn.App. 605, 611-12 (1994), cf.: State v. Timothy K., 107 Wn.App. 784 (2001); I.

State v. Hollis, 93 Wn.App. 804, 812-15 (1999)

Involving minor in a drug transaction, RCW 69.50.401(f) [recodified as RCW 69.50.4015 (2003)], and delivery of cocaine do not violate double jeopardy clause under same elements test, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 (1995); I.

Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999)

District court suppresses breath test in criminal case, defendant appeals DOL license revocation, argues collateral estoppel precludes revocation; held: even if district court erroneously suppressed breath test, collateral estoppel precludes admissibility of breath test in license revocation, as state had incentive, capability and opportunity to litigate the issue in the criminal case and it must abide the result it did not appeal from, see: State v. Vasquez, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002), see also: LeMond v. Dep't of Licensing, 143 Wn.App. 797 (2008), cf.: State v. Longo, 185 Wn.App. 804 (2015); reverses Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 91 Wn.App. 887, 896-98 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 112-19 (1999)

Three acts of rape charged separately for digital penetration of two orifices and penile penetration within two minutes are separate units of prosecution justifying three separate charges, not in violation of double jeopardy clause, State v. Soonalole, 99 Wn.App. 207 (2000), Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142 Wn.2d 165 (2000), State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 611-12 (2006), distinguishing State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), see: State v. Wilkins, 200 Wn.App. 794, 802-14 (2017), cf.: Pers. Restraint of White, 1 Wn.App.2d 788 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Melton, 97 Wn.App. 327 (1999)

During voir dire, some jurors state they can stay no longer than Monday of the next week, trial is expected to conclude on Monday, defense counsel calls in ill that day, court sets trial over to Tuesday, defense counsel leaves message that he is still sick, does not indicate when he anticipates recovering, trial court grants mistrial, defense seeks dismissal; held: trial court did not act precipitately, Arizona v. Washington, 54 L.Ed.2d 717 (1978), State v. Robinson, 146 Wn.App. 471 (2008), and, while court should have contacted defense counsel or a substitute and considered alternatives to mistrial on the record, because no practical alternative to mistrial existed, court properly exercised discretion, see: State v. Eldridge, 17 Wn.App. 270, 276-78 (1977); I.

State v. Schwab, 98 Wn.App. 179 (1999)

Convictions for both felony murder 2° and manslaughter 1° for a single homicide violate double jeopardy clauses, see also: State v. Johnson, 113 Wn.App. 482 (2002), State v. Meas, 118 Wn.App. 297, 304-07 (2003), see: State v. Schwab, 134 Wn.App. 635 (2006), but see: State v. Schwab, 163 Wn.2d 664, 673-74 (2008); I.

State v. Hescock, 98 Wn.App. 600 (1999)

Defendant is charged with alternative means of committing forgery, following bench trial court convicts of one method, is silent as to the other, state concedes on appeal that evidence was insufficient to support conviction of first method, seeks remand for fact finding on second; held: silence by the trier of fact bars further prosecution, State v. Davis, 190 Wash. 164, 166-67 (1937), Green v. United States, 2 L.Ed.2d 199 (1957), but see: State v. Wright, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009), State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009), State v. Fuller, 185 Wn.2d 30 (2016), see also: State v. Pruitt, 145 Wn.App. 784 (2008); while a case may be remanded where findings and conclusions are incomplete, State v. Head, 136 Wn.2d 619, 622-23 (1998), State v. Alvarez, 128 Wn.2d 1, 19 (1995), here there were no findings as to the alternative means, thus jeopardy precludes remand, State v. A.M., 163 Wn.App. 414, 423-26 (2011); II.

State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000)

Defendant and co-conspirator participate in a criminal enterprise which includes stealing, stripping, repurchasing and reselling stolen vehicles, are convicted of three counts of conspiracy; held: a single agreement to commit a series of crimes by the same conspirators in which each crime is only one step in the advancement of the scheme as a whole constitutes only one violation of the conspiracy statute, as the legislature intended that there be but a single unit of prosecution, Braverman v. United States, 87 L.Ed. 23 (1942), State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629

(1998), State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2000), cf.: State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007), State v. Canter, 17 Wn.App.2d 728 (2021); 9-0.

State v. Soonalole, 99 Wn.App. 207 (2000)

Defendant molests victim in car, stops, drives, stops, molests her again, is convicted of two counts of child molestation; held: considering time, place and defendant's intent, the events involved separate units of prosecution, thus no double jeopardy violation, State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 113 (1999), State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629, 634 (1998), State v. Grantham, 84 Wn.App. 854, 860 (1997), State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 611-12 (2006); I.

State v. Skenandore, 99 Wn.App. 494, 501 (2000)

Prison discipline does not bar a subsequent criminal prosecution for the same conduct, State v. Williams, 57 Wn.2d 231, 232 (1960); II.

State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776, 789-93 (2000), aff'd, on other grounds, 147 Wn.2d 238 (2002)

Murder and assault, based upon the same act directed at the same victim, violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Valentine, 108 Wn.App. 24, 27-29 (2001), State v. Gohl, 109 Wn.App. 817, 820-22 (2001), Pers. Restraint of Burchfield, 111 Wn.App. 892 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 814-23 (2004), State v. Weber, 127 Wn.App. 879, 884-88 (2005), 159 Wn.2d 252, 265-69 (2006), cf.: State v. Esparza, 135 Wn.App. 54 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Borrero, 161 Wn.2d 532 (2007), State v. Mandanas, 163 Wn.App. 712 (2011), State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623 (2013), State v. Hart, 188 Wn.App. 453, 457-60 (2015), even though sentences run concurrently, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 774-75 (1995), Ball v. United States, 84 L.Ed.2d 740 (1985), see also: State v. Johnson, 113 Wn.App. 482 (2002), State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870 (2003), State v. Meas, 118 Wn.App. 297, 304 (2003); III.

State v. Root, 141 Wn.2d 701 (2000)

Unit of prosecution for sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68A.040, is each photo session per minor, not each photograph, reversing, in part, State v. Root, 95 Wn.App. 333 (1999), see: State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870 (2009),State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142 Wn.2d 165 (2000)

Two separately located and self-contained marijuana grow operations are separate units of prosecution and, if charged and convicted in two counts, do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441 (1991), State v. Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 755 (1995), distinguishing State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), see: State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721 (2003), cf.: State v. Chenoweth, 127 Wn.App. 444, 462-63 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 160 Wn.2d 454 (2007); affirms Pers. Restraint of Davis, 95 Wn.App. 917 (1999); 7-2.

State v. Jones, 102 Wn.App. 89, 97-98 (2000)

Jury hangs on deadly weapon allegation, defendant is sentenced without it, new trial granted on appeal, state re-alleges deadly weapon allegation, jury finds defendant was armed; held: federal double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial of sentencing enhancement upon retrial after successful appeal; II.

State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2000)

Defendant steals from same victim using different schemes, is charged with three counts of theft 1° during the same intervening period; held: because the legislature's intent as to multiple punishment is unclear, the rule of lenity obliges that the unit of prosecution for theft 1° from the same victim over the same time precludes multiple counts, State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142 Wn.2d 165 (2000), State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327 (2003), see: State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 331-41 (2003), but see: State v. K.R., 169 Wn.App. 742 (2012), cf.: State v. Reeder, 181 Wn.App. 897, 928-31 (2014), 184 Wn.2d 805 (2015); issue may be raised for first time on appeal; I.

State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898, 904-07 (2000)

Defendant is convicted of possession of marijuana with intent to manufacture and possession of more than 40 grams of marijuana, both for the same marijuana; held: while possession of marijuana has an additional element (40 g.), thus offenses are not legally identical under same evidence test, distinguishing State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119, 123 (1997), the legislature did not intend that one would be convicted of both, see: State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776, 790 (2000) , aff'd, on other grounds, 147 Wn.2d 238 (2002), thus convictions violate double jeopardy, lesser possession charge is dismissed; III.

State v. Ahluwalia, 143 Wn.2d 527 (2001)

Defendant is acquitted of murder 1°, jury hung on murder 2° as lesser, at retrial defendant convicted of murder 2°; held: neither double jeopardy clauses nor RCW 10.43.050 bar successive prosecutions following a mistrial due to hung jury on lesser included offense, see: State v. Russell, 33 Wn.App. 579, aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 101 Wn.2d 349 (1984), State v. Padilla, 84 Wn.App. 523, 526 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Westling, 106 Wn.App. 884 (2001)

Defendant, angry at victim, sets his car on fire which burns two other cars, is convicted of three counts of arson 2º, seeks dismissal of two counts on double jeopardy grounds; held: unit of prosecution of arson is a fire, separate counts of arson are appropriate for each person damaged by a fire against whom malice is provable; evidence is sufficient to find malice on each count based upon defendant's willful disregard of the rights of the owners of nearby cars (dicta); I.

State v. Timothy K., 107 Wn.App. 784 (2001)

Defendant may be convicted of malicious harassment and malicious mischief 2° based upon same conduct, see: State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), distinguishing State v. Lynch, 93 Wn.App. 716 (1999); I.

Shuman v. Dep't of Licensing, 108 Wn.App. 673 (2001)

At DUI trial, district court finds that defendant did not "wrongfully refuse to submit" to breath test; at DOL hearing, department declines to find collateral estoppel as district court did not hold a "fully litigated and contested evidentiary hearing;" held: collateral estoppel will apply where the party estopped has had a full and fair opportunity to present its case, Hanson v.

Snohomish, 121 Wn.2d 552, 561 (1993), see: Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999), thus remanded for determination of privity, see also: LeMond v. Dep't of Licensing, 143 Wn.App. 797 (2008); III.

State v. Moses, 145 Wn.2d 370 (2002)

Conviction in tribal court does not preclude prosecution in state court for similar offense based upon same incident because Indian tribes are not among the sovereigns included within RCW 10.43.040; affirms, on different grounds, State v. Moses, 104 Wn.App. 153 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Cox, 109 Wn.App. 779 (2002)

Trial court orders defendant in custody whereupon he escapes from courtroom, upon return is held in summary contempt, later is charged with and pleads guilty to escape; held: a guilty plea does not waive double jeopardy claim, Menna v. New York, 46 L.Ed.2d 195 (1975); because contempt and escape have separate elements, they are not the same offense and defendant can be punished for each, United States v. Dixon, 125 L.Ed.2d 556 (1993); II.

Pers. Restraint of Burchfield, 111 Wn.App. 892 (2002)

Convictions for assault 1˚ and manslaughter for the same act violate double jeopardy clauses, State v. Valentine, 108 Wn.App. 24 (2001), State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776 (2000), Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 814-22 (2004), State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623 (2013), cf.: State v. Esparza, 135 Wn.App. 54 (2006) Pers. Restraint of Borrero, 161 Wn.2d 532 (2007), State v. Mandanas, 163 Wn.App. 712 (2011); remedy is vacation of lesser conviction, State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898, 906-07 (2000) which, here is manslaughter because assault 1˚ is a class A felony and ranked higher than manslaughter, State v. Hinz, 22 Wn.App. 906, 912-13 (1979), see: State v. Weber, 127 Wn.App. 879, 884-88 (2005), 159 Wn.2d 252, 265-69 (2006); I.

State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844, 858-62 (2002)

Robbery 1˚ and threats to bomb, RCW 9.61.160, arising from same incident, do not violate double jeopardy clause because bomb threats involve an injury separate and distinct from and not merely incidental to robbery, State v. Johnson, 92 Wn.2d 671, 680 (1979), State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 873-78 (2003); I.

State v. Brooks, 113 Wn.App. 397 (2002)

Defendant breaks into home, assaults two people inside, is convicted of two counts of burglary 1°; held: unit of prosecution for burglary is entering or remaining, thus defendant can only be convicted of one burglary absent distinct acts of entering or remaining, distinguishing State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984); I.

State v. Johnson, 113 Wn.App. 482 (2002)

Defendant is charged with alternative counts of intentional murder and felony murder against same victim, jury convicts of both, court sentences on one count of murder 2°; held: while multiple convictions may violate double jeopardy even where sentences are concurrent, State v. Schwab, 98 Wn.App. 179 (1999), Ball v. United States, 84 L.Ed.2d 740 (1985), State v.

Read, 100 Wn.App. 776, 789-93 (2000), here court treated it as a single conviction and sentenced on a single count, thus defendant was punished only once, State v. Meas, 118 Wn.App. 297, 304-07 (2003), State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 138 (2005); I.

State v. Vasquez, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002)

DOL hearing examiner concludes police lacked probable cause to stop DUI suspect, defendant is later charged with DUI and VUCSA from same stop; held: collateral estoppel will not bar trial court from independently determining probable cause, State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268 (1980), State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990), State v. Williams, 132 Wn.2d 248 (1997), cf.: State v. Longo, 185 Wn.App. 804 (2015), distinguishing Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999); affirms State v. Vasquez, 109 Wn.App. 310 (2001); 9-0.

Sattazahn v. Pennsylvania, 154 L.Ed.2d 588 (2003)

Following conviction of capital murder, jury is deadlocked at penalty phase, per state law trial court sentences defendant to life, defendant prevails on appeal, at new trial defendant is sentenced to death; held: hung jury and sentence to life is not an acquittal for purposes of double jeopardy clause, State v. Benn, 161 Wn.2d 256 (2007), see: State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009), State v. Glasmann, 183 Wn.2d 117 (2015), thus death sentence affirmed; 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Percer, 150 Wn.2d 41 (2003)

Vehicular homicide and felony murder 2°, stemming from the same death, do not violate double jeopardy clause, distinguishing State v. Schwab, 98 Wn.App. 179 (1999); reverses Pers. Restraint of Percer, 111 Wn.App. 843 (2002); 8-1.

State v. Baldwin, 150 Wn.2d 448, 453-57 (2003)

Identity theft, former RCW 9.35.020(1), and forgery do not have the same elements, thus conviction of both is not barred by double jeopardy clause; when offenses harm different victims, they are not factually the same for purposes of double jeopardy analysis, State v. McJimpson, 79 Wn.App. 164, 169 (1995); affirms State v. Baldwin, 111 Wn.App. 631 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Juarez, 115 Wn.App. 881 (2003)

Due to late discovery, trial court indicates it will suppress audiotapes, selects jury then reverses, defense being unprepared reluctantly seeks mistrial, which court grants; held: jeopardy attaches when jury is selected and sworn, Downum v. United States, 10 L.Ed.2d 100 (1963), defendant did not "freely consent" to mistrial, absent "extraordinary and striking" circumstances prompted by a manifest necessity, State v. Browning, 38 Wn.App. 772, 775 (1984), mistrial is inappropriate and retrial is barred by double jeopardy clause, State v. Rich, 63 Wn.App. 743 (1992), State v. Sheets, 128 Wn.App. 119 (2005); here, because trial court proceeded with jury selection before deciding crucial matters necessary to determine that the case was ready to be tried, the manifest necessity was of the trial court's making, thus dismissal is mandated; III.

State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 331-41 (2003)

Where defendant is charged with continuous possession of stolen property during a period of time, the unit of prosecution is a single possession precluding multiple charges based upon different owners of the stolen property, see: State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2001), see: State v. Ose, 156 Wn.2d 140 (2005), cf.: State v. Mason, 2 Wn.App.2d 504 (2018); III.

State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 721, 725-27 (2003)

Defendant is observed picking up rocks of cocaine, at arrest police find crack pipe with cocaine residue, defendant is convicted of attempted possession of cocaine and possession of cocaine; held: because the conduct occurred at the same location, at the same time, and violated the same underlying statute, albeit one anticipatory offense, double jeopardy clause precludes conviction of the lesser, State v. O'Connor, 87 Wn.App. 119 (1997), State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998), State v. Villanueva-Gonzalez, 180 Wn.2d 975 (2014); I.

State v. Cole, 117 Wn.App. 870, 873-78 (2003)

Defendant robs with a knife, cuts victim, is convicted of assault 2° and attempted robbery 1°; held: because elements are different, State v. Gocken, 128 Wn.2d 95, 101-02 (1995), and legislature intended to impose multiple punishments, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 776 (1995), double jeopardy clause does not preclude convictions on both offenses; I.

State v. Williams, 118 Wn.App. 178, 182-83 (2003)

Defendant, having been in a collision while impersonating another, signs settlement checks, release of claims, a "client information sheet" for counsel and a chiropractor's patient history form in false name, is convicted of multiple counts; held: unit of prosecution for forgery is each written instrument falsely made, not a single intent to defraud; II.

State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327 (2003)

State may properly charge a lawyer with a separate count of theft for each discrete unauthorized withdrawal he made from his trust account, State v. K.R., 169 Wn.App. 742 (2012), distinguishing State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2000); I.

State v. Mullin-Coston, 152 Wn.2d 107 (2004)

Jury acquits co-defendant of murder 1º, convicts of murder 2º, at subsequent trial different jury convicts defendant of murder 1º, defendant seeks reduction based upon collateral estoppel; held: nonmutual collateral estoppel does not apply in criminal proceedings, Standefer v. United States, 64 L.Ed.2d 689 (1980); affirms State v. Mullin-Coston,115 Wn.App. 679 (2003); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 814-22 (2004)

Assault and attempted murder of the same victim based on the same act violates double jeopardy, State v. Valentine, 108 Wn.App. 24, 27-29 (2001), State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776, 789-93 (2000), aff'd, on other grounds, 147 Wn.2d 238 (2002), Pers. Restraint of Burchfield, 111 Wn.App. 892 (2002), State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623 (2013), cf.: State v. Esperza, 135 Wn.App. 54 (2006), State v. Mandanas, 163 Wn.App. 712 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Collins, 121 Wn.App. 16 (2004)

Defendant, while on community custody, commits new crimes, DOC sanctions defendant to jail, RCW 9.94A.737, after which prosecutor moves to modify sentence, trial court imposes more jail time, RCW 9.94A.634(3)(c) based upon same violations; held: neither double jeopardy clause nor collateral estoppel preclude trial court from imposing a sanction for acts already punished by DOC, see: State v. Prado, 86 Wn.App. 573 (1997), In re Pers. Restraint of Mayner, 107 Wn.2d 512, 521 (1986), Standlee v. Smith, 83 Wn.2d 405, 407 (1974); II.

State v. Maestas, 124 Wn.App. 352 (2004)

When an exceptional sentence is reversed because it was not based upon a jury determination of aggravating factors, Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), double jeopardy clause does not preclude state from submitting those factors to a jury and imposing an exceptional sentence on remand; I.

Smith v. Massachusetts, 160 L.Ed.2d 914 (2005)

Midway through jury trial, judge acquits defendant of one offense, later court reverses herself and allows that offense to go to jury, which convicts; held: double jeopardy clause of the Fifth Amendment prohibits reexamination of a court-decreed acquittal to the same extent it prohibits reexamination of an acquittal by a jury, State v. Mershon, 43 Wn.App. 132 (1986), Auburn v. Hedlund, 137 Wn.App. 494 (2007), reversed, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 645 (2009), cf.: United States v. Wilson, 43 L.Ed.2d 232 (1975); 5-4.

State v. Graham, 153 Wn.2d 400 (2005)

Defendant endangers three people in her car, is convicted of three counts of reckless endangerment; held: unit of prosecution for reckless endangerment applies to each victim, thus three charges do not violate double jeopardy, State v. Ramos, 152 Wn.App. 684, 693-96 (2009), distinguishing State v. Westling, 145 Wn.2d 607, 610 (2002); affirms: State v. A.G., 117 Wn.App. 462 (2003).

State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705 (2005)

Defendant forces owner and cashier of gas station into office at knife point, demands money, owner gives defendant deposit bag, defendant also steals owner's truck keys and truck, later, defendant forces manager and assistant manager of another gas station to storage area, steals money and manager's cellular telephone, is convicted of four counts of robbery with four deadly weapon enhancements; held: unit of prosecution for robbery must encompass both a taking of property and a forcible taking against the will of the person from whom or from whose presence the property is taken, but multiple counts may not be based on multiple items of property taken from the same person at the same time nor may multiple counts be based on a single taking from or from the presence of multiple persons even if each has an interest in the property, at 720 ¶ 30; here, because defendant stole cash from the presence of the cashier and truck keys from owner, he was properly convicted of the first two counts, and because he forcibly took cash from the assistant manager and the cell phone from manager, he was properly convicted of the second two counts, Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020), see: State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984), State v. Larkin, 70 Wn.App. 349 (1993), State v. Molina, 83

Wn.App. 144, 146-67 (1996), State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798 (2008); affirms State v. Tvedt, 116 Wn.App. 316 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005)

To determine if different crimes based on the same conduct violate double jeopardy clause, court must see if (1) statutes authorize separate punishments, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777-78 (1995), State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798, 802 (2008), (2) are the two crimes, as charged and proved, the same in law and in fact, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), (3) do the crimes merge, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 419 (1983), and (4) did the commission of the "included" crime have an independent purpose or effect from the other crime?, State v. Frohs, 83 Wn.App. 803 (1996), State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006); legislature intended to punish assault 1° and robbery 1° separately, but not robbery 1° and assault 2°; assault 2° and robbery 1° will generally merge unless the offenses have an independent purpose or effect, State v. Kier, supra., State v. Chesnokov, 175 Wn.App. 345 (2013), State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814 (2013), cf.: State v. Wade, 133 Wn.App. 855, 870-72 (2006), State v. Lindsay, 171 Wn.App. 808, 840-48 (2012), reversed, on different grounds, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014), State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 951-56 (2013), but see: State v. Esparza, 135 Wn.App. 54, 64-67 (2006), State v. Amos, 147 Wn.2d 217 (2008); affirms State v. Freeman,118 Wn.2d 365 (2003) and State v. Zumwalt, 119 Wn.App. 126 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Jackman, 125 Wn.App. 552, 561-63 (2005)

Communicating with a minor for immoral purposes and exploitation of a minor for the same acts do not violation double jeopardy, but see: State v. Jackman, 156 Wn.2d 736 (2006); II.

State v. O'Neal, 126 Wn.App. 395, 415-17 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007)

Convictions for manufacturing marijuana, RCW 69.50.401(a)(ii), and manufacturing methamphetamine, RCW 69.50.401(a)(iii), do not violate double jeopardy clause; because the acts violate different statutes, thus "same evidence" rule, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), rather than "unit of prosecution" analysis, Pers. Restraint of Davis, 142 Wn.2d 165, 175 (2000) applies; II.

State v. Heaven, 127 Wn.App. 156 (2005)

Defendant is charged with three counts of child molestation against same victim over same charging period, information does not identify specific acts, state does not elect during trial, trial court gives unanimity instruction, jury acquits of two counts, hangs on third, trial court dismisses third count for double jeopardy violation; held: because nothing would prevent a second jury from convicting defendant for incidents for which he was acquitted, double jeopardy clause precludes the state from retrying defendant, see: Ashe v. Swenson, 25 L.Ed.2d 469 (1970), Dowling v. United States, 107 L.Ed.2d 708 (1990), Bravo-Fernandez v. United States, 580 U.S. 5, 137 S.Ct. 352, 196 L.Ed.2d 242 (2016), see: Currier v. Virginia, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2144, 201 L.Ed.2d 650 (2018); to avoid double jeopardy, state must elect and request special verdicts requiring jury to identify act or acts upon which it relies for each verdict; I.

State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563 (2005)

Kidnapping and robbery convictions for robbing victim and binding him up in bathroom of store do not violate double jeopardy nor do they merge, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983), Pers. Restraint of Fletcher, 113 Wn.2d 42, 50 (1989), State v. Johnson, 96 Wn.2d 926 (1982), State v. McFarland, 73 Wn.App. 66-69 (1994), State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006), State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820, 828-33 (2012), State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), see: State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), see: State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, reversed, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), State v. Lindsay, 171 Wn.App. 808, 840-48 (2012), reversed, on different grounds, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); 5-4.

State v. Eggleston, 129 Wn.App. 418, 426-35 (2005), 164 Wn.2d 61 (2008)

In aggravated murder of police officer trial, jury finds defendant guilty of lesser murder 2º, answers interrogatory that only applied to aggravated murder "no" that defendant knew victim was an officer performing official duties, in retrial on murder 2º following reversal, state offers evidence that defendant knew victim was an officer and that defendant premeditated the killing; held: neither premeditation nor defendant's knowledge of victim's official status were ultimate facts the state had to prove to convict defendant of murder 2º, thus collateral estoppel does not preclude the state offering the evidence; II.

State v. Ose, 156 Wn.2d 140 (2005)

Unit of prosecution for possession of stolen access device, RCW 9A.56.160(1)(c) is one count per access device, State v. Douglas, 50 Wn.App. 776 (1988), see: State v. Mason, 2 Wn.App.2d 504 (2018), cf.: State v. McReynolds, 117 Wn.App. 309, 331-41 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Melick, 131 Wn.App. 835 (2006)

Conviction of taking a motor vehicle without permission and possessing stolen property of the same vehicle is not a double jeopardy violation, as there is no express or implied legislative intent, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 771-72 (2005), offenses do not meet same evidence test, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed. 306 (1932), State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 (1995), State v. Hite, 3 Wn.App. 9, 12 (1970), nor do offenses merge, State v. Parmelee, 108 Wn.App. 702, 710 (2001), however one cannot be both a principal thief and the receiver of stolen goods, State v. Hancock, 44 Wn.App. 297, 301 (1986), Milanovich v. United States, 5 L.Ed.2d 773 (1961); remedy is that only TMV conviction may stand, United States v. Gaddis, 47 L.Ed.2d 222 (1976), State v. Hancock, supra., even though punishment for PSP is greater; I.

State v. Leyda, 157 Wn.2d 335 (2006)

Unit of prosecution for identity theft where defendant possesses multiple pieces of identification belonging to one person is one count for each victim's means of identification or financial information, not one count per use, State v. Fisher, 139 Wn.App. 578, 582-85 (2007); reverses, in part, State v. Leyda, 122 Wn.App. 633 (2004); 7-2.

State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006)

Defendant is charged with aggravated murder 1º, jury is instructed to first consider crime charged and, if it acquits or is unable to agree on greater, can move to lesser, jury leaves verdict form for aggravated murder blank, convicts of lesser felony murder/assault which is later vacated, Pers Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), state refiles aggravated murder; held: jurors leaving verdict form blank means on its face that the jury was unable to agree which is not an implied acquittal, thus jeopardy is not terminated and state may re-try defendant on the greater offense, State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777, 789 (2006)(Sanders, J., concurring), State v. Scott, 145 Wn.App. 884 (2008), State v. Wright, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009), State v. Glasmann, 183 Wn.2d 117 (2015), see: State v. Allen,k 1 Wn.App.2d 1 774 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Linton, 156 Wn.2d 777 (2006)

In assault 1º trial, jury is instructed to first consider greater and then, if it acquits or is unable to reach a verdict as to greater it can then consider lesser, jury is silent as to greater, convicts of assault 2º, trial court inquires of jurors who respond they were hung on greater, state seeks to retry defendant on assault 1º, trial court refuses; held: where court instructs jury that, if they are unable to agree on greater offense, they may consider lesser, State v. Labanowski, 117 Wn.2d 405 (1991), State v. Watkins, 31 Wn.App. 485 (1982), aff'd, 99 Wn.2d 166 (1983), then it is error for court to inquire into jurors' thinking about the greater, and thus jury implicitly acquitted defendant of greater, State v. Kirk, 64 Wn.App. 788, 789-90 (1992), but see: State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256 (2007), 165 Wn.2d 627 (2009), State v. Scott, 145 Wn.App. 884 (2008) affirms State v. Linton, 122 Wn.App. 73 (2004); 9-0 on result.

State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 663, 667-71 (2006)

Felony violation of a no contact order and assault from a single incident, where the assault is the factor that causes the no contact order to be a felony, RCW 26.50.110(4), were intended by the legislature to have separate punishments, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 771 (2005), thus do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006), State v. Novikoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 166 (2017); I.

State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006)

The crime of assault in violation of a court order, RCW 26.50.110(4), and assault 2º do not violate double jeopardy as legislature intended to punish separately both, State v. Novikoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 166 (2017), see: State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 664, 665 (2006), and do not merge, see: State v. Louis, 155 Wn.2d 563, 571 (2005); convictions of assault 2º with intent to commit felony harassment and felony harassment do violate double jeopardy, see: State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 778 (2005); II.

State v. Schwab, 134 Wn.App.635 (2006), aff'd, State v. Schwab, 163 Wn.2d 664 (2008)

Defendant is convicted of felony murder/assault and manslaughter for same homicide, Court of Appeals vacates manslaughter conviction, State v. Schwab, 98 Wn.App. 179 (1999), murder conviction is later vacated, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), on remand trial court reinstates manslaughter conviction; held: validity of jury's verdict on manslaughter remains unimpaired, original vacation was to avoid double punishment, thus trial court properly reinstated manslaughter conviction when the erroneous charge of felony murder was set aside, see: State v. Ward, 125 Wn.App. 138 (2005), State v. Turner, 169 Wn.2d 448 (2010), State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 832-35 (2012), ; I.

State v. Stivason, 134 Wn.App. 648 (2006)

Military nonjudicial punishment for DUI does not statutorily prevent prosecution in state court, per 1999 amendments to RCW 10.43.040 in response to State v. Ivie, 136 Wn.App. 173 (1998); II.

State v. Esparza, 135 Wn.App. 54, 61-64 (2006)

Defendants enter jewelry store, point guns, announce it's a robbery, one defendant is shot by store owner, other defendant fires his weapon at the owner, shot defendant is convicted of attempted robbery 1º, assault 1º as accomplice to shooter, assault 2º based upon his own conduct; held: because it is not clear what specific event or events constituted the substantial step taken to commit attempted robbery, double jeopardy was not violated because it was not required for state to prove facts sufficient to convict of assault 2º to prove attempted robbery, Pers. Restraint of Borrero, 161 Wn.2d 532 (2007), State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798, 807 (2008), distinguishing Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 814-22 (2004); I.

State v. Weber, 159 Wn.2d 252, 265-70 (2006)

Defendant is convicted of assault 1° and attempted murder 2° of same victim, trial court vacates assault; held: while two charges violating double jeopardy may go to trial, Ball v. United States, 84 L.Ed.2d 740 (1985), Ohio v. Johnson, 81 L.Ed.2d 425 (1984), remedy is to vacate the charge with the lower penalty, Pers. Restraint of Burchfield, 111 Wn.App. 892, 899-900 (2002), State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776, 778 (2000), State v. League, 167 Wn.2d 672 (2009); affirms State v. Weber, 127 Wn.App. 879, 884-88 (2005); 5-4.

Auburn v. Hedlund, 137 Wn.App. 494, 503-06 (2007), reversed, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 645 (2009)

At end of city's case, trial court dismisses DUI charge, city appeals, defense does not raise double jeopardy in trial court; held: double jeopardy may be raised for first time on appeal, State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705, 709 n.1 (2005); where trial court dismisses on the merits, double jeopardy precludes retrial absent the trial court's reconsideration prior to entry of a written judgment, Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013), distinguishing State v. Collins, 112 Wn.2d 303 (1989), see: Smith v. Massachusetts, 160 L.Ed.2d 914 (2005); I.

State v. Womac, 160 Wn.2d 643 (2007)

Defendant is convicted of homicide by abuse, felony murder and assault on same victim for same acts, trial court sentences for most serious offense, leaves other convictions on defendant's record; held: while state may properly charge multiple counts even though convictions on all counts may not stand where double jeopardy protections are violated, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769, 777 n.3 (1995), convictions for other counts must be vacated, State v. Turner, 169 Wn.2d 448 (2010), State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814 (2013), judgment may not stand, Pers. Restraint of Strand, 171 Wn.2d 817 (2011), see: State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 832-35 (2012), State v. Howard, 182 Wn.App. 91, 99-100 (2014), State v. Caril, 23 Wn.App.2d 416 (2022); reverses, in part, State v. Womac,130 Wn.App. 450 (2005), State v. League, 167 Wn.2d 672 (2009); 8-1.

State v. George, 160 Wn.2d 727, 741-45 (2007)

At a no contact order violation pretrial hearing before jury selection, trial court finds that state could not prove service of the order and dismisses "with prejudice," state refiles in superior court; held: "dismissal with prejudice" has no "talismanic quality for purposes of the Double Jeopardy Clause," Serfass v. United States, 43 L.Ed.2d 265, 276 (1975); defendant had not waived jury nor was a jury impaneled, defendant was not at risk of a determination of guilt, jeopardy had not attached, thus trial was not precluded; 9-0.

State v. Benn, 161 Wn.2d 256, 262-64 (2007)

In aggravated murder trial, jury leaves one of two aggravating factor special verdicts blank, answers "yes" to other, case is reversed, state resubmits same special verdicts to jury which convicts and answers "yes;" held: a jury's non-unanimous failure to find the existence of an aggravating factor does not constitute an acquittal of that factor for double jeopardy purposes, Poland v. Arizona, 90 L.Ed.2d 123 (1986), cf.: Ring v. Arizona, 153 L.Ed.2d 556 (2002), Sattazahn v. Pennsylvania, 154 L.Ed.2d 588 (2003), see: State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018); reverses State v. Benn, 130 Wn.App. 308 (2005); 7-2.

Pers. Restraint of Borrero, 161 Wn.2d 532 (2007)

Defendant stuffs victim into duffle bag, drives him to river and throws him in, is convicted of kidnapping 1° and attempted murder; held: where one crime is an attempt and the information does not identify the facts that comprise the element of substantial step, and different facts would support the two convictions, double jeopardy is not violated, State v. Esparza, 135 Wn.App. 54, 61-64 (2006), see: State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798, 807 (2008); 8-1.

State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007)

In a single conversation with undercover officer, defendant solicits murder of four people, is convicted of four counts of solicitation to commit murder; held: unit of prosecution for solicitation, like conspiracy, criminalizes the act of engaging another to commit a crime, centered on each solicitation regardless of the number of crimes of objects of solicitation, State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000), State v. Jensen, 164 Wn.2d 943 (2008), see: State v. Hall, 168 Wn.2d 726 (2010), reversing State v. Varnell, 132 Wn.App. 441, 452-53 (2006), cf.: State v. Canter, 17 Wn.App.2d 728 (2021); 7-2.

State v. Gaworski, 138 Wn.App. 141 (2007)

Possession of precursor ingredients and manufacturing methamphetamine, RCW 69.50.101(p), do not violate the double jeopardy clause, at 146-47, State v. Brewer, 145 Wn.App. 666 (2009); enhancement for manufacturing meth in the presence of a minor, RCW 9.94A.605, does not merge with child endangerment, RCW 9A.42.100, at 147-48; possession of pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture meth, RCW 69.50.440, and possession of anhydrous ammonia with intent to manufacture meth, have the same unit of prosecution, at 149-50; I.

State v. Sutherby, 138 Wn.App. 609, 613-16 (2007) , 165 Wn.2d 870, 878-83 (2009)

Simultaneously possessing multiple materials of child pornography, RCW 9.68.070, 9.68A.011(2), in the same location is one unit of prosecution, see: State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015), but see: RCW 9.68A.001 (2010); I.

State v. Stein, 140 Wn.App. 43, 61-63 (2007)

Jury acquits of murder, convicts of other counts which are reversed on appeal, at retrial court admits evidence of the acquitted murder case; held: while collateral estoppel will preclude the government from offering evidence that a jury necessarily found the state failed to prove, State v. Eggleston, 129 Wn.App. 418, 426-27 (2005), 164 Wn.2d 61 (2008), Ashe v. Swenson, 25 L.Ed.2d 469 (1970), here the prior acquittal did not determine an ultimate issue in the present case, Dowling v. United States, 107 L.Ed.2d 708 (1990), see: Yeager v. United States, 174 L.Ed.2d 78 (2009), Currier v. Virginia, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2144, 201 L.Ed.2d 650 (2018), state having sought to admit evidence of the acquitted murder pursuant to ER 404(b), as evidence that defendant was part of an ongoing conspiracy to eliminate people he saw as obstacles to prospective wealth need only be proved by a preponderance, collateral estoppel does not bar the use of the evidence, see: Pers. Restraint of Moi, 184 Wn.2d 575 (2015); II.

State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357, 364-71 (2007)

In four count rape of a child case with the same charging period in each count, jury is instructed that they must unanimously agree as to which act or acts have been proved, but is not instructed that a conviction on each charged count must be based on a separate and distinct underlying incident and that proof of any one incident cannot support a finding of guilt on more than one count; held: while defendant's right to jury unanimity was protected by instructing pursuant to WPIC 4.25, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), failure to instruct in a sexual abuse case where multiple identical counts are charged within the same period that jury must find separate and distinct acts for each count violates defendant's right to be free from double jeopardy, State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 431 (1996), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 846 (1991), State v. Ellis, 71 Wn.App. 400, 404-06 (1993), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923 (2008), State v. Carter, 156 Wn.App. 561 (2010), State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 400-03 (2012), see: Pers. Restraint of Delgado, 160 Wn.App. 898 (2011), but see: State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-66 (2011), State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 599-603 (2013), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 822-26 (2014); I.

State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654 (2008)

Defendant is tried for murder 1° with intentional murder 2° and felony murder 2°/assault as lessers, jury is silent as to murder 1°, answers interrogatories that jury is not unanimous as to intentional murder 2° but is unanimous guilty for felony murder/assault, which is reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002); on remand trial court permits amendment to manslaughter 1°; held: when a jury renders a guilty verdict as to a single crime, but one of the alternative means for committing that crime is later held invalid on appeal, even if for insufficient evidence, double jeopardy does not bar retrial on the remaining valid alternative mean, State v. Joy, 121 Wn.2d 333, 345-46 (1993); because intentional murder and felony murder are alternative means of committing murder 2° and jury was not unanimous as to intentional murder, and because manslaughter is a lesser of intentional murder, defendant may be retried for manslaughter, State v. Fuller, 185 Wn.2d 30 (2016), see also: State v. Ramos,124 Wn.App. 334 (2004); 8-1.

State v. Eggleston, 164 Wn.2d 61 (2008)

Jury acquits defendant of murder 1º, convicts of lesser murder 2º, answers special interrogatory that only applied to murder 1º that defendant did not know victim was a police officer, conviction is reversed on appeal, at retrial court gives both self defense instruction if jury knew victim was a police officer and a self defense instruction if jury did not know victim was an officer; held: because the original special interrogatory that jury erroneously answered was surplusage, neither double jeopardy nor collateral estoppel preclude the state from offering evidence of defendant's knowledge, see: State v. Thomas, 166 Wn.2d 380, 394-95 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Jensen, 164 Wn.2d 943 (2008)

Solicitation to murder more than one person constitutes a single unit of prosecution where defendant entices, in a single conversation, another to commit murder, State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007), but where defendant entices a different person at a different time and place to murder a separate person, two convictions may follow; 8-1.

State v. Knight, 162 Wn.2d 806 (2008)

Defendant pleads guilty to conspiracy to commit burglary and conspiracy to commit robbery for a single plan; held: where plans serve a single criminal conspiracy, only one count will lie, State v. Williams, 131 Wn.App. 488 (2006), thus dismiss conspiracy to commit burglary; defendant's guilty plea did not waive right to claim double jeopardy on appeal, State v. Cox, 109 Wn.App. 779, 782 (2002), State v. Martin, 149 Wn.App. 689 (2009), Pers. Restraint of Francis, 170 Wn.2d 517 (2010), but see: State v. Amos, 147 Wn.App. 217 (2008); affirms State v. Knight, 134 Wn.App. 103 (2006); 9-0

State v. Hall, 162 Wn.2d 901 (2008)

State may not retry a defendant who has been convicted and objects to vacation of the conviction even if the crime didn't exist, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), State v. Walters, 146 Wn.App. 138 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Walker, 143 Wn.App. 880 (2008)

Defendant steals old growth cedar, states he intended to sell it, is convicted of theft and trafficking in stolen property; held: double jeopardy clause permits a person to be convicted of theft and trafficking of the same property, State v. Strohm, 75 Wn.App. 301, 310-11 (1994), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Owens, 180 Wn.2d 90 (2014), State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 237 (1997), under both different elements, Blockburger v. United States, 76 L.Ed.2d 306 (1932), and, here, different evidence tests, Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 815-20 (2004), State v. Reiff, 14 Wash. 664 (1896), as the evidence to prove one crime would not also completely prove a second crime; II.

State v. Scott, 145 Wn.App. 884 (2008)

Defendant is charged with murder 2º by alternative means of intentional or felony murder/assault, jury convicts, in special interrogatory jury checks box next to felony murder, leaves intentional murder box blank, conviction is reversed, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), at retrial defendant is charged and convicted of manslaughter 1º, on appeal claims double jeopardy precludes conviction; held: failure to check box next to intentional murder is not an applied acquittal, State v. Ervin, 158 Wn.2d 746 (2006), reversal was on legal grounds, State v. Berlin, 133 Wn.2d 541, 550-51 (1997), distinguishing State v. Hescock, 98 Wn.App. 600 (1999), thus defendant was properly charged and convicted of manslaughter; I.

State v. Robinson, 146 Wn.App. 471 (2008)

During trial, bailiff informs prosecutor that jury wanted to see some evidence that had been referred to during testimony, trial court hears from prosecutor who moves for mistrial over defense objection; held: double jeopardy clause precludes a second trial, as there was no manifest necessity for a mistrial; trial court's precipitate action, see: State v. Melton, 97 Wn.App. 327 (1999), failure to question bailiff and jurors, State v. Crowell, 92 Wn.2d 143, 145-47 (1979), failure to consider alternatives to mistrial, State v. Willis, 67 Wn.2d 681, 686 (1966) oblige dismissal absent prejudice to defendant, State v. Hopson, 113 Wn.2d 273, 284 (1989), State v. Jungers, 125 Wn.App. 895, 901-02 (2005); II.

State v. Goldsmith, 147 Wn.App. 317 (2008)

Defendant is charged with child molestation by causing two victims to molest a third but proves at trial that defendant himself molested the victims, jury convicts, trial court arrests judgment but denies dismissal and allows state to amend to retry defendant; held: arrest of judgment was proper because state failed to prove an element of the crime that was charged which requires dismissal with prejudice; III.

State v. Wright, 165 Wn.2d 783 (2009)

Defendants are charged with intentional murder and felony murder as alternatives, jury returns general verdict of guilt after receiving instructions only on felony murder which is later vacated, Pers. Restraint of Andress, 147 Wn.2d 602 (2002), on remand trial court rules that renewed prosecution placed defendants in double jeopardy but permits retrial on lessers; held: because defendant's convictions were reversed because the conviction was on a non-existent invalid charge, they may be retried for the same offense, Montana v. Hall, 95 L.Ed.2d 354 (1987), State v. Gamble, 137 Wn.App. 892, 901 (2007), aff'd, 168 Wn.2d 161 (2010); because defendants were charged by alternative means and not separate offenses, failure to reach a verdict on one of the means is not an applied acquittal, State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654, 661 (2008),State v. Fuller, 185 Wn.2d 30 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 681-86 (2009)

Convictions for rape of a child and rape due to nonconsent by reason of mental incapacity or physical helplessness which arise out of the same act violate double jeopardy, reversing, in part, State v. Hughes, 142 Wn.App. 213 (2007), cf.: State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Rivera-Santos, 166 Wn.2d 722 (2009)

Trooper observes defendant drive erratically, observes him cross into Oregon where he is stopped and arrested by Oregon police, defendant is convicted of DUI in Oregon then prosecuted in Washington; held: no part of defendant's Washington DUI was committed in Oregon and his Oregon DUI was not committed "under such circumstances that [Washington] had jurisdiction," RCW 10.43.040, thus RCW 10.43.040 does not bar Washington prosecution; 9-0.

State v. Martin, 149 Wn.App. 689 (2009)

Defendant pleads guilty to assault 2º and attempted rape for the same act, argues on appeal that sentence for rape must be vacated as they constitute same offense; held: an indivisible plea agreement does not waive double jeopardy challenges to one count where the violation is clear from the record and was not otherwise waived, State v. Knight, 162 Wn.2d 806 (2008), Pers. Restraint of Francis, 170 Wn.2d 517, 522-23 (2010); I.

Yeager v. United States, 174 L.Ed.2d 78 (2009)

Defendant is convicted of some counts, jury hangs on others, government seeks retrial on hung counts, defendant seeks to preclude government from relitigating issues that were necessarily decided by acquittal; held: a mistrial is a non-event for double jeopardy purposes, thus analysis is the same as if government, after acquittal, indicted defendant on new related charges, Ashe v. Swenson, 25 L.Ed.2d 469 (1970), Currier v. Virginia, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2144, 201 L.Ed.2d 650 (2018); to identify what a jury necessarily determined in acquittals, court should scrutinize the jury's decisions to determine if a critical issue of ultimate fact which the jury decided is an issue in the pending charges; 6-3.

State v. Fuentes, 150 Wn.App. 444 (2009)

Defendant threatens to kill a witness, is convicted of both felony harassment and intimidating a witness; held: because each crime requires proof of additional facts not necessary to prove the other crime, they do not violate double jeopardy clauses, State v. Meneses, 169 Wn.2d 586, 592-95 (2010); I.

State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66, 94-96 (2009)

Sentencing enhancements, including aggravating factors, do not violate double jeopardy clause as legislature intended additional punishment; II.

State v. Haines, 151 Wn.App. 428 (2009)

In stalking case, RCW 9A.46.110, based upon repeated acts of harassment convictions of both stalking and harassment do not violate double jeopardy because the predicate acts supporting stalking were distinct from the pattern of conduct that they together comprised, State v. Parmelee, 108 Wn.App. 702707-08 (2001); I.

State v. Hall, 168 Wn.2d 726 (2010)

Defendant makes numerous telephone calls from jail seeking to persuade a witness to absent herself or testify falsely, is convicted of four counts of witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120; held: unit of prosecution for witness tampering is the attempt to induce a witness not to testify or to testify falsely which is complete as soon as defendant attempts to induce the witness, thus only one count was proper, State v. Thomas, 158 Wn.App. 797 (2010), see: State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007), State v. Vars, 157 Wn.App. 482 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Turner, 169 Wn.2d 448 (2010)

Where a defendant is convicted of alternative crimes based on same conduct, trial court must vacate the lesser, and may not do so conditionally and may not issue an order stating that the lesser is a valid conviction for which defendant could be sentenced if the greater is overturned on appeal, even though it may indeed be reinstated if the greater is overturned on appeal, State v. Womac, 160 Wn.2d 643 (2007), State v. Weber, 127 Wn.App. 879, 884-88 (2005), Pers. Restraint of Strandy, 171 Wn.2d 817 (2011), State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 832-35 (2012), State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814 (2013), State v. Howard, 182 Wn.App. 91, 99-100 (2014), State v. Caril, 23 Wn.App.2d 416 (2022); reverses State v. Turner, 144 Wn.App. 279 (2008), State v. Faagata, 147 Wn.App. 236 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Meneses, 169 Wn.2d 586, 592-95 (2010)

Intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.110, and telephone harassment, RCW 9.61.230, do not constitute the same offense, see: State v. Fuentes, 150 Wn.App. 444 (2009), affirms State v. Meneses, 149 Wn.App. 707 (2009); 9-0.

Aberdeen v. Regan, 170 Wn.2d 103 (2010)

Condition of probation is "no criminal violations of the law," defendant is charged with new crimes, is acquitted, same judge finds that they were proved by preponderance and revokes; held: standard for revocation of probation is preponderance of the evidence, not beyond a reasonable doubt, even when the violation is a new crime, Habeas Corpus of Standlee, 83 Wn.2d 405 (1974), acquittal does not collaterally estop a court from revoking for the same conduct; affirms Aberdeen v. Regan, 147 Wn.App. 538 (2008); 8-1.

State v. S.S.Y., 170 Wn.2d 322 (2010)

Juvenile offenses of robbery and assault do not merge as legislature expressed its intent to punish the offenses separately, RCW 13.40.180, distinguishing State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005); II.

State v. Milam, 155 Wn.App. 365 (2010)

Defendant uses stolen ATM card to withdraw money, is convicted of theft 2° and identity theft 2°; held: while the factual prong of the same evidence test was met, the crimes are not the same in law as there are different non-illusory elements, thus convictions do not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), cf.: State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 681-86 (2009); I.

State v. McPhee, 156 Wn.App. 44 (2010)

Defendant is charged with burglary and five counts of possessing property stolen in the burglary, jury acquits of burglary and two counts of PSP, hangs on others, at retrial defense seeks to preclude evidence of the burglary and dismiss PSPs, claiming jury found that he did not know the items were stolen; held: a reasonable jury could have determined that defendant learned items were stolen at different times, thus issue decided at first trial was not identical, State v. Eggleston, 164 Wn.2d 61 (2008); collateral estoppel does not preclude any evidence of the burglary at the second trial, Eggleston, supra., at 71, Dowling v. United States, 493 U.S. 342, 348, 107 L.Ed.2d 708 (1990), see: Currier v. Virginia, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2144, 201 L.Ed.2d 650 (2018), as it was admitted to show that the weapons were stolen and that defendant knew it, not that defendant committed the burglary, plus court gave limiting instruction; III.

State v. Williams, 156 Wn.App. 482, 492-95 (2010)

Defendant strangles victim before and during rape, is convicted of assault 2° and rape 1°; held: the assault was used to effectuate the rape and had no purpose or effect independent of the rape, thus the offenses merge, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 778-79 (2005); III.

State v. Carter, 156 Wn.App. 561 (2010)

Defendant is charged with four counts of rape of a child, apparently over the same charging period, trial court gives standard unanimity instruction, WPIC 4.25, neither party request an instruction that informs the jury that it had to find a "separate and distinct act" for each of the four identically charged rape counts; held: where there are multiple counts that are identically charged, it is manifest constitutional error not to instruct that jury find a separate and distinct act for each count, thus all but one count must be dismissed for double jeopardy violation, State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923 (2008), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 843 (1991), cf.: State v. Corbett, 158 Wn.App. 576 (2010), State v. Carson, 179 Wn.App. 961, 972-80 (2014), but see: State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-66 (2011), State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 599-603 (2013), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 823-26 (2014); II.

State v. Vars, 157 Wn.App. 482 (2010)

A single undressing, observed by more than one person in different spots in the neighborhood establishes a single unit of prosecution for indecent exposure, RCW 9A.88.010 (2003), permitting conviction of one count, see: State v. Hall, 168 Wn.2d 726 (2010); I.

State v. Gatlin, 158 Wn.App. 126, 133-36 (2010)

Convictions for assault 2° with intent to commit gang intimidation and criminal gang intimidation, RCW 9A.46.120, do not violate double jeopardy clause, as legislature intended to distinguish the crimes, address different social concerns and are in different chapters of Title 9A RCW, cf.: State v. Ticeson, 26 Wn.App. 876 (1980); III.

Pers. Restraint of Francis, 170 Wn.2d 517 (2010)

Guilty plea does not waive double jeopardy challenge, State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 681 n.5 (2009), overruling State v. Amos, 147 Wn.App. 217, 226-27 (2008); where defendant pleads guilty to assault 2° and attempted robbery 1°, where the assault elevated the robbery charge to first degree, double jeopardy clause is violated, State v. Chesnokov, 175 Wn.App. 345 (2013), remedy is to vacate the assault conviction; defendant can challenge one conviction of an "indivisible, multiconviction plea agreement" on double jeopardy grounds; 9-0.

State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-66 (2011)

Defendant is charged with multiple counts of rape over the same charging period, instructions require unanimity but do not require that jury must find a "separate and distinct act" for each count; held: it is error not to instruct that jury must find a separate and distinct act for each count where multiple counts are identically charged, State v. Carter, 151 Wn.App. 561 (2010), State v. Berg, 147 Wn.App. 923 (2008), State v. Wallmuller, 164 Wn.App. 890 (2011); despite deficient instructions, where it is manifestly apparent that the jury found separate acts, then appellate court may be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the instructions did not actually effect a double jeopardy violation, State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 599-603 (2013),

State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 823-26 (2014) , State v. Daniels, 183 Wn.App. 109 (2014), State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Marchi*,* 158 Wn.App. 823, 829-33 (2010)

Defendant poisons her 10-year old daughter, is convicted of attempted murder and assault of a child 1°; held: legislature did not intend to punish a one-time assault of a child that satisfies the elements of attempted murder by imposing an additional punishment, thus assault is dismissed; II.

State v. Brown*,* 159 Wn.App. 1, 913 (2010)

Multiple convictions of no contact order violations on separate days do not violate double jeopardy, State v. Allen, 150 Wn.App. 300 (2009); I.

State v. Rice*,* 159 Wn.App. 545, 568-70 (2011), aff'd, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 884 (2012)

Special allegation that victim is less than 15 years old, RCW 9.94A.837, does not violate double jeopardy where defendant is charged with kidnapping 1° which uses child molestation 1° as a predicate offense even though both involve age of victim, State v. Kelley, 168 Wn.2d 72 (2010), State v. Aguirre, 168 Wn.2d 350 (2010), cf.: State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018); II.

State v. Larson*,* 160 Wn.App. 577, 592-93 (2011)

Convictions for assault and drive-by shooting do not violate double jeopardy as each requires proof of facts that the other does not, State v. Statler, 160 Wn.App. 622, 638-39 (2011); 2-1, III.

State v. Mandanas*,* 163 Wn.App. 712, 717-21 (2011)

Defendant points gun at victim, threatens to kill him and hits him in the head with the gun, is convicted of assault 2° and felony harassment; held: harassment criminalizes threats which, by themselves, would not constitute assault, thus the two crimes are not the same offense in law, nor are they the same in fact here because, while pointing the gun and threatening to kill also proved assault, striking victim in the head with the gun is a separate act constituting assault, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795 (2004); I.

Blueford v. Arkansas*,* 566 U.S. 599, 182 L.Ed.2d 937 (2012)

Jury is instructed on charged offense and lessers, sends out a note saying it cannot agree "on any one charge," judge brings jurors into court, foreperson reports jury is unanimous "against" the charged offense, court orders more deliberations after which jury reports it has not reached a verdict, mistrial declared; at retrial, defendant is convicted of cgreater offense; held: oral report of foreperson was not a "final resolution of anything," thus double jeopardy clause does not preclude retrial, see: State v. Strine, 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013); instructions that jury may convict on any one offense or acquit on all were proper under state law, trial court did not abuse discretion by refusing to instruct that jury could acquit on some but not others; 6-3.

State v. Tracer*,* 173 Wn.2d 708, 723 (2012)

Due to conflict, prosecutor appoints special prosecutor who fails to appear at a hearing, defense counsel reports to court that special prosecutor had agreed to reduce charge, trial court appoints a criminal defense attorney who happens to be in the courtroom as special prosecutor, orders attorney to move to reduce charge, takes plea to lesser charge, state appeals; held: judge improperly appointed attorney as special prosecutor, as a criminal defense attorney has a conflict of interest, thus plea was void, thus defendant was not placed twice in jeopardy, affirming, in part, State v. Tracer, 155 Wn.App. 171 (201); 9-0.

State v. O'Brien, 164 Wn.App. 924, 928-30 (2011)

Defendant is ordered to report to jail on four separate cases, fails to appear, is convicted of four counts of bail jumping; held: unit of prosecution for failure to appear under multiple orders is a single unit, defendant can only be punished once, see: State v. Fisher, 139 Wn.App. 578 (2007); I.

State v. Butler, 165 Wn.App. 820, 828-33 (2012)

Defendant beats victim, drags him to another room and robs him, is convicted of robbery and kidnapping; held: kidnapping and robbery do not merge, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983), , State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012), State v. Rattana Keo Phuong, 174 Wn.App. 494 (2013), distinguishing State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, 703 (2004), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), cf.: State v. Lindsay, 171 Wn.App. 808, 840-48 (2012), reversed, on different grounds, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); III.

State v. Harris, 167 Wn.App. 340 (2012)

Convictions for leading organized crime, RCW 9A.82.060(1)(a) (2003), and other crimes that are predicate offenses for leading organized crime do not violate double jeopardy clauses and do not merge; II.

State v. Nysta, 168 Wn.App. 30, 43-51 (2012)

Defendant is convicted of felony harassment (threat to kill) and forcible rape 2°, defendant argues that because the death threat was a basis of the force, double jeopardy clause is violated; held: when a felony threat occurs in the course of a rape, it may be punished separately so long as it is not the evidence required to prove the forcible compulsion, Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795(2004); here, there was evidence of physical force in addition to the death threat; Division I provides good double jeopardy analysis for cases where defendant's act supports charges under two criminal statutes.

State v. K.R., 169 Wn.App. 742 (2012)

Arrestee breaks door handle in police car, then defaces wall in holding cell, is convicted of two counts of malicious mischief; held: unit of prosecution for malicious mischief against same victim in different places and not in rapid succession supports two charges, State v. Rivas, 168 Wn.App. 882 (2012), State v. Kinneman, 120 Wn.App. 327 (2003), but see: State v. Turner, 102 Wn.App. 202 (2000); I.

State v. Polo, 169 Wn.App. 750 (2012)

Defendant is convicted of DUI and possessing a stolen vehicle, on appeal court dismisses possessing a stolen vehicle without prejudice, state refiles, trial court admits DUI conviction to prove defendant was driving; held: collateral estoppel is not established as the issue was not identical, DUI establishes defendant drove a motor vehicle, possessing a stolen vehicle requires proof defendant possessed a specific car; I.

State v. Chouap, 170 Wn.App. 114, 122-26 (2012)

Defendant is convicted of two counts of eluding a pursuing police vehicle for recklessly eluding Tacoma police who stop pursuit, later is pursued by Lakewood police and recklessly eludes them; held: each was a separate unit of prosecution, cf.: State v. Mata, 180 Wn.App. 108 (2014); II.

State v. Clark, 170 Wn.App. 166, 187-94 (2012)

Human trafficking 2°, RCW 9A.40.100(2)(a)(i) (2003), and promoting prostitution 1°, RCW 9A.88.070(1) (2007), do not violate double jeopardy and do not merge; I.

State v. Smith, 177 Wn.2d 533, 545-50 (2013)

Rape 1° and rape of a child 2° based upon same facts and same victim do not violate double jeopardy as they are not legally equivalent and legislature did not intend to prohibit multiple convictions arising from a single sexual act, State v. Calle, 125 Wn.2d 769 (1995), State v. Chenoweth, 185 Wn.2d 218 (2016), distinguishing State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 681-86 (2009); overrules State v. Birgin, 33 Wn.App. 1 (1982); 8-1.

State v. Lindsay, 171 Wn.App. 808, 840-48 (2012), reversed, on different grounds, 180 Wn.2d 423 (2014)

Defendant bursts through victim's front door, chokes, hog-ties, steals items, is convicted of robbery and kidnapping, state argues that crimes had an independent purpose as hog-tying was intended to humiliate; held: restraint was for purpose of facilitating robbery, necessary to allow defendant to steal, victim was not transported from his home, duration lasted no longer than necessary to complete robbery and leave, restraint did not create significant danger, thus restraint was incidental to robbery, convictions merge; co-defendant's assault and robbery convictions merge, State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686, 707 (2004), rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006); 2-1, II.

State v. Grant, 172 Wn.App. 496 (2012)

Defendant pushes into victim's home with gun, ties her up, drags her downstairs, ransacks house, is convicted of robbery and kidnapping; held: separate convictions for robbery 1° and kidnapping 1° do not violate double jeopardy or merge, state does not have to prove that one crime was not incidental to the other, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 422-23 (1983), but see: State v. Korum, 120 Wn.App. 686 (2004), rev'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 614 (2006), see: State v. Berg, 181 Wn.2d 857 (2014); 2-1, I.

Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013)

Trial court grants directed verdict of acquittal after state's case on erroneous belief that state had failed to prove an element of the crime which was not an element; held: trial court's dismissal for insufficiency at close of state's case is an acquittal for double jeopardy purposes even where the dismissal was in error, State v. Karpov, 195 Wn.2d 288 (2020); 8-1.

State v. Strine*,* 176 Wn.2d 742 (2013)

Jury returns verdict forms finding defendant not guilty, trial court polls jury believing it is obligatory, defense does not object, 6 jurors dissent, presiding juror states jury will be unable to reach unanimous verdict, court declares mistrial; held: polling jury is discretionary, CrR 6.16(a)(3), defense failure to object to polling waives review of decision to poll; appellate courts should defer to trial court's determination of a need for a mistrial, Renico v. Lett, 559 U.S. 766, 176 L.Ed.2d 678 (2010), cf.: State v. Jones, 97 Wn.2d 159 (1982), thus double jeopardy clause does not prevent retrial; 9-0.

State v. Land*,* 172 Wn.App. 593, 598-603 (2013)

Defendant is convicted of child molestation and child rape over the same charging period of same victim, no unanimity instruction is given; held: where the only evidence of child rape is penetration, then rape is not the same crime as molestation as the latter requires proof of sexual gratification, rape does n State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-65 (2011), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 849 (1991), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 823-26 (2014)ot; where the only evidence of intercourse supporting child rape is sexual contact involving sex organs and mouth of anus, that act of intercourse, if done for sexual gratification, is both molestation and rape and thus are not separately punishable, so jury instruction requiring separate and distinct acts is required, State v. Sanford, 15 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020), but where state's argument, victim's testimony and to convict instructions make it clear state is not seeking to punish twice for same act, defendant's right to be free from double jeopardy is not violated, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-65 (2011), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 849 (1991), State v. Peña Fuentes, supra, State v. Daniels, 183 Wn.App. 109 (2014), State v. Wilkins, 200 Wn.App. 794, 802-14 (2017), State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809 (2017); I.

State v. McCarter*,* 173 Wn.App. 912 (2013)

Defendant is charged with DUI in district court which dismisses on motion of state in order to pursue felony DUI in superior court, at dismissal district court assesses $250 in fees for preparation and service of bench warrants, RCW 10.01.160 (2008), superior court denies motion to dismiss for double jeopardy; held: because a warrant fee is remedial not punitive, see: State v. Brewster, 152 Wn.App. 856 (2009), its imposition is not punitive by intent or in effect (even though it exceeds the maximum amount permitted by statute and is referred to by the court as a "fine"), thus double jeopardy principles do not apply; III.

State v. Morales*,* 174 Wn.App. 370, 384-88 (2013)

In harassment case, defendant threatens to kill victim on two successive days, is convicted of two counts; held: if a person threatens a single harm, placing victim in fear, unit of prosecution is the threat of harm, not each time and place the threat is repeated to victim or third parties, thus conviction on one of the counts violates double jeopardy clause, cf.: Pers. Restraint of France, 199 Wn;App. 822 (2017); 2-1, II.

State v. Davis, 174 Wn.App. 623 (2013)

Defendant uses pistol to shoot victim, later shoots at victim's last known position with a shotgun, is convicted of attempted murder and assault 2°; held: while assault and attempted murder are the same in law, they are not the same in fact here because the assault was over when defendant committed attempted murder, thus double jeopardy clause is not violated, Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wn.2d 795, 818-20 (2004); II.

State v. Lust, 174 Wn.App. 887 (2013), disapproved, in part, State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 ¶ 18 (2017)

Defendant steals a purse containing credit cards, removes the credit cards, pleads guilty to theft 3° for the purse, is convicted of theft 2° for stealing the access cards, RCW 9A.56.040(1)(c) (2009); held: court must apply "same evidence" rule of statutory construction to determine if statutes really proscribe the same offense, Blockburger v. United States, 284 U.S. 299, 304, 76 L.Ed.2d 306 (1932), theft 3° statute does not require proof that credit cards were access devices, theft 2° statute does not require proof that credit cards were valued under $750, thus offenses are neither legally nor factually identical, no violation of double jeopardy clause applies; offenses that are committed during a single transaction are not necessarily the same offense, State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413, 420-23 (1983), legislature did not clearly indicate the degree of one offense will be elevated if accompanied by conduct constituting the other offense, thus they do not merge; III.

State v. Ralph, 175 Wn.App. 814 (2013)

Defendant hits victim and takes his truck, is convicted of robbery 2° and taking a motor vehicle (TMV) without permission, at sentencing trial court merges the offenses, punishes only for robbery; held: TMV is the "functional equivalent of a lesser included of the" robbery 2° since both crimes required taking of personal property without permission, additional facts elevated TMV to robbery, thus the crimes are the same in fact based upon a single act from a single victim, double jeopardy clauses are violated when the evidence required to support a conviction of one crime would have warranted a conviction of another, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), State v. Reiff, 14 Wash. 664, 667 (1896); merger prohibits double punishment but double jeopardy clauses prohibit double convictions, thus remedy is to vacate the lesser punished crime, State v. Turner, 169 Wn.2d 448, 455 (2010); II.

State v. Knight, 176 Wn.App. 936, 950-56 (2013)

Defendant uses gun to commit robbery, elevating crime to robbery 1°, later assaults victim with different gun and by kicking her, is convicted of assault 2° and robbery 1°, claims merger; held: each crime had an independent purpose or effect, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765, 778-79 (2005), State v. Prater, 30 Wn.App. 512, 516 (1981); II.

Martinez v. Illinois, 572 U.S. 833, 188 L.Ed.2d 1112 (2014)

State announces it is unable to proceed and seeks continuance which is denied, court empanels and swears a jury, state declines to present evidence, defense motion for a directed not guilty verdict is granted, state appeals; held: swearing in jury is a bright line rule that jeopardy attaches, because trial court found state's evidence insufficient there is no doubt defendant may not be retried, Crist v. Bretz, 437 U.S. 28, 35, 98 S.Ct. 2156, 57 L.Ed.2d 24 (1978), Serfass v. United States, 420 U.S. 377, 394, 95 S.Ct. 1055, 43 L.Ed.2d 265 (1975), United States v. Martin Linen Supply Co., 430 U.S. 564, 569, 97 S.Ct. 1349, 51 L.Ed.2d 642 (1977), Downum v. United States, 372 U.S. 734, 83 S.Ct. 1033, 10 L.Ed.2d 100 (1963), Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 133 S.Ct. 1069, 1074-75, 185 L.Ed.2d 124 (2013); per curiam.

State v. Villanueva-Gonzalez, 180 Wn.2d 975 (2014)

Defendant head-butts then attempts to strangle victim, is convicted of assault 2º and lesser assault 4º; held: actions were taken against the same victim within the same short time span, assault is not defined in terms of each physical act against a victim, State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 116-17 (1999), State v. Rodriquez, 187 Wn.App. 922, 936-38 (2015), same evidence/course of conduct test applies where defendant has multiple convictions for violating different statutory provisions, thus double jeopardy clause precludes conviction on both, Pers. Restraint of White, 1 Wn.App.2d 788 (2017); unit of prosecution test is appropriate only where defendant is convicted for violating one statute multiple times, State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629, 633 (1998); affirms State v. Villanueva-Gonzalez, 175 Wn.App. 1 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Daniels, 183 Wn.App. 109 (2014)

Defendant is charged with promoting commercial sexual abuse of a minor and promoting prostitution, evidence overlaps but state "clearly distinguished between the acts constituting one crime from the acts constituting the second crime" in closing, thus convictions did not violate double jeopardy clause, State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 924 (2014), State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 598-603 (2013), as it is "manifestly apparent" that jury convicted based on factually separate and distinct acts; II.

State v. Mata, 180 Wn.App. 108 (2014)

Defendant is convicted of unlawful possession of the same firearm on the same day in Pierce and Yakima Counties; held: unlawful possession of a firearm is a course of conduct crime rather than a discrete act, State v. Kenyon, 150 Wn.App. 826 (2009), while an interruption in possession of a particular firearm might result in different possessions, see: State v. Chouap, 170 Wn.App. 114, 125 (2012), here there was no evidence that the possession was ever interrupted, thus second prosecution violated double jeopardy clause; III.

State v. Howard, 182 Wn.App. 91, 99-100 (2014)

Defendant is found guilty of assault and attempted murder, trial court vacates assault conviction for double jeopardy, appends to judgment and sentence an order that the lesser charge would be reinstated if the greater is vacated on appeal; held: any reference to a vacated lesser in a judgment and sentence violates double jeopardy, State v. Turner, 169 Wn.2d 448, 463 (2010), State v. Caril, 23 Wn.App.2d 416 (2022), thus remanded to strike reference to lesser; II.

State v. Blancaflor, 183 Wn.App. 215, 229-37 (2014)

Three counts of employer's false reporting, RCW 51.48.020(1)(b), each encompassing acts in a calendar year, are separate units of prosecution, distinguishing State v. Durrett, 150 Wn.App. 402 (2009); I.

State v. Anthone, 184 Wn.App. 92, 94-98 (2014)

In securities fraud, RCW 21.20.010 (1959), defrauding of an individual investor is a separate unit of prosecution even if the fraud is perpetrated through a group presentation or through a single document signed by more than one investor

State v. Glasmann, 183 Wn.2d 117 (2015)

Where defendant is charged with greater and lesser offenses and jury is unable to agree regarding the greater but convicts of the lesser which is reversed on appeal, state may retry defendant for the greater without violating double jeopardy clause, State v. Daniels, 160 Wn.2d 256, 265 (2007), adhered to on recons., 165 Wn.2d 627, 628 (2009); 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Moi, 184 Wn.2d 575 (2015)

Defendant is charged with murder and unlawful possession of the firearm that killed the victim, moves to sever which is denied, defendant waives jury as to firearm charge, jury hangs on murder, judge acquits of firearm, state retries murder, defense does not raise double jeopardy challenge, is convicted of the murder with a gun he had been acquitted of possessing; held: of the four elements of collateral estoppel defense must establish (1. issue decided in prior case is identical to the one now, prior adjudication ended in final judgment on the merits, 3. privity, 4. application of doctrine must not work an injustice) first three were conceded, defense motion to sever did not cause an injustice nor did defendant's decision to waive jury; defendant's unexpected testimony at first trial did not cause an injustice; acquittal of possessing the gun that caused the murder was a final decision depriving the state of the right to retry the defendant; 9-0.

State v. Boswell, 185 Wn.App. 321, 326-32 (2014)

Defendant attempts to poison victim and, after she falls asleep, shoots her, is convicted of two counts of attempted murder; held: attempted murder is an offense that involves a continuing course of conduct, unit of prosecution is whether each course of conduct is separate or distinct including the method to commit the crime, the amount of time between the courses of conduct and whether the initial course of conduct was interrupted, failed or abandoned; here there were two courses of conduct, two methods separated by a period of time and no evidence that defendant's plan included using both poisoning and shooting as part of one continuous plan, State v. Latham, 3 Wn.App.2d 468 (2018); II.

State v. Longo, 185 Wn.App. 804 (2015)

Following drug seizure city seeks civil forfeiture, district court grants suppression and dismisses, state then files felony charge, superior court dismisses as collaterally estopped, state appeals; held: city and state were not in privity, distinguishing Barlindal v. Bonney Lake, 84 Wn.App. 135, 142-43 (1996), application of collateral estoppel doctrine would work an injustice, State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 653 (1997); I.

State v. Polk, 187 Wn.App. 380 (2015)

Each unit of possession of depictions of a minor in sexually explicit conduct 2°, RCW 9.68.070(2)(c) (2010), is one unit of prosecution even if possession includes more than one depiction or image, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d. 870 (2009), distinguishing RCW 9.68A.001 (2010); III.

State v. Lazcano, 188 Wn.App. 338, 362 (2015)

Collateral estoppel is only available to a criminal defendant who was acquitted in the first prosecution, see: State v. Morlock, 87 Wn.2d 767 (1976); III.

State v. Reeder, 184 Wn.2d 805, 825-31 (2015)

Unit of prosecution for securities fraud, RCW 21.20.010, is every separate sale of a security, cf.: State v. Mahmood, 45 Wn.App. 200, 206 (1986); unit of prosecution for theft 1° by deception, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(b), is each separate transaction occurring at a separate time; 7-2.

State v. Fuller, 185 Wn.2d 30 (2016)

Defendant is charged with assault 2°/deadly weapon and alternatively assault 2°/substantial bodily harm for same incident, is acquitted of latter, jury hangs on former, state seeks retrial for remaining assault 2°; held: when state charges alternative means in separate counts and jury acquits on one but deadlocks on the other, state may retry defendant on count on which jury was hung, jeopardy never terminated as to that count or as to the overall offense, State v. Ramos, 163 Wn.2d 654, 660 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Albarran, 187 Wn.2d 15 (2016)

Defendant is convicted of rape of a child 2° and rape 2°/incapable of consent, for a single act, trial court vacates rape of a child as the lesser offense under double jeopardy analysis, State v. Hughes, 166 Wn.2d 675, 684–86 (2009), defense argues that rape 2° should be vacated as it is a more specific offense under equal protection/general-specific analysis, State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576, 580 (1984); held: because the legislature specifically authorized prosecution of rape 2°/incapable of consent for children under 15 years, RCW 9.94A.837 (2006), the general-specific analysis is inapplicable; 9-0.

State v. Novick, 196 Wn.App. 513 (2016)

Multiple convictions for several acts of computer trespass, former RCW 9A.52.110 (2011) and intercepting a private communication, RCW 9.73.030 (1986) against same victim constitute multiple units of prosecution; II.

State v. Barbee, 187 Wn.2d 375 (2017)

Promoting prostitution of two women does not constitute a single unit of prosecution, State v. Song, 50 Wn.App. 325 (1988), overruling, in part, State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 680, 681 (1982); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of France, 199 Wn.App. 822 (2017)

Defendant is convicted of multiple counts of felony harassment, RCW 9A.46.020 (2011), for threatening to cause bodily harm to the victim at different times and different places, argues unit of prosecution against a single victim is any number of threats; held: while making threats to a single victim on more than one occasion to cause bodily harm at the same place and time violates double jeopardy if convicted of more than one count, here multiple counts for making different threats to cause harm at different times and places do not violate double jeopardy, distinguishing State v. Morales, 174 Wn.App. 370, 384-88 (2013); I.

State v. Wilkins, 200 Wn.App. 794, 802-14 (2017)

Child molestation and rape of a child for same act do not violate double jeopardy, State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 600 (2013), cf.: State v. Sanford, 15 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020); 2-1, II.

State v. Novikoff, 1 Wn.App.2d 166 (2017)

Assault 4° and violation of a no contact order based upon the same act do not violate double jeopardy and do not merge, RCW 26.50.110(4) (2015), State v. Moreno, 132 Wn.App. 663 (2006), State v. Leming, 133 Wn.App. 875 (2006); III.

Pers. Restraint of White, 1 Wn.App.2d 788 (2017)

Defendant points gun at victim then strangles her, is convicted of two counts of assault 2°; held: to determine if multiple assaultive acts are part of the same course of conduct, court must consider [1]-The length of time over which the assaultive acts took place, [2]-Whether the assaultive acts took place in the same location, [3]-The defendant's intent or motivation for the different assaultive acts, [4]-Whether the acts were uninterrupted or whether there were any intervening acts or events, and [5]-Whether there was an opportunity for the defendant to reconsider his or her actions, State v. Villanueva-Gonzalez, 180 Wn.2d 975 (2014); here, facts establish same course of conduct, distinguishing State v. Tili, 139 Wn.2d 107, 116, (1999); I.

Currier v. Virginia, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2144, 201 L.Ed.2d 650 (2018)

Defendant is charged with burglary, theft and felon in possession of a firearm, court severs felon in possession, defendant is acquitted of burglary and theft, seeks dismissal of felon in possession on double jeopardy grounds; held: where a defendant's agrees to severance he cannot later use the double jeopardy clause to either obtain dismissal to protect against multiple trials or the relitigation of issues, Jeffers v. United States, 432 U.S. 137, 53 L.Ed.2d 1`68 (1977), distinguishing Ashe v. Swenson, 25 L.Ed.2d 469 (1970); 5-4.

Pers. Restraint of Schorr, 191 Wn.2d 315 (2018)

Defendant pleads guilty to robbery 1° and murder 1° by alternative means of premeditation and felony murder/robbery, claims robbery and felony murder for same acts violated double jeopardy clause; held: plea of guilty does not waive double jeopardy violation as the sentence would exceed the courts authority; here, however, a defendant has no right to plead guilty to only one alternative means of committing a crime that is charged using alternative means, must plead guilty to all or nothing, Pers. Restraint of Richey, 162 Wn.2d 865, 872 (2008), premeditated murder does not merge with robbery thus double jeopardy clause was not violated; 9-0.

State v. Farnworth, 192 Wn.2d 468 (2018)

Defendant obtains workers' compensation benefits by falsely claiming he was unemployed on numerous occasions, state aggregates many numerous thefts that individually would be thefts 2° into three counts of theft 1° maintaining that there was a common scheme or plan and between each count defendant had the opportunity to reconsider; held: RCW 9A.56.010(21)(c) (2017) allows state to aggregate theft 3°s if each count differs as to its plan and scheme, which conflicts with common law aggregation which allows an endless variety of thefts as long as each is distinct in time, but because statute only refers to aggregation of theft 3°s common law still applies, see: State v. Linden, 171 Wn. 92, 102-03 (1932), State v. Vining, 2 Wn.App. 802, 808 (1970); because there is a factual basis for prosecutor to justify the separate charges there is no double jeopardy violation, State v. Perkerewicz, 4 Wn.App. 937, 941-42 (1970); reverses, in part, State v. Farnworth, 199 Wn.App. 195, 202-05 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Mason, 2 Wn.App.2d 504 (2018)

On three occasions defendant secretly films another in the bathroom, is convicted of three counts of voyeurism, RCW 9A.44.115(2) (2003); held: unit of prosecution for voyeurism is per instance of filming, not per victim, State v. Ose, 156 Wn.2d 140 (2005); I.

State v. Classen, 4 Wn.App.2d 520, 531-34 (2018)

Kidnapping 1°, RCW 9A.40.020 (1)(c), (d), is a continuing course of conduct crime that continues until the victim's liberty is restored; here, defendant restrained victim in her car and, after she escaped, pursued her and tried to kidnap her again, is convicted of kidnapping and attempted kidnapping, because there were two separate course of conduct the convictions do not violate double jeopardy clause; II.

State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018)

In murder case jury convicts but answers no as to aggravating circumstances, case is reversed and remanded, state refiles same aggravating circumstances, trial court dismisses them; held: aggravating circumstances are elements of the crime for double jeopardy purposes Sattazahn v. Pennsylvania, 537 U.S. 101, 111, 123 S.Ct. 732, 154 L.Ed.2d 588 (2003), State v. Gordon, 153 Wn.App. 516, 529-40 (2009), rev'd, on other grounds, 172 Wn.2d 671 (2011), State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784 (2019), see: Matter of Fernandez, 20 Wn.App.2d 883 (2022); affirms State v. Allen, 1 Wn.App.2d 1 774 (2017); 9-0.

Gamble v. United States, 587 U.S. ___ , 189 S.Ct. 1960, 204 L.Ed.2d 322 (2019)

Defendant is convicted for the same crime in state court and then in federal court; held: dual sovereignty convictions do not violate the double jeopardy clause, Fox v. Ohio, 46 U.S. 410 (1847); 7-2.

State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of seven crimes, offender score is greater than nine, trial court declines to impose exceptional sentence based upon free crimes aggravator, following appeal four counts are dismissed, at resentencing offender score remains above nine, state recommends exceptional sentence which trial court imposes, albeit less than original sentence; held: collateral estoppel does not bar the exceptional sentence, State v. Collicott, 118 Wn.2d 649 (1992), State v. Harrison, 148 Wn.2d 550, 561 (2003); 8-1.

State v. Muhammad, 194 Wn.2d 577 (2019)

Felony murder/rape and rape merge, affirming State v. Muhammad, 4 Wn.App. 31 (2018), see: State v. Vladovic, 99 Wn.2d 413 (1983), State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 820-24 (2004); (fractured opinion, 5 justices concur).

State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784 (2019)

Defendant is convicted of aggravated murder with arson 1° as aggravator and substantive crime of arson 1°; held: while an aggravating factor involves multiple prosecutions and thus is affected by the double jeopardy clause, State v. Allen, 192 Wn.2d 526 (2018), enhancing murder to aggravated murder involves multiple punishments and thus is not a violation of double jeopardy, see: State v. Heng, 22 Wn.App.2d 717 (2022); 6-3.

State v. Min Sik Kim, 7 Wn.App.2d 839 (2019)

RCW 9.994A.505(7) (2015) which forbids credit for time served for pretrial electronic home monitoring for, inter alia, violent offenses does not violate double jeopardy or equal protection clauses, cf.: State v. Anderson, 132 Wn.2d 203, 213 (1997), Harris v. Charles, 171 Wn.2d 455 (2011); II.

State v. Karpov, 195 Wn.2d 288 (2020)

While jurisdiction is usually not an element of a crime that must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt (except where it is set out specifically in a statute, e.g., DUI), here the trial court erroneously treated it as an element of the crime and dismissed, thus judicially acquitting the defendant, precluding further prosecution based upon double jeopardy, Evans v. Michigan, 568 U.S. 313, 133 S. Ct. 1069, 185 L. Ed. 2d 124 (2013); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Knight, 196 Wn.2d 330 (2020)

Two robberies do not merge here as there were separate forcible takings from the same victim, distinguishing State v. Tvedt, 153 Wn.2d 705, 714 (2005), State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005); while jury instructions did not distinguish between crimes, prosecutor's election in closing argument was adequate, State v. Carson, 184 Wn.2d 207, 227 (2015), State v. Bland, 71 Wn.App. 345, 350-2 (1993), State v. Smith, 17 Wn.App. 146 (2021); 5-4.

State v. Lee*,* 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020)

Defendant strangles victim in kitchen, they then go to bedroom where defendant strangles and rapes her digitally and with his penis, is charged with two counts of assault 2° and rape, defense argues that because the strangulation may have been the forcible compulsion for the rape that the convictions violate double jeopardy; held: it is defense burden to establish that defendant faces multiple punishments for the same offense, State v. Clark, 124 nh.2d 90, 101 (1994), overruled on other grounds by State v. Catlett, 133 Wn.2d 355 (1997), there were other acts that could establish forcible compulsion, State v. Nysta, 168 Wn.App. 30, 49 (2012), see also: State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 653-56 (2011); I.

State v. Wheeler, 14 Wn.App.2d 571 (2020)

Defendant is granted a SSOSA, RCW 9.94A.670, is reinstated following two violation hearings, at third violation hearing prosecutor refers to prior violations and sanctions, defense objects claiming double jeopardy violation, trial court overrules and considers prior actions and revokes; held: revocation is not a second punishment, court can consider prior criminal history so court can consider prior violations and sanctions, see: State v. Guy, 87 Wn.App. 238 (1997), aff'd, 136 Wn.2d 453 (1998), nor is it prohibited by statute; I.

State v. Sanford, 16 Wn.App.2d 748 (2020)

Defendant is charged with child rape and child molestation for oral/genital contact, no evidence of vaginal penetration, trial court does not give separate and distinct acts instruction; held: absent evidence of vaginal penetration convictions for child rape and child molestation violate double jeopardy where no separate and distinct acts instruction is given, State v. Land, 172 Wn.App. 593, 600 (2013), State v. Wilkins, 200 Wn.App. 794, 804-08 (2017); here, it was not manifestly apparent from prosecutor's argument that the state was not attempting to impose separate penalties for the same conduct, distinguishing State v. Land, supra, State v. Mutch, 171 Wn.2d 646, 661-65 (2011), State v. Noltie, 116 Wn.2d 831, 849 (1991), State v. Peña Fuentes, 179 Wn.2d 808, 823-26 (2014); 2-1, II.

State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021)

Defendant has three no contact orders with the same victim, contacts her once and is convicted of three counts of violation of a no contact order; held: multiple convictions under a single statute based on a single act violate double jeopardy clause; I.

State v. Hancock, 17 Wn.App.2d 113 (2021)

Defendant is convicted of rape of a child 1° and child molestation 1° over the same time period, prosecutor in closing explains that rape involves instances of penetration, molestation doesn't rise to the level of sexual intercourse; held: where it is clear that two convictions of different crimes over the same period are not based upon the same evidence, State v. Freeman, 153 Wn.2d 765 (2005), and where the merger doctrine does not apply there is no double jeopardy violation; even when two statutory violations appear to merge on an abstract level they may be punished separately if defendant's conduct demonstrations an independent purpose or effect of each offense, State v. Kier, 164 Wn.2d 798, 804 (2008); III.

State v. Canter, 17 Wn.App.2d 728 (2021)

Detective poses on-line as the mother of two children seeking sex, defendant responds, is arrested at the place he was to meet the mother and children, is convicted of two counts of attempted child molestation, argues double jeopardy violation; held: while unit of prosecution for an attempt charge is the substantial step toward commission of the underlying crime, State v. Boswell, 185 Wn.App. 321, 329-30 (2014), attempted child molestation aims to punish a substantial step toward molesting each child, double jeopardy clause does not bar convictions for two counts, distinguishing State v. Varnell, 162 Wn.2d 165 (2007), State v. Bobic, 140 Wn.2d 250, 260-67 (2000); I.

State v. Thompson, 19 Wn.App.2d 727 (2021)

CONST. art. I § 9 is no broader than Fifth Amendment double jeopardy clause, State v. Benn, 161 Wn.2d 256, 261 (2007), thus retrial following a mistrial is constitutional; I.

Denezpi v. United States, ___ U.S. ___, 142 S.Ct. 1838, 213 L.Ed.2d 141 (2022)

Defendant is prosecuted for the same act in a tribal court that is administered by the U.S. government and then in federal court, claims it is the same sovereign and thus violates double jeopardy clause; held: double jeopardy clause prohibits separate prosecutions for the same offense but does not bar successive prosecutions by the same sovereign, dual sovereignty doctrine, see: Gamble v. United States, 587 U.S. ___ , 189 S.Ct. 1960, 204 L.Ed.2d 322 (2019), is concerned with who defines the offense, not who prosecutes it; 6-3.

DUI*

Kaiser v. Suburban Transp. System, 65 Wn.2d 461 (1965)

One who innocently takes prescribed drug cannot be convicted of DUI unless he has knowledge of the drug's harmful qualities, but see: State v. Dailey, 174 Wn.App. 810 (2013); 5-1.

State v. Cornell, 1 Wn.App. 425 (1969)

Field sobriety tests are not testimonial and need not be preceded by Miranda warnings to be admissible, Mercer Island v. Walker, 76 Wn.2d 607 (1960), Seattle v. Stalsbroten, 138 Wn.2d 227 (1999), see: State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932 (2014), , rev., on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016); character evidence as to defendant's reputation for sobriety in the community is proper; III.

Seattle v. Box, 29 Wn.App. 109 (1981)

DUI suspect contacts counsel, who tells police he would be at station in 20 minutes, police transport defendant to jail, give counsel false information when he arrives; held: denial of reasonable access to counsel; I.

Seattle v. Scarpelli, 31 Wn.App. 231 (1982)

City must prove validity of prior plea to enhance sentence for second DUI; I.

Seattle v. Tolliver, 31 Wn.App. 299 (1982)

Paved, private parking lot on a main intersection with easy access to the street is a "way open to the public"; I.

McGuire v. Seattle, 31 Wn.App. 438 (1982)

Defense of moving vehicle safely off roadway is not an element of DUI which must be proved by the city, it is an affirmative defense which must be established by the defendant, Spokave v. Beck, 130 Wn.App. 481, 486 (2005), see also: State v. Votava, 149 Wn.2d 178 (2003); I.

Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833 (1982)

Police may not stop a vehicle based solely upon a motorist pointing to the vehicle and asserting it is being driven by a drunk driver, State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997), but see: State v. Lee, 147 Wn.App. 912 (2008).

Seattle v. Urban, 32 Wn.App. 634 (1982)

---

* See: DUI/Breath and Blood Tests, Implied Consent and VEHICULAR HOMICIDE/VEHICULAR ASSAULT

Instruction stating "the law recognizes that a person may have drunk liquor yet not be under influence" need not be given where other instructions permit defense to argue theory; I.

State v. Franco, 96 Wn.2d 816 (1982)

DUI statute, RCW 46.61.502 sets forth three alternative ways of committing the crime, not three distinct crimes, but see: State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 732-36 (2015); where defendant is charged with alternative modes, unanimity of mode need not be shown; 7-2.

State v. Keller, 36 Wn.App. 110 (1983)

In a DUI case, defendant blew a .10 on Breathalyzer, technician testified that machine had .01 margin of error; held: while Breathalyzer reading is not conclusive proof of actual blood alcohol content, a rational trier of fact could be convinced that defendant's blood alcohol content was not below .10 where machine was tested a few days prior to defendant's test and operated perfectly; I.

State v. Smelter, 36 Wn.App. 439 (1984)

Defendant is observed by police in driver's seat of vehicle on shoulder of interstate highway out of gas, intoxicated; issue: was defendant in actual physical control, RCW 46.61.504?; held: evidence that defendant, while intoxicated, drove his vehicle until it ran out of gas supports finding that he was in physical control, as "vehicle was reasonably capable of being operated or rendered operable"; definitive case on physical control; Mount Vernon v. Quezada-Avila, 77 Wn.App. 663 (1995); cf.: State v. Maxey, 63 Wn.App. 488 (1991); I.

State ex. rel. Juckett v. Evergreen District Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984)

When DUI suspects are arrested, they must be advised of their Miranda right to counsel prior to taking breath test, and must be provided access to counsel if requested; if Miranda warnings are given, defendant need not again be advised of right to counsel prior to taking breath test, see: State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001); prior to the issuance of a citation, no Sixth Amendment right to counsel exists, however defendant does have right to counsel pursuant to JCrR 2.11(c)[CrRLJ 3.1]; 9-0.

Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984)

Police enter suspect's home without a warrant and arrest for DUI, claiming hot pursuit; held: warrantless home arrest for a minor offense is not justified by hot-pursuit doctrine where there was no continuous pursuit, no threat to public safety; cf.: State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991), Stanton v. Sims, 571 U.S. 3, 187 L.Ed.2d 341 (2013); 7-2.

Kirkland v. O'Connor, 40 Wn.App. 521 (1985)

Suspect is not given breath test, court instructs jury that it shall not draw any inferences from the absence of a breath test result nor speculate on the reasons for the absence of such a test; held: comment on the evidence, in violation of CONST., Art. 4, § 16; I.

Bellevue v. Redlack, 40 Wn.App. 689 (1985)

Negligent driving, RCW 46.61.525, is not a lesser included offense of DUI; I.

Paulson v. Deppartment of Licensing, 42 Wn.App. 362 (1985)

Arresting officer need only advise suspect of his Miranda rights and the consequences of refusing a breath test; officer need not inform suspect that he may not make the receipt of legal advice a condition of his deciding whether to submit to a breath test or that he is not entitled to have an attorney present when taking the test, State v. Staeheli, 102 Wn.2d 305 (1984); I.

Waid v. Department of Licensing, 43 Wn.App. 32 (1986)

Officer receives a radio call about a citizen complaint of another citizen's driving, arrives at scene, observes appellant without shoes, hair disorderly, strong odor of intoxicants, citizen with appellant tells officer that appellant had been weaving all over the road; held: officer had probable cause to arrest for DUI; I.

State v. Hazzard, 43 Wn.App. 335 (1986)

Moving a vehicle safely off road is a defense to physical control, RCW 46.61.504, but not to DUI, RCW 46.61.502, State v. Beck, 42 Wn.App. 12 (1985); III.

Airway Heights v. Dilley, 45 Wn.App. 87 (1986)

Defendant, arrested for DUI, requests counsel before deciding whether or not to take breath test; police, defendant and defendant's wife make several calls, cannot reach attorney, police do not give defendant 24-hour public defender number; held: reasonable but unsuccessful attempts to contact counsel for defendant satisfy his right to counsel; see: Seattle v. Sandholm, 65 Wn.App. 747 (1992); III.

Williams v. Department of Licensing, 46 Wn.App. 453 (1986)

Following stop for infractions, suspect's refusal to roll down his window may be interpreted by an arresting officer and the trier of fact as a reaction to a consciousness of guilt, State v. Bruton, 66 Wn.2d 111, 112 (1965), in a license revocation proceeding; I.

State v. Whitman County Dist. Court, 105 Wn.2d 278 (1986)

Where police advise a DUI suspect that his refusal to take a breath test may be used against him at trial, the advice is accurate, since refusal may be used in rebuttal, State v. Zwicker, 105 Wn.2d 228 (1986), RCW 46.20.308; where police advise suspect that refusal shall be used against him/her at trial, the advise is inaccurate and, if the defendant took the breath test, the results must be suppressed; 9-0.

Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569 (1986)

Corpus delicti must be established to corroborate an admission or confession irrespective of whether or not the statement was custodial, reversing, in part, Bremerton v. Corbett, 42 Wn.App. 45 (1985); in DUI case, corpus is met by proof that defendant was driving while intoxicated, but see: State v. Flowers, 99 Wn.App. 57 (2000); standard for corpus delicti is that there be sufficient circumstances to support a logical and reasonable inference that defendant was driving; while mere evidence that defendant was at scene of accident and was registered owner of vehicle may not be sufficient, additional factors such as other person present unable to start vehicle, defendant was seen earlier driving the vehicle, injuries to defendant consistent with blood on driver's side of vehicle are sufficient, State v. Hendrickson, 140 Wn.App. 913 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Prok, 107 Wn.2d 153 (1986)

Defendant is involved in an accident, is extremely intoxicated and injured, police transport defendant to jail and determine that his condition is due to intoxication not injury, advise of Miranda rights, but defendant does not speak English and does not understand his right to counsel; held: defendant was not taken into custody, JCrR 2.11(c), until police determined he was drunk, not injured (even though he was taken to jail), thus right to counsel did not accrue until that point; because state conceded defendant was not able to understand right to counsel and state conceded that police violated defendant's right to be so advised, remedy is suppression of evidence following custody, not dismissal, distinguishing Tacoma v. Heater, 67 Wn.2d 733 (1966), State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436 (1980), reversing State v. Prok, 42 Wn.App. 166 (1985); 9-0; see: Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991).

Keefe v. Department of Licensing, 46 Wn.App. 627 (1987)

Police arrive at accident scene, observe suspect vehicle with severely damaged front end directly behind a bus, suspect behind the wheel, odor of intoxicants, obvious that suspect had rear-ended bus, suspect appeared to be feeling no pain; held: probable cause to arrest; failure to advise suspect of right to counsel prior to offering breath test which is refused does not invalidate license suspension as that is a civil, not criminal proceeding; I.

State v. Barefield, 47 Wn.App. 444, 110 Wn.2d 728 (1988)

Failure to advise an unconscious vehicular homicide suspect of right to additional tests is not error; while WAC 448-14-020 requires that a blood test shall employ a clean dry container, that samples be preserved with anticoagulant, and that a blank test be run, where state toxicologist testifies that while vial was in his possession it was not adulterated, that vial manufacturer always puts anticoagulants in this vial, and that he ran a test that was the equivalent of a blank test, a prima facie case was established, but see: State v. Garrett, 80 Wn.App. 651 (1996); jury need not be instructed regarding unanimity of mode; accord: State v. Steinbrunn, 54 Wn.App. 506 (1989); I.

State v. Brayman, 110 Wn.2d 183 (1988)

RCW 46.61.502(1), prohibiting operating a motor vehicle when one's breath alcohol level is .10 or greater, is constitutional; 9-0.

Seattle v. Mesiani, 110 Wn.2d 454 (1988)

Stopping all vehicles at sobriety checkpoints to determine if drivers are under the influence violates CONST. Art. 1, § 21 and the Fourth Amendment, but see: Michigan State Police v. Sitz, 110 L.Ed.2d 412 (1990), Illinois v. Lidster, 157 L.Ed.2d 843 (2004), see also: State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 271, 278 (1997), cf.: Schlegel v. Dep't of Licensing, 137 Wn.App. 364 (2007); reverses Fury v. Seattle, 46 Wn.App. 110 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Amurri, 51 Wn.App. 262 (1988)

While DUI, by itself, does not constitute reckless driving, RCW 46.61.500(1), State v. Birch, 183 Wash. 670, 673 (1935), State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016), evidence of alcohol is relevant for the trier of fact to determine if alcohol influenced the driving, State v. Travis, 1 Wn.App. 971, 974 (1970); willful or wanton disregard for the driver's own safety satisfies the mens rea element; I.

State v. Anderson, 51 Wn.App. 775 (1988)

Police observe a known citizen waving at officer, pointing at another vehicle and gesturing like a snake, officer follows vehicle, observes weaving within the lane, stops vehicle, determines driver is under the influence, arrests; held: known informant was reliable, State v. Kennedy, 107 Wn.2d 1, 8 (1986), weaving gesture was more than a conclusory statement establishing an articulable suspicion justifying the stop, distinguishing Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833 (1982), cf.: State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997); III.

Sunnyside v. Wendt, 51 Wn.App. 846 (1988)

Where a defendant stops his vehicle, exits it and enters a store, whereupon the vehicle rolls and strikes a pedestrian and vehicle, defendant is not in physical control of the vehicle, and is thus not guilty of negligent driving; III.

Seattle v. Gellein, 112 Wn.2d 58 (1989)

Jury instruction that city must prove that defendant "had 0.10 percent . . . alcohol in his blood as shown by chemical analysis of his breath" creates an unconstitutional mandatory presumption, reversing Seattle v. Gellein, 48 Wn.App. 341 (1987); 7-2.

Seattle v. Koch, 53 Wn.App. 352 (1989)

DUI arrestees ask to speak with counsel, are given access to telephone but officer remains in room, neither defendant nor counsel request privacy; held: since defendants or counsel did not request privacy nor establish prejudice, see: State v. Federov, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015), rights pursuant to CrRLJ 3.1(c)(2) were not violated; I.

State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989)

Implied consent warnings stating suspect is entitled to additional tests "at your own expense" improperly prevent an indigent defendant from making an informed decision whether to submit to a blood test; state has burden of establishing whether defendant had financial ability at time of arrest to obtain an additional test; Spokane v. Holmberg, 50 Wn.App. 317 (1987) is effectively overruled, but see: Gonzales v. Dept. of Licensing, 112 Wn.2d 890, 901 (1989), State v. Storhoff, 133 Wn.2d 523 (1997); financial test is objective, State v. White, 58 Wn.App. 713 (1990); defense burden to show prejudice, State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991), State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 501 (1992); cf.: Clyde Hill v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 778 (1992); see: State v. Berkley, 72 Wn.App. 12 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Shattuck, 55 Wn.App. 131 (1989)

Where a deferred prosecution, RCW 10.05.020, is revoked, defendant's stipulation to the police report waives all defenses, Abad v. Cozza, 128 Wn.2d 575 (1996), but see: State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23, 33-34 (2010); where defendant asks to speak to a specific attorney and police attempt to contact that attorney, police are not obliged to suggest other attorneys or to tell defendant that public defender is available as long as defendant has been advised of right to public defender; I.

State v. Gettman, 56 Wn.App. 51 (1989)

Trial court may not defer prosecution on two DUIs which occur more than seven days apart, RCW 10.05.010; III.

Pennsylvania v. Muniz, 110 L.Ed.2d 528 (1990)

Prior to Miranda warnings, arrested DUI suspect is asked the date of his sixth birthday; held: whenever a suspect is asked for a response requiring him to communicate an express or implied assertion of fact or belief, response contains a testimonial component, as suspect is confronted with "trilemma" of truth, falsity or silence; questions about name, address, height, weight, eye color, birthdate, age, while testimonial, fall within "routine booking question" exception; suspect's statements made during "carefully scripted instructions" as to how to perform physical sobriety tests and breath test were not product of interrogation, and are thus admissible; 5-4.

State v. Entzel, 116 Wn.2d 435 (1991)

Police are not obliged to administer a breath or blood test to everyone accused of DUI, nor are they obliged to advise a suspect of the availability of breath or blood testing absent the state's use of the implied consent statute to request that the suspect submit to such testing; accord: State v. Woolbright, 57 Wn.App. 697 (1990); 9-0.

Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991)

Remedy for denial of counsel in violation of JCrR 2.11 [CrRLJ 3.1(b)] in DUI case is suppression of any evidence acquired after the violation, not dismissal, overruling State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436, vacated and remanded, 66 L.Ed.2d 240, aff'd on remand, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980), see: State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002, State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001); 6-3.

Bellevue v. Ohlson, 60 Wn.App. 485 (1991)

Following DUI arrest, defendant asks for counsel, officer calls defendant's attorney six times, phone busy for 20 minutes, calls three different public defenders, reaches two answering machines, no answer at third; held: officer made every reasonable effort to provide access to counsel, thus CrRLJ 3.1 is satisfied even though actual contact is not effected, Seattle v. Wakenight, 24 Wn.App. 48, 51 (1979), cf.: State v. Pierce, 169 Wn.App. 533, 544-51 (2012), see also: Seattle v. Sandholm, 65 Wn.App. 747 (1992); destruction of simulator solution did not violate due process, Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988), California v. Trombetta, 81 L.Ed.2d 413 (1984), State v. Canaday, 90 Wn.2d 808 (1978), nor does it violate statute mandating that "full information" about breath test be provided to counsel, RCW 46.61.506(6); I.

State v. Griffith, 61 Wn.App. 35 (1991)

Police observe suspect commit traffic infractions and strike a sign, follow with emergency lights, at residence suspect jumps out, runs toward residence, officer calls to stop, suspects proceeds to front door, enters, officer prevents door from closing, smells alcohol, has suspect take sobriety tests, arrests for DUI; held: suspect's presence inside her home requires analysis of exigent circumstances, State v. Holeman, 103 Wn.2d 426 (1985), Payton v. New York, 63 L.Ed.2d 639 (1980), although rationale diminishes considerably when suspect is fleeing to the home to avoid arrest; here, there was hot pursuit, as officer did not enter home and there was more than a mere infraction, distinguishing Seattle v. Altschuler, 53 Wn.App. 317 (1989) plus fleeing suspect; destruction of evidence, i.e., breath alcohol, is an exigency which, with other circumstances, justifies arrest, distinguishing Welsh v. Wisconsin, 80 L.Ed.2d 732 (1984); III.

Steffen v. Department of Licensing, 61 Wn.App. 839 (1991)

To be "unconscious," RCW 46.20.308(4), and thus incapable of refusing a breath test, an arrestee "must manifest symptoms of such a lack of self-awareness or inability to perceive as to render him completely unable to exercise judgment," Oaks v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 892, 896 (1982); "incapable of refusal" refers to physical conditions, e.g., injury or pain, and not to voluntary or involuntary intoxication, Junkley v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 7 Wn.App. 827 (1972), Department of Motor Vehicles v. McElwain, 80 Wn.2d 624 (1972), Gibson v. Department of Licensing, 54 Wn.App. 188 (1989); III.

State v. Williams, 62 Wn.App. 336 (1991)

Proof of insurance is not a prerequisite to eligibility for deferred prosecution where defendant states he won't drive during term, RCW 10.05.140, -.160; II.

Seattle v. Personeus, 63 Wn.App. 461 (1991)

Even absent breath test, it is error for trial court to refuse expert testimony as to rate of alcohol burn-off for someone of defendant's weight; I.

State v. Maxey, 63 Wn.App. 488 (1991)

Defendant's wife is arrested in vehicle where defendant is passenger, wife has key; defendant gets in driver's seat, reaches forward as if he would turn on engine but lacks key, is arrested, convicted of physical control; held: while there is evidence to support defendant's intent to assert control of vehicle, he lacked the means of control, thus evidence is insufficient, distinguishing State v. Smelter, 36 Wn.App. 439 (1984); state must prove defendant had the means enabling him to exercise "influence, domination or regulation" of car; II.

Clarkston v. Stone, 63 Wn.App. 500 (1991)

Washington police chase speeding vehicle into Idaho, arrest for DUI; held: Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit, RCW 10.89 (and identical Idaho counterpart) only applies to felony; because Washington officer did not have authority to arrest for misdemeanor in Idaho, fruits must be suppressed, but see: License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005), see: State v. Eriksen, 172 Wn.2d 506 (2011); III.

State v. Elgin, 118 Wn.2d 551 (1992)

Maximum sentence for repeat DUI offense may not exceed one year, irrespective of language in RCW 46.61.515(2), disapproving State v. Elgin, 54 Wn.App. 739 (1989); 5-3.

State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 501 (1992)

Smell of alcohol plus statement that defendant was afraid he was drunk plus fleeing from scene plus alcohol in car plus accident resulting in death is sufficient to establish probable cause to arrest for DUI; II.

Seattle v. Sandholm, 65 Wn.App. 747 (1992)

DUI suspect asks to call his out-of-town attorney at suspect's expense, police refuse but allow him to talk to a public defender, after which defendant demands again to talk to his own attorney, refused, defendant refuses to take breath test, trial court dismisses; held: CrRLJ 3.1(c) is satisfied when police put suspect in touch with a public defender even if suspect demands his own attorney; CrRLJ 3.1 does not contemplate a right of access to counsel of choice, thus reversed; I.

State v. Martin, 69 Wn.App. 686 (1993)

Absent a breath test, it is error to instruct jury as to alternative means of DUI, where one of those means is breath alcohol greater than .10; 2-1 (dissent: harmless), III.

Mount Vernon v. Cochran, 70 Wn.App. 517 (1993)

City appeals appointment of breath test expert for indigent; held: where an expert is appointed solely for trial testimony, and admissibility can be determined at the pre-appointment stage, then the expert services may not be "necessary," CrRLJ 3.1(f), if the evidence is inadmissible, State v. Sandomingo, 39 Wn.App. 709, 712 (1985), State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982); admissibility is not an issue, however, where the expert is sought for review and consultation, see: United States v. Sims, 617 F.2d 1371, 1375 n. 3 (9th Cir. 1980), thus appointment was not an abuse of discretion; I.

Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993)

Officer's testimony, without objection, that in his opinion defendant was obviously intoxicated and affected by alcohol, and could not drive in a safe manner is an opinion encompassing an ultimate factual issue which supports the conclusion that defendant is guilty, but is not an improper opinion on guilt, and is admissible both as lay and expert opinion, within discretion of trial court, State v. Forsyth, 131 Wash. 611, 612 (1924), State v. Llewellyn, 78 Wn.App. 788, 793-6 (1995), aff'd, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 130 Wn.2d 215 (1996), cf.: State v. Quaale, 182 Wn.2d 191 (2014); I.

State v. Hettich, 70 Wn.App. 586 (1993)

Toxicologist's opinion testimony that a person with a .14 blood alcohol level would lose at least a third of their normal driving ability, while without scientific foundation, was harmless, if it was error at all, in light of witness's proper testimony that the person's ability to drive "would be significantly impaired," and in light of strong evidence of intoxication; testimony was probably not subject to Frye analysis since testimony was not based on novel scientific experimental procedures, but rather upon witness's own practical experience and acquired knowledge, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 311 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); I.

State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993)

At scene of serious injury accident, damage which established high-speed collision, suspect admitting he was owner and driver and had been drinking, strong odor of alcohol on breath, need to restrain suspect from fleeing, resistance equal probable cause for DUI and vehicular assault; II.

State v. Sjogren, 71 Wn.App. 779 (1993)

Corpus delicti is established where evidence shows defendant was present at the scene of accident in close proximity to vehicle registered to defendant, only other person who could have been driving was passed out in the crew cab behind the front seats, Bremerton v. Corbett, 106 Wn.2d 569, 579 (1986), State v. Hendrickson, 140 Wn.App. 913 (2007); III.

State v. Teller, 72 Wn.App. 49 (1993)

DUI suspect is advised, inter alia, "if you cannot afford an attorney you are entitled to have one appointed by the court," argues she should have been told she had right to public defender before she took breath test; held: warnings were adequate under constitution, Duckworth v. Eagan, 106 L.Ed.2d 166 (1989), California v. Prysock, 69 L.Ed.2d 696 (1981), Florida v. Powell, 559 U.S. 50, 175 L.Ed.2d 1009 (2010), distinguishing State v. Creach, 77 Wn.2d 194, 198 (1969) and State v. Tetzlaff, 75 Wn.2d 649 (1969), and CrRLJ 3.1, State v. Wurm, 32 Wn.App. 258 (1982), aff'd sub nom. State ex rel. Juckett v. Evergreen Dist. Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984), State v. Halbakken, 30 Wn.App. 834, 836 (1981), but see: State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002, State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001); III.

State v. Cissne, 72 Wn.App. 677 (1994)

Defendant's threats to sue the police and sexual advances are objective manifestations of insobriety and thus within court's discretion to admit where trial court balances probative value with prejudicial effect; III.

Bokor v. Department of Licensing, 74 Wn.App. 523 (1994)

Trial court's finding of a lack of probable cause is reversed where evidence establishes suspect admitted driving plus repeatedly swaying during interview, alcohol on breath, poor performance on field sobriety tests, irrespective of officer's knowledge that suspect had a bad leg, see: Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 91 Wn.App. 887, 895-96 (1998), rev'd, on other grounds, 138 2783 (1999), O'Neill v. Department of Licensing, 62 Wn.App. 112, 117 (1991), State v. Staeheli, 102 Wn.2d 305, 306 (1984); trial court properly gave portable breath test (PBT) no weight where sole evidence of reliability was that of trooper who testified device had given comparable results to a BAC in the past; see also: State v. Smith, 130 Wn.2d 215 (1996); III.

State v. Kuhn, 74 Wn.App. 787 (1994)

Defendant, on deferred prosecution, RCW 10.05, is convicted in trial court of a new DUI and appeals, claims that new DUI is not a conviction requiring mandatory revocation, RCW 10.05.100, until appeal is terminated; held: a conviction is a judgment that accused is guilty as charged, trial court need not await appellate determination before revoking; II.

State v. Rushing, 77 Wn.App. 356 (1995)

Filing DUI in superior court along with related felony does not deprive defendant of equal protection even though it precludes deferred prosecution, State v. Hayes, 37 Wn.App. 786 (1984); III.

Mount Vernon v. Quezada-Avila, 77 Wn.App. 663 (1995)

In a physical control case, the trier of fact should first determine whether the vehicle was operable or could reasonably be made operable and, if not, the trier of fact would then determine whether defendant was driving the vehicle when it became operable, State v. Smelter, 36 Wn.App. 439 (1984); I.

State v. McNichols, 128 Wn.2d 242 (1995)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, speaks with counsel, takes breath test, is booked, asks jail guards for blood test, is told jail does not administer tests; held: where implied consent rights are provided by arresting officer, jail personnel do not have an affirmative duty to advise a DUI suspect on obtaining additional tests, State v. Entzel, 116 Wn.2d 435, 442 (1991), State v. Reed, 36 Wn.App. 193 (1983), distinguishing Blaine v. Suess, 93 Wn.2d 722, 725-6 (1980), defendant had access to telephone and could have called to arrange for blood test; guards did not promise to assist, authorities have no duty to volunteer, thus no unreasonable interference with defendant's right to obtain additional testing; reverses State v. McNichols, 76 Wn.App. 283 (1994); 9-0.

Seattle v. Williams, 128 Wn.2d 341 (1995)

City ordinance prohibiting driving with a breath alcohol level of 0.08 grams/210 liters of breath is in contravention of RCW 46.08.020, .030 which requires traffic laws to be "uniform throughout this state"; 6-3.

State v. Wilhelm, 78 Wn.App. 188 (1995)

Police observe intoxicated defendant behind wheel of car stopped on shoulder, trial court dismisses for insufficiency; held: trier of fact could reasonably infer defendant drove to this location absent contrary evidence, as ability to handle vehicle, not driving, is the element; II.

State v. Olsson, 78 Wn.App. 202, 207-8 (1995)

Police stop vehicle for infraction, is told by driver he has a knife, which driver produces, officer observed "a heightened awareness to his surroundings. His pupils would not react and were fixed at midrange. He had glassy eyes with redness around the membrane," police patdown, find drugs; held: officer had sufficient and specific facts leading him to believe driver was under the influence of drugs, also had legitimate safety concerns prompting patdown search; III.

State v. Ortiz, 80 Wn.App. 746 (1996)

Charging document that reads "operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicants" is sufficient, need not include breath or blood alcohol level, State v. Leach, 113 Wn.2d 679, 696 (1989), Seattle v. McKinney, 58 Wn.App. 607, 609-10 (1990), State v. Grant, 104 Wn.App. 715 (2001); II.

State v. Smith, 130 Wn.2d 215 (1996)

Trooper stops defendant for DUI, administers portable breath test, does not record or remember result, trial court denies defense opportunity to cross on PBT; held: absent a Frye hearing or approval by state toxicologist, portable breath test (PBT) is inadmissible for any purpose, including probable cause, at 222; where one takes a voluntary PBT, BAC Verifier DataMaster II results are not the fruit of the poisonous tree, at 222-4; while PBT results may be been potentially useful, they were not material exculpatory evidence, thus failure to preserve is not grounds for dismissal, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467, 475 (1994); trial court erred in not permitting defense to cross-examine on PBT limited to testing trooper's recollection, harmless here; affirms State v. Lewellyn, 78 Wn.App. 788 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Crediford, 130 Wn.2d 747 (1996)

Statute requiring defendant to prove by a preponderance that s/he consumed alcohol after driving to cause BAC to be .10, RCW 46.61.502(3), unconstitutionally shifts burden of proving an element of the crime to defense (7-2); implied element of DUI is "that an amount of alcohol sufficient to cause a measurement of breath or blood of a defendant to register 0.10 percent or greater within two hours of driving was present in the defendant's system while he or she was driving," at 755, see: State v. Robbins, 138 Wn.2d 486 (1999), State v. Norby, 88 Wn.App. 545 (1997); (4-3-2).

Medcalf v. Department of Licensing, 83 Wn.App. 8 (1996)

Evidence of acquittal for DUI is not relevant in a license revocation proceeding, Brewer v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 23 Wn.App. 412, 415 (1979), Fritts v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 6 Wn.App. 233, 241 (1971); II.

State v. Hahn, 83 Wn.App. 825 (1996)

Defendant is granted a deferred prosecution, commits a new DUI, withdraws deferred prosecution and pleads guilty to first DUI and receives a deferred prosecution for new offense; held: voluntary withdrawal of a deferred prosecution is the equivalent of revocation for purposes of the five-year rule, RCW 10.05.010, thus later deferred prosecution was improperly granted; II.

State v. McLendon, 131 Wn.2d 853 (1997)

Defendants are arrested for DUI, breath tests exceed .10, Department of Licensing issues probationary licenses, RCW 46.61.502; held: administrative issuance of probationary licenses is not punishment under double jeopardy clause; 5-4.

State v. Henthorn, 85 Wn.App. 235 (1997)

State need not provide notice of a prior conviction to increase mandatory minimum sentence under 1994 DUI statutory scheme, as first offense sentencing statute, RCW 46.61.5051, is inapplicable to a person with a prior conviction within five years, RCW 46.64.5053, In re Bush, 95 Wn.2d 551, 554 (1981), distinguishing State v. Frazier, 81 Wn.2d 628 (1972), State v. Theroff, 95 Wn.2d 385 (1980); failure to object to sufficiency of evidence of a prior to enhance waives issue, State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718-9 (1986); I.

State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 271 (1997)

Driver stops for identification at gate of military base, sentry smells alcohol, calls for military security officer who administers field sobriety tests, arrests, advises of implied consent rights, driver refuses breath test, Department of Licensing revokes license, driver appeals; held: "smell of alcohol on a driver's breath is a specific fact that raises a substantial possibility that the driver is in violation of drunk driving laws," at 279, thus detention at gate was lawful; federal security officer is a law enforcement officer for purposes of implied consent statute, RCW 46.20.308, at 276; revocation of driver's license is not punishment under double jeopardy clause, State v. Scheffel, 82 Wn.App. 872, 879 (1973), cf.: State v. Hopkins, 109 Wn.App. 558 (2001); expectation of privacy at a military base is lessened as person seeking to enter it should expect inspection at least as to identification, at 278, see also: Schlegel v. Dep't of Licensing, 137 Wn.App. 364 (2007), distinguishing Seattle v. Mesiani, 101 Wn.2d 454, 457 (1988); II.

State v. Jones, 85 Wn.App. 797 (1997)

Driver of a truck with a company name on it indicates with hand signals to officer that car in front weaved, office observes no infractions but stops car, after tests arrests defendant for DUI; held: name written on side of truck is not qualitatively different from a named but unknown telephone caller, insufficient to establish reliability of citizen informer, Campbell v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 833, 835 (1982), State v. Sieler, 95 Wn.2d 43, 47-9 (1980), distinguishing State v. Anderson, 51 Wn.App. 775 (1988), 2-1; III.

State v. Knox, 86 Wn.App. 831 (1997)

Trooper observes state ferry worker unsuccessfully attempt to awaken a driver blocking vehicles, observes sleeping driver awaken, eyes watery, bloodshot in apparent stupor, motions driver to roll window down, smells odor of alcohol, driver starts vehicle, then asks, "where am I?," trooper turns engine off, has defendant leave vehicle, after field tests arrests for DUI; held: defendant failed to prove that trooper's motioning to roll down window and initial questions were a seizure, reasonable person would have believed he was free to go or could refuse to speak, State v. Thorn, 129 Wn.2d 347, 352-3 (1996), cf.: State v. Johnson, 8 Wn.App.2d 728 (2019); II.

Seattle v. Norby, 88 Wn.App. 545 (1997), overruled, in part, State v. Robbins, 138 Wn.2d 486 (1999) Complaint that does not contain the implied element establishing a connection between the results of the blood or breath test and the defendant's alcohol level at the time of driving is sufficient where challenged for the first time on appeal, at 558-61; unanimity instruction requiring jury to agree whether to convict under two-hour rule or under the influence prong is not required, at 561-64, State v. Franco, 96 Wn.2d 816 (1982), cf.: State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 732-36 (2015); I.

Richland v. Michel, 89 Wn.App. 764 (1998)

Statute which includes a dismissed deferred prosecution as a prior conviction for purposes of mandatory minimum sentences, RCW 46.61.5055(8)(a)(vii), does not violate due process or equal protection and is not an ex post facto law or bill of attainder, Kent v. Jenkins, 99 Wn.App. 287 (2000), State v. Pruett, 116 Wn.App. 746 (2003), Bremerton v. Tucker, 126 Wn.App. 26 (2005); III.

State v. Bays, 90 Wn.App. 731 (1998)

Statute precluding more than one deferred prosecution in five years, RCW 10.05.010 is interpreted to begin with the date the first court granted the earlier deferred prosecution, not date of completion of the program [effective 1 January 1999, one deferred prosecution per lifetime, RCW 10.05.010]; II.

Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 91 Wn.App. 887 (1998), rev'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 783 (1999)

Bloodshot, watery eyes plus smell of intoxicants plus slight sway on balance test plus failure to count aloud as instructed on walk and turn plus admission of drinking earlier that morning establishes probable cause to arrest and administer breath test, at 895-96, O'Neill v. Department of Licensing, 62 Wn.App. 112, 117-18 (1991); II.

Seattle v. Stalsbroten, 138 Wn.2d 227 (1999)

Refusal to perform field sobriety tests is nontestimonial and thus admission at trial does not violate suspect's privilege against self-incrimination, reversing Seattle v. Stalsbroten, 91 Wn.App. 226 (1998), see: State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932 (2014), rev., on other grounds, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Robbins, 138 Wn.2d 486 (1999)

Unless a defendant offers evidence that s/he consumed alcohol after driving, state need not prove the "implied element" of a connection between breath test result and alcohol level at the time of driving, and court need not so instruct the jury, clarifying State v. Crediford, 130 Wn.2d 747 (1996), overruling, in part, Seattle v. Norby, 88 Wn.App. 545 (1997); see: State v. Shabel, 95 Wn.App. 469 (1999); 6-3.

Alwood v. Harper, 94 Wn.App. 396 (1999)

Court grants deferred prosecution, later reviews file, sets hearing, vacates order as improvidently granted, suppresses statements made at original hearing and sets for trial; held: deferred prosecution is an interlocutory order, not a judgment, thus trial court is free to vacate it as long as due process considerations are met; I.

Tacoma v. Durham, 95 Wn.App. 876 (1999)

Tacoma police, receiving report of drunk driver, pursue defendant into Lakewood, no evidence that defendant knew he was being pursued while he was in Tacoma; held: Washington Mutual Aid Peace Officers Powers Act, RCW 10.93.120, abrogates common law of fresh pursuit, thus statute is to be liberally construed, suspect need not know he is being pursued, nor must the active pursuit cross a boundary, distinguishing Wenatchee v. Durham, 43 Wn.App. 547 (1986); police may cross over to another jurisdiction and arrest "in response to an emergency involving an immediate threat to human life or property," RCW 10.93.070(2), defendant's erratic driving meets that test; II.

State v. Gillenwater, 96 Wn.App. 667 (1999)

Defendant is involved in fatal accident which is other driver's fault, evidence known to police establishes no erratic driving by defendant but police observe cooler full of beer, three opened cans of beer, strong odor of alcohol on defendant, sufficient to establish probable cause to arrest for DUI, State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018); II.

State v. Reid, 98 Wn.App. 152 (1999)

Police observe defendant asleep in car with engine running three feet off roadway, detect strong odor of alcohol, defendant refuses field tests, is argumentative, arrested for DUI, trial court suppresses maintaining that officer lacked probable cause as defendant was safely off the road; held: safely off the road is an affirmative defense to DUI, RCW 46.61.504(2), McGuire v. Seattle 31 Wn.App. 438 (1982), thus has no role in determination of probable cause; where a defendant appears intoxicated in driver's seat of a running parked car, there is probable cause to arrest, Edmonds v. Ostby, 48 Wn.App. 867, 870 (1987), Spokane v. Badeaux, 20 Wn.App. 731, 734 (1978), but see: Spokane v. Beck, 130 Wn.App. 481 (2005); II.

State v. Baity, 140 Wn.2d 1 (2000)

Horizontal gaze nystagmus (HGN) testing satisfies Frye test, State v. Cissne, 72 Wn.App. 677 (1994); drug recognition evaluation (DRE) protocol and chart used to classify behavioral patterns associated with categories of drugs meet Frye standard where all 12 steps of protocol have been undertaken; officer may not testify in a fashion that casts an aura of scientific certainty to the testimony, see also: State v. Quaale, 182 Wn.2d 191 (2014), nor may officer predict specific levels of drugs present; qualified officer may express opinion that suspect's behavior and physical attributes are or are not consistent with behavioral and physical signs associated with certain categories of drugs, at 17-18; to meet ER 702, DRE evidence must include a description of witness's training, education and experience together with a showing that test was properly administered; court may not refer to DRE witness as an "expert" until witness is qualified, at 4, n.1; 9-0.

Kent v. Jenkins, 99 Wn.App. 287 (2000)

A successfully completed and dismissed deferred prosecution counts as a "prior offense" for purposes of mandatory minimum sentences, RCW 46.61.502, -.504, Richland v. Michel, 89 Wn.App. 764 (1998), State v. Pruett, 116 Wn.App. 746 (2003), Bremerton v. Tucker, 126 Wn.App. 26 (2005), distinguishing State v. Cruz, 139 Wn.2d 186 (1999); I.

State v. Grant, 104 Wn.App. 715 (2001)

Citation which alleges "driving while intoxicated" and includes statutory reference and BAC readings is sufficient for both BAC and "under the influence" means, State v. Ortiz, 80 Wn.App. 746 (1996), Seattle v. McKinney, 58 Wn.App. 607 (1990), where challenged after state has rested; III.

Walla Walla v. Topel, 104 Wn.App. 816 (2001)

Changes to deferred prosecution statute, ch. 10.05, RCW, which limit a person to one deferred prosecution for life do not violate ex post facto clause as it is not retroactive merely because some of the requisites are drawn from a time antecedent to the law's passage, State v. Scheffel, 82 Wn.2d 872, 879 (1973), Richland v. Michel, 89 Wn.App. 764 (1998); statute properly allows one deferred prosecution even if it was granted before enactment, State v. Sell, 110 Wn.App. 741 (2002); III.

Clement v. Dep't of Licensing, 109 Wn.App. 371 (2001)

Trooper reports to arresting trooper that radar shows driver is speeding, arresting trooper observes front end of car dip as if driver hit the brakes, stops driver who is intoxicated, RALJ judge finds no probable cause because there is no radar foundation evidence, Seattle v. Peterson, 39 Wn.App. 524 (1985); held: radar foundation evidence need not be presented to establish probable cause in license revocation proceeding, Jury v. Dep't of Licensing, 114 Wn.App. 726 (2002); I.

State v. Hopkins, 109 Wn.App. 558 (2001)

To enhance license suspension from 90 days to a year, former RCW 46.61.5055(1), issue of whether breath alcohol level was greater than .15 must be submitted to jury, Apprendi v. New Jersey, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000), see: State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288, 312 (2001), Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L. Ed. 2d 314 (2013), Spokane v. Wilcox, 143 Wn.App. 568 (2008); license suspension following trial is a criminal penalty, distinguishing State v. McClendon, 131 Wn.2d 853 (1997), State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 271, 277 (1997); 2-1, I.

College Place v. Staudenmaier, 110 Wn.App. 841 (2002)

Strong odor of alcohol plus eyes watery and bloodshot plus admission to drinking 5-6 beers plus passing only one field test and performing marginally on others equals probable cause to arrest, State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018); National Highway Traffic Safety Administration standards for field test performance have not been adopted in Washington; III.

State v. Vasquez, 148 Wn.2d 303 (2002)

DOL hearing examiner concludes police lacked probable cause to stop, defendant is later charged with DUI and VUCSA from same stop; held: collateral estoppel will not bar trial court from independently determining probable cause, State v. Dupard, 93 Wn.2d 268 (1980), State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990), State v. Williams, 132 Wn.2d 248 (1997), see also: LeMond v. Dep't of Licensing, 143 Wn.App. 797 (2008), distinguishing Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999); affirms State v. Vasquez, 109 Wn.App. 310 (2001); 9-0.

Tacoma v. Belasco, 114 Wn.App. 211 (2002)

At physical control trial, defendant testifies he left a tavern, got in his car and went to sleep, trial court declines "safely off the roadway" affirmative defense instruction, reasoning that defendant must first drink, drive the car and park it, see: McGuire v. Seattle, 31 Wn.App. 438 (1982); held: defendant need not have been driving while intoxicated in order to be eligible to assert the "safely off the roadway" defense; II.

State v. Votava, 149 Wn.2d 178 (2003)

Physical control defendant testifies that a friend drove his car, parked it and left, defendant went to sleep, trial court declines to instruct as to safely off the road; held: safely off the road defense to physical control, RCW 46.61.504(2), is available even if defendant did not personally drive the vehicle off the roadway, Tacoma v. Belasco, 114 Wn.App. 211, 215 (2002), cf.: Yakima v. Mendoza Godoy, 175 Wn.App. 233 (2013), burden is on defense to prove by preponderance, at 187, Spokane v. Beck, 130 Wn.App. 481, 486 (2005); reverses State v. Votava, 109 Wn.App. 529 (2001); 8-1.

State v. Cerrillo, 122 Wn.App. 341 (2004)

Police respond to "suspicious vehicle," see two men asleep, knock, ask driver for identification, smell odor of alcohol, officer decides driver is intoxicated, tells him to sleep it off, later sees car driving, commits infraction, stops, arrests for DUI; held: initial contact was not a seizure, State v. O'Neill, 148 Wn.2d 564, 574 (2003), second stop was lawful as police had probable cause to arrest based upon first stop, as "smell of alcohol emanating from [defendant] during the first encounter indicated that [he] likely was under the influence of alcohol," at 351; opinion in State v. Cerillo, 114 Wn.App. 259 (2002), withdrawn; III.

Walla Walla v. Greene, 154 Wn.2d 722 (2005)

DUI statute which establishes mandatory minimum sentence for a prior offense for negligent driving 1° that was originally charged as DUI does not violate due process, see State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), overruling State v. Shaffer, 113 Wn.App. 812, 818-20 (2002); 7-2.

State v. Warren, 127 Wn.App. 893 (2005)

Defendant is charged with DUI, after statute of limitations runs state adds negligent driving 1° on same facts; held: because negligent driving is a less serious offense, based on same evidence and did not create a potential for "a greater stigma or penalty," it relates back to the original charge, does not violate statute of limitations, see: State v. Eppens, 30 Wn.App. 119 (1981), but see: State v. Sutherland, 104 Wn.App. 122 (2001); I.

License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005)

Unconscious driver is taken from collision in Washington to Idaho hospital, Washington trooper smells alcohol on driver's breath in hospital, orders blood draw, arrests for DUI, DOL suspends license; held: applying Idaho's fresh pursuit statute, Idaho Code § 19-701 (1941), trooper had reasonable suspicion to detain for DUI, which for purposes of fresh pursuit statute is treated as a felony, see: RCW 10.31.100(3)(d), trooper could thus pursue into Idaho and arrest when probable cause is established, distinguishing Clarkston v. Stone, 63 Wn.App. 500 (1991), State v. Steinbrunn, 54 Wn.App. 506 (1989); III.

Spokane v. Whitehead, 128 Wn.App. 145 (2005)

RCW 10.05.010(2) precluding a second deferred prosecution for a title 46 offense applies to persons charged with DUI under a city ordinance; III.

Yakima v. Skov, 129 Wn.App. 91 (2005)

Blakely v. Washington, 159 L.Ed.2d 403 (2004), does not require a jury determination that defendant has a prior deferred prosecution, RCW 46.61.5055(12)(a)(vii), to impose a mandatory minimum, as it does not increase the statutory maximum; III.

Spokane v. Beck, 130 Wn.App. 481 (2005)

In physical control case, acknowledgment by arresting officer that defendant's car was safely off the road establishes the affirmative defense, irrespective of a jury's verdict to the contrary, as evidence was insufficient for jury to conclude otherwise, thus appropriate for appellate court to dismiss, State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 17 (1996), State v. Edgar, 16 Wn.App.2d 826 (2021), see also: Edmonds v. Ostby, 48 Wn.App. 867, 870 (1987), State v. Reid, 98 Wn.App. 152 (1999); III.

Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 157 Wn.2d 446 (2006)

Police record conversations at traffic stops, arrest for DUI; held: conversations between police officers and detainees at a traffic stop are not private for purposes of the privacy act, at 458-60, RCW 9.73.030, State v. Flora, 68 Wn.App. 802 (1992), State v. Clayton, 11 Wn.App.2d 172 (2019), see: State v. Clark, 129 Wn.2d 211 (1996); an officer's failure to advise a detainee that he was being recorded on the recording violates the privacy act, RCW 9.73.090(1)(c), at 460-67; remedy for recording traffic stop without warning is suppression of the recording, State v. Cunningham, 93 Wn.2d 823, 831 (1980), but not exclusion of other evidence acquired at the same time as the improper recordings since the conversation was not private, State v. Courtney, 137 Wn.App. 376, 382-85 (2007), distinguishing State v. Fjermestad, 114 Wn.2d 828 (1990); reverses Lewis v. Dep't of Licensing, 125 Wn.App. 666 (2005) and Auburn v. Kelly, 127 Wn.App. 54 (2005); 9-0.

Schlegel v. Dep't of Licensing, 137 Wn.App. 364 (2007)

Fish and Wildlife officers, on opening day of elk hunting season, observe truck, occupants in hunting clothing, in hunting area, stop vehicle to check hunting license, observe elk rifles, smell alcohol on driver, call state patrol, driver is arrested for DUI; held: articulable facts existed to indicate driver was hunting, permitting a brief investigatory stop, RCW 77.55.080(1), for hunting, a highly regulated activity, see: State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 271 (1997), distinguishing Seattle v. Mesiani, 101 Wn.2d 454 (1988); 2-1, III.

Auburn v. Hedlund, 137 Wn.App. 494, 498-503 (2007), reversed, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 645 (2009)

Defendant furnishes liquor to minor who drives drunk and severely injures defendant-passenger, who is charged with accomplice to DUI; held: an injured passenger of a drunk driver is a victim and thus cannot be an accomplice, RCW 9A.08.020(5); I.

Butler v. Kato, 137 Wn.App. 515 (2007)

Trial court cannot require AA meetings and alcohol treatment as conditions of release in DUI case absent evidence that defendant would fail to appear, CrRLJ 3.2(b)(7), or commit a violent crime, CrRLJ 3.2(a)(2), -(e), see also: State v. Rose, 146 Wn.App. 439 (2008); I.

State v. Hendrickson, 140 Wn.App. 913 (2007)

Corpus delicti for DUI is established where independent evidence shows car is registered to defendant who is only person in area, smell of alcohol, eyes watery and bloodshot, face flushed, see: State v. Sjogren, 71 Wn.App. 779 (1993); III.

Spokane v. Wilcox, 143 Wn.App. 568 (2008)

Refusal to take breath test is remedial, not punishment, State v. McClendon, 131 Wn.2d 853, 868 (1997), but see: State v. Hopkins, 109 Wn.App. 558 (2001), and thus need not be submitted to a jury before the court may inform DOL of the refusal, resulting in license revocation rather than 90 day suspension; III.

State v. Dodson, 143 Wn.App. 872 (2008)

Defendant drives wrong way on I-5 entrance ramp onto Fort Lewis, is arrested by military police officer who calls state patrol who processes defendant for DUI; held: where an essential element of a crime is committed within an area of state jurisdiction, district court has jurisdiction to hear the case; Secretary of the Army's retroceding to the state jurisdiction, 40 U.S.C. § 1314, 10 U.S.C. § 2683, over that portion of I-5 as it crosses Fort Lewis creates concurrent jurisdiction; II.

State v. Nguyen, 165 Wn.2d 428 (2008)

Physical control is a lesser included offense of DUI, see: McGuire v. Seattle, 31 Wn.App. 438 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646 (2008)

Defendant crosses lane divider by two tire widths for one second, is stopped for lane change violation, RCW 46.61.140, processed and arrested for DUI; held: statute which requires that a vehicle be driven "as nearly as practicable" within a lane does not authorize a stop by police as the statute does not impose strict liability, State v. Jones, 186 Wn.App. 786 (2015), but see: State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98 (2014), State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017), State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020), cf.: State v. Thibert, 3 Wn.App.2d 358 (2018), State v. Alvarez, 6 Wn.App.2d 398 (2018); I.

State v. Draxinger, 148 Wn.App. 533 (2008)

Prior DUI convictions can be used both to enhance a new DUI to a felony, RCW 46.61.5055(4) (2008), and as part of the offender score; II.

State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009)

Police, with probable cause to arrest for DUI, go to defendant's home, smell alcohol through screen door which defendant leaves shut, open door, grab defendant and arrest; held: absent evidence of a "major crisis demanding immediate entry," and failure of state to make a showing that destruction of evidence (alcohol dissipation) was imminent or that arresting officers could not have obtained a warrant, see: State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), State v. Ringer, 100 Wn.2d 686 (1983), Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 133 S.Ct. 1552, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), no exigent circumstance existed for a warrantless arrest in the home; III.

State v. Rivera-Santos, 166 Wn.2d 722 (2009)

Trooper observes defendant drive erratically, observes him cross into Oregon where he is stopped and arrested by Oregon police, defendant is convicted of DUI in Oregon then prosecuted in Washington; held: no part of defendant's Washington DUI was committed in Oregon and his Oregon DUI was not committed "under such circumstances that [Washington] had jurisdiction," RCW 10.43.040, thus RCW 10.43.040 does not bar Washington prosecution; 9-0.

Seattle v. Winebrenner, 167 Wn.2d 451 (2009)

Defendant 1 is granted a deferred prosecution for DUI, is convicted of a new DUI, trial court revokes deferred prosecution and sentences as if there were one prior in seven years; defendant 2 receives deferred prosecution, pleads guilty to new reckless driving, trial court revokes deferred prosecution but sentences as if there were no prior offenses; held: because of ambiguity in RCW 46.61.5055, rule of lenity requires that offenses that occur after the current offense must not be considered prior offenses of purposes of enhancing sentence; reverses Seattle v. Quezada, 142 Wn.App. 43 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Castle, 156 Wn.App. 539 (2010)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, at arrest he had one prior conviction and three pending DUIs of which he is convicted prior to trial, state seeks felony sentence, RCW 46.61.502, trial court dismisses felony DUI; held: "prior offenses" means convictions at the time of arrest, thus trial court properly dismissed; I.

State v. Chambers, 157 Wn.App. 465 (2010)

To prove felony DUI, RCW 46.61.5055(14) (2010), four prior DUI offenses are elements to be proved to trier of fact, but whether or not a prior DUI meets the statutory definition is a question of law, State v. Cochrane, 160 Wn.App. 18 (2011), State v. Wu,. 6 Wn.App. 2d 679 (2018), review granted, 193 Wn.2d 1002 (2019), and, if a prior is from another state, the court must look to the elements, see: Pers. Restraint of Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249, 255 (2005), State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005), State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019); I.

State v. Cochrane, 160 Wn.App. 18 (2011)

Felony DUI information alleges that defendant had four prior offenses but failed to state that they were within ten years, RCW 46.61.5055(4) (2008), defense moves to dismiss, on appeal state concedes information was insufficient, defense seeks remand for entry of judgment for misdemeanor DUI; held: remedy for failure to allege elements is dismissal without prejudice, State v. Vangerpen, 125 Wn.2d 782 (1995), see also: State v. Chambers, 157 Wn.App. 465 (2010); I.

State v. Ceja Santos, 163 Wn.App. 780 (2011)

To prove priors for felony DUI, state offers certified copies of judgments without more; held: name identity alone is insufficient to prove a prior as an element of a crime, State v. Huber, 129 Wn.App. 499, 502 (2005), cf.: State v. Powell, 172 Wn.App. 455, 459-62 (2012), State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 70-71 (2014), see: State v. Sapp, 181 Wn.App. 910 (2014), state must show that defendant was the person convicted of the prior offenses, remanded for entry of conviction and sentence for misdemeanor DUI; III.

State v. Daily, 164 Wn.App. 883 (2011)

Defendant is seen driving erratically, before police arrive she pulls into parking lot and falls asleep, defendant admits driving, trial court refuses lesser of physical control; held: while physical control is a legal lesser of DUI, State v. Huyen Bich Nguyen, 165 Wn.2d 428, 433 (2008), here there is no affirmative evidence that only the lesser was committed, thus defendant was not entitled to an instruction on physical control; safely off the road defense to physical control, RCW 46.61.504(2) (2011), is not available to DUI; III.

State v. Velasquez, 176 Wn.2d 333 (2012)

Court may not require government to pay for deferred prosecution treatment for indigent defendants; 9-0.

State v. Dailey, 174 Wn.App. 810 (2013)

Defendant has the burden of proving that he took a prescription drug without knowledge of the soporific qualities, distinguishing Kaiser v. Suburban Transp. System, 65 Wn.2d 461 (1965); while DUI is not a strict liability offense, see: State v. Bash, 130 Wn.2d 594, 605-06 (1996), but see State v. Burch, 197 Wn.App. 382 (2016), mens rea is not an implied element, see: State v. Deer, 175 Wn.2d 725 (2012); I.

Yakima v. Mendoza Godoy, 175 Wn.App. 233 (2013)

Intoxicated defendant is driven by a friend to the friend's car where he waits for the friend to make a phone call, is convicted of physical control; held: safely off the roadway defense, RCW 46.61.504(3), is not available unless there is evidence that defendant moved the vehicle himself, distinguishing State v. Votava, 149 Wn.2d 178 (2003) where intoxicated defendant directed the car to be moved; III.

Nielsen v. Dep't of Licensing, 177 Wn.App. 45 (2013)

Statute which precludes an appeal by a person whose license is revoked but obtains an ignition interlock device permit to drive, RCW 46.20.385(1)(b), violates substantive due process; I, 2-1.

State v. Mashek, 177 Wn.App. 749 (2013)

To prove a prior conviction of vehicular assault, RCW 46.61.522, for purposes of felony DUI, RCW 46.61.502(6) (2012), the state can use a conviction under the statute effective until 2001, as "serious bodily injury," as required by prior statute, would certainly meet the current requirement of "substantial bodily harm," at 763-66; II.

State v. McLean, 178 Wn.App. 236 (2013)

Trooper observes defendant weave within lane, cross fog line three times, pulls defendant over, smells alcohol, defendant performs field sobriety tests, is arrested for DUI, defense maintains pretext, State v. Ladson, 138 Wn.2d 343 (1999), claims trooper had reasonable suspicion only of weaving and lacked reasonable suspicion of DUI; held: from training and experience, State v. Doughty, 170 Wn.2d 57, 62 (2010), it was rational for trooper to infer defendant was under the influence, see: State v. Arreola, 176 Wn.2d 284 (2012), State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020); II.

State v. Quaale, 182 Wn.2d 191 (2014)

At DUI investigation trooper does horizontal gaze nystagmus (HGN) test, at trial trooper testifies over objection that, based upon the test there was "no doubt" defendant was impaired; held: to determine admissibility of challenged opinion testimony, factors are (1) type of witness, (2) specific nature of testimony, (3) charge, (4) defense and (5) other evidence before trier of fact, State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008); here, officer's opinion on the core disputed fact in the form of a conclusion from scientific evidence that the jury was not in a position to independently assess, testimony violated defendant's constitutional right to have a fact critical to his guilt determined by the jury, State v. Baity, 140 Wn.2d 1 (2000), cf.: Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993), State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12, 28-30 (2018); affirms State v. Quaale, 177 Wn.App. 603 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 70-71 (2014)

To prove a prior for purposes of felony DUI, RCW 46.61.502(1)(c), -(6)(a) (2011), name identity plus a state identification card containing a photograph, height, weight, hair and eye color, address matching what's contained on the prior judgment and sentence is sufficient, State v. Sapp, 181 Wn.App. 910 (2014), see: State v. Ceja Santos, 163 Wn.App. 780 (2011), State v. Huber, 129 Wn.App. 499 (2005) ; III.

State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98 (2014)

Officer observes defendant weave within lane then cross center line by one full tire width, stops, detains, arrests for DUI; held: crossing center line, by itself, is enough to stop vehicle for violation of RCW 46.61.100, see: State v. Thibert, 3 Wn.App.2d 358 (2018), ), State v. Alvarez, 6 Wn.App.2d 398 (2018), distinguishing State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646, 649 (2008), State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017); I.

State v. Hernandez, 185 Wn.App. 680 (2015)

In determining offender score for felony DUI, former RCW 9.94A.525(2)(e) (2011), all prior convictions, traffic and other felonies, count, State v. McAninch, 189 Wn.App. 619 (2015, State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 736-39 (2015); sentencing court may not order interlock device, RCW 46.20.720(1) (2013), for longer than the maximum sentence; III>

State v. Bird, 187 Wn.App. 942 (2015)

Defendant is charged with felony DUI, enhanced with prior vehicular assault while under the influence, RCW 46.61.502(6)(b)(ii) (2013), -5055(4)(b)(ii) (2012), prior conviction was via Alford plea to "all alternatives," in accepting plea court reads police report and certification for determination of probable cause which establish defendant is under the influence, enters general finding of guilt to vehicular assault at plea, judgment and sentence references "all alternatives," trial court dismisses; held: issue of whether a prior conviction qualifies to enhance is a question of law, not fact, State v. Wu, 6 Wn.App. 2d 679 (2018), aff'd, 194 Wn.2d 880 (2019), cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), defendant pleaded to all alternatives and factual basis is sufficient to establish that the guilty plea referred to the DUI prong, thus reversed; I.

State v. Federov, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, asks to speak with counsel, asks for privacy when counsel is contacted on telephone, Seattle v. Koch, 53 Wn.App. 352 (1989), State v. Fitzsimmons, 93

Wn.2d 436 (1980), affirmed on remand, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980), trooper remains in room but testifies at suppression hearing that he did not hear defendant's conversation, counsel "felt unable … to ask open-ended questions;" held: CrR 3.1 right to counsel is limited, not coextensive with Sixth Amendment right to counsel, right to private consultation is to be weighed against legitimate safety and practical concerns; affirms State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736 (2014); 9-0.

State v. McAninch, 189 Wn.App. 619 (2015)

In determining offender score for felony DUI, former RCW 9.94A.525(2)(e) (2011), all prior convictions, traffic and other felonies, count, State v. Hernandez, 185 Wn.App. 680 (2015, State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726, 736-39; II.

State v. Sandholm, 184 Wn.2d 726 (2015)

DUI statute does not create alternative means to commit the offense, thus jury need not be unanimous as to whether a defendant was under the influence of alcohol or drugs or was under the combined influence of alcohol and drugs, at 732-36, disavowing, in part, State v. Franco, 96 Wn.2d 816 (1982); in determining offender score for felony DUI all prior convictions that have not washed count, State v. Hernandez, 185 Wn.App. 680 (2015), State v. McAninch, 189 Wn.App. 619 (2015), overruling State v. Martinez-Morales, 168 Wn.App. 489 (2012) and State v. Jacob, 176 Wn.App. 351 (2013), at 736-39; 9-0.

State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016)

While proof of DUI alone does not necessarily establish proof of reckless endangerment, RCW 9A.36.050(1), see: State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704 (1994), State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997), State v. Birch, 183 Wash. 670, 673 (1935), here DUI, defendant's admission she was "tipsy," child in front seat, speeding is sufficient to prove reckless endangerment even absent erratic or dangerous driving; reverses, in part, State v. Rich, 186 Wn.App. 632 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Mecham, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016)

A field sobriety test is not a search, defendant has no constitutional right to refuse, refusal may be used at trial, per four justices in lead opinion; four justices in dissent hold that FSTs are a seizure, defendant has the right to refuse; concurrence would hold that FSTs following a traffic stop based on evidence of impaired driving or following a stop for an unrelated offense where officer immediately discovers signs of impairment but suspect is not yet under arrest, are a seizure that may be justified as a Terry stop; thus, per Justice Wiggins lead opinion, "five justices hold that an FST is a seizure but not a search as long as the suspect has not already been arrested for an unrelated offense and the seizure is justified under Terry, cf.: Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019); reverses State v. Mecham, 181 Wn.App. 932 (2014).

Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802 (2016)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, admits to smoking marijuana, police obtain warrantless blood sample, at suppression hearing officers testify that it would take up to 1½ hours to obtain a warrant by email but could have obtained a telephonic warrant, toxicologist testifies that marijuana dissipates, trial court holds that this was an exigent circumstance justifying warrantless seizure; held: government has burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence that a warrant could not have been obtained within a reasonable period of time, natural dissipation is a factor but is not a per se exigent circumstance, thus blood test results should have been suppressed, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009), State v. Rulan C., 97 Wn.App. 884 (1999), State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), see: State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), at 811-17; trial court's failure to instruct that "it is not unlawful for a person to consume a drug and drive," WPIC 92.10 (3d ed. Supp. 2014-15), while legally accurate, is not error where court instructs that a person is under the influence if ability to drive is lessened in any appreciable degree thus allowing defense to argue its theory, at 820-23; I.

State v. Olsen, 189 Wn.2d 118 (2017)

Following DUI conviction in district court probation condition of random UAs is authorized, RCW 3.66.067 (2013), 46.61.5055 (2016), and does not violate state or U.S. constitutions, where ordered to monitor compliance with a condition of abstention; probation officer need not have a well-founded suspicion to demand UA; affirms State v. Olsen, 194 Wn.App. 264 (2016); 6-3.

State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 189 Wn.2d 420 (2017)

In DUI case defense demands name of toxicologist state will call, state provides eight names, state contacts crime lab which does not respond, day before trial state narrows list to three, at trial defense moves to exclude testimony of toxicologist whom state intended to call, defense declines to move to continue as defendant chooses not to waive right to speedy trial, trial court denies motion to exclude, on RALJ appeal superior court reverses; held: while state's disclosures establish mismanagement, trial court considered all of the circumstances including nature of witness' testimony, fact that defense had five months to prepare following the initial disclosure, thus trial court's decision was not manifestly unreasonable and denial of suppression was not an abuse of discretion, see also: State v. Price, 94 Wn.2d 810 (1980), State v. Sherman, 59 Wn.App. 763 (1990), State v. Michielli, 132 Wn.2d 229, 239-46 (1997), cf.: State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 847 (1992); reverses State v. Salgado-Mendoza, 194 Wn.App. 234 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017)

Trooper observes defendant as she drove in the far right lane southbound on Interstate 5, as traffic to defendant's front and left come to a stop, defendant drives two wheels of her vehicle over the fog line for approximately 200 feet, stopped and found to be under the influence; held: driving with wheels off roadway, RCW 46.61.670 (1977), applies rather than driving on roadways lined for traffic, RCW 46.61.140 (1965), which provides that car must be driven within lanes "as nearly as practicable," thus trooper had a reasonable basis to stop the vehicle, distinguishing State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646 (2008) and State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98, 107 (2014), see: State v. Brooks, 2 Wn.App.2d 371 (2018), State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98 (2014); I.

State v. Chelan County District Court, 189 Wn.2d 625 (2017)

In DUI case District Court judge suppresses refusal to take breath test, state seeks writ of review which Superior Court denies; held: where there is no finding that the trial court's decision effectively terminated the state's case, RALJ 2.2(c)(2), RAP 2.2(b)(2), and the decision may be a mere error of law then an interlocutory writ should be denied; here, the trial court did not "act illegally," Seattle v. Holifield, 170 Wn.2d 230, (2010), RCW 7.16.040 (1987), thus regardless of whether or not the decision was correct interlocutory review is not available, cf.: Seattle v. Keene, 108 Wn.App. 630 (2001); 7-2.

State v. Thibert, 3 Wn.App.2d 358 (2018)

Deputy stops defendant for driving in left lane of freeway even though no vehicles were travelling in the right lane, determines defendant is under the influence; held: RCW 46.61.100 (2007) prohibits driving in the left lane except when passing even if no traffic is being obstructed; III.

State v. Allen, 5 Wn.App.2d 32 (2018)

Defendant is charged with felony DUI, enhancement is a prior vehicular assault, RCW 46.61.522(1)(b)." RCW 46.61.502(6)(b)(ii), to which he pleaded guilty, trial court considers vehicular assault information, plea statement and judgment and sentence and a witness who testified to the facts of the underlying vehicular assault, rules that the prior was alcohol/drug related, submits it to the jury; held: nature of a prior conviction is a question of law, State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23, 31 (2005), State v. Ingram, 9 Wn.App.2d 482 (2019); court can only consider the documents to elucidate the nature of the conviction, defendant's plea was to all three prongs of vehicular assault including drugs/alcohol so enhancement was proper; nature of conviction is not a question for the jury, Descamps v. United States, 570 U.S. 254, 269-70, 133 S.Ct. 2276, 186 L.Ed. 2d 438 (2013); In re Pers. Restraint of Lavery, 154 Wn.2d 249, 258 (2005), State v. Wu, 194 Wn.2d 880 (2019); court should not have taken testimony about the facts of the prior, harmless here; III.

State v. Taylor, 5 Wn.App.2d 530 (2018)

A defendant may be prosecuted for DUI committed within a city in district court under state statutre even though the city has adopted a DUI ordinance, as district courts have concurrent jurisdiction with municipal courts, RCW 3.66.060; III.

State v. Alvarez, 6 Wn.App.2d 398 (2018)

Respondent is stopped by a trooper after car wheels briefly cross over a fog line and onto an area not designated as a roadway, is cited for driving with wheels off roadway, RCW 46.61.670, trial court dismisses as car was driven "as nearly as practicable" within lane, State v. Prado, 145 Wn.App. 646 (2008); held: Prado, id., only applies to driving on roadways lined for traffic, RCW 46.61.140, area over fogline is not a roadway thus any crossing over fogline establishes grounds to stop the vehicle, see: State v. Huffman, 185 Wn.App. 98 (2014), State v. Kocher, 199 Wn.App. 336 (2017), State v. Brooks, 2 Wn.App.2d 371 (2018); 2-1, III.

State v. Villela, 194 Wn.2d 451 (2019)

RCW 46.55.360 authorizing summary impoundment following DUI arrest violates state constitution, State v. Tyler, 177 Wn.2d 690, 698 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Wu,. 194 Wn.2d 880 (2019)

Whether or not a prior DUI was an alcohol offense for purposes of enhancement of a DUI to felony DUI, RCW 46.61.5055(14)(a)(xii) (2018), is a question of law for the court, State v. Bird, 187 Wn.App. 942 (2015), not for the jury, abrogating State v. Mullen, 186 Wn.App. 321 (2015); once the court determines that the prior was an alcohol or drug offense, then the fact of conviction is a question for the jury, cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019); affirms State v. Wu, 6 Wn.App. 2d 679 (2018); 6-3.

State v. Brown, 194 Wn.2d 972 (2019)

Driver uses turn signal, moves left into designated left turn lane, does not reactivate turn signal and makes the left turn, is stopped by police, processed for DUI; held: turn signal statute, RCW 46.61.305 (1975), requires a driver to signal intent to turn or change lanes on a public roadway, reversing State v. Brown, 7 Wn.App.2d 121 (2019), cf.: State v. Brown, 119 Wn.App. 473 (2003) , overruled on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); 9-0.

Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019)

Officer testifies that it is evidence of intoxication when an arrestee refuses field sobriety tests and breath tests; held: opinion regarding guilt is inadmissible, State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753, 759 (2001), Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573, 577 (1993); III.

State v. Tysyachuk, 13 Wn.App.2d 35 (2020)

In felony DUI case, RCW 46.61.502(6) (2017), court has discretion to deny bifurcation of determination whether defendant has prior DUIs for enhancement purposes, State v. Roswell, 165 Wn.2d 186, 192 (2008); III.

Seattle v. Levesque, 12 Wn.App.2d 687 (2020)

Officer, not a drug recognition expert, testifies that defendant showed signs consistent with a central nervous system stimulant and was definitely impaired; held: officer was not qualified to opine as to whether defendant was affected by a specific category of drugs, State v. Baity, 140 Wn.2d 1 (2000), distinguishing State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747, 761-62 (2002), testimony that defendant was "definitely impaired" constituted an impermissible opinion of guilt; I.

State v. Skrobo, 17 Wn.App.2d 197 (2021)

Deferred prosecution for DUI can be revoked anytime within five years, State v. Vinge, 59 Wn.App. 134 (1990); II.

State v. Edgar, 16 Wn.App.2d 826 (2021)

Defendant is parked in a gas station, not in a parking stall but not blocking traffic, engine running, transmission in park, asleep, over the limit, argues safely off the road, is convicted of physical control, RCW 46.61.504; held: while defense has the burden of proving safely off the road, State v. Votava, 149 Wn.2d 178 (2003), an affirmative defense is reviewable for sufficiency, State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 17 (1996), , Spokane v. Beck, 130 Wn.App. 481 (2005); here, defendant did what the legislature asked, he pulled safely off the road, thus a rational trier of fact could not have found that defendant failed to prove the defense by a preponderance; III.

Seattle v. Lange, 18 Wn.App.2d 139 (2021)

In DUI case police disclose to city that blood test analyst had erred in another case that caused a false positive, city discloses it to defense "days before trial," trial court suppresses blood test results for discovery violation, city seeks writ; at trial, court admits unredacted abstract of driving record including prior DUI convictions to support joined suspended license and ignition interlock charges, trial court admits over objection, defense motion to sever is denied as untimely; held: CrRLJ 47(a)(3) mandates disclosure of any information which tends to negate guilt, impeachment information meets that test, unlike a constitutional Brady issue the rules do not require proof of materiality before mandating disclosure as long as the information sought is discoverable under the rules, suppression is a proper remedy within discretion of the trial court, CrRLJ 4.7(g)(7)(i) does not require proof of prejudice; admitting unredacted abstract which included information unfairly prejudicial was error, failure to grant severance was error; I.

State v. Fraser, 199 Wn.2d 465 (2022)

Statute prohibiting driving with blood concentration of 5.00 nanograms of THC within two hours after driving, RCW 46.61.502(1)(b) (2022), is a proper exercise of police powers; 9-0.

Seattle v. Wiggins, 23 Wn.App.2d 401 (2022)

At DUI trial toxicologist who tested blood is unavailable, city offers testimony of the "reviewing toxicologist" who co-signed the report but was not present during testing, did not perform tests, and confirmed that he did not sign the report under penalty of perjury as the only person who performed the work can attest to the fact that it was done, trial court refuses to admit the testimony as the witness did not engage in independent inquiry; held: toxicologist who did the testing was the witness "against" the defendant, testimony of reviewer violated defendant's confrontation clause right, Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 558 U.S. 305, 174 L.Ed.2d 314 (2009), Bullcoming v. New Mexico, 564 U.S. 647, 180 L.Ed.2d 610 (2011), distinguishing State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014)(DNA evidence); I.

State v. Gregory, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 521 P.3d 962 (2022)

Idaho "withheld judgment" is equivalent to a deferred prosecution for purposes of enhancing a DUI to a felony; III.

DUI
Breath and Blood Tests, Implied Consent

Blaine v. Suess, 93 Wn.2d 722 (1980)

DUI suspect demands additional tests, told he would be transported to hospital, but instead is taken to jail; held: unreasonable interference with defendant's efforts to obtain additional tests; remedy is dismissal, but see: Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991), State v. McNichols, 128 Wn.2d 242 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Bence, 29 Wn.App. 223 (1981)

Breath test one hour after driving is admissible as circumstantial evidence of blood alcohol level at time of driving; II.

State v. Keller, 36 Wn.App. 110 (1983)

Breathalyzer reading of .10 is not conclusive proof of guilt; state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the reading is correct; I.

State v. Reed, 36 Wn.App. 193 (1983)

DUI suspect, under arrest, demands to be taken to hospital for blood test, police refuse, but offer to arrange for test in jail, provide suspect with telephone access; held: no interference with other test; accord: State v. McNichols, 128 Wn.2d 242 (1995); III.

State v. Rogers, 37 Wn.App. 728 (1984)

Following an accident, defendant is arrested for DUI; due to mouth injury, breath test test is not given, defendant consents to blood test, objects at trial claiming RCW 46.20.348 (Initiative 242) does not permit blood test except where suspect is unconscious or other party to collision is dead or dying; held: RCW 46.20.308(1) does not prohibit a blood test to a consenting driver nor are results inadmissible because police do not advise driver that his license could not be revoked if he refused; I.

State v. Peterson, 100 Wn.2d 788 (1984)

Breathalyzer test is admissible where maintenance operator or technician establishes that machine was checked, calibrated and deemed operable once every three months, RCW 46.61.506(3), WAC 448-12-015; 9-0.

State ex. rel. Juckett v. Evergreen District Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984)

When DUI suspects are arrested, they must be advised of their Miranda right to counsel prior to taking breath test, and must be provided access to counsel if requested; if Miranda warnings are given, defendant need not again be advised of right to counsel prior to taking breath test, see: State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002), State v. Dunn, 108 Wn.App. 490 (2001), State v. Kronich, 131 Wn.App. 537, 542-44 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 160 Wn.2d 893 (2007), overruled, on other grounds,State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); prior to the issuance of a citation, no Sixth Amendment right to counsel exists, however defendant does have right to counsel pursuant to JCrR 2.11(c)[CrRLJ 3.1]; 9-0.

California v. Trombetta, 81 L.Ed.2d 413 (1984)

Police need not preserve breath samples of suspected drunk drivers in order for the results of breath-analysis tests to be admissible; accord: Bellevue v. Ohlson, 60 Wn.App. 485 (1991); 9-0.

Kirkland v. O'Connor, 40 Wn.App. 521 (1985)

Suspect is not given breath test, court instructs jury that it shall not draw any inferences from the absence of a breath test result nor speculate on the reasons for the absence of such a test; held: comment on the evidence, in violation of CONST. Art. 4, § 16; I.

State v. Russell, 41 Wn.App. 391 (1985)

Defendant demands second breath test from officer because he believed officer cheated on first test; held: due process does not oblige officer to provide second test on demand; RCW 46.20.308(1), permitting additional tests by a qualified person, does not apply to a second test by the police officer; III.

State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985)

Following arrest for negligent homicide, blood sample is drawn at 3:43 a.m.; at 5:52 a.m., police first inform defendant of right to independent test, RCW 46.20.308(1) [now 46.20.308(2)]; held: blood test was admissible because the notice of independent test gave defendant a reasonable opportunity to develop evidence of the alcohol content even though the advice was not given contemporaneously with the seizure of the blood sample; II.

Paulson v. Department of Licensing, 42 Wn.App. 362 (1985)

Arresting officer need only advise suspect of his Miranda rights and the consequences of refusing a breath test; officer need not inform suspect that he may not make the receipt of legal advice a condition of his deciding whether to submit to a breath test or that he is not entitled to have an attorney present when taking the test, State v. Staeheli, 102 Wn.2d 305 (1984); I.

State v. Zwicker, 105 Wn.2d 228 (1986)

Whereas RCW 46.61.517 and 46.20.308 limit the admissibility of the refusal to take a breath test to explain why no test was given, and required the court to instruct the jury that it may not consider the refusal, then refusal evidence is not probative of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of guilt, and is inadmissible at trial unless the door is opened by the defense; where the police tell suspect that a refusal to take the test "may" be used against him at trial, then there is no coercion in obtaining the refusal evidence in violation of the privilege against self-incrimination; 9-0.

Tennant v. Roys, 44 Wn.App. 305 (1986)

Blood test results in civil case are admissible where the blood sample was analyzed but once in spite of WAC 448-14-020 which states that blood analysis "should include . . . duplicate analysis", as "should" is directional, not mandatory; I.

Airway Heights v. Dilley, 45 Wn.App. 87 (1986)

Defendant, arrested for DUI, requests counsel before deciding whether or not to take breath test; police, defendant and defendant's wife make several calls, cannot reach attorney, police do not give defendant 24-hour public defender number; held: reasonable but unsuccessful attempts to contact counsel for defendant satisfy the right to counsel, see: Seattle v. Sandholm, 65 Wn.App. 747 (1992), State v. Kronich, 131 Wn.App. 537, 542-44 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012) ; III.

Roethle v. Department of Licensing, 45 Wn.App. 607 (1986)

Police need not advise DUI suspect of the period of revocation that will follow refusal to take a breath test, Burnett v. Department of Licensing, 66 Wn.App. 253 (1992); III.

State v. Whitman County District. Court, 105 Wn.2d 278 (1986)

Where police advise a DUI suspect that his refusal to take a breath test may be used against him at trial, the advice is accurate, since refusal may be used in rebuttal, State v. Zwicker, 105 Wn.2d 228 (1986), RCW 46.20.308; where police advise suspect that refusal shall be used against him/her at trial, the advise is inaccurate and, if the defendant took the breath test, the results must be suppressed; 9-0.

State v. Hill, 48 Wn.App. 344 (1987)

Police may force a breath or blood test, RCW 46.20.308(3), if defendant is arrested for vehicular assault or homicide, is unconscious, or defendant is arrested for DUI and a life threatening injury was sustained; warrantless seizure of blood is permissible following arrest for vehicular assault, Schmerber v. California, 16 L.Ed.2d 908 (1966), State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706, 711 (1984), but see: Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), see: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020); III.

State v. Stannard, 109 Wn.2d 29 (1987)

The statutory right to additional chemical test, former RCW 46.61.506(5), does not include the right to a second Breathalyzer test administered by the arresting officer; 8-1.

State v. Barefield, 47 Wn.App. 444, 110 Wn.2d 728 (1988)

Failure to advise an unconscious vehicular homicide suspect of right to additional tests is not error; while WAC 448-14-020 requires that a blood test shall employ a clean dry container, that samples be preserved with anticoagulant, and that a blank test be run, where state toxicologist testifies that while vial was in his possession it was not adulterated, that vial manufacturer always puts anticoagulants in this vial, and that he ran a test that was the equivalent of a blank test, a prima facie case was established, but see: State v. Garrett, 80 Wn.App. 651 (1996); jury need not be instructed regarding unanimity of mode; accord: State v. Steinbrunn, 54 Wn.App. 506 (1989); I.

State v. Glessner, 50 Wn.App. 397 (1988)

Police take blood sample from seriously injured vehicular homicide suspect without first advising him of right to counsel; held: due to defendant's condition, it was not feasible to advise defendant of right to counsel prior to taking blood, State v. Prok, 107 Wn.2d 153 (1986); I.

Borger v. Department of Licensing, 51 Wn.App. 942 (1988)

Declining to provide a second sample for BAC Verifier DataMaster test is a refusal; III.

State v. Watson, 51 Wn.App. 947 (1988)

Where state fails to establish that a Breathalyzer was checked and calibrated at least every three months and was in working order at the time of the test, the results must be suppressed; evidence that the instrument was checked nine days after the test does not cure the error, see: State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859, 875-6 (1991); 2-1, III.

Seattle v. Gellein, 112 Wn.2d 58 (1989)

Jury instruction that city must prove that defendant "had 0.10 percent . . . alcohol in his blood as shown by chemical analysis of his breath" creates an unconstitutional mandatory presumption, reversing Seattle v. Gellein, 48 Wn.App. 341 (1987); 7-2.

State v. Weston, 54 Wn.App. 105 (1989)

The presence of isopropyl alcohol does not prohibit admission of blood test results where testimony establishes that the testing method can separate isopropyl alcohol from ethanol, WAC 448-14-010(2)(a); I.

Gibson v. Department of Licensing, 54 Wn.App. 188 (1989)

Implied consent statute which authorizes a blood test for a person "incapable of refusal", RCW 46.20.308(4), refers to physical not mental conditions; license may be revoked for refusal, which need not be knowingly and intelligently made; accord: Steffen v. Dep't of Licensing, 61 Wn.App. 839 (1991), Nettles v. Department of Licensing, 73 Wn.App. 730 (1994), Medcalf v. Dep't of Licensing, 133 Wn.2d 290 (1997); I.

State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989)

Implied consent warnings stating suspect is entitled to additional tests "at your own expense" improperly prevent an indigent defendant from making an informed decision whether to submit to a blood test; state has burden of establishing whether defendant had financial ability at time of arrest to obtain an additional test; Spokane v. Holmberg, 50 Wn.App. 317 (1987) is effectively overruled, see: State v. Storhoff, 133 Wn.2d 523 (1997), but see: Gonzales v. Dept. of Licensing, 112 Wn.2d 890, 901 (1989); financial test is objective, State v. White, 58 Wn.App. 713 (1990); defense burden to show prejudice, State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991), State v. Dunivin, 65 Wn.App. 501 (1992); cf.: Clyde Hill v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 778 (1992); see: State v. Berkley, 72 Wn.App. 12 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Steinbrunn, 54 Wn.App. 506 (1989)

Unconscious vehicular homicide suspect is taken from accident scene in Washington to Oregon hospital where Washington police officer directs drawing of blood sample; held: taking of blood from unconscious suspect pursuant to implied consent statute, RCW 46.20.308, can only be done if suspect is lawfully arrested; Washington officer was in fresh pursuit even though he lacked probable cause to arrest until he arrived in Oregon and smelled defendant's breath, Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit, 10.89 RCW, but see: Clarkston v. Stone, 63 Wn.App. 500 (1991), see: License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005); III.

State v. Long, 113 Wn.2d 266 (1989)

Refusal to take a breath test is admissible in DUI cases, subject to ER 403 analysis, State v. Cohen, 125 Wn.App. 220 (2005), cf.: Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019); 9-0.

Graham v. Department of Licensing, 56 Wn.App. 677 (1990)

Defendant advised she may take additional tests "at your own expense" must demonstrate that she would have been eligible, at the time she made her decision to refuse the breath test, for expert services at public expense, CrRLJ 3.1(f), Gahagan v. Dep't of Licensing, 59 Wn.App. 703 (1990); but see: State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989) regarding burden of proof; III.

Sunnyside v. Fernandez, 59 Wn.App. 578 (1990)

Blood in the mouth is not a "foreign substance," WAC 448-12-230, thus suppression of breath test reversed; III.

State v. Entzel, 116 Wn.2d 435 (1991)

Police are not obliged to administer a breath or blood test to everyone accused of DUI, nor are they obliged to advise a suspect of the availability of breath or blood testing absent the state's use of the implied consent statute to request that the suspect submit to such testing; accord: State v. Woolbright, 57 Wn.App. 697 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Schulze, 116 Wn.2d 154 (1991)

Defendant's burden to show prejudice where police advise additional tests are "at your own expense," at least where erroneous warnings were given prior to State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989); WAC 448-14 is sufficient to meet requirements of RCW 46.61.506(3) for blood alcohol testing, as a "cookbook" detailing every step is not necessary, State v. Ford, 110 Wn.2d 827, 832 (1988).

State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859 (1991)

State Toxicologist is not required to promulgate in WAC procedures for evaluating, certifying and maintaining breath testing machines before results are admissible, see: Seattle v. Clark-Muñoz, 152 Wn.2d 39 (2004); state can meet State v. Baker, 56 Wn.2d 846 (1960) requirements whether or not approved methods of testing are published in WAC; challenges to qualifications of operator and sufficiency of the checking and testing procedures go to weight rather than admissibility, Bremerton v. Osborne, 66 Wn.2d 281 (1965), State v. King County District Court, 175 Wn.App. 630 (2013); state must provide all information about defendant's test, not other information about the machine's operation, RCW 46.61.506(6); failure of state to preserve a record of the invalid sample error code messages is not bad faith and does not violate defendant's due process rights; accord: State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994); 6-3.

Cooper v. Department of Licensing, 61 Wn.App. 525 (1991)

Following DUI arrest, trooper properly advises defendant of Initiative 242 rights, RCW 46.20.308(2), adds that his license would be revoked "probably for at least a year"; held:

license revocation reversed as inaccurate warning implied defendant might have his license revoked for less than a year, distinguishing Department of Licensing v. Sheeks, 47 Wn.App. 65, 68 (1987) and Strand v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 8 Wn.App. 877, 882 (1973), wherein arrestees were correctly advised and failed to establish a lack of understanding; 2-1, III.

Steffen v. Department of Licensing, 61 Wn.App. 839 (1991)

To be "unconscious," RCW 46.20.308(4), and thus incapable of refusing a breath test, an arrestee "must manifest symptoms of such a lack of self-awareness or inability to perceive as to render him completely unable to exercise judgment," Oaks v. Department of Licensing, 31 Wn.App. 892, 896 (1982); "incapable of refusal" refers to physical conditions, e.g., injury or pain, and not to voluntary or involuntary intoxication, Junkley v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 7 Wn.App. 827 (1972), Department of Motor Vehicles v. McElwain, 80 Wn.2d 624 (1972), Gibson v. Department of Licensing, 54 Wn.App. 188 (1989), Medcalf v. Department of Licensing, 133 Wn.2d 290 (1997); III.

State v. Cascade District Court, 62 Wn.App. 587 (1991)

To determine if DataMaster readings are within "10% of the average" of two samples, WAC 448-12-220, court should not truncate the average; I.

Clyde Hill v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 778 (1992)

Implied consent warnings that suspect has "right to take one or more tests administered by a physician or a qualified person of your choosing" is adequate, police need not specify types of additional tests, nor precise language of statute, Jury v. Dep't of Licensing, 114 Wn.App. 726 (2002), nor precise language set forth in State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989), nor need police cite RCW 46.61.506 to suspect; distinguishes Spokane v. Holmberg, 50 Wn.App. 317 (1987); 2-1, I.

Burnett v. Department of Licensing, 66 Wn.App. 253 (1992)

Police need not advise a DUI suspect of the specific period of revocation if suspect refuses breath test, Roethle v. Department of Licensing, 45 Wn.App. 607 (1986), Pryor v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 8 Wn.App. 953 (1973), nor need they advise suspect that refusal will cause him to be ineligible for an occupational permit; II.

Shelden v. Department of Licensing, 68 Wn.App. 681 (1993)

To revoke license for refusal to provide blood sample by suspect being treated in a hospital, state must prove that there is no breath instrument present in the hospital, RCW 46.20.308(2), O'Neill v. Department of Licensing, 62 Wn.App. 112, 120 (1991); II.

Mount Vernon v. Cochran, 70 Wn.App. 517 (1993)

City appeals appointment of breath test expert for indigent; held: where an expert is appointed solely for trial testimony, and admissibility can be determined at the pre-appointment stage, then the expert services may not be "necessary," CrRLJ 3.1(f), if the evidence is inadmissible, State v. Sandomingo, 39 Wn.App. 709, 712 (1985), State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982); admissibility is not an issue, however, where the expert is sought for review and consultation, see: United States v. Sims, 617 F.2d 1371, 1375 n. 3 (9th Cir. 1980), thus appointment was not an abuse of discretion; I.

Mairs v. Department of Licensing, 70 Wn.App. 541 (1993)

Trooper's statement, following defendant's request for clarification, that refusal to take a blood test would "probably" result in suspension of privilege to drive is inaccurate and will not support revocation of license, Cooper v. Department of Licensing, 61 Wn.App. 525 (1991); an unapproved breath testing instrument does not vitiate refusal to take a blood test at a hospital at which no approved breath testing instrument is present, RCW 46.20.308(2)(a); where suspect refuses a blood test, but police do obtain results of a medical blood test, refusal will still result in revocation (dictum), see: Department of Licensing v. Lax, 125 Wn.2d 818 (1995), State v. Cohen, 125 Wn.App. 220 (2005); I.

Johnson v. Department of Licensing, 71 Wn.App. 326 (1993)

Police need not advise DUI suspect of period of revocation or availability of occupational license to validate suspension following refusal to take breath test, Burnett v. Department of Licensing, 66 Wn.App. 253, 257-9 (1992), at least where suspect does not inquire; request at scene that defendant take a portable breath test, without implied consent warnings, does not destroy suspect's opportunity to make an intelligent decision about a subsequent breath test, Schoultz v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 89 Wn.2d 664, 668 (1978); "will you now submit to a breath test?" is a request; II.

Frank v. Department of Licensing, 71 Wn.App. 585 (1993)

Implied consent warning that refusal to take breath test "may [as opposed to shall] be used in a criminal trial," RCW 46.20.308(2), is proper, distinguishing Welsh v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 13 Wn.App. 591 (1975) and Gonzales v. Department of Licensing, 112 Wn.2d 890 (1980); III.

State v. Berkley, 72 Wn.App. 12 (1993)

Where police erroneously advise DUI suspect that s/he may take additional tests "at your own expense," State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989), Fifth Amendment precludes trial court from requiring defendant's testimony to establish indigency and prejudice; state proved blood test would cost $14, trial court can take judicial notice that most can afford $14, defendant's admission to police that s/he was employed is sufficient for court to find defendant was able to pay for additional test (dicta); if defendant chooses to testify, in camera proceeding may be appropriate, Seventh Elect Church v. Rogers, 34 Wn.App. 96, 104 (1983); I.

Nettles v. Department of Licensing, 73 Wn.App. 730 (1994)

Where evidence establishes that arrestee, although injured, talked and responded to trooper, then arrestee's statement that he refuses blood test is sufficient to meet state's burden of establishing a refusal for purposes of revocation, Gibson v. Department of Licensing, 54 Wn.App. 188, 193 (1989), Steffen v. Department of Licensing, 61 Wn.App. 839, 847 (1991); implied consent law only requires that driver have the opportunity to exercise an informed judgment, Department of Motor Vehicles v. McElwain, 80 Wn.2d 624, 628 (1972), state need not establish a knowing and intelligent decision to refuse the test; focus is upon the officer's reasonable perceptions of the driver's physical capacity, not mental state, Medcalf v. Dep't of Licensing, 133 Wn.2d 290 (1997); III.

State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994)

Lost maintenance and repair records of breath testing instruments are only potentially useful to the defense and were not material exculpatory evidence, Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988), as they are not directly related to the accuracy of a particular breath test, at 476, State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859, 879 (1991); failure of state to keep previously maintained repair records does not establish bad faith, where logical and valid reasons for changes in record-keeping policies are established, at 477-79; State Toxicologist's meeting with prosecutors in drafting new protocols does not establish bad faith, as defense had opportunities to voice concerns regarding proposed protocol changes, at 477; due process clause as to preservation of evidence is coextensive under state and federal constitutions, at 479-80, re-overruling State v. Vaster, 99 Wn.2d 44 (1983) and State v. Wright, 87 Wn.2d 783 (1976); CrRLJ 6.13 affidavits that breath testing instruments were not in working order need not be filed where live testimony is taken regarding foundation, and failure to file is not grounds for suppression of breath test or dismissal, at 483-86, 488-89; defense has failed to demonstrate that approval of software for BAC DataMaster by State Toxicologist was arbitrary and capricious, at 486-8; 6-3.

Bokor v. Department of Licensing, 74 Wn.App. 523 (1994)

Trial court properly gave portable breath test (PBT) no weight where sole evidence of reliability was that of trooper who testified device had given comparable results to a BAC in the past; see also: State v. Smith, 130 Wn.2d 215 (1996); III.

Department of Licensing v. Lax, 125 Wn.2d 818 (1995)

Once defendant refuses a blood test, a subsequent agreement to take the test does not negate the refusal for license revocation purposes, reversing Department of Licensing v. Lax, 74 Wn.App. 7 (1984); 8-0.

State v. Bostrom, 127 Wn.2d 580 (1995)

Statutory implied consent warnings, former RCW 46.20.308(2), in effect at the time defendant took the test, are consistent with statutory requirements and are not fundamentally unfair; purpose of the statutory warnings is to allow drivers to make an intelligent decision about their right to refuse a breath test, not to make an informed decision about the consequences of submitting to the test, State v. Robison, 192 Wn.App. 658 (2016); overrules Pryor v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 8 Wn.App. 953 (1973); 9-0.

State v. Treviño, 127 Wn.2d 735 (1995)

Advice of right to counsel and implied consent warnings must be given before breath sample is provided; while advice of right to counsel should be provided immediately upon arrest, failure to so advise before mouth check does not taint the breath test; reverses State v. Treviño, 74 Wn.App. 496 (1994); 8-0.

State v. McNichols, 128 Wn.2d 242 (1995)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, speaks with counsel, takes breath test, is booked, asks jail guards for blood test, is told jail does not administer tests; held: where implied consent rights are provided by arresting officer, jail personnel do not have an affirmative duty to advise a DUI suspect on obtaining additional tests, State v. Entzel, 116 Wn.2d 435, 442 (1991), State v. Reed, 36 Wn.App. 193 (1983), distinguishing Blaine v. Suess, 93 Wn.2d 722, 725-6 (1980), defendant had access to telephone and could have called to arrange for blood test; guards did not promise to assist, authorities have no duty to volunteer, thus no unreasonable interference with defendant's right to obtain additional testing; reverses State v. McNichols, 76 Wn.App. 283 (1994); 9-0.

Seattle v. Carnell, 79 Wn.App. 400, 404-5 (1995)

Chain of custody of simulator solution is not a foundational requirement for admissibility of BAC Verifier DataMaster result; I.

Montesano v. Wells, 79 Wn.App. 529 (1995)

DUI does not apply to bicycles; II.

State v. McGinty, 80 Wn.App. 157 (1995)

Electronics technician who works on circuit boards later used in BAC Verifier DataMaster need not be certified under WAC 448-13-170 for foundation to be laid for admission of test results; I.

State v. Garrett, 80 Wn.App. 651 (1996)

Blood sample must be preserved with an anticoagulant, WAC 448-14-020(3)(b), or results must be suppressed irrespective of expert witness's testimony that lack of anticoagulant did not change the results because of another procedure, as RCW 46.61.506(3) requires blood analysis to be performed according to methods approved by state toxicologist, Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), and anticoagulant language in WAC is mandatory; III.

State v. Smith, 130 Wn.2d 215 (1996)

Trooper stops defendant for DUI, administers portable breath test, does not record or remember result, trial court denies defense opportunity to cross on PBT; held: absent a Frye hearing or approval by state toxicologist, portable breath test (PBT) is inadmissible for any purpose, including probable cause, at 222; where one takes a voluntary PBT, BAC Verifier DataMaster II results are not the fruit of the poisonous tree, at 222-24; while PBT results may be been potentially useful, they were not material exculpatory evidence, thus failure to preserve is not grounds for dismissal, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467, 475 (1994); trial court erred in not permitting defense to cross-examine on PBT limited to testing trooper's recollection, harmless here; affirms State v. Lewellyn, 78 Wn.App. 788 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Walker, 83 Wn.App. 89 (1996)

Defense demands presence of DataMaster technician who performed quality assurance procedure (QAP), CrRLJ 6.13(c), state produces another technician who offers QAP documents as business records, defense seeks suppression; held: CrRLJ 6.13(c) is not the exclusive method of establishing the foundation for admissibility of breath test results, court may admit foundation evidence pursuant to business records exception, ER 803(a)(6) and RCW 5.45, evidence need not come from the record's author, State v. Medley, 11 Wn.App. 491, 499 (1974), distinguishing State v. Watson, 51 Wn.App. 947 (1988); properly admitted business records do not violate confrontation clause, State v. Kreck, 86 Wn.2d 112, 121 (1975); II.

State v. Rivard, 131 Wn.2d 63 (1997)

Absent formal arrest, implied consent warnings and rights are inapplicable, State v. Wetherell, 82 Wn.2d 865 (1973), and failure to so advise is not grounds for suppression of a blood test where the test was consensual; reverses State v. Rivard, 80 Wn.App. 633 (1996); see: State v. Anderson, 80 Wn.App. 384 (1996); 9-0.

State v. McLendon, 131 Wn.2d 853 (1997)

Defendants are arrested for DUI, breath tests exceed .10, Department of Licensing issues probationary licenses, RCW 46.61.502; held: administrative issuance of probationary licenses is not punishment under double jeopardy clause; 5-4.

State v. Brokman, 84 Wn.App. 848 (1997)

DUI arrestees are advised of implied consent warnings, consent to breath test, BAC Verifier DataMaster malfunctions, police move arrestees to a different location and, without re-advising obtain breath samples; held: breath test is not complete until valid samples are obtained, police are thus authorized to transport arrestees to a different location to perform a complete test, Sunnyside v. Sanchez, 57 Wn.App. 299 (1990), and need not readvise; II.

State v. Williams, 85 Wn.App. 271 (1997)

Federal security officer is a law enforcement officer for purposes of implied consent statute, RCW 46.20.308, at 276; II.

Medcalf v. Department of Licensing, 133 Wn.2d 290 (1997)

Petitioner declines to take breath test, at de novo trial offers evidence of a psychological disorder which rendered him incapable of taking the test; held: absent objective evidence observable to the arresting officer, a driver may not present evidence showing that a mental disorder rendered him incapable of refusing or taking a breath test pursuant to the implied consent law, RCW 46.20.308, Nettles v. Department of Licensing, 73 Wn.App. 730 (1994), Gibson v. Department of Licensing, 54 Wn.App. 188 (1989); 8-1.

Bellevue v. Moffitt, 87 Wn.App. 144 (1997)

In addition to reading implied consent warnings, officer provides defendant with a copy of RCW 46.61.506 and reads it to him; held: reading statute and providing a copy to an arrestee is neither required nor prohibited; I.

Smith v. Department of Licensing, 88 Wn.App. 875 (1997)

Foundation for admissibility of breath test results at administrative hearing does not include proof that external standard had been properly prepared or quality assurance or that certified persons changed the solution, see: State v. Wittenbarger, 124 State v. 467, 489-90 (1994), WAC 448-13-060; II.

Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 91 Wn.App. 887, 896-97 (1998), rev'd, on other grounds, 137 Wn.2d 783 (1999)
Advising truck driver of both DUI implied consent and commercial implied consent warnings, while perhaps confusing and may have encouraged defendant to take the test, did not prejudice defendant because the license revocation would have been the same if he had refused, RCW 46.25.090(1), 46.25.120(4), see: Lynch v. Dep't of Licensing, 163 Wn.App. 697 (2011), Allen v. Dep't of Licensing, 169 Wn.App. 304 (2012), Martin v. Dep't of Licensing, 175 Wn.App. 9, 18-20 (2013); II.

State v. Merritt, 91 Wn.App. 969 (1998)
Technician who draws blood, RCW 46.61.506(4), need not have a permit to analyze blood from the state toxicologist, RCW 46.61.506(3), see also: License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935 (2005); I.

Mount Vernon v. Municipal Court, 93 Wn.App. 501 (1998)
Following breath test, BAC DataMaster fails to produce a ticket, later in the day breath test ticket relating to defendant's case is printed, trial court suppresses; held: WAC 448-13-050 requires the printing of a ticket, but not immediately after the test is completed; I.

Rockwell v. Department of Licensing, 94 Wn.App. 531 (1999)
Failure to blow hard enough to get a reading is a refusal, absent showing by defendant of impossibility of compliance, Woolman v. Department of Motor Vehicles, 15 Wn.App. 115, 118 (1976); III.

Walk v. Department of Licensing, 95 Wn.App. 653 (1999)
One officer observes DUI suspect for 15-minute period prior to breath test and testifies suspect did not put anything in his mouth, does not communicate this to the officer who administers the test; held: the officer who conducts the BAC test need not actually observe the suspect during the observation period required by WAC 448-13-040, but the observation information must be communicated to the testing officer, who must certify to the Department of Licensing that the WAC requirements were met in order for driver's license to be suspended; 2-1, III.

Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999)
District court suppresses breath test in criminal case, defendant appeals DOL license revocation, argues collateral estoppel precludes revocation; held: even if district court erroneously suppressed breath test, collateral estoppel precludes admissibility of breath test in license revocation, as state had incentive, capability and opportunity to litigate the issue in the criminal case and it must abide the result, as state did not appeal, see also: LeMond v. Dep't of Licensing, 143 Wn.App. 797 (2008); reverses, in part, Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 91 Wn.App. 887, 896-98 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Avery, 103 Wn.App. 527 (2000)
Police arrest suspect for hit and run/death, smell intoxicants but do not see other signs of intoxication, note "slight impairment, faint odor," suspect dozes but his father advises police he is extremely tired, police ask defendant if he would submit to voluntary blood test, defendant consents, is not advised of implied consent warnings, blood alcohol level is .17, defendant charged with vehicular homicide; held: where police lack probable cause to believe that an arrestee is under the influence, implied consent statute does not apply, State v. Rivard, 131 Wn.2d 63, 76-77 (1997), thus suspect may voluntarily consent to a blood test, State v. Wetherell, 82 Wn.2d 865, 869 (1973); II.

Kent v. Beigh, 145 Wn.2d 33 (2001)

Three breath tests report interference, police advise defendant of blood test implied consent warnings, defendant consents, trial court suppresses; held: while a DUI suspect who is incapable of providing a breath sample impliedly consents to a blood test, RCW 46.20.308(2), the mere fact that the BAC DataMaster detects interference does not mean the motorist is physically incapable of providing a sample, thus officer was not authorized to request a blood sample, thus suppressed; affirms Kent v. Beigh, 102 Wn.App. 269 (2000), but disapproves of Court of Appeals' holding that RCW 46.20.308(3) provides the only authority under which an officer may request a blood test; 5-4.

State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 467-68 (2001)

WAC 448-14-020(3) unambiguously requires that an enzyme poison be added to blood sample and, where no evidence is offered to support that, blood test results must be suppressed, State v. Hultenschmidt, 125 Wn.App. 254, 263-67 (2004), Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), see: State v. Wilbur-Bobb, 134 Wn.App. 627 (2006), State v. Charley, 136 Wn.App. 58 (2006), State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62 (2008); III.

Shuman v. Dep't of Licensing, 108 Wn.App. 673 (2001)

At DUI trial, district court finds that defendant did not "wrongfully refuse to submit" to breath test; at DOL hearing, department declines to find collateral estoppel as district court did not hold a "fully litigated and contested evidentiary hearing;" held: collateral estoppel will apply where the party estopped has had a full and fair opportunity to present its case, Hanson v. Snohomish, 121 Wn.2d 552, 561 (1993), see: Thompson v. Department of Licensing, 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999), thus remanded for determination of privity, see also: LeMond v. Dep't of Licensing, 143 Wn.App. 797 (2008); III.

Grewal v. Dep't of Licensing, 108 Wn.App. 815 (2001)

In advising arrestee of implied consent law, police need not inform suspect of RCW section, description of the offense or breath alcohol level that will result in revocation; I.

State v. Baldwin, 109 Wn.App. 516 (2001)

Defendant is arrested on probable cause for DUI, passes breath test, tells police he took a prescription antidepressant, refuses blood test, refusal is admitted at trial; held: due to defendant's obvious intoxication and passing breath test, police had probable cause to believe he was under influence of a drug, authorizing police to offer blood test, RCW 46.20.308(2), refusal to take blood test for drugs is admissible, RCW 46.61.517; III.

Cannon v. Dep't of Licensing, 147 Wn.2d 41 (2002)

State must offer evidence that simulator solution thermometer was certified, WAC 448-13-035, as required by WAC 448-13-040, for breath test results to be admitted; 9-0.

Pattison v. Dep't of Licensing, 112 Wn.App. 670 (2002)

State Patrol informs arrestees that, in addition to the administrative action that will occur upon refusal or a breath alcohol level above the legal limit, "if you are in violation of" statute, suspension of license will occur, petitioner claims confusion; held: while penalties provided by implied consent statute for refusal are separate from penalties imposed as the result of a criminal trial, informing arrestees of those penalties is not confusing or inaccurate or prohibited; I.

Ball v. Dep't of Licensing, 113 Wn.App. 193 (2002)

Suspect repeatedly drinks from fountain ignoring officer's order that he put nothing in his mouth, including water; held: unwillingness to cooperate with the administration of a breath test constitutes refusal, Woolman v. Dep't of Motor Vehicles, 15 Wn.App. 115, 117 (1976), Dep't of Motor Vehicles v. McElwain, 80 Wn.2d 624, 627-28 (1972); driver has no right to counsel in license revocation proceedings before deciding whether to take a breath test, Vance v. Dep't of Licensing, 116 Wn.App. 412, 416-18 (2003), Leininger v. Dep't of Licensing, 120 Wn.App. 68 (2004); II.

Seattle v. Allison, 148 Wn.2d 75 (2002)

Where breath test document reflects that simulator solution temperature is within range of 34° ± 0.2° C., then temperature foundation is met, former WAC 448-13-040 (1999), question of whether variance in thermometer accuracy goes to weight, see: Seattle v. Clark-Muñoz, 152 Wn.2d 39 (2003); 6-3.

State v. Templeton, 148 Wn.2d 193 (2002)

Police advise DUI suspects that they have a right to talk to an attorney before answering questions, trial courts suppress breath tests; held: CrRLJ 3.1, which requires that police advise arrestees of right to counsel as soon as practicable, was violated because advice here provided that the right to a lawyer accrues not when suspect is arrested but rather when arrestee is questioned, State v. Fitzsimmons, 93 Wn.2d 436 (1980), affirmed on remand, 94 Wn.2d 858 (1980), Spokane v. Kruger, 116 Wn.2d 135 (1991), State ex rel. Juckett v. Evergreen District Court, 100 Wn.2d 824 (1984); because no defendant here alleged that, but for the improper advice he or she would have requested counsel before submitting to breath test, error was harmless, reversing State v. Templeton, 107 Wn.App. 141 (2001); 5-4.

State v. MacKenzie, 114 Wn.App. 687 (2002)

After legislature changed BAC limit from .10 to .08, state toxicologist retroactively modified WAC with emergency regulations, determining that quality assurance procedures were not necessary when replacing simulator solution cylinders and entering new 10% margins on DataMaster instruments; held: trial court has inherent power to interpret language of an administrative rule in a criminal proceeding to determine if the rule is contrary to law or is arbitrary and capricious, State v. Ford, 110 Wn.2d 827, 828-30 (1988); here, because State Toxicologist's actions were remedial in nature, retroactive application is permitted, emergency regulation was both curative and remedial, furthering the purpose of maintaining admissibility of breath test results; I.

Jury v. Dep't of Licensing, 114 Wn.App. 726 (2002)

Misplaced semicolon in implied consent warnings does not sufficiently change meaning of warnings to justify suppression, Clyde Hill v. Rodriguez, 65 Wn.App. 778 (1992), Pattison v. Department of Licensing, 112 Wn.App. 670 (2002); 2-1, I.

Alforde v. Dep't of Licensing, 115 Wn.App. 576 (2003)

State offers officer's sworn report and an unsigned cover sheet declaring that the attached reports are true, superior court reverses hearing examiner and reinstates license; held: RCW 46.20.308(8) does not require that the cover sheet be signed, as documents necessary to establish a prima facie case were signed and sworn, see: Lyle v. Dep't of Licensing, 94 Wn.App. 357, 362 (1999); 2-1, III.

Vance v. Dep't of Licensing, 116 Wn.App. 412, 418 (2003)

After implied consent warnings, driver repeatedly asks whether he should take the test, trooper repeatedly replies she has no opinion, driver ultimately refuses; held: while a manifestation of confusion requires clarification, Gonzales v. Dep't of Licensing, 112 Wn.2d 890, 906 (1989), indecision does not constitute confusion, Leininger v. Dep't of Licensing, 120 Wn.App. 68 (2004); I.

Seattle v. Clark-Muñoz, 152 Wn.2d 39 (2004)

Because WAC 448-13-035, requires that temperature of simulator solution be measured by thermometers certified by a reference thermometer traceable to standards maintained by National Institute of Standards and Technology, then state must prove that uncertainties be measured and recorded, as required by NIST standards; breath tests that do not meet this test are not admissible as "other evidence" of intoxication when not admissible to prove per se intoxication, *State v. Charley,*136 Wn.App. 58 (2006); but see: Seattle v. Ludvigsen, 162 Wn.2d 660 (2007) for retroactivity and ex post facto analysis; 9-0.

State v. Cohen, 125 Wn.App. 220 (2005)

Refusal to take a breath test is admissible even where the breath test, had it been taken, would have been inadmissible, cf.: Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019); I.

State v. Koch, 126 Wn.App. 589 (2005)

At arrest, trooper states that if defendant is cooperative and polite, he'll be released after testing, properly advises of implied consent warnings, defense claims that defendant was coerced into taking breath test because of fear of being uncooperative resulting in possible booking; held: because trooper's statement was not part of implied consent warnings and was not specifically addressed to decision of whether or not to take breath test, the statement did not deprive defendant of the opportunity to knowingly and intelligently decide whether to take the test, distinguishing Mairs v. Dep't of Licensing, 70 Wn.App. 541, 546-47 (1993), State v. Bartels, 112 Wn.2d 882 (1989); II.

State v. Babiker, 126 Wn.App. 664, 666-68 (2005)

Requiring "[d]uplicate analyses that should agree to within 0.01%," WAC 448-14-020(1)(a)(iii), does not mean that the duplicate analyses agree within 0.0001 in spite of the use of the per cent character in the code, State v. Reier, 127 Wn.App. 753756-58 (2005); failure of defense to express an objection on the grounds that the state did not prove that blood collection vial contained an enzyme to preserve the blood waives error, State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 820-21 (1993); I.

State v. Reier, 127 Wn.App. 753 (2005)

To admit blood test result, state must establish that the chromatograph is calibrated by testing different mixtures to verify that the instrument can differentiate between different types of alcohol, but the quantity of those compounds need not be shown; state must establish that instrument is capable of performing replicate analyses, WAC 448-14-010, but need not show that replicate analysis was performed; I.

License Suspension of Richie, 127 Wn.App. 935, 943-44 (2005)

An Idaho phlebotomist is prima facie qualified to take blood, RCW 46.20.309(8), 46.61.506(5); III.

Letourneau v. Dep't of Licensing, 131 Wn.App. 657 (2006)

New statute requires that breath test thermometer be approved by state toxicologist, RCW 46.61.506(4)(a)(iv), petitioner's test occurred before toxicologist approved any thermometers, but thermometer had been "certified" per former WAC 448-13-020; held: for purpose of breath testing, certified is the same as approved, subsequent emergency WAC, while not specifically stating that it is retroactive, is curative, adopted to clarify an inconsistency, thus applicable to this test; I.

Fircrest v. Jensen, 158 Wn.2d 384 (2006)

2004 amendments to implied consent statute, SHB 3055, RCW 46.20.308, 46.61.506, do not violate separation of powers doctrine or due process clauses, nor do they incorporate more than one subject in the title of the bill, CONST., art. II, § 19; 7-2.

State v. Wilbur-Bobb, 134 Wn.App. 627, 630-32 (2006)

Where blood vial contains the words "sodium fluoride" on it and toxicologist testifies that sodium fluoride is an enzyme poison, requirement that a blood sample be preseved with an enzyme poison, WAC 448-14-020(3)(b), is met, State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62 (2008), see: State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 467-68 (2001), distinguishing State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 467-68 (2001), State v. Hultenschmidt, 125 Wn.App. 259, 267 (2004); I.

State v. Charley, 136 Wn.App. 58 (2006)

Hospital draws two blood samples for medical purposes from seriously injured vehicular homicide suspect, turns sample A over to state toxicology lab which fails to comply with WACs, tests sample B itself; held: where state agents perform blood analysis, RCW 46.61.506(3), WAC 448-14-020 but fail to comply with WACs, results are inadmissible as "other evidence" of DUI, State v. Clark-Muñoz, 152 Wn.2d 39, 49 (2004); where medical personnel draw and test blood, the result is admissible as "other evidence" of intoxication, see: State v. Donahue, 105 Wn.App. 67 (2001), although neither are admissible to prove a per se violation; III.

Ingram v. Dep't of Licensing, 162 Wn.2d 514 (2007)

DOL hearing officer is authorized to admit document from State Toxicologist declaring that all thermometers in breath testing machines are approved thermometers; 9-0.

State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62, 68-77 (2008)

Phlebotomist testifies that she believed powdery substance in blood vials was sodium oxalate, an enzyme poison, toxicologist testifies that vials are provided by manufacturer with potassium oxalate and sodium fluoride and that if they were not present, the blood would clot and no alcohol would be detected, blood here was not clotted and alcohol was present; held: hearsay is admissible to prove foundation, ER 104(a), 1101(c)(1), witness' testimony established a prima facie case, RCW 46.61.506, that the sample was unadulterated and contained the proper chemicals, WAC 448-14-020(3)(b), distinguishing State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462 (2001) and State v. Hultenschmidt, 125 Wn.App. 254 (2004) wherein no evidence was offered to support the presence of the necessary chemicals, see: Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018); while the testimony of the toxicologist regarding what the manufacturer claimed was in the vials was hearsay and should not have been heard by the jury, it was proper for the court to consider it in determining admissibility for foundational purposes, allowing the jury to hear it was harmless; III.

Seattle v. St. John, 166 Wn.2d 941 (2009)

Defendant refuses blood alcohol test following arrest, officer obtains search warrant, trial court suppresses; held: refusal to take a blood or breath test does not preclude police from obtaining a search warrant, RCW 46.20.308(1); 7-2.

State v. Elkins, 152 Wn.App. 871 (2009)

Implied consent warnings need not include language that a mandatory jail term flows from a conviction after refusing the test; I.

State v. Yallup, 160 Wn.App. 500 (2011)

Implied consent law applies to enrolled member of Yakama Nation driving on state highway on the reservation; III.

Lynch v. Dep't of Licensing, 163 Wn.App. 697 (2011)

Implied consent warnings that accurately mirror statutory requirements, RCW 46.20.308 (2008), and commercial driver's license disqualification, RCW 46.25.090(1) (2006), are not misleading and do not prejudice a driver in a civil proceeding, Allen v. Dep't of Licensing, 169 Wn.App. 304 (2012), Martin v. Dep't of Licensing, 175 Wn.App. 9, 18-20 (2013), see: Thompson v. Dep't of Licensing, 91 Wn.App. 887, 869-97 (1998), 138 Wn.2d 783 (1999); CDL warning need not state duration of disqualification; II.

State v. Morales, 173 Wn.2d 560 (2012)

Interpreter advises vehicular assault arrestee of implied consent warnings, interpreter is not called to testify, trial court admits blood test; held: state must demonstrate at trial the warnings were meaningfully read, State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820, 824-25 (1980), State v. Stannard, 109 Wn.2d 29, 41 (1987) (Utter, J., concurring), RCW 46.20.308; here, only evidence that the warnings were read was trooper's testimony that an interpreter read the warnings in Spanish which he could not understand, thus "his testimony was hearsay and inadmissible," at 576, but see: ER 104(a), 1101(c)(1), thus court erred in admitting blood test results, depriving defendant of knowing that he had the right to additional tests; reverses State v. Morales, 154 Wn.App. 26 (2010); 8-1.

Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013)

In DUI investigations, natural dissipation of alcohol in bloodstream does not constitute an exigency in every case sufficient to justify a blood test without a warrant, whether a warrantless blood test is reasonable must be determined case by case based upon totality of the circumstances, Schmerber v. California, 384 U.S. 757, 771, 16 L.Ed.2d 908 (1966), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), but see: Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016), state's proposed per se rule fails to account for advances that allow for the more expeditious processing of warrant applications; 5-4.

State v. King County District Court, 175 Wn.App. 630 (2013)

District Court enters blanket order requiring state to prove "uncertainty statement, presented as a confidence interval" before breath tests are admitted, and requiring state to provide uncertainty calculations in discovery in all cases; held: breath alcohol concentration tests (BrAC) via the DataMaster are generally accepted in the scientific community, State v. Ford,110 Wn.2d 827, 833 (1988), without confidence intervals, court may not add a foundational requirement, RCW 46.61.506(4) (2010), see: State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859, 870 (1991), generally error rates go to weight, not admissibility, State v. Keller,36 Wn.App. 110, 113 (1983), unless, in individual cases the court determines that the error rate is so serious as to be unhelpful to the trier of fact; burden is on defense to present uncertainty evidence; I.

State v. Mashek, 177 Wn.App. 749, 756-63 (2013)

Officer testifies that defendant did not eat, drink or smoke during 15-minute period before breath test, video shows officer present in room but not looking at defendant for three minutes, trial court suppresses; held: prima facie evidence that a DUI suspect has no foreign substances in her mouth for 15 minutes, RCW 46.61.506(4)(a)(iii) and –(4)(b) (2012), does not require unbroken visual observation, officer may use "all of his senses, not just sight," at 763 ¶26; II.

State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736, 745-48 (2014), aff'd, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015)

Breath-alcohol technician and custodian of records of quality assurance procedures testifies that the device used to test defendant met quality assurance procedures performed by a non-testifying technician and that simulator solution was properly prepared and replaced according to maintenance records; held: where records are offered that were not made to establish facts at defendant's trial they are not testimonial, State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014), distinguishing Bullcoming v. New Mexico, 564 U.S. 647, 131 S.Ct. 2705, 180 L.Ed.2d 610 (2011); here, the testing about which the technician testified were not made to identify or inculpate the defendant, thus confrontation clause was not violated, State v. Ramirez, 7 Wn.App.2d 277 (2019); II.

State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 66-70 (2014)

When blood is seized pursuant to a search warrant police need not advise arrestee of his right to an additional blood test, distinguishing State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820 (1980), as a warrant is a seizure independent of the implied consent statute, Seattle v. St. John, 166 Wn.2d 941, 946 (2009), State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 196 (2017); III.

State v. Figeroa Martines, 184 Wn.2d 83 (2015)

A search warrant authorizing taking a blood sample for DUI is sufficient to authorize the testing of that sample; reverses State v. Figeroa Martines, 182 Wn.App. 519 (2014); 9-0.

Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016)

Blood test is not permitted as a warrantless search incident to arrest; breath test is permitted as a warrantless search incident to arrest, see: State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), State v. Nelson, 7 Wn.App.2d 588 (2019), Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019), but see: State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281, 290-95 (2018), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), Mitchell v. Wisconsin, 588 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 2525, 204 L.Ed.2d 1040 (2019); 5-3.

State v. Murray, 187 Wn.2d 115 (2016)

Prior to offering a breath test police need not advise defendant of statutory implied consent warnings that include marijuana warnings, RCW 46.20.308(2) (2013), because a breath test cannot measure THC, distinguishing State v. Bostrom, 127 Wn.2d 580 (1995; reverses State v. Robison, 192 Wn.App. 658 (2016); 9-0.

Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, admits to smoking marijuana, police obtain warrantless blood test, at suppression hearing officers testify that it would take up to 1½ hours to obtain a warrant by email but could have obtained a telephonic warrant, toxicologist testifies that marijuana dissipates, trial court holds that this was an exigent circumstance justifying warrantless seizure; held: government has burden of proving, by clear and convincing evidence that a warrant could not have been obtained within a reasonable period of time, natural dissipation is a factor but is not a per se exigent circumstance; here blood test results should have been suppressed on different grounds, State v. Hinshaw, 149 Wn.App. 747 (2009), State v. Rulan C., 97 Wn.App. 884 (1999), State v. Bessette, 105 Wn.App. 793 (2001), Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016), State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), cf.: State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), Mitchell v. Wisconsin, 588 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 2525, 204 L.Ed.2d 1040 (2019); I.

State v. Murray, 187 Wn.2d 115 (2016)

Former RCW 46.20.308 (2013) required arresting officer to advise DUI arrestees that license would be suspended if breath test showed breath alcohol concentration of .08 or higher or THC level of 5.00 or higher, failure of officer to advise of the THC portion does not require suppression of breath test since a breath test cannot measure THC level; 9-0.

State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016)

"Under the implied consent statute, a driver's refusal to consent to a breath test is admissible as evidence of guilt in a criminal trial. Such refusal is not a comment on the exercise of a person's constitutional rights because once an exception to the warrant requirement is found to apply, no constitutional right to refuse exists," Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 133 S.Ct. 1552, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), cf.: Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019); 6-3.

State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 176 (2017)

Defendant is arrested for vehicular assault, police obtain search warrant for blood which shows .12 BAC, defendant moves to suppress because he was not advised of his right to additional tests; held: after a blood test pursuant to a search warrant police need not advise defendant he has a right to additional independent tests, RCW 46.20.308 (2013), distinguishing State v. Turpin, 94 Wn.2d 820 (1980), State v. Holcomb, 31 Wn.App. 398 (1982); refusal to take a PBT is admissible as evidence of guilt, no Frye hearing is required, State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), but see: Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019); III.

Kandler v. City of Kent, 199 Wn.App. 22 (2017)

Police need not give implied consent warnings following voluntary consent to a blood test where statute, RCW 46.20.308 (2013), does not mandate that warnings must be given before asking for consent, distinguishing State v. Avery, 103 Wn.App. 527, 535 (2000); I.

State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281, 290-95 (2018)

Defendant is found near motorcycle crash, smells of alcohol, admits drinking and driving, before medivac takes defendant to hospital deputy draws blood at scene, at suppression hearing testifies that he lacked cell phone coverage and a warrant takes 45 minutes, telephone warrant process is "problematic" and hasn't worked in the past, court admits blood test results; held: obtaining a warrant for blood draw was "not practical," medical treatment may have impacted efficacy of blood sample, delay in obtaining blood at hospital might have resulted in dissipation of alcohol, thus exigent circumstances existed for warrantless search, Mitchell v. Wisconsin, 588 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 2525, 204 L.Ed.2d 1040 (2019), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), distinguishing Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016), Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013); II.

Singh v. State, 5 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018)

At administrative hearing regarding driver's license suspension following a DUI arrest the state must offer prima facie evidence that the blood collection test tubes were chemically clean and and contained enzyme poison and anticoagulants as required by WAC 448–14–020(3)(a), (b), State v. Bosio, 107 Wn.App. 462, 467-68 (2001), State v. Clark, 62 Wn.App. 263, 270

(1991). State v. Brown, 145 WnApp. 62, 69–70 (2008). State v. Garrett, 80 WnApp. 651, 653 (1996); I.

Mitchell v. Wisconsin, 588 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 2525, 204 L.Ed.2d 1040 (2019)

Defendant is arrested for DUI, is too lethargic for a breath test at the scene, police drive him to station to take a more reliable breath test but on the way defendant becomes unconscious, is taken to hospital where blood is drawn; held: exigent circumstances "almost always" permits a blood draw without a warrant where a driver suspected of drunk driving is unconscious and therefore cannot be given a breath test; while the time required to obtain a warrant has shrunk with technology, it has not disappeared, and with an unconscious driver, forcing police to put off other tasks justify a blood draw without a warrant, distinguishing Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016); 5-4.

State v. Nelson, 7 Wn.App.2d 588 (2019)

Breath sample can be obtained as a search incident to arrest under state constitution, State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019), but see: Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016); 2-1, III.

State v. Anderson, 9 Wn.App.2d 430 (2019)

Following collision with multiple deaths and injuries defendant is transported to hospital for his own injuries, blood test taken without a warrant; held: state proved by clear and convincing evidence that exigent circumstances existed for warrantless blood draw because of defendant's need for medical treatment which "could impair the integrity of the blood sample, officer testified that it would take 40 to 90 minutes to obtain a warrant for blood, delay caused by obtaining a warrant would result in destruction of evidence or postponing defendant's receipt of necessary medical care, State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281, 290-95 (2018), distinguishing Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App.802 (2016), see: Mitchell v. Wisconsin, 588 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 2525, 204 L.Ed.2d 1040 (2019), State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020), but see: Birchfield v. North Dakota, 579 U.S. 438, 136 S.Ct. 2160, 195 L.Ed.2d 560 (2016); I.

Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019)

Defendant is arrested on a warrant and not for DUI, at station officer asks defendant to take PBT (preliminary breath test), defendant refuses, trial court admits refusal as evidence of guilt; held: where an arrest is based on an offense unrelated to DUI a search of the arrestee's breath for alcohol does not fall within the search incident to arrest rule, arrestee thus has a constitutional right to refuse the PBT which is inadmissible in court, distinguishing State v. Baird, 187 Wn.2d 210 (2016), State v. Mecham, 186 Wn.2d 128 (2016), Birchfield v. North Dakota, —— U.S. ——, 136 S. Ct. 2160, 2185, 195 L. Ed. 2d 560 (2016), State v. Cohen, 125 Wn.2d 220 (2005); Division II disagrees with State v. Sosa, 198 Wn.App. 176, 185 (2017); dicta: a search that precedes an arrest cannot be justified as a search incident to arrest exception to the warrant requirement, thus it is questionable whether PBT refusal is admissible, id., n. 8.

State v. Rawley, 13 Wn.App.2d 474 (2020)

Following head-on collision with serious injuries sheriff notes strong odor of alcohol on defendant, medics state they will likely administer IV fluids or medication, sheriff takes blood sample, testifies it takes 20-45 minutes to obtain a warrant; held: substantial evidence supports trial court's conclusion that exigent circumstances support warrantless seizure of blood, State v. Inman, 2 Wn.App.2d 281 (2018), Missouri v. McNeely, 569 U.S. 141, 185 L.Ed.2d 696 (2013), Seattle v. Pearson, 192 Wn.App. 802, 811-17 (2016); II.

DUE PROCESS*

State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701 (1981)

Police dog searched courtroom in front of jurors each day, jurors viewed pile of handcuffs in courtroom, defendant escorted to courtroom on a leash by deputies, all held to be within court's discretion; see: State v. Gilcrist, 91 Wn.2d 603 (1979), State v. Crawford, 21 Wn.App. 146 (1978); II.

State v. Wixon, 30 Wn.App. 63 (1981)

Defendant is not denied due process merely because his trial is televised, Chandler v. Florida, 66 L.Ed.2d 740 (1981); I.

State v. Shriner, 33 Wn.App. 800 (1983)

Defendant rents car and keeps it, is convicted of theft 1°, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a), 9A.56.030(1)(a), argues he should have been charged with criminal possession of leased or rented machinery, RCW 9A.56.095, as specific statute takes precedence over general statute, State v. Becker, 39 Wn.2d 94, 96 (1951); held: criminal possession statute requires service of a written demand letter; without such service state does not abuse discretion by charging general theft; I.

State v. Cirkovich, 35 Wn.App. 134 (1983)

Indigent defendant is not entitled to a transcript of co-defendant's trial; I.

State v. Hunter, 35 Wn.App. 708 (1983)

Following mistrial, court need not provide an indigent defendant with a transcript of first trial where second trial is set two days after first trial and court will make reporter available for conferences and where defendant can not show prejudice; I.

State v. Sayler, 36 Wn.App. 230 (1983)

Defendant exposes himself to two juveniles in defendant's garage, is charged with public indecency, RCW 9A.88.010(2) prohibiting "open and obscene exposure"; held: statute is ambiguous, but see State v. Dubois, 58 Wn.App. 299 (1990); II.

State v. Weber, 99 Wn.2d 158 (1983)

Deliberate violation of an order in limine by a witness does not require mistrial, test is actual prejudice; 9-0.

Thigpen v. Roberts, 82 L.Ed.2d 23 (1984)

Defendant is convicted by Justice of the Peace of DUI and reckless driving, appeals de novo, whereupon defendant is indicted for manslaughter for same incident; held: presumption of vindictiveness prohibits trial on greater charge as punishment of defendant's exercise of right to appeal, see: State v. Bonisisio, 92 Wn.App. 783, 790-92 (1998), State v. Korum, 157 Wn.2d

---

* See also: PRESENCE OF DEFENDANT, VAGUENESS/OVERBREADTH

614 (2006), see also: State v. Miller, 92 Wn.App. 693, 702-3 (1998), but see: State v. Parmelee, 121 Wn.App. 707 (2004), State v. Aguilar, 153 Wn.App. 265, 279-80 (2009), State v. Brown, 193 Wn.2d 280 (2019); 6-3.

State v. Forbes, 43 Wn.App. 793 (1986)

Defense counsel may not argue to the jury that they must use due care because the charge is a felony; I.

Moran v. Burbine, 89 L.Ed.2d 410 (1986)

Failure of police to inform defendant of counsel's telephone call during interrogation did not affect validity of defendant's waiver of Fifth Amendment right to remain silent and right to have counsel present; Sixth Amendment right to counsel does not attach until charges are filed, thus interference by police of counsel's attempts to contact her client is not unlawful; police lying to counsel that defendant would not be interrogated does not violate due process clause; 6-3.

McMillan v. Pennsylvania, 91 L.Ed.2d 67 (1986)

State statute which mandates a minimum five-year sentence if judge finds by preponderance that accused visibly possessed firearm while committing a felony does not violate due process or right to jury trial, Harris v. United States, 153 L.Ed.2d 524 (2002), but see: Alleyne v. United States, 570 U.S. 99, 186 L. Ed. 2d 314 (2013), Apprendi v. New Jersey, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000), State v. Hopkins, 109 Wn.App. 558 (2001); 6-3.

State v. Harris, 48 Wn.App. 279 (1987)

Absent actual prejudice, jurors seeing defendant in handcuffs is not grounds for mistrial, State v. Peyton, 29 Wn.App. 701, 714 (1981); I.

State v. Baker, 49 Wn.App. 778 (1987)

In order for a driver's license suspension to be effective, Department of Licensing must send notice to the most recent address listed on any of the papers in its possession, including citations forwarded by courts, as well as to the original address provided by the driver; failure of driver to notify DOL of new address, RCW 46.20.205, does not excuse DOL's obligation; proof of actual notice is not required, State v. Thomas, 25 Wn.App. 770 (1980); here, no proof that notice sent to address last obtained by DOL, thus suspended license charge dismissed; III.

Rock v. Arkansas, 97 L.Ed.2d 37 (1987)

Evidence rule prohibiting admissibility of hypnotically refreshed testimony cannot be invoked to prevent a defendant from testifying at her trial; 5-4.

State v. Hancock, 109 Wn.2d 760 (1988)

While ownership of a gun is inadmissible to draw adverse inference as to defendant's character, CONST. Art. 1, § 24, State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664, 706-07 (1984), it is relevant to support victim's fear of defendant where victim knew defendant owned a gun, see: State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 775 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Brown, 55 Wn.App. 738 (1989)

In child sex abuse case with multiple incidents, lack of specificity of child's testimony as to dates does not deprive defendant of due process where defense is not alibi or misidentification, State v. Hayes, 81 Wn.App. 425, 429-31 (1996), State v. Jensen, 125 Wn.App. 319, 325-28 (2005), see: State v. Edwards, 171 Wn.App. 379, 400-03 (2012), State v. Yallup, 3 Wn.App.2d 546 (2018) ; II.

State v. Handran, 113 Wn.2d 11 (1989)

Judicial enlargement of a criminal statute should not be applied retroactively; where defendant committed a burglary before State v. Bergeron, 105 Wn.2d 1 (1985) was decided, then rule in State v. Johnson, 100 Wn.2d 607 (1983) should apply; harmless here; 9-0.

Dowling v. United States, 107 L.Ed.2d 708 (1990)

At bank robbery trial at which robber wore a mask and was with another man, government introduces evidence, of which defendant had previously been acquitted, that defendant entered a woman's house two weeks after robbery, wearing a mask with the same other man; held: admission of the testimony does not violate double jeopardy or due process fundamental fairness doctrine, United States v. Lovasco, 52 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977), Currier v. Virginia, ___ U.S. ___ , 138 S.Ct. 2144, 201 L.Ed.2d 650 (2018); 6-3.

State v. Mendez, 56 Wn.App. 458 (1990)

Defendant, without interpreter, enters guilty plea, responding in English to colloquy questions, following which defense counsel states he is satisfied defendant is pleading voluntarily and knowingly; defendant later seeks to withdraw plea, claiming he did not understand sufficient English; held: appointment of interpreter is within discretion of trial court, which has no affirmative obligation to appoint where lack of fluency is not apparent; I.

Seattle v. Foley, 56 Wn.App. 485 (1990)

In suspended license case, "inquiry notice" will satisfy due process; here, license was suspended after defendant refused a breath test, thus officer's advising defendant that license would be suspended if he refused, confiscating his license and issuing a temporary one and DOL mailing notice of revocation to defendant's last known address, even though it was returned unclaimed, was sufficient notice, distinguishing State v. Baker, 49 Wn.App. 778 (1987); I.

State v. DeWeese, 117 Wn.2d 369 (1991)

Removal of defendant from courtroom for disruptive behavior is within discretion of trial court, Illinois v. Allen, 25 L.Ed.2d 353 (1970), CrR 3.4(b); least severe remedy to maintain order is preferable, Burgess v. Towne, 13 Wn.App. 954, 960 (1975), see: State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Brinkley, 66 Wn.App. 844 (1992)

Trial court has discretion to allow state to reopen after defense has rested to address a juror's question, see: Estes v. Hopp, 73 Wn.2d 263, 264-5 (1968), Seattle v. Heath, 10 Wn.App. 949 (1973), State v. Vickers, 18 Wn.App. 111, 113 (1977), State v. Johnson, 1 Wn.App. 602 (1969), State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 197-99 (2001); I.

State v. Joyner, 69 Wn.App. 356 (1993)

Requiring pro se defendant to testify on direct in question and answer format does not unduly burden defendant's choice of whether to testify; I.

State v. Pacheco, 70 Wn.App. 27 (1993)

Although a contingent fee agreement with informant, in which informant is paid to secure arrrest or conviction, is not favored, State v. Whitney, 96 Wn.2d 578, 582 (1981), here evidence showed informant was paid only an hourly rate plus expenses and mileage regardless of outcome; II.

State v. Early, 70 Wn.App. 452 (1993)

Defendant appears in handcuffs during jury selection, motion for mistrial denied; held: because incident did not "inflame or prejudice" jurors, denial of mistrial was not an abuse of discretion, Pers. Restraint of Crace, 157 Wn.App. 81, 102-04 (2010), rev'd on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 835 (2012), although handcuffing should not be permitted except to prevent escape, injury or to maintain a quiet and peaceable trial, State v. Ollison, 68 Wn.2d 65, 69 (1966), State v. Crawford, 21 Wn.App. 146 (1978); III.

Mount Vernon v. Cochran, 70 Wn.App. 517 (1993)

City appeals appointment of breath test expert for indigent; held: where an expert is appointed solely for trial testimony, and admissibility can be determined at the pre-appointment stage, then the expert services may not be "necessary," CrRLJ 3.1(f), if the evidence is inadmissible, State v. Sandomingo, 39 Wn.App. 709, 712 (1985), State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982); admissibility is not an issue, however, where the expert is sought for review and consultation, see: United States v. Sims, 617 F.2d 1371, 1375 n. 3 (9th Cir. 1980), thus appointment was not an abuse of discretion; I.

Seattle v. Lewis, 70 Wn.App. 715 (1993)

Obstructing a public officer ordinance which requires the court to determine lawfulness of officer's action does not violate due process; failure to raise the issue of the lawfulness of the police action waives the defense, State v. Scott, 110 Wn.2d 682, 685 (1988); I.

State v. Cozza, 71 Wn.App. 252 (1993)

Information charges indecent liberties of a child between 1984 and 1987; held: defendant does not have due process right to a reasonable opportunity to raise an alibi defense, thus information alleging a crime that occurred over three-year period is valid; see also: State v. Jordan, 6 Wn.2d 719, 721 (1940), State v. Warren, 55 Wn.App. 645 (1989), State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122, 126 (1984), State v. Bailey, 52 Wn.App. 42, 51 (1988), aff'd, 114 Wn.2d 340 (1990); III.

United States v. Gaudin, 132 L.Ed.2d 444 (1995)

In case of making false statements, 18 USC § 1001, where materiality of the alleged false statement is an element of the crime, then it must be submitted to jury, and trial court cannot determine materiality, Johnson v. United States, 137 L.Ed.2d 718 (1997), State v. Abrams, 163 Wn.2d 277 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Thomas, 128 Wn.2d 553 (1996)

Trial court need not advise defendant of the right to testify in order for a waiver of the right to be valid, State v. Russ, 93 Wn.App. 241, 244-46 (1998), State v. Lee, 12 Wn.App.2d 378 (2020), see: State v.Robinson, 138 Wn.2d 753 (1999), State v. Barnett, 104 Wn.App. 191, 197-99 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 18-28 (1996)

Informant "trolling" for targets at AA/NA meetings, establishing sexual relationship with defendant who had no criminal history, persuading her to deliver drugs is outrageous police conduct violating due process clause, State v. Solomon, 3 Wn.App.2d 895 (2018), see: State v. O'Neill, 91 Wn.App. 978, 990-91 (1998), State v. Rundquist, 79 Wn.App. 786 (1995), State v. Blackwell, 120 Wn.2d 822, 830 (1993), State v. Pleasant, 38 Wn.App. 78 (1984), United States v. Russell, 36 L.Ed.2d 366 (1973), State v. Emerson, 10 Wn.App. 235 (1973), State v. Putnam, 31 Wn.App. 156 (1982), State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 347-52 (2014), cf.: Pers. Restraint of Wiatt, 151 Wn.App. 22, 48-50 (2009), State v. Glant, 13 Wn.App.2d 356 (2020); 5-4.

State v. Bandura, 85 Wn.App. 87, 92-93 (1997)

Oral argument is a matter of discretion, so long as movant is given the opportunity to argue in writing; a post-trial evidentiary hearing is not required absent affidavits from the witnesses or other competent evidence, allegations alone are insufficient to require a hearing; II.

State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 887-88 (1998), abrogated as to remedy, State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020)

Shackling during trial is within discretion of court, which must consider seriousness of present charge, temperament and character, age and physical attributes, past record, escapes, threats to harm or cause disturbance, self-destructive tendencies, risk of mob violence or revenge by others, possibility of rescue by others, size and mood of audience, nature and physical security of courtroom, adequacy and availability of alternative remedies, State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 842-66 (1999), State v. Hartzog, 96 Wn.2d 383, 400 (1981), State v. Alexander, 52 Wn.App. 897, 900 (1988), State v. Breedlove, 79 Wn.App. 101, 113-15 (1995), State v. Flieger, 91 Wn.App. 236 (1998), State v. Elmore, 139 Wn.2d 250, 272-77 (1999), State v. Jaquez, 105 Wn.App. 699, 708-12 (2000), see: State v. Rodriguez, 146 Wn.2d 260 (2002), State v. Turner, 143 Wn.2d 715 (2001), Deck v. Missouri, 161 L.Ed.2d 953 (2005), State v. Gonzales, 129 Wn.App. 895 (2005), Pers. Restraint of Elmore, 162 Wn.2d 236, 259-61 (2007), State v. Afeworki, 189 Wn.App. 327, 351-56 (2015), State v. Walker, 185 Wn.App. 790 (2015), State v. Lundstrom, 6 Wn.App.2d 388 (2018); where there is no evidence that jury saw defendant in shackles, there is no prejudice, State v. Jennings, 111 Wn.App. 54, 61 (2002), State v. Monschke, 133 Wn.App. 313, 336-37 (2006), see: Pers. Restraint of Davis, 152 Wn.2d 647 (2004),; 6-3.

State v. Aho, 137 Wn.2d 736 (1999)

Defendant is charged with child molestation, statute under which he was charged and under which jury was instructed did not take effect until after the beginning of the charging period; held: ex post facto analysis only applies where legislature enacts a law applying to events occurring before its enactment, which did not occur here, Marks v. United States, 51 L.Ed.2d 260 (1977); where charging period includes time before enactment of statute and jury is not asked to specify when the acts about which it convicts occurred, then defendant's due process rights are violated, cf.: State v. Eaker, 113 Wn.App. 111 (2002); defense counsel's submission of instructions including period before which the statute was effective is not invited error as it is ineffective assistance, State v. Ermert, 94 Wn.2d 839, 849-50 (1980); affirms, on different grounds, State v. Aho, 89 Wn.App. 842 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Turner, 143 Wn.2d 715 (2001)

In court, defendant is "volatile and hostile," disrupts hearings with verbal outbursts and physical violence, expressly threatens counsel and judge, after warnings from bench assaults counsel, court orders shackling without holding a separate hearing; held: when faced with actual disruptions caused by defendant's blatant and willful misbehavior, trial court did not abuse discretion by ordering shackling without a separate, formal hearing, which would have been redundant, distinguishing State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 842 (1999), see: Illinois v. Allen, 25 L.Ed.2d 353 (1970), State v. Lundstrom, 6 Wn.App.2d 388 (2018), State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020); reverses State v. Turner, 99 Wn.App. 482 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Garcia, 107 Wn.App. 545, 549-50 (2001)

A law abolishing an affirmative defense may violate the due process clause if applied to antecedent conduct if it expands the scope of a criminal prohibition after the act is done, and if the change in law was unexpected and indefensible by reference to the law which existed prior to the conduct in issue, Rogers v. Tennessee, 149 L.Ed.2d 697 (2001), Bouie v. City of Columbia, 12 L.Ed.2d 894 (1964), Collins v. Youngblood, 111 L.Ed.2d 30 (1990); II.

State v. Rodriguez, 146 Wn.2d 260 (2002)

Defense witness is shackled during testimony, defense does not object; held: upon objection, trial court must hold a hearing to determine the need for security measures whenever a prisoner will appear before a jury in shackles, whether a defendant or defense or state witness, State v. Lundstrom, 6 Wn.App.2d 388 (2018), see: State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020); here, because defense did not object or request curative instruction, no prejudice; 8-1.

State v. Mullin-Coston, 115 Wn.App. 679, 692-95 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 107 (2004)

Witnesses testify that defendant made statements while visiting him in jail; held: testimony that defendant is in jail on the charge for which he is being tried is less prejudicial than seeing defendant in shackles, see: State v. Gonzales, 129 Wn.App. 895 (2005); where trial court weighs probative value vs. unfair prejudice, ER 403, then there is no error, State v. Classen, 143 Wn.App. 45, 61-63 (2008); I.

Sattazahn v. Pennsylvania, 154 L.Ed.2d 588 (2003)

Following convicting of capital murder, jury is deadlocked at penalty phase, per state law trial court sentences defendant to life, defendant prevails on appeal, at new trial defendant is sentenced to death; held: following hung jury, sentence to death is not precluded by due process clause; 5-4.

State v. Simmons, 152 Wn.2d 450 (2004)

Persistent prison misbehavior, RCW 9.94.070, is not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority and does not violate equal protection clause, see: State v. Brown, 95 Wn.App. 952 (1999), 142 Wn.2d 57 (2000), see also: State v. Donery, 131 Wn.App. 667 (2006); affirms State v. Simmons, 117 Wn.App. 682 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Sanchez, 122 Wn.App. 579, 587-88 (2004)

Defendant appeared at jury trial in jail clothes, defense counsel expresses defendant's unhappiness but then states his tactical decision to present defendant before the jury in jail clothes to elicit sympathy; held: no error where a defendant is not coerced to go to trial in jail attire, State v. Stevens, 35 Wn.App. 68 (1983), State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709, 730-31 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Crace, 157 Wn.App. 81, 95-97 (2010), rev'd, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 835 (2012), distinguishing Estelle v. Williams, 48 L.Ed.2d 126 (1976); III.

State v. McEnry, 124 Wn.App. 918 (2004)

Potential adverse impact on future employment is not a compelling circumstance to seal a court file, GR 15, Seattle Times v. Ishikawa, 97 Wn.2d 30 (1982), see: State v. Walden, 148 Wn.App. 952 (2009); II.

Bradshaw v. Stumpf, 162 L.Ed.2d 143 (2005)

At defendant's capital sentencing hearing, prosecutor argues that defendant was principal, at co-defendant's separate hearing, state argues that co-defendant was principal, defendant is sentenced to death, co-defendant to life; held: prosecutorial inconsistency may violate due process, remanded for further proceedings; 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400 (2005)

In homicide case, court denies defense motion for spectators to remove visible "black and orange remembrance ribbons;" held: where trial court observes the courtroom scene presented to the jury and determines that what they saw was not so inherently prejudicial as to pose an unacceptable threat to a fair trial, Holbrook v. Flynn, 89 L.Ed.2d 525 (1986), court's discretion will be affirmed, at 416-20, State v. Lord, 161 Wn.2d 276, 284-91 (2007), State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 385-87 (2015); use of an alias at trial is proper where relevant, State v. Elmore,139 Wn.2d 250, 283-84 (1999), here defendant was booked under an alias, fingerprints came up as belonging to the alias, at 423; 9-0.

State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 604-05 (2005)

Neither the state nor trial court may compel a defendant to raise or rely upon the statutory affirmative defense to child luring, RCW 9A.40.090(2), State v. Coristine, 177 Wn.2d 370 (2013), State v. Lynch, 178 Wn.2d 487 (2013), State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983), see: North Carolina v. Alford, 27 L.Ed.2d 162, 169 (1970); II.

State v. Gonzales, 129 Wn.App. 895 (2005)

At outset of trial, judge sua sponte advises jurors that defendant is in custody and will be transported in handcuffs because he could not post bail, defense motion for mistrial denied; held:

advising jury that defendant was poor, being held in jail, transported in restraints violates due process, presumption of innocence, "equal justice;" 2-1, III.

Pers. Restraint of Elmore, 162 Wn.2d 236, 259-61 (2007)

While counsel is obliged to object to shackling of defendant, Pers. Restraint of Davis, 152 Wn.2d 647, 699 (2004), shackling here was harmless as he was only shackled on first day of penalty phase jury selection, trial strategy was to demonstrate remorse and accept responsibility, Pers. Restraint of Crace, 157 Wn.App. 81, 95-104 (2010), rev'd, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 835 (2012), but see: State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020); 8-1.

State v. Frost, 160 Wn.2d 765 (2007)

Trial court may not preclude defense counsel from arguing both duress and that state failed to prove accomplice liability, distinguishing State v. Riker,123 Wn.2d 351, 367-68 (1994), see: State v. Arbogast, 15 Wn.App.2d 851 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 356 (2022), Glebe v. Frost, 574 U.S. 21, 135 S.Ct. 429, 190 L.Ed.2d 317 (2014); harmless here; 5-4.

State v. Lord, 161 Wn.2d 276, 284-91 (2007)

In murder trial, defense motion to prevent spectators from wearing buttons with likeness of the victim is denied; held: "there is no per se 'inherent prejudice [to] the defendant's right to fair trial from the wearing of buttons or other displays,'" Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400 (2005), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 288-90 (2010), State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 385-87 (2015); affirms State v. Lord, 128 Wn.App. 216 (2005); 7-2.

State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 775 (2007)

In murder case, evidence that defendant owned and used a specific caliber firearm is not an improper comment on his right to bear arms where ownership of a gun was relevant, State v. Hancock, 109 Wn.2d 760, 767-68 (1988); 8-1.

State v. Russell, 141 Wn.App. 733 (2007)

Trial court's prohibiting press from photographing juvenile witnesses without their permission is not closure of a court, and court need not apply State v. Bone-Club, 128 Wn.2d 254 (1995) factors; GR 16(c) authorizes trial court to limit courtroom photography if it makes particularized findings to support its decision, presuming open access, and allows the press to state its position; II.

State v. Classen, 143 Wn.App. 45, 61-63 (2008)

Trial court allows jailers to testify as to defendant's good behavior in jail to rebut a defense psychologist's testimony about mental illness, court weighs probative vs. prejudicial value and determines that prejudice is outweighed; held: given the high probative value of the testimony relative to the "slight likelihood of its prejudicial effect, most jurors likely knowing that a murder defendant is detained, there was no error, State v. Mullin-Coston, 115 Wn.App. 679, 692-95 (2003), aff'd, on other grounds, 152 Wn.2d 107 (2004); 2-1, II.

State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857 (2010)

Holding a jury trial in a courtroom located in the jail is inherently prejudicial, akin to shackling, only permitted if, after a careful analysis, the court finds that a jailhouse setting is the "fairest and most reasonable way to handle" defendants who are found to present a serious safety risk, Illinois v. Allen, 397 U.S. 337, 344, 25 L.Ed.2d 353 (1970), State v. Sanchez, 171 Wn.App. 518, 562-71 (2012), see: State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 223-27 (2011), State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020), State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021), State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023); 5-4.

State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.App. 282, 288-90 (2010)

During drug and harassment trial, jurors observe display set out by prosecutor's office outside courthouse of shoes in memory of violent crime victims, trial judge questions jurors, dismisses one juror who says seeing empty children's shoes affected her, denies mistrial; held: display here was not improper contact with jurors, distinguishing Remmer v. United States, 98 L.Ed.2d 654 (1954), nor was it prosecution misconduct; III.

Pers. Restraint of Crace, 157 Wn.App. 81 (2010), rev'd, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 835 (2012)

Defendant, without objection, wears jail-issued sandals during jury trial, after conviction juror writes that she observed defendant shackled, in sandals, in hallway, not asked during voir dire, states she chose not to volunteer the information; held: defendant was not coerced to wear sandals as he simply lacked shoes, failure to object waives issue, State v. Sanchez, 122 Wn.App. 579, 587-88 (2004), State v. Levy, 156 Wn.2d 709, 730-31 (2006); passing glimpses of a defendant in restraints are insufficient to find prejudice, State v. Early, 70 Wn.App. 452, 462 (1993), State v. Gosser, 33 Wn.App. 428 435 (1982), but see: State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020); 2-1, II.

State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 190-91 (2011), affirmed, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012)

During defendant's testimony, joined co-defendant twice states loudly that defendant is lying, motion for mistrial is denied, trial court instructs jury to disregard the outburst and only consider witness testimony and admitted exhibits; held: trial court did not abuse discretion, court presumes jury followed instructions; II.

State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 223-27 (2011)

Trial court holds trial in jail courtroom after taking testimony regarding security, gang violence, defendant's disciplinary record in custody, danger of retribution against defendant and testifying co-defendant; held: record established that court did not abuse its discretion, at 223-27, State v. Sanchez, 171 Wn.App. 518, 562-71 (2012), distinguishing State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857 (2010); where witnesses know a defendant by a nickname suggesting a criminal disposition (here, Little Evil), trial court does not abuse discretion by admitting it, at 229-30; III.

State v. Sanchez, 171 Wn.App. 518, 562-71 (2012)

In aggravated murder case, trial court holds trial in jailhouse courtroom, finding defendant had a history of prior assaults, had exhibited threatening behavior in jail, threatened suicide, high profile case, family of victim and defendant had had an altercation at arraignment; held: while holding trial in jail courtroom is inherently prejudicial, State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857 (2010), here trial court properly engaged in fact-finding and exercised discretion, State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 223-27 (2011), decision to do so is not limited to risks that would justify shackling, see: State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020); III.

State v. Coristine, 177 Wn.2d 370 (2013)

Trial court may not instruct jury on an affirmative defense that defendant does not wish to pursue, State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983), State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598 (2005), State v. Lynch, 178 Wn.2d 487 (2013); 6-3.

State v. Dye, 178 Wn.2d 541 (2013)

Trial court allows a service-type dog owned by the prosecutor to sit by developmentally disabled adult victim during testimony; held: just as a court may allow a child victim to hold a "comfort item" during testimony, trial court did not err, where witness' need for emotional support outweighs the possibility of prejudice; affirms State v. Dye, 170 Wn.App. 340, 344-48 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Allen, 182 Wn.2d 364, 385-87 (2015)

In police homicide case spectators in court wear t-shirts reading "[y]ou will not be forgotten, Lakewood Police" and listing victims' names; held: mere presence of a spectator display is not inherently prejudicial, trial court should look to factors such as number of spectators wearing shirts, font size, closeness to jury, message must be scrutinized to determine if it advocates for guilt or innocence, Holbrook v. Flynn, 475 U.S. 560, 570, 89 L.Ed.2d 525 (1986), State v. Lord, 161 Wn.2d 276, 280 (2007), Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 417-18 (2005); 9-0.

State v. Walker, 185 Wn.App. 790 (2015)

Trial court has "sole discretion" to determine whether defendant should be shackled at sentencing, but see: State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2019), State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021); I.

State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768, 788 (2016)

Defendant sitting in a hard wooden chair as opposed to counsels' leather chairs does not violate presumption of innocence as it does not carry the same association as do physical restraints, State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 744 (2001); 5-4.

State v. Caver, 195 Wn.App. 774 (2016)

Denying defendant's request to wear jail clothes at jury trial is not error; I.

State v. Lundstrom, 6 Wn.App.2d 388 (2018)

Pursuant to jail policy defendant is brought to first appearance in restraints, trial court does not respond to counsel's objection; held: court's failure to address the issue of pretrial restraints is an abuse of discretion as "a prisoner is entitled to be brought into the presence of the court free from restraints," State v. Damon, 144 Wn.2d 686, 690 (2001), State v. Williams, 18 Wash. 47, 51 (1897), absent a hearing and findings regarding need for restraints on a particular prisoner, State v. Gorman-Lykken, 9 Wn.App.2d 687 (2019), State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.App.2d 841 (2019), State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021); but see: State v. Turner, 143 Wn.2d 715 (2001); II.

State v. Gorman-Lykken, 9 Wn.App.2d 687 (2019)

Jail guard stands next to witness stand as defendant testifies, trial court defers to the guard; held: while having a corrections officer stand next to the defendant during testimony before a jury is not inherently prejudicial, Holbrook v. Flynn, 475 U.S. 560, 568-69, 106 S. Ct. 1340, 89 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1986), State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857, 865 (2010), State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023), trial court must state case-specific reasons and determine that the need for the security measure outweighs the potential prejudice and cannot rely upon the security officer's preference, State v. Damon, 144 Wn.2d 686, 690 (2001), State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021); here, court did not exercise discretion, thus reversed; II.

State v. Jackson, 195 Wn.2d 841 (2020)

Over objection, defendant is shackled during pretrial proceedings and put in a leg brace during jury trial, leg brace is hidden but defendant is unable to rise for the jury or while taking oath on witness stand; held: absent individualized inquiry by the court regarding the need for restraints both pretrial and before the jury, at every court appearance, shackling and leg brace is a constitutional violation, C.F.: State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021), state did not prove harmlessness beyond a reasonable doubt so conviction is reversed, reversing, in part, State v. Jackson, 10 Wn.App.2d 136 (2019); overrules, in part regarding remedy, State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 887-88 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Mansour*14* Wn.App.2d 323 (2020)

In child molestation case use of victim's initials in information and to convict instruction does not deprive defendant of due process, is not a comment on the evidence, and does not amount to a court closure; I.

State v. Madden, 16 Wn.App.2d 327 (2021)

Trial court's permitting defendant to be shackled at arraignment because of the nature of the underlying offense, his criminal history and a jail guard's statement that he had previously resisted being re-shackled is not an abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Bejar, 18 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021)

In gang murder case in which a witness was threatened and shot trial court requires secondary security at the courtroom, including jurors, and prohibiting cell phones; held: trial court has discretion to require extra security for case-specific reasons, Holbrook v. Flynn, 89 L.Ed.2d 525 (1986), State v. Jaime, 168 Wn.2d 857 (2010), State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 223-27 (2011); I.

State v. Bass, 18 Wn.App.2d 760 (2021)

In cold murder case defendant is charged under a felony murder statute which was amended after the killing, changing element that state must prove that defendant committed the predicate crime "in the course of and in furtherance of the crime" to "in the course of or in furtherance of the crime; held: while not an ex post facto violation, State v. Aho, 137 Wn.2d 736, 742 (1999), a conviction for acts occurring prior to the adoption of a statute violates the due process clause, State v. Aho, supra at 744, harmless here; I.

State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023)

Jail officer stationed at door near witness stand while defendant testifies is not inherently prejudicial, State v. Gorman-Lykken, 9 Wn.App.2d 687 (2019); I.

DURESS DEFENSE

State v. Turner, 42 Wn.App. 242 (1985)

The element of the duress defense that the actor or another would be liable to immediate death or immediate grievous bodily injury, RCW 9A.16.060, is a question of fact for the jury; instructions on the defense should be given even though the refusal to commit the offense would not result in simultaneous execution of the threat, Colorado v. Maes, 583 P.2d 942, 944 (1978); III.

State v. Ng, 110 Wn.2d 32 (1988)

Approves WPIC 18.01, RCW 9A.16.060, as sufficiently describing subjective nature of duress defense; 9-0.

State v. Riker, 123 Wn.2d 351 (1994)

Trial court does not abuse its discretion by excluding battered-person syndrome evidence in duress case to explain defendant's behavior with a nonintimate, nonbattering person, at 358-66; defense has burden of proving duress by preponderance, at 366-69, overruling State v. Bromley, 72 Wn.2d 150, 155 (1967), State v. McAlister, 71 Wn.App. 576, 584 (1993); 7-2.

State v. Williams, 132 Wn.2d 248, 258-60 (1997)

Defendant, charged with welfare fraud, claims her domestic partner, a merchant seaman, ordered her to commit crime, defendant believed she would be abused if she disobeyed, expert testified she suffered from battered women's syndrome, trial court declines to instruct on duress as the harm was not immediate; held: in battered person context, abuse affects perceptions and reactions to explain subjective mental state and reasonableness of defendant's actions, thus reasonableness of defendant's perception of immediacy should be evaluated in light of defendant's experience of abuse, thus trial court erred in declining duress instructions; 9-0.

State v. Mannering, 150 Wn.2d 277 (2003)

Duress is not a defense to attempted murder, former RCW 9A.16.060(2); affirms State v. Mannering, 112 Wn.App. 268 (2002); 9-0.

Dixon v. United States, 165 L.Ed.2d 299 (2006)

Requirement that defendant prove duress by a preponderance does not violate due process, State v. Dow, 162 Wn.App. 324, 329-32 (2011); 7-2.

State v. Frost, 160 Wn.2d 765 (2007)

Trial court may not preclude defense counsel from arguing both duress and that state failed to prove accomplice liability, distinguishing State v. Riker,123 Wn.2d 351, 367-68 (1994), harmless here, see: Glebe v. Frost, 574 U.S. 21, 135 S.Ct. 429, 190 L.Ed.2d 317 (2014); 5-4;

State v. Harvill, 169 Wn.2d 254 (2010)

Defendant sells drugs to police agent who, defendant says, called him numerous times, aggressively said "you better get me some cocaine," no direct threat but defendant testified he feared he or his family would be hurt, trial court rejects duress instruction; held: a duress instruction must be given where there is an explicit or implicit threat arising indirectly from the circumstances, State v. Williams, 132 Wn.2d 248, 258-60 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Budik, 156 Wn.App. 123, 130-32 (2010), rev'd on other grnds, 173 Wn.2d 727 (2012)

Defendant is shot, lies to police claiming he does not know who shot him, some evidence is admitted that he feared for his safety; held: absent evidence of a threat and reasonable apprehension of immediate death or grievous bodily injury had defendant cooperated, he is not entitled to a duress instruction; III.

State v. Healy, 157 Wn.App. 502 (2010)

Defendant testifies he committed the charged burglaries after having been forced to do so against his will by former criminal associates, trial court instructs on duress defense and, over objection, that the defense is unavailable if defendant intentionally or recklessly placed himself in a situation in which it was probable he would be subject to duress, RCW 9A.16.060(3) (1999); held: recklessness exception to duress defense is appropriate for trier of fact to consider, see: State v. Harvill, 169 Wn.2d 254 (2010); I.

State v. Dow, 162 Wn.App. 324, 329-32 (2011)

Burden of proving duress is on the defendant by a preponderance, does not negate an element of the charged offense, Dixon v. United States, 548 U.S. 1, 165 L.Ed.2d 299 (2006), State v. Peters, 47 Wn.App. 854 (1987); II.

State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020)

Duress is not a defense to murder or to the aggravating factors that enhance murder to aggravated murder; affirms State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018); 9-0.

ENTRAPMENT

State v. Hubbard, 27 Wn.App. 61 (1980)

State can use evidence of remote but similar conduct of defendant to show predisposition of defendant; II.

State v. Whitney, 96 Wn.2d 578 (1981)

Co-defendant, at separate trial, is acquitted on entrapment defense, defendant moves to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b), and to exclude evidence as fruit of police misconduct; held: exclusionary rule does not apply as entrapment, while improper police conduct, does not invade any independent constitutional right of the defendant; 9-0.

State v. Keller, 30 Wn.App. 644 (1981)

Error not to instruct on entrapment where defendant's testimony, if believed, would establish the defense; it is not necessary for defendant to prove outrageous conduct when asserting the defense; outrageous conduct may violate due process; III.

State v. Putnam, 31 Wn.App. 156 (1982)

Police hire a prostitute, direct her to go to work for Kinky Korner and turn tricks; held: police conduct was not so shocking to the universal sense of justice as to violate due process, United States v. Russell, 36 L.Ed.2d 366 (1973), State v. Emerson, 10 Wn.App. 235 (1973); I.

State v. Smith, 101 Wn.2d 36 (1984)

Police informant tells defendant that her husband is dying, needs drugs for pain, defendant sells marijuana; held: an appeal to sympathy or to friendship, by itself, does not constitute entrapment, see: State v. Vinson, 74 Wn.App. 32, 36-8 (1994), State v. Trujillo, 75 Wn.App. 523 (1994), but see:: State v. Arbogast, 15 Wn.App.2d 851 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 356 (2022) entrapment may have been established had informant been given the drugs as opposed to sale, Sherman v. United States, 2 L.Ed.2d 848 (1958); 6-3.

Mathews v. United States, 99 L.Ed.2d 54 (1988)

Defense is entitled to entrapment instructions whenever there is sufficient evidence to support the defense even if defendant denies one or more elements of the crime, see: State v. Stegall, 69 Wn.App. 750 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 719 (1994); 7-2.

State v. Galisia, 63 Wn.App. 833 (1992)

Where drug defendant gave phone number to police agent after agent asked to buy drugs, told agent he might be able to help him buy drugs, put agent in touch with dealer, negotiated drug deal, then defendant is not entitled to entrapment instruction even though the criminal design originated in agent's mind; failure to admit to crime does not preclude entrapment as a defense where defendant admits the activity on which a charge is based, State v. Arbogast, 15 Wn.App.2d 851 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 356 (2022), distinguishing State v. Matson, 22 Wn.App. 114, 121 (1978); I.

State v. Stegall, 69 Wn.App. 750 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 124 Wn.2d 719 (1994)

Entrapment instructions need not be given unless defendant admits acts which, if proved, would constitute the crime, although s/he need not admit every element or even the crime itself, State v. Galisia, 63 Wn.App. 833 (1992), cf.: State v. Draper, 10 Wn.App. 802 (1974); where defendant denies having the state of mind required to demonstrate accomplice liability to delivery of drugs or even possession, proper to refuse instructions; Mathews v. United States, 99 L.Ed.2d 54 (1988), is inapplicable in Washington since the defense is statutory, not constitutional; I.

State v. Vinson, 74 Wn.App. 32, 36-8 (1994)

In drug delivery case, defendant testifies that he did not want to deliver in a bus shelter, officer insisted one time, defendant acceded, defense offers entrapment instruction as to bus shelter enhancement, RCW 69.50.435(a); held: without deciding whether entrapment is a defense to a sentence enhancement, officer's use of a normal amount of persuasion to overcome resistance does not justify entrapment instruction, State v. Waggoner, 80 Wn.2d 7, 11 (1971), State v. Smith, 101 Wn.2d 36, 42-3 (1984); single request by an undercover officer that a defendant engage in an illegal transaction is apparently insufficient to constitute entrapment; I.

State v. Trujillo, 75 Wn.App. 523, 75 Wn.App. 913 (1994) , abrogated, State v. Arbogast, 15 Wn.App.2d 851 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 356 (2022)

In order to entitle a defendant to an entrapment instruction, defense must present evidence which could create a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jurors as to the defendant's guilt, more than a scintilla, but see: State v. Galisia, 63 Wn.App. 833, 836 (1992), State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1 (1996); informer asking three times for cocaine, defendant never refusing to obtain cocaine but stating he was unable to obtain any until he delivers drugs is insufficient to support an entrapment instruction, State v. Enriquez, 45 Wn.App. 580, 585 (1986), distinguishing State v. Smith, 101, Wn.2d 36 (1984); I.

State v. Rundquist, 79 Wn.App. 786 (1995)

Wildlife agents sell illegal fish eggs and fish to defendant who is charged with numerous counts of purchasing unlawfully taken salmon and steelhead, trial court dismisses claiming that defendant was entrapped; held: entrapment is a jury question, at 797-8; II.

State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1 (1996)

Defendant must prove entrapment by preponderance, at 8-14, State v. Chapin, 75 Wn.App. 460, 470-22 (1994), see: State v. Riker, 123 Wn.2d 351, 366-68 (1994); test for sufficiency of entrapment evidence for dismissal: considering evidence in light most favorable to state, could a rational trier of fact find that defendant failed to prove the defense by preponderance?, at 14-18; informant "trolling" for targets at AA/NA meetings, establishing sexual relationship with defendant who had no criminal history, persuading her to deliver drugs is outrageous police conduct violating due process clause, at 18-28, State v. Solomon, 3 Wn.App.2d 895 (2018), cf.: State v. O'Neill, 91 Wn.App. 978, 990-91 (1998), State v. Rundquist, 79 Wn.App. 786 (1995), United States v. Russell, 36 L.Ed.2d 366 (1973), State v. Emerson, 10 Wn.App. 235 (1973), State v. Putnam, 31 Wn.App. 156 (1982), State v. Markwart, 182 Wn.App. 335, 347-52 (2014), State v. Glant, 13 Wn.App.2d 356 (2020), State v. Arbogast, 15 Wn.App.2d 851 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 356 (2022); 9-0 (burden), 5-4 (due process).

State v. O'Neill, 91 Wn.App. 978 (1998)

Police officer accepts a bribe from DUI defendant, officer pleads guilty, DUI defendant is charged with bribery, trial court instructs with WPIC 18.05, including language, "[t]he defense is not established if the law enforcement official(s) did no more than afford the defendant an opportunity to commit a crime. The use of a reasonable amount of persuasion to overcome reluctance does not constitute entrapment"; held: while first sentence usually applies to a sting operation, it is equally applicable where official accepts the bribe; "reasonable persuasion" sentence can only apply to an undercover operation, and is reversible error here, as it suggests that officer could have illegally threatened incarceration to extort a bribe by using "reasonable" persuasion; corrupt officer's accepting a bribe does not, by itself, constitute outrageous conduct justifying dismissal; I.

State v. Johnson, 12 Wn.App.2d 201 (2020)

Police post Craigslist advertisement purporting to be a juvenile seeking sex with an adult, defendant responds with explicit desires, drives to meet poster, is arrested, convicted of attempted rape of a child, at trial defendant testifies that he was "playing detective," did not believe she was a juvenile, trial court declines entrapment instruction; held: police merely offered an opportunity to commit the crime, no evidence of entrapment, state's failure to prove defendant's predisposition to commit crime does not meet defendant's burden for an affirmative defense, see: State v. Fisher, 185 Wn.2d 836, 848-52 (2016), State v. Arbogast, 15 Wn.App.2d 851 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 356 n. 5 (2022); II.

State v. Arbogast, 15 Wn.App.2d 851 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 356 (2022)

Police post Craigslist ad purporting to be a mother offering her children for sex, defendant responds, agrees to meet, is arrested, trial court refuses to admit defendant's evidence that he has no record as lack of predisposition to support his offer of an entrapment instruction, court finds that defendant did not present sufficient evidence by a preponderance to support the instruction, nor did defense establish that police presented more than the "normal amount of persuasion;" held: to obtain entrapment instruction defense need only present prima facie evidence to the court, overruling State v. Trujillo, 75 Wn.App. 913 (1994); lack of predisposition includes lack of criminal history, ER 404(a)(1); police testimony that they used no more than the "normal amount" of persuasion is not conclusive, state must offer evidence to support that claim; defense is entitled to entrapment instruction; 7-2.

EQUAL PROTECTION

Bearden v. Georgia, 76 L.Ed.2d 221 (1983)

In revocation proceedings for failure to pay fine or restitution, court must inquire into reasons for failure to pay and, if probationer made bona fide efforts to acquire resources to pay, court must consider alternative measures of punishment other than imprisonment; 9-0.

State v. Mason, 34 Wn.App. 514 (1983)

Defendant is convicted of promoting prostitution 2°; Seattle Municipal Code proscribes exact same conduct as a misdemeanor; held: if police had discretion to charge as a misdemeanor or felony, then defendant's right to equal protection is violated, Olsen v. Delmore, 48 Wn.2d 545, 550 (1956), State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9, 23 (1970), but see: Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189 (1991), State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994), however a municipality may not pass an ordinance making behavior which a state statute proscribes as a felony into a misdemeanor; state statute preempts municipal ordinance, thus affirmed; I.

State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984)

Prosecutor's charging decisions to charge defendant-driver with negligent homicide but not her companion-passenger who purchased the alcohol is not discriminatory prosecution as the decision was not deliberately based upon race, religion or other arbitrary classification, Oyler v. Boler, 7 L.Ed.2d 446 (1962); 9-0.

State v. Hall, 104 Wn.2d 486 (1985)

Escape, RCW 9A.76.110(1), requires state to prove that defendant knew his actions would result in leaving confinement without permission, State v. Descoteaux, 94 Wn.2d 31, 35 (1980); failure to return from work release, RCW 72.65.070, requires state to prove willfulness; because there is no rational basis for the difference in treatment of these similarly situated groups, equal protection clause is violated; Supreme Court reads in willfulness as an element of RCW 9A.76.110(1) where defendant escaped from a local work release program; 6-3.

State v. Seeley, 43 Wn.App. 705 (1986)

Defendant, charged with theft, is alleged to have sold a vehicle knowing that the odometer was turned back, challenges conviction claiming he should have been charged with special odometer statute, RCW 46.37.550; held: general theft requires proof of intent to deprive and value; determining factor is that the general statute will be violated in each instance where the special statute has been violated, State v. Shriner, 101 Wn.2d 576, 580 (1984), State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47 (2005), State v. Chase, 134 Wn.App. 792, 800-03 (2006); here, additional elements must be proved for the general statute, thus the general/specific rule is inapplicable, see: State v. Wright, 183 Wn.App. 719, 730-32 (2014), State v. Numrich, 197 Wn.2d 1 (2021); no equal protection violation, as elements differ.

State v. Hodgson, 44 Wn.App. 592 (1986)

Defendant may be charged with statutory rape or indecent liberties even though his conduct also constitutes incest; indecent liberties is not a lesser of statutory rape 1°; accord: State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543 (1987); I.

State v. Poulsen, 45 Wn.App. 706 (1986)

Where an indigent defendant makes a clear showing that his mental state will be a significant factor at trial, trial court must appoint a psychiatric expert to assist in the defense; II.

State v. Datin, 45 Wn.App. 844 (1986)

Statutory rape 1° and incest 1° are not concurrent, as neither statute will necessarily be violated each time the other is violated, thus state need not charge incest where facts support both offenses; because elements of both crimes are not the same, there is no equal protection violation; II.

State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987)

Where co-defendants are sentenced to disparate sentences for the same crime, there must be a rational basis established for the disparity to survive equal protection analysis, see: State v. Caffee, 117 Wn.App. 470 (2003); different sentencing judges is not a rational basis; but see: State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990); I.

Seattle v. Hogan, 53 Wn.App. 387 (1989)

Where a city ordinance provides for a greater punishment than a state statute having the same elements, then the city may not impose a greater punishment than provided by state law; I.

State v. Ankney, 53 Wn.App. 393 (1989)

Legislation which permits the state to seek either criminal or civil penalties or both does not violate equal protection, Yakima Cy. Clean Air Auth. v. Glascam Builders, Inc., 85 Wn.2d 255 (1975) State v. Pollnow, 69 Wn.App. 160 (1993), State v. Von Thiele, 47 Wn.App. 558, 561 (1987); I.

State v. Elliott, 54 Wn.App. 532, 114 Wn.2d 6 (1990)

Promoting prostitution 2° is a special statute as opposed to the general law of aiding and abetting prostitution, and thus there is no equal protection violation for charging the former rather than the latter; I.

State v. Horton, 54 Wn.App. 837 (1989)

Fact that prosecutor can charge defendant with violation of a domestic violence protection order, RCW 26.50.110(1), or contempt, former RCW 7.20.020, does not violate equal protection as the contempt is civil; I.

State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990)

To establish an equal protection violation due to disparate sentence from that of co-defendant, defendant must (1) establish that he is similarly situated by virtue of near identical participation in the crime; if there is no rational basis for the differentiation, then there is an equal protection violation, or (2) if defendant is a member of a suspect class and can establish that she received disparate treatment because of that membership, then there is an equal protection violation; distinguishes State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987); here, co-defendants' roles differed significantly, thus defendant cannot establish that he was similarly situated, State v. Conners, 90 Wn.App. 48 (1998); affirms State v. Handley, 54 Wn.App. 377 (1989); see also: State v. Entz, 58 Wn.App. 112 (1990), State v. Caffee, 117 Wn.App. 470 (2003); 9-0.

Seattle v. Barrett, 58 Wn.App. 698 (1990)

Seattle ordinance prohibiting intentionally damaging property, SMC § 12A.08.020, does not violate defendant's right to equal protection due to existence of malicious mischief, RCW 9A.48.090, which prohibits knowingly and maliciously destroying property, as a local ordinance does not conflict with a state statute in the constitutional sense merely because one prohibits a wider scope of activity than the other, Seattle v. Eze, 111 Wn.2d 22, 33 (1988), Seattle v. Hammon, 131 Wn.App. 801, 807-09 (2006); I.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

Where federal and state crimes are concurrent, there is no equal protection violation where penalties differ as there are two different charging authorities, distinguishing State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9 (1970); see: Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189 (1991), State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994); 9-0.

Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189 (1991)

Prosecutor's ability to choose to proceed under identical statutes prescribing different penalties does not empower the government to predetermine ultimate criminal sanctions; reverses State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9 (1970), per United States v. Batchelder, 60 L.Ed.2d 755 (1979); see: State v. Marquez, 68 Wn.App. 290 (1992), State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47, 54-55 (2005); accord: State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994), Seattle v. Hammon, 131 Wn.App. 801, 807-09 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Shelby, 61 Wn.App. 214 (1991)

Criminal trespass 1°, RCW 9A.52.080, and disobeying a valid order to leave school property, RCW 28A.87.055, are not concurrent, as the latter deals with disruptive or intoxicated persons only; see: Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189 (1991); I.

State v. Anderson, 63 Wn.App. 257 (1991)

Treating relatives differently in determining class of penalty for rendering criminal assistance 1°, RCW 9A.76.070(2), is a rational classification; II.

State v. Danis, 64 Wn.App. 814 (1992)

Liberty interest alone is subject to minimal equal protection scrutiny, State v. Phelan, 100 Wn.2d 508, 514 (1983), In re Mota, 114 Wn.2d 465 (1990), cf.: In re Fogle, 128 Wn.2d 5 (1995), but see: State v. Lua, 62 Wn.App. 34, 41 (1991), State v. Coria, 62 Wn.App. 44, 50 (1991); I.

State v. Liewer, 65 Wn.App. 641 (1992)

Bribery, RCW 9A.68.010(1)(b), does not have same elements as official misconduct, RCW 9A.80.010(1), misconduct of a public officer, RCW 42.20.010, or failure of duty of a public officer, RCW 42.20.100; I.

State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993)

Assault 2°, RCW 9A.36.021(1), and unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), are not concurrent, as the latter lacks a mens rea element, State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Murphy, 7 Wn.App. 505 (1972), State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994); II.

State v. Talley, 122 Wn.2d 192 (1993)

Malicious harassment statute, RCW 9A.36.080, which permits prosecutor to charge either felony malicious harassment or a misdemeanor assault, does not violate equal protection clause, as elements differ, increased punishment is justified by the additional element of victim selection and its associated greater harm, State v. Robertson, 88 Wn.App. 836 (1997), distinguishing State v. Devine, 84 Wn.2d 467 (1974); 8-0.

Everett v. Heim, 71 Wn.App. 392 (1993)

Ordinance prohibiting adult entertainer from sitting on lap or separating a patron's legs is not overbroad or vague, prohibits pure conduct, not speech, O'Day v. King Cy., 109 Wn.2d 796 (1988), does not violate equal protection by distinguishing entertainers who perform in adult entertainment places as opposed to other entertainers; I.

State v. Ruff, 122 Wn.2d 731 (1993)

RCW 9.41.040(4), which prohibits one acquitted by reason of insanity from ever possessing a short firearm, violates equal protection clause, as one who is convicted of a violent felony may apply for restoration of that right, Morris v. Blaker, 118 Wn.2d 133 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994)

Two criminal statutes with identical elements but disparate penalties do not violate equal protection clause, United States v. Batchelder, 60 L.Ed.2d 755 (1979), Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189, 192 (1991), overruling State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9 (1970); thus, assault 2° and unlawful display of a weapon, RCW 9.41.270(1), even if they have the same elements, do not violate equal protection, see: State v. Hupe, 50 Wn.App. 277 (1988), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778 (2007), State v. Karp, 69 Wn.App. 369 (1993); II.

United States v. Armstrong, 134 L.Ed.2d 687 (1996)

To obtain discovery from government to support a claim of selective prosecution based upon race, defendant must produce some evidence that government has declined to prosecute similarly situated defendants of other races, State v. Bridges, 91 Wn.App. 102, 105-6 (1998); 8-1.

State v. Heiskell, 129 Wn.2d 113 (1996)

Juveniles are neither a suspect nor semi-suspect class, State v. Schaaf, 109 Wn.2d 1, 19 (1987), thus rational relationship test applies.

State v. Conners, 90 Wn.App. 48 (1998)

Disparate sentences for nonsuspect class co-defendants are justified by one defendant's not being a "kingpin" in drug operation, being directed by the other defendant, cooperating with authorities and pleading guilty, see: State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275, 290-1 (1990), State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987), State v. Entz, 58 Wn.App. 112 (1990); III.

State v. Marintorres, 93 Wn.App. 442, 449-52 (1999)

Statutes which provide that hearing-impaired defendant is entitled to interpreter without cost to defendant, RCW 2.42.120(1), but that a non-English speaking defendant may be taxed costs of interpreters, RCW 2.43.040(4), violate equal protection clause, as there is no rational basis for the classification; II.

State v. Berrier, 110 Wn.App. 639 (2002)

Enhancing illegal possession of a short-barreled shotgun, RCW 9.41.190(1) with a deadly weapon allegation for the same shotgun violates equal protection clause as legislature exempted enhancements for machine guns, no rational basis for the distinction, see also: State v. Pedro, 148 Wn.App. 932, 944-52 (2009); II.

State v. Caffee, 117 Wn.App. 470 (2003)

Defendant goes to trial, is found guilty of murder 1°, co-defendant pleads guilty to murder 2°, cooperates with police and testifies at defendant's trial, defendant is sentenced to lesser term, trial court finding equal protection violation; held: disparate sentences between co-defendants satisfy rational basis analysis where one pleads guilty to a lesser crime and cooperates with police while a second is convicted at trial of a more serious offense, State v. Handley, 115 Wn.2d 275 (1990), distinguishing State v. Clinton, 48 Wn.App. 671 (1987); I.

State v. Gaines, 121 Wn.App. 687, 703-06 (2004)

Prosecutor's policy to recommend exceptional sentence downward for certain defendants who plead guilty does not deny equal protection to a defendant who went to trial before prosecutor enacted its policy, as saving resources of a trial is a rational basis for the distinction; I.

State v. Harner, 153 Wn.2d 228 (2004)

Absence of a drug court in the county in which a defendant is charged does not violate equal protection or due process clauses; 9-0.

State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47, 54-55 (2005)

Defendant uses former friend's identification at a traffic stop, is convicted of identity theft, RCW 9.35.020(1), claims she should have been charged with criminal impersonation, RCW 9A.60.040(1); held: because criminal impersonation does not require assuming the identify of an actual person, see: State v. Donald, 68 Wn.App. 543, 550 (1993), no equal protection violation occurred, see also: Kennewick v. Fountain, 116 Wn.2d 189, 193 (1991), United States v. Batchelder, 60 L.Ed.2d 755 (1979); I.

State v. Lewis, 194 Wdn.App.. 709 (2016)

Mandatory DNA fee, RCW 43.43.7541 (2008), does not violate equal protection clause where defendant was ordered to pay previously for a prior conviction; I.

State v. Min Sik Kim, 7 Wn.App.2d 839 (2019)

RCW 9.994A.505(7) (2015) which forbids credit for time served for pretrial electronic home monitoring for, inter alia, violent offenses does not violate double jeopardy or equal protection clauses, cf.: State v. Anderson, 132 Wn.2d 203, 213 (1997), Harris v. Charles, 171 Wn.2d 455 (2011); II.

ESCAPE

State v. Bryant, 25 Wn.App. 635 (1980)

As soon as defendant is away from restraint, there is an escape, no attempt instruction need be given; III.

State v. Walker, 27 Wn.App. 544 (1980)

Leaving a treatment program, completion of which was a condition of probation, does not constitute escape as it was not a detention facility; II.

State v. Descoteaux, 94 Wn.2d 31 (1980), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982)

Mens rea element of escape 1° is that defendant knew his actions would result in leaving confinement without permission; must prove incarceration pursuant to felony conviction by certified copy of Judgment and Sentence; 9-0.

State v. Teaford, 31 Wn.App. 496 (1982)

A convicted felon who is temporarily transferred from prison to jail for trial on new charge has dual status of being detained pursuant to a felony and with being in custody after having been charged with a felony, thus an escape will support an escape 1° conviction; II.

State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982)

Defendant, charged with escape, is not entitled to necessity defense instructions where defendant did not make a bona fide effort to return to custody or surrender as soon as he reached a position of safety; II.

State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982)

Escapee from work release cannot be charged with escape 1°, RCW 9.76.110, must be charged with willful failure to return to work release, RCW 72.65.070, State v. Smeltzer, 86 Wn.App. 818 (1997); maximum sentence for violating RCW 72.65.070 is 10 years, $5000 fine; overrules In re Little, 95 Wn.2d 545 (1981), State v. Descoteaux, 94 Wn.2d 31 (1980), State v. Yallup, 25 Wn.App. 603 (1980); prospective only; 8-0.

State v. Peters, 35 Wn.App. 427 (1983)

Failing to return from a pass is escape; detention pursuant to some color of authority is sufficient to sustain charge even though order of detention has expired; I.

State v. Gonzales, 37 Wn.App. 251 (1984)

Defendant returns to work release facility after work, then absconds; at escape 2° trial defendant challenges validity of prior pleas; held: escape 1° is proper charge; defendant is being detained "pursuant to a conviction of a felony," RCW 9A.76.110, unless and until prior convictions are set aside; III.

State v. Solis, 38 Wn.App. 484 (1984)

A person who is arrested for a parole violation pursuant to a parole suspension warrant is being detained pursuant to a felony conviction for escape 1° charge, RCW 9A.76.110(1), 9.95.120, 72.04A.090, 9.95.130, State v. Walls, 106 Wn.App. 792 (2001); where police officer is holding suspect's arm and informs him he is under arrest for a parole violation, and suspect breaks and runs, suspect is escaping from custody, State v. Sullivan, 65 Wn.2d 47, 51 (1964), Seattle v. Sayer, 11 Wn.App. 481, 484-85 (1974); III.

State v. Hickock, 39 Wn.App. 664 (1985)

In willful failure to return to work release prosecution, RCW 72.65.070, state need not prove validity of underlying felony conviction; unless underlying felony conviction is set aside, it is valid for purposes of trial on willful failure to return charge, State v. Gonzales, 103 Wn.2d 564 (1985), State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 192-93 (2004), State v. Paniuaga, 22 Wn.App.2d 350 (2022); I.

State v. Snyder, 40 Wn.App. 338 (1985)

In escape 1° case, element of defendant's detention pursuant to a felony does not require proof he was actually serving his sentence for that felony as long as he had not been paroled and had been committed, State v. Bryant, 25 Wn.App. 635, 637 (1980); II.

State v. Newman, 40 Wn.App. 353 (1985)

Defendant serving time in a county work release facility pursuant to a suspended prison sentence who fails to return from work can only be charged with failure to return, RCW 72.65.070, and cannot be charged with escape 1°, RCW 9A.76.110, State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982), State v. Dorn, 93 Wn.App. 535 (1999); I.

State v. Baker, 40 Wn.App. 845 (1985)

Well-planned attempted escape does not, by itself, justify sentence outside standard range, RCW 9.94A.120(2); use of weapons, injuries, hostage-taking or destruction of property could be a substantial and compelling reason for an exceptional sentence; court may consider degree of sophistication and planning as an aggravating factor for any crime, RCW 9.94A.390; II.

State v. Gonzales, 103 Wn.2d 564 (1985)

Escape 1° defendant, RCW 9A.76.110(1), may not challenge the constitutional validity of the underlying conviction, see: State v. Hickock, 39 Wn.App. 664 (1985), State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185, 192-93 (2004), State v. Paniuaga, 22 Wn.App.2d 350 (2022); 5-2-2.

State v. Hall, 104 Wn.2d 486 (1985)

Escape, RCW 9A.76.110(1), requires state to prove that defendant knew his actions would result in leaving confinement without permission, State v. Descoteaux, 94 Wn.2d 31, 35 (1980); failure to return from work release, RCW 72.65.070, requires state to prove willfulness; because there is no rational basis for the difference in treatment of these similarly situated groups, equal protection clause is violated; Supreme Court reads in willfulness as an element of RCW 9A.76.110(1) where defendant escaped from a local work release program; 6-3.

State v. Christian, 44 Wn.App. 764 (1986)

Leaving a work release facility without permission is escape, RCW 9A.76.110, not failure to return to work release, RCW 72.65.070, distinguishing State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982); I.

State v. Perencevic, 54 Wn.App. 585 (1989)

Defendant attempts to escape while being held pursuant to a warrant issued for violation of SRA community supervision violations; held: there is a causal relationship between the warrants and the prior felony convictions, thus detention was pursuant to a conviction of a felony, State v. Walls, 106 Wn.App. 792 (2001), defendant was properly convicted of attempted escape 1°, State v. Brooks, 157 Wn.App. 258 (2010); I.

State v. Basford, 56 Wn.App. 268 (1989)

A convicted felon who lawfully checks out of a work release program and fails to return may only be charged with willful failure to return to work release, RCW 72.65.070, may not be charged with escape, RCW 9A.76.110, irrespective of whether he was sentenced to more than a year and transferred to a work release facility from prison or whether he was sentenced to less than a year directly to work release, see: State v. Smeltzer, 86 Wn.App. 818 (1997), State v. Dorn, 93 Wn.App. 535 (1999); III.

State v. Kent, 62 Wn.App. 458 (1991)

Misdemeanants who fail to return to work release or jail following temporary release may be prosecuted for escape 2°, RCW 9A.76.120(1)(a), State v. Peters, 35 Wn.App. 427 (1983), State v. Ammons,, 136 Wn.2d 453 (1998), distinguishing State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982); II.

State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 459-60 (1994)

In escape 1°, RCW 9A.76.110, where defendant was being detained on three prior felonies, it was error to permit prosecutor to introduce evidence of all three when only one would have sufficed, harmless here; I.

State v. Parker, 76 Wn.App. 747 (1995)

Where defendant is serving time in home detention, leaving without permission constitutes escape, RCW 9A.76.110, State v. Ammons,, 136 Wn.2d 453 (1998); III.

State v. Smeltzer, 86 Wn.App. 818 (1997)

Defendant is sentenced to prison, judge allows a weekend furlough before serving sentence, defendant fails to surrender, is convicted of escape 1°; held: defendant should have been charged with the more specific failure to return from furlough, RCW 72.66.060, State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255, 257-8 (1982); a felon sentenced to more than a year is a state prisoner even if in the county jail awaiting transportation, State v. Basford, 56 Wn.App. 268, 272-3 (1989), State v. Dorn, 93 Wn.App. 535 (1999), a "furlough" is an authorized leave of absence, RCW 72.66.010(2); III.

State v. Ammons, 136 Wn.2d 453 (1998)

A defendant sentenced to partial confinement in a work crew program who fails to report or absents himself from the work crew is guilty of escape 1º, RCW 9A.76.110, as a work crew assignment is "custody," RCW 9A.76.010(1), State v. Breshon, 115 Wn.App. 874 (2003), see: State v. Kent, 62 Wn.App. 458 (1991), State v. Parker, 76 Wn.App. 747 (1995), State v. Brooks, 157 Wn.App. 258 (2010); affirms State v. Guy, 87 Wn.App. 238 (1997); 6-3.

State v. Marintorres, 93 Wn.App. 442 (1999)

Defendant's belief that his sentence had expired is not a defense to escape 1º; state need only prove that defendant knew he left prison without permission; II.

State v. Dorn, 93 Wn.App. 535 (1999)

Defendant is sentenced to 180 days in county jail for theft 2°, granted medical furlough and fails to return, is convicted of escape, RCW 9A.76.110, rather than failure to return from furlough, RCW 72.66.060; held: special statute of failure to return from furlough must be charged when it punishes the same conduct as a general statute, State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255, 258 (1982); a furlough is an authorized leave for any resident of a state correctional institution, RCW 72.66.010(2), -.010(4), a felon serving time in county jail is under the authority of the Department of Corrections, State v. Basford, 56 Wn.App. 268, 272 (1989), State v. Newman, 40 Wn.App. 353 (1985), State v. Rinkes, 49 Wn.2d 664, 666 (1957); II.

State v. Hendrix, 109 Wn.App. 508 (2001)

Juvenile leaves holding cell without authority, state offers no evidence to show she was arrested for an offense or confined pursuant to court order; held: escape 2˚ requires proof of status of detainee, not merely the existence of a detention facility, thus reversed for insufficiency and remanded for sentencing on escape 3˚, see: State v. Gomez, 152 Wn.App. 751 (2009); I.

State v. Law, 110 Wn.App. 36 (2002)

Defendant, being held pending a felony sentencing, is granted medical furlough by court, fails to return, trial court dismisses escape 2˚ on grounds that defendant should have been charged with failure to return from furlough, former RCW 72.66.060; held: failure to return from furlough applies only to prisoners sentenced to DOC, thus proper charge was escape 2˚, RCW 9A.76.120(1)(a); III.

State v. Breshon, 115 Wn.App. 874 (2003)

At sentencing, defendants are ordered, as alternatives to total confinement, RCW 9.94A.680(3), to report for a specific period to a community-based drug treatment program, defendants leave and fail to return, are convicted of escape 1°; held: because defendants were under restraint per court order, they escaped from custody, State v. Ammons, 136 Wn.2d 453 (1998); II.

State v. Rizor, 121 Wn.App. 898 (2004)

A defendant sentenced to less than a year in county jail followed by community custody who does not report to DOC is properly charged with escape from community custody, RCW 72.09.310; II.

Pers. Restraint of Lofton, 142 Wn.App. 412 (2008)

While former RCW 9A.94A.525(14) (2002) [now RCW 9A.94A.525(15)] states, "[i]f the present conviction is for … Escape … count adult prior convictions as one point," it refers to each prior conviction, does not require that all convictions collectively count as one point, State v. Combs, 149 Wn.App. 556 (2009), see: State v. Baker, 194 Wn.App. 678 (2016); I.

State v. Eichelberger, 144 Wn.App. 61 (2008)

Judge orally states "I'm going to have [defendant] taken in custody," defendant runs out of courtroom, is convicted of escape 1°; held: an oral statement by the court that defendant is in custody is sufficient to establish that defendant was "in custody," RCW 9A.76.110, see: State v. Breshon, 115 Wn.App. 874, 880 (2003); II.

State v. Gomez, 152 Wn.App. 751 (2009)

Escape from a booking room after arrest but prior to booking is escape from a detention area, sufficient to prove escape 2º, see: State v. Hendrix, 109 Wn.App. 508 (2001); III.

State v. Brooks, 157 Wn.App. 258 (2010)

Defendant is arrested on community custody warrant, escapes, is convicted of escape 1°, RCW 9A.76.110(1) (2001); held: arrest for a community custody violation is a detention pursuant to a felony, State v. Bryant, 25 Wn.App. 635, 637 (1980), State v. Snyder, 40 Wn.App. 338, 339 (1985), State v. Solis, 38 Wn.App. 484, 486-87 (1984); II.

State v. Baker, 194 Wn.App. 678 (2016)

Offender score for escape is limited to prior escape convictions, RCW 9.94A.525(14) (2013); III.

State v. Rudolph, 199 Wn.App. 813 (2017)

In community custody violation/escape from community custody, RCW 72.09.310 (1992), defining element of "willful" as knowledge and not as a "purposeful act" is correct; III.

EVIDENCE
Best Evidence Rule

State v. Descoteaux, 94 Wn.2d 31 (1980), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Danforth, 97 Wn.2d 255 (1982)

In seeking to prove a prior felony conviction in an escape case, best evidence is certified copy of judgment and sentence, State v. Revers, 130 Wn.App. 689 (2005), but see: Pers. Restraint of Adolph, 170 Wn.2d 556, 565-71 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Mahmood, 45 Wn.App. 200 (1986)

To prove the contents of a corporate record, the original writing is required unless it cannot be obtained by judicial process, ER 1002, 1004; to the extent that a foundation is laid, a witness may testify to personal knowledge of a corporate affair, ER 602, unless the matter is a corporate act or is not one of personal knowledge; I.

State v. Detrick, 55 Wn.App. 501 (1989)

Burglary victim enters suspect's home, steals letter written by suspect in which suspect confesses, destroys letter, is permitted at trial to testify to contents of letter; held: trial court did not abuse its discretion, State v. Kinard, 109 Wn.App. 428, 435-36 (2001); even if letter was destroyed in bad faith, ER 1004(a), victim was not a party and thus was not the proponent of the evidence, State v. Cannon, 125 Wash. 515, 519 (1923); even if victim was the proponent, victim destroyed letter not to conceal contents but because police told them it would be inadmissible and because of victim's fear he would be prosecuted for mail theft, thus not bad faith; I.

State v. Smith, 66 Wn.App. 825 (1992)

Faxed CCDR which contains an exact copy of an original seal, intended by the Department of Licensing to be a certified copy of the driving record, ER 902, is an original document, ER 1001(c), and an admissible duplicate, ER 1001(d), 1003; I.

State v. Negrete, 72 Wn.App. 62, 68 (1993)

Police photocopy buy money prior to purchase of drugs, court admits photocopies over objection that there was no testimony that anyone compared cash taken from defendant upon arrest with photocopies; held: because the bills themselves were not marked, the photocopy is the original record of the bills, thus was the best evidence, ER 1003; III.

State v. Kinard, 109 Wn.App. 428 (2001)

Informant testifies that defendant gave her paper with name and phone number, police lose paper, trial court admits testimony about contents; held: absent evidence of bad faith, witness may testify about contents of lost paper, ER 1004(a), State v. Detrick, 55 Wn.App. 501, 502-04 (1989); III.

State v. Andrews, 172 Wn.App. 703 (2013)

Police photograph text messages and record voice mail, defense states it has no evidence to challenge authenticity, trial court admits evidence; held: a duplicate is admissible absent a challenge to authenticity, ER 1003, 1004; a witness' testimony as to the defendant's phone number and signature sufficiently authenticate pictures of received text messages, see: State v. Young, 192 Wn.App. 850 (2016), cf.: State v. Blizzard, 195 Wn.App. 717, 734-35 (2016); here, victim identified defendant's voice on voice mail, name used by caller on voice mail and text messages was the same, evidence established that the name was used by the defendant, thus court had tenable grounds to admit both; III.

EVIDENCE
Business Records/Public Records

State v. Ecklund, 30 Wn.App. 313 (1981)

FBI serologist testifies as to tests on blood based on a compilation of lab tests performed by a technician working under witness's supervision; held: admissible as the underlying data are of a kind reasonably relied upon by experts in the field, ER 703, and as a business record, RCW 5.45.020, as the report itself was prepared in the regular course of business, but see: State v. Nation, 110 Wn.App. 651, 662-67 (2002); II.

State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 680 (1982)

Business record exception permits admission of a record containing double hearsay only if a third party is a member of the business organization and has a duty to supply the information on the form; it is improper to use the business record exception to admit hearsay medical opinion as to causation of a disease, Young v. Liddington, 50 Wn.2d 78 (1957), see: State v. Christopher, 114 Wn.App. 858 (2003); ER 803(a)(4) allowing statements made for purposes of medical diagnosis or treatment does not apply to statements of patient as to the suspected source of venereal disease; II.

State v. Ben-Neth, 34 Wn.App. 600 (1983)

Computer records offered as business records, RCW 5.45.020, are admissible within discretion of trial court; foundation may be laid by one who has custody of or has supervised creation of record, even if witness does not understand computer system, State v. Quincy, 122 Wn.App. 395 (2004); I.

State v. Thompson, 35 Wn.App. 766 (1983)

Public records may be authenticated pursuant to RCW 5.44.040 (certified) or, if live testimony is available, as a business record, RCW 5.45.020; see: ER 901(a), 902(d), State v. Stephens, 83 Wn.2d 485 (1974); I.

State v. Sellers, 39 Wn.App. 799 (1985)

Lab report showing homicide victim's blood type was admitted as a business record as part of her physician's file and identified as such by physician; held: physician's records, made in regular course of business, identified properly, is competent evidence of a condition therein recorded, RCW 5.45.020, Benjamin v. Havens, Inc., 60 Wn.2d 196, 200 (1962); physician is a "qualified witness" in lieu of records custodian; accord: State v. Garrett, 76 Wn.App. 719 (1995); II.

State v. Ross, 42 Wn.App. 806 (1986)

Assault victim disappears during trial before she testifies, no record is made as to why she did not appear and what efforts were made to locate her, court admits victim's 911 call as an excited utterance, ER 803(a)(2); held: 911 tapes meet business record requirements, RCW 5.45.020, State v. Bradley, 17 Wn.App. 916 (1977); however, where the hearsay content in a business record goes to the heart of an issue at trial, the hearsay should be rejected unless it meets the test of another exception, State v. White, 72 Wn.2d 524, 530 (1967); here, confrontation clause violated because unavailability not established, State v. Guloy, 104 Wn.2d 412 (1985), but see: State v. Davis, 131 Wn.App. 71 (2005), aff'd, on other grounds, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006); I.

State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591 (1989)

Medical examiner who supervised but did not perform autopsy testifies as to facts contained in autopsy report; held: witness may testify to factual contents of a report that is admissible as a business record where the record was prepared under the testifying witness's supervision, State v. Kreck, 86 Wn.2d 112, 115 (1975), State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 156-7 (1992); see also: State v. Wicker, 66 Wn.App. 409 (1992), State v. Garrett, 76 Wn.App. 719 (1995); I.

State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147 (1992)

Physician reads to jury child rape complainant's statements to another physician contained in medical records; held: declarant's statements, independently admissible under ER 803(a)(4), are therefore admissible under business records exception, as both statements fall within hearsay exceptions, ER 805, State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591, 596 (1989); I.

State v. Wicker, 66 Wn.App. 409 (1992)

Fingerprint technician testifies, over objection, that another technician's initials on fingerprint card verified his opinion that prints were defendant's; held: while exhibit meets business records exception, RCW 5.45.020, testimony converted character of evidence to an opinion; business record can only be a record of an act, condition or event, but expert opinion cannot constitute a business record, State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591, 596 (1989); because fingerprint analysis is not a routine laboratory test, the narrow exception of permitting drug analysis through business records, State v. Kreck, 86 Wn.App. 591, 596 (1989) is inapplicable; I.

State v. Garrett, 76 Wn.App. 719 (1995)

In child abuse case, physician at hospital at which victim was examined testifies to results of a pediatric resident's examination and tests of victim; held: medical records are admissible as business record where physician testifies that she is familiar with the procedures used, routinely relies on the reports, and that the record is part of the common medical file, State v. Ziegler, 114 Wn.2d 533, 538-39 (1990), see: State v. DeVries, 149 Wn.2d 842, 846-48 (2003), record need not have been made under the witness's supervision to be admissible, see also: State v. Kreck, 86 Wn.2d 112, 114-9 (1975), State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 156-7 (1992), State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591, 596 (1989), State v. Iverson, 126 Wn.App. 329 (2005), State v. Doerflinger, 170 Wn.App. 650 (2012); I.

State v. Walker, 83 Wn.App. 89 (1996)

In DUI case, defense demands presence of DataMaster technician who performed quality assurance procedure (QAP), CrRLJ 6.13(c), state produces another technician who offers QAP documents as business records, defense seeks suppression; held: CrRLJ 6.13(c) is not the exclusive method of establishing the foundation for admissibility of breath test results, court may admit foundation evidence pursuant to business records exception, ER 803(a)(6) and RCW 5.45, evidence need not come from the record's author, State v. Medley, 11 Wn.App. 491, 499 (1974), distinguishing State v. Watson, 51 Wn.App. 947 (1988); properly admitted business records do not violate confrontation clause, State v. Kreck, 86 Wn.2d 112, 121 (1975); II.

State v. Hines, 87 Wn.App. 98 (1997)

Police incident report, while routine, is an investigation by the state including observations of an officer, cross-examination would permit defense to test accuracy, thus it is not a proper business record or public record exception, RCW 5.44.040; routine booking sheet containing name, social security number address, height, weight, is a routine public record, State v. Mason, 31 Wn.App. 680, 683-4 (1982); III.

State v. Nation, 110 Wn.App. 651, 661-67 (2002)

Supervisor of crime lab testifies that, based upon notes of criminalist who tested the drugs, his opinion is that they are controlled substances; held: because notes of criminalist were not admitted into evidence, distinguishing State v. Ecklund, 30 Wn.App. 313 (1981), and because there is no evidence as to the particular person from whom the criminalist received the substances, the opinion of the supervisor is not admissible as a business record, see: State v. Neal, 144 Wn.2d 600 (2001), State v. Medley, 11 Wn.App. 491, 499 (1974); III.

State v. DeVries, 149 Wn.2d 842, 846-48 (2003)

Doctor testifies by telephone, is asked about lab report which he cannot see and of which he lacks a copy, court admits report; held: no foundation was laid for the lab report as it was neither identified nor authenticated, see: State v. Ziegler, 114 Wn.2d 533, 538-40 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Quincy, 122 Wn.App. 395 (2004)

Following shoplift arrest, loss prevention manager scans each item stolen, generates a list with prices which is admitted in evidence as business record; held: "custodian" or "other qualified witness," RCW 5.45.020, is interpreted broadly, need not be person who actually made the record, State v. Ben-Neth, 34 Wn.App. 600, 603-05 (1983), as long as s/he has custody of records or supervises its creation, Cantrill v. Am. Mail Line, Ltd., 42 Wn.2d 590 (1953); where witness demonstrates he understands the method for retrieving the price and how the records are created, business records exception is met even though witness cannot testify to accuracy of prices in the computer; difference between actual price tags, State v. Rainwater, 75 Wn.App. 256 (1994) and scanned records is immaterial; mere fact that record is likely to be used for litigation does not preclude its admissibility as long as they are created in the regular course of business, but see: Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 174 L.Ed.2d 314, 328 (2009); I.

State v. Iverson, 126 Wn.App. 329 (2005)

In no contact order violation case, victim does not appear at trial, court admits jail photo and booking records including victim's height, weight and address on officer's testimony that although he does not work for the jail and has no control over the accuracy of entries by other officers, he regularly uses the booking records system, enters data and pictures into the system and routinely relies upon the data; held: a photograph is not an oral or written assertion, and is thus not hearsay; because the identifying information is routine based upon perceptions of persons booking her or her own statements, the information is reliable and admissible, State v.

Christopher, 114 Wn.App. 858, 862-64 (2003), distinguishing State v. Tharp, 26 Wn.App. 184, 186 (1980), overruled, in part, State v. Monson, 113 Wn.2d 833 (1989); victim's stating her own name was admitted solely for authentication and is thus not hearsay; I.

State v. Bellerouche, 129 Wn.App. 912, 916-18 (2005)

Police officer who did not issue trespass admonition testifies that notice was filed, kept and accessed in accordance with routine recordkeeping procedures, court admits it; held: while a document may be created with the intent to use it at a future trial, if it is a business record, it is still admissible, see: State v. Iverson, 126 Wn.App. 329, 339-40 (2005), State v. Ecklund, 30 Wn.App. 313, 319 n.4 (1981), Cantrill v. Am. Mail Line, Ltd., 42 Wn.2d 590, 607-08 (1953) and is not testimonial, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 195-96; I.

State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 789-92 (2006)

Nurse who examines child molestation complainant and takes statement identifying perpetrator is unavailable to testify due to family emergency, state calls nurse's supervisor to read her report to the jury; held: while medical records may be admissible, state still must lay proper foundation, RCW 5.45.020, State v. Ziegler, 114 Wn.2d 533, 538 (1990); because nurse created her report under circumstances that would lead an objective witness to believe that the statements would be available for use at a later trial, and because medical providers are required to file reports with law enforcement where they have reasonable cause to believe abuse or neglect of a child, RCW 26.44.030(1)(a), nurse's report was testimonial, reading it in evidence violates confrontation clause, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), cf.: State v. Fleming, 155 Wn.App. 489, 501-03 (2010), harmless here; II.

State v. Fleming,155 Wn.App. 489, 498-501 (2010)

State offers record through custodian, at pretrial hearing defense elicits from custodian that the employee who prepared the record "was fired for anomalies in her recordkeeping," trial court admits document; held: questions regarding accuracy of a record that otherwise meets business records exception goes to weight, not admissibility, see: State v. Ben-Neth, 34 Wn.App. 600, 602 n. 2 (1983), but see: State v. Jasper, 174 Wn.2d 96 (2012); business records are generally not testimonial for purposes of confrontation clause, Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 56, 158 .Ed.2d 177 (2004), cf.: State v. Lee, 159 Wn.App. 795, 813-19 (2011); here, proper foundation was laid, person who prepared the record did not compile it at the behest of law enforcement, distinguishing State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 780 (2006), fact that the business began generating the type of document at the request of prosecutor's office does not render them testimonial; II.

State v. Butler, 198 Wn.App 484 (2017)

State provides in discovery copies of business records it intends to offer plus copies of certifications by custodian but fails to give specific notice as required by RCW 10.96.030 (2008); held: remedy for lack of written notice of business records is a continuance not suppression, State v. Hughes, 56 Wn.App. 172, 175 (1989); defense had sufficient notice here to object so failure of state to comply with statute was harmless; I.

EVIDENCE
Child Hearsay

State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009)

Excited utterance in response to a parent's questions are admissible in sex offense cases where spontaneity is clear and danger of fabrication is remote, State v. Bloomstrom, 12 Wn.App. 416 (1974), State v. Canida, 4 Wn.App. 275 (1971); II.

State v. Parris, 98 Wn. 2d 140 (1982)

Child hearsay statute is constitutional, but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Slider, 38 Wn.App. 689 (1984)

Under child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, a child is unavailable if s/he lacks memory of the event; applying statute to events that occurred prior to the date it became effective does not violate ex post facto provision; legislature had power to enact statute; when court properly applies balancing test, statute does not violate confrontation clause; I.

State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984), overruled, in part, State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 683 (2003)

A child under ten years is not incompetent to testify until the trial court determines that she is incompetent, RCW 5.60.050; where parties stipulate to incompetency, that by itself will not deem the child witness unavailable for purposes of the child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 448-51 (2007); the state must make a good faith effort to produce the witness; factors to be applied by court in determining reliability (1) motive to lie, (2) character of declarant, (3) whether more than one person heard statements, (4) spontaneity, and (5) timing of declaration and relationship between declarant and witness, State v. Cooley, 48 Wn.App. 286, 293-5 (1987), State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543, 549-50 (1987), State v. Justiniano, 48 Wn.App. 572 (1987), State v. Stonge, 53 Wn.App. 638 (1989), State v. Borland, 57 Wn.App. 7 (1990), Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990), State v. C.J., supra.

State v. Frey, 43 Wn.App. 605 (1986)

Child hearsay statements, RCW 9A.44.120(1), are admissible where declarant has no motive to lie, her low mental development suggests she is less likely to fabricate, and she repeated story consistently to more than one person spontaneously, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 170 (1984); such statements do establish corpus delicti; II.

State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

Where both parties stipulate that a child victim is incompetent to testify, defense counsel fails to challenge victim's ability to relate just impression of the facts at the time she made hearsay statements, then prosecutor has met burden of producing declarant, distinguishing State v. Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986) and State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984), but see:

Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 448-51 (2007); III.

State v. Griffith, 45 Wn.App. 728 (1986)

While the testimonial competency of a child witness lies within the sound discretion of trial court, it is an abuse of that discretion for the court to declare the witness incompetent due to inconsistencies within the witness's testimony, as that is a credibility issue for the jury to determine, but see: State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 685 (2003); child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, is not met where there is a motive to lie, only one person heard the statement, the statement was made in response to leading questions, were not spontaneous, cf.: State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 879-85 (2009); III.

State v. Jackson, 46 Wn.App. 360 (1986)

Trial court improperly admitted statutory rape victim's hearsay statements, RCW 9A.44.120, because victim had a motive to lie due to acrimonious relationship between victim's mother and defendant, trial court did not find indicia of reliability and thus appellate court cannot ascertain victim's character, victim's statements contained an assertion about a past fact and statements were made 12 years after defendant stopped living with victim; I.

State v. Hancock, 46 Wn.App. 672 (1987), aff'd, 109 Wn.2d 760 (1988)

Child hearsay exception, RCW 9A.44.120, met where there is no motive for child-victim to lie, although statement was elicited by mother's questioning, it was not directed to the topic of sexual abuse, statement was spontaneous, no evidence to establish that mother was predisposed to believe stories of sexual abuse about defendant; I.

State v. John Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986)

For purposes of the child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, an incompetent child is unavailable, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984); trial court must determine competency after a hearing, RCW 5.60.050, State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 448-51 (2007); even if child is determined to be incompetent, court must determine whether extrinsic evidence or the nature of the comments themselves make the child's statements sufficiently reliable, State v. Ryan, supra, at 174, State v. Slider, 38 Wn.App. 689 (1984), In re Penelope B., 104 Wn.2d 643 (1985), State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754, 759 (1989), State v. Karpenski, 94 Wn.App. 80 (1999), State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 685 (2003), State v. Borboa, 157 Wn.2d 108, 119-22 (2006), State v. Grogan, 147 Wn.App. 511, 519-22 (2008), see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Sammons, 47 Wn.App. 762 (1987)

To admit child hearsay, RCW 9A.44.120, trial court must conduct a hearing to determine reliability or case will be remanded for such a hearing; hearing to determine competency of the child witness is not sufficient.

State v. Harris, 48 Wn.App. 279 (1987)

Child hearsay exception, RCW 9A.44.120, does not apply to statement by a child about an act committed on another child, State v. Hancock, 46 Wn.App. 672, 678 (1987); harmless here; I.

State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543 (1987)

Under child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120, a statement may still be spontaneous even if it is the product of police questioning if the victim volunteers the information, State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895, 901 (1991); police officer who interrogates victim is more objective than a parent, distinguishing State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 176 (1984); accord: State v. Borland, 57 Wn.App. 7 (1990), State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865 (1991); I.

State v. Justiniano, 48 Wn.App. 572 (1987)

A statement by a mother to a physician about what the child told the mother is admissible, ER 803(a)(4), but see: State v. Alvarez-Abrego, 154 Wn.App. 351, 366-69 (2010); II.

State v. McKinney, 50 Wn.App. 56 (1987)

In applying child hearsay exception, RCW 9A.44.120, trial court must determine reliability of the victim's statement, not the reliability of the witness to whom the victim addressed the statement; I.

State v. Leavitt, 111 Wn.2d 66 (1988)

In determining reliability of child hearsay statements, trial court should, in addition to factors set forth in State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984), consider: (1) whether statement contained assertions about past fact; (2) whether cross-examination could establish that declarant was not in a position of personal knowledge to make the statement,; (3) how likely is it that the statement was founded on faulty recollection; and (4) are the circumstances surrounding the making of the statement such that there is no reason to suppose that declarant misrepresented defendant's involvement, Dutton v. Evans, 27 L.Ed.2d 213 (1970), see also: State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Bailey, 52 Wn.App. 42 (1988)

Where trial court applies and makes a record of State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984) factors, it will be affirmed absent a manifest abuse of discretion, State v. Pham, 75 Wn.App. 626, 630-2 (1994), State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 879-85 (2009); II.

State v. Jones, 112 Wn.2d 488 (1989)

In determining whether an unavailable child victim's hearsay statement is admissible, trial court may consider as corroboration similar deviant acts on other victims by defendant, even if those acts would be inadmissible at trial, ER 104(a), 1101(c)(3), affirming State v. Jones, 50 Wn.App. 709 (1988), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); corroboration may thus be established by evidence of defendant's practicing an unusual sexual activity (here, urolagnia) and victim's precocious knowledge of it, accord: State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990), State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 686-89 (2003), but see: Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754 (1989)

Even though a child victim's hearsay declaration is not spontaneous, where the details of the event and the identity of the defendant were not suggested, then trial court may properly find sufficient indicia of reliability to satisfy RCW 9A.44.120, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 175 (1984), State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895 (1991), State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 879-85 (2009); where victim recants three weeks before trial while child was in company of an aunt who believed defendant's innocence, trial court did not abuse discretion in admitting hearsay statements, State v. Hancock, 46 Wn.App. 672, 676 (1987), aff'd, 109 Wn.2d 760 (1988); a defendant may offer child hearsay statements if statutory requirements are met; here, trial court acted within its discretion in excluding evidence that victim identified another, through a montage, as the attacker; I.

State v. Warren, 55 Wn.App. 645 (1989)

Where defense fails to object to absence of a hearing prior to admission of child victim hearsay, RCW 9A.44.120, and where the child testifies and is subjected to cross-examination, then the issue is waived, State v. Leavitt, 111 Wn.2d 66, 71-72 (1988); failure to object is deficient performance by counsel; I.

State v. Hughes, 56 Wn.App. 172 (1989)

Where state fails to give sufficient notice of intent to use child hearsay, RCW 9A.44.120, remedy is a continuance, not suppression, State v. Butler, 198 Wn.App. 484 (2017); I.

State v. Borland, 57 Wn.App. 7 (1990)

RCW 9A.44.120(2) is satisfied when the child witness is both competent and physically available to testify, but see: State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997); testimony of the child declarant may be waived by the defendant on the record, where there is no apparent motive to lie and no challenge to declarant's general character, [unlike State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984)], victim told more than one person in response to questions that were neither leading nor suggestive, State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543, 550 (1987), and defendant was related to witnesses thus mitigating witnesses' predisposition to believe declarant, then State v. Ryan factors are substantially met; Dutton v. Evans, 27 L.Ed.2d 213 (1970); factors, to satisfy confrontation clause, can rarely if ever be met in child hearsay context and, if treated as essential, would render statute ineffective, and thus won't be used, but see: State v. Leavitt, 111 Wn.2d 66 (1988), Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); I.

State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990)

Consistent and independent descriptions of sexual abuse by more than one child may provide cross-corroboration sufficient to admit child hearsay; precocious sexual knowledge by a three-year old, even of behavior that is not unusual, is corroborative of abuse, State v. Jones, 112 Wn.2d 488 (1989), State v. Swanson, 62 Wn.App. 186 (1991); a child's behavior with an anatomically correct doll which demonstrates unusual sexual awareness serves as some corroboration of abuse even absent expert testimony explaining the behavior; child's complaints of pain in genitals or buttocks, even if not medically substantiated, provides some degree of corroboration; see: State v. Bishop, 63 Wn.App. 15 (1991), State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 686-89 (2003); medical testimony may provide corroboration; the essential purposes of the child hearsay statute "should not be defeated by a stubborn insistence on corroboration that is impossible to obtain," Jones, 112 Wn.2d at 498; where State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984) factors are "substantially met," trial court's finding of reliability will be affirmed; since most child hearsay statements about sexual abuse will contain statements about a past fact, Dutton v. Evans, 27 L.Ed.2d 213 (1970), that factor weighs neither in favor of reliability nor unreliability, State v. Leavitt, 111 Wn.2d 66, 75 (1988), State v. Gribble, 60 Wn.App. 374 (1991), State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895, 902 (1991), cf.: Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); 9-0.

Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990)

Physician testifies at trial to statements made to him by a three-year old regarding sexual abuse by her mother; held: absent a "firmly-rooted hearsay exception," hearsay statements are presumptively unreliable and inadmissible for confrontation clause purposes; this presumption may be overcome with particularized guarantees of trustworthiness drawn from the totality of circumstances surrounding the making of the statement; bootstrapping by the use of corroborating evidence is not permitted; thus, physical evidence of abuse, opportunity of defendant to commit the crime and similar acts on another victim are irrelevant to a showing of particularized guarantees of trustworthiness; cf.: State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984), State v. Jones, 112 Wn.2d 488 (1989), State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990), State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990)

Child victim's "sleep statements" telling defendant to stop are not hearsay, as not intended to be assertions, In re Penelope B., 104 Wn.2d 643, 652-3 (1985), and are relevant where expert testifies that nightmares are a common experience of sexual abuse; where sleep statements do not contain direct allegations of sexual abuse, then probative value outweighs prejudicial impact; I.

State v. Young, 60 Wn.App. 95, remanded, in part, on other grounds, 117 Wn.2d 1002, 62 Wn.App. 895 (1991)

Applying State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984) factors (2) recantation at trial does not undermine trial court's assessment of character for truthfulness, (4) statements in response to nonleading or suggestive questions do not undermine spontaneity, State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543, 550 (1987), (5) timing of statements is not suspect merely because CPS worker-witnesses became aware of abuse before statements were made, State v. Henderson, supra, at 551, (6) assertions about past facts is no longer a Ryan factor, State v. Stange, 53 Wn.App. 638 (1989) as long as other factors indicating reliability are considered, (7) child's failure to recollect when an incident occurred does not establish faulty recollection in general; I.

State v. Gribble, 60 Wn.App. 374 (1991)

Evidence of physical changes "consistent with but not absolutely diagnostic of sexual abuse" plus personality changes meets test for corroboration, State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 622 (1990), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); I.

State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58 (1991)

Report of sexual abuse to third party is admissible under "hue and cry" doctrine to prove that rape victim made a timely complaint as long as details and identity of offender are not admitted, State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 481-2 (1998); I.

State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865 (1991)

For purposes of child hearsay analysis, a statement is spontaneous if it is volunteered in response to questions that were not leading, need not be contemporaneous with the event in question, unlike an excited utterance, State v. Henderson, 48 Wn.App. 543, 550 (1987); while lapse of time and intervening counseling may impact reliability, Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990), trial court should exclude child hearsay on those bases only when the evidence demonstrates that the lapse or counseling somehow affected the child's statements; I.

State v. Swanson, 62 Wn.App. 186 (1991)

A young child victim's (here, two years old) explicit descriptions of abuse supports reliability, State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 648-9 (1990); indirect evidence of abuse, including yeast infection, behavioral changes, fear of defendant, conduct with anatomically correct dolls and precocious knowledge of sex are sufficient to satisfy corroboration requirement of RCW 9A.44.120, State v. Jones, 112 Wn.2d 488, 495 (1989), State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 686-89 (2003), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); III.

State v. Bishop, 63 Wn.App. 15 (1991)

Where child victim testifies in detail to all elements of crime other than penetration, and did testify, to minimal extent, to penetration, then the witness is available, see: United States v. Owens, 98 L.Ed.2d 951 (1988), Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), cf.: ER 804(a), State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 171 (1984), and corroboration of her out-of-court statements was not required, State v. Pham, 75 Wn.App. 626, 630-2 (1994); child's statement to physician examining her for physical or emotional injuries from sexual assault may be independently admissible as statement for medical diagnosis and treatment, ER 803(a)(4), and need not be corroborated even if witness is unavailable, In re Penelope B., 104 Wn.2d 643, 655-6 (1985), State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214 (1989); victim tells physician of painful urination one time after penetration, admissible under ER 803(a)(4); medical evidence based, in part, upon this statement, provides sufficient corroboration, State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 637-8 (1990); I.

State v. Bedker, 74 Wn.App. 87, 92-94 (1994)

Evidence admissible under child hearsay statute is still subject to ER 403 analysis; where the victim testifies, hearsay may still be admissible where the evidence encompasses areas not covered in the victim's own testimony, within discretion of trial court; I.

State v. Gregory, 80 Wn.App. 516, 520-2 (1996)

Polygraph evidence is not relevant to the reliability determination required by the child hearsay statute, inquiry is restricted to "time, content and circumstances of the statements, not on their weight and substance in subsequent search for truth," at 521; I.

State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997)

State calls child witness, asks innocuous questions and does not examine as to the alleged sexual acts, court admits child hearsay; held: statutory requirement that child either testify or be unavailable, requiring corroboration, RCW 9A.44.120, is not satisfied where the child does not testify as to the alleged sexual contact, State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774 (2014), cf.: State v. Borland, 57 Wn.App. 7, 13 (1990), State v. Montgomery, 95 Wn.App. 192 (1999), State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 173-75 (2001), Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 387-89 (2005), State v. Mohamed, 132 Wn.App. 58 (2006), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 744-45 (2007), State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016); affirms State v. Rohrich, 82 Wn.App. 674 (1996); 9-0.

State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77 (1997), op. withdrawn, in part, State v. Carol M.D., 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999)

Where a child has not sought medical treatment but makes statements to a counselor procured by a state social agency, the record must affirmatively demonstrate the child made statement understanding that they would further the diagnosis and possible treatment of the child's condition, to be admitted as medical diagnosis exception, ER 803(a)(4), at 86; here, absent testimony from the counselor that she explained to child that treatment depended upon truthful and accurate information, then court cannot assume that child was motivated to tell the truth by her self-interest in obtaining proper medical treatment, at 87, see: State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 182-84 (2001); III.

Dependency of A.E.P., 135 Wn.2d 208 (1998)

Where defense alleges improper, suggestive interview techniques taint child's memory, trial court should determine, at the pretrial hearing, RCW 9A.44.120(1), whether the hearsay is reliable considering the timing of the declaration and the relationship between the declarant and the witness, the circumstances surrounding the statement, and likelihood that declarant's recollection was faulty, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 175-6 (1984), see: Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990), see also: State v. Woods, 154 Wn.2d 613 (2005), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); 7-2.

State v. Ralph G., 90 Wn.App. 16, 22-7 (1998)

Four days prior to trial, state gives verbal notice of intent to use child hearsay, defense objects to proceeding with the hearing, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984), court proceeds with state's evidence then continues hearing for defense preparation; held: RCW 9A.44.120 requires notice to admit child hearsay, but does not require written notice, continuance provided defense opportunity to meet and contest the hearsay statements, thus, while court criticizes state for lack of formal, sufficient notice, admission of hearsay was not error; 2-1, III.

State v. Montgomery, 95 Wn.App. 192, 198-99 (1999)

On witness stand, victim identifies defendant, says she was alone with him and that she remembers telling prosecutor that defendant touched her inside, trial court admits hearsay evidence; held: while a close case, testimony was sufficiently detailed to permit meaningful cross-examination, thus trial court did not abuse discretion, cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774

(2014), distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006); I.

State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 850-54 (1999)

Applying State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984) factors, where there is no evidence that child has a reputation for not telling the truth, then character factor is satisfied; where child makes similar statements to different people, then statements heard by more than one person factor is satisfied even if versions differ; statements made that are not the result of leading or suggestive questions are spontaneous, In re Dependency of S.S., 61 Wn.App. 488, 494-95 (1991); presence of professionals enhances reliability of statements, State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895, 901 (1991); III.

State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999)

Where no objection to child hearsay is taken, appellate court will only review admissibility pursuant to confrontation clause; where complainant on stand denies that she was molested and only hearsay accounts of her prior statements are admitted, there is no confrontation clause violation as witness was subject to cross-examination, State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 173-75 (2001), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 387-89 (2005), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 744-45 (2007), State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016), see: Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997); affirms State v. Clark, 91 Wn.App. 69 (1998); 7-2.

State v. Hirschfield, 99 Wn.App. 1 (1999)

Child witness informs court that she's not going to testify because she doesn't want to talk about it any more, even if ordered by the court which finds her unavailable and admits hearsay, RCW 9A.44.120(1)(b), ER 804(a)(2); held: trial court applied "appropriate judicial pressure by its questioning," and was not obliged to order the witness to testify before declaring her unavailable, but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); I.

State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 173-75 (2001)

Where victim testifies about abuse but says she does not remember penetration, defense is able to cross-examine, meeting requirements of confrontation clause, State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152, 159 (1999), Pers. Restraint of Grasso, 151 Wn.2d 1 (2004), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), State v. Mobley, 129 Wn.App. 378, 387-89 (2005), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 744-45 (2007), see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774 (2014), distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997); II.

State v. Smith, 148 Wn.2d 122 (2002)

Trial court finds that 5-year old child is unavailable due to her emotional state, social worker testifies that she could testify in a "quiet reassuring environment," defense requests that she testify via closed-circuit television, RCW 9A.44.150(9), trial court declines stating that county lacks the facilities, admits child hearsay; held: before a court can find that a child victim is unavailable for purposes of admitting her hearsay statements, RCW 9A.44.120, it must consider the use of closed-circuit television if there is evidence that the child may be able to testify in an alternative setting; if equipment is not readily available, court may consider whether the cost of bringing in outside equipment is unreasonable; reverses State v. Smith, 108 Wn.App. 581 (2001), cf.: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); 9-0.

State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672 (2003)

To admit child hearsay, trial court need not find that the witness was competent at the time the out-of-court declarations were made, State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009), State v. Gitchel, 41 Wn.App. 820 (1985), State v. John Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986), State v. Gribble, 60 Wn.App. 374 (1991), State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1, 15-16 (2005), State v. Grogan, 147 Wn.App. 511, 519-22 (2008), reversing State v. C.J., 108 Wn.App. 790 (2001), overruling, in part, State v. Justiniano, 48 Wn.App. 572 (1987), State v. Karpenski, 94 Wn.App. 80, 106-25 (1999), State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 173 (1984); whether the child had the ability to discern between truth and lies at the time the hearsay statement is made is a factor, in addition to those set forth in State v. Ryan, supra, and State v. Leavitt, 111 Wn.2d 66 (1988), which may be considered in determining reliability, State v. Borboa, 157 Wn.2d 108, 119-22 (2006); injury to genitals, physician's opinion that declarant is a victim of sexual abuse, balinitis and precocious sexual knowledge establish corroboration requirement for unavailable child witness; 7-2.

State v. Dunn, 125 Wn.App. 582, 587-89 (2005)

Repetitive admission of child hearsay from various witnesses including a videotape, while cumulative, is not unduly prejudicial, ER 403, within discretion of trial court, where offered as part of a logical sequence and timing of events; III.

State v. Shafer, 156 Wn.2d 381 (2006)

Incompetent 3-year old's statement to her mother is not testimonial, State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 452-58 (2007), see: State v. Alvarez-Abrego, 154 Wn.App. 351, 362-69 (2010); test is whether a reasonable person in declarant's position would expect that her statement would be used in prosecuting the crime, State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019), statement from same declarant to a family friend who had served as a police informant was not testimonial as the testifying witness was not acting for any law enforcement agency at the time she talked to declarant; trial court did not err in applying reliability factors, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 175-76 (1984), for admissibility under child hearsay statute, see: Ohio v. Clark, 578 U.S. 237, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015); 8-1.

State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 448-51 (2007)

Prior to admitting child hearsay, trial court must hold a competency hearing to determine availability, even if parties stipulate that complainant is incompetent, RCW 9A.44.120, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 172 (1984), overruled, in part, State v. C.J., 148 Wn.2d 672, 683 (2003), State v. John Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986); child's statement to CPS social worker is testimonial, see: State v. Shafer, 156 Wn.2d 381 (2006), but see: State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019); II.

State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 879-85 (2009)

Trial court's admission of child hearsay is affirmed where court did not specifically mention each State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984) factor but expressly stated that all Ryan factors were met; II.

State v. Alvarez-Abrego, 154 Wn.App. 351, 362-69 (2010)

In child abuse case, court admits doctor's testimony that victim's mother told doctor that victim's sister, who was not called to testify, told her victim had been thrown against the wall; held: while child hearsay statements made to a family member are not testimonial, State v. Shafer, 156 Wn.2d 381 (2006), State v. Hopkins, 137 Wn.App. 441, 448-51 (2007), there must be "some threshold evaluation of the underlying circumstances to meet the constitutional strictures," at 364 ¶ 29; II.

State v. Brousseau, 172 Wn.2d 331 (2011)

A bare assertion by defense that child victim is incompetent to testify is insufficient to require that she testify at a competency hearing; child victim is not required to testify at a child hearsay hearing, RCW 9A.44.120(2)(a); 5-4.

State v. Beadle, 173 Wn.2d 97 (2011)

Unavailable child's statements to police and a CPS social worker present to assist police are testimonial as primary purpose of interview was to establish or prove past events rather than respond to an ongoing emergency, Michigan v. Bryant, 562 U.S. 344, 179 L.Ed.2d 93 (2011), see: Ohio v. Clark, 135 U.S. 2173, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015), immediate danger had passed, modifying State v. Shafer, 156 Wn.2d 381 (2006) to the extent that "declarant-centric" standard that focuses on reasonable belief of declarant does not apply to statements to law enforcement, State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019); child who refuses to testify in court is unavailable unless there is affirmative evidence that she may be able to testify via alternative means such as television, distinguishing State v. Smith, 148 Wn.2d 122 (2002), cf.: State v. Streepy, 199 Wn.2d 487, 493-97 (2017); evidence regarding non-testifying child's breakdown to explain why she did not testify is impermissible bolstering, harmless here; 9-0.

Ohio v. Clark, 135 U.S. 2173, 135 S.Ct. 2173, 192 L.Ed.2d 306 (2015)

Teacher asks 3-year old about abrasions, child says defendant did it, doesn't testify at trial but statements are admitted; held: while statements to non-police witnesses are not categorically non-testimonial, under "primary purpose" test this statement was not for the purposes of creating evidence, rather it was to protect a child, State v. Burke, 196 Wn.2d 712 (2021), statements by very young children will rarely, if ever, implicate the Confrontation Clause, State v. Streepy, 199 Wn.2d 487, 493-97 (2017); 9-0.

State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673 (1992)

Trial court's finding that defendant's crudely coded jail phone calls persuaded victim and victim's mother to move to Mexico, establishing forfeiture by wrongdoing, authorizing admission of victim's testimonial hearsay statements including child hearsay, State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2000), State v. Dobbs, 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014); I.

State v. Moses, 193 Wn.App. 341, 361-63 (2016)

For purposes of child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120 (1995), "physical abuse" includes withholding food; III.

State v. Bates, 196 Wn.App. 65 (2016)

In child rape case court admits recorded victim interview, when victim testifies state inquires about sex assault but does not inquire about whether victim made the previously admitted hearsay statement, defense counsel cross-examines about the incident and about the hearsay statement, defense argues for the first time on appeal that confrontation clause was violated because court admitted recorded statement but questioning on direct was not broad enough to subject her to cross-examination; held: cross-examination about the interview was within the scope of direct, ER 611(B), State v. Montgomery, 95 Wn.App. 192, 198-99 (1999), State v. Clark, 139 Wn.2d 152 (1999), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 173-75 (2001), State v. Price, 158 Wn.2d 630 (2006), distinguishing State v. Rohrich, 132 Wn.2d 472 (1997), cf.: State v. Kinzle, 181 Wn.App. 774, 780-84 (2014), both the hearsay statement and victim's testimony were inculpatory; III.

EVIDENCE
Declaration Against Penal Interest

State v. Russell, 27 Wn.App. 309 (1980)

Within discretion of court to determine trustworthiness of third party confession; factors include (1) time of declaration and party to whom it was made, (2) existence of corroborating evidence in the case, (3) extent to which declaration is really against penal interest, and (4) availability of declarant; see: ER 804; I.

State v. Parris, 98 Wn.2d 140 (1982)

Severed co-defendant's inculpatory statement to undercover officers admitted into evidence against defendant as statement against penal interest; test: (1) statement must so far subject the declarant to criminal liability that a reasonable person would not have made the statement unless s/he believed it to be true; and (2) statement must be corroborated; in determining corroboration, factors include: (1) motive to lie; (2) character of declarant; (3) whether more than one person heard the statement; (4) spontaneity of statement; and (5) the timing of the declaration and the relationship between the declarant and the witness, see: State v. Mitchell, 117 Wn.2d 521 (1991), but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); fact that declarant made statement to a person who he thought was not likely to use the statement against him does not render statement unreliable; 5-3.

.

State v. Castro, 32 Wn.App. 559 (1982)

Co-defendant's confession absolving defendant may be excluded where co-defendant repudiates confession, and confession is inconsistent with physical evidence; I.

State v. Valladeres, 31 Wn.App. 63 (1982), affirmed, 99 Wn.2d 663 (1983)

Hearsay statement against penal interest, ER 804(b)(3), is admissible if tests are met, whether statement is offered to inculpate or exculpate the accused, see: State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000), State v. J.K.T., 11 Wn.App.2d 544 (2019); factors to be considered when determining if statement is against penal interest include whether or not declarant was in custody and whether or not declarant was offered immunity; where statement as a whole qualifies as a declaration against penal interest, the statement is admissible in its entirety, including both disserving and self-serving portions; corroboration requirement is not limited to circumstances surrounding the making of the declaration, but may come from any competent evidence that bolsters the reliability of the declarant's statement; II.

State v. Dibley, 38 Wn.App. 824 (1984)

State offered co-defendant's Statement of Defendant on Plea of Guilty at trial against defendant; co-defendant did not testify as it was part of his plea bargain that he would not be called to testify; held: co-defendant procured, by the plea bargain, his own unavailability, thus, state did not have to call him; plea statement was against interest, ER804(b)(3), sufficiently corroborated by evidence of the crime, but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); II.

State v. Ng, 104 Wn.2d 763 (1985)

Co-defendant's confession to police that he did all the shooting inadmissible at severed trial as corroborating circumstances did not clearly indicate the trustworthiness of the statement, ER 804(b)(3), in light of co-defendant's other lies and subsequent repudiation of statement.

State v. Anderson, 107 Wn.2d 745 (1987)

The fact that statements were made to a confidant prior to any police suspicions arising weighs heavily in favor of reliability, even if all State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 175-76 factors are not present; 9-0.

State v. St. Pierre, 111 Wn.2d 105 (1988)

Although nontestifying co-defendant's statement is inadmissible against defendant even if defendant's confession interlocks with statement, Cruz v. New York, 95 L.Ed.2d 162 (1987), it may be admissible as a declaration against penal interest if there are sufficient guarantees of trustworthiness, State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779 (1991); to the extent that the defendant's confession interlocks with the accomplice's statement, there is some showing of reliability; however, where the statements diverge, there is a lack of reliability; 9-0.

State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357 (1988)

Where factors properly applied, it is proper for a trial court to admit an unavailable co-defendant's inculpatory statement against penal interest but exclude a separate exculpatory statement against penal interest, State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000); I.

State v. Whelchel, 115 Wn.2d 708 (1990)

Severed, unavailable co-defendants' custodial statements which admitted witnessing murder but minimized responsibility fail to satisfy the "against penal interest" requirement of ER 804(b)(3); court applies nine-point set of guidelines to determine whether reliability required of inculpatory statements under confrontation clause is satisfied, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680, 693-96 (1999); other evidence of guilt may not be used to establish reliability, Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990) 9-0; harmless error, 7-2.

State v. Hutcheson, 62 Wn.App. 282 (1991)

Severed co-defendant's confession to a friend is admissible against defendant where a reasonable person would be aware of the disserving nature of the remarks even if made to a supposed friend, State v. Parris, 98 Wn.2d 140, 150 (1982); evidence that declarant knew she was criminally liable, in that she made sure conversation was private, later denied involvement, lack of proof of mental impairment such that she was unable to perceive criminal nature of the acts described, support admissibility, ER 804(b)(3); applying State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 175-77 (1984) factors, declaration does not violate confrontation clause; credibility of the in-court witness in determining reliability of declarant's out-of-court statement is not a factor; I.

State v. Greer, 62 Wn.App. 779 (1991)

Co-defendant's statement implicating defendant is presumptively unreliable unless it bears sufficient indicia of reliability to rebut presumption, Lee v. Illinois, 90 L.Ed.2d 514 (1986); corroboration by admission of defendant plus other evidence at trial supporting the statement are factors to be considered in supporting trustworthiness, State v. Hoskinson, 48 Wn.App. 66, 71-2 (1987); but see: Cruz v. New York, 95 L.Ed.2d 162 (1987)[unclear from Greer opinion whether co-defendant testified at trial], cf.: State v. St. Pierre, 111 Wn.2d 105 (1988); I.

State v. Mitchell, 117 Wn.2d 521 (1991)

Consolidated co-defendant's statements inculpating defendant may be admitted without redacting if it meets balancing test of State v. Parris, 98 Wn.2d 140 (1982) and Dutton v. Evans, 27 L.Ed.2d 213 (1970); statement to civilian in response to question is not a coercive official interrogation, thus fourth factor does not support exclusion; Dutton factor (1) express assertion of past fact does not render statement inadmissible where it stands alone against remaining Parris-Dutton factors; 9-0.

State v. Rice, 120 Wn.2d 549 (1993)

Test for reliability (1) whether declarant had an apparent motive to lie, (2) whether general character of declarant suggests trustworthiness, (3) whether more than one person heard statements, (4) whether statements were made spontaneously, (5) whether timing of statements and relationship between declarant and witness suggest trustworthiness, (6) whether statements contained express assertions of past fact, (7) whether cross-examination could not help to show declarant's lack of knowledge, (8) whether possibility of declarant's recollection being faulty is remote, and (9) whether circumstances surrounding the statements give no reason to suppose that declarant misrepresented defendant's involvement, State v. Whelchel, 115 Wn.2d 709 (1990), State v. Edmondson, 43 Wn.App. 443 (1986); statement made in police custody by co-conspirator is almost presumptively unreliable, see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); 9-0.

Williamson v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 476 (1994)

Arrestee tells police that a third party put drugs in the car in which arrestee was arrested, later tells police that he lied, that he was transporting drugs for his accomplice, who is charged; at accomplice's trial, arrestee refuses to testify, police are permitted to testify to both of arrestee's versions as statements against penal interest, Fed. R. Evid. 804(b)(3); held: nonself-inculpatory statements, even if made within the context of a broader narrative that is generally self-inculpatory, are inadmissible under this rule as insufficiently reliable; 9-0.

State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680, 693-96 (1999)

Nine factors to determine reliability of inculpatory statements of another offered by defendant, ER 804(b)(3): (1) was there an apparent motive for declarant to lie?; (2) declarant's general character; (3) did more than one witness hear declarant's statement?; (4) was statement spontaneous?; (5) did timing of statement and relationship between declarant and witness suggest trustworthiness?; (6) does statement contain an express assertion of past facts?; (7) did declarant have personal knowledge of identity and role of the crime's other participants?; (8) was declarant's statement based upon faulty recollection?; and (9) was statement made under circumstances that provide reason to believe declarant misrepresented defendant's involvement in crime?, State v. Whelchel, 115 Wn.2d 708, 722 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 491-500 (2000)

Trial court refuses to allow defense offer of co-defendant's statement to police which statement is inculpatory as to co-defendant's involvement in felony murder and exculpatory as to co-defendant's involvement in capital murder, state having offered co-defendant's statement against the co-defendant at his separate trial; held: in deciding whether to admit a statement against interest, court must separate the inculpatory portions from those that are self-serving and redact the narrative to exclude the self-serving statements, Williamson v. United States, 129 L.Ed.2d 476 (1994), then determine reliability of the inculpatory portions, State v. McDonald, 138 Wn.2d 680, 693 (1999), State v. Crawford, 147 Wn.2d 424, 432-40 (2002), rev'd, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), State v. J.K.T., 11 Wn.App.2d 544 (2019), ER 804(b)(3); even co-defendant's exculpatory statements may be admissible where defense is offering it not for the truth but to argue its falsity, and state may offer it under rule of completeness, ER 106, c.f: State v. Perez, 139 Wn.App. 522, 530-31 (2007); inculpatory statements of co-defendant are presumed admissible where offered by defense, Chambers v. Mississippi, 35 L.Ed.2d 297 (1973), see: State v. Jordan, 106 Wn.App. 291, 299-302 (2001), State v. Anderson, 112 Wn.App. 828, 839 (2002); 6-3.

State v. Jordan, 106 Wn.App. 291, 299-302 (2001)

Defense offers hearsay testimony that a person who had been convicted on a "similar charge" [unclear from opinion if this was same incident] admitted killing victim here, trial court excludes testimony as insufficiently trustworthy, State v. Valladares, 99 2663, 668 (1983), State v. Gee, 52 Wn.App. 357 (1988); held: where reliability factors are evenly balanced and statement is offered by defense, then there is a presumption of admissibility, exclusion is an abuse of discretion, State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471 (2000); III.

State v. Floreck, 111 Wn.App. 135, 139-40 (2002)

Burglary accomplice, called by prosecution, testifies that she does not remember much of what she told police but describes burglaries, claiming she committed them alone, court admits statements to police inculpating herself and defendant, holding that declarant is unavailable, ER 804(a)(2), (3); held: while a witness who testifies to a lack of memory of the subject matter of her statement is unavailable, here declarant did not lack memory of the subject matter, namely the burglaries, thus she is available and statement should not have been admitted as substantive evidence; II.

State v. Anderson, 112 Wn.App. 828 (2002)

Analysis of 9-part reliability test here weighs against admissibility of co-defendant's incriminating statements; absent support for the proposition, set forth in State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 497 (2000), that a co-defendant's incriminating statements are presumed admissible, Division I rejects Supreme Court's analysis.

State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.2d 335 (2005)

In malicious mischief case, trial court admits fact that defendant paid victim for damages; held: ER 408, precluding evidence of compromise, is inapplicable in criminal cases; 5-4.

EVIDENCE
DNA

State v. Cauthron, 120 Wn.2d 879 (1993)

RFLP method of DNA typing meets Frye test, i.e., evidence has a valid, scientific basis and is generally accepted in appropriate scientific community, State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 37-55 (1994), State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 585-9 (1995), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244 (1996), State v. Bander, 150 Wn.App. 690 (2009); if there is a significant dispute between qualified experts as to the validity of scientific evidence, it may not be admitted; evidence that DNA-tested semen matched that of donor's semen was improperly admitted where the evidence did not include background probability information, as it is neither based on a generally accepted scientific theory nor helpful to the trier of fact, ER 702, but see: State v. Buckner, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997); 7-2.

State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525 (1993)

Once DNA testing is determined to be generally admissible, then deviations in the correct test protocol which do not materially affect the test outcome go to weight, not admissibility, State v. Cauthron, 120 Wn.2d 879 (1993), State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 585-9 (1995), see also: State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 37-55 (1994); 8-0.

State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 37-55 (1994)

PCR method of DNA testing at HLA DQ alpha locus, and Cetus kit test results meet Frye test, State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 585-9 (1995), see: State v. Cauthron, 120 Wn.2d 879 (1993); if testing before a trial court shows that testing procedure as performed in case before court was so flawed as to be unreliable, results may be inadmissible because they are not helpful to trier of fact, ER 702, State v. Kalakosky, 121 Wn.2d 525, 543 (1993); self-interest of experts goes to weight, not admissibility, at 55; 5-4.

State v. Gentry, 125 Wn.2d 570, 589-596 (1995)

Bloodstain analysis based on agglutination inhibition testing (gamma marker) meets Frye test; phosphoglucomutase (PGM) type tests are admissible, ER 702, see: State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 522-24 (2000); 7-2.

State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244 (1996)

Frye standard will continue to apply to novel scientific evidence in Washington, court declines to adopt Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 125 L.Ed.2d 469 (1993); "product rule" or "multiplication rule" for calculating genetic profile frequency as applied in RFLP DNA typing is generally accepted in the scientific community, State v. Cannon, 130 Wn.2d 313, 324-5 (1996), see: State v. Copeland, 120 Wn.2d 879 (1993), State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288, 302-12 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Buckner, 133 Wn.2d 63 (1997)

DNA expert may give an opinion that, based upon an exceedingly small probability of a defendant's DNA profile matching that of another in a random human population, the profile is unique, affirming State v. Buckner, 74 Wn.App. 889 (1994), overruled, in part, on other grounds, State v. Thomas, 138 Wn.2d 630 (1999), reconsidering State v. Buckner, 125 Wn.2d 915 (1995), overruling, in part, State v. Cauthron, 120 Wn.2d 879 (1993); 9-0.

State v. Gore, 143 Wn.2d 288, 302-11 (2001)

Frye hearing for PCR-based systems, using polymarker and D1S80 techniques, or anytime a new loci is involved, is not necessary; product rule for calculating probabilities of a random match of a genetic profile in the human population is admissible to calculate frequencies where the PCR-based systems are involved; 9-0.

State v. Leuluaialii, 118 Wn.App. 780 (2003)

DNA comparison of dog blood does not meet Frye test, as frequency of loci in canine population are insufficient for specific markers to be accurate forensic indicators, harmless here; I.

State v. Mezquia, 129 Wn.App. 118, 132-34 (2005)

Defendant, on probation in Florida, is required to provide a DNA sample which Washington police later use to connect defendant to homicide; held: under the silver platter doctrine, State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 587-88 (1997), evidence lawfully seized in another jurisdiction is admissible in Washington where the evidence was lawfully obtained in the other state and the other state's officers did not act as agents of Washington authorities, State v. Martinez, 2 Wn.App.2d 55, 63 (2018); here, Washington's participation in a database did not establish agency with Florida, thus samples were admissible; I.

State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 820-35 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014)

Once DNA profile is lawfully in state's possession, state need not obtain an independent warrant to compare that profile with new crime scene evidence; no Frye hearing is required to admit STR testing, use of profiler plus testing kit, capillary electrophoresis, genotype frequencies for STR analysis; 8-1.

State v. Riofta, 166 Wn.2d 358 (2009)

A convicted person may seek DNA testing, RCW 10.73.170(2)(a)(iii), including DNA test results that did not exist at the time of trial and that are material to identity regardless of whether DNA testing could have been performed at trial, but defendant has the burden of showing the likelihood that the DNA evidence would demonstrate innocence on a more probable than not basis, RCW 10.73.170(3); here, strength of eyewitness identification, evidence of motive and limited probative value of the DNA evidence sought was insufficient, State v. Gray, 151 Wn.App. 762 (2009), State v. Braa, 2 Wn.App.2d 510 (2018), State v. Braa, 2 Wn.App.2d 510 (2018), cf.: State v. Thompson, 155 Wn.App. 294 (2010), State v. Crumpton, 181 Wn.2d 252 (2014), State v. Gentry, 183 Wn.2d 749 (2015); affirms State v. Riofta, 134 Wn.App. 669 (2006); 6-3.

State v. Bander, 150 Wn.App. 690 (2009)

Fry hearing on the issues of allele identification and conclusions about whether to include defendant as a contributor is not necessary absent showing of a significant dispute among scientists over the acceptability of the laboratory's protocols for profile identification, at 713; probability of exclusion (PE) calculation is a generally accepted method for interpreting DNA profiles, at 717; evidence that defendant could not be excluded as a possible contributor is not the same as evidence that the sample matched the defendant, distinguishing State v. Cauthron, 120 Wn.2d 879 (1993); I.

Williams v. Illinois, 567 U.S. 50, 132 S.Ct. 2221, 183 L.Ed.2d 90 (2012)

State lab expert testifies that a DNA profile produced by an outside laboratory matched a profile that state lab produced using a sample of defenndant's blood, based on business records stating that swabs taken from victim were sent to outside lab and returned; held: an expert may express an opinion that is based on facts that the expert assumes, but does not know, to be true, expert may explain the facts on which expert's opinion is based without testifying to the truth of those facts which are not hearsay and do not violate confrontation clause, State v. Manion, 173 Wn.App. 610 (2013); outside lab report was produced before any suspect was identified, was not sought to obtain evidence against defendant and thus does not violate confrontation clause; expert's testimony that the outside lab's sample came from the victim is admissible in a bench trial but not a jury trial; 5-4 (plurality opinion).

State v. Lui, 179 Wn.2d 457 (2014)

DNA expert, who did not participate or observe DNA testing testifies from a report that she could not eliminate defendant as donor, defense objects to both under confrontation clause; held: confrontation clause applies where an expert testifies against the defendant with some capacity to inculpate defendant, see: State v. Federov, 183 Wn.App. 736, 745-48 (2014), aff'd, on other grounds, 183 Wn.2d 669 (2015); DNA evidence is not inculpatory until a human analyst uses expertise to interpret readings, create a profile that incriminates defendant; here, the expert was the appropriate witness to introduce the DNA evidence, and was the only DNA witness "against" the defendant, who does not have confrontation rights with respect to chain of custody, authenticity of the sample or accuracy of the testing device; 5-4.

State v. Crumpton, 181 Wn.2d 252 (2014)

In deciding a motion for post-conviction DNA testing, RCW 10.73.170, while substantive requirement to order post-conviction DNA testing is meant to be onerous, State v. Riofta, 166 Wn.2d 358, 367 (2009), trial court should presume DNA evidence would be favorable to the defendant when determining if it is likely the evidence would prove his or her innocence, State v. Gentry, 183 Wn.2d 749 (2015), see: State v. Braa, 2 Wn.App.,2d 510 (2018), Matter of Pleth, 20 Wn.App.2d. 326, 341-42 (2022), reversing State v. Crumpton, 172 Wn.App. 408 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Braa, 2 Wn.App.2d 510 (2018)

A self-defense claim does not bar the court from ordering post-conviction DNA testing, RCW 10.73.170), although here defendant did not prove by a preponderance that the test would demonstrate likely innocence, State v. Riofta, 166 Wn.2d 358 (2009), see: State v. Crumpton, 181 Wn.2d 252 (2014); I.

EVIDENCE
Excited Utterance/Present Sense Impression

State v. Downey, 27 Wn.App. 857 (1980)

Rape victim calls a friend shortly after rape and tells her what happened, in response to questions by friend, who is permitted to testify; held: under ER 803, even though statement is neither completely spontaneous nor contemporaneous with the inducing event it may be admitted if declarant was still upset, within discretion of trial court; accord, State v. Fleming, 27 Wn.App. 952 (1980), State v. Collins, 45 Wn.App. 541 (1986), State v. Guizzotti, 60 Wn.App. 289 (1991), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 748-49 (2007), but see: State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988); I.

State v. Lopez, 29 Wn.App. 836 (1981)

Officer testifies to statement made in English by X, translating excited utterance in Spanish by Y (victim); held: a witness is incompetent to testify to extrajudicial statements made by another person when it is necessary to have the statement translated before it can be understood by the witness; but here it was harmless as it was corroborated by eyewitness; I.

State v. Whyde, 30 Wn.App. 162 (1981)

Thirty minutes after rape, victim, in agitated state, tells third party, who is permitted to testify; held: no abuse of discretion; but see: State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988); I.

State v. Woodward, 32 Wn.App. 204 (1982)

Twenty hours after 5 year-old girl is raped, she tells her mother about it; held: considering her age, her physical condition and the fact she was laboring under a threat of further violence, mother can testify as to child's hearsay statements as spontaneous utterance, ER 803(a)(2); accord: State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986); II.

State v. Hubbard, 37 Wn.App. 137 (1984)

A statement may constitute an excited utterance even though made in response to a question by a police officer, Johnston v. Ohls, 76 Wn.2d 398 (1969), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App.736, 748-49 (2007); I.

State v. Dixon, 37 Wn.App. 867 (1984)

A narrative statement of an upset crime victim without proof that the victim could not have fabricated some of the details does not meet the "guaranty of trustworthiness" test, ER 803(a)(2), Beck v. Dye, 200 Wash. 1 (1939); I.

State v. Slider, 38 Wn.App. 689 (1984)

Aggregate effect of passage of time (about 12 hours) plus child-witness's response to parents' leading questions attenuated reliability of statement, ER 803(a)(2); I.

State v. Hieb, 39 Wn.App. 273 (1984)

Present sense impression, ER 803(a)(1), requires statement be made while declarant was perceiving event or immediately thereafter; here, several-hour interval is too long; excited utterance, ER 803(a)(2), need not be contemporaneous nor completely spontaneous and may be in response to questions; here, State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 748-49 (2007), a few hours is close enough but two months is too long; confrontation clause may bar otherwise admissible hearsay if witness is available but not produced by state; I; harmless, State v. Hieb, 107 Wn.2d 97 (1986).

State v. Sellers, 39 Wn.App. 799 (1985)

Child of homicide victim tells police he saw nothing, thereafter tells police he heard argument, threats, gunshots, saw body; held: test for excited utterance: was statement made while declarant was still under the influence of the event to the extent that his statement could not be the result of fabrication, intervening actions or the exercise of choice or judgment, ER 803(a)(2), Johnston v. Ohls, 76 Wn.2d 398 (1969); here, fact that declarant changed his story demonstrates he had time to consider alternatives, thus statement was not admissible, although harmless; II.

State v. Flett, 40 Wn.App. 277 (1985)

Complainant's statement, "I was raped" made seven hours after incident held to be part of a "continuous process" satisfying excited utterance exception, ER 803(a)(2); accord: State v. Thomas, 46 Wn.App. 280 (1986), State v. Sunde, 98 Wn.App. 515 (1999), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 596-601 (2001), but see: State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988); III.

State v. Griffith, 45 Wn.App. 728 (1986)

Circumstances surrounding child victim's out-of-court statements indicate insufficient reliability to qualify as excited utterances where there is inadequate record as to the circumstances surrounding the victim's statements, the statements were the product of two hours of interrogation by the mother in response to leading questions, and physical evidence corroborates the abuse but not the person who committed it; III.

State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986)

In cases involving sexual abuse of children, trial court should avoid strained interpretation of excited utterance exception, and should apply child hearsay statute, RCW 9A.44.120; held: five-hour delay between act and report to mother by eight-year-old victim was adequate time for reflection, defeating the exception; II.

State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986)

Witness testifies that, on night of the homicide, decedent received a telephone call and told witness that the call was from defendant who had run out of gas and wanted decedent's help; held: decedent's hearsay statements are admissible to prove decedent's state of mind, ER 803(a)(3), to infer that he acted according to the stated intentions and with the person mentioned, Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, 36 L.Ed. 706 (1892), even though defendant's and decedent's states of mind were not at issue in the trial; 9-0.

State v. Rivas, 49 Wn.App. 677 (1987)

Co-defendant's statement to police officer identifying defendant, made shortly after crime in response to a question is not an excited utterance, ER 803(a)(2), as it was not a natural declaration growing out of the event, nor spontaneous and provoked by the occurrence itself; I.

State v. Palomo, 113 Wn.2d 789 (1989)

Excited utterance exception to hearsay rule, ER 803(a)(2), applies even though declarant is available as a witness and does not violate confrontation clause, State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401, 415-6 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Guizzotti, 60 Wn.App. 289 (1991)

Rape victim flees from defendant, hides for seven hours, then calls 911, state offers 911 tape; held: within court's discretion to find victim was still under "stress of excitement" caused by event or condition, State v. Downey, 27 Wn.App. 857, 860 (1980), State v. Sunde, 98 Wn.App. 515 (1999), State v. Ramires, 109 Wn.App. 749, 757-60 (2002); II.

State v. Chapin, 118 Wn.2d 681 (1992)

Nursing home patient with Alzheimer's disease and swollen rectum gets angry when he sees defendant-nurse's aide, when asked why he dislikes defendant, complainant states, "Raped me," admitted as excited utterance, ER 803(a)(2); held: test: (1) startling event or condition must have occurred, (a) event need not be principal act underlying case, e.g., utterance in response to unexpected observation of a photo of assailant by victim may suffice, State v. Owens, 128 Wn.2d 908 (1996), cf. State v. Ramirez-Estevez, 164 Wn.App. 284 (2011), (b) startling nature of event cannot be determined merely by reference to event itself, rather it is event's effect on declarant that must be focused upon, (2) statement must be made while declarant under excitement or stress caused by event, (3) statement must relate to startling condition or event; here, a day had elapsed between alleged rape and utterance, increasing likelihood of fabrication, but see: State v. Flett, 40 Wn.App. 277 (1985), complainant's reaction was one of anger, complainant saw defendant regularly at nursing home thus event was not startling, utterance made after complainant had calmed down, complainant's mental deterioration was severe, thus trial court abused discretion, cf.: State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 596-601 (2001), State v. Rodriquez, 187 Wn.App. 922, 938-40 (2015); 9-0.

White v. Illinois, 116 L.Ed.2d 848 (1992)

Spontaneous declarations and medical examination exceptions to hearsay rule do not violate confrontation clause, prosecution need not produce declarant, trial court need not find unavailability, United States v. Inadi, 89 L.Ed.2d 390 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Bryant, 65 Wn.App. 428 (1992)

Where child is very young, her age is an additional indication of reliability, since fabrication is more remote; incompetency of a three-year old does not act to exclude an excited utterance, State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381, 383 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009), State v. Bloomstrom, 12 Wn.App. 416, 418-9 (1974); I.

State v. Sims, 77 Wn.App. 236, 237-8 (1995)

Officer arrives within minutes of dispatch, observes victim crying and upset, talking to officer right after the incident, her statement was not so detailed as to suggest the exercise of choice or judgment, her hesitancy in speaking does not negate spontaneity, meeting excited utterance exception, ER 803(a)(2); I.

State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 757-59 (1995)

Where witness testifies that she fabricated part of a purported excited utterance, then content of entire utterance is inadmissible, as the statement is not within the "stress of nervous excitement...which stills the reflective faculties and removes their control...[nor] a spontaneous and sincere response to the actual sensations and perceptions already produced by the external shock rather than an expression based on reflection or self-interest," State v. Chapin, 118 Wn.2d 681, 686 (1992), State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401, 416 (1992), Johnston v. Ohls, 76 Wn.2d 398, 406 (1969); see: State v. Sharp, 80 Wn.App. 457 (1996), State v. Hardy, 133 Wn.2d 701, 713-4 (1997), State v. Briscoeray, 95 Wn.App. 167 (1999), State v. Hochhalter, 131 Wn.App. 506, 513-17 (2006), see: State v. Williamson, 100 Wn.App. 248, 255-59 (2000), State v. Davis, 131 Wn.App. 71 (2005), Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), State v. Young, 123 Wn.App. 854, 861-62 (2004), cf.: State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 596-601 (2001), State v. Lawrence, 108 Wn.App. 226, 233-36 (2001), but see: State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Sharp, 80 Wn.App. 457 (1996), overruled, sub nom., State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 597-98 (2001)

In kidnapping case, developmentally disabled 12-year old is found in defendant's car rocking back and forth, which he does when he is excited or fearful, victim is calmed down by relatives, taken to police, is asked leading questions after 30-40 minutes, would think for a minute before answering, state offers answers as excited utterances; held: evidence established victim was very impressionable, tried to please everyone, parrotted questions asked, had calmed down, thus trial court erred in admitting statements, as nothing supports "the inference" that victim was still responding to the stress of the event, see: State v. Williamson, 100 Wn.App. 248, 255-59 (2000); III.

State v. Owens, 128 Wn.2d 908 (1996)

Child rape victim undergoes physical examination and, after several hours denying abuse had occurred, victim, prompted by question from mother, screams and acknowledges he was molested; held: while a later startling event may trigger associations with an original trauma, recreating the stress earlier produced and causing the person to exclaim spontaneously, State v. Chapin, 118 Wn.2d 681, 686-7 (1992), here victim underwent extended questioning before he said he had been molested and identified defendant as assailant; where declarant changes statement after lengthy questioning, he has necessarily reflected upon the previous responses, thus statements were improperly admitted, reversing State v. Owens, 78 Wn.App. 897 (1995), harmless here; per curiam.

State v. Briscoeray, 95 Wn.App. 167 (1999)

Domestic violence victim runs to security guard crying and screaming that she had just been assaulted, at trial she recants, trial court admits statement as excited utterance; held: where witness recants and claims she fabricated excited utterance, trial court may still admit the statement where there was no time and opportunity for the witness to concoct a fabrication, State v. Sunde, 98 Wn.App. 515 (1999), State v. Young, 123 Wn.App. 854, 861-62 (2004), State v.

Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008), see: State v. Williamson, 100 Wn.App. 248, 255-59 (2000), distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 757-59 (1995), State v. Sharp, 60 Wn.App. 457 (1996); I.

State v. Williamson, 100 Wn.App. 248, 255-59 (2000)

Kidnap victim arrives at witness's house upset, highly emotional, "in shock," is driven to police station, victim still crying, fearful, emotional, nervous, makes statement in response to questions, later recants, trial court admits statement as excited utterance; held: a later recantation does not disqualify a statement as an excited utterance, State v. Briscoeray, 95 Wn.App. 167, 173 (1999), State v. Sunde, 98 Wn.App. 515, 519-21 (1999), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008), but if the witness had an opportunity to and did fabricate a lie after the startling event and before making the statement, then the statement is not an excited utterance, State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 757-58 (1995), State v. Hochhalter, 131 Wn.App. 506, 513-17 (2006), see: State v. Sharp, 80 Wn.App. 457, 460-61 (1996); III.

State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 596-601 (2001)

Following severe beating, victim is taken to hospital, informs her father what happened, does not tell father that she had been drinking or seeking drugs; held: admissibility of an excited utterance is reviewed on a deferential abuse of discretion standard, effectively overruling State v. Sharp, 80 Wn.App. 457 (1996), see: State v. Briscoeray, 95 Wn.App. 167, 171 (1999); statements here were made spontaneously, albeit in response to questions, State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165, 176 (1984), shortly after a startling event, State v. Flett, 40 Wn.App. 277, 287 (1985), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 748-49 (2007), State v. Rodriquez, 187 Wn.App. 922, 938-40 (2015), distinguishing State v. Chapin, 118 Wn.2d 681 (1992); failing to report details is not equivalent to fabrication leading to exclusion of the statement at trial, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008), distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 757-59 (1995), State v. Hochhalter, 131 Wn.App. 506, 513-17 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Martinez, 105 Wn.App. 775 (2001)

Police testify that, as defendant's vehicle drove up, informant said "that's the vehicle," and that the officer's understanding, from the informant, is that more than one person will arrive in a vehicle with drugs; held: present sense impression, ER 803(a)(1), is not a "firmly rooted exception" to hearsay, thus does not satisfy confrontation clause, thus unless cross-examination would add nothing to the reliability of the statement, it is inadmissible, Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990); here, because informant's impression that car was arriving was only relevant when coupled with his memory and belief, based upon prior conduct, that defendant was arriving in a particular car from which he had previously sold drugs, the statement is inadmissible hearsay statement of memory and belief; rephrasing questions to avoid direct quotes by having a witness state his knowledge after the declarant spoke is backdoor hearsay, cf.: State v. O'Hara, 141 Wn.App. 900, 908-11 (2007), rev'd, on other grounds, 167 Wn.2d 91 (2009), State v. Berniard, 182 Wn.App. 106, 124-32 (2014); III.

State v. Lawrence, 108 Wn.App. 226, 233-36 (2001)

Ten to 15 minutes following rape, victim tells boyfriend of the rape, says she waited to tell because she did not want police involved since she had a warrant outstanding; held: brief hesitation in calling police does not defeat the fact that victim was under stress of the event, distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 757-59 (1995), cf.: State v. Hochhalter, 131 Wn.App. 506, 513-17 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008); I.

State v. Thomas, 150 Wn.2d 821, 853-56 (2004)

Court admits scared, shaking witness' statement that defendant shot victim, made 1½ to 2 hours after homicide, after declarant had assisted defendant in removing the body and ransacking victim's home; held: trial court's determination that the statement was made while declarant was under influence of the event was not an abuse of discretion, see: State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 598-99 (2001), State v. Flett, 40 Wn.App. 277, 287 (1985), cf.: dissent (Madsen, J.), at 877-80; 6-3.

State v. Young, 123 Wn.App. 854 (2004)

An excited utterance itself may be sufficient to prove that an exciting even occurred, independent evidence is not required, but see: State v. Terry, 10 Wn.App. 874, 880 (1974); where witness testifies she fabricated a portion of the utterance, it may still be admitted where trial court determines that declarant was under the influence of the startling event and lacked the time or opportunity to fabricate the story before making the statements, State v. Briscoray, 95 Wn.App. 167, 172-73 (1999), distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 757-59 (1995); trial court does not err by weighing the witness' credibility against the evidence indicating that the statements were spontaneous and reliable; I.

State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258, 269-72 (2005)

Trial court admits, as excited utterance, statement of jail inmate to police describing an assault on himself two hours after the assault; held: a detailed narrative in response to structured police questioning violates confrontation clause, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), State v. Powers, 124 Wn.App. 92 (2004), cf.: State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 748-49 (2007), State v. Perez, 184 Wn.App. 321, 341-43 (2014); I.

State v. Hochhalter, 131 Wn.App. 506, 513-17 (2006)

After assault, victim drives a witness to his home because witness wants to avoid involvement with police due to a warrant, then victim calls police and excitedly tells of assault but withholds information about witness, police testify to utterances at trial; held: where evidence establishes that declarant reflected beforehand on what she said and consciously and intentionally omitted part of what she had observed, her statement is not an excited utterance, distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749 (1995), cf.: State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008); II.

State v. Young, 160 Wn.2d 799 (2007)

Where an excited utterance is offered and victim recants, trial court may weigh the credibility of the declarant's recantation against the evidence that the statement is reliable because it was made spontaneously while under the influence of a startling event; recantation by itself is not a basis to exclude an excited utterance, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008), distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 758 (1995), see: State v. Williamson, 100 Wn.App. 248, 255-59 (2000); declarant's statement alone is insufficient to corroborate the occurrence of a startling event, but circumstantial evidence, independent from the statement's bare words, can corroborate a startling event; here, while victim's statement itself may have been insufficient to corroborate that she was molested and offered money, victim's showing another witness money plus defendant's statement when confronted that he did not want the police called and fleeing provide ample circumstantial evidence independent of the bare words of the declarant, that a startling event occurred; 7-2.

State v. Ohlson, 162 Wn.2d 1, 7-9 (2007)

To admit a statement as an excited utterance, declarant need not directly provide the court with evidence that a startling event occurred, State v. Williamson, 100 Wn.App. 248, 258-59 (2000), State v. Briscoeray, 95 Wn.App. 167, 173-74 (1999); excited utterances are not per se nontestimonial, Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224, 243-44 (2006); 8-0.

State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008)

Where a portion of a purported excited utterance is fabricated, the trial court may weigh the credibility of the recantation against the evidence that the statement is reliable because it was made spontaneously to determine if it is admissible, State v. Young, 160 Wn.2d 799, 808 (2007), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 600 (2001), distinguishing State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Ramirez-Estevez, 164 Wn.App. 284 (2011)

Two years after child victim is raped she reports rape to teacher and aunt, while recounting rape she cries, is upset, shakes, trial court admits hearsay as excited utterances, ER 803(a)(2); held: while the "startling event or condition…need not be the 'principal act' underlying the case," State v. Young, 160 Wn.2d 799, 810 (2007), State v. Chapin, 118 Wn.2d 681, 686 (1992), and the passage of time alone is not dispositive as to whether a statement is an admissible excited utterance, State v. Strauss, 119 Wn.2d 401, 416-17 (1992), where the victim recounts the traumatic events more than two years later, the reliability of an excited utterance close in time to the underlying traumatic event is no longer a predominant reliability factor, thus trial court erred in admitting the hearsay, albeit harmless; II.

State v. Pavlik, 165 Wn.App. 646 (2011)

During altercation and immediately after shooting, defendant yells to police, "you saw it, it was self defense," shortly thereafter makes two similar statements, defense seeks to offer statement as excited utterance or state of mind, trial court excludes as "self-serving," held: there is no self serving hearsay rule, party admission, ER 801(d)(2), which only can be offered by the state, does not exclude admission if the statement fits into another exception; while the first statement was likely admissible, within court's discretion, as an excited utterance, State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 597 (2001), exclusion here was not an abuse of discretion and was harmless, as self defense failed on the facts, not the absence of the statement; 2-1, III.

State v. Brush, 183 Wn.2d 559, 560-61 (2015)

Witness testifies that murder victim, while defendant was driving behind her, said "[h]e's not stopping, run," and that a similar incident had happened earlier in the day; held: first statement was a present sense impression, ER 803(a)(1), second was not; 9-0.

EVIDENCE
Hearsay and Exceptions

State v. Huelett, 92 Wn.2d 967 (1979)

Recollection refreshed versus recollection recorded; I.

State v. Lopez, 29 Wn.App. 836 (1981)

Officer testifies to statement made in English by X, translating excited utterance in Spanish by Y (victim); held: a witness is incompetent to testify to extrajudicial statements made by another person when it is necessary to have the statement translated before it can be understood by the witness, State v. Huynh, 49 Wn.App. 192 (1987), State v. Garcia-Trujillo, 89 Wn.App. 203 (1997), see: State v. Gonzalez-Hernandez, 122 Wn.App. 53 (2004); harmless here; I.

State v. Smith, 30 Wn.App. 251 (1981)

Where defense counsel cross-examines to show a witness's testimony is a fabrication, state may introduce prior consistent statement of witness, ER 801(d)(1)(ii), State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 148-49 (2013), cf.: State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 152 n. 1 (1992); I.

State v. Jessup, 31 Wn.App. 304 (1982)

Prostitute testifies in defendant's pimping trial that a third party told her that defendant had struck another prostitute for disobeying the rules; held: admissible under state of mind exception, ER 803(a)(3), as it was a factor in causing the witness to engage in prostitution.

State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009)

Incompetent infant's excited utterances are admissible, ER 803(a), irrespective of the competence of the declarant; excited utterance in response to a parent's questions are admissible in sex offense cases where spontaneity is clear and danger of fabrication is remote, State v. Bloomstrom, 12 Wn.App. 416 (1974), State v. Canida, 4 Wn.App. 275 (1971); II.

State v. Henry, 36 Wn.App. 530 (1984)

Co-defendant testifies at suppression hearing, exculpating defendant, takes the Fifth at trial; trial judge refuses to admit former testimony, ruling that witness was not unavailable and that state did not have an opportunity and similar motive for cross-examination; held: claim of privilege upheld by court makes witness unavailable, ER 804(a)(1); state's motive in examination was sufficiently similar to motive at trial to require admission of former testimony; I.

State v. Danielson, 37 Wn.App. 469 (1984)

Police officer testifies at trial that he received a telephone call from someone who identified himself as defendant, who then confessed to a crime, giving his birthdate, address, and other details which the officer corroborated; held: identity of the caller is a preliminary question, ER 104(b), to which the rules of evidence do not apply, ER 1101(c)(1); identification was self-authenticating, ER 901(b); I.

State v. Walker, 38 Wn.App. 841 (1984)

Where defense expressly challenges the credibility of declarant by impeaching with prior bad acts, prior consistent statements, ER 801(d)(i)(ii), are admissible as substantive evidence, State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007) , see also: State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 148-49 (2013); II.

State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985)

A physician, whether treating the patient or examining a person solely to enable the doctor to testify at trial, may relate what the patient said regarding the nature or cause of the injury insofar as it pertains to treatment or diagnosis and not fault; statements regarding identity of an assailant are not sufficiently related to diagnosis or treatment to be admissible, ER 803(a)(4), State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 496-97 (2003), but see: State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214 (1989), State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 273-6 (1994), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 601-03 (2001); I.

State v. Flett, 40 Wn.App. 277 (1985)

Rape victim's statement, "did you take the bastard home?", is not offered to prove the truth, thus not hearsay; "something upset me" is admissible as a then existing emotional condition exception, ER 803(a)(3); III.

State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 729 (1985)

Homicide victim's statement to a friend that she had a job offer to sell apparel is admitted, along with evidence that defendant had made a similar job offer to another woman; held: admissible as "then existing mental, emotional or physical condition" exception, ER 803(a)(3); test: statement must be of a present, existing state of mind and must appear to have been made "in a natural manner and not under circumstances of suspicion," Ford v. United Board of Carpenters, 50 Wn.2d 832, 837 (1957); III.

State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985)

Expert may read from learned treatise on direct if expert has testified to its reliability as authority, ER 803 (18); I.

State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985)

A witness's vacation does not satisfy the requirement of unavailability in order to permit the trial court to admit a videotaped deposition of the witness; the videotaped deposition is thus inadmissible hearsay, ER 804(b)(1); CrR 4.6 permits a court to order a deposition if there is reason to believe a witness may become unavailable, but the admissibility of deposition is governed by Rules of Evidence, not the prior CrR 4.6 order; accord: State v. Sweeney, 45 Wn.App. 81 (1986) (state must seek out-of-jurisdiction summons, RCW 10.55, before deposition is admissible), State v. Scott, 48 Wn.App. 561 (1987) (harmless error), State v. Aaron, 49 Wn.App. 735 (1987), State v. Whisler, 61 Wn.App. 126 (1991), see: State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003), State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592, 606-07 (2013), but see: State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330 (1991); II.

In re Penelope B., 104 Wn.2d 643 (1985)

An utterance, writing or nonverbal conduct that is not assertive is not hearsay; test is whether it was intended as an assertion; extensive analysis of assertions vs. nonassertive conduct; a physician's testimony as to a patient's assertions for purposes of diagnosis is admissible to prove the truth of the assertions even though the physician was consulted solely to qualify him as a witness, ER 803(a)(4); 9-0.

State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

Where both parties stipulate that a child victim is incompetent to testify, defense counsel fails to challenge victim's ability to relate just impression of the facts at the time she made hearsay statements, then prosecutor has met burden of producing declarant, distinguishing State v. Doe, 105 Wn.2d 889 (1986) and State v. Ryan, 103 Wn.2d 165 (1984); III.

State v. Alvarez, 45 Wn.App. 407 (1986)

At defendant's murder trial, witness testifies defendant's brother, in defendant's presence, said, "we came to kill you," then killed victim; brother was in Mexico at time of trial; held: statement was admissible to prove plan, design or intention of the declarant as part of then existing mental condition exception, ER 803(a)(3); 2-1.

State v. Purdom, 106 Wn.2d 745, 750 (1986)

Undercover officer testifies at VUCSA trial that money was handed to defendant and that defendant was given drugs; on cross, witness admitted that his police report did not contain that information; over objection, state elicited from witness that he had so testified at a deposition; held: error to admit prior consistent statement, as it is not admissible merely to reinforce or bolster testimony, Thomas v. French, 99 Wn.2d 95, 103 (1983), State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 152 n. 1 (1992), State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 758 n. 2 (1995), State v. Thomas, 150 Wn.2d 821, 864-67 (2004); evidence which counteracts a suggestion that the witness changed his story in response to a threat, scheme or bribe is admissible, but repetition itself does not imply veracity, State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855 (1983), cf.: State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 148-49 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Rivas, 49 Wn.App. 686 (1987)

Co-defendant, arrested immediately after burglary, is asked by police who his crime partner is, responds, "my brother"; held: not an excited utterance, ER 803(a)(2), as it was not spontaneous or provoked by the occurrence itself, applying Beck v. Dye, 200 Wash. 1 (1939) factors as guidance, although no longer controlling since adoption of rules of evidence; I.

State v. Young, 50 Wn.App. 107 (1987)

A witness who persistently refused to testify despite an order of the court is unavailable, ER 804(a); III.

State v. McKinney, 50 Wn.App. 56 (1987)

In applying child hearsay exception, RCW 9A.44.120, trial court must determine reliability of the victim's statement, not the reliability of the witness to whom the victim addressed the statement, but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); I.

State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988)

Silence constitutes an adoptive admission only if the defendant heard the accusatory or incriminating statement and was mentally and physically able to respond and the statement and circumstances were such that it is reasonable to conclude that the defendant would have responded had there been no intention to acquiesce, see: State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 281 n. 11 (2002), State v. Hill, 431 Wn.App.2d 1044 (2018); trial court must first require a preliminary determination that there are sufficient foundational facts from which the jury reasonably could conclude that the defendant actually heard, understood, and acquiesced in the statement, State v. Ta'afulisia, 21 Wn.App.2d 914 (2022); an adoptive admission of defendant does not violate confrontation clause; accord: State v. Cotten, 75 Wn.App. 669, 688-90 (1994); I.

State v. Rivera, 51 Wn.App. 556 (1988)

Mere issuance of a subpoena and failure of the witness to appear does not establish unavailability for purpose of admitting hearsay statements of the witness, see: State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003), State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592, 606-07 (2013), at least where the conviction rests entirely on the hearsay evidence; III.

Bellevue v. Mociulski, 51 Wn.App. 855 (1988)

Speed measuring device (radar) affidavits are admissible in traffic infraction cases, CrRLJ 6.13, as an exception to the hearsay rule, see also: Bellevue v. Hellenthal, 144 Wn.2d 425 (2001); I.

State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988)

Prior consistent statement, ER 801(d)(1)(ii), is not admissible to merely corroborate a witness's earlier testimony, State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855, 857 (1983), State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 152 n. 1 (1992), but is admissible to rehabilitate testimony that has been impugned by a suggestion of recent fabrication, State v. Stark, 48 Wn.App. 245, 249 (1987); cross-examination revealing inconsistencies that does not raise inferences that witness fabricated a story after the prior consistent statement is insufficient to admit the testimony, State v. Stubsjoen, 48 Wn.App. 139, 146 (1987), see: State v. Brown, 127 Wn.2d 749, 758 n. 2 (1995), State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 187-88 (2008), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 148-49 (2013); harmless here; III.

State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214 (1989)

Hearsay statement of a child abuse victim made during medical treatment identifying the source of the injury and identifying the assailant is admissible, ER 803(a)(4), where the identity of and relationship to the abuser is reasonably necessary for physical, emotional and psychological treatment, State v. Ashcroft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 456-8 (1993), State v. Owens, 78 Wn.App. 897, 901-2 (1995), State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477 (1998), State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1 (2005), State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 787-92 (2006), State v. Sandoval, 137 Wn.App. 532, 537-40 (2007), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 745-47 (2007), but see: State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985), State v. Scanlan, 193 Wn.2d 753 (2019), see also: State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55, 64-7 (1994); I.

State v. Hawkins, 53 Wn.App. 598 (1989)

Witness testifies she heard defendant confess; defense seeks to elicit that witness later heard defendant say that confession was a lie, state's objection sustained; held: state of mind exception is inapplicable as the words were a statement of memory, ER 803(a)(3); II.

State v. Monson, 113 Wn.2d 833 (1989)

Certified copy of driving record is admissible as a public record, State v. Chapman, 98 Wn.App. 888 (2000), RCW 5.44.040, does not require a showing of unavailability, does not violate confrontation clause; admissible hearsay need not be excluded because it "goes to the heart" of an issue, overruling State v. Tharp, 26 Wn.App. 184 (1980); State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882 (1982); affirms State v. Monson, 53 Wn.App. 854 (1989), State v. Connie J.C., 86 Wn.App. 453 (1997); 9-0.

State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 923 (1989)

Police testimony that victim stated that defendant committed robbery is not hearsay, as it is a prior statement of identification of a person made after perceiving him, ER 801(d)(1)(iii), State v. Jenkins, 53 Wn.App. 228, 233 n. 3 (1989), State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 252 (1989), State v. Stratton, 139 Wn.App. 511, 516-18 (2007); ER 801(d)(1)(iii) is not limited to lineup, showup or montage identifications; testimony does not violate confrontation clause, United States v. Owens, 98 L.Ed.2d 951 (1988); I.

State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 909 (1990)

Witness testifies that X told her that victim said she was raped by defendant, court instructs jury that X's statement is not evidence, admitted solely to show how witness reacted; held: so long as the testimony was used solely for this purpose, it was not hearsay, within discretion of trial court to admit it, State v. Stubsjoen, 48 Wn.App. 139, 147 (1987); III.

State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277 (1990)

Witness tells police radio, which broadcasts to police, that suspect used a jean jacket in committing crime, a jean jacket having been found on suspect at arrest, over objection, officer testifies what he heard over radio, state claiming that it was being offered not to prove the truth but to show the officer's state of mind in explaining why he acted as he did; held: officer's state of mind in reacting to the information was not relevant, and thus was offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted, State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266 (2014); State v. Edwards, 131 Wn.App. 611 (2006), State v. Rocha,21 Wn.App.2d 26 (2022), if necessary at trial for police to relate historical facts about a case, it is sufficient for officer to report s/he acted upon "information received," State v. Johnson, 61 Wn.App. 539 (1991), State v. Wicker, 66 Wn.App. 409 (1992), cf.: State v. Perez-Arellano, 60 Wn.App. 781 (1991); a limiting instruction, ER 105, is mandatory when requested where evidence is admitted for a limited purpose, State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 496 (2003); I.

State v. Hamilton, 58 Wn.App. 229 (1990)

Defendant, accused of theft of money, offers to testify that deceased complainant gave him permission to use the money, trial court sustains state's hearsay objection; held: statement was offered to prove defendant's belief that he had permission to take the money to establish a lack of criminal intent, thus is admissible to show state of mind, ER 801(c), 803(a)(3), subject to a limiting instruction; "in criminal actions, a defendant is generally allowed to testify as to what was in his mind at the time he engaged in the harmful conduct," at 232; deadman's statute, RCW 5.60.030, is inapplicable in a criminal action, State v. Doubleday, 198 Wash. 440 (1939); III.

State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990)

Statements made during sleep are not assertions, ER 801(a), and thus are not hearsay, ER 801(c), as "nothing is an assertion unless intended to be one," Fed. R. Evid. 801(a) advisory committee note; thus, utterances such as greetings, pleasantries, expressions of joy, annoyance or other emotions, when not intended as expressions of fact or opinion, are not assertions, In re Penelope B., 104 Wn.2d 643, 652-3 (1985); I.

State v. Osborn, 59 Wn.App. 1 (1990)

Proper for trial court to admit prior consistent statement, ER 801(d)(1), where, during cross by party seeking to exclude, it reasonably appeared to court that the supposed motive to falsify arose after the statements were made, Tome v. United States, 130 L.Ed.2d 574 (1995); where inferences raised in cross-examination are sufficient to allow counsel to argue motive to fabricate, then statements may be admitted to rebut those inferences, State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 290 (1984), State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 148-49 (2013); when cross of one witness lays the groundwork to show motive to fabricate by a second witness, the second witness's prior consistent statement is admissible to rebut the inference; I.

State v. Sosa, 59 Wn.App. 678 (1990)

Drug test lab report, certified under penalty of perjury, provided to defense at least 15 days prior to trial is admissible without further foundation if defendant has not served written demand to produce expert seven days prior to trial, CrR 6.13(b), see: State v. Neal, 144 Wn.2d 600 (2001), State v. Schroeder, 164 Wn.App. 164 (2011); I.

State v. Johnson, 61 Wn.App. 235 (1991), aff'd on other grounds, 119 Wn.2d 167 (1992)

In permitting prostitution case, defense offers evidence that defendant told an acquaintance, prior to offense, that she thinks there is an undercover officer acting as a prostitute working out of her hotel; held: statement was not hearsay, as it was offered only as circumstantial evidence of her state of mind at the time of the offense, thus should have been admitted to those counts which occurred after defendant allegedly made the statement, properly refused as to count which occurred before the statement, State v. Stubsjoen, 48 Wn.App. 139, 146 (1987); I.

State v. Hobson, 61 Wn.App. 330 (1991)

Subpoenaed theft victim informs state he is going on vacation during trial, state's motion to continue trial is denied; state does not seek material witness warrant, takes deposition of victim, defense counsel, with defendant present, cross-examines; trial court admits videotape at trial over objection; held: defendant's presence and cross-examination met "central concern" of confrontation clause, Maryland v. Craig, 111 L.Ed.2d 666 (1990); defense was aware witness might not be present and had time to prepare, thus defense had full opportunity for effective cross, State v. Jenkins, 53 Wn.App. 228, 235-6 (1989), State v. Hewett, 86 Wn.2d 487 (1976); issuance of subpoena and fact that state did not indicate to witness he need not appear establishes good faith effort, State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402 (2003), State v. Hacheney, 160 Wn.2d 503, 520-24 (2007), see: State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592, 606-07 (2013), distinguishing State v. Sanchez, 42 Wn.App. 225 (1985); material witness warrant would have been a "hardship" on witness, unnecessary here; I.

State v. Johnson, 61 Wn.App. 539 (1991)

In drug case, officer's testimony that he believed and suspected defendant was trafficking was inadmissible hearsay, as it was based upon search warrant affidavit and informant who was not called to testify; officer's state of mind was not relevant to the issues at trial, as defense was not challenging warrant, State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277 (1990), State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266 (2014); failure of defense to request limiting instruction did not waive issue, since there was no relevant limited purpose for which the evidence could be admitted; I.

State v. Makela, 66 Wn.App. 164 (1992)

Trial court may rule on admissibility of prior consistent statements, ER 801(d)(1)(ii), based upon argument and offers of proof, prior to declarant's testimony; mere assertion that motives to lie may have existed at time of the prior consistent statement is insufficient to prevent their admission; trial court must decide whether motive to lie rises to threshold level to exclude it, State v. Stark, 48 Wn.App. 245 (1987), State v. Osborn, 59 Wn.App. 1, 5 (1990), Tome v. United States, 130 L.Ed.2d 574 (1995); if admitted, defense may present evidence of motive to fabricate to trier of fact; in sex offense case, state may offer evidence from declarant as to when she made a complaint, although details are inadmissible absent requisite foundation for prior consistent statements, State v. Murley, 35 Wn.2d 233, 236-8 (1949); cross-examination of complainant suggesting fabrication is sufficient to permit prior consistent statements, State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 148-49 (2013); I.

State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202 (1992)

Where lab reports are not provided to defense at least 15 days before trial, or less time upon good cause, they must be excluded, CrR 6.13(b), see: State v. Neal, 144 Wn.2d 600 (2001), State v. Schroeder, 164 Wn.App. 164 (2011); III.

United States v. Salerno, 120 L.Ed.2d 255 (1992)

To admit, for defense, former testimony before a grand jury of an unavailable witness, Fed. R. Evid. 804(b)(1), court must find that government had a similar motive to develop the testimony by direct, cross or redirect examination; Supreme Court declines to establish an "adversarial fairness" exception to the "similar motive" requirement; 8-1.

State v. Wicker, 66 Wn.App. 409 (1992)

Fingerprint technician testifies, over objection, that another technician's initials on fingerprint card verified his opinion that prints were defendant's; held: initials and accompanying testimony were an assertion, offered to prove the truth of what it asserts, ER 801; state's argument that the initials were admitted not for the truth but to explain police procedures, was an unnecessary explanation to introduce inadmissible hearsay, State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277, 280 (1990), State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266 (2014); expert opinion cannot constitute a business record, see: State v. Heggins, 55 Wn.App. 591, 596 (1989); I.

State v. Rice, 120 Wn.2d 549 (1993)

Statement to murder co-defendant "I know where we can get some money. It would be easy, stab them" is not hearsay as it is not offered to prove truth of matter asserted but only to show premeditation, see: State v. Miller, 35 Wn.App. 567 (1983); 9-0

State v. Babich, 68 Wn.App. 438 (1993)

Witness's testimony that the witness passed a drug test is hearsay; III.

State v. Ashcraft, 71 Wn.App. 444, 456-8 (1993)

Child abuse victim's statement to physician that "mama" caused her injuries is admissible where victim lived in accused's home, raising questions of possible psychological injuries, ER 803(a)(4), State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214, 222-23 (1991), State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1 (2005), State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 787-92 (2006), see also: State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 106 (2007), but see: State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985), cf.: State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 74-76 (2001); while normally the victim must understand that the statement identifying the assailant was needed for treatment to be admissible, where the child is too young to appreciate the need for treatment, the statement may be admissible because victim's young age establishes reliability, as she would have no reason to fabricate the nature of her injuries; I.

State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 822-4 (1993)

In child sex abuse case, court prohibits defendant from testifying that defendant was aware of victim's sexual contact with others, to explain that defendant's contact with victim was to correct her behavior; held: evidence was not hearsay, as it was offered to prove defendant's state of mind, State v. Hamilton, 58 Wn.App. 229, 231 (1990), State v. Mounsey, 31 Wn.App. 511, 522 n. 3 (1982); here, however unfair prejudice to victim outweighs probative value, so evidence was properly excluded on other grounds, State v. Markle, 118 Wn.2d 424, 438 (1992), State v. Rivas, 49 Wn.App. 677, 688 (1987); I

State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994)

Child hearsay statements are admissible under the medical diagnosis exception, ER 803(a)(4), even if the child declarant does not understand that the statements were necessary for medical diagnosis if corroborating evidence supports the statements, and it appears unlikely that the child fabricated, In re S.S., 61 Wn.App. 488, 503 (1991), State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214, 222-3 (1989), Dependency of M.P., 76 Wn.App. 87, 92-3 (1994), State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1 (2005), but see: State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77, 84-8 (1997), op. withdrawn, in part, 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999), State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 848-50 (1999), trial court should identify on the record the specific evidence, drawn from the totality of circumstances, on which it relies to determine reliability; here, fearfulness, spontaneity are factors which would be difficult for a three-year old to consciously invent; while child hearsay/medical diagnosis exception, as interpreted in Washington, is not a firmly rooted exception, particularized guarantees of trustworthiness here establish that the statements did not violate confrontation clause, see: Idaho v. Wright, 111 L.Ed.2d 638 (1990), White v. Illinois, 116 L.Ed.2d 848 (1992), State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477 (1998), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 182-84 (2001); I.

Dependency of M.P., 76 Wn.App. 87 (1994)

Medical diagnosis exception, ER 803(a)(4), does not require that the provider of treatment be a forensic specialist, can include social workers or sex abuse therapists, see: In re S.S., 61 Wn.App. 488, 491, 503 (1991), State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214, 221 (1989); I.

Tome v. United States, 130 L.Ed.2d 574 (1995)

Defendant, charged with abuse of his daughter, claims that the allegation was concocted so that child would not be returned to him from temporary custody with mother; after cross-examination of complainant, court admits prior consistent statements, Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B), made while child was residing with mother; held: a prior consistent statement, in order to be admissible to rebut a charge of recent fabrication, improper influence or improper motive must have been made before alleged fabrication came into being; here, fabrication allegedly occurred after the child resided with her mother, thus prior consistent statements are inadmissible; accord: State v. Ellison, 36 Wn.App. 564 (1984), State v. Stark, 48 Wn.App. 245 (1987), State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855, 857-8 (1983), State v. Osborn, 59 Wn.App. 1 (1990), cf.: State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007); 7-2.

State v. Collins, 76 Wn.App. 496 (1995)

While serving warrant, police answer phone, caller asks for Larry (defendant's first name) and refers to a need for drugs; held: an inquiry is not assertive and is thus not a statement, ER 801(a), is thus not hearsay, ER 801(c), State v. Modest, 88 Wn.App. 239, 248-9 (1997); the need for drugs was offered as the belief that the caller could get drugs at the apartment being searched, not as an assertion that the caller really did need or want the drugs; verbal conduct which is assertive but offered as a basis for inferring something other than the matter asserted is not hearsay; a person does not normally intend to assert an implied belief; cf.: State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 709-12 (1997); I.

State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244 (1995)

Homicide victim's hearsay statement that she was going to go to an apartment because she had been beaten by defendant is admissible under state of mind exception, ER 803(a)(3), to prove that declarant acted in accordance with statements of future intent, State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632, 642 (1986); where state of mind of deceased is at issue, in self-defense or accident cases, then other hearsay statements of victim may be admissible, State v. Parr, 93 Wn.2d 102, 103 (1980), see: State v. Athan, 160 Wn.2d 354, 381, 83 (2007), but see: State v. Fraser, 170 Wn.App. 13, 19-24 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Sims, 77 Wn.App. 236, 238-41 (1995)

Hearsay statement of a domestic violence victim made during medical treatment attributing fault to an abuser may be admissible, ER 803(a)(4), where identity of abuser is reasonably pertinent to treatment, State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1 (2005), State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736, 745-47 (2007), including changing relationship patterns and avoiding threatening situations in the future, State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477 (1998), State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 639-41 (2005), see: State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214 (1989), State v. Owens, 78 Wn.App. 897, 901-2 (1995), State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 74-76 (2001); confrontation clause issue not argued, thus not addressed, see: State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592, 603 (2006), State v. Hopkins, 134 Wn.App. 780, 787-92 (2006), but see: State v. Sandoval, 137 Wn.App. 532, 537-40 (2007); I.

State v. Roberts, 80 Wn.App. 342, 352-3 (1996)

Defense to VUCSA charge is that defendant was aware of marijuana grow operation in basement but that he had no dominion and control, that grower had threatened him to stay out of basement, trial court excludes threat as hearsay; held: threat is not hearsay as it was offered not to prove that the grower intended to carry out the threat, but only to show the effect of the threat on defendant, i.e., to cause him not to report the grow operation to the police, State v. Jessup, 31 Wn.App. 304, 314-5 (1982); I.

State v. Smith, 82 Wn.App. 327 (1996)

Excited utterances that are admitted in evidence as exceptions to hearsay are admissible even if consistent with the testimony of the declarant, as they are not offered as a prior consistent statement, but rather as independently admissible hearsay, distinguishing State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855, 857-8 (1984); I.

State v. Connie J.C., 86 Wn.App. 453 (1997)

Trial court admits co-defendant's guilty plea form, containing co-defendant's confession, at defendant's trial, no showing co-defendant was unavailable; held: a confession is not a public record, RCW 5.44.040, as it is not a routine daily product of government and business, admission deprives defendant of right to cross-examine; III.

State v. Smith, 87 Wn.App. 345 (1997)

In speed trap infraction case, RCW 46.61.470, officer's affidavit states that Aerial Surveillance Traffic Marks are painted at one-half mile intervals by Department of Transportation, defense objects for lack of foundation; held: absent some evidence of affiant's personal knowledge, ER 602, court erred in admitting the distance between the marks; I.

State v. Modest, 88 Wn.App. 239, 248-9 (1997)

Telephone bill, offered to prove that defendant used the telephone frequently to call a number, is not hearsay as it is not intended to be assertive, State v. Kelly, 19 Wn.App.2d 434 (2021); III.

State v. Haack, 88 Wn.App. 423, 436-41 (1997)

Assault victim testifies that he heard defendant was after him but he heard from another that defendant had drugs for him so he went to defendant's home; held: evidence of a victim's state of mind must be relevant to a material issue to be admissible, State v. Cameron, 100 Wn.2d 520, 531 (1983), State v. Parr, 93 Wn.2d 95, 98-104 (1980), State v. Athan, 160 Wn.2d 354, 381-83 (2007); here, victim's state of mind was relevant to show why he went to defendant's home, thus admissible; I.

State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77 (1997), op. withdrawn, in part, 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999)

Where a child has not sought medical treatment but makes statements to a counselor procured by a state social agency, the record must affirmatively demonstrate the child made statement understanding that they would further the diagnosis and possible treatment of the child's condition, to be admitted as medical diagnosis exception, ER 803(a)(4), at 86; here, absent testimony from the counselor that she explained to child that treatment depended upon truthful and accurate information, then court cannot assume that child was motivated to tell the truth by her self-interest in obtaining proper medical treatment, at 87, see: State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994), State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 182-84 (2001); III.

State v. Alvarado, 89 Wn.App. 543 (1998)

Witness to homicide tapes three statements shortly after crime, detailing events of crime, at trial witness testifies he does not remember the events or whether the tape is accurate, court admits taped statement as recorded recollection, ER 803(a)(5); held: to admit, proponent must establish that (1) record pertains to a matter about which witness once had knowledge, (2) witness has insufficient recollection of the matter to provide truthful and accurate trial testimony, (3) record was made or adopted by witness when the matter was fresh in witness's memory, and (4) record reflects the witness's prior knowledge accurately; witness need not vouch for or directly aver to the statement's accuracy, court may consider totality, including whether witness disavows accuracy, State v. Derouin, 116 Wn.App. 38 (2003), State v. White, 152 Wn.App. 173, 183-86 (2009), see: State v. Floreck, 111 Wn.App. 135, 139-40 (2002), State v. Nava, 177 Wn.App. 272 (2013), averred to accuracy at the time of making the statement, whether the recording process is reliable and other indicia of reliability, In re Detention of Peterson, 197 Wn.App. 722 (2017); here, two of the three statements were consistent with each other, witness acknowledged on tape the information was correct, statements were corroborated; witness' first statement denied knowledge, which does not render latter statements inadmissible, as witness explained later that this first statement was untrue due to his fear; while first statement of denial is not admissible under the rule, it is admissible under the rule of completeness, to allow defense to assail credibility; I.

State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477 (1998)

In sex offense case, unavailable victim's hearsay statements that she had been sexually abused are admissible under the "hue and cry" doctrine, a caselaw exception to the hearsay rule allowing evidence that the victim made a timely complaint to someone after the assault, State v. DeBolt, 61 Wn.App. 58, 63 (1991), even if defense does not raise timeliness of complaint as an issue, State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 151 (1992), State v. Murley, 35 Wn.2d 233, 236-7 (1949), as long as trial court finds particular guarantees of trustworthiness from totality of circumstances, State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994); details and identify of offender are not permitted; I.

State v. C.N.H., 90 Wn.App. 947 (1998)

Certified copy of state identification card is admissible as a public record, RCW 5.44.040, to prove age; I.

State v. Marintorres, 93 Wn.App. 442, 448-49 (1999)

State of mind exception to hearsay rule, ER 803(a)(3), applies only to the declarant's state of mind, not the witness's state of mind; escape defendant's testimony that others had told him his sentence had expired is not hearsay, as it is offered not for the truth but to prove the statement's effect on defendant's state of mind, but here, the evidence is not relevant; II.

State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 824-25 (1999)

A statement of defendant to a third party that is self-serving and offered by the defense is inadmissible hearsay unless it meets some exception, State v. Bennett, 20 Wn.App. 783, 787 (1978), State v. Stubsjoen, 48 Wn.App. 139 (1987), State v. Johnson, 60 Wn.2d 21, 31 (1962); 7-2.

State v. Phillips, 94 Wn.App. 829 (1999)

In violation of a no contact order case, return of service of the no contact order is a public record, RCW 5.44.040, see: State v. Bolen, 142 Wash. 653, 663 (1927), State v. Hines, 87 Wn.App. 98, 101 (1997); I.

State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 848-50 (1999)

Child's statement to a "forensic interviewer" hired solely to interview children to determine sexual abuse for trial, is not admissible under medical diagnosis exception, ER 804(a)(4), as declarant's motive was not shown to be consistent with receiving medical care and it was not reasonable for a physician to rely on the information, In re Dependency of M.P., 76 Wn.App. 87, 93 (1994), cf.: In re Dependency of Penelope B., 104 Wn.2d 643, 656 (1985), State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1 (2005); III.

Spokane County v. Bates, 96 Wn.App. 893, 899-900 (1999)

In vicious dog case, witness testifies that she had investigated two complaints from defendant's neighbor that his dog had attacked her, court instructs jury that the evidence is offered solely for notice and not as to truth of the incidents; held: statements were not offered to prove substance of the complaints, but to prove that defendant had been informed about aggressive behavior of the dog; III.

State v. Chapman, 98 Wn.App. 888 (2000)

Certified copy of driving record and certified copy of order of license revocation are admissible without testimony by the official custodian, as foundation is evident on the face of the documents, State v. Monson, 53 Wn.App. 854, 858, aff'd, 113 Wn.2d 833 (1989); III.

State v. Hirschfield, 99 Wn.App. 1 (1999)

Child witness informs court that she's not going to testify because she doesn't want to talk about it any more, even if ordered by the court which finds her unavailable and admits hearsay, RCW 9A.44.120(1)(b), ER 804(a)(2); held: trial court applied "appropriate judicial pressure by its questioning," and was not obliged to order the witness to testify before declaring her unavailable, but see: Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); I.

State v. Crowder, 103 Wn.App. 20 (2000)

Defendant is charged with theft by embezzlement by exercising unauthorized control over elderly victim's estate, trial court admits victim's out-of-court statements that defendant "has taken care of everything," later that he was going to "pull in the purse strings" to stop defendant's spending his money; held: statements were not hearsay, as they went to victim's state of mind, his reliance on defendant, and to defendant's influence on victim, not admitted to prove that victim had in fact taken care of everything or that defendant had in fact pulled in the purse strings; court admits statement of victim that he had turned over management of his affairs to defendant but couldn't give any particulars on his affairs, held to be not hearsay but rather evidence that defendant did not comprehend his own financial situation, thus state of mind; I.

State v. James, 104 Wn.App. 25, 30-35 (2000)

In bail jumping case, court admits state's motion and declaration for issuance of bench warrant; held: court records exception, RCW 5.44.010, is a firmly rooted hearsay exception if the records contain facts rather than conclusions involving discretion or expression of opinion; court records, like public records, are admissible because of declarant's official duty and high probability that declarant has performed the public duty of making an accurate record, State v. Monson, 113 Wn.2d 833, 845 (1989); here, prosecutor was acting as an advocate, not creating a "routine court record"; II.

State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 601-03 (2001)

Victim tells physician that she was threatened with rape, beaten and forced to observe and hear beating of another victim, admitted under medical diagnosis and treatment exception, ER 803(a)(4); held: because psychological treatment falls within definition of medical treatment exception, State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55, 65 (1994), entire story was necessary to arrange for counseling for post traumatic distress, thus admissible within discretion of trial court, cf.: State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489, 496-97 (2003); 9-0.

State v. Neal, 144 Wn.2d 600 (2001)

In drug case, state files CrR 6.13(b) certificate which states that crime lab received the substance from the "evidence vault" rather than a person as required in CrR 6.13(b)(1), defense files demand for expert 6 days before trial, trial court admits certificate as demand was untimely and it substantially complied with rule; held: defendant's untimely demand does not waive hearsay objection where report does not strictly comply with the rule establishing the hearsay objection, failure of the certificate to state the name of the person from whom the lab received the evidence is fatal to admissibility, reversing State v. Neal, 102 Wn.App. 99 (2000), State v. Schroeder, 164 Wn.App. 164 (2011); 9-0.

State v. Nation, 110 Wn.App. 651, 661-67 (2002)

Supervisor of crime lab testifies that, based upon notes of criminalist who tested the drugs, his opinion is that they are controlled substances; held: abuse of discretion to admit hearsay testimony of a subordinate who tested the drugs unless the expert establishes that he as well as others would act upon the information for purposes other than litigation; here, expert stated tests are prepared only for court testimony, see: State v. Ecklund, 30 Wn.App. 313 (1981), State v. Berllerouche, 129 Wn.App. 912, 916-18 (2005); III.

State v. Floreck, 111 Wn.App. 135, 139-40 (2002)

Where declarant denies accuracy of prior statement, it is inadmissible as recorded recollection, ER 803(a)(5), cf.: State v. Alvarado, 89 Wn.App. 543, 552 (1998), State v. Derouin, 116 Wn.App. 38 (2003), State v. White, 152 Wn.App. 173, 183-86 (2009), In re Detention of Peterson, 197 Wn.App. 722 (2017), but see: State v. Nava, 177 Wn.App. 272 (2013); II.

State v. Spencer, 111 Wn.App. 401, 407-11 (2002)

Court refuses defense offer of a witness to testify that state's witness told her that she said defendant committed crime because police threatened her; held: testimony offered to impeach the witness via her state of mind is not hearsay, Betts v. Betts, 3 Wn.App. 53, 59 (1970), and is admissible whether or not brought to the declarant's attention on the stand; II.

State v. Crawford, 147 Wn.2d 424, 432-40 (2002), rev'd, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004)

Police take statements from defendant and his wife, later question them again getting a statement different than the first statements, defendant invokes marital privilege, court admits wife's statements; held: wife's first statement is not hearsay, as it was offered not to prove the truth of the matter asserted, but to demonstrate that she lied about the circumstances preceding the crime, State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 496 (2000), and is relevant only if a subsequent inconsistent statement is admitted; 9-0.

State v. King, 113 Wn.App. 243, 291-93 (2002)

Witness testifies for state at defendant's robbery trial, dies, at defendant's conspiracy trial court admits witness' former testimony, ER 804(b)(1); held: former testimony exception does not require that the issues be identical, merely that the issues and the purpose for which the testimony was offered must have been such that the party against whom the testimony is offered had an adequate motive for testing the credibility of the testimony in the earlier proceeding; I.

State v. Jackson, 113 Wn.App. 762 (2002)

Victim testifies that she listened to 911 tape, it was her voice and it was accurate; held: witness with personal knowledge of conversation who testifies that tape accurately portrays the original conversation and identifies each relevant voice authenticates the evidence, ER 901, State v. Williams, 49 Wn.2d 354. 360 (1956), State v. Smith, 85 Wn.2d 840, 847 (1975); II.

State v. DeSantiago, 149 Wn.2d 402, 408-15 (2003)

Following mistrial, state discovers its witnesses moved to Mexico or Texas, makes efforts to locate witnesses, mails subpoenas, contacts family members to no avail, trial court admits former testimony at second trial, ER 804(b)(1); held: party need not exercise due diligence, distinguishing State v. Adamski, 111 Wn.2d 574 (1988), or invoke out of jurisdiction summons, ch. 10.55 RCW, where witness' location is unknown, see: State v. Sweeney, 45 Wn.App. 81, 86 (1986), cf.: State v. Rivera, 51 Wn.App. 556 , 560 (1988), as long as the party exercises good faith and reasonable efforts; where state adds a charge between trials, former testimony is admissible, within discretion of trial court, as long as motive and incentive to cross-examine are substantially the same; affirms State v. DeSantiago, 108 Wn.App. 581 (2001); 7-2.

State v. Derouin, 116 Wn.App. 38 (2003)

Declarant makes statement to police, officer writes it down, declarant signs it, at trial declarant testifies she does not remember giving the statement or meeting with police, at pretrial hearing another witness testifies he spoke with declarant who made a statement consistent with statement to police, trial court denies state's offer of statement to police as past recorded recollection, ER 803(a)(5); held: totality of circumstances support sufficient indicia of reliability to admit statement, State v. Alvarado, 89 Wn.App. 543 (1998), see: State v. Floreck, 111 Wn.App. 135, 139-40 (2002), State v. Nava, 177 Wn.App. 272 (2013), c.f: Crawford v.

Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); foundation testimony to establish that record reflects the witness' prior knowledge accurately need not come from same declarant who gave the prior statement; I.

State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489 (2003)

Where medical records are admitted in assault case, trial court should, upon request, redact statements attributing fault, see: State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985), State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 602 (2001), State v. White, 152 Wn.App. 173, 183-86 (2009); where a statement is offered for a non-hearsay purpose, trial court must give a limiting instruction if requested, State v. Parr, 93 Wn.2d 95, 98-99 (1980); 9-0.

Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004)

In attempted murder case, police take statements from defendant's wife describing incident; at trial, defense invokes marital privilege, court admits wife's statement against penal interest; held: testimonial statements are inadmissible at trial unless declarant testifies at trial or defense was previously able to cross-examine declarant; "testimonial" statements include ex parte in-court testimony or its functional equivalent, such as affidavits, custodial examinations, prior testimony that defendant was unable to cross-examine or similar pretrial statements that declarants would reasonably expect to bused prosecutorially, including those made under circumstances which would lead an objective witness reasonably to believe that the statement would be available for use at a later trial, see: Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006), State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910 (2007); overrules reliability test of Ohio v. Roberts, 65 L.Ed.2d 597 (1980); reverses State v. Crawford, 147 Wn.2d 424 (2002); see: White v. Illinois, 116 L.Ed.2d 848 (1992)(Thomas, J., concurring); 7-2.

State v. Thomas, 150 Wn.2d 821, 864-67 (2004)

Prior consistent statement, ER 801(d)(1)(ii), is not admissible to reinforce or bolster testimony of a witness, Thomas v. French, 99 Wn.2d 95, 103 (1983), State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855 (1983), State v. McDaniel, 37 Wn.App. 768 (1984), State v. Purdom, 106 Wn.2d 745, 750 (1986), except where an inference is raised in cross-examination that the witness changed her story in response to an external pressure, whereupon whether that witness gave the same account of the story prior to the onset of the external pressure becomes probative of the witness' veracity, see: State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 107-08 (2007), State v. McWilliams, 177 Wn.App. 139, 148-49 (2013); 9-0.

State v. Shaw, 120 Wn.App. 847 (2004)

Value of a car may be proved by Kelley Blue Book web site under market report exception, ER 803(a)(17); I.

State v. Orndorff, 122 Wn.App. 781 (2004)

Excited utterance to a civilian is not testimonial, and is thus not excluded under confrontation clause, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); II.

State v. Powers, 124 Wn.App. 92 (2004)

In domestic violence protection order trial, RCW 26.50.110(5), complainant's 911 call to report defendant's violation and describing defendant to assist in apprehension is admitted at trial; held: trial court must assess the 911 call as testimonial or nontestimonial and whether the statement originates from interrogation, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004); here, because the call was not made to protect the victm from defendant, her hearsay statements were testimonial and erroneously admitted when she became unavailable at trial, State v. Pugh, 167 Wn.2d 825 (2009), State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 919-20 (2007), State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258 (2005), State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 501-04 (2007), see: Davis v. Washington, 165 L.Ed.2d 224 (2006); II.

State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617 (2005)

A defendant's statement within an Alford plea is a party admission, at 634-36, ER 801(d)(2), Mendoza v. Rivera-Chavez, 88 Wn.App. 261, 272 (1997), N.Y. Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Doty, 58 Wn.App. 546, 550-51 (1990); II.

State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 870-72 (2005)

Evidence as to the name by which a person is known is not hearsay, State v. Siverly, 140 Wash. 58, 60 (1926); I

State v. Walker, 129 Wn.App. 258 (2005)

Trial court admits, as excited utterance, statement of jail inmate to police describing an assault on himself two hours after the assault; in companion case, child rape complainant's statements to her mother describing the incident are admitted; held: a detailed narrative in response to structured police questioning violates confrontation clause, Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177 (2004), State v. Powers, 124 Wn.App. 92 (2004); statements to mother, even if initiated by the mother, do not violate confrontation clause, at 272-73; I.

Pers. Restraint of Theders, 130 Wn.App. 422, 429-33 (2005)

In attempted murder trial, court admits co-defendant's out of court cell telephoned statement that he and defendant were shopping, offered to prove that defendant and co-defendant had concocted an alibi; held: statements were not offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted, i.e., that they were shopping, but rather to prove defendant's knowledge and agreement to co-defendant's false alibi, thus statement did not violate confrontation clause and was not hearsay; I.

State v. Edwards, 131 Wn.App. 611 (2006)

In drug case, trial court admits, over objection, detective's testimony that an informant told detective that defendant was dealing drugs to explain why detective started his investigation; held: because detective's state of mind was not relevant to whether defendant committed the drug offense, the statement was hearsay, offered to prove the substance of the statement, and should have been excluded, State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266 (2014), State v. Rocha,21 Wn.App.2d 26 (2022), State v. Gonzalez-Gonzalez, 193 Wn.App. 683, 688-91 (2016), distinguishing State v. Roberts, 80 Wn.App. 342, 352-53 (1996), State v. Jessup, 31 Wn.App. 304, 314-15 (1982); III.

State v. Benefiel, 131 Wn.App. 651 (2006)

In escape from community custody case, community corrections officer testifies, over objection, that defendant did not report nor was CCO notified that defendant appeared in any other DOC office; held: personal knowledge of witness is not hearsay; III.

State v. Saunders, 132 Wn.App. 592, 601-07 (2006)

Domestic violence victim tells paramedic and physician that defendant choked her; held: there is no reason to believe that a reasonable person in victim's position would think she was making a record of evidence for prosecution, thus statement is not testimonial and is thus admissible under medical treatment exception, ER 803(a)(4), but see: State v. Hurtado, 173 Wn.App. 592 (2013); I

State v. Chambers, 134 Wn.App. 853 (2006)

Undercover police observe van pull to house, passenger walks to house, tells officer he has the money for drugs and asks how much, passenger walks back to van, speaks with driver, gets money from driver, returns to officer, pays, gets drugs, driver is arrested, at trial officer testifies to what passenger said; held: passenger's statements are not hearsay, not offered to prove that passenger had money or cared about the price but "to prove that a dialogue occurred…about purchasing drugs," at 859 ¶15; statements also were by an agent, ER 801(d)(2)(iv), which does not require unavailability; statement by a coconspirator does not violate confrontation clause, State v. Williams, 131 Wn.App. 488 (2006), Crawford v. Washington, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 195-96 (2004); II.

State v. Sanchez-Guillen, 135 Wn.App. 636, 645-46 (2006)

Defense offers defendant's out-of-court statement at trial to show that the shooting was an accident as statement against interest and state of mind exception to hearsay rule, see: State v. King, 71 Wn.2d 573, 577 (1967); held: statement against interest exception, ER 804(b)(3), cannot apply to a criminal defendant's statement, as the defendant is not unavailable by mere assertion of a privilege, ER 804(a)(6), cf.: State v. Dictado, 102 Wn.2d 277, 287 (1984); state of mind exception applies to state of mind at the time the statement was made, not the earlier time the statement describes, State v. Ammlung, 31 Wn.App. 696, 703 (1982); III.

State v. Williams, 136 Wn.App. 486, 499-501 (2007)

CD of 911 call contains label asserting that recording was prepared by police communications section and was transferred from a master recording, no witness is called to authenticate it but trial court speaks with caller in court who refuses to testify, court admits call over objection; held: authentication, ER 901, is not subject to rules of evidence, ER 104(a), 1101(c)(1), State v. Danielson, 37 Wn.App. 469, 471 (1984), trial court may rely upon lay opinions, hearsay or the proffered evidence itself in determining authenticity; here, trial court spoke to declarant in court and listened to the recording, thus was in best position to determine if voice matched; other factors included recital of declarant's address on the 911 call, fact that events recounted by caller were consistent with testimony, label on front of CD, all within trial court's discretion; I.

State v. Perez, 137 Wn.App. 97, 106-08 (2007)

Child's statement about injuries and perpetrator to DCFS social worker acting as an investigator is inadmissible under medical diagnosis and treatment exception, ER 803(a)(4), harmless here; where 4-year old's testimony is challenged on the basis of his ability to recall and testify reliably, his prior consistent statements are admissible, ER 801(d)(1)(ii), State v. Thomas, 150 Wn.2d 821, 864-67 (2004), State v. Smith, 30 Wn.App. 251 (1981), State v. Makela, 66

Wn.App. 164 (1992), but see: State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988), Tome v. United States, 130 L.Ed.2d 574 (1995); III.

State v. Williams, 137 Wn.App. 736 (2007)

Rape and assault victim provides details of offense, including name of perpetrator, to forensic nurse at hospital using a history questionnaire, stating that she went to the hospital to "gather evidence" and to identify injuries, nurse testifies at trial; held: a party demonstrates a statement to be reasonably pertinent to medical treatment when (1) the declarant's motive in making the statement is to promote treatment and (2) the medical professional reasonably relied on the statement for purposes of treatment, at 746, State v. Butler, 53 Wn.App. 214, 220 (1989); here, victim did not go to hospital for purely forensic reasons; in sexual abuse situation, a declarant's statement disclosing identity of a closely-related perpetrator is admissible, ER 803(a)(4), to prevent recurrence and future injury, at 746 ¶ 20, see: State v. Ackerman, 90 Wn.App. 477, 482 (1998), State v. Sims, 77 Wn.App. 236, 239 (1995) (dicta here); witness may testify from notes to refresh recollection, ER 612, where (1) the witness' memory needs refreshing, (2) opposing counsel can examine the writing, and (3) trial court is satisfied that witness is not being coached, that the witness is using the notes to aid, not supplant, her memory, State v. Little, 57 Wn.2d 516, 521 (1961), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 473-76 (2012), where test is met trial court does not abuse its discretion by allowing witness to refresh her memory by reading the notes, at 750-51; II.

State v. Benn, 161 Wn.2d 256, 265-67 (2007)

At first trial, defendant instructs counsel not to cross-examine a state's witness, counsel mistakenly believes he is obliged to follow instructions and asks no questions, conviction is reversed, on retrial court admits former testimony, ER 804(b)(1), witness having died; held: because defense had the opportunity and similar motive to cross-examine at first trial, former testimony was admissible and did not violate confrontation clause, see also: Pers. Restraint of Benn, 134 Wn.2d 868, 894 (1998); 7-2.

State v. Stratton, 139 Wn.App. 511, 516-18 (2007)

Civilian witness testifies that he could not remember what color shirt defendant was wearing, officer then testifies that civilian told him that the defendant's shirt was yellow; held: prior statement of identification of a person made after perceiving him is admissible as a hearsay exception, ER 801(d)(1)(iii), State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 923 (1989), State v. Jenkins, 54 Wn.App. 228, 233 n.3 (1989), State v. Grover, 55 Wn.App. 252 (1989), which may include the various physical characteristics of a person perceived by the witness; III.

State v. Perez, 139 Wn.App. 522, 530-31 (2007)

Defendant offers his own oral statement to police under "rule of completeness;" held: rule of completeness, ER 106, is limited to a writing or recorded statement, not oral statements, but see: State v. West, 70 Wn.2d 751, 754-55 (1967), see also: State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 492 (2000); II.

State v. Brown, 145 Wn.App. 62, 68-77 (2008)

Toxicologist testifies that vials are provided by manufacturer with potassium oxalate and sodium fluoride and that if they were not present, the blood would clot and no alcohol would be detected, blood here was not clotted and alcohol was present; held: hearsay is admissible to prove foundation, ER 104(a), 1101(c)(1); while the testimony of the toxicologist regarding what the manufacturer said was in the vials was hearsay and should not have been heard by the jury, it was proper for the court to consider it in determining admissibility for foundational purposes, allowing the jury to hear it was harmless; III.

State v. White, 152 Wn.App. 173, 183-86 (2009)

Witness testifies she was intoxicated, can't remember assault, when presented a copy of her signed police statement, she testifies she does not remember if the statements are true, officer testifies to taking the statement; held: prior recorded recollection, ER 803(a)(5), may be admitted where victim denies making the statement where trustworthiness and accuracy is established by the officer taking the statement, State v. Derouin, 116 Wn.App. 38, 45-46 (2003), and other evidence of reliability (here, 911 tape) is admitted, totality of circumstances support trial court's ruling; I.

State v. Alvarez-Abrego, 154 Wn.App. 351, 366-69 (2010)

In child abuse case, court admits doctor's testimony that victim's mother told doctor that victim's sister, who was not called to testify, told her victim had been thrown against the wall; held: medical diagnosis exception, ER 803(a)(4), does not allow for admission of double hearsay at least where the declarant is not the victim, distinguishing State v. Justiniano, 48 Wn.App. 572 (1987); II.

State v. Price, 154 Wn.App. 480 (2009)

A note found near homicide victim in her handwriting declaring that defendant shot her for "fooling around" is admissible as a dying declaration, ER 804(b)(2), evidence that victim was shot for another reason than "fooling around" does not preclude admissibility, goes to weight; declaration was addressed to her daughter, thus it is not testimonial; I.

State v. McDaniel, 155 Wn.App. 829 (2010)

Detective, deemed by court to be a gang expert, ER 702, testifies as to defendant Marlowe that his nickname is Reese, based upon a photograph of Marlowe with the name Reese on it, that Reese is a diminutive of Marlowe's first name Direce, and that recorded jail telephone calls to Marlow's residence used the nickname; detective also testifies that he learned through his expertese and investigation that defendant McDaniel's nickname is Tony Guns, by questioning unidentified people; held: detective's knowledge of Marlowe's nickname was based on firsthand, nonhearsay information, thus did not violate confrontation clause; detective's knowledge of McDaniel's nickname was based upon testimonial statements of others and thus violates confrontation clause; detective's evidence that a Tony Guns lived with McDaniel's grandmother does not prove that McDaniel is Tony Guns; unidentified persons are not "intimately associated with" McDaniel's family such that the nickname is admissible as a statement of personal or family history, ER 804(b)(4), nor is there evidence that they were unavailable, ER 804(b); 2-1, II.

State v. Sublett, 156 Wn.App. 160, 197-99 (2010), aff'd, on other grounds, 176 Wn.2d 58 (2012)

Where a person's state of mind is relevant, statements discussing the conduct of another person that may have created the declarant's state of mind are inadmissible under ER 803(a)(3), State v. Parr, 93 Wn.2d 95, 104 (1980); II.

Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482 (2012)

HITS database evidence, a police tool which collects "signature details for similar crimes in a specific area" contains inadmissible hearsay, at 501-08, although it may be relied upon by an expert, at 512-13; 9-0.

State v. Pavlik, 165 Wn.App. 645 (2011)

During altercation and immediately after shooting, defendant yells to police, "you saw it, it was self defense," shortly thereafter makes two similar statements, defense seeks to offer statement as excited utterance or state of mind, trial court excludes as "self-serving," held: there is no self serving hearsay rule, party admission, ER 801(d)(2), which only can be offered by the state, does not exclude admission if the statement fits into another exception; while the first statement was likely admissible, within court's discretion, as an excited utterance, State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 597 (2001), exclusion here was not an abuse of discretion and was harmless, as self defense failed on the facts, not the absence of the statement; 2-1, III.

Williams v. Illinois, 567 U.S. 50, 132 S.Ct. 2221, 183 L.Ed.2d 90 (2012)

State lab expert testifies that a DNA profile produced by an outside laboratory matched a profile that state lab produced using a sample of defenndant's blood, based on business records stating that swabs taken from victim were sent to outside lab and returned; held: an expert may express an opinion that is based on facts that the expert assumes, but does not know, to be true, expert may explain the facts on which expert's opinion is based without testifying to the truth of those facts which are not hearsay and do not violate confrontation clause, State v. Manion, 173 Wn.App 610 (2013); outside lab report was produced before any suspect was identified, was not sought to obtain evidence against defendant and thus does not violate confrontation clause; expert's testimony that the outside lab's sample came from the victim is admissible in a bench trial but not a jury trial; 5-4 (plurality opinion).

State v. Lucas, 167 Wn.App. 100 (2012)

Psychiatrist, in support of diminished capacity defense, testifies to defendant's statements during evaluation, defendant does not testify, trial court allows state to cross-examine psychiatrist as to defendant's prior felony conviction to impeach, ER 806; held: while the credibility of a hearsay statement may be attacked as if the declarant had testified, ER 806, a statement relied upon by an expert is not hearsay as not offered as substantive proof, thus do not expose declarant to impeachment under ER 806, but see: State v. Mohamed, 186 Wn.2d 235 (2016); II.

State v. Fraser, 170 Wn.App. 13, 19-24 (2012)

In homicide case, trial court admits victim's statement to police three months earlier that he feared defendant, gives limiting instruction that statement is admitted for victim's state of mind, not for truth; held: statement that survives a hearsay challenge does not, per se, survive a confrontation clause challenge, State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 922 (2007); here, the statement was used to prove victim feared defendant, thus it was not only for state of mind, violated confrontation clause; harmless here; I.

State v. Bradford, 175 Wn.App. 912, 927-30 (2013)

In stalking case, trial court admits officer's testimony reading to the jury text messages received by victim and an examination report of another witness' cell phone including the text messages received, defense challenges authentication, ER 901(a), asserting state did not prove he sent the messages; held: evidence that defendant appeared at victim's place of employment and home frequently, demonstrating a desperate desire to communicate with victim, authenticates the text messages as "consistent with this obsessive behavior that he would also send text messages" as an effort to contact victim; content of the messages are consistent with defendant's previous messages and acts linking him to the messages, see: State v. Young, 192 Wn.App. 850 (2016); during a five month period in which defendant was in jail and thus unable to text, upon release text messages began again also adds to authentication, Det. of H.N., 188 Wn.App. 744, 750-61 (2015); I.

State v. Nava, 177 Wn.App. 272 (2013)

Police tape record interviews with witnesses inculpating defendant, at trial witnesses testify they were intoxicated when they gave the statements, one testifies he was "probably" lying, other two are equivocal, police testify to details in statements consistent with statements from other witness and with physical evidence, trial court admits statements as recorded recollections, ER 803(a)(5); held: to gauge admissibility of recorded recollection, court must examine whether witness disavows accuracy, whether witness averred accuracy at the time, whether recording process is reliability, and whether other indicia of reliability establish trustworthiness, State v. Alvarado, 89 Wn.App. 543 (1998), see: In re Detention of Peterson, 197 Wn.App. 722 (2017); admissibility does not require personal vouching by the witness as long as there is other reliable evidence and court articulates reasons "why the trial court disbelieves the witness' current disavowal," at 295; where a witness' disavowal is resolute, court must find the disavowal "to be essentially perjurious in addition to finding sufficient independent evidence of reliability; III.

State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 844-46 (2014)

In kidnapping case in which defendant enters an occupied home and has conversations with occupant, trial court excludes statements defendant made to complainant offered to show that he did not hold her as a hostage or cause mental distress; held: excluded statements were not offered for truth but to prove defendant's intent thus were not hearsay and were erroneously excluded; 9-0.

State v. Dobbs, 180 Wn.2d 1 (2014)

Before and after arrest, defendant threatens victim who fails to appear at trial, court finds by clear, cogent and convincing evidence that defendant's acts caused victim's absence, admits hearsay statements; held: doctrine of forfeiture by wrongdoing is applicable, court may consider acts before and after state initiated criminal proceedings, Giles v. California, 554 U.S. 353, 377, 171 L.Ed.2d 488 (2008), lack of a direct statement from victim that she feared harm as a result of testifying is not required as long as court concludes that it was highly likely why victim did not appear, hearsay statements need not meet a hearsay exception, State v. Fallentine, 149 Wn.App.

614, 623-24 (2009), as defendant waived his hearsay objection, State v. DeJesus Hernandez, 192 Wn.App. 673 (1992); affirms State v. Dobbs, 167 Wn.App. 905 (2012); 6-3.

State v. Hudlow*,* 182 Wn.App. 266 (2014)

En route to a controlled buy detective overhears informant's side of telephone call with defendant and testifies, over objection, that he "understood" that there were arrangements to buy drugs, state arguing that it wasn't hearsay but was admitted to explain "how he contacted" [sic] and for detective's state of mind; held: detective's mental condition was not relevant, State v. Lowrie, 14 Wn.App. 408 (1975), State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277, 279-81 (1990), State v. Johnson, 61 Wn.App. 539, 545 (1991), State v. Edwards, 131 Wn.App. 611, 614 (2006), thus statement was both hearsay and violated confrontation clause; III.

State v. Chenoweth*,* 188 Wn.App. 521, 531-35 (2015)

Court admits evidence that victim disclosed rape to his sister a year after it occurred; held: while fact of complaint exception to hearsay rule is inapplicable where the complaint was not timely made, State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131, 135-36 (1983), it is admissible to show "only how the allegations came to the attention of law enforcement," State v. Iverson, 126 Wn.App. 329, 333 (2005), thus is not hearsay, State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020), cf. State v. Edwards, 131 Wn.App. 611 (2006); II.

Det. of H.N., 188 Wn.App. 744, 750-61 (2015)

Text messages were properly admitted where respondent admitted she sent them, identifying information on the message indicated she was the sender, content referenced people in her life, content was consistent with events that happened in her life, timing was consistent with events independently described, ER 901(b)(10), State v. Bradford, 175 Wn.App. 912 (2013); proponent must make only a prima facie showing of authenticity, court may consider evidence of authenticity that otherwise might be objectionable, court only considers evidence offered by proponent and disregards contrary evidence, once court determines evidence is authenticated, ER 901, then opponent may object on the basis of other rules and may offer contradictory evidence to the trier of fact, Rice v. Offshore Sys., Inc., 167 Wn.App. 77, 86 (2012), State v. Young, 192 Wn.App. 850 (2016); I.

State v. Mohamed*,* 186 Wn.2d 235 (2016)

Defense diminished capacity expert testifies to statements made by defendant to the expert, defense declines limiting instruction stating that statements were only admitted for basis of opinion, trial court permits state to prove prior crimen falsi convictions, ER 609, 806; held: when a statement is admitted for a non-hearsay purpose, here basis of opinion, ER 703, 705, it may not be impeached as it is not offered as substantive evidence, State v. Lucas, 167 Wn.App. 100 (2012), but here because defense declined the instruction which would have limited the statement to a non-hearsay purpose it was admitted as substantive evidence and thus is subject to impeachment; reverses State v. Mohamed, 189 Wn.App. 533 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Young*,* 192 Wn.App. 850 (2016)

Trial court admits text messages when witness testified she had personal knowledge the message came from defendant, messages came from a phone number that defendant had provided to witness, initials on message were those witness knew defendant used, context of messages themselves were consistent with other evidence, defense offered evidence that someone else wrote the texts; held: prima facie evidence supports authentication, State v. Bradford, 175 Wn.App. 912 (2013), State v. H.N., 188 Wn.App. 744 (2015), cf.: State v. Blizzard, 195 Wn.App. 717, 734-35 (2016), in determining authentication court considers only evidence offered by proponent and disregards contrary evidence offered by opponent, Rice v. Offshore Sys., Inc., 167 Wn.App. 77, 86 (2012); II.

State v. Gonzalez-Gonzalez, 193 Wn.App. 683, 688-91 (2016)

Over objection, officer testifies that she found defendant's apartment as a result of a records check on defendant's alias, state argues that officer did not repeat what someone else had said and that it was elicited for the benign purpose of establishing why the officer approached the particular apartment; held: hearsay includes an implied statement offered for its truth; here, the implied statement is that police knew defendant based upon his alias and is thus inadmissible hearsay, State v. Rocha,21 Wn.App.2d 26 (2022)harmless here; standard of review of a hearsay ruling is de novo, but see: State v. Woods, 143 Wn.2d 561, 595 (2001); III.

In re Detention of Peterson, 197 Wn.App. 722 (2017)

State offers written and recorded statements of crime victim who testifies she recognizes her handwriting and remembers making recording but does not recall content of either, that it would have been accurate at the time, defense offers evidence of inconsistencies and that victim has a reputation for dishonesty, court admits statements as past recollection recorded, ER 803(a)(5); held: test for admissibility is that declarant doesn't disavow statements, avers that they were accurate at the time and that the recording process is reliable, witness' reliability goes to weight, State v. Alvarado, 89 Wn.App. 543, 551-53 (1998), State v. Derouin, 116 Wn.App. 38 (2003); II.

State v. Wafford, 199 Wn.App. 32 (2017)

In limine trial court excludes child victim's videotaped statement, defense counsel references the statement in opening claiming that victim denied the abuse, court allows state to play video to jury; held: an attorney's reference to a jury about suppressed evidence may be grounds for the court to admit the suppressed evidence as the door has been opened; the video was not hearsay as it was offered to rebut a claim of recent fabrication, ER 801(d)(1)(ii), cf.: State v. Bargas, 52 Wn.App. 700 (1988), State v. Stark, 48 Wn.App. 245, 249 (1987); a party may open the door to evidence that is otherwise inadmissible, subject to the trial court's discretion, at 41, n.1; I.

State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017)

In homicide case with lawful use of force defense, defendant offers evidence that defendant was told that deceased had threatened to kill defendant's family, that deceased had abducted defendant's sister and defendant was aware of it, and that deceased had beaten his wife, defendant's sister, also known to defendant, trial court excludes it based upon relevance, remoteness, hearsay; held: evidence offered was not hearsay as it was offered to establish defendant's state of mind, not offered to prove the truth but to show reasonableness of defendant's fear of deceased, State v. Cloud, 7 Wn.App. 211, 218 (1972), State v. Walker, 13 Wn.App. 545, 549 (1975); III.

State v. Hill, 431 Wn.App.2d 1044 (2018)

Domestic violence victim texts defendant stating "you pulled my hair and I wet my pants," defendant responds "let's be adults about this," trial court admits victim's text as adoptive admission by silence, ER 801 (d)(2)(ii), State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988); held: while silence or acquiescence may be a party admission and thus not hearsay, if (1) the party-opponent heard the accusatory statement or incriminating statement, (2) the party-opponent was able to respond, and (3) the circumstances were such that it is reasonable to conclude the party-opponent would have responded had there been no intention to acquiesce; the circumstances must also be such that an innocent defendant would normally be induced to respond and, if admitted, the court must instruct the jury that it can consider accusatory or incriminating statements as adoptive admissions only if the jury first finds that the circumstances establish the party heard, understood, and acceded to the statement; here, defendant did not acquiesce, rather he deflected, thus trial court erred, State v. Ta'afulisia, 21 Wn.App.2d 914 (2022), albeit harmless; I.

State v. Heutink, 12 Wn.App.2d 336 (2020)

In stalking case court admits testimony of victim about contents of text messages defendant sent to her sister and that defendant's probation officer recommended she relocate and enter witness protection program; held: evidence of an out-of-court statement offered to prove the effect on the witness as the listener, here her reasonable fear, is not hearsay, Henderson v. Tyrrell, 80 Wn.App. 592, 620 (1996); I.

State v. Martinez, 196 Wn.2d 605 (2020)

In child rape case trial court admits four witness' testimony that victim reported the rape under "fact of complaint" doctrine contemporaneous with the abuse but long after the reporting period; held: fact of complaint or fresh complaint rule in sexual assault cases is an established judicially-created exception to the hearsay rules, not admissible for truth of the matter asserted but to demonstrate that victim reported it to someone, may include sufficient details to identify the nature of the offense but not to include identity of the perpetrator, State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131 (1983); 8-1.

State v. Kelly, 19 Wn.App.2d 434 (2021)

In no contact order violation case a witness testifies, over a hearsay objection, that she was told by her son, a cellmate of the defendant, to contact the victim, which she did; held: son's direction to his mother was assertive in nature but was not assertive in the sense of declaring a fact or belief, the truthfulness of the request was irrelevant, the request was relevant simply by the fact that the son uttered the entreaty, thus it was not offered for the truth and was not hearsay, State v. Collins, 76 Wn.App. 496 (1995), State v. Modest, 88 Wn.App. 239, 248-9 (1997); III.

State v. Rocha, 21 Wn.App.2d 26 (2022)

In arson case court, over objection, admits officers' testimony that they went to a gas station foin response to a verbal argument between defendant and his father, fire occurred elsewhere, court states that it was admitting statement to show why the police went to the gas station and thus not hearsay; held: a hearsay statement not offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted is inadmissible if the purpose for which it is offered is irrelevant, State v. Gonzalez-Gonzalez, 193 Wn.App. 683, 688-91 (2016), State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266 (2014), State v.

Edwards, 131 Wn.App. 611 (2006), State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277 (1990); "[w]e have consistently held that a hearsay statement not offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted is inadmissible 32 under ER 801(c) if the purpose for which it is offered is irrelevant," at 31-32; III.

State v. Ta'afulisia, 21 Wn.App.2d 914 (2022)

At the behest of the police a relative secretly records a conversation with defendant and his co-defendant where, in response to inquiries, co-defendant confesses to homicide, states both were involved, defendant remains silent, trial court admits statement as adoptive admission; held: silence by itself is not an adoptive admission and thus admissible in trial without a confrontation clause analysis, see: State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988), State v. Hill, 431 Wn.App.2d 1044 (2018); I.

EVIDENCE
Impeachment

State v. Thompson, 88 Wn.2d 518 (1977), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Thornton, 119 Wn.2d 578 (1992)

Defendant's silence is admissible to impeach defendant's testimony that he made statement; 5-3.

United States v. Havens, 64 L.Ed.2d 559 (1980)

Suppressed physical evidence can be used to impeach defendant's testimony; 5-4.

State v. Styles, 93 Wn.2d 173 (1980)

Character witness may be crossed concerning personal knowledge of specific prior acts of misconduct by defendant; must be good faith of plaintiff to discredit witness, not defendant; 9-0.

State v. Thacker, 94 Wn.2d 276 (1980)

Where witness denies making prior inconsistent statement and the statement is not offered, court has discretion to disallow explanatory testimony on redirect; however, where the effect of the impeaching questioning gives the impression that the statement was admitted or appears to be substantive evidence, it is error to refuse explanatory testimony; rationale is that statement itself is not subject to cross-examination; 9-0.

State v. Jones, 25 Wn.App. 746 (1980)

Error to deny defendant right to establish bias of the chief prosecuting witness by an independent witness, see: State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 751-53 (2009); II.

State v. Flowers, 30 Wn.App. 718 (1981)

A party cannot offer impeaching evidence concerning a matter which the witness has admitted; I.

State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 856 (1982)

Where assault victim named another man as her attacker at trial, here her prior sworn statement to police is admissible as substantive evidence under ER 801(d)(1)(i) which permits the admission of statements given under penalty of perjury at an "other proceeding," State v. Nelson, 74 Wn.App. 380, 382-91 (1994), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 307-09 (2005), State v. Otton, 185 Wn.2d 673 (2016), State v. Phillips, 431 Wn.App.2d 1056 (2018), cf. State v. Sua, 115 Wn.App. 29 (2003), State v. Nieto, 119 Wn.App. 157 (2003), State v. McComas, 186 Wn.App. 307 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Acosta, 34 Wn.App. 387 (1983), rev'd, on other grounds, 101 Wn.2d 612 (1984)

At omnibus hearing, defense counsel asserts alibi defense; at trial, defendant raised self-defense, whereupon state cross-examined defendant on his counsel's representation; held: statements by counsel in the presence of client constitute "quasi admissions" admissible to discredit and impeach defendant's testimony, State v. Dault, 19 Wn.App. 709 (1978), State v. Rivers, 129 Wn.2d 697, 707-9 (1996), but see: State v. Williams, 79 Wn.App. 1 (1995), State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63-7 (1998), at least where there had been a change in the plan of the defense after the representations were made but the defense had not notified the court or counsel, State v. Garland, 169 Wn.App. 869 (2012); II.

State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122 (1984)

Defense seeks to impeach statutory rape victim with her prior inconsistent statement that only another person had abused her, trial court refuses as not inconsistent, collateral and barred by rape shield statute, RCW 9A.44.020; held: error, as statement was inconsistent, not collateral, prior inconsistent statements may be used to impeach a witness, ER 613, State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003), see: State v. Fankhouser, 133 Wn.App. 689 (2006); II.

State v. Barber, 38 Wn.App. 758 (1984)

State may not call a witness for the primary purpose of eliciting testimony in order to impeach the witness with testimony which would otherwise be inadmissible, State v. Denton, 58 Wn.App. 251 (1990), State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 869-70 (2005), see also: State v. Ruiz, 176 Wn.App. 623 (2013); I.

State v. Davis, 39 Wn.App. 916 (1985)

Where a witness is impeached with a prior inconsistent statement but no objection is interposed and no limiting instruction is sought, the jury may consider it as substantive evidence, and the out-of-court declaration may be used to establish a prima facie case; II.

State v. Lavaris, 106 Wn.2d 340, 344-45 (1986)

While state may not call a witness and then impeach the witness for the primary purpose of placing before the jury substantive evidence which is not otherwise admissible, State v. Barber, 38 Wn.App. 758 (1984), State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 869-70 (2005), here state called severed co-defendant who was integrally involved in the events leading up to the murder and corroborated other witness's testimony, thus state did not call him for the primary purpose of eliciting his testimony in order to impeach him with evidence that would have been otherwise inadmissible, reversing holding in State v. Lavaris, 41 Wn.App. 856 (1985) but affirming decision; accord, State v. Hancock, 46 Wn.App. 672 (1987), aff'd, 109 Wn.2d 760 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Dickenson, 48 Wn.App. 457 (1987)

"Whole impression or effect" of a witness's testimony is that defendant killed victim, defense request to impeach witness with a prior statement that the police killed victim is refused by trial court as not inconsistent, collateral; held: test for inconsistency is not words or phrases alone but whole impression or effect, i.e., on a comparison of the two utterances are they in effect inconsistent, or do they appear to have been produced by inconsistent beliefs?, State v. Newbern, 95 Wn.App. 277, 292-96 (1999); collateral test: could the fact have been brought into evidence for a purpose independent of the contradiction?, State v. Fankhouser, 130 Wn.App. 689 (2006); harmless here; see: State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 67-72 (1998); I.

State v. Alexander, 52 Wn.App. 897 (1988)

In self-defense case, victim's reputation for violence is admissible, ER 405(a), while specific acts of violence are not admissible, ER 405(b), as victim's character trait of violence is not an essential element of claim of self-defense, State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 565-66 (2014); thus, while victim's claim of peaceful character could be impeached by cross-examination regarding specific acts of violence, they are collateral to the principal issues being tried, State v. Oswalt, 62 Wn.2d 118, 121 (1963), and the examiner is bound by the denial and cannot offer independent to impeach; I.

State v. Barnes, 54 Wn.App. 536 (1989)

In drug case, defense seeks to impeach informant with 15-year old letters in which informant purports to threaten other witnesses to give false testimony, trial court rejects offer; held: within trial court's discretion to deny admission, State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33, 36 (1980), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.2d 335, 348-56 (2005), State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 781-87 (2017), State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017), but see: State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 610-14 (2005); inadmissible as intrinsic evidence to attack credibility, ER 608(b); proper to exclude under the compelling state interest of not discouraging witnesses from testifying because some prior misconduct may be revealed, State v. Martinez, 38 Wn.App. 421, 424 (1984); III, 2-1.

State v. Wilson, 60 Wn.App. 887 (1991)

In statutory rape trial, defendant calls victim's sister who testifies that she lived with defendant and victim and that no abuse occurred; on cross, victim admitted that she had previously stated under oath to DSHS that defendant did not live with her; held: ER 404(b) applies only to prior misconduct offered as substantive evidence; ER 608(b) permits cross-examination to specific instances that are relevant to veracity, State v. Cummings, 44 Wn.App. 146, 152 (1986) if germane to the issue, State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33, 36 (1980), State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 610-14 (2005); II.

State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865 (1991)

Extrinsic evidence cannot be used to impeach a witness on collateral issues even where the extrinsic evidence may have some indirect bearing on motive, bias or prejudice, State v. Reed, 25 Wn.App. 46, 52 (1979), State v. Roberts, 25 Wn.App. 830, 834 (1980), State v. Fankhouser, 130 Wn.App. 689 (2006), see: State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 751-53 (2009); I.

State v. Tigano, 63 Wn.App. 336 (1991)

Evidence of drug use is admissible to impeach if there is a reasonable inference that witness was under influence at time of events or at time of testifying, State v. Brown, 48 Wn.App. 654, 658 (1987), State v. Hall, 46 Wn.App. 689, 692 (1987), State v. Dault, 19 Wn.App. 709 (1978); evidence of drug use on other occasions, or of drug addiction, is generally inadmissible as impermissibly prejudicial, State v. Renneberg, 83 Wn.2d 735, 737 (1974), State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512, 532-34 (2015); II.

State v. Babich, 68 Wn.App. 438 (1993)

Prosecutor asks defense witnesses about prior inconsistent statements which witness denies making, state does not offer extrinsic evidence in rebuttal; held: where witness denies an alleged prior inconsistent statement, prosecutor must follow up with extrinsic evidence to prove the existence of the statement, otherwise the foundation questions to the witness are mere innuendo, State v. Yoakum, 37 Wn.2d 137 (1950), State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 854-56 (1999), State v. Miles, 139 Wn.App. 879 (2007), see also: State v. Ruiz, 176 Wn.App. 623 (2013); III.

State v. Nelson, 74 Wn.App. 380, 382-91 (1994)

Witness is arrested for prostitution, provides a notarized statement naming defendant as her procurer, denies same at trial, court admits her statement as substantive evidence, ER 801(d)(1); held: a sworn statement made at an "other proceeding" is admissible at trial as substantive evidence where the witness testifies inconsistently thereto, and where the prior inconsistent statement was (1) made voluntarily, (2) there were minimal guaranties of truthfulness, (3) the statement was taken as a standard procedure in a method for determining the existence of probable cause, and (4) the witness is subject to cross-examination, State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 856, 861-3 (1982), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 307-09 (2005), State v. Otton, 185 Wn.2d 673 (2016), State v. Phillips, 431 Wn.App.2d 1056 (/2018); an affidavit is a sworn statement, even absent an oath administered by a notary, cf.: State v. Sua, 115 Wn.App. 29 (2003), State v. Nieto, 119 Wn.App. 157 (2003), cf.: State v. McComas, 186 Wn.App. 307 (2015); police interrogation is an "other proceeding" where it is standard procedure, State v. Smith, supra, at 862-63, State v. Nieto, supra, at 162-64; I.

State v. Lopez, 74 Wn.App. 456 (1994)

Testifying defendant may be impeached with prior inconsistent statements he made to a psychiatrist in anticipation of a diminished capacity defense even if the defense is not ultimately raised at trial; III.

United States v. Mezzanatto, 130 L.Ed.2d 697 (1995)

Defendant and counsel meet with prosecutor in attempt to cooperate, prosecutor states that defendant must agree that any statements made during meeting could be used to impeach, defendant agrees, no deal is reached, defendant testifies and is impeached; held: Fed. R. Evid. 410 excluding statements made during plea negotiations may be waived; 7-2.

State v. Buss, 76 Wn.App. 780, 787-9 (1995)

Defendant receives letter from victim's attorney regarding lawsuit, seeks to impeach at trial, victim claims letter was unauthorized although he had discussed it with counsel, trial court excludes cross on issue; held: a victim's intention to commence a civil action for damages is a proper subject for impeachment, State v. Whyde, 30 Wn.App. 162 (1981), State v. Smits, 58 Wn.App. 333 (1990), cf.: State v. Guizzotti, 60 Wn.App. 289 (1991); because defense had undisputed evidence that a civil action had been contemplated, the impeachment evidence was not speculative, see: State v. Roberts, 25 Wn.App. 830, 834 (1980), trial court should not have weighed credibility in refusing the impeachment, harmless here; I.

State v. Williams, 79 Wn.App. 21 (1995)

At omnibus hearing, defense counsel submits "Omnibus Stipulation" which states that the nature of defense would be "general denial, entrapment," at trial defendant denies selling drugs, is impeached with counsel's statement that offense was entrapment; held: where alternative and inconsistent defenses are asserted in omnibus application, then the statement does not qualify as a party admission, ER 801(c), and cannot be used to impeach defendant, distinguishing State v. Acosta, 34 Wn.App. 387 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 101 Wn.2d 612 (1984), State v. Dault, 19 Wn.App. 709 (1978), State v. Rivers, 129 Wn.2d 697, 707-9 (1996), cf.: State v. Garland, 169 Wn.App. 869 (2012), see: State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63-7 (1998); II.

State v. Lubers, 81 Wn.App. 614, 623-4 (1996)

Trial court precludes rape defendant from calling his girlfriend to testify to a feud between girlfriend's family and rape-victim as motive for victim to fabricate rape accusation; held: defense theory was wholly speculative, as victim's alleged hostility to girlfriend was not linked to a desire to frame defendant, distinguishing State v. Whyde, 30 Wn.App. 162 (1981), State v. Roberts, 25 Wn.App. 830, 834-5 (1980); II.

State v. Simonson, 82 Wn.App. 226, 234 n. 17 (1996)

While a continuance is not required to obtain evidence that is merely impeaching, State v. Harris, 12 Wn.App. 481, 496-7 (1975), there are circumstances in which impeachment testimony is so important as to require a continuance; II.

State v. Myers, 82 Wn.App. 435, 438-9 (1996)

In sexual exploitation of a minor case, RCW 9.68.040(1)(b), in which defendant videotaped his seven-year old daughter's vaginal area in bathtub, trial court admits tape made the same day by defendant of clothed buttocks and genital regions of adults and children; held: admissible to show motivation; absence of limiting instruction where not requested is not error, State v. Hess, 86 Wn.2d 51, 52 (1975), State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.App. 534, 542 (2015), affirmed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016); II.

State v. Rivers, 129 Wn.2d 697, 707-9 (1996)

Defense counsel's opening statement raises identity as a defense, on direct examination defendant admits to theft but denies robbery, state cross-examines about counsel's opening; held: cross-examination was relevant to the extent that it would assist jury by clarifying the nature of the defense, State v. Garland, 169 Wn.App. 869 (2012), see: State v. Dault, 19 Wn.App. 709, 718-9 (1978), State v. Acosta, 34 Wn.App. 383 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 101 Wn.2d 612 (1984); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 130 Wn.2d 215, 226-7 (1996)

Trooper stops defendant for DUI, administers portable breath test, does not record or remember result, trial court denies defense opportunity to cross on PBT; held: trial court erred in not permitting defense to cross-examine on PBT limited to testing trooper's recollection, harmless here; affirms State v. Lewellyn, 78 Wn.App. 788 (1995); 9-0.

State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179 (1996)

Trial court precludes cross-examination of assault complainant that she lied under oath about her drug use in a related civil case; held: because complainant was on probation, her prior false testimony provided her a motive to lie as to recent drug use, thus the evidence was relevant; the state's interest of insuring a just trial and preventing an acquittal based on prejudice against the victim's history of drug abuse is compelling but, because other evidence of drug use was admitted, the balance is in favor of admissibility, see: State v. Hudlow, 99 Wn.2d 1, 15-6 (1983), State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.2d 335, 348-56 (2005), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 781-801 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014). State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017), State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017), State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023); I.

State v. Hamlet, 83 Wn.App. 350 (1996)

Trial court permits state to elicit from an expert who was called by the state that he was originally retained by the defense; held: within trial court's discretion; I.

State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 63-72 (1998)

Omnibus application states general nature of defense is "general denial and/or self-defense," four days before trial defense declares alibi with witnesses, court permits, as discovery sanction, state to impeach alibi witnesses with defense omnibus declaration; held: witnesses cannot be impeached by statements of others for which they are not responsible and which have not been approved by them, State v. Williams, 79 Wn.App. 21, 27 (1995), thus substantive use of the omnibus order was improper; further, pleadings of an alternative nature are directed primarily to giving notice and lack the essential character of an admission, Williams, supra., at 29; fact that defendant signed the order does not make it admissible; foundation to impeach with a prior inconsistent statement or bias is sufficient if examiner gives declarant an opportunity to explain or deny the statement, either on cross-examination or after the introduction of extrinsic evidence, ER 613(b), a relaxed standard from pre-rule caselaw, State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003), Shaw v. Sjoberg, 10 Wn.App. 328, 331 (1973), traditional foundation questions are now an optional tactic rather than a mandatory requirement, see: State v. Spencer, 111 Wn.App. 401, 407-11 (2002); impeachment with past aliases given to police is proper, ER 608(b), as use of false names indicates an intent to deceive and bears directly upon a general disposition with regard to truthfulness; impeachment with a prior probation violation is improper; II.

State v. Israel, 91 Wn.App. 846, 853-59 (1998)

Expert testimony of a witness's antisocial personality disorder relative to credibility is inadmissible, at least absent situations where a witness's mental impairment is clearly apparent and his competency is a central issue in the case, State v. Froelich, 96 Wn.2d 301, 306-7 (1981), State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512, 532-34 (2015); I.

State v. Newbern, 95 Wn.App. 277, 292-96 (1999)

Where witness testifies she has no memory of making the statement, but does remember the prior event, then she can be impeached with her inconsistent, albeit unremembered, statement, State v. Hancock, 109 Wn.2d 760, 765 (1988); where witness testifies she has no memory of the event and thus gives no substantive testimony on the factual issue, the prior statement is inadmissible, as there is no testimony to impeach, State v. Allen S., 98 Wn.App. 452 (1999), see: State v. Clinkenbeard, 130 Wn.App. 552, 568-72 (2006); victim testifies she was shot by accident, gives details which are partly consistent with prior statement in which she said she was shot intentionally, trial court may admit prior statement as inconsistent to impeach, as whole impression or effect of prior statement was inconsistent with testimony, State v.

Dickenson, 48 Wn.App. 457, 467-68 (1987); trial court is not obliged to provide limiting instruction to jury absent request, ER 105; II.

State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 854-56 (1999)

Prosecutor impeaches a defense witness with a conversation witness allegedly had with the prosecutor, witness denies the statement, prosecutor does not offer extrinsic evidence of the statement; held: prosecutor's impeachment by referring to extrinsic evidence never introduced is improper, may violate confrontation clause, State v. Babich, 68 Wn.App. 438, 444 (1993), State v. Miles, 139 Wn.App. 879 (2007), see also: State v. Ruiz, 176 Wn.App. 623 (2013), harmless here; III.

State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832, 858-60 (1999)

Trial court excludes cross-examination of jailhouse informer as to the fact that he had lied on employment and rental applications; held: specific instances of lying may be admitted, whether sworn or unsworn, to show bias, prejudice or interest, within trial court's discretion, ER 608(b), so exclusion is not an abuse of discretion, State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017), see: State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 765-67 (2001), State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 781-87 (2017), but see: State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 610-14 (2005); II.

State v. Allen S., 98 Wn.App. 452 (1999)

Jailhouse informer tells police that defendant confessed, at trial informer testifies he remembers nothing, court allows state to impeach with prior statement to police; held: where a witness does not offer testimony "of consequence to the action," then the witness's credibility is not in issue and he may not be impeached, State v. Robbins, 25 Wn.2d 110, 113 (1946), State v. Washburn, 116 Wash. 97, 99 (1921), State v. Stingley, 163 Wash. 690 (1931); II.

State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 765-67 (2001)

Jailhouse informant is impeached with prior convictions, court precludes defense from impeaching with specific instances of conduct underlying convictions; held: failure of a court to allow impeachment with specific instances of conduct, ER 608(b), is an abuse of discretion if the witness is crucial and the alleged misconduct is the only available impeachment, State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33 (1980), see: State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 781-87 (2017), Pers. Restraint of Lui, 188 Wn.2d 525, 549-51 (2016), but see: State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598- 610-14 (2005), but, once impeached, there is less need for further impeachment on cross, State v. Martinez, 38 Wn.App. 421, 424 (1984); here, because witness was impeached with priors, it was within trial court's discretion to preclude further impeachment; 9-0.

State v. Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 74-76 (2001)

In drug case, defense offers medical report with defendant's statement to physician that he was beaten by police to show bias, trial court excludes on grounds that defense did not allow officer to view the report prior to testifying; held: extrinsic evidence of bias, other than prior inconsistent statements, may be introduced without first calling such acts or conduct to the witness' attention, State v. Wilder, 4 Wn.App. 850, 855 (1971), State v. Spencer, 111 Wn.App. 401, 407-11 (2002), ER 613(a); I.

State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160, 177-82 (2001)

Where there is physical evidence of penetration in rape of a child case, evidence of prior sexual abuse of the child by another person is relevant, State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909 (2003), see: State v. Carver, 37 Wn.App. 122 (1984); absent physical evidence, prior sexual abuse of a child may be relevant to prove the child's precocious sexual knowledge (detailed standards regarding admissibility, at 180-82); II.

State v. Spencer, 111 Wn.App. 401, 407-11 (2002)

No foundation is needed to impeach a witness' testimony with a prior statement as extrinsic evidence of bias, State v. Ngo Tho Huynh, 107 Wn.App. 68, 74 (2001), State v. Wilder, 4 Wn.App. 850, 855 (1971), State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 70 (1999); II.

State v. Nordlund, 113 Wn.App. 171, 187-90 (2002)

Evidence of defendant's refusal to provide a court-ordered hair sample is admissible as consciousness of guilt, akin to flight; II.

State v. Sua, 115 Wn.App. 29 (2003)

Complainant gives police an unsworn statement which trial court admits as substantive evidence when complainant testifies inconsistently with the statement; held: while a sworn affidavit or declaration is admissible as substantive evidence (1) where a witness testifies and the statement is voluntary, (2) there are guaranties of truthfulness and (3) the statement was taken during police interrogation, State v. Nelson, 74 Wn.App. 380, 382-91 (1994) or as part of a probable cause determination, State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 856, 861-63 (1982), where the statements are unsworn they are not admissible as substantive evidence, ER 801(d)(1)(i), State v. McComas, 186 Wn.App. 307 (2015), cf.: State v. Nieto, 119 Wn.App. 157 (2003); II.

State v. Soh, 115 Wn.App. 290 (2003)

Failure to disclose promises of leniency to a witness is misconduct, whether or not the promise was memorialized in writing or made by a police officer rather than a prosecutor; an offer of leniency that has any impeachment value must be disclosed; "it is difficult to imagine an offer of leniency in exchange for testimony that would not have impeachment value," at 295; where defense learns of the promise before trial, then dismissal is not a remedy, as defendant is not prejudiced; I.

State v. Horton, 116 Wn.App. 909, 912-17 (2003)

To impeach by prior inconsistent statement, witness may either be asked to admit or deny the inconsistency on cross or after extrinsic evidence of the inconsistency is introduced, State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 70 (1998), ER 613(b); II.

State v. Dolan, 118 Wn.App.323, 327-28 (2003)

In child abuse case, defendant-father seeks to impeach witness-mother with evidence that they were engaged in custody dispute over victim at time of trial, court excludes evidence as collateral and arising after defendant was charged with assault; held: bias includes that which exists at the time of trial to impeach the witness' accuracy while testifying, State v. Tigano, 63 Wn.App. 336, 344-45 (1991), State v. Harmon, 21 Wn.2d 581, 590-91 (1944); II.

State v. Nieto, 119 Wn.App. 157 (2003)

Trial court admits, as substantive evidence, complainant's statement to police provided on a pre-printed form which states, at bottom of first page and at top of remaining pages, that it is a sworn declaration and that "the foregoing is true," complainant testifies at trial, denies she read oath; held: boilerplate language of oath is ambiguous as it is unclear to what "foregoing" refers, thus statement does not satisfy oath requirement of ER 801(d)(1)(i), see: State v. Sua, 115 Wn.App. 29 (2003); absent proof that witness was aware of oath language, reliability is not established, statement should not have been admitted as substantive evidence, State v. McComas, 186 Wn.App. 307 (2015), distinguishing State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 856 (1982), State v. Nelson, 74 Wn.App. 380 (1994); I.

State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.2d 335 (2005)

In malicious mischief case, trial court admits fact that defendant paid victim for damages, excludes evidence that victim accepted money from defendant and her insurer for the damages; held: ER 408, precluding evidence of compromise, is inapplicable in criminal cases; trial court properly exercised discretion in excluding double payment evidence, as retention of money from defendant may have reflected dishonesty, but not relevant to witness' testimony on the witness stand, ER 608, State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179 (1996), State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33, 36 (1980), see: State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473 (2017); affirms State v. O'Connor, 119 Wn.App. 530 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Price, 126 Wn.App. 617, 643-45 (2005)

In homicide case, evidence that defendant left state after murder with backpack full of grooming supplies and medications is relevant to prove flight and change of appearance, establishing a consciousness of guilt; evidence of flight is generally admissible, but inference of flight must be substantial and real, not speculative, conjectural or fanciful, State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021), State v. Bruton, 66 Wn.2d 111, 112 (1965); II.

State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 869-70 (2005)

Defense may not call a witness for the sole purpose of impeachment in order to place before the jury evidence which is not otherwise admissible, State v. Barber, 38 Wn.App. 758 (1984), State v. Lavaris, 106 Wn.2d 340, 344-45 (1986); I.

State v. McSorley, 128 Wn.App. 598, 610-14 (2005)

In child luring case, trial court declines to allow defense to cross-examine complainant that he had twice committed "pranks" by stopping cars pretending to be injured; held: it is an abuse of discretion to refuse to allow impeachment of a crucial witness where the alleged misconduct is the only available impeachment, ER 608(b), State v. Clark, 143 Wn.2d 731, 766 (2001), State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33 (1980), see: State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 781-87 (2017), although trial court, on remand, may exclude if remote; II.

State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1, 16-18 (2005)

In child abuse case, defense witness testifies defendant had a reputation for "almost being a teddy bear" around children, state inquires if witness' opinion would change if he knew defendant spanked victim; held: character witness may be crossed concerning personal knowledge of specific prior acts of misconduct by defendant; must be good faith of plaintiff to discredit witness, not defendant, State v. Styles, 93 Wn.2d 173, 176-77 (1980), State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441, 450 n.25 (1991), within discretion of trial court; II.

State v. Clinkenbeard, 130 Wn.App. 552, 568-72 (2005)

Where only evidence to support an element of the crime is impeachment evidence to which there was an objection, then dismissal for insufficiency is the remedy; III.

State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 603-06 (2006)

In child molestation case, after all parties rest but before closing argument, defense seeks to reopen to offer evidence that victim's mother told defendant and another that she wanted defendant to be acquitted and that she would sue defendant, trial court finds it could show motive or bias but declined to reopen testimony as the evidence did not relate directly to the molestation, would be misleading or confusing, would cause undue delay and waste the court's time, ER 403, and that record already contained evidence of motive or bias on the part of the witness; held: because defense already elicited evidence of bias, excluding evidence was not an abuse of discretion, distinguishing Chambers v. Mississippi, 35 L.Ed.2d 297 (1973), Davis v. Alaska, 39 L.Ed.2d 347 (1974), wherein defendants were wholly prevented from cross-examining key witnesses on subjects central to their defenses; 9-0.

State v. Fankhouser, 133 Wn.App. 689 (2006)

Police arrest witness for possession of drugs, witness informs police he bought drugs a week earlier from defendant, police set up controlled buy and arrest defendant, trial court excludes evidence that defendant did not sell to victim a week earlier as collateral, at trial prosecutor elicits testimony that witness bought from defendant at first occasion, trial court sustains objection but again declines to admit evidence that defendant did not sell to victim on first occasion as impeachment on a collateral matter; held: proof establishing the falsity of the initial accusation is relevant and admissible to show the accuser's ongoing bias or underlying motive for the current accusation, not impeachment on a collateral matter, State v. Hall, 10 Wn.App. 678, 680-82 (1974), cf.: In re Welfare of Shope, 23 Wn.App. 567, 568-69 (1979), State v. Demos, 94 Wn.2d 733, 736-37 (1980); once state contravened the pretrial ruling excluding the earlier buy, it was error not to allow defense to rebut, State v. Gefeller, 76 Wn.2d 449, 455 (1969), State v. Gallagher, 112 Wn.App. 601, 609-11 (2002); II.

State v. Dixon, 159 Wn.2d 65 (2006)

In child molestation case, victim admits having told a counselor that she thought it may have been a dream, but then testified that it wasn't a dream, defense seeks to call counselor to testify to the statement; defense also seeks to cross-examine victim about asking her aunt what she should do if she is lying about something, offer of proof establishes that while aunt believed victim was talking about molestation, victim did not say so, trial court excludes cross-examination about it; held: because ER 613 only allows extrinsic evidence of a prior inconsistent statement, where witness admits to the inconsistency, extrinsic evidence is inadmissible; absent evidence to support the claim that victim admitted she was lying about molestation, trial court properly exercised discretion to exclude the question about lying; 6-3.

State v. Miles, 139 Wn.App. 879 (2007)

State offers evidence that defendant drove to a drug deal, defendant claims he was incapacitated and disabled, state cross-examines about defendant participating in boxing matches during disability which defendant denies, state fails to offer evidence in support of impeachment; held: where a prosecutor's questions refer to extrinsic evidence that is never introduced and imparts evidence within the prosecutor's personal knowledge, then failure to prove the statements in rebuttal is misconduct, State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 855 (1999), State v. Babich, 68 Wn.App. 438, 445-46 (1993), see also: State v. Ruiz, 176 Wn.App. 623 (2013); defense counsel's failure to object is excused as defense could not have known state would not prove claim in rebuttal; II.

State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 751-53 (2009)

In child sex abuse case, trial court permits defense to inquire of victim's mother about her general bias against defendant because of a rancorous divorce, but precludes evidence about details of financial disputes arising during the divorce; held: while a defendant has a right to put specific reasons motivating a witness' bias before the jury, State v. Bedada, 13 Wn.App.2d 185 (2020), defendant does not have the right to prove specific facts behind the motivation, State v. Brooks, 25 Wn.App. 550, 551-52 (1980), and has the discretion to limit the evidence as speculative and remote; 9-0.

State v. Lucas, 167 Wn.App. 100 (2012)

Psychiatrist, in support of diminished capacity defense, testifies to defendant's statements during evaluation, defendant does not testify, trial court allows state to cross-examine psychiatrist as to defendant's prior felony conviction to impeach, ER 806; held: while the credibility of a hearsay statement may be attacked as if the declarant had testified, ER 806, a statement relied upon by an expert is not hearsay as not offered as substantive proof, thus does not expose declarant to impeachment under ER 806, but see: State v. Mohamed, 186 Wn.2d 235 (2016); II.

State v. Garland, 169 Wn.App. 869 (2012)

Defendant is tried for murder, two mistrials before defense began its case-in-chief, both defense counsel's opening statements assert defendant possessed and fired a gun, at third trial counsel reserves opening, defendant testifies that he did not possess a gun, that he wrestled with victim over victim's gun which discharged, trial court allows state to impeach with counsel's openings at mistried cases; held: an attorney's opening statement at a prior trial that is unambiguously inconsistent with defendant's testimony may be used for impeachment of defendant where defendant had time between the trials to "confirm or deny the assertions," and where no innocent explanation for the inconsistency of counsel's statement is apparent to the trial court, and where counsel's statement appears to be the equivalent of testimonial statements by defendant about the facts, see: State v. Rivers, 129 Wn.2d 297 (1996), State v. Dault, 19 Wn.App. 709 (1978), State v. Acosta, 34 Wn.App. 387 (1983), rev'd, on other grounds, 101 Wn.2d 612 (1984), distinguishing State v. Williams, 79 Wn.App. 21 (1995); II.

State v. Sanchez, 171 Wn.App. 518, 544-50 (2012)

Defense counsel participates, along with an investigator, in an interview of a witness and informs court that he has impeachment evidence, trial court disqualifies counsel for being a witness; held: presence of investigator obviates need for counsel to testify, court may order counsel to avoid improper implicit testimony by impartially phrasing questions to avoid subliminal vouching; III.

State v. McComas, 186 Wn.App. 307 (2015)

Police tape record assault victim's statement, at end ask if she declares under penalty of perjury that it is true and correct to which victim answers yes, at trial victim recants, trial court admits recorded statement as substantive evidence, ER 801(d)(1)(i), State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 856, 857 (1982), as an "other proceeding;" held: while a sworn affidavit or declaration is admissible as substantive evidence (1) where a witness testifies and the statement is voluntary, (2) there are guaranties of truthfulness and (3) the statement was taken during police interrogation, State v. Nelson, 74 Wn.App. 380, 382-91 (1994), a statement does not qualify as a sworn statement under RCW 9A.72.085 where the declarant did not review, sign and date the statement or a transcription, State v. Nieto, 119 Wn.App. 157 (2003), thus is inadmissible as substantive evidence; II.

State v. Otton, 185 Wn.2d 673 (2016)

Victim's sworn statement to police, given as part of investigation, that is inconsistent with her testimony may be admitted as substantive evidence, ER 801(d)(1)(i), State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 856 (1982), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297 (2005), State v. Phillips, 431 Wn.App.2d 1056 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768 (2016)

Robbery codefendant pleads guilty to robbery and theft, plea agreement is that robbery will be dismissed in exchange for testimony, codefendant testifies about substance of plea agreement but trial court excludes written plea agreement; held: lead opinion of four justices states plea agreement itself would not have added new information thus trial court did not abuse discretion, 4 dissenting justices would hold that it was reversible error, one concurrence would hold it was harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt.

State v. Mohamed, 186 Wn.2d 235 (2016)

Defense diminished capacity expert testifies to statements made by defendant to the expert, defense declines limiting instruction stating that statements were only admitted for basis of opinion, trial court permits state to prove prior crimen falsi convictions, ER 609, 806; held: when a statement is admitted for a non-hearsay purpose, here basis of opinion, ER 703, 705, it may not be impeached as it is not offered as substantive evidence, State v. Lucas, 167 Wn.App. 100 (2012), but here because defense declined the instruction which would have limited the statement to a non-hearsay purpose it was admitted as substantive evidence and thus is subject to impeachment; reverses State v. Mohamed, 189 Wn.App. 533 (2015); 9-0.

State v. McBride, 192 Wn.App. 859 (2016)

Where a prior conviction is admissible to impeach a witness, ER 609(a), the witness may not be questioned regarding the facts leading to the prior conviction, ER 608(b), State v. Coles,

28 Wn.App. 563 (1981), State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 283-35 (1996), even if the facts might have been admissible as impeachment had there been no prior conviction; III.

State v. Hamilton, 196 Wn.App. 461 (2016)

On cross defense psychiatrist is questioned about records that he possesses but does not testify that he relied upon the records of other professionals, over objection state is allowed to continue questioning about the records and reads them to the witness in order to impeach the witness with the other professionals opinions; held: while medical records that have been admitted into evidence may be used to question a medical expert about the contents here those records were not offered or admitted; while an expert may be cross-examined about records on which the expert relied, here the expert was not asked if he relied upon the records used to impeach; if state was seeking to argue that the witness should have relied upon the records then they were being offered for the truth and thus it was hearsay an improper impeachment; if the state was not offering the evidence for the truth then the entries were not relevant because an expert cannot be impeached based upon the expert's refusal to bas an opinion on a falsehood; I.

State v. Lee, 188 Wn.2d 473, 485-96 (2017)

In child sex abuse case defense seeks to cross-examine complainant who would admit that she made a prior false rape accusation against another, trial court limits cross to false accusation, precludes cross that the accusation was about rape; held: court had discretion to exclude as the accusation of rape against another has minimal probative value, State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832, 859, 988 P.2d 977 (1999); see also State v. O'Connor, 155 Wn.2d 335, 349, 119 P.3d 806 (2005), evidence intended to paint the witness as a liar is less probative than evidence demonstrating a witness' bias or motive to lie in a specific case, distinguishing State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179, 186-87, 920 P.2d 1218 (1996); the prejudicial value in the state's interest to protect rape victims outweighs the probative value to the defendant in light of court admitting the fact that complainant made a false accusation, cf.: State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713 (2010), State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179 (1996) , State v. Barnes, 54 Wn.App. 536 (1989), State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832, 858-60 (1999),State v. Blair, 3 Wn.App.2d 343 (2018), State v. Orn, 197 Wn.2d 34300 (2021); 9-0.

Pers. Restraint of Lui, 188 Wn.2d 525, 563-64 (2016)

Defendant's statement to police, admitted at trial, includes claim that his Mormon religion precludes sex with homicide victim outside of marriage, state elicits from another Mormon witness that defendant did have sex with other women in violation of Mormon tenets, defense counsel does not object, defendant on appeal claims ineffective assistance; held: CONST. art. 1, § 11 does not prohibit all questions about a defendant's religion, see, e.g., State v. Dhaliwal, 150 Wn.2d 559, 579-80, 79 P.3d 432 (2003); 7-2.

State v. Lile, 188 Wn.2d 766, 781-86 (2017)

In assault/self-defense case victim testifies he is not a fighting person, defense seeks to impeach with a domestic violence harassment order, ER 608; held: door would only be opened to evidence directly contradicting his testimony and challenging his credibility, facts were sufficiently different such that refusal of court to permit impeachment was not an abuse of discretion, distinguishing State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33 (1980), see: State v. Gefeller, 76 Wn.2d 449, 455 (1969); affirms State v. Lile, 193 Wn.App. 179 (2017); 9-0.

State v. Wafford, 199 Wn.App. 32 (2017)

In limine trial court excludes child victim's videotaped statement, defense counsel references the statement in opening, court allows state to play video to jury; held: an attorney's reference to a jury about suppressed evidence may be grounds for the court to admit the suppressed evidence as the door has been opened; I.

State v. Phillips, 431 Wn.App.2d 1056 (2018)

At scene, domestic violence victim provides police with sworn declaration that she was choked, at trial testifies she did not remember being choked but remembers telling police she was choked, that some of the written statement was correct, that she did not read the statement, she did not write the statement and did not remember it being under oath, although officer who took the statement contradicted her, court admits sworn statement as substantive evidence, State v. Smith, 97 Wn.2d 856, 861 (1982); held: whole impression of victim's testimony was inconsistent with her sworn statement, State v. Newbern, 95 Wn.App. 277, 294 (1999), State v. Dickenson, 48 Wn.App. 457, 467 (1987), statement was under oath at an "other proceeding" to determine probable cause to detain, trial court did not abuse its discretion; III.

State v. Romero-Ochoa, 193 Wn.2d 341 (2019)

Trial court precludes defense from cross-examining victim about her application for a U visa which would have allowed victim to remain in United States to assist prosecution; held: while the structure of the U visa program might cause a complainant to embellish testimony and thus be proper for cross-examination, here the issue is not reached as harmless beyond a reasonable doubt; 9-0.

State v. Lang, 12 Wn.App.2d 481 (2020)

Defendant testifies at trial recanting a confession, on cross prosecutor asks if he has been diagnosed as a malingerer which defendant denies, on rebuttal state calls psychologist who evaluated defendant for competency, elicits opinion that defendant is a malingerer and that his testimony is consistent with antisocial personality disorder; held: substance of defendant's testimony did not open door or invite error to opinion testimony about credibility which is generally inadmissible, cf.: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918, 929-30, 932-33 (2007), State v. Froehlich, 96 Wn.2d 301, 306-07 (1981), and is prohibited vouching, invading the province of the jury; harmless here; III.

State v. Riley, 12 Wn.App. 714 (2020)

Trial court precludes defense witness who offered to testify that victim had previously made a false police report; held: while specific instances of misconduct may be established via cross-examination, the party is bound by a denial and extrinsic evidence is not admissible, ER 608(b), State v. Harris, 97 Wn.App. 647 (1999); 2-1.

State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021)

A single failure to appear in court is not indicative of consciousness of guilt, thus it is error for a court to admit such evidence of flight, State v. Bruton, 66 Wn.2d 111, 112 (1965), cf.: State v. Cobb, 22 Wn.App. 221, 224 (1978), State v. Jefferson, 11 Wn.App. 566, 570 (1974); 9-0.

State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023)

Trial court precludes defense from offering evidence that a witness was on probation for a DUI; held: absent evidence that witness was worried about his probation or that there was concern that state might be pressured to testify trial court's exclusion of evidence of a DUI probation was properly excluded, distinguishing Davis v. Alaska, 415 U.S. 308, 94 S. Ct. 1105, 39 L. Ed. 2d 347 (1974), State v. McDaniel, 83 Wn.App. 179, 186 (1996); I.

EVIDENCE
Objections and Motions in Limine

In re Lee, 95 Wn.2d 357, 363 (1980), overruled, in part, Hews v. Evans, 99 Wn.2d 80 (1983)

Failure to object to admissibility of evidence precludes attacking the use of the evidence on appeal; however, if challenge is raised in a motion for new trial, issue is preserved, State v. Fagalde, 85 Wn.2d 730 (1975), State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531 (1991), but see: State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 807 n. 2 (1993), State v. Whitaker, 6 Wn.App.2d 1 (2018), affirmed, on different grounds, State v. Whitaker, 195 Wn.2d 333 (2020); 5-3.

State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990)

"Lack of foundation" is a general objection which, if sustained, will be affirmed on appeal if there was any valid basis for excluding the evidence, but see: Det. Of Pouncy, 144 Wn.App. 609, 622-24 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 168 Wn.2d 382 (2010); where trial court sustains an objection but does not strike the testimony, then jury may consider the evidence, State v. Stackhouse, 90 Wn.App. 344, 361 (1998) , State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 739-41 (2012), State v. Mireles, 16 Wn.App.2d 641, 658 (2021), see: State v. Rushworth, 12 Wn.App.2d 466 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Casteñeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354 (1991)

Prosecutor asks defense witness if police are lying, defense counsel objects that question "calls for a comment on the evidence;" held: objection was too general to meet requirement that objections must state specific grounds so that court is informed on the issue and adversary has opportunity to correct it, State v. Boast, 87 Wn.2d 447, 451 (1976), Coleman v. Montgomery, 19 Wash. 610 (1898), State v. Smith, 67 Wn.App. 838 (1992); I.

State v. Braham, 67 Wn.App. 930 (1992)

An objection that the jury "could be seriously misled" is sufficient to invoke ER 403, as the basis for the objection is apparent from the context, State v. Pittman, 54 Wn.App. 58, 66 (1989), see: State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 813 (1993); I.

State v. Padilla, 69 Wn.App. 295 (1993)

"Improper line of questioning" may be insufficient to preserve error, see: State v. Casteñeda-Perez, 61 Wn.App. 354, 363 (1991), subsequent request for sidebar conference and court's stating that it "just read the case" establishes that court understood grounds for the sidebar request and underlying objection, thus error preserved; I.

State v. Roberts, 73 Wn.App. 141 (1994)

In speeding infraction case, officer testifies, without objection, that his radar gun had clocked defendant above speed limit, after which defense moves to dismiss on grounds court could not consider radar testimony because state had not proved radar device was constructed and designed to determine speed, Seattle v. Peterson, 39 Wn.App. 524 (1985); held: while state was required to prove authentication, since evidence from a process or system must be authenticated before admission, ER 901(b)(9), where no authentication objection is made, the requirement of authentication is waived, ER 103(a)(1), Seattle v. Bryan, 53 Wn.2d 321, 324 (1958); where evidence is admitted, trial court must consider it in light most favorable to nonmoving party in ruling on motion to dismiss; II.

State v. Mathis, 73 Wn.App. 341 (1994)

Where defendant does not object to admissibility of confession until after he has testified, then trial court may consider defendant's testimony in determining if corpus delicti has been established; II.

State v. Cole, 74 Wn.App. 571 (1994)

Where state challenges the sufficiency of the evidence in support of a defense, trial court must interpret evidence in a light most favorable to the defendant, and may not assess credibility or weigh the evidence, although it may determine admissibility; a motion in limine should be granted if (1) it describes the evidence objected to with sufficient specificity to enable the trial court to determine that it is clearly inadmissible, (2) the evidence is so prejudicial that the moving party should be spared the necessity of calling attention to it by objecting when it is offered, and (3) trial court is given a brief showing that the evidence is inadmissible, Gammon v. Clark Equip. Co., 38 Wn.App. 274, 286-7 (1984), aff'd, 104 Wn.2d 613 (1985); II.

State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55, 72-3 (1994)

Failure to object to expert opinion or to inadequacy of foundation for the opinion waives error; I.

State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244, 256-8 (1995)

Where orders in limine are neither tentative nor equivocal, then there is a standing objection to all of the evidence encompassed by the order, and no further objection need be made to preserve error, State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889, 895-6 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State v. Brown, 111 Wn.2d 124 (1988), 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865, 875 (1991), see: State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 819-21 (1999), State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 748 n.4 (2009), State v. Henson, 11 Wn.App.2d 97 (2019), State v. Roosma, 19 Wn.App.2d 941 (2021); 9-0.

Seattle v. Carnell, 79 Wn.App. 400, 403-4 (1995)

"Lack of foundation" is a general objection which does not preserve error on appeal, but see: Det. Of Pouncy, 144 Wn.App. 609, 622-24 (2008), reversed, on other grounds, 168 Wn.2d 382 (2010), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 739-41 (2012); I.

State v. Burnley, 80 Wn.App. 571 (1996)

Motion to suppress for unlawful search is untimely if not made until evidence has been presented to jury and state has rested, State v. Baxter, 68 Wn.2d 416, 423 (1966), State v. Lemons, 53, Wn.2d 138, 141 (1958), see: State v. Walton, 76 Wn.App. 364, 368-70 (1994), Johnson v. United States, 87 L.Ed.2d 704 (1943), but see: State v. McFarland, 127 Wn.2d 322 (1995), State v. Klinger, 96 Wn.App. 619 (1999); III.

State v. Henthorn, 85 Wn.App. 235, 239 (1997)

Failure to object to sufficiency of evidence of a prior conviction to enhance punishment waives issue, State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 718-9 (1986); I.

State v. Thompson, 90 Wn.App. 41, 44-7 (1998)

In vehicular assault case, court orders in limine that police witnesses not refer to defendant's driving as "reckless," detective violates order, defense motion for mistrial is denied, court instructs jury to disregard; held: to determine prejudicial effect, court must examine (1) seriousness, (2) whether the error involved cumulative evidence, and (3) whether trial court instructed jury to disregard, State v. Johnson, 124 Wn.2d 57, 76 (1994); here, violation of motion in limine was serious, State v. Essex, 57 Wn.App. 411 (1990), State v. Escalona, 49 Wn.App. 251 (1987), State v. Babcock, 145 Wn.App. 157 (2008), clearly cumulative, trial court's instruction to disregard was adequate, State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 175-80 (2010); III.

State v. Gallagher, 112 Wn.App. 601, 609-11 (2002)

In manufacturing methamphetamine case, defense motion in limine to preclude evidence of used and unused syringes is granted, defense elicits from detective about the lack of items associated with drugs at the house such as cash, baggies, pagers, packing materials, trial court allows state to produce syringes; held: defense opened the door, State v. Gefeller, 76 Wn.2d 448, 455 (1969), State v. Fankhouser, 133 Wn.App. 689, 695 (2006), distinguishing State v. Stockton, 91 Wn.App. 35 (1998), State v. Avendano-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706 (1995), see: State v. Rushworth, 12 Wn.App.2d 466 (2020), cf.: State v. Jones, 144 Wn.App. 284, 297-99 (2008); III.

State v. Wilbur-Bobb, 134 Wn.App. 627, 632-34 (2006)

In vehicular homicide trial, defense counsel objects to toxicologist's testimony about retrograde extrapolation of blood alcohol based upon the witness' lack of training, on appeal defense argues that court erred in not holding a Frye hearing; held: an objection to credentials cannot be tranformed into a Frye argument on appeal as it does not sufficiently call to the court's attention the basis of the objection, distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336, 341 (1987); I.

State v. Weber, 159 Wn.2d 252, 270-79 (2006)

Where a motion in limine to exclude evidence is granted and the other party appears to violate the order, counsel must object to preserve the error, State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 819-21 (1999), State v. Sullivan, 69 Wn.App. 167 (1993), State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244, 256 (1995), State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889, 895-96 (1984), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Brown, 111 Wn.2d 124 (1988), 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), cf.: State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688, 700-02 (2008), State v. Henson, 11 Wn.App.2d 97 (2019); where a party's motion in limine is denied, the party need not object to preserve error, State v. Smith, 189 Wash. 422 (1937); 5-4.

State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 932-33 (2007)

An objection that proffered evidence is "prejudicial" is "adequate to preserve an appeal" of ER 404(b) evidence, State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 222-23 (2012), cf.: DeHaven v. Gant, 42 Wn.App. 666, 671 (1986), whereas an objection that the evidence is irrelevant is not; 5-4.

State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688, 700-02 (2008)

While a party must object to preserve evidentiary error even where the court has excluded the evidence in a pretrial order, State v. Weber, 159 Wn.2d 252, 272 (2006), an exception to the objection requirement exists where an unusual circumstance exists that makes it impossible to avoid the prejudicial impact of evidence that had previously been ruled inadmissible, to include deliberate disregard of a trial court's ruling or an objection by itself that would be so damaging as to be immune from any curative instruction; here, prosecutor deliberately questioned a detective about gang evidence when it had been excluded; II.

State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 686-87 (2009)

Where trial court states that a ruling on a motion in limine is tentative and preliminary and defense does not object or seek a final ruling when the evidence is admitted, then defendant has waived the issue, RAP 2.5(a), State v. Riker, 123 Wn.2d 351, 369 (1994), State v. Carlson, 61 Wn.App. 865, 875 (1991); II.

State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 430-31 (2014)

A mistrial motion for prosecution misconduct following prosecutor's closing preserves error, but see: State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541 (2022); 9-0.

State v. Vassar, 188 Wn.App. 251, 258 (2015)

"While the defense can object to the form of a State question, it cannot object to a nonresponsive answer to a proper question. On the other hand, the State can object to a nonresponsive answer to its question and ask that it be stricken. The same rules apply when the roles are reversed and the defense is cross-examining a State's witness," 5D Wash. Prac., Handbook Wash. Evid. OBJ 44 (2014-15 ed.); III.

State v. Giles, 196 Wn.App. 745, 764-69 (2016)

Witness violates order in limine, defense counsel states "objection, no foundation," trial court overrules objection, at recess counsel argues specifically about violation, trial court offers curative instruction which defense accepts, on appeal argues that court should have granted mistrial sua sponte; held: defense received the remedies requested and thus forfeited any other remedy, see: State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613 (1990), State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 93 (1994); I.

State v. Wafford, 199 Wn.App. 32 (2017)

In limine trial court excludes child victim's videotaped statement, defense counsel references the statement in opening, court allows state to play video to jury; held: an attorney's reference to a jury about suppressed evidence may be grounds for the court to admit the suppressed evidence as the door has been opened; I.

State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 804-06 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018)

"The Rules of Evidence neither authorize nor prohibit speaking objections. 5 Wash. Prac., Evidence Law and Practice § 103.8 (6th ed.). Instead, the trial court decides the propriety of a speaking objection. This trial court ruled that the State's objection was not improper. Jefferson has not demonstrated that any speaking objections were improper or prejudicial;" I.

State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App. 133, 146 (2020)

In ruling on a motion in limine trial court stated that the ruling "may be subject to further action and objection as the testimony is actually taken," defense does not object; held: because trial court did not indicate that further objecions were necessary then the ruling was preserved for appeal, but see: State v. Roosma, 19 Wn.App.2d 941 (2021); I.

State v. Rushworth, 12 Wn.App.2d 466 (2020)

After sustaining an objection to testimony court must grant a motion to strike, see: State v. Stackhouse, 90 Wn.App. 344, 361 (1998) ("When an objection is sustained with no further motion to strike the testimony and no further instruction for the jury to disregard the testimony, the testimony remains in the record for the jury's consideration."), State v. Mireles, 16 Wn.App.2d 641, 658 (2021); open door doctrine: where irrelevant evidence or evidence that would be excluded for undue prejudice is offered by the party that would benefit from the exclusion then that party has waived protection from the forbidden topic and the subject matter is open for examination by the other party, however this only applies to relevance issues and may still preclude admissibility based upon constitutional requirements, pertinent statutes and the rules of evidence, ER 402, State v. Gefeller, 76 Wn.2d 449, 455, 458 (1969); curative admissibility doctrine: if defense offers inadmissible evidence, state's remedy is to object, and may not seize the opportunity to offer otherwise inadmissible evidence by failing to act; III.

State v. Roosma, 19 Wn.App.2d 941 (2021)

Defense moves pretrial to exclude cell phone evidence based upon foundation, trial court denies motion "at this time," at trial defense does not object; held: where a pretrial motion is "final," defense need not object to preserve error, State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244, 256-58 (1995), but where the trial court ruling is tentative defense must object, State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889, 895-96 (1984), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Brown, 111 Wn.2d 124 (1988), 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), but see: State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App. 133, 147 (2020); II.

State v. Brown, 21 Wn.App.2d 541 (2022)

A motion for a mistrial following prosecutor's closing argument does not preserve the issue absent a timely objection, but see: State v. Lindsay, 180 Wn.2d 423, 430-31 (2014); III.

EVIDENCE
Opinions

State v. Kinard, 39 Wn.App. 871 (1985)

Testimony that assailant "sounded like a black man" is proper lay opinion, ER 701; voice lineup not required; III.

State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340 (1985)

Police officer testified that he believed defendant's response to a question was "contrived"; held: lay witness who does not know defendant cannot assert such a conclusion, State v. Haga, 8 Wn.App. 481 (1973); State v. Jamison, 93 Wn.2d 794, 798 (1980), State v. Wilber, 55 Wn.App. 294 (1989), State v. Barr, 120 Wn.App. 370 (2004), see State v. Wigley, 5 Wn.App. 465, 467 (1971), State v. Allen, 50 Wn.App. 412 (1988), State v. Day, 51 Wn.App. 544 (1988), cf.: State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 719-24 (1997); I.

State v. Carlin, 40 Wn.App. 698 (1985)

K-9 officer testifies that dog followed "guilt scent" in tracking defendant; held: expression of opinion regarding defendant's guilt invades the province of the trier of fact, but see: Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993), State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 812-4 (1994), harmless here; I.

State v. Rangitsch, 40 Wn.App. 771 (1985)

In negligent homicide trial, pathologist is permitted to testify to the effects of cocaine on motor skills; held: physician may testify to the entire medical field, even if not a specialist in the particular field of which he speaks, Kelly v. Carroll, 36 Wn.2d 482, 491, 19 A.L.R.2d 1174 (1950); witness need not possess academic credentials of an expert as the modern trend is away from reliance on formal titles or degrees, Harris v. Robert C. Groth, M.D., Inc., P.S., 99 Wn.2d 438, 449 (1983), ER 702; expert may read from a learned treatise on direct if expert has testified to its reliability as authority, ER 803(a)(18); I.

State v. Strandy, 49 Wn.App. 537 (1987)

Trained, experienced narcotics officer may testify that numbers on piece of paper were consistent with those commonly made in narcotics transactions; see: State v. Simon, 64 Wn.App. 948, rev'd, in part, on other grounds, 120 Wn.2d 196 (1992); II.

State v. Allen, 50 Wn.App. 412 (1988)

Police officer testifies that murder suspect's grief did not appear to be sincere due to lack of tears or redness in her face; held: because officer's testimony was based upon personal observations of suspect's conduct, then it logically supported his conclusion, and was thus not an opinion on guilt but was an explanation and summary of his personal observation, distinguishing State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340 (1985), State v. Haga, 8 Wn.App. 481 (1973); accord: State v. Day, 51 Wn.App. 544 (1988), State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), State v. Stenson, 132

Wn.2d 668, 719-24 (1997), State v. Barr, 123 Wn.App. 373 (2004), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 805-11 (2012); I.

State v. Collins, 110 Wn.2d 263 (1988)

In rape case, battered woman syndrome evidence is admissible in state's case-in-chief to show why victim remained in violent relationship and why she did not report violent acts to police, distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987); cf.: State v. Riker, 123 Wn.2d 351 (1994); 8-1.

State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44 (1989)

In rape case where victim claims rapist did not stutter, and defense maintains that defendant stutters, it was within trial court's discretion to allow speech expert to relate names of well-known personalities who stutter but not when performing and that there are situations in which there was a high probability that a person would not stutter, including the statistical percentage of that probability; I.

State v. Lass, 55 Wn.App. 300 (1989)

Truck driver may testify as to fuel consumption of his own truck as an expert and as lay opinion because it is based upon a rational perception of the witness, ER 701; III.

State v. Contreras, 57 Wn.App. 471 (1990)

Witness testifies, over objection, that assault victim had no doubt who assaulted him; held: a witness who is personally acquainted with declarant may give his opinion as to the state of mind of the declarant, State v. Jamison, 93 Wn.2d 794, 798 (1980), distinguishing State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340 (1985); I.

State v. Jones, 59 Wn.App. 744 (1990)

In child homicide case, doctors testify that there was no "plausible historical evidence" consistent with injuries; held: doctors opinion that injury was inflicted rather than accidental was not based upon their opinion of defendant's credibility, State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008), nor did they opine that defendant committed crime; although opinion may touch on ultimate issue, it is admissible within discretion of trial court, ER 704; I.

O'Neill v. Department of Licensing, 62 Wn.App. 112 (1991)

Officer testifies that defendant's explanation about the cause of an accident was inconsistent with officer's conclusion; held: no abuse of discretion as discretion was not exercised on manifestly unfair, unreasonable or untenable grounds, State ex rel. Carroll v. Junker, 79 Wn.2d 12, 26 (1971); I.

State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829 (1991)

Expert testimony couched in terms of "could have," "possible," or "similar" is admissible when analyzing common sources of trace evidence, State v. Batten, 17 Wn.App. 428 (1977), State v. Warness, 77 Wn.App. 636, 642-3 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147 (1992)

Counselor's testimony in child rape case that victim's description of abuse was very clear and consistent, and that she never gave any indication she was lying is error, as repetition is not generally a valid test for veracity, State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855, 857 (1983), and expert opinion as to guilt invades jury's exclusive function to weigh evidence and determine credibility, State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652, 657 (1985), State v. Carlin, 40 Wn.App. 698, 701 (1985), State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 812 (1993), State v. Carlson, 80 Wn.App. 116 (1995), State v. Dunn, 125 Wn.App. 582, 589-95 (2005), State v. Jungerts, 125 Wn.App. 901 (2005), rev. granted, 155 Wn.2d 1014 (2005), see also: State v. King, 131 Wn.App. 789 (2006), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), cf.: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007); I.

State v. Stumpf, 64 Wn.App. 522 (1992)

Expert testimony is required to establish existence of a mental disorder and causal connection between disorder and diminished capacity; to supplement expert testimony, lay witness may testify to establish defendant's mental state in diminished capacity case where (1) witness had sufficient acquaintance with defendant or had sufficient time to observe defendant, (2) witness testifies, at least in a general way, as to the peculiar facts and circumstances on which her conclusion is based, (3) testimony refers to defendant's mental condition at or close to the time witness made observation and at or close to time of offense; III.

State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015)

Border Patrol tracker is permitted to testify as to his opinion, based upon track, of suspect's height, weight, mental state, familiarity with terrain, physical condition, suspect's interaction with a dog, and race; held: trial court did not abuse discretion in admitting evidence as lay opinion as perceptions in field formed a rational basis for the inferences presented, ER 701; evidence could also have been admitted as expert testimony, ER 702, based on experience; Frye v. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923) standard is inapplicable as testimony did not involve new methods of proof or new scientific principles, State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895, 906 (1991), State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 380 (1992); testimony was not so technical that jury could not judge reliability for itself; see: State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 813-21 (1993); 5-4.

State v. Simon, 64 Wn.App. 948, rev'd in part, on other grounds, 120 Wn.2d 196 (1992)

In promoting prostitution case, testimony of police officer, with six years' experience investigating 50 pimping cases, as to general relationships between pimps and prostitutes, how pimps control prostitutes, types of pimps, personalities of prostitutes was properly admitted within trial court's discretion, State v. Strandy, 49 Wn.App. 537 (1987), even though trial court's reasons are "fairly debatable," Walker v. Bangs, 92 Wn.2d 854, 858 (1979), as witness had sufficient practical experience, State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 639, 647 (1977), overruled on other grounds, State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983), was helpful to jury in understanding mores of pimp/prostitute world, State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263, 273-4 (1988); I.

State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 380 (1992)

Officer's opinion testimony that absence of drug user paraphernalia indicates residents are not users does not concern sophisticated or technical matters and is thus not subject to Frye analysis, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 310-1 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, , State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), State v. Smith, 88 Wn.2d 639, 647 (1977), overruled on other grounds in State v. Jones, 99 Wn.2d 735 (1983); expert opinions can be admitted without foundation except for testimony establishing the expert's qualifications, Cornejo v. State, 57 Wn.App. 314, 329 (1990); an opinion is not a comment on guilt unless it relates directly to the defendant, State v. Carlin, 40 Wn.App. 698, 703 (1985), State v. Haga, 8 Wn.App. 481, 490 (1973), Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993), State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632, 648-52 (2009); inference based on physical evidence and experience is not an opinion as to defendant's guilt, State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 812-4 (1994); I.

State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993)

In child abuse case, hospital social worker's testimony that defendant had difficulty making eye contact, stared at floor, didn't cry, was withdrawn, and that that behavior was unusual was properly admitted as it contained personal observations of conduct, factually recounted by witness that directly and logically supported the conclusion, State v. Day, 51 Wn.App. 544, 552 (1988), State v. Allen, 50 Wn.App. 412, 418-9 (1988), State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 719-24 (1997), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 805-11 (2012), see: State v. Barr, 123 Wn.App. 373 (2004); I.

State v. Halstien, 122 Wn.2d 109 (1993)

Officer's testimony that a substance "might have been semen" was proper, as ER 701 allows a lay witness to testify to opinions or inferences if testimony is rationally based on witness's perception, within court's discretion, State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131, 140 (1983), State v. Everybodytalksabout, 145 Wn.2d 456 (2002); overrules, in part, State v. Halstien, 65 Wn.App. 845, 850-1 (1992); 8-0.

Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993)

In DUI case, officer's testimony, without objection, that in his opinion defendant was obviously intoxicated and affected by alcohol, and could not drive in a safe manner is an opinion encompassing an ultimate factual issue which supports the conclusion that defendant is guilty, but is not an improper opinion on guilt, and is admissible both as lay and expert opinion, cf.: State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 459-66 (1999), within discretion of trial court, State v. Smissaert, 41 Wn.App. 813, 815 (1985), State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 812-4 (1994), State v. Lewellyn, 78 Wn.App. 788, 793-6 (1995), , aff'd, on other grounds, State v. Smith, 130 Wn.2d 215 (1996), State v. Baird, 83 Wn.App. 477, 484-6 (1996), State v. We, 138 Wn.App. 716 (2007), State v. Olmedo, 112 Wn.App. 525 (2002), State v. Christopher, 114 Wn.App. 858, 862-63 (2003), see: State v. Cruz, 77 Wn.App. 811 (1995); admission of evidence alleged to constitute opinion on guilt is not constitutional error, see: State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 56-58 (2006), but see: State v. Carlin, 40 Wn.App. 698, 701-02 (1985), State v. Olmedo, supra., at 533, State v. Barr, 123 Wn.App. 373 (2004), State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357, 374-75 (2007) , State v. Quaale, 177 Wn.App. 603 (2013); I.

State v. Hettich, 70 Wn.App. 586 (1993)

Toxicologist's opinion testimony that person with a .14 blood alcohol level would lose at least a third of their normal driving ability, while without scientific foundation, was harmless, if it was error at all, in light of witness's proper testimony that person's ability to drive "would be significantly impaired," and in light of strong evidence of intoxication; testimony was probably not subject to Frye analysis since testimony was not based on novel scientific experimental procedures, but rather upon witness's own practical experience and acquired knowledge, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 311 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); I.

State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440 (1993)

In diminished capacity/voluntary intoxication case, pharmacologist is cross-examined about defendant's sexual history prior to offense and prior to taking drugs; held: otherwise inadmissible evidence may be admissible to explain an expert's opinion or to permit jury to determine what weight it should be given, ER 705, Group Health Coop. of Puget Sound, Inc. v. Department of Rev., 106 Wn.2d 391, 400 (1986), but see: State v. Acosta, 123 Wn.App. 424, 435-39 (2004); 8-0.

State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 812 (1993)

In child sex abuse case, expert testifies that, during interview with victim she told victim, "I believe you," and testifies "I felt [she] had been sexually molested by" defendant; held: "I believe you" was merely intended to reassure victim, thus, absent objection, not reversible error, State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754, 760-3 (1989), State v. King, 131 Wn.App. 789 (2006); latter statement was an improper opinion on guilt, State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652, 657 (1985), State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147, 154 (1992), State v. Haga, 8 Wn.App. 481, 492 (1973), State v. Jungers, 125 Wn.App. 895 (2005), see: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007), see: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007), harmless here; I.

State v. Riker, 123 Wn.2d 351, 358-66 (1994)

Trial court does not abuse its discretion by excluding battered-person syndrome evidence in duress case to explain defendant's behavior with a nonintimate, nonbattering person; 7-2.

State v. Fisher, 74 Wn.App. 804, 812-4 (1994)

In drug case, officer testifies defendant told accomplice to sell drugs and that more would be available later, which indicates defendant was involved in transaction and was running the show, something he was trained to look for; held: witness's testimony encompassed ultimate factual issue as to whether defendant was accomplice, but was not direct testimony on defendant's guilt, thus did not constitute an impermissible opinion as to defendant's guilt, Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573, 578-9 (1993), State v. Olmedo, 112 Wn.App. 525 (2002), State v. Nelson, 152 Wn.App. 755 (2009) cf.: State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008); I.

State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55, 73-5 (1994)

Testimony that symptoms could be correlated with a child who has been sexually abused is not a conclusion that child was abused, and does not invade jury's function, State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 815 n. 6 (1993); testimony that a diagnosis of post-traumatic stress syndrome is secondary to sexual abuse of victim, and only defendants were implicated, then witness has stated an opinion that defendants were guilty, which invades province of the jury, Jones, supra, at 813, manifest constitutional error, harmless here, but see: State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008), cf.: State v. Cruz, 77 Wn.App. 811 (1995), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 56-58 (2006); I.

State v. Brett, 126 Wn.2d 136, 161-2 (1995)

Lay witness may testify as to her opinion that defendant did not appear to be under the influence of alcohol or drugs where witness had observed defendant twice for several minutes, was a former police officer familiar with effects of intoxicating substances, ER 701; 9-0.

State v. Cruz, 77 Wn.App. 811 (1995)

In VUCSA case, detective testifies about "typical" heroin transactions, including evidence about informants, controlled buys, how and where parties meet, prosecutor argues in closing that defendant's actions fit typical transaction; held: because witness did not render an opinion that directly implicated defendant, it was not an impermissible opinion on guilt, State v. Aguirre, 168 Wn.2d 350, 359-61 (2010), closing argument was proper, as attorneys may draw inferences from the evidence, Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993), distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336, 348 (1987), State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994), cf.: State v. Olmedo, 112 Wn.App. 525 (2002); I.

State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 878-81 (1995)

Defense arson expert is permitted by trial court to testify to his opinion that fire was not arson, but was precluded from testifying to statements others made to him during investigation if statement differed from the person's testimony at trial or if the person was not a witness at trial; held: an expert may base opinion on facts which are otherwise inadmissible, ER 703, trial court may allow disclosure of underlying data, but ER 705 should not act as a mechanism for admitting otherwise inadmissible evidence as an explanation for the expert's opinion, State v. Anderson, 44 Wn.App. 644, 652 (1986), Washington Irrigation & Dev. Co. v. Sherman, 106 Wn.2d 685, 687-8 (1986), State v. Nation, 110 Wn.App. 651, 661-67 (2002); II.

State v. Carlson, 80 Wn.App. 116 (1995)

In child sex abuse case, physician testifies that her physical findings are inconclusive, but based on her interview with complainant and a published study about interviews, her opinion is that the child was abused; held: published study did not meet Frye test, physician's opinion that the child was a victim of abuse based upon what the child said was improperly admitted, State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985), State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147 (1992), State v. Florczak, 76 Wn.App. 55 (1994), State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336, 348 (1987), State v. Jungers, 125 Wn.App. 901 (2005), State v. Dunn, 125 Wn.App. 582, 589-95 (2005), State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009), see: State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 314 (2005), State v. King, 131 Wn.App. 789 (2006), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), cf.: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007); II.

State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 662-3 (1997)

Expert may testify in summary fashion when necessity dictates that it is the only proacticable way of presenting evidence, ER 1006, Keen v. o'Rourke, 48 Wn.2d 1, 5 (1955), when summaries promote jury's convenience and proponent of the summary establishes that original records are too voluminous for easy use in court and make records available for examination by opposing party, State v. Marshall, 25 Wn.App. 240, 243 (1980), State v. Kane, 23 Wn.App. 107, 110-11 (1979); II.

State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 719-24 (1997)

Paramedic's testimony that he was surprised to learn that defendant was husband of gunshot victim, as defendant showed no grief, is admissible as a personal observation of defendant's conduct which supports his surprise, State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), State v. Allen, 50 Wn.App. 412 (1995), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 805-11 (2012), distinguishing State v. Haga, 8 Wn.App. 481, 492 (1973), State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340, 351 (1985), State v. Barr, 123 Wn.App. 373 (2004); 8-0.

State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 459-66 (1999)

In attempting to elude case, trooper testifies, over objection, that based upon the driving, defendant was attempting to get away from trooper, knew trooper was behind and refused to stop; held: no foundation established that trooper had specialized training or experience necessary to recognize difference between distracted speeding driver and eluding driver, distinguishing Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573, 578-79 (1993), State v. Olmedo, 112 Wn.App. 525 (2002), nor is it helpful to the jury, ER 702, since a lay jury is capable of making the determination without expert testimony; evidence is not admissible lay opinion, ER 701, as it relates to a core element, and the state has not established a substantial factual basis supporting the opinion, State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 811-13 (2004), see: Carr v. Deking, 52 Wn.App. 880, 885-86 (1988), State v. Thamert, 45 Wn.App. 143, 148-49 (1986), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), State v. Fallentine, 149 Wn.App. 614, 624-25 (2009), distinguishing State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754, 760-65 (1989), State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147 (2018); II.

State v. Lopez, 95 Wn.App. 842, 856-57 (1999)

In molestation case, defendant-father, after Miranda waiver, tells police he doesn't believe his children would lie, "I must have done it," objected to as inadmissible opinion of veracity of a witness; held: because the opinion did not go to the veracity of the children at trial, it was admissible; III.

State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832, 857-58 (1999)

Police may offer an opinion that a burglary might have been "staged" based upon their experience, as they are testifying to inferences readily understandable by a jury, State v. Halstien, 122 Wn.2d 109, 128 (1993), but see: State v. Everybodytalksabout, 145 Wn.2d 456 (2002), State v. Dolan, 118 Wn.App. 323, 328-30 (2003); II.

State v. Read, 100 Wn.App. 776 (2000), remanded, 142 Wn.2d 1007 (2000), affirmed, 106 Wn.App. 138 (2001), aff'd, on other grounds, 147 Wn.2d 238 (2002)

Expert may express an opinion without recitation of the expert's factual data first, ER 703, 705, Cornejo v. State, 57 Wn.App. 314, 329 (1990); in homicide case, lay witness's opinion that defendant did not have to defend himself went directly to the validity of the defense and was thus a comment on defendant's guilt, State v. Olmedo, 112 Wn.App. 525 (2002), harmless here; III.

State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753 (2001)

Trial court admits taped confession in which interrogating officer states to suspect that he's lying and his story doesn't make sense; held: statements amount to accusations that defendant was lying, thus indicated the officer's inadmissible opinion as to guilt, State v. Jones, 117 Wn.App. 89, 91 (2003), State v. Dolan, 118 Wn.App. 323, 328-30 (2003), State v. Sutherby, 138 Wn.App. 609, 616-18 (2007), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 870 (2009), Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019), see: State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App. 654 (2011), but see: State v. Smiley, 195 Wn.App. 185 (2016), State v. Putman, 21 Wn.App.2d 36 (2022), harmless here, State v. Perez-Valdez, 172 Wn.2d 808, 817-19 (2011); reverses, in part, State v. Demery, 100 Wn.App. 416, 420-23 (2000); (lead opinion holds otherwise but 4 justices in dissent plus concurring opinion hold it was error).

State v. Nation, 110 Wn.App. 651, 661-67 (2002)

Supervisor of crime lab testifies that, based upon notes of criminalist who tested the drugs, his opinion is that they are controlled substances; held: abuse of discretion to admit hearsay testimony of a subordinate who tested the drugs unless the expert establishes that he as well as others would act upon the information for purposes other than litigation; here, expert stated tests are prepared only for court testimony, see: State v. Ecklund, 30 Wn.App. 313 (1981); III.

State v. Clausing, 147 Wn.2d 620 (2002)

In legend drug case, trial court admits testimony of state Board of Pharmacy director that a physician's prescriptions are invalid after his license is revoked, instructs jury that it is not a legal opinion; held: only judges may instruct on the law, CONST., art. IV, § 16, cautionary instruction was not curative as the witness indeed instructed on the law; reverses State v. Clausing, 104 Wn.App. 76 (2000); 6-3.

State v. Zunker, 112 Wn.App. 130, 139-41 (2002)

Decision to qualify police detective as an expert in drug manufacturing process is within discretion of trial court; where detective claims to be the "resident expert," and testifies to on-the-job training, continuing education and participation in investigation of 40-60 meth labs in eight months, trial court did not abuse its "considerable" discretion, State v. Liles, 11 Wn.App. 166, 169 (1974), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008),; 2-1, III.

State v. Olmedo, 112 Wn.App. 525, 530-33 (2002)

In unlawful storage of anhydrous ammonia case, witness testifies that he did not believe that the tanks in question were approved by United States Department of Transportation for storage of anhydrous ammonia, an element of the crime; held: witness' opinion was an inadmissible legal conclusion, Hyatt v. Sellen Constr. Co., 40 Wn.App. 893 (1985), Everett v. Diamond, 30 Wn.App. 787 (1981), Stenger v. State, 103 Wn.App. 393, 407 (2001), cf.: State v. We, 138 Wn.App. 716 (2007); permitting a witness to testify as to defendant's guilt raises a constitutional issue, State v. Carlin, 40 Wn.App. 698, 701-02 (1985), but see: Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 56-58 (2006); III.

State v. Dolan, 118 Wn.App. 323, 328-30 (2003)

In child abuse case in which defendant is blaming victim's mother, police officer's testimony that he believed mother could not have committed the crime and social worker's testimony that child was not at risk with the mother were improper lay opinions, not based upon personal knowledge which can be raised for first time on appeal as it violates right to jury trial, State v. McFarland, 127 Wn.2d 322, 332-33 (1995); II.

State v. Saunders, 120 Wn.App. 800, 811-13 (2004)

Police officer's testimony that defendant's statements to him were "inconsistent," "fluctuated," and that defendant told "four different stories" was permissible as it was based upon personal, direct knowledge of the witness; officer's testimony that defendant wasn't "truthful" is improper opinion testimony, State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453, 459-60 (1999); II.

State v. Barr, 123 Wn.App. 373 (2004)

Police officer's testimony that during interrogation he used the "Reid Investigative Technique" and found verbal and nonverbal clues that defendant was being deceptive is manifest constitutional error, as an impermissible opinion on credibility, State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340 (1985), State v. Hawkins, 14 Wn.App.2d 182 (2020), cf.: State v. Allen, 50 Wn.App. 412 (1988), State v. Craven, 69 Wn.App. 581 (1993), Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), aff'd on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008); III.

State v. Acosta, 123 Wn.App. 424 (2004)

To rebut defense diminished capacity expert, court admits expert's testimony which includes a recitation of defendant's arrest and conviction record to support expert's opinion that defendant has antisocial personality disorder, not diminished capacity; held: an expert can testify regarding basis for opinion for limited purpose of showing how he reached his conclusion only if the probative value of the basis for that opinion is not substantially outweighed by its prejudicial nature, State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440, 452-53 (1993); here, even if expert could reasonably rely on defendant's criminal history, jury should not have heard it, ER 403, as probative value is far outweighed by danger of unfair prejudice; II.

State v. Dunn, 125 Wn.App. 582, 589-95 (2005)

In child sex abuse case, physician's assistant testifies that, while there was not physical evidence of abuse, complainant's clear, concise, explicit and detailed disclosures establishes that sexual abuse was probable; held: the study on which the witness' testimony is based does not meet Frye test; an expert's opinion on an ultimate issue of fact that is based solely on the expert's perception of the witness' truthfulness is unfairly prejudicial, State v. Carlson, 80 Wn.App. 116 (1995), State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985), State v. Alexander, 64 Wn.App. 147 (1992), see: State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 314 (2005), State v. King, 131 Wn.App. 789 (2006), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), cf.: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007); III.

State v. King, 131 Wn.App. 789 (2006)

In child sex abuse case, detective and CPS social worker testify that they begin child interviews by establishing ground rules to ensure child knows the difference between truth and a lie, that they know they are supposed to tell the truth and that they were satisfied that complainant understood the ground rules, that complainant agreed to tell the truth and that he asked basic questions to show that complainant is being truthful; held: victim's declarations that he would tell the truth was no different than victim's taking an oath in court to tell the truth, witnesses did not explicitly state to jury that they believed victim's account, State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754 (1989), State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798 (1993), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008), see: State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007); I.

State v. Warren , 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008)

In child sex abuse case, interviewer testifies that she tells child importance of telling the truth and obtains promise from child that she will tell the truth, admitted without objection; held: because testimony does not expressly state a belief in victim's account, it does not infringe on jury's role, State v. King, 131 Wn.App. 789 (2006), nor is it manifest constitutional error which may be raised for first time on appeal, State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007); officer's testimony that victim's mother seemed more protective of defendant and not so concerned about her daughter was admissible, ER 701, as rationally based upon his perception; I.

State v. King, 135 Wn.App. 662, 672-73 (2006)

In intimidating a witness trial, witness' testimony that defendant's statement "was a threat" was a proper lay opinion, ER 701; III.

State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918 (2007)

In child sex assault cases, detective testifies that she interviewed complainant, determined her ability to tell the truth and obtained her promise to tell the truth, physician testifies that physical exam did not confirm victim's story but she described sexual touching "with appropriate affect," history given was "clear and consistent" with plenty of detail and that nothing in the physical examination made him doubt or confirm victim's explanation; in companion case, physician testifies to a lack of physical evidence of abuse but that is the "norm rather than the exception," that victim "had good language skills for her age, she spoke clearly," counsel does not object to any of this testimony; held: none of the testimony was a "clear" opinion on credibility or guilt, in the absence of "explicit or almost explicit witness statement on an ultimate issue of fact," there is no manifest constitutional error that will be reviewed for the first time on appeal, State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 812 (1993), State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754, 760-3 (1989), State v. King, 131 Wn.App. 789 (2006), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 52-58 (2006), aff'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 17 (2008), State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357, 374-75 (2007), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008), see: State v. Aguirre, 168 Wn.2d 350, 359-61 (2010), State v. Hawkins, 14 Wn.App.2d 182 (2020); reverses State v. Kirkman, 126 Wn.App. 97 (2005); 8-1.

State v. We, 716 (2007)

In arson case, expert arson investigator's testimony that defendant burned her apartment for insurance fraud was a proper expert opinion on motive; 2-1, III.

State v. Borsheim, 140 Wn.App. 357, 374-75 (2007)

In child sex abuse case, medical expert testifies, without objection, that her findings regarding victim were consistent with victim's account, that her medical diagnosis based upon genital warts on victim was that victim had been sexually abused; held: opinion testimony relating only indirectly to defendant's guilt, where not objected to at trial, is not a manifest constitutional error, State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918, 922 (2007); here, witness did not explicitly state that she believed victim; I.

State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367, 385-89 (2007)

In homicide trial, court excludes defense offer of medical examiner's testimony that at victim's level of methamphetamine in blood, some people can be aggressive and irrational; held: without evidence as to how the methamphetamine level in victim's blood "might have affected" this victim, at 389 ¶48, trial court's determination that testimony is speculative and irrelevant to lawful use of force was not an abuse of discretion, State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018), see: State v. Cheatam, 150 Wn.2d 626, 644-45 (2003); 2-1, II.

State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008)

Officer's testimony that he believed defendants' actions were such that they were buying pseudoephedrine with intent to manufacture methamphetamine was an improper opinion of guilt but, because there was no objection, "did not establish actual prejudice," State v. Perez-Valdez, 172 Wn.2d 808, 817-19 (2011), State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12, 28-30 (2018), cf.: State v. Nelson, 152 Wn.App. 755 (2009) , State v. Quaale, 177 Wn.App. 603 (2013); 7-2.

State v. Francisco, 148 Wn.App. 168, 176-78 (2009)

Experienced drug unit detective's testimony that "drugs are usually sold, not given away" is a proper expert opinion, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 310 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); III.

State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009)

In rape case with consent defense, sexual assault nurse examiner testifies that victim's injuries were caused by nonconsensual sex; held: explicit, overt and unambiguous opinion that victim was raped, as opposed to an opinion that injuries were consistent with nonconsensual sex, at 653 n. 2, is an improper opinion of guilt, State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336, 348 (1987), State v. Carlson, 80 Wn.App. 116 (1995); 2-1, I.

State v. Hayward, 152 Wn.App. 632, 648-52 (2009)

In assault 2º trial, physician testifies over objection that victim "suffered a 'substantial loss or impairment of the function of a bodily part,'" almost a direct quote from the statutory definition, RCW 9A.04.110(4)(b), defense argues that the testimony is a statement of an ultimate issue and thus an opinion on guilt; held: an expert may testify to an ultimate issue as long as the testimony does not include an opinion as to guilt, Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573, 579 (1993); here, witness did not directly discuss defendant's guilt as it did not include any discussion of defendant or his participation in the injury, State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 380 (1992); II.

State v. Nelson, 152 Wn.App. 755 (2009)

In animal fighting case, RCW 16.52.117, trial court admits testimony of Humane Society investigator who studied the evidence that there was a dog fighting operation on the premises; held: trial court has discretion to admit expert opinion and the extent of the opinion, State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 655 (1990), ER 702, which may embrace the ultimate issue to be decided as long as it is based upon the evidence and experience of the witness; here, the opinion, while on the ultimate issue, was not a comment on defendant's guilt, cf.: State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336, 348 (1987), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008) , State v. Quaale, 177 Wn.App. 603 (2013); III.

State v. Johnson, 152 Wn.App. 924, 929-34 (2009)

In child molestation trial, court admits evidence without an objection that victim described the defendant's penis to defendant's wife who then stated that the allegation was true; held: lay witness' opinion about a defendant's guilt is manifest error, prejudicial, has no probative value other than possibly impeachment on a collateral issue, c.f.: State v. Bass, 18 Wn.App.2d 760 (2021); III.

State v. Aguirre, 168 Wn.2d 350, 359-61 (2010)

Sex crimes investigator testifies in rape case about the general demeanor of victims of sexual assault and domestic violence and describes victim's demeanor during her interview, does not express an opinion; held: in considering testimony as to demeanor, court should consider (1) type of witness, (2) nature of testimony, (3) nature of charges, (4) type of defense and (5) other evidence before jury, State v. Kirkman, 159 Wn.2d 918, 928 (2007), State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753, 759 (2001), if evidence meets these tests court may admit it, as long as witness does not comment on veracity or guilt, distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987), State v. Garrison, 71 Wn.2d 312 (1967), State v. Haga, 8 Wn.App. 481 (1973); 9-0.

State v. Perez-Valdez, 172 Wn.2d 808, 817-19 (2011)

In child rape case, CPS worker testifies that the children knew what the bedroom looked like, defense asks "assuming they are telling you the truth," witness states "[t]hey are telling me the truth," defense moves for mistrial, court denies motion but immediately instructs jury to disregard; held: while the expression of personal belief about veracity of another witness is improper, State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577, 591 (2008), State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753, 759 (2001), State v. Hawkins, 14 Wn.App.2d 182 (2020), trial court's prompt instruction supports a proper exercise of discretion in denying the mistrial; 5-4.

State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App. 654 (2011)

Detective testifies that during interrogation he told defendant he didn't believe his initial statements following which defendant confessed; held: police statement made during an interview regarding officer's belief is an interrogation tactic, not opinion testimony, State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753 (2000), State v. Curtiss, 161 Wn.App. 673, 696-98 (2011), State v. Smiley, 195 Wn.App. 185 (2016), see: State v. Putman, 21 Wn.App.2d 36 (2022); II.

State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 230-33 (2011)

Victim testifies about gang culture she was exposed to, how gang members are elevated in status "by killing somebody," detective testifies to gang evidence in more detail; held: expert gang testimony is admissible if trial court finds it is helpful to jury, State v. Campbell, 78 Wn.App. 813, 821-24 (1995), but see: State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016); where lay witness' qualifications "were fairly debatable," admission of her testimony is not reversible error; III.

State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 781-97 (2012)

Trial court excludes testimony from defense experts regarding false confessions and coercive police interrogation methods and undercover police practices; held: absent evidence of a meaningful correlation between the specific interrogation methods and false confessions, trial court did not abuse its discretion; absent testimony that an undercover operation that failed to meet professional standards resulted in a "high likelihood" that the confessions were false or unreliable, trial court did not abuse discretion; excluding evidence while still permitting defense to present evidence of the circumstances surrounding the confessions does not deprive defendants of right to present a defense, distinguishing Crave v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 683, 90 L.Ed.2d 636 (1986); I.

State v. Blake, 172 Wn.App. 515, 522-29 (2012)

Witness testifies he heard a bang, did not see a gun, defendant was the one person who could have made the bang from his position, defendant looked suspicious so witness concludes defendant was the shooter; held: challenged testimony was a permissible inference, not an opinion, as it did not concern veracity or express a belief of guilt, witness did not carry a special aura of reliability, inference was drawn from facts perceived by the witness, State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577, 591 (2008), State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753 (2001); I.

State v. Smiley, 195 Wn.App. 185, 188-90 (2016)

Detective testifies that during interview of defendant he told defendant that his explanation "didn't make sense to me;" held: a tactical interrogation statement designed to challenge defendant's initial story and elicit responses is not a comment on defendant's veracity, State v. Notaro, 161 Wn.App., 654, 662-65 (2011); 2-1, I.

State v. Morales, 196 Wn.App. 106, 122-25 (2016)

In child molestation case defense child interview expert testifies that the recorded interview "a poor-quality" interview of a child, court precludes expert from testifying that it was not possible for the expert to assess the credibility of the child's allegation due to the poor quality; held: trial court did not abuse it's discretion, having considered ER 702 factors; I.

State v. Richmond, 3 Wn.App.2d 423 (2018)

In homicide/self-defense case defense offers testimony of expert that amount of methamphetamine in victim's blood meant that victim was acting aggressively, excluded by trial court; held: expert had no basis toassess how victim's body may have processed methamphetamine, increased aggression is only one possibility, thus it was speculation as to how it effected victim and was properly excluded, State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367, 385-89 (2007); I.

State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147, 176-78 (2018)

In felony eluding a police trial, defense motion in limine to preclude officer from testifying that defendant drove recklessly or eluded police, officers so testify; held: witness may not testify to opinions of elements of a crime, State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453 (1999), trial court abused discretion in admitting testifmony; 2-1, III.

State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12 (2018)

Detective testifies that he believes defendant is responsible for the murder; held: in context, the testimony was offered to explain the course of the investiagation and how the police arrived at defendant as the suspect, thus was not an improper opinion as to guilt, but see: State v. Quaale, 182 Wn.2d 191 (2014), State v. Montgomery, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008); I.

State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 797-98 (2019)

In murder/arson case trial court excludes some of defense arson expert's testimony ruling that he did not follow the scientific method and did not follow well established scientific methodology; held: ER 702 requires trial court to engage in a gatekeeping role and trial court may exclude testimony it determines does not adhere to reliable methodology, which is reviewed for abuse of discretion; while there is a 6th amendment right to present a defense trial court remains gatekeeper, and ER 702 rulings are based upon abuse of discretion standard, State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 762 (2007), State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641, 648-56 (2017), although appellate court will look to the constitutional issue de novo, State v. Jennings, 14 Wn.App.2d 779, 788 (2020), 199 Wn.2d 53 (2022); 6-3.

State v. Crow, 8 Wn.App.2d 480 (2019)

In possessing stolen firearms case officer testifies (without objection) that a disqualified person will obtain a firearm by stealing it or buying it unlawfully on the street, illegally obtained firearms are typically stolen during burglaries and vehicle prowls, a disqualified person will obtain a firearm by stealing it or buying it unlawfully on the street, illegally obtained firearms are typically stolen during burglaries and vehicle prowls, a person who knows he possesses a stolen firearm commonly discards the gun and flees when approached by a law enforcement officer, the majority of disqualified people apprehended with a firearm have a stolen firearm. most or a high percentage of firearms in the hands of a disqualified person are stolen firearms; held: all inadmissible profile evidence, but see: State v. Avendano-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706 (1995), failure to object was ineffective assistance, could not have been reasonably strategic; 2-1, III.

Vancouver v. Kaufman, 10 Wn.App.2d 747 (2019)

Officer testifies that it is evidence of intoxication when an arrestee refuses field sobriety tests and breath tests; held: opinion regarding guilt is inadmissible, State v. Demery, 144 Wn.2d 753, 759 (2001), Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573, 577 (1993); III.

State v. Caril, 23 Wn.App.2d 416 (2022)

To support diminished capacity defense counsel seeks to inquire of psychologist about contents of competency evaluation that defense expert relied upon, court excludes it, although relevant its probative value was outweighed by unfair prejudice and confusion because of the difference between competency versus capacity to form intent at time of the incident; held: when a party seeks to introduce otherwise inadmissible facts through an expert who has relied on them trial court has discretion to determine the extent to which the expert may relate the inadmissible information to the trier of fact, ER 705; court has discretion to exclude such evidence to prevent a mechanism for admitting otherwise inadmissible evidence, State v. Anderson, 44 Wn.App. 644, 652 (1986); an expert's testimony disclosing inadmissible facts or data to explain the expert's opinion "is not proof of them" as substantive evidence, Grp. Health Co-op. of Puget Sound, Inc. v. State Through Dep't of Revenue, 106 Wn.2d 391, 399 (1986), State v. Wineberg, 74 Wn.2d 372, 381 (1968); exclusion did not violate defendant's right to present a defense as the evidence was only marginally relevant; I.

State v. Fleeks, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2023WL355082 (2023)

Police officer referring to defendant as "cold-hearted" is an improper comment that defendant was not remorseful, effectually directing the jury not to believe defendant's self-defense theory; I.

EVIDENCE
Other Misconduct/ER 404(b)

State v. Tarman, 27 Wn.App. 645 (1980)

Defendant, arrested for DUI, fights with police and is charged with assault 3°, defense offers acquittal on DUI in evidence at assault trial; held: acquittal is inadmissible as irrelevant; might have been admitted if it was offered as ER 404(b) evidence but here, intoxication was an inseparable part of the entire episode (dicta), State v. Kassahun, 78 Wn.App. 938 (1995); II.

State v. Tharp, 96 Wn.2d 591 (1981)

Uncharged collateral crimes produced to show common scheme or plan required to be proved by preponderance, State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 653 (1993), modifying State v. Tharp, 27 Wn.App. 198 (1980), see: State v. Castro, 32 Wn.App. 559 (1982), State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Fernandez, 28 Wn.App. 944 (1981)

Evidence of other unrelated crimes may be admissible if such other crimes are so nearly identical in method as to earmark them as the "handiwork" of the defendant, as long as the evidence is relevant and necessary, to prove an essential element of the crime charged and is not outweighed by its prejudice; remoteness of prior misconduct may affect admissibility, but issue is within discretion of trial court, see: State v. Roth, 75 Wn.App. 808 (1994); I.

State v. Mendez, 29 Wn.App. 610 (1981)

In rape case, defense offered to prove that complainant had previously falsely accused her uncle of rape; held: within trial court's discretion to exclude, see also: State v. Fankhouser, 133 Wn.App. 689 (2006).

State v. Fletcher, 30 Wn.App. 58 (1981)

Evidence showing prior uncharged shoplifts to establish existence of defendant's participation in a professional shoplifting ring within discretion of trial court; court may instruct jury of limited purpose of ER 404(b) evidence even over objection of defendant; I.

State v. Whyde, 30 Wn.App. 162 (1981)

In rape trial, witness who was not the alleged victim testified that on the morning after the rape, defendant tried to kiss her, offered by state to prove defendant's "motives and intent towards the female tenants of his apartment building"; held: inadmissible under the "lustful disposition" exception because it was not connected with or directed toward the victim, State v. Golladay, 78 Wn.2d 121, 142 (1970), cf.: State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809, 818-20 (2017), see: State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022); I.

State v. Ecklund, 30 Wn.App. 313 (1981)

State, in murder trial, introduces testimony of ER 404(b) evidence regarding a prior unrelated shooting incident which court strikes and admonishes jury to disregard; mistrial denied; held: within court's discretion to determine whether corrective instruction cures error; II.

State v. Brown, 30 Wn.App. 344 (1981), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Commodore, 38 Wn.App. 244 (1984)

Approves use of prior prostitution convictions to prove prostitution loitering charge; I.

State v. Funkhouser, 30 Wn.App. 617 (1981)

Where a defendant is acquitted at trial, state may be barred by collateral estoppel from using the evidence adduced at first trial against defendant at a subsequent trial on different charges if the evidence sought to be used in the second trial was necessarily determined in defendant's favor by the previous acquittal; II.

State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381 (1982)

Defendant, charged with indecent liberties of three-year-old granddaughter, claimed victim's perforated hymen was an accident; state calls defendant's 12-year-old son to testify that when he was nine years old, defendant masturbated him and performed anal intercourse; held: properly admitted as ER 404(b) evidence to defeat claim of accident, as prejudice is outweighed by relevance, remoteness goes to weight, not admissibility, but see: State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 883 n.7 (2009); II.

State v. Montague, 31 Wn.App. 688 (1982)

Defendant, charged with rape, is cross-examined regarding investigation of another rape incident with which he was not charged and of which he was cleared; held: prosecutor's questioning was prejudicial mandating a mistrial; III.

State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445 (1982)

Fourteen-year-old felony conviction held admissible where defendant offered testimony of his good character, ER 404(a)(1); accord: State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441 (1991); extensive discussion of "open door" policy and character evidence; III.

State v. Platz, 33 Wn.App. 345 (1982)

In stabbing-homicide case, witness testifies that defendant usually carries a knife; held: relevant, ER 401, to show defendant could have inflicted stab wounds; admissible to show habit, ER 406; I.

State v. Ortiz, 34 Wn.App. 694 (1982)

In murder case, defense presents evidence of defendant's developmental disability to establish defendant's inability to plan crime; in rebuttal, state elicits testimony that defendant had threatened other people, court gives cautionary instruction; held: prejudicial effect of rebuttal evidence outweighed probative value, disapproved cautionary instruction; I, 2-1.

State v. Robtoy, 98 Wn.2d 30 (1982)

In murder trial, court admits evidence of a prior unrelated murder allegedly committed by defendant ten months earlier as ER 404(b) evidence; held: trial court erred in admitting prior murder evidence as it failed to establish a motive or intent; prejudicial effect outweighed any relevance; harmless here.

State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358 (1982)

Prior uncharged rape improperly admitted to prove rape charge; where defendant admits to consensual intercourse, intent is not an issue and evidence of previous criminal activity is not admissible to prove intent; in rape case, evidence of previous sexual misconduct must be weighed very carefully in light of its great potential for prejudice, State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014), State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), cf.: State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Thomas, 35 Wn.App. 598 (1983)

Defendant snatches natural daughter from mother; trial court admits evidence of prior assaults on mother, ER 404(b), to show identification and course of conduct; held: crime of unlawful imprisonment does not require proof of defendant's motive, identification was not in issue, defense did not attempt to discredit testimony of mother as to whether or not she acquiesced, thus prejudicial effect outweighs probative value; harmless here; I.

State v. Kidd, 36 Wn.App. 503 (1983)

Defendant is charged with arson in jail, which he denies; state seeks to admit prior reckless burning conviction, ER 404, because defendant also denied that offense; held: fact that defendant denied prior offense is not probative of his knowledge of present fire, facts and circumstances of the two fires were entirely unrelated; harmless here; I.

State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131 (1983)

In indecent liberties trial, state introduces four-year-old photograph of defendant and family posing nude to corroborate wife's testimony that defendant, at time photograph was taken, told victim-step-daughter to commit oral sex; held: photograph was relevant to corroborate wife's testimony establishing lustful disposition of defendant toward victim, State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809, 818-20 (2017), see: State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022); remoteness is within discretion of trial court, State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 546-48 (1991), State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176 (2003); 7-2.

State v. Harris, 36 Wn.App. 746 (1984)

Defendants charged with two rapes; state argued that they involved common scheme or plan, ER 404(b), since both victims entered vehicles with the defendants and both were driven to locations against their will; dicta: "common scheme or plan" are not "magic passwords whose mere incantation will open wide the courtroom doors to whatever evidence may be offered in their names"; at most, two rapes here show only a propensity to commit rape; I.

State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984)

Evidence of other crimes may be admitted as res gestae or same transaction exception, to complete the story of the crime charged or prove its immediate context, State v. Jordan, 79 Wn.2d 480 (1971), State v. Tharp, 27 Wn.App. 198 (1980), aff'd, 96 Wn.2d 591 (1981), State v. Schaffer, 63 Wn.App. 761, 767-70 (1991), State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 430-32 (2004), see: State v. Grier, 168 Wn.App. 635, 645-51 (2012), but see: State v. Briejer, 172

Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012), State v. Trickler, 106 Wn.App. 727, 733-34 )(2001), see also: State v. Rahier, 37 Wn.App. 571, 574 (1984); I.

State v. Negrin, 37 Wn.App. 516 (1984)

After shooting, defendant learns that victim had previously stated he was going to "cause someone to shoot him," excluded by trial court; held: properly excluded because, at time of shooting, defendant did not know who he was shooting at, thus the statement of decedent was not relevant to defendant's apprehension of danger; but see: State v. Cloud, 7 Wn.App. 211, 217-18 (1972), Evans v. United States, 277 F.2d 354, 1 ALR 3d 566 (D.C. Cir. 1960); I.

State v. Hieb, 39 Wn.App. 273 (1984)

State, in child homicide case, offers evidence of prior injuries to child caused by defendant; held: ER 404(b) permits such evidence to show intent and absence of accident, not for motive or common scheme or identity, State v. Hernandez, 99 Wn.App. 312, 321-23 (1999); I.

State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984)

Prior robbery by defendant held properly admitted in defendant's felony murder trial to prove identity; 9-0.

State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984)

In rape case in which defendant committed oral sex on victims, court permits defendant's ex-girlfriend to testify to their consensual oral sex; held: where evidence is proposed to establish identity under ER 404(b), it must be so unusual and distinctive as to be like a signature, abuse of discretion here, see: State v. Dawkins, 71 Wn.App. 902, 908-10 (1993), State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002), State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010), Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482, 491-501 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 689 (1984)

Defendant is charged with sexual assaults against two children; claimed alibi as to one count, admitted touching but no sexual assault in other count; trial court admits a seven-year-old incident in which defendant grabbed but did not sexually assault a juvenile, ER 404(b); held: trial court must state reason for admitting ER 404(b) evidence and balance probative vs. prejudicial effect on record, see: State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 310-11 (2005); here, lack of accident does not justify admission of prior act as defendant denied all sexual contact; motive does not justify admission, as nonsexual attack in prior act is not relevant to prove sexual motives in present case, State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358 (1982); modifies State v. Jackson, 36 Wn.App. 510 (1984); 8-1.

State v. LeFever, 102 Wn.2d 777 (1984), overruled on other grounds, State v. Brown, 111 Wn.2d 124, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989)

Where identity is an issue and there is inconsistent testimony, evidence of defendant's heroin addiction is not admissible to prove motive to steal, reversing State v. LeFever, 35 Wn.App. 729 (1983); cf.: State v. Suttle, 61 Wn.App. 703 (1991), State v. Matthews, 75 Wn.App. 278 (1994); 8-1.

State v. Fitzgerald, 39 Wn.App. 652 (1985)

In statutory rape trial, state calls rebuttal witness to testify that she too was raped by defendant, to rebut defendant's claim that he touched the victim's vaginal area by accident and that he did not abuse other children; held: testimony was not admissible to rebut defendant's claim that he did not abuse other children, as evidence of prior misconduct is impermissible for impeachment on collateral issue, State v. Goebel, 36 Wn.2d 367, 368-70 (1950); testimony was admissible to show absence of mistake; court should instruct jury with a limiting instruction giving the specific reasons for the admission of the evidence rather than all ER 404(b) reasons; I.

State v. Hall, 40 Wn.App. 162 (1985)

In rape-robbery trial, state offered evidence that defendant committed indecent liberties on other victims to prove identity, ER 404(b); held: to show identity by prior misconduct, there must be a high degree of similarity as to mark it as the handiwork of the accused; harmless here; I.

State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340 (1985)

Trial court admits evidence that eight months prior to homicide defendant hit his wife; held: there is no relationship between proof of defendant's intent the night of the murder and an argument with the victim eight months earlier, ER 404(b); I.

State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 729 (1985)

In murder case, decedent was found partially unclothed, at trial, court admits defendant's statement to a friend, "I'd really like to get" the victim; held: circumstances under which the victim's remains were discovered is sufficient to show a sexual motive for the homicide, permitting defendant's "lustful disposition" toward the victim, ER 404(b), State v. Whalon, 1 Wn.App. 785, 794 (1970), State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809, 818-20 (2017), see: State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022), cf.: State v. Medcalf, 58 Wn.App. 817 (1990); III.

State v. Anderson, 42 Wn.App. 659 (1986)

Defendant, accused of burglarizing a liquor store, alleges voluntary intoxication to show lack of intent; state introduces evidence that defendant had previously burglarized same liquor store to show intent and identity; held: while evidence of prior burglary was admissible to show intent, it was inadmissible to show identity since modus operandi of the two burglaries was not unique, State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984), State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002), cf.: State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010), Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482, 491-501 (2012); harmless, since it was admissible to show intent; I.

State v. Burgess, 43 Wn.App. 253 (1986)

Trial court admits evidence of two prior burglaries to establish identity in burglary case; first prior occurred at night in a dental office to steal drugs, window broken, rubber gloves used, defendant used wastepaper basket plastic liner to collect drugs; second prior was at same clinic as current burglary, at night to steal drugs; held: similarity of offenses was such that method employed was so unique the mere proof that accused committed the prior crime creates a higher probability that accused was the one who committed the act charged, State v. Irving, 24 Wn.App. 370, 374 (1979); evidence that defendant obtained information in a prior crime that aided the commission of the current crime is relevant to prove knowledge and identity; time lapse between offenses affects weight, not admissibility, State v. Bouchard, 31 Wn.App. 381, 386 (1982), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 n.7 (2009); II.

State v. Holmes, 43 Wn.App. 397 (1986)

In attempted burglary trial, court admits two prior theft 2° convictions as proof that defendant intended to commit theft as the underlying crime; held: the only reason the prior convictions were admitted was to prove that since defendant once committed thefts, he intended to do so again, which is directly prohibited by ER 404(b), State v. Wade, 98 Wn.App. 328 (1999); III.

State v. White, 43 Wn.App. 580 (1986)

In possessing stolen credit card case, admission of another stolen card in possession of defendant was improper as it did not prove an essential ingredient of the crime, State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745, 764 (1984); harmless here; I.

State v. Giedd, 43 Wn.App. 787 (1986)

Defendant charged with negligent homicide/reckless and not DUI, RCW 46.61.520(1)(2), at trial, state proves defendant's blood alcohol level was .06; held: use of intoxicants was part of same transaction, proper for jury to decide what effect, if any, his drinking had on his driving, State v. Birch, 183 Wash. 670 (1935), State v. Travis, 1 Wn.App. 971 (1970), State v. Amurri, 51 Wn.App. 262 (1988); I.

State v. Thamert, 45 Wn.App. 143 (1986)

Defendant's confession to bank robbery admits prior bank robberies, trial court admits confession over objection without balancing; held: trial court must balance probative value vs. prejudicial effect on the record; harmless here; I.

State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640 (1986)

Trial court's failure to apply probative/prejudicial balancing test on record, State v. Tharp, 96 Wn.2d 591, 597 (1981) is harmless where appellate court can decide issues of admissibility from the record without the aid of an articulated balancing process, see: State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 310-11 (2005); accord: State v. McGhee, 57 Wn.App. 457 (1990); I.

State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986)

Defendant is charged with two counts of indecent liberties on two juvenile victims six months apart, testifies at trial that he accidently touched both victims, denies sexual contact; held: intent was not a material issue since intent is inherent in the accusation, thus evidence of other misconduct to prove intent is inadmissible; because defendant admitted to nonsexual contact by mistake or accident, the defense of mistake or accident does not require negating, thus evidence of one count was not admissible to prove the other, but see: State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), aff'd, 152 Wn.2d 847 (1995); II.

State v. Terrovona, 105 Wn.2d 632 (1986)

In homicide trial, defendant's probation officer is permitted to testify that defendant had asked him for a gun permit and that defendant believed decedent was skimming profits from an estate; held: P.O.'s testimony was admissible to prove motive, ER 404(b), and P.O.'s position was necessary to establish the relationship between defendant and the probation officer; 9-0.

State v. Smith, 106 Wn.2d 772 (1986)

During rape trial in which three victims were unable to positively identify defendant, trial court admits evidence of three burglaries which defendant committed purportedly to establish identity, ER 404(b), as there were some similarities between the burglaries and the rapes, although trial court did not make a record of balancing prejudice and relevancy; held: prior to admitting prior criminal acts, trial court must, on the record, state purpose for which evidence is admitted and determine relevancy by determining that (1) the purpose for which the evidence is offered is of consequence to the outcome of the action and (2) the evidence tends to make the existence of the identified fact more probable, State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358 (1982), and court must balance probative value against prejudicial effect, State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 310-11 (2005); in doubtful cases, scale should be tipped in favor of defendant, State v. Bennett, 36 Wn.App. 176, 180 (1983), State v. Simon, 64 Wn.App. 948, 964-5, rev'd in part, on other grounds, 120 Wn.2d 196 (1992); to admit evidence of a prior crime to prove identity, method employed in both crimes must be so unique that mere proof defendant committed one crime creates a high probability he also committed the charged offense, State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984); the device used must be so unusual and distinctive as to be like a signature, State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772 (1984); see: State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520 (1989), State v. Colvin, 50 Wn.App. 293 (1988), State v. York, 50 Wn.App. 446 (1988), State v. Jenkins, 53 Wn.App. 228 (1989), State v. Essex, 57 Wn.App. 411 (1990), State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002), State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010), Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482, 491-501 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Kendrick, 47 Wn.App. 620 (1987)

Within court's discretion to admit photographs of defendant's tattoo of a skull being pierced by a needle as victims' heads were penetrated by sharp objects, indicating that the killer had some fascination with striking objects in heads; I.

State v. Sammons, 47 Wn.App. 762 (1987)

Within trial court's discretion to admit defendant's confession of prior sexual misconduct seven years earlier as a party admission, ER 801(d)(2); III.

State v. Bowen, 48 Wn.App. 187 (1987)

Physician is charged with two counts of indecent liberties for touching patients; at trial, two other patients testify about uncharged touchings; held: inadmissible to show motive, as motive means inducement, which is not relevant here; inadmissible to show common scheme or plan, as no showing of a larger criminal design of which the charged crime is only one part, State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014), see: State v. Roth, 75 Wn.App. 808, 820-3 (1994); inadmissible to show modus operandi, as other misconduct was not so distinctive as to be handiwork, State v. Bacotgarcia 59 Wn.App. 815 (1990); inadmissible to show identity, as this was not an issue at trial, State v. Sanford, 128 Wn.App. 280, 285-87 (2005); inadmissible to show lack of accident, as defendant denied touching at all; inadmissible under "doctrine of chances" as that exception only applies to show absence of accident or mistake, see: State v. Stanton, 68 Wn.App. 855 (1993); inadmissible to show intent, as intent was not a material issue, cf.: State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995), State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003); III.

State v. Young, 48 Wn.App. 406 (1987)

Trial court refuses to permit vehicular homicide defendant to prove that on four other occasions, deceased passenger had grabbed steering wheels to force car to swerve; held: ER 404(b) is equally available to a defendant to prove theory of defense; evidence was admissible to prove identity of the person responsible for the accident, that passenger was in control of the vehicle, and that passenger's intentional interference was the proximate cause of the accident; evidence should not have been refused under ER 403 as probative value was not substantially outweighed by prejudicial effect, balance should be in favor of admissibility, State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306 (2017); III.

State v. Myers, 49 Wn.App. 243 (1987)

At custodial interference trial, court admits four prior noncriminal incidents of visitation problems; held: because incidents were noncriminal, court must use extreme caution to avoid prejudice; here, because the evidence was questionably relevant to prove intent, it should have been excluded; II.

State v. Escalona, 49 Wn.App. 251 (1987)

Despite order in limine, assault victim testifies defendant "has a record and stabbed someone," trial court strikes, denies mistrial; held: test for prejudice: (1) seriousness, (2) whether statement was cumulative or properly admitted evidence, and (3) curable by instruction, State v. Weber, 99 Wn.2d 158, 164-5 (1983); here, statement was serious, not cumulative, so prejudicial compared to weakness of state's case, thus reversed, State v. Babcock, 145 Wn.App. 157 (2008), cf.: State v. Essex, 57 Wn.App. 411 (1990), State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 175-80 (2010), see: State v. Condon, 72 Wn.App. 638, 647-50 (1993), State v. Buss, 76 Wn.App. 780, 789-91 (1995), cf.: State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 773-75 (2015), State v. Christian, 18 Wn.App.2d 185 (2021); I.

State v. Neslund, 50 Wn.App. 531 (1988)

While evidence of ownership of firearms unrelated to the crime charged is inadmissible, State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984), evidence that homicide defendant knew how to fire a pistol is admissible; I.

State v. Toennis, 52 Wn.App. 176 (1988)

In child abuse case where defendant admits to striking victim but denies repeated hitting and claims some injuries were accidental, evidence of prior beatings is admissible to prove intent, lack of accident, and to show that victim was in an obviously battered condition which should have put defendant on notice that additional blows could result in grievous bodily harm; must be proved by preponderance; II.

Huddleston v. United States, 99 L.Ed.2d 771 (1988)

At defendant's trial for knowingly possessing and selling stolen videotapes, trial court admits evidence of uncharged acts of selling televisions and appliances at very low prices, Fed. R. Evid. 404(b); held: trial court need not make a preliminary determination that government can prove Rule 404(b) evidence by a preponderance, only that there is "sufficient evidence to support a finding by the jury that the defendant committed the similar act," see: State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019); 9-0.

State v. Cole, 54 Wn.App. 93 (1989)

In assault 2° case, evidence that defendant purchased life insurance on victim is not relevant to establish motive where homicide or attempted homicide is not charged, see: State v. Haley, 39 Wn.App. 164 (1984); 2-1 (dissent on harmless error), II.

State v. Mutchler, 53 Wn.App. 898 (1989)

In assault 1° with intent to commit rape or indecent liberties trial, evidence that defendant followed another woman and stared at her crotch is inadmissible as res gestae as it does not help explain circumstances of the charged assault, distinguishing State v. Tharp, 27 Wn.App. 198 (1980), aff'd, 96 Wn.2d 591 (1981), State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012), see also: State v. Schaffer, 63 Wn.App. 761 (1991), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 61-64 (2006); inadmissible to prove identity as defense offered to stipulate that defendant committed assault and argued no theory inconsistent with this stipulation; it is admissible to prove intent as intent is of consequence to action and evidence makes existence of intent to commit rape more probable; because the probative value of staring at other woman's crotch is not great, its prejudicial effect is minimal; I.

State v. Bradford, 56 Wn.App. 464 (1989)

ER 404(b) applies to evidence of other crimes or acts regardless of whether they occurred before or after the crime for which defendant is being tried; where identity was at issue, evidence that both the instant offense and an out-of-state offense were committed by two black males wearing baseball caps at night in mobile home display lot, suspects drove small blue pickup, used ChannelLock pliers to twist off doorknobs establish sufficient similarities in modus operandi to be relevant; III.

State v. Allen, 57 Wn.App. 134 (1990)

At arrest for indecent liberties, defendant gives false name, trial court admits said testimony; held: giving false name to officer suggests guilty knowledge and thus is relevant, within discretion of trial court, State v. Cartwright, 76 Wn.2d 259, 264 (1969), State v. DeGaston, 5 Wn.2d 73, 78 (1940), see: State v. Chase, 59 Wn.App. 501 (1990); I; .

State v. McGhee, 57 Wn.App. 457 (1990)

Evidence of a defendant's threat against a victim is relevant to establish consciousness of guilt and, here, ties defendant to victim, ER 404(b), probative value outweighs unfair prejudice; I.

State v. Bythrow, 114 Wn.2d 713 (1990)

Defendant's participation in prior robbery is admissible to prove guilty knowledge in robbery trial where defendant testifies he did not know co-defendant would commit the crime; 9-0.

State v. Lynch, 58 Wn.App. 83 (1990)

Admission of out-of-state robberies in which elements in common with charged offenses are wearing of brown wig, tampering with deposit box prior to victim's approach, each committed on a late Saturday afternoon, use of a red 10-speed bicycle, gun in waistband, obtaining car keys of victims establish relevance to prove identity per modus operandi exception, not proper to admit to prove common scheme or plan, cf.: State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995); while evidence was extremely prejudicial to defendant, probative value outweighed prejudicial effect; "[i]t may have been preferable to keep out the evidence until the full strength of the state's case was revealed at trial," but since defense did not object to order of presentation of evidence, no error; I.

State v. Gould, 58 Wn.App. 175 (1990)

Where the grant of a continuance might not provide adequate relief because unfair prejudice would nonetheless result, ER 403 requires the trial court to weigh that risk in deciding whether the evidence should be admitted; "unfair prejudice" is that which is more likely to arouse an emotional response than a rational decision by the jury; it requires more than testimony which is simply adverse to the opposing party; I.

State v. Heath, 58 Wn.App. 320 (1990)

In kidnapping case, trial court admits evidence of a subsequent assault, which occurred after kidnap victim was released, as "res gestae", absence of mistake and intent; held: under res gestae theory, the collateral act should only be admitted to explain parts of the story that would otherwise have remained unexplained, State v. Mutchler, 53 Wn.App. 898, 902 (1989), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 61-64 (2006) "if it is so connected in time, place and circumstances or means employed that proof of such other misconduct is necessary for a complete description of the crime charged," and only as much of the collateral act should be admitted as is necessary to clarify the evidence relating to the charged crime, State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012); since offense was complete, defendant's state of mind at the time of assault was irrelevant, State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 430-32 (2004); I.

State v. Eastabrook, 58 Wn.App. 805 (1990)

Rape and burglary counts are not "cross-admissible" to establish identity where (1) apartments entered were occupied by lone females gone during late evening or early morning hours, (2) clothing disrupted in each apartment, (3) suspect had similar physical characteristics, (4) rapist wore ring similar to one found in defendant's apartment after burglary, (5) rapist wore ski mask, similar ski mask with defendant when detained following burglary, (6) rapist had a knife, knife found near detained burglary defendant, and (7) rapist took a distinctive towel found in defendant's home; II.

State v. Medcalf, 58 Wn.App. 817 (1990)

In statutory rape case, court admits officer's testimony that he observed X-rated videotapes in defendant's home; held: evidence showing lustful disposition should be admitted in a sex offense case only when it tends to show such lustful inclination toward the victim, State v. Sutherby, 165 Wn.2d 870, 886 (2009), see: State v. Gonzales, 1 Wn.App.2d 809, 818-20 (2017), State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022), distinguishing State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131, 134 (1983), State v. Bernson, 40 Wn.App. 729, 737-38 (1985); II.

State v. Salazar, 59 Wn.App. 202 (1990)

In drug trial, court permits state to elicit evidence that drugs were seized pursuant to a warrant; held: evidence was relevant to avoid jury nullification, thus no error in light of limiting instruction; I.

State v. Chase, 59 Wn.App. 501 (1990)

Evidence that defendant gave a false name at arrest is not admissible to show that defendant, being one who would lie, was of bad character and thus more likely to have committed the crime charged, is admissible to show consciousness of guilt, State v. Allen, 57 Wn.App. 134, 143-44 (1990); II.

State v. Bacotgarcia, 59 Wn.App. 815 (1990)

In promoting prostitution case, state calls witness who testifies that she had also acted as defendant's prostitute, ER 404(b); Court of Appeals states that decision to admit witness's testimony was "questionable," differences in mode established that evidence did not qualify as a "signature crime," State v. Smith, 106 Wn.2d 772, 778 (1986), State v. Bowen, 48 Wn.App. 187 (1987) but, because trial court did not abuse its discretion in light of State v. Bennett, 36 Wn.App. 176 (1983), State v. Hardy, 37 Wn.App. 463 (1984), State v. York, 50 Wn.App. 446 (1987), affirmed; see: State v. Dawkins, 71 Wn.App. 902, 908-10 (1993); I.

State v. Longuskie, 59 Wn.App. 838 (1990)

In child molestation case, where defendant testifies to sexual dysfunction over 30 years, evidence of sexual contact with third parties nine years earlier is not too remote; III.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

While mere possession of legal guns, unrelated to the crime charged, is constitutionally protected and inadmissible, State v. Rupe, 101 Wn.2d 664 (1984), if the guns have probative value, its use is not prohibited simply because constitutional provisions may also be implicated, State v. Kendrick, 47 Wn.App. 620, 627 (1987), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 835-36 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Perez-Arellano, 60 Wn.App. 781 (1991)

Police testimony that they were watching defendant because he was in a "high narcotic area" is relevant, not unduly prejudicial and properly admitted to explain to jury why police were observing a particular area to explain the circumstances of an arrest, distinguishing State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277, 280-81 (1990); I.

State v. Wilson, 60 Wn.App. 887 (1991)

In statutory rape case, physical assaults not related to the rape were admissible to rebut evidence that the sexual abuse did not occur to establish why victim did not report abuse or leave, State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 310-11 (2005), State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006), State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), but see: State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014); II.

State v. Suttle, 61 Wn.App. 703 (1991)

In robbery case, defense calls witness who testifies that he committed the robbery with a third party, not defendant; state proves that defendant escaped from work release with the witness; held: once defense put on evidence, escape was admissible to prove motive, i.e., defendant needed money to get out of Washington to avoid arrest for escape, and to prove identity, State v. Pam, 98 Wn.2d 748, 760 (1983), ER 404(b); I.

State v. Billups, 62 Wn.App. 122 (1991)

In attempted kidnap trial in which defendant is accused of leaning out of van and enticing juveniles into van, another juvenile testifies that a month earlier, defendant leaned out of van and greeted her; held: because statement did not display an intent to abduct and lacked any demonstration of criminal propensity, error to admit it to prove intent, ER 404(b); I.

State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 872 (1991)

Police testify that murder defendant told them when he smoked marijuana and drank beer he becomes a different person and loses control, trial court admits evidence of defendant's marijuana use; held: marijuana use pertained to intent, preparation, opportunity and provided the jury a possible explanation for commission of the crime, thus admissible, ER 404(b).

State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441 (1991), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Adel, 136 Wn.2d 629 (1998)

In drug case, defendant testifies he is not "the kind of a guy who deals cocaine," that he hates cocaine, state introduces evidence in rebuttal that detective saw informant buy cocaine from defendant 15 months after the charged incident; held: by relating personal history supportive of good character, defendant opened door to character evidence rebutting same, ER 404(a)(1), State v. Brush, 32 Wn.App. 445, 450-1 (1982), State v. Renneberg, 83 Wn.App. 735 (1994), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 64-65 (2006), ER 404(b) is inapplicable, court properly weighed evidence, ER 403; I.

State v. Schaffer, 63 Wn.App. 761 (1991)

In trial for malicious mischief to tires, evidence that same evening defendant was involved in a wave of activity within a short span of time that began with knocking off mailboxes and escalated to slashing tires was admissible as res gestae to complete story of crime on trial by proving its immediate context of happenings near in time and place, State v. Tharp, 27 Wn.App. 198 (1980), aff'd, 96 Wn.2d 591 (1981), State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984), State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 430-32 (2004), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 61-64

(2006), distinguishing State v. Mutchler, 53 Wn.App. 898, 902 (1989), cf.: State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012); I.

Estelle v. McGuire, 116 L.Ed.2d 385 (1991)

In child-homicide, evidence that child had been previously beaten, although not linked to the accused, was admissible to show intent even though defense did not allege accident; 8-0.

State v. Simon, 64 Wn.App. 948, rev'd in part, on other grounds, 120 Wn.2d 196 (1992)

In promoting prostitution case, defendant's threats to victim after charging period does not tend to make any fact of consequence more or less probable, State v. Smith, 106 Wn.2d 772, 776 (1986), thus was irrelevant as to whether victim felt threatened during charging period; even if relevant, "prejudicial effect outweighs any probative value," court erred in admitting evidence under ER 404(b); I.

State v. Sanders, 66 Wn.App. 878 (1992)

Evidence of defendant's attempt to induce rape complainant to absent self from jurisdiction is consistent with guilty knowledge, akin to flight, State v. Etheridge, 74 Wn.2d 102, 113 (1968), State v. Cobb, 22 Wn.App. 221, 224 (1978), State v. Jefferson, 11 Wn.App. 566, 570 (1974), cf.: State v. Freeburg, 105 Wn.App. 492, 497-502 (2001), and is thus admissible, ER 404(b); I.

State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631 (1993)

Trial court's limitation of cross-examination of state's witness regarding his drug dealing after defendant's crime was committed was within scope of court discretion as the allegations of drug dealing were not relevant to his credibility as a witness, ER 608(b); extrinsic evidence of drug dealing was also inadmissible to attack credibility, ER 608(b), State v. Stockton, 91 Wn.App. 35 (1998), State v. Cochran, 102 Wn.App. 480, 486-87 (2000); 9-0.

State v. Thomas, 68 Wn.App. 268 (1992)

Evidence of defendant's apparent selling of drugs prior to arrest and seizure of drugs is relevant and admissible to prove defendant's intent to deliver; I.

State v. Donald, 68 Wn.App. 543 (1993)

In attempting to obtain drugs by fraud case, RCW 69.50.403(a)(3), testimony by doctor that defendant had previously been at the emergency room, using a different name to obtain drugs, is admissible to show the name used by defendant was false and guilty knowledge, intent and fraud, State v. Thompson, 95 Wn.2d 888, 890 (1981); III.

State v. Stanton, 68 Wn.App. 855 (1993)

At theft and UIBC trial of a contractor, court admits prior transaction with third parties establishing that defendant failed to complete jobs forcing creditors to recover against contractor's bond, and a subsequent dispute in which defendant failed to pay for materials; held: while evidence of financial trouble may be admissible, ER 401, to prove that contractor acted with criminal intent to deprive or defraud, the earlier disputes were for relatively small amounts of money more than a year before the charged transaction, thus they had little, if any, probative value on the issue of whether defendant thought he was in financial trouble, but had great potential to show that defendant was generally a deadbeat, which gives rise to unfair prejudice outweighing slight probative value, ER 403; because common scheme or plan is not an element of the crime charged, trial court erred in admitting subsequent dispute as an ultimate fact, and failed to explain what element it thought common scheme or plan proved as an intermediate or evidentiary fact; doctrine of chances, i.e., odds against an innocent person being repeatedly involved in similar suspicious circumstances increase with each incident, State v. Bowen, 48 Wn.App. 187, 194 (1987), State v. Myers, 49 Wn.App. 243, 248 n. 4 (1987), is not a basis for admissibility absent at least proof by a preponderance of criminal intent with respect to each prior bad act; II.

State v. Halstien, 122 Wn.2d 109, 125-7 (1993)

In trial for burglary with sexual motivation, RCW 13.40.135, trial court admits prior conversations between respondent and complainant regarding whether complainant had to dress to answer door; held: prior contacts did constitute prior "acts," ER 404(b), albeit not misconduct, relevant to proving motive or intent, see: State v. Everybodytalksabout, 145 Wn.2d 456 (2002); trial court should have balanced on the record, harmless here; overrules, in part, sub silentio, State v. Halstien, 65 Wn.App. 845 (1992); 8-0.

State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995), infra.

Defendant-paramedic is charged with serving a date a drink containing an unknown drug and raping her after she passes out; at trial, court admits evidence of other women who had been drugged and raped by defendant in a similar manner; held: ER 404(b) common scheme or plan analysis: (1) are the crimes at issue of the sort that necessarily require a relatively high degree of pre-planning and, if so, will the planning which served the defendant well at an earlier time suffice for the execution of a later crime?, (2) is there evidence of a concentrated, repetitive effort to orchestrate events or reduce likelihood of detection and, if so, is it logical to conclude that these orchestrations may be part of a systematic scheme?, (3) is there evidence that defendant repetitively utilized a particular skill or unusual technique?, (4) are there sufficient features in common from which a rational trier of fact could determine that the crimes at issue are all of the same class and are the work of a common scheme?; applying doctrine of chances, here the evidence reached such a point that the recurrence of the acts can not be viewed as coincidental, State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010); defendant's admission of sexual contact does not remove the knowledge element, distinguishing State v. Ramirez, 46 Wn.App. 223 (1986), State v. Salterelli, 98 Wn.2d 358 (1982); see also: State v. Roth, 75 Wn.App. 808, 820-3 (1994), State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002), Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482, 491-501 (2012), State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014); 2-1, I.

State v. Dawkins, 71 Wn.App. 902, 908-10 (1993)

In child sex abuse case, where identity is not an issue, evidence of uncharged incidents of abuse to establish "lustful disposition" of defendant toward victim, while relevant, State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 547 (1991), State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131, 133-4 (1983), can properly be excluded by trial court due to the great prejudicial effect, ER 404(b), State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772, 781 (1984), State v. Bacotgarcia, 59 Wn.App. 815, 819 (1990), cf.: State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176 (2003), see: State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022); II.

State v. Anderson, 72 Wn.App. 453, 460-3 (1994)

Defendant assaults a guard in escaping from confinement, trial court admits prior felonies; held: trier of fact may permissibly infer that a defendant incarcerated on several serious felonies would have a greater motive and intent to cause serious bodily injury while attempting to escape than a defendant incarcerated on a single felony, thus priors were properly admitted, ER 404(b); I.

State v. Condon, 72 Wn.App. 638, 647-50 (1993)

In spite of order in limine, witness thrice states that defendant was in jail, mistrial denied, jury instructed; held: improprieties did not indicate a propensity to commit the crime in question, or even the reason defendant was in jail, evidence against defendant was strong, thus no abuse of discretion in denying mistrial, State v. Buss, 76 Wn.App. 760, 789-91 (1995), State v. Gamble, 168 Wn.2d 161, 175-80 (2010), State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 773-75 (2015), State v. Christian, 18 Wn.App.2d 185 (2021), distinguishing State v. Escalona, 49 Wn.App. 251, 254 (1987), State v. Wilburn, 51 Wn.App. 827, 832 (1988); I.

State v. Herzog, 73 Wn.App. 34 (1994)

Evidence that an accused committed an uncharged crime is relevant to identity if it involves (1) general propensity (accused has a propensity to commit crimes), (2) specific propensity (same type of crime), or (3) signature or modus operandi crimes; when uncharged crime is relevant solely because of perpetrator's propensities, it must be excluded, ER 404(a), 404(b) (first sentence); when evidence of uncharged crime is relevant independent of propensities (here, to show identity), second sentence of ER 404(b) applies, court must balance on the record probative value vs. unfair prejudice, see: State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 310-11 (2005); II.

State v. McBride, 74 Wn.App. 460, 463-4 (1994)

In drug delivery trial, officer's observations of defendant engaging in what appeared to be drug deals just prior to the delivery in question is admissible, within discretion of trial court, to show jury whole sequence of events, what attracted police to defendant; III.

State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 66-8 (1994)

Evidence was properly cross-admissible in consolidated murder counts where each count involved a victim killed by violent means who was then sexually assaulted and posed, naked, with the aid of props, all within a few weeks in a small geographic area, State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984), State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010), cf.: State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Matthews, 75 Wn.App. 278 (1994)

In murder case in which robbery is motive, evidence of defendant's recent bankruptcy and living beyond his means is admissible to show financial motive; bankruptcy itself, or mere poverty, should not be admitted to show motive, State v. Jones, 93 Wn.App. 166, 172-76 (1998), State v. Kennard, 101 Wn.App. 533, 540-43 (2000); I.

State v. Lane, 125 Wn.2d 825, 831-5 (1995),

Trial court admits a series of uncharged crimes committed within two days of the charged offenses as res gestae, or same transaction exception, ER 404(b), cf.: State v. Grier, 168 Wn.App. 635, 645-51 (2012); held: trial court found the evidence relevant because of its proximity in time and place to the crimes charged, State v. Tharp, 27 Wn.App. 198, 205-56 (1980), aff'd, 96 Wn.2d 591, 594 (1981), State v. Thompson, 47 Wn.App. 1, 10-12 (1987), State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 569-76 (1997), State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780, 790 (1998), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 61-65 (2006), State v. Grier, supra. at 648, and because it showed the degree of participation of the various defendants and their interaction and accountability, affirmed within trial court's discretion, State v. Goebel, 36 Wn.2d 367 (1950); once court finds res gestae evidence relevant for a purpose other than showing propensity and not unduly prejudicial, it is admissible if proved by a preponderance with no additional requirement that the evidence be relevant for an additional purpose, but see: State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012); 7-2.

State v. Roth, 75 Wn.App. 808, 812-23 (1994)

Defendant is charged with murder of his wife for insurance proceeds, defense is accidental death, court admits circumstantial evidence that defendant had killed his first wife, which appeared to have been an accident; held: while the evidence of the prior homicide was not sufficiently similar to suffice as modus operandi evidence, it was admissible to prove lack of accident, State v. Fernandez, 28 Wn.App. 944, 953 (1981), State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640, 646 (1986), State v. Olsen, 175 Wn.App. 269, 282 (2013), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 468 (2014), and to prove a scheme or plan, State v. Bowen, 48 Wn.App. 187, 192 (1987), State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302, 313-20, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995); where trial court determines that prior misconduct is proved by preponderance, State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 653 (1993), the finding will be affirmed if supported by substantial evidence; I.

State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995)

Paramedic is charged with serving a date a drink containing an unknown drug and raping her after she passes out; at trial, court admits evidence of four other women who had been drugged and raped by defendant in a similar manner; held: to admit evidence of other crimes or wrongs, trial court must (1) identify the purpose for which the evidence is sought to be introduced, (2) determine whether evidence is relevant to prove an element, and (3) weigh probative value against prejudicial effect, at 853; "when a defendant's previous conduct bears such similarity in significant respects to his conduct in connection with the crime charged as naturally to be explained as caused by a general plan, the similarity is not merely coincidental but indicates that the conduct was directed by design," at 860; the prior conduct must demonstrate not merely similarity in results but such common features that the various acts are naturally to be explained as caused by a general plan of which the crime charged and the prior misconduct are the individual manifestations, State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003), State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010), State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014), see: State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002), Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482, 491-501 (2012); here, evidence was relevant to prove that the conduct actually occurred rather than a fabrication or mistake by the victim, as defense contended, at 862, State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 823-27 (2000); affirms State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993); see also: State v. Krause, 82 Wn.App. 688 (1996); 9-0.

State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244 (1995)

In spousal murder case, prior assaults and quarrels are admissible to show motive where "of consequence to the action to justify its admission," particularly where only circumstantial proof of guilt exists, at 260; "evidence of quarrels between the victim and defendant preceding a crime, and evidence of threats by the defendant, are probative upon the question of defendant's intent," State v. Parr, 93 Wn.2d 95, 102 (1980), State v. Olsen, 175 Wn.App. 269 (2013), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 468 (2014), if necessary to prove a material issue, i.e., when necessary to prove intent when intent is at issue or when proof of the doing of the charged act does not itself conclusively establish intent, at 262, State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 698-703 (1997), State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780, 787-90 (1998), see: State v. Denham, 197 Wn.2d 759 (2021), res gestae evidence is admissible when necessary for the jury to complete the story of the crime on trial by proving its immediate context of happenings near in time and place, where each act is a piece in the mosaic necessarily admitted in order that a complete picture be depicted for the jury, State v. Tharp, 27 Wn.App. 198, 204 (1980), aff'd, 96 Wn.2d 591, 594 (1981), State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 569-76 (1997), State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 430-32 (2004), State v. Warren, 134 Wn.App. 44, 61-65 (2006) cf.: State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012); 9-0.

State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 648-51 (1995)

In murder 1° case, state offers prior assault conviction, ER 404(b), for which defendant had not yet been sentenced, as evidence of premeditation, under theory that defendant killed robbery victim to avoid enhanced sentence on assault; held: existence of motive to conceal is relevant to premeditation, distinguishing State v. Tharp, 96 Wn.2d 591, 595 (1981), trial court properly balanced, ER 403, thus within trial court's discretion; 9-0.

State v. Campbell, 78 Wn.App. 813, 821-24 (1995)

In homicide case where state presents evidence that killings were result of rival gang activity and victims had intruded on defendant's drug selling turf, trial court's admission of defendant's gang membership through lay witnesses, Christensen v. Munsen, 123 Wn.2d 234, 241 (1994), police officers' "gang expert" testimony, was proper where court exercised discretion after balancing, State v. Dennison, 115 Wn.2d 609, 628 (1990), State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66, 81-89 (2009), State v. Saenz, 156 Wn.App. 866, 872-74 (2010), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 167 (2012), State v. Rodriguez, 163 Wn.App. 215, 230-33 (2011), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714 (2012), see: State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688 (2008), cf.: State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 574-80 (2009), State v. Scott, 151 Wn.App. 520 (2009), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 454-61 (2012), but see: State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016); II.

State v. Binkin, 79 Wn.App. 284 (1995) , overruled, on other grounds, State v. Kilgore, 147 Wn.2d 288 (2002)

In harassment case, prior threats are highly probative of objective reasonableness of victim's fear, State v. Alvarez, 74 Wn.App. 250, 261, aff'd, 128 Wn.2d 1 (1995), State v. Ragin, 94 Wn.App. 407 (1999), State v. Barragan, 102 Wn.App. 754, 758-60 (2000), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295 (2014); I.

State v. Krause, 82 Wn.App. 688 (1996)

In child molestation case, court admits testimony of psychologist to whom defendant admitted, ten years earlier, to grooming and molesting children; held: evidence was more than mere predisposition to molest but that defendant had a systematic scheme for getting himself in a position where he had access to children, State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 858-9 (1995), thus establishing a pattern sufficient to prove a plan, State v. Sexsmith, 138 Wn.App. 497 (2007), State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 885-92 (2009), State v. Scherner, 153 Wn.App. 621, 656-59 (2009); because defendant denied the acts, the prior misconduct was admissible to disprove the defense that victim fabricated, State v. Lough, supra, at 862; trial court's weighing probative vs. prejudice was not an abuse of discretion, as defendant consistently followed the same pattern of abuse, need in sex abuse case is higher due to secrecy, vulnerability of victims, absence of physical proof of crime, general lack of confidence in ability of jury to assess credibility of child witnesses, State v. Lough, supra, at 859, State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003); I.

State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996)

In felony no contact order violation case, RCW 10.99.040(4), -.050(2), trial court admits prior assault conviction by defendant on victim pursuant to ER 609, state cross-appeals; held: prior assaults on domestic violence victim by same defendant are admissible pursuant to ER 404(b) as relevant to assess victim's credibility to explain why she minimized the incident, State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), but see: State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006), see: State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), as domestic violence victims fear retaliation by abusers, mistrust the judicial system, remain with abusers, so that jury will "evaluate credibility with full knowledge of the dynamics of a relationship marked by domestic violence and the effect such a relationship has on the victim," at 108, within discretion of trial court, see: State v. Wilson, 60 Wn.App. 887 (1991), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 310-11 (2005), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017); I.

Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997)

In federal felon in possession of firearm trial, defense offers to stipulate that defendant was convicted of a felony, moves to exclude name of the crime, government declines to stipulate, trial court admits the name of the prior felony to prove the prior crime element; held: under Fed. R. Evid. 403 analysis, unfair prejudice of nature of prior conviction outweighs probative value, thus trial court abused discretion in not excluding the nature of the prior, even though the evidence was relevant; accord: State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54, 61-3 (1998), State v. Rivera, 95 Wn.App. 132 (1999), cf.: State v. Gladden, 116 Wn.App. 561 (2003), State v. Taylor, 193 Wn.2d 691 (2019), see also: State v. Wolf, 134 Wn.App. 196 (2006), State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708 (2014); 5-4.

State v. Perrett, 86 Wn.App. 312, 319-20 (1997)

In assault case, court admits defendant's statement to police that he wouldn't give up his gun because "the last time the sheriff took his guns, he didn't get them back" as evidence of defendant's uncooperative attitude on arrest; held: defendant's demeanor on arrrest was not relevant to any element of the crime charged, thus defendant's statement was abuse of discretion, as it introduced irrelevant acts of misconduct, State v. Bowen, 48 Wn.App. 187, 196 (1987), see also: State v. Sanford, 128 Wn.App. 280 (2005); II.

State v. Daniels, 87 Wn.App. 149 (1997)

In reckless assault of a child 2°, evidence of uncharged abuse was properly admitted to prove that defendant's conduct was reckless, since it showed he should have learned that discipline of a young child can cause injury, that defendant intentionally disciplined the child excessively, and that defendant knew of the risk of harm; I.

State v. Kimp, 87 Wn.App. 281 (1997)

Where trial court rules in limine that state may impeach defendant's testimony with specific acts of misconduct, ER 608(b)(1), the issue is not preserved for appeal unless defendant actually testifies at trial, State v. Brown, 113 Wn.2d 520, 540 (1989); I.

State v. Norlin, 134 Wn.2d 570 (1998)

Evidence of other wrongful acts by a defendant may be admitted only if the state first establishes a connection between the defendant and those acts by a preponderance; in child abuse case, evidence of a child's prior injuries is admissible under ER 404(b) only if it is connected to the defendant, overruling State v. Mercer, 34 Wn.App. 654 (1983); here, evidence that prior injuries occurred when defendant was alone with child, plus nature of injuries is circumstantially sufficient to connect defendant to prior injuries by a preponderance; 9-0.

State v. Baker, 89 Wn.App. 726 (1997)

Defendant, accused of rubbing eight-year-old's back and, after she fell asleep, molesting her through her clothes, court admits testimony of defendant's adult daughter that when she was a child, defendant would sleep in bed with her, rub her back and, when she awoke, her underwear was off and his hand was between her legs; held: trial court's determination that prior misconduct was proved by preponderance is supported by substantial evidence, as credibility issues are for trial court, State v. Benn, 120 Wn.2d 631, 653 (1993), evidence was markedly similar against similar victim under similar circumstances, indicating design, not coincidence, State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 860 (1995), State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003), State v. Scherner, 153 Wn.App. 621, 656-59 (2009), remoteness is a factor, but trial court's decision to admit was not an abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780 (1998)

In murder trial, court admits evidence that earlier defendant had pointed a gun at victim and was laughed at and told he was too much of a baby to shoot, plus defendant's gang affiliation; held: pointing gun is admissible to prove motive, State v. Bowen, 48 Wn.App. 187, 191 (1987), State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244, 260 (1995), gang membership is admissible as testimony established that killing someone heightened a gang member's status, proving motive and premeditation, State v. Saenz, 156 Wn.App. 866, 872-74 (2009), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 167 (2012), cf.: State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688 (2008), State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 574-83 (2009), State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66, 81-89 (2009), State v. Scott, 151 Wn.App. 520 (2009), see: State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714 (2012); evidence of another robbery, auto theft and discharging firearm were admissible as res gestae, to establish an escalating chain of events of increasingly serious crimes, permitting jury to get whole picture out of a senseless crime, at 790, State v. Lane, 125 Wn.2d 825, 834-5 (1995) cf.: State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012); II.

State v. Stockton, 91 Wn.App. 35 (1998)

In VUFA case with necessity defense, defendant testifies on direct that he was approached by strangers, and believed that they wanted to sell him drugs, on cross prosecutor, over objection, elicits defendant had previously bought drugs; held: passing reference to a prohibited topic does not open door for cross-examination about prior misconduct, State v. Avendano-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706, 715 (1995), State v. Jones, 144 Wn.App. 284, 297-99 (2008), State v. Harstad, 153 Wn.App. 10, 28-29 (2009), cf.: State v. Gallagher, 112 Wn.App. 601, 609-10 (2002), see: State v. Rushworth, 12 Wn.App.2d 466 (2020), as it is equally likely that someone who had never purchased drugs would understand an approach described by defendant to involve drugs; had defendant denied any knowledge about drugs, then he could have been impeached with prior drug use, did not happen here; I.

State v. Wade, 92 Wn.App. 885 (1998), reversed on procedural grounds, 138 Wn.2d 460 (1999)

In VUCSA case, trial court admits evidence of respondent's prior drug sales to prove intent to deliver; held: when state "offers evidence of prior acts to demonstrate intent, there must be a logical theory, other than propensity, demonstrating how the prior acts connect to the intent required to commit the charged offense," at 891, State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358, 364 (1982), State v. Holmes, 43 Wn.App. 397 (1986); II.

State v. Jones, 93 Wn.App. 166, 172-76 (1998)

At arrest after drug deal, defendant is found with $442 cash, state offers evidence from Department of Employment Security that defendant had no reported income; held: state is entitled to anticipate a defense that defendant acquired cash from a lawful source, trial court has discretion to admit evidence of defendant's unemployment where it properly balances probative value vs. unfair prejudice, State v. Matthews, 75 Wn.App. 278 (1994), although such evidence should be admitted with caution to avoid inference that poor people are more likely to sell drugs; I.

State v. Finch, 137 Wn.2d 792, 821-24 (1999)

Hostile declarations about a murder victim, even though expressed subsequent to the crime, may be admitted to show that the hostility existed at the time of the crime, where relevant to show motive or intent, State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App.2d 133 (2020); 7-2.

State v. Ragin, 94 Wn.App. 407 (1999)

In felony harassment case, RCW 9A.46.020, trial court admits evidence that defendant had informed victim some months before the offense that he had been convicted of robbery, had been involved in domestic violence, suffered from episodic rages, two weeks before offense defendant said he had guns, bombs and could waste people; held: trial court exercised proper discretion in admitting prior acts, ER 404(b), State v. Binkin, 79 Wn.App. 284 (1995), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Kilgore, 147 Wn.2d 288 (2002), State v. Alvarez, 74 Wn.App. 250, 261, aff'd, 128 Wn.2d 1 (1995), as "reasonable fear that threat will be carried out" is an element of harassment, State v. Barragan, 102 Wn.App. 754, 758-60 (2000), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295 (2014), limiting instruction was given, state's argument contained a thorough balancing of prejudice vs. probative value which was assumedly adopted by the trial court although "a more explicit analysis from the court would have been preferable," at 413 n.12; I.

State v. Burkins, 94 Wn.App. 677, 686-91 (1999)

In murder case, defendant states to police that he smoked marijuana with victim, killed her and pinched her, police find body with rope; court admits evidence of rape of another woman, of which defendant had previously been convicted, in which rape victim testifies that they smoked marijuana, defendant tied her hands, pinched her, threatened to kill her if she did not submit, state's theory is that rape victim lived because she submitted, murder victim was killed because she did not; held: trial court properly exercised discretion in admitting other misconduct evidence, ER 404(b), to establish common scheme under doctrine of chances, State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302, 321-33, aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995), State v. Krause, 82 Wn.App. 688, 693-94 (1996), State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003); I.

State v. Wade, 98 Wn.App. 328, 333-34 (1999)

In VUCSA case, trial court admits evidence of respondent's prior drug sales to prove intent to deliver; held: when state "offers evidence of prior acts to demonstrate intent, there must be a logical theory, other than propensity, demonstrating how the prior acts connect to the intent required to commit the charged offense," at 891, State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358, 364 (1982), State v. Holmes, 43 Wn.App. 397 (1986); II.

State v. Hernandez, 99 Wn.App. 312, 321-23 (1999)

In murder case where defendant claims death was an accident and thus defendant had no intent to assault or kill his girlfriend, evidence of defendant's prior assaults on victim are relevant to rebut claim of accident and to establish an intentional killing, State v. Hieb, 39 Wn.App. 273 (1984), State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640 (1986), State v. Bell, 10 Wn.App. 957, 961 (1974), State v. Olsen, 175 Wn.App. 269, 282 (2013), affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 468 (2014); I.

State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 823-27 (2000)

Defendant molests young girl after playing "truth or dare," trial court admits prior instances of defendant attempting to molest after playing "truth or dare"; held: unique use of "truth or dare" tended to show defendant's design to molest, State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 855 (1995), which is atypical conduct, but see: State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003); III.

State v. Pogue, 104 Wn.App. 981 (2001)

Defendant testifies that he did not know the cocaine was in the car he was driving, and that it was planted by the police, trial court allows state to inquire of defendant if he has possessed cocaine in the past to demonstrate his knowledge about cocaine; held: where only relevancy of the prior misconduct is to show propensity, State v. Wade, 98 Wn.App. 238 (1999), then the evidence is inadmissible; defendant did not claim he didn't recognize the substance, thus his knowledge about cocaine was solely to prove propensity, distinguishing State v. Weiss, 73 Wn.2d 372 (1968), State v. Hall, 41 Wn.2d 446 (1952); I.

State v. Freeburg, 105 Wn.App. 492, 497-502 (2001)

In 1994 homicide with firearm case, trial court admits evidence that at defendant's 1997 arrest, he possessed a firearm, as evidence akin to flight; held: while flight is admissible as circumstantial evidence of guilt, State v. Nichols, 5 Wn.App. 657, 660 (1971) it is marginally probative, State v. Jefferson, 11 Wn.App. 566, 571 (1974), State v. McDaniel, 155 Wn.App. 829, 853-55 (2010), State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021), and possession of a weapon, by itself, is not indicative of consciousness of guilt; I.

State v. Trickler, 106 Wn.App. 727, 731-35 (2001)

At trial on possession of stolen credit card case, trial court allows state to offer evidence of other stolen property in defendant's possession when credit card was found under res gestae theory and for jury to hear how police discovered the stolen credit card; held: abuse of discretion as evidence was more prejudicial than probative, State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012); 2-1, III.

State v. Prestegard, 108 Wn.App. 14 (2001)

In failure to register as sex offender case, court declines to admit testimony of clerks that sheriff's office routinely lost court documents and therefore lost defendant's registration; held: evidence of the routine practice of an organization, ER 406, is admissible without foundational requirements necessary for establishing a person's habit; II.

State v. Everybodytalksabout, 145 Wn.2d 456 (2002)

In murder case based upon accomplice liability, detective testifies that he has seen defendant and co-defendant on numerous occasions, defendant was the leader and more assertive of the two; held: prior acts, even if not misconduct, are inadmissible to show character or to prove that the person acted in conformance on a particular occasion, ER 404(b), State v. Halstien, 122 Wn.2d 109, 126 (1993), distinguishing State v. Brown, 132 Wn.2d 529, 571-79 (1997); fact that defendant was a leader previously is not relevant to establish that he was the leader at the time of the homicide; 9-0.

State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002)

In burglary-murder case, trial court admits prior incident in which similarities are theft of purse, victims elderly, perpetrator said "the bitch is dead," both victims were kicked; dissimilarities are that they occurred 18 months apart in different parts of state, one victim was kicked three times, the other until she died, entry in one was through window, other through door, perpetrators fled in car in one, on foot in other; held: similarities were insufficient to establish signature-like features, thus prior incident should have been excluded, cf.: State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010), Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482, 491-501 (2012); when trial court admits prior misconduct in limine, defense may offer the evidence to mitigate and still preserve error, see: Ohler v. United States, 146 L.Ed.2d 826 (2000), cf.: State v. Makela, 66 Wn.App. 164, 171 (1992), Garcia v. Providence Med. Ctr., 60 Wn.App. 635 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Kilgore, 147 Wn.2d 288 (2002)

Where existence of a prior bad act is contested, trial court may determine whether it was proved by preponderance, State v. Pirtle, 127 Wn.2d 628, 648-49 (1995), via offer of proof rather than a "mini-trial," State v. Mee, 168 Wn.App. 144, 154-55 (2012), overruling, in part, State v. Binkin, 79 Wn.App. 284, 290 (1995), see: State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019); affirms State v. Kilgore, 107 Wn.App. 160 (2001); 6-3.

State v. DeVries, 199 Wn.2d 842, 848-49 (2003)

Respondent is charged with delivering amphetamines to another student, trial court admits evidence that respondent gave two dissimilar pills to another classmate three days before charged incident, no evidence that pills delivered earlier contained controlled substances; held: because prior incident had little or no probative value on the elements of the crime charged, it should have been excluded; "[i]n doubtful cases, the evidence should be excluded, State v. Smith, 106 Wn.2d 772, 776 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Gladden, 116 Wn.App. 561 (2003)

In communicating with a minor for immoral purposes case, RCW 9.68A.090, defendant offers to stipulate that defendant had been previously convicted of a felony sex offense to keep the prior from the jury, Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997), which prosecutor and trial court reject; held: because defendant did not offer to stipulate that he had a prior conviction for a felony sex offense but sought to exclude any evidence of the prior, trial court did not err in refusing stipulation, State v. Ortega, 134 Wn.App. 617, 623-25 (2006), cf.: State v. Johnson, 90 Wn.App. 54 (1998); III.

State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003)

In child sex abuse case, defendant induces victim to his home, wears bikini underwear, asks for massages, asks her to hold his penis, asks her whether his lack of dress bothers her and tells her not to tell anyone, trial court admits evidence that, fifteen years earlier, defendant did the same thing; held: common scheme or plan exception, ER 404(b), is used to prove that the conduct occurred, as opposed to modus operandi exception to prove identity, State v. Foxhoven, 161 Wn.2d 168, 179 (2007); common scheme or plan evidence requires substantial similarity between the prior acts and the crime charged; sufficient similarity is reached only when the trial court determines that the various acts are naturally to be explained as caused by a general plan, State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 860 (1995), State v. Carleton, 82 Wn.App. 680 (1996), State v. Krause, 82 Wn.App. 688 (1996), State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 885-92 (2009), see also: State v. Sexsmith, 138 Wn.App. 497 (2007), which is less than required when identity is at issue, State v. Scherner, 153 Wn.App. 621, 656-59 (2009), whereupon the commonalities must be unique, State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 643 (2002), State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014); overrules State v. Dewey, 93 Wn.App. 50 (1998), State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 823-27 (2000); affirms State v. DeVincentis, 112 Wn.App. 152 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176 (2003)

In rape 3° case, trial court admits evidence that five years earlier defendant had touched breast of victim to establish lustful disposition toward victim; held: remoteness is a factor, but here trial court did not abuse discretion, State v. Ray, 116 Wn.2d 531, 547 (1991), see: State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022); III.

State v. Moran, 119 Wn.App. 197, 217-19 (2003)

Homicide defendant writes letter to friend asking him to contact a potential witness who was "behind me all the way now she's being a cunt," signs it "[y]our homie," trial court admits letter as probative to show defendant's "propensity to try to influence people so that they will be … more favorable to him," over defense argument that language in letter creates unfair prejudice and links him to gang violence; held: although not a threat, the letter may be interpreted as a request that the witness change her mind about defendant's guilt, State v. Kosanke, 23 Wn.2d 211, 215 (1945), admission was not abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Lillard, 122 Wn.App. 422, 430-32 (2004)

In "complex" possessing stolen property case, state offers evidence of a series of thefts committed by defendant to explain context of case; held: "a defendant cannot insulate himself by committing a string of connected offenses and then argue that the evidence of the other uncarged crimes is inadmissible because it shows the defendant's bad character, thus forcing the State to present a fragmented version of the events," at 431, State v. Tharp, 27 Wn.App. 198, 205, aff'd, 96 Wn.2d 591 (1981), State v. Schaffer, 63 Wn.App. 761 (1991); I.

State v. Sanford, 128 Wn.App. 280 (2005)

At arrest, police identify defendant by his booking photo after defendant gives a false name, trial court admits evidence that police looked at booking photo in spite of defendant's not challenging identity at trial; held: referring to booking photos may raise a prejudicial inference of criminal propensity, State v. Henderson, 100 Wn.App. 794, 803 (2000); where identity is not at issue evidence of prior misconduct to prove identity is not admissible, State v. Bowen, 48 Wn.App. 187, 193 (1987); II.

State v. Mezquia, 129 Wn.App. 118, 126-32 (2005)

Trial court rules that it will admit ER 404(b) evidence in rebuttal if defense presents other suspect evidence, defense decides not to introduce the evidence, so 404(b) evidence is not admitted, defense appeals; held: in order to preserve a 404(b) objection, the evidence must actually be presented, Luce v. United States, 83 L.Ed.2d 443 (1984), State v. Phillips, 160 Wn.App. 38 (2011); I.

State v. Womac, 130 Wn.App. 450, 455-57 (2005), rev'd, on other grounds, 160 Wn.2d 643 (2007)

In homicide of a child by abuse case, where defendant claims accident, evidence of other incidents involving defendant's treatment of children, including the deceased, may be relevant and admissible to rebut the claim of accident, within discretion of trial court, State v. Terry, 10 Wn.App. 874, 883 (1974); II.

State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006)

In assault case, prior assaults by defendant on his wife are admissible to show that complainant was afraid of defendant and to explain her inconsistent reports to the police, ER

404(b), State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996), State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011), State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295 (2014), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017), see: State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014); III.

State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006)

Victim recants at trial, claims she lied to police, trial court admits other acts of violence committed by defendant on victim, instructs jury that it may consider the prior incidents for the limited puspose of assessing credibility of victim; held: where victim recants, fails to timely report abuse or minizes accusations, then evidence of prior abuse is relevant and potentially admissible, ER 404(b), to illuminate the victim's state of mind at the time of the inconsistent act, including state of mind at the time of the witness' trial testimony, State v. Wilson, 60 Wn.App. 887 (1991), State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008), provided court gives an adequate limiting instruction telling jury it can consider abuse to assess an alleged victim's state of mind at the time of the inconsistent act, not to determine victim's credibility, State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32, 47 (2016), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017), distinguishing State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996), State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011); II.

Holmes v. South Carolina, 164 L.Ed.2d 503 (2006)

Evidence rule that defendant may not introduce proof of third-party guilt if the prosecution has introduced forensic evidence that, if believed, strongly supports a guilty verdict is arbitrary, Washington v. Texas, 18 L.Ed.2d 1019 (1967), and violates defendant's right to present a complete defense, Crane v. Kentucky, 90 L.Ed.2d 636 (1986); 9-0.

State v. Mason, 160 Wn.2d 910, 932-33 (2007)

An objection that proffered evidence is "prejudicial" is "adequate to preserve an appeal" of ER 404(b) evidence, whereas an objection that the evidence is irrelevant is not; 5-4.

State v. Foxhoven, 161 Wn.2d 168 (2007)

In malicious mischief graffiti case, trial court admits photographs seized from defendants' homes of defendants painting other walls with the same signature tag and drawings from defendant's home of the same tag as modus operandi and to show common scheme or plan, along with police testimony that tags are akin to signatures; held: where a signature is provided, the signature alone is sufficiently distinctive to be admissible under the modus operandi exception to ER 404(b); the existence of a common scheme or plan is not relevant to show identity, but is relevant only to the extent that it shows the charged crime occurred, State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003), which was not at issue here; 9-0.

State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 749-51 (2007)

In aggravated murder case, defining "common scheme or plan" for purposes of an aggravating factor as "a connection between the crimes in that one crime is done in preparation of the other [and] when a person devises an overarching criminal plan and uses it to perpetrate separate but very similar crimes," State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 854-55 (1995), was proper; 8-1.

State v. Sexsmith, 138 Wn.App. 497 (2007)

In child sex abuse case, trial court admits uncharged prior act where defendant was in a position of authority over both victims, was biological father of one and primary father figure of the other, both girls were about the same age when molested, defendant isolated both when abused, both abused in basement, in both he took nude photographs, showed pornography and had them fondle him; held: trial court did not abuse discretion as the similarity was clearly more than coincidental, while individual features were not unique in themselves, the cumulative similarity between the two suggests a common plan rather than coincidence, at ¶ 24, State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11, 17 (2003), State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 854-55 (1995), State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 885-92 (2009), State v. Scherner, 153 Wn.App. 621, 656-59 (2009), but see: State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014); even if uncharged conduct was inadmissible, in light of defendant's having videotaped his sex acts with victim, defendant admitted to sex on surreptitious tapes made by victim, error was harmless, State v. Carleton, 82 Wn.App. 680, 686 (1996); III.

State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174 (2008)

In domestic violence assault case, evidence of prior acts of violence known to victim is admissible to prove the element of assault that victim reasonably feared bodily injury, State v. Ragin, 94 Wn.App. 407 (1999), State v. Barragan, 102 Wn.App. 754 (2000), even if defendant did not dispute the element, as state has burden of proving all elements; where victim recants, prior acts of violence against victim are admissible so jury can evaluate her credibility, State v. Grant, 83 Wn.App. 98 (1996), State v. Cook, 131 Wn.App. 845 (2006), State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 114-16 (2006), State v. Baker, 162 Wn.App. 468 (2011), State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112 (2012), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295 (2014), State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), State v. Woods, 198 Wn.App. 453 (2017); 6-3 (plurality opinion on these issues; see: Madsen, J., concurring).

State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688 (2008)

Trial court excludes in limine evidence that defendant may have been a member of a gang, state elicits evidence from detective that he's on the gang unit, questions witnesses about gang-like behavior, argues about a culture of violence amongst defendant's "group;" held: trial court was not given the opportunity to weigh probative value against prejudicial effect due to indirect manner in which state presented the evidence, state did not provide any evidence that defendant was a gang member and what the gang mores were, see: State v. Filitaula, 184 Wn.App. 819, 824-25 (2014); state invited jury to make the "forbidden inference" underlying ER 404(b) that defendant's prior bad acts showed his propensity to commit the crimes charged, State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 454-61 (2012), see: State v. Scott, 151 Wn.App. 520 (2009); II.

State v. Wilson, 144 Wn.App. 166, 175-78 (2008)

In felony murder/burglary 1° case, trial court admits evidence of prior assaults between defendant and victim and defendant's statement to informants that she desired to get even with victim, both to prove intent to kill in case state amended to intentional murder and to prove mens rea element of burglary, although state never amended; held: intent not being an element of felony murder, it was error to admit ER 404(b) evidence; III.

State v. Babcock, 145 Wn.App. 157 (2008)

In child rape case, trial court admits child hearsay, after which complainant refuses to testify, court strikes hearsay but denies mistrial; held: weighing factors to determine if "trial irregularity" deprived defendant of fair trial, (1) seriousness of irregularity, (2) whether challenged evidence was cumulative, (3) whether irregularity could be cured by instruction, the highly prejudice evidence was such that there was no guarantee that the jury could effectively disregard it, State v. Suleski, 67 Wn.2d 45 (1965), State v. Escalona, 49 Wn.App. 251 (1987), denial of mistrial was an abuse of discretion; III.

Auburn v. Hedlund, 165 Wn.2d 645, 654-57 (2009)

In DUI trial involving fatal crash, trial court admits 911 call in which excited caller describes gruesome scene including erroneous report of decapitation; held: gruesone nature of crash is not related to an element of the crime, thus admission of the call was an abuse of discretion, ER 403, State v. Crenshaw, 98 Wn.2d 789, 806-07 (1983), State v. Sargent, 40 Wn.App. 340, 348-49 (1985); 5-4.

State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 744-49 (2009)

In sex abuse case, trial court orders that prior acts by defendant upon victim's siblings known to victim are admissible if defense raises delay in reporting, state refers to abuse in opening, cross and closing, defense never raises issue, enters a standing objection which is overruled; held: while trial court properly found that the physical abuse was proved by a preponderance and had a proper purpose, court's limiting admission to rebut delayed reporting was correct, prosecutor's misconduct in offering the evidence in its case in chief was reversible misconduct; admission of CPS reports of defendant's physical abuse of other children was collateral, unrelated to delay in reporting; 9-0.

State v. Powell, 166 Wn.2d 73 (2009)

In attempted burglary case, trial court admits defendant's methamphetamine use immediately prior to offense to establish defendant's state of mind; held: absent expert testimony to explain how the use of the drug affects a person, the evidence should not have been admitted; four justices concur in opinion of the court which purports to hold that defense counsel failed to preserve ER 404(b) error, four justices hold that the error was preserved but was harmless, one justice holds the error was preserved and would reverse; reverses, in part, State v. Powell, 139 Wn.App. 808 (2007).

State v. Asaeli, 150 Wn.App. 543, 574-83 (2009)

Trial court admits, in homicide case, evidence that some witnesses believed that "Kushmen Blokk" was a gang, that there may have been a shooting by "Kushmen Blokk Bloods" five years earlier which did not involve defendants, no evidence is submitted that Kushmen Blokk engaged in gang related activity before or after the earlier shooting or that the Kushmen Blokk mentioned in relation to the current offense is the same group as the earlier one; held:

because there was no evidence that Kushmen Blokk is a gang, court abused its discretion in admitting gang-association evidence and police expert testimony about gangs, cf.: State v. Campbell, 78 Wn.App. 813, 821-24 (1995) State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780 (1998), State v. Ryna Ra, 144 Wn.App. 688 (2008), State v. Scott, 151 Wn.App. 527 (2009), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 454-61 (2012), State v. Filitaula, 184 Wn.App. 819, 824-25 (2014); II.

State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66, 81-89 (2009)

Gang evidence may be admissible to prove motive, State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780 (1989), State v. Campbell, 78 Wn.App. 813, 822 (1995), State v. Saenz, 156 Wn.App. 866, 872-74 (2010), reversed, on other grounds, 175 Wn.2d 167 (2012), State v. DeLeon,185 Wn.App. 171 (2014) and mental state for murder 1º by extreme indifference, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b), State v. Mee, 168 Wn.App. 144, 155-57 (2012), State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714 (2012), but not to show identity absent a "unique signature," State v. Lough, 70 Wn.App. 302 (1993), aff'd, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995); failure to request a limiting instruction for ER 404(b) evidence may be a legitimate tactical decision and thus is not ineffective assistance, State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708, 719-21 (2014); II.

State v. Scott, 151 Wn.App. 520 (2009)

Trial court rules in limine that state may present gang evidence where gang expert testifies to the importance of respect in gang culture and gang would respond with violence to a lack of respect, prosecutor offers evidence that defendant is in a gang but expert never testifies about respect; held: while court offered proper bases for ER 404(b) evidence, namely motive, connection between defendant and his co-defendants and to explain the interactions of parties and threats, evidence did not connect to the expressed motive, only reasonable inference for jury is that defendant is a bad person, prohibited by ER 404(b), not harmless, see: State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 454-61 (2012), State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016); III.

State v. Kennealy, 151 Wn.App. 861, 885-92 (2009)

Trial court admits four prior instances of uncharged sexual misconduct on children, finding common scheme or plan based upon defendant told one victim and some of the prior misconduct witnesses not to tell, committed the acts in a place that went unnoticed by others, committed the acts on children who were related to him or lived and played close to him, committed the acts after the children knew him and trusted him because of a relationship or because he gave gives and talked to them, chose victims whose ages ranged from 5-12 years, touched the girls under and outside clothing, committed sexual acts more than once; held: trial court did not abuse discretion, State v. Sexsmith, 138 Wn.App. 497 (2007), State v. Krause, 82 Wn.App. 688 (1996); II.

State v. Nelson, 152 Wn.App. 755, 771-72 (2009)

In dog fighting case, trial court did not abuse discretion in admitting evidence that defendant had a tattoo depicting dogs fighting; III.

State v. Hartzell, 153 Wn.App. 137, 149-54 (2009)

In shooting incident, evidence that defendant had shot the same gun as was used in the charged offense was not admitted to show that defendant had a propensity to use guns, but rather that it was the same gun; "[a] defendant may open the door to evidence that would otherwise be inadmissible, even if constitutionally protected, if the rebuttal evidence is relevant," at 154 ¶ 14; I.

State v. Fualaau, 155 Wn.App. 347, 356-59 (2010)

In assault 1° case, defendant endorses alibi defense, court admits evidence of defendant's testimony in a prior case revealing very similar acts of violence and torture against another, after which defense rests without presenting evidence; held: "[w]hen two crimes share a ritualistic quality, a defendant's description of his commission of one of the crimes is strongly probative of the defendant's identity as the perpetrator of the other," at 357 ¶ 22, State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 66-68 (1994), cf.: State v. Vy thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 642 (2002); I.

State v. Venegas, 155 Wn.App. 507, 525-27 (2010)

In child abuse case with numerous charged assaults, trial court admits evidence that defendant-step-grandmother refused to allow victim to enter gifted student program at trial and that she was angry about having to pay for foster care; held: while evidence does go to motive, trial court's failure to balance probative value against prejudicial effect was error, state already had powerful motive testimony from other charged assaults, evidence of other mistreatment adds little to the scale on motive; II.

State v. McDaniel, 155 Wn.App. 829, 853-55 (2010)

Defendant, wanted for attempted murder and unrelated warrants, is seen in a car being driven by his girlfriend, vehicle speeds away from attempted police stop, when rammed by police car and stopped defendant refuses order to lie down, is forced to the ground, at trial court admits this evidence as flight; held: flight evidence is only marginally probative as to the ultimate issue of guilt or innocence, so evidence of consciousness of guilt must be substantial and real, not speculative, conjectural or fanciful, State v. Freeburg, 105 Wn.App. 492, 498 (2001), State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021); here, evidence did not establish that defendant's behavior caused the flight, as defendant was not driving the fleeing car, defendant's resistance is only admissible if jury can infer consciousness of guilt of the charged crime which occurred nine months earlier and defendant was wanted on other warrants; 2-1, II.

State v. Williams, 156 Wn.App. 482, 489-92 (2010)

In rape case with consent defense, trial court admits evidence of prior rape as common scheme involving women of similar age, involved in drugs, similar method (promise of drugs, attack from behind with forearm across throat, strangled into unconsciousness), no limiting instruction is requested or given; held: court properly exercised discretion in admitting prior misconduct, ER 404(b), limiting instruction only required if requested, State v. Foxhoven, 161 Wn.2d 168, 175 (2007); III.

State v. Russell, 171 Wn.2d 118 (2011)

Following admission of ER 404(b) evidence, trial court need not give a limiting instruction absent a request for such an instruction, State v. Wilcoxon, 185 Wn.App. 534, 542 (2015), affirmed, on other grounds, 185 Wn.2d 324 (2016), reversing State v. Russell, 154 Wn.App. 775 (2010); 9-0.

State v. Perez-Valdez, 172 Wn.2d 808, 814-17 (2011)

Defendant-father, accused of rape by his teenage daughters, offers evidence that, when the complainants were in a foster home they committed arson in order to be removed from the foster home as proof that they are lying about the rapes in order to be removed from father's home, trial court allows defense to argue that the children are lying in order to leave the home but precludes arson evidence; held: excluding the evidence of arson was a proper exercise of discretion; while the arson evidence is not properly excluded pursuant to ER 404(b) as it was not offered to show conformity of action with character, it was still within trial court's discretion to exclude it as irrelevant or unduly prejudicial; 5-4.

State v. Johnson, 159 Wn.App. 766, 772-73 (2011)

Defendant is caught stealing copper from a locomotive, trial court admits sales receipt showing defendant sold copper the day before his arrest; held: receipt was circumstantial evidence of motive or intent and, with limiting instruction, was properly admitted; 2-1, II.

State v. Phillips, 160 Wn.App. 36 (2011)

Trial court rules that ER 404(b) evidence would be admitted if defendant testifies that elderly theft victims consented to give him money, defendant does not testify; held: to preserve objection to ER 404(b) evidence when the admissibility is contingent on defendant testifying, defendant must testify and the evidence must be admitted, State v. Mezquia, 129 Wn.App. 118, 127-32 (2005), Luce v. United States, 469 U.S. 38, 43, 83 L.Ed.2d 443 (1984), does not deprive defendant of the right to present a defense; II.

State v. Gresham, 173 Wn.2d 405 (2012)

RCW 10.58.090 which directs that prior sex offenses are admissible irrespective of ER 404(b) analysis violates separation of powers doctrine, State v. Gower, 179 Wn.2d 851 (2014), reversing State v. Gresham, 153 Wn.App. 659 (2009); defendant, while on a trip with his granddaughter and her parents, fondles victim while parents are asleep, trial court admits evidence of molestation against other girls which occurred while their parents were asleep, both while defendant was on a trip with the other girls and at defendant's home; held: trial court did not abuse discretion in finding that the similarities established a common scheme or plan and that the differences are explained as "individual manifestations" of the same plan, State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847, 860 (1995), commonality need not be a "unique method of committing the crime," State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11, 20-21 (2003), see: Det. of Coe, 175 Wn.2d 482, 491-501 (2012), cf.: State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014), State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017); defendant's proposed limiting instruction telling jury that the evidence admitted to show a common scheme or plan but could not be considered as evidence that defendant's conduct conformed with the conduct in the prior allegations is incorrect since conformity is the point of the relevance of the evidence and thus properly refused, but trial court erred in not correctly instructing the jury notwithstanding defendant's failure to propose a correct instruction, State v.

Goebel, 36 Wn.2d 367, 379 (1950), court is obliged to give a correct instruction sua sponte, harmless here; 7-2.

State v. Mee, 168 Wn.App. 144, 155-61 (2012)

Defendant fires a rifle into a house where a party was going on, kills victim, is convicted of murder 1° by extreme indifference, RCW 9A.32.030(1)(b) (1990), trial court admits evidence of gang membership to show motive, State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66 (2009), that gang members must assist other gang members in a fight; held: generalized gang evidence, absent (1) evidence showing adherence by defendant to behavior and (2) a finding that the evidence relating to gangs is relevant to prove elements of the crime, serves no purpose other than allowing the state to suggest that defendant is guilty because he is a criminal-type person, State v. Foxhaven, 161 Wn.2d 168, 175 (2007), State v. McCreven, 170 Wn.App. 444, 454-61 (2012), cf.: State v. Boot, 89 Wn.App. 780 (1998), State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016), see: State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714 (2012), danger of unfair prejudice outweighs probative value, harmless here; II.

State v. Fuller, 169 Wn.App. 797, 828-32 (2012)

In murder case, evidence that defendant planned another robbery which didn't occur as motive that defendant was desperate for money is unfairly prejudicial motive evidence, not evidence of a past act; II.

State v. Kipp, 171 Wn.App. 14, 20-22 (2012), reversed, on other grounds, 179 Wn.2d 718 (2014)

In child molestation and rape trial involving one victim, court admits evidence that defendant also molested another, victims were of similar ages, both were defendant's nieces, both were molested in the same two homes, different sex acts; held: sufficient occurrence of common features supports court's discretion in determining that the acts showed a common scheme of plan; 2-1, II.

State v. Embry, 171 Wn.App. 714, 731-36 (2012)

Gang evidence is admissible, within discretion of trial court, where state proves by a preponderance that (1) defendant belonged to a gang and that there is a connection between the crime and gang activities, (2) that gang evidence establishes a motive, intent, plan or preparation, (3) gang evidence proves an element of the crime and a nexus between gang activity, the crime and gang members, and (4) probative value outweighs prejudice, State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66 (2009), cf.: State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016); 2-1, II.

State v. Johnson, 172 Wn.App. 112, 119-27 (2012), reversed, in part, on other grounds, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295 (2014)

In harassment case, prior acts of domestic violence and domineering and controlling behavior by defendant against victim are admissible to support element that victim was in reasonable fear that the threat will be carried out, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.App. 174, 183 (2008),

State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016), but see: State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014), also admissible to prove domestic violence aggravator; I.

State v. Briejer, 172 Wn.App. 209, 223-27 (2012)

Defendant, receives L&I benefits for back injury, state receives tip that defendant was mountain climbing, begins investigation and charges defendant with fraud that preceded his extreme sports activities, trial court admits mountain climbing evidence as res gestae to show the basis for the investigation; held: res gestae evidence should not be conflated with ER 404(b) evidence, should be analyzed under ER 401, 402 and 403 to determine if it is relevant and if its probative value is outweighed by unfair prejudice, State v. Grier, 168 Wn.App. 635, 645 (2012), State v. Trickler, 106 Wn.App. 727, 733-34 (2001); here, mountain climbing was not an "inseparable part" of the alleged fraud, not necessary to complete the crime story, highly prejudicial; III.

State v. Olsen, 175 Wn.App. 269 (2013) affirmed, on other grounds, 180 Wn.2d 468 (2014)

"[W]hen a defendant asserts that certain conduct is accidental, evidence of prior misconduct is highly relevant as it will tend to support rebut such a claim," at 282, State v. Gogolin, 45 Wn.App. 640 (1986); II.

State v. Donald, 178 Wn.App. 250 (2013)

Defense, seeking to blame other suspect who is not called as a witness, offers other suspect's criminal history and testimony that other suspect was mentally ill and experienced "command hallucinations" that ordered him to hurt other people or, alternatively, was malingering; held: a criminal defendant does not have the right to present third party propensity evidence, by way of a criminal record, to infer how the third party acted; precluding propensity evidence does not unreasonably restrict constitutional right to present a defense, see: State v. Horn, 3 Wn.App.2d 302 (2018); trial court did not abuse discretion in excluding mental illness evidence, as it was confusing, might lead to a "minicompetency trial" that would produce unreasonable delay, and defense did not show it was more than minimally relevant; I.

State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014)

In domestic violence no contact order case complainant testifies no violence occurred, no other statements of complainant are offered, trial court admits evidence of prior domestic violence episodes too impeach complainant's testimony; held: while evidence of prior misconduct may be admissible to enable jury to assess credibility of complainant who gave conflicting statements about defendant's conduct, State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 186 (2008), absent conflicting statements by the witness probative value is outweighed by unfair prejudice, State v. Saltarelli, 98 Wn.2d 358, 363 (1982), State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32, 47 (2016); "we decline to extend Magers to cases where there is no evidence of injuries to the alleged victim and the witness neither recants nor contradicts prior statements," at 925 ¶ 16; 8-1.

State v. Hecht, 179 Wn.App. 497, 507-10 (2014)

In patronizing prostitute case where defendant maintained that he gave money to complainant for clothing, trial court's admitting evidence of other acts of patronizing as a common scheme or plan was not an abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Mollett, 181 Wn.App. 701, 713-15 (2014)

In rendering criminal assistance trial where defendant is accused of lying about knowing a murderer trial court admits a photograph of a desk in defendant's cell on which she wrote "White Power RIP" murderer; held: photo was admissible to show defendant's relationship to the slayer, trial court is not obliged to use the word "prejudice" or "prejudicial" in weighing probative value against prejudicial effect in performing a ER 403 balancing analysis; I.

State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438 (2014)

At child molestation and child rape trial evidence is that defendant sexually touched his granddaughter when she came to visit over many years, court admits evidence that defendant had molested victim's mother and aunt decades earlier in mother's home and when aunt came to visit; held: prior acts were "mostly opportunistic," only common plan was that, if given the opportunity defendant would molest girls which is inadmissible propensity evidence, State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017), distinguishing State v. Lough, 125 Wn.2d 847 (1995), State v. DeVincentis, 150 Wn.2d 11 (2003), State v. Gresham, 173 Wn.2d 405 (2012), State v. Scherner, 153 Wn.App. 621, 656-59 (2009); III.

State v. Filitaula, 184 Wn.App. 819, 824-25 (2014)

Court, in limine, excludes expert testimony about gang activity but allows witnesses to testify to words said at the time of the offense and explaining that they are gang-related; held: res gestae exception to ER 404(b) authorizes court to admit evidence that took place in the immediate timeframe of the offense if it is necessary to depict a complete picture for the jury; courts need not edit eyewitness testimony to sanitize the event being described; I.

State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), 185 Wn.2d 478, 489-91 (2016)

Gang evidence to prove motive where members of one gang shoot at members of another is admissible within discretion of trial court, State v. Yarbrough, 151 Wn.App. 66 (2009); photograph of a gang tattoo to prove affiliation is proper; detective's testimony that the tattoo means defendant had previously committed a crime would be improper but where the defendant obtained the tattoo after the instant offense it may have been a nonverbal admission, thus any error was harmless; evidence of how someone is initiated into a gang is not relevant where defendant is already a gang member when the offense occurred, as testimony on gang behavior must show both (1) adherence of defendant or defendant's gang to the relevant behavior and (2) tend to prove the elements of the charged crime, see: State v. Mee, 168 Wn.App. 144, 159 (2012); III.

State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.2d 478 (2016)

Generalized gang evidence which suggests that defendants are part of a pervasive gang problem and are criminal-types with a propensity to commit charged crimes lacks probative value, is often highly prejudicial, at 486-89; where jail booking procedures require that an arrestee be asked about gang membership to avoid housing with rivals the admissions are not routine booking questions, Pennsylvania v. Muniz, 110 L.Ed.2d 528 (1990), but are involuntary; reversed State v. DeLeon, 185 Wn.App. 171 (2014), at 489-91; 9-0.

State v. Farnsworth, 185 Wn.2d 768, 786-87 (2016)

Pursuant to plea agreement codefendant testifies against defendant, trial court allows codefendant to testify that a reason he agreed to testify is that defendant was rude to him at Western State Hospital; held: evidence of rudeness was not to show dangerousness or conformity but to show motive to testify; 5-4.

State v. Ashley, 186 Wn.2d 32 (2016)

In unlawful imprisonment/domestic violence case prior acts of violence are admissible, ER 404(b), to prove lack of consent and intimidation, State v. Fisher, 165 Wn.2d 727, 744-45 (2009), State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 108, 116 (2006), State v. Magers, 164 Wn.2d 174, 183 (2008), but not to bolster victim's credibility absent inconsistent testimony, at 47, State v. Gunderson, 181 Wn.2d 916 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Feely, 192 Wn.App. 751, 767-68 (2016)

In felony DUI case court gave a limiting instruction about prior DUIs that evidence is only to be considered to determine if defendant has the requisite priors, state's argument to jury that defendant fled because of the prior DUIs was improper as state did not seek a ruling from the trial court to allow other reasons for the priors, no prejudice here; I.

State v. Arredondo, 188 Wn.2d 244, 255-64 (2017)

In gang murder case trial court admits evidence of uncharged drive-by shooting by defendant involving none of the same people in the charged crimes as evidence of defendant's animosity towards the other gang who were victims of both; held: trial judge's finding that probative value outweighed prejudice to show motive and intent was not an abuse of discretion; trial court's holding that other incident was admissible to prove identity was error as there was no unique modus operendi, State v. Smith, 106 Wn.2d 772 (1986); affirms State v. Arredondo, 190 Wn.App. 512, 529-32 (2015); 5-4.

State v. Jefferson, 199 Wn.App. 772, 798-800 (2017), reversed, on other grounds, 192 Wn.2d 225 (2018)

Court excludes, in limine, gang evidence but allows witnesses to testify to defendant's nicknames "Little Shakes" and "Baby Shakes" where those witnesses only know defendant by those names; held: nicknames or street names don't implicate a gang; I.

State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017)

In rape of a child case with 4-year old complainant court admits evidence that sometime before the alleged rape defendant stated to complainant's 11-year old sister wearing a bathing suit that it gets him "excited," as evidence of a common scheme to molest children; held: to admit, prior misconduct must share a sufficient number of "markedly and substantially similar" features so that the similarities can naturally be explained as individual manifestations of a general plan, State v. Gresham, 173 Wn.2d 405, 420 (2012), State v. Slocum, 183 Wn.App. 438, 456 (2014), similarity of results is insufficient, there must be more than a general "plan" to molest children; "[i]n doubtful cases, the evidence should be excluded," State v. Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 642 (2002); I.

State v. Rodriguez-Perez, 1 Wn.App.2d 448, 467-71 (2017)

One joined co-defendant wants gang evidence admitted, the other moves to exclude it, court excludes; held: trial court properly exercised discretion excluding gang evidence entirely as it would have damaged one of the joined co-defendants (issue of improper consolidation was not raised on appeal), did not violate defendant's right to present a defense which is not absolute; III.

State v. Riley, 12 Wn.App.2d 714 (2020)

In telephone harassment case court admits evidence that defendant had previously slapped defendant and, in fits of rage, drove a car recklessly to frighten defendant and threw things at him; held: where trial court fails to make an adequate ER 404(b) record in admitting "other act" evidence appellate court may review the decision de novo, State v. Jackson, 102 Wn.2d 689, 694 (1984); while prior misconduct evidence to prove identity must have a high degree of similarity to mark the handiwork of the defendant, State v. Coe, 101 Wn.2d 772, 777 (1984), where the evidence is offered to prove a "true threat" the issue of similarity is not part of the analysis; here, the trial court properly exercised discretion in admitting the prior acts to establish that victim had a reasonable fear of harm, State v. Ragin, 94 Wn.App. 407 (1999); 2-1.

State v. Denham, 197 Wn.2d 759 (2021)

Defendant is charged with burglary of a jewelry store where alarms had been bypassed, at trial state offers statements defendant had made to police 8 years earlier discussing sophisticated methods of breaking into safes, how he bypassed alarms; held: trial court properly declined to admit the recordings for identity or modus operandi, but it was properly admitted to show that defendant had the skills to pull of a sophisticated burglary, evidence is relevant if it makes a fact of consequence more likely which is not limited to specific elements of the crime, distinguishing State v. Vy Thang, 145 Wn.2d 630, 639-49 (2002), see: State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244 (1995); 5-4.

State v. Sullivan, 18 Wn.App.2d 225 (2021)

In robbery with a firearm trial court admits evidence that defendant was involved in a shooting 25 minutes after the robbery; held: evidence of the shooting tended to prove that defendant possessed a firearm during the robbery, evidence did not rise to the level of unfair prejudice, ER 403, State v. Powell, 126 Wn.2d 244 (1995), State v. Bockman, 37 Wn.App. 474 (1984); I.

State v. Jennings, 199 Wn.2d 53 (2022)

In murder/self-defense case defendant testifies he recognized that victim was high, court precludes defense toxicologist from testifying that victim had methamphetamine in his system; held: evidentiary ruling is reviewed for abuse of discretion but appellate court must consider de novo whether defendant was deprived of his 6th Amendment right to present a defense, State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 797-98 (2019); here, defendant's detailed testimony about his observations of victim being high was sufficient for defense to argue self-defense, thus exclusion of toxicology evidence did not violate right to present a defense, State v. Ritchie, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 520 P.3d 1105 (2022), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 141 Wn.App. 367 (2007). cf.: State v. Duarte Vela, 200 Wn.App. 306, 326 (2017), State v. Jones, 168 Wn.2d 713, 721 (2010), State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 797-98 (2019); affirms State v. Jennings, 14 Wn.App.2d 779 (2020); 7-2.

State v. Crossguns, 199 Wn.2d 282 (2022)

While evidence of collateral misconduct relating to a specific victim, including prior uncharged acts of sexual conduct, remains admissible under ER 404(b), "lustful disposition" is not a separate purpose for admitting evidence; the phrase "lustful disposition" is "incorrect and harmful" even though the evidence that has come in under the doctrine remains admissible; overrules or modifies State v. Medcalf, 58 Wn.App. 817 (1990), State v. Guzman, 119 Wn.App. 176 (2003), State v. Ferguson, 100 Wn.2d 131 (1983), State v. Dawkins, 71 Wn.App. 902, 908-10 (1993); 8-1.

EVIDENCE
Other Suspects

State v. Rehak, 67 Wn.App. 157 (1992)

To argue third-party perpetrator theory, defense must show that the third party (1) had the ability to place himself at the scene of the crime and (2) that the third party took some step to act on that ability, State v. Downs, 168 Wash. 664, 667 (1932), State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 716 (1986), Leonard v. Territory, 2 Wash.Terr. 381, 7 P. 872 (1885), State v. Kwan, 174 Wash. 528, 532-3 (1933), State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 75-7 (1994), State v. Hilton, 164 Wn.App. 81, 98-103 (2011); here defense established third party could have travelled to the crime scene at the time, but failed to establish that he had any intent to act on that ability, thus properly excluded, see: Pers. Restraint of Lord, 123 Wn.2d 296, 315-6 (1994), State v. Howard, 127 Wn.App. 862, 866-69 (2005), State v. Strizheus, 163 Wn.App. 820 (2011), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 797-804 (2012), State v. Starbuck, 189 Wn.App. 740, 750-57 (2015); II.

State v. Condon, 72 Wn.App. 638, 645-7 (1993)

Motive alone is insufficient to establish nexus between third party and crime, State v. Mak, 105 Wn.2d 692, 717 (1986), State v. Kwan, 174 Wash. 528, 532-3 (1933), State v. Hilton, 164 Wn.App. 81, 98-103 (2011), to allow cross-examination of the third party to impeach her testimony, distinguishing Davis v. Alaska, 39 L.Ed.2d 347 (1974); I.

State v. Clark, 78 Wn.App. 471 (1995)

Where state's case is largely circumstantial, then defendant may neutralize such evidence by presenting circumstantial evidence of the same character tending to identify another as the perpetrator, Leonard v. The Territory of Washington, 2 Wash. Terr. 381 (1885), cf.: State v. Mezquia, 129 Wn.App. 118 (2005), , State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 763-68 (2015), distinguishing State v. Rehak, 67 Wn.App. 157 (1992); II.

State v. Maupin, 128 Wn.2d 918 (1996)

In felony murder-kidnap case, trial court excludes defense evidence that victim was seen with a third party the day after she was allegedly kidnapped by defendant, based upon purported lack of connection of the proffered testimony to the crime, State v. Downs, 168 Wash. 664 (1932); held: because the proffered evidence was neither evidence of another's motive nor mere speculation about the possibility that someone else committed the crime, trial court erred in excluding it; while the testimony would not necessarily have exculpated defendant, it could have brought into question state's version of the events, State v. Franklin, 180 Wn.2d 371 (2014), see: Holmes v. South Carolina,164 L.Ed.2d 503 (2006), distinguishing State v. Clark, 78 Wn.App. 471 (1995), State v. Kwan, 174 Wash. 528, 533 (1933), State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019), cf.: State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 797-804 (2012), State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 763-68 (2015), State v. Starbuck, 189 Wn.App. 740, 750-57 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Hawkins, 157 Wn.App. 739, 750-53 (2010)

Defendant, charged with possessing stolen property, presents evidence that he thought the property he had was his own but that he was framed by another who switched the property, excluded by trial court; held: presenting evidence about others who might have framed defendant is not subject to the "other suspects" foundation, State v. Downs, 168 Wash. 664, 667 (1932), evidence of a framing would require showing that the specified person had some connection with the actions that framed the defendant, see: State v. Hawkins, 181 Wn.2d 170 (2014); III.

State v. Strizheus, 163 Wn.App. 820 (2011)

Defendant is charged with attempted murder of his wife, prior to trial defendant's son calls police intoxicated, tells police that "[i]t's my fault, arrest me, I should be in jail," trial court excludes the statement as other suspect evidence and holds that defense may not call the son for the sole purpose of impeaching him; held: absence of a nexus between son and the crime supports trial court's exercise of discretion to exclude the son's statement as other suspect evidence, State v. Rehak, 67 Wn.App. 157 (1992), Holmes v. South Carolina, 547 U.S. 319, 164 L.Ed.2d 503 (2006), State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 797-804 (2012), State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019), distinguishing State v. Maupin, 128 Wn.2d 918 (1996); I.

State v. Donald, 178 Wn.App. 250 (2013)

Defense, seeking to blame other suspect who is not called as a witness, offers other suspect's criminal history and testimony that other suspect was mentally ill and experienced "command hallucinations" that ordered him to hurt other people or, alternatively, was malingering; held: a criminal defendant does not have the right to present third party propensity evidence, by way of a criminal record, to infer how the third party acted; precluding propensity evidence does not unreasonably restrict constitutional right to present a defense, see: : State v. Horn, 3 Wn.App.2d 302 (2018); trial court did no abuse discretion in excluding mental illness evidence, as it was confusing, might lead to a "minicompetency trial" that would produce unreasonable delay, and defense did not show it was more than minimally relevant; I.

State v. Franklin, 180 Wn.2d 371 (2014)

In cyberstalking case, defense offers evidence that his roommate committed the crime as the harassing emails were sent from roommate's computer, roommate had previously sent other threatening messages via email, texts and phone messages to victim expressing displeasure about victim's relationship with defendant, and had accessed defendant's email in the past, trial court excludes other suspect evidence based upon a "bar higher" than relevance and based upon its conclusion that the other proof of the defendant's guilt was great; held: court may not consider the strength or weakness of state's case in deciding whether to exclude defense-proffered other suspect evidence, Holmes v. South Carolina, 547 U.S. 319, 164 L.Ed.2d 503 (2006), distinguishing State v. Downs, 168 Wash. 664 (1932); other suspect evidence is admissible if "a train of facts or circumstances" clearly point out someone besides defendant is the guilty party, State v. Kwan, 174 Wash. 528, 533 (1933), circumstantial evidence that tends to connect someone other than the defendant supports admissibility, cf.: State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 763-68 (2015), State v. Starbuck, 189 Wn.App. 740, 750-57 (2015), State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019); proper inquiry focuses upon whether the evidence offered tends to create a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt, not whether it establishes the guilt of the third party beyond a reasonable doubt, see: State v. Giles, 196 Wn.App. 745 (2016); 5-1.

State v. Wade, 186 Wn.App. 749, 763-68 (2015)

In murder case, absent physical evidence connecting another person to the murder and no evidence that the other person was anywhere near the scene of the crime, only evidence being that he had had a bad relationship with the victim, trial court properly exercised discretion in excluding other suspect evidence, State v. Starbuck, 189 Wn.App. 740, 750-57 (2015), State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019), distinguishing State v. Franklin, 180 Wn.2d 371 (2014), State v. Clark, 78 Wn.App. 471 (1995), Holmes v. South Carolina, 547 U.S. 319, 164 L.Ed.2d 503 (2006); I.

State v. Giles, 196 Wn.App. 745 (2016)

Evidence as to ties between murder victim and co-owner of nightclub where murder victim worked did not tie co-owner to her killing and thus was inadmissible other suspect evidence; evidence connecting deputy sheriff to murder did not have a tendency to establish that he committed the murder and thus was inadmissible other suspect evidence; evidence connecting nightclub patron to murder victim merely showed that he was a patron and thus was inadmissible other suspect evidence; circumstantial evidence of another's motive, ability or opportunity may be admissible if there is an adequate nexus, State v. Franklin, 180 Wn.2d 371 (2014); there need not be evidence that other suspect actually committed the crime; I.

State v. Ortuno-Perez, 196 Wn.App. 771 (2016)

In murder case defense offers to prove that another specific person was at the scene with a gun, that that person claimed it was the only gun he owned but other evidence shows he owned more guns, that the other suspect had a motive, trial court appears to rule that the law prohibits a defendant from pointing the finger at another suspect, limits cross examination of witnesses about other suspect and precludes any closing argument blaming another suspect; held: defense was denied the right to present a complete defense; I.

State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019)

Court excludes other suspect evidence, defense on appeal maintains that the state standard for other suspect evidence is unconstitutional, Holmes v. South Carolina, 547 U.S. 319, 126 S.Ct. 1727, 164 L.Ed.2d 503 (2006); held: trial court did not compare relative strength of evidence against defendant vs. evidence that another person committed the offense, thus court properly exercised discretion, State v. Rafay, 168 Wn.App. 734, 802-03 (2012), State v. Franklin, 180 Wn.2d 371, 382 (2014); I.

EVIDENCE
Physical

State v. Johnson, 40 Wn.App. 371 (1985)

Physical evidence is admissible against the accused as long as it has some bearing upon the facts at issue, State v. Smith, 74 Wn.2d 744, 709 (1968); the fact that witnesses do not positively identify evidence does not diminish its admissibility; see: State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 872 (1991); III.

State v. Stock, 44 Wn.App. 467 (1986)

Defense moves to suppress handwriting exemplar provided by defendant after her attorney had requested that he be present during questioning, and after defendant had informed police she wanted her attorney present; held: while police action is to be "deplored," Sixth Amendment right to counsel is not the basis for suppression of nontestimonial evidence; I.

State v. Mitchell, 56 Wn.App. 610 (1990)

In felony flight case, RCW 46.61.024, defendant maintained he did not hear siren; trial court permitted state to demonstrate siren; held: siren activation was real or illustrative evidence, not an experiment or demonstration, i.e., it is genuinely what it purports to be and its condition is unchanged; illustrative evidence is admissible upon a showing that it is relevant, and that it is substantially like, and similar in function and operation to, the thing in issue; police testimony that siren played to jury sounded the same as the one used established a foundation; I.

State v. Powell, 62 Wn.App. 914 (1991)

In child molestation case, victim is shown drawing of nude female, asked to name body parts, drawing is admitted; held: to be admissible for illustrative purposes, evidence must be substantially similar to "real thing," State v. Barr, 9 Wn.App. 891, 895 (1973), King Cy. v. Farr, 7 Wn.App. 600, 613 (1972); here, drawing was not offered as representation of any object involved in incidents, but as tool to demonstrate witness's vocabulary, inadmissible to prove any fact, thus error, although harmless by itself [dictum]; I.

State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829 (1991)

Summary chart used for illustrative or demonstrative purposes must be a substantially accurate summary of evidence properly admitted, State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 772-74 (2007); instruction to jury that chart is not itself evidence but is only an aid in evaluating evidence should be given; summary chart should not go to jury room, but if it does reversal is required only if defendant is prejudiced; 6-3.

State v. Rogers, 70 Wn.App. 626 (1993)

Trial court admits video in vehicular homicide case in which tape made from inside vehicle driven at various speeds over path defendant's vehicle took, applying brakes as soon as driver saw a car parked in the approximate position of victim's truck, video taken in good weather in daylight while offense occurred in dark in mist, trial court instructs jury, "this videotape is...demonstrative evidence. It does not purport to be a recreation of the circumstances or conditions that existed at the time of the event..."; held: differing conditions were not significant as tape was not admitted to show what defendant actually observed but rather to demonstrate what one would see at various speeds, instruction mitigated any unfair prejudice; II.

State v. Savaria, 82 Wn.App. 832, 842-3 (1996), overruled, in part, on other grounds, State v. C.G., 150 Wn.2d 604, 611 (2003)

Witness uses transcripts of answering machine calls during testimony, defense offer of transcripts into evidence is denied; held: ER 612 gives an unqualified right to introduce writings used to refresh memory while testifying, assuming admission does not violate another rule of evidence, and assuming it is offered to impeach; I.

State v. Picard, 90 Wn.App. 890, 897-8 (1998)

Following fire, portable heater is placed by fire officials in storage locker to which many have access, at trial investigator testifies heater is in substantially same condition as when it was picked up; held: unbroken chain of custody is not required to admit evidence where it is satisfactorily identified and shown to be in substantially the same condition as when it was acquired, State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 21 (1984), State v. DeCuir, 19 Wn.App. 130, 135 (1978); II.

State v. Burkins, 94 Wn.App. 677, 693-94 (1999)

In murder case, court admits a rope found at the scene which state claims defendant planned to use to bind victim's hands, no decomposed tissue found on knot; held: to be relevant, evidence need only have a tendency to make the existence of a fact more probable, thus no abuse of discretion, State v. Quigg, 72 Wn.App. 828, 838 (1994); I.

State v. Roche, 114 Wn.App. 424, 436-38 (2002)

After drug trial, defense discovers that chemist at crime lab had been using heroin stolen from test samples and lied to police about it, new trial denied; held: chemist's credibility was "totally devastated" by his malfeasance such that a rational trier of fact could reasonably doubt his testing and preservation of chain of custody, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Brennan, 117 Wn.App. 797 (2003), Pers. Restraint of Delmarter, 124 Wn.App. 154 (2004), Pers. Restraint of Woods, 154 Wn.2d 400, 431-32 (2005); where evidence is not readily identifiable and is susceptible to alteration by tampering or contamination, proponent must establish chain of custody with sufficient completeness to render it improbable that the original has been contaminated or tampered with; factors include nature of item, circumstances surrounding preservation and custody, likelihood of tampering or alteration, State v. Campbell, 103 Wn.2d 1, 21 (1984); proponent need not identify evidence with absolute certainty and eliminate every possibility of alteration or substitution, minor discrepancies or uncertainty affect weight, not admissibility; I.

State v. Hunter, 152 Wn.App. 30, 40-42 (2009)

In homicide case, crime lab employee presents a "trigger pull measuring device" to demonstrate the feel of pulling the trigger on the recovered firearm, testifies to substantial differences between device and the firearm, trial court allows jurors to use the device; held: trial court abused its discretion in determining that the evidence was sufficiently similar to the facts sought to be proved, Jenkins v. Snohomish County Pub. Util. Dist. No. 1, 105 Wn.2d 99, 107 (1986); II.

EVIDENCE
Preservation/Brady

State v. Gerber, 28 Wn.App. 214 (1981)

Police obtained then lost address of a witness; held: testimony of missing witness was "wholly corroborative at best and was not constitutionally material," thus no denial of due process; mere possibility that an item of undisclosed evidence might help defense does not establish "materiality" in the constitutional sense; I.

State v. Nerison, 28 Wn.App. 659 (1981)

In negligent homicide prosecution, state's expert lost a taillight filament after forming an opinion that light had been on at time of collision; trial court refused to dismiss or suppress expert's testimony; affirmed by Division II, as defense failed to establish that missing evidence (1) would have been favorable to him, and (2) would have created a reasonable doubt that did not otherwise exist, per State v. Canaday, 90 Wn.2d 808 (1978), State v. Gilcrist, 91 Wn.2d 603 (1979); II.

State v. Renfro, 28 Wn.App. 248 (1981), aff'd, on other grounds, 96 Wn.2d 902 (1982)

Murder of prostitute, state failed to test semen found in deceased's vagina; defense failed to move for tests; held state has no affirmative duty to test; "reasonable possibility" standard of State v. Wright, 87 Wn.2d 783 (1976), overruled, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 303-04 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, , State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), not satisfied here; II.

State v. Boyd, 29 Wn.App. 584 (1981)

Felony flight, defense requests 911 tapes by letter to prosecutor; tapes routinely destroyed by police after letter received by state; issue at trial was license plate number, about which there was conflicting testimony; Division I reversed and dismissed as tapes were "potentially material and favorable;" I.

State v. Mounsey, 31 Wn.App. 511 (1982)

Crime lab tests rape victim's secretion samples, consuming samples without result, as insufficient amount taken; defendant claimed that lab should have tested samples to see if they matched a contraceptive spermicidal cream which defendant claims victim used prior to consensual sex; held: no error, as police need not search for exculpatory evidence or conduct tests for defense; III.

State v. Huxoll, 38 Wn.App. 360 (1984)

Hospital obtains and tests vaginal fluid sample from rape victim; defense moved for production for further testing; hospital reported it used entire sample or lost it; held: destruction of evidence by a third party does not require dismissal where state did not know of or authorize the destruction and no reasonable possibility exists that the missing evidence will be exculpatory, distinguishing State v. Vaster, 99 Wn.2d 44 (1983), overruled, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 303-04 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); here, court determines that evidence of guilt was overwhelming, and thus destroyed evidence could not have helped; accord: State v. Acheson, 48 Wn.App. 630 (1987) ; III.

State v. Judge, 100 Wn.2d 706 (1984)

In negligent homicide case, defendant seeks dismissal alleging that police failed to measure and record skid marks; held: police have a duty to preserve exculpatory evidence, but need not seek it out, State v. Jones, 26 Wn.App. 551, 534 (1980); where the claim is one of good faith or negligent destruction of evidence, defendant has burden of showing that there is a reasonable possibility that the missing evidence would have affected her ability to present a defense, State v. Vaster, 99 Wn.2d 44 (1983), overruled, State v. Orting, 119 Wn.2d 294, 303-04 (1992), State v. Romero, 113 Wn.App. 779, 795-97 (2002), but see: State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994), see: State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Koloske, 100 Wn.2d 889 (1984)

Defendant claims prosecutor failed to disclose a police report, indicating the arrest of another suspect; held: due process does not require the state to disclose every detail of all police investigatory work on a case; 9-0.

State v. Laureano, 101 Wn.2d 745 (1984)

Police destroy tape recording of a witness statement; held: destroyed tape recording was not material evidence in the constitutional sense, Statev.Canaday, 90 Wn.2d 808 (1978), State v. Gilcrist, 91 Wn.2d 603, 609 (1979); 9-0.

California v. Trombetta, 81 L.Ed.2d 413 (1984)

Police need not preserve breath samples of suspected drunk drivers in order for the results of breath-analysis tests to be admissible; 9-0.

United States v. Bagley, 87 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985)

Prosecutor fails to provide exculpatory impeachment evidence to defense; held: there is no distinction between impeachment evidence and substantive evidence where government fails to disclose it; test for appellate court is whether there is a reasonable probability that had evidence been disclosed, result of trial would have been different; case is not subject to automatic reversal for violation of confrontation clause; 5-3.

State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

In indecent liberties case, police fail to properly store a blanket containing semen stains such that blood typing tests could be performed; held: defense never moved to produce the sample for defense testing, thus defense failed to meet its burden of establishing a reasonable possibility that the lost evidence affected defendant's ability to present a defense, State v. Huxoll, 38 Wn.App. 360, 366 (1984), State v. Vaster, 99 Wn.2d 44, 52 (1983), overruled, State v. Orting, 119 Wn.2d 294, 303-04 (1992); III.

Seattle v. Duncan, 44 Wn.App. 735 (1986)

Police lose 911 tape which, defendant claims, would have corroborated his testimony; trial judge ruled that, even if the tape did so corroborate, she would have found defendant guilty; held: the mere fact that the evidence was material and potentially favorable to the defense is not enough, as court must determine whether there was reasonable possibility that the destroyed evidence would be exculpatory; here, trial court ruled that it would not, thus appellate court need not speculate as to whether the tape had a reasonable possibility of exculpating defendant; I.

State v. Coe, 109 Wn.2d 832 (1988)

In rape case, state inadvertently or negligently destroyed semen samples; held: defense failed to establish that there was a reasonable possibility that the particular evidence destroyed was material and favorable, nor that it could be tested several years later, nor that the tests were improperly performed; see: State v. Wall, 52 Wn.App. 665, 676 et. seq. (1980); 9-0.

State v. Howard, 52 Wn.App. 12 (1988)

Police have no duty to preserve potentially exculpatory evidence when initial investigation establishes no crime occurred, even if later investigation results in charges; III.

Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988)

Following sexual assault, police fail to preserve trace evidence, resulting in an inability to test victim's clothing to compare it to defendant which may have exonerated defendant; held: absent a showing of bad faith on the part of the police, failure to preserve potentially useful evidence does not constitute a denial of due process, State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829 (1991), State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015)State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994), Illinois v. Fisher, 157 L.Ed.2d 1060 (2004), State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2007), State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 393 (2017), State v. Koeller, 15 Wn.App.2d 245 (2020), State v. Yusuf, 21 Wn.App.2d 960 (2022); 6-3.

Bellevue v. Ohlson, 60 Wn.App. 485 (1991)

Destruction of simulator solution following DUI arrest does not violate due process, Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988), California v. Trombetta, 81 L.Ed.2d 413 (1984), State v. Canaday, 90 Wn.2d 808 (1978), nor does it violate statute mandating that "full information" about breath test be provided to counsel, RCW 46.61.506(6); I.

State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859 (1991)

Breath test machines display error codes on screen, but police do not record information and computer does not preserve it, trial court suppresses for destruction of evidence; held: to meet standard of constitutional materiality, evidence must possess exculpatory value that was apparent before it was destroyed and be of a nature that defendant would be unable to obtain comparable evidence by other reasonably available means, California v. Trombetta, 81 L.Ed.2d 413 (1984), State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 875-8 (1995); unless defense can show bad faith, failure to preserve potentially useful evidence does not constitute a denial of due process, Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988), State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2007), State v. Groth, 163 Wn.App. 548 (2011), State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 (2017); because invalid sample messages are not directly related to guilt or innocence, then bad faith standard of Youngblood applies, not shown here; State v. Wright, 87 Wn.2d 783 (1976) and State v. Vaster, 99 Wn.2d 44 (1983) are supplanted insofar as they are inconsistent with United States constitutional analysis; see: State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704 (1994), State v. Kenyon, 123 Wn.2d 720 (1994); accord: State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994); 9-0.

State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015)

Negligent destruction of semen samples, absent defense showing of bad faith by police, does not violate federal or state due process clauses, State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 (2017); Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988) provides proper standard for preservation of exculpatory evidence under CONST. art. 1, § 3, which is coextensive with federal requirements; accord: State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994), State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2007); see: State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704 (1994), State v. Kenyon, 123 Wn.2d 720 (1994), State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 279-81 (1996), Illinois v. Fisher, 157 L.Ed.2d 1060 (2004), State v. Yusuf, 21 Wn.App.2d 960 (2022); 5-4.

State v. Furman, 122 Wn.2d 440 (1993)

Police inadvertently lose drug pipe which defendant maintains could support his diminished capacity claim; held: pipe held no apparent exculpatory value when it was lost, thus due process clause of Fourth Amendment is not violated, California v. Trombetta, 81 L.Ed.2d 413 (1984); although pipe was potentially useful to defendant, absent bad faith, there is no United States Constitutional due process violation, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994), State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2007), State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 (2017), State v. Yusuf, 21 Wn.App.2d 960 (2022); 8-0.

State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704, 713-15 (1994)

Failure of state patrol, in vehicular homicide case, to photograph or measure skid marks was neither done in bad faith nor did defense meet burden of establishing a reasonable possibility that the missing evidence affected ability to present a defense, State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2007), State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 (2017), see: State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994); 6-3.

State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994)

Lost maintenance and repair records of breath testing instruments are only potentially useful to the defense and was not material exculpatory evidence, Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988), as they are not directly related to the accuracy of a particular breath test, at 476, State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859, 879 (1991); failure of state to keep previously maintained repair records does not establish bad faith, where logical and valid reasons for changes in record-keeping policies are established, at 477-79, Illinois v. Fisher, 157 L.Ed.2d 1060 (2004); State Toxicologist's meeting with prosecutors in drafting new protocols does not establish bad faith, as defense had opportunities to voice concerns regarding proposed protocol changes; due process clause as to preservation of evidence is coextensive under state and federal constitutions, at 479-81, re-overruling State v. Vaster, 99 Wn.2d 44 (1983) and State v. Wright, 87 Wn.2d 783 (1976); 6-3.

Kyles v. Whitley, 131 L.Ed.2d 490 (1995)

Analysis of state's failure to disclose exculpatory evidence turns on the cumulative effect of the evidence, not on item-by-item approach; test is whether, if evidence had been disclosed, there is a reasonable probability that the result would have been different, less than a preponderance, United States v. Bagley, 87 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985); prosecutor is responsible to gauge the likely net effect of all the evidence and make disclosure when the point of "reasonable probability" is reached; 5-4.

State v. Martinez, 78 Wn.App. 870, 875-8 (1995)

Physical evidence that was never in possession or control of police or prosecutor is outside scope of discovery rules, CrR 4.7(a)(4), see: State v. Wasson, 54 Wn.App. 156, 161 (1989); where evidence did not have an apparent exculpatory value before it was destroyed, it is not material, State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859, 883-4 (1991), state does not have duty to seek out exculpatory evidence, State v. Woolbright, 57 Wn.App. 697, 701 (1990); II.

State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77, 92-4 (1997), op. withdrawn, in part, State v. Carol M.D., 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999)

Police destruction of interview notes, even if in bad faith, do not mandate dismissal here, as trial court found notes were not potentially useful, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467, 475-7 (1994); II.

State v. Potts, 93 Wn.App. 82, 89 (1998)

Police seize used syringes and powder, destroy syringes which are not tested due to biohazards, defense seeks dismissal for failure to preserve; held: because the used syringes could have been inculpatory or exculpatory, they were only potentially useful to defense and, absent bad faith, destruction did not violate due process, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467, 474-75 (1994), Illinois v. Fisher, 157 L.Ed.2d 1060 (2004), State v. Johnston, 143 Wn.App. 1, 11-13 (2007), State v. Groth, 163 Wn.App. 548 (2011), State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 (2017); III.

State v. Burden, 104 Wn.App. 507 (2001)

In drug case, defendant testifies coat he was wearing in which drugs were found was not his, didn't fit, had a different name on it, following hung jury clerk loses coat, trial court dismisses; held: coat was key piece of evidence, fit of coat, name in it raised issues of ownership, exculpatory value was apparent before evidence was lost, defense is unable to obtain comparable evidence by other reasonably available means, evidence was more than merely "potentially useful" to the defense, thus dismissal is proper remedy; II.

State v. Donahue, 105 Wn.App. 67, 77-78 (2001)

In vehicular homicide case, failure of police to preserve blood sample after testing by out-of-state hospital, where the result was more than twice the per se limit, did not deny due process as the exculpatory value of the evidence was not apparent, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994); II.

State v. Kinard, 109 Wn.App. 428 (2001)

Informant testifies that defendant gave her paper with name and phone number, police lose paper, trial court admits testimony about contents; held: absent evidence of bad faith, witness may testify about contents of lost paper, ER 1004, State v. Detrick, 55 Wn.App. 501, 502-04 (1989), State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 (2017); III.

Illinois v. Fisher, 157 L.Ed.2d 1060 (2004)

Defendant is charged with drug offense, demands discovery of physical evidence, absconds, ten years later police, following procedures, destroy substance, later defendant is arrested, seeks dismissal; held: because substance was only potentially, not actually, useful to defense and because police did not act in bad faith, destruction of evidence does not constitute denial of due process, Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988); 9-0.

State v. Thomas, 160 Wn.2d 821, 850-53 (2004)

Prosecutor outlines, in opening, a witness' testimony, then does not call the witness, defense seeks mistrial for failure to disclose material evidence that state knew the witness would not testify; held: while perhaps defense may have changed tactics had it known the witness would not testify, the failure of the state to call the witness would not have changed the jurors' minds as to defendant's guilt, thus Brady v. Maryland, 10 L.Ed.2d 215 (1963) is inapplicable; 9-0.

Cone v. Bell, 173 L.Ed.2d 701 (2009)

State's withholding of evidence that might have mitigated capital sentencing violates due process clause; 6-3.

State v. Valdez, 158 Wn.App. 626 (2010)

Defendant is charged with shoplift of a laptop computer, police return computer to store, defendant testifies he bought the computer elsewhere, it didn't work, he was in the store to buy parts, seeks dismissal for destruction of evidence as claim that the computer did not work would corroborate his version; held: an item is not exculpatory merely because it may have made defendant's version of events more likely, State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244, 279-80 (1996); III.

State v. Mullen, 171 Wn.2d 881 (2011)

State expert witness in criminal case testifies at a deposition in a related civil case in which state is not a party, defense is aware of civil case, does not subpoena records, claims testimony was inconsistent; held: state is obliged to disclose material, exculpatory evidence in its possession, Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 10 L.Ed.2d 215 (1963), and in the possession of law enforcement, Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419, 437, 131 L.Ed.2d 490 (1995), and in the possession of others working on the state's behalf, State v. Lord, 161 Wn.2d 276, 292 (2007), but is not obliged to volunteer information it does not possess or of which it is unaware; where defense has enough information to find the material on its own, there is no suppression by the government, State v. Lord, supra. at 293; evidence is material only if there is a reasonable probability the result would have been different, United States v. Bagley, 473 U.S. 667, 682, 87 L.Ed.2d 481 (1985), Turner v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1885, 198 L. Ed. 2d 443 (2017), see: Pers. Restraint of Stenson, 174 Wn.2d 474 (2012), Matter of Mulamba, 199 Wn.2d 488 (2022), which is an intermediate test which does not require defense to demonstrate that the evidence would have resulted in acquittal; 9-0.

State v. Groth, 163 Wn.App. 548 (2011)

Twelve years after homicide, police destroy most physical evidence except for weapon and photographs, ten years later defendant is convicted; held: destroyed evidence here was only potentially useful, thus defense must establish bad faith to prevail, State v. Straka, 116 Wn.2d 859 (1991), Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988); while destroying evidence of a crime pursuant to a police agency's own protocols establishes an absence of bad faith, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467, 477-79 (1994), destruction of evidence that is contrary to policy does not, ipso facto, establish bad faith, see: State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 333 (2017), see: State v. Koeller, 15 Wn.App.2d 245 (2020); I.

Smith v. Cain, 565 U.S. 73, 181 L.Ed.2d 571 (2012)

Single eyewitness testifies defendant committed crime, after conviction defense discovers police notes that eyewitness had said he could not identify anyone and would not know them if he saw them; held: while impeachment evidence may not be material if state's other evidence is strong enough to sustain confidence in verdict, United States v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97, 112-113 and n. 21, 49 L.Ed.2d 342 (1976), here eyweitness' testimony was the only evidence linking defendant to the crime, thus undisclosed evidence requires Brady reversal, cf.: Turner v. United States, 137 S. Ct. 1885, 198 L. Ed. 2d 443 (2017); 8-1.

State v. Davila, 184 Wn.2d 55 (2015)

DNA evidence is introduced through a state crime lab forensic scientist who retested a swab and matched it to defendant, previously the DNA sample had been handled by a forensic scientist who was fired for incompetence which was not known to state but not disclosed to defense, neither party called the fired scientist to testify; held: defense could have cross-examined the testifying scientist about the reliability of the fired scientist and undermine the professionalism of the laboratory, thus the suppressed information was favorable to the accused; the information was known to the Washington State Patrol who was acting on behalf of the prosecution, state cannot compartmentalize evidence favorable to the defense, thus state had constructive possession of the information and wrongfully suppressed it; evaluating materiality and prejudice from the entire record, United States v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97, 112-13, 49 L.Ed.2d 342 (1976), there was little likelihood that the fired scientist's handling of the evidence could have contaminated it and no evidence that she mishandled it, thus defendant received a fair trial, but see: Seattle v. Lange, 18 Wn.App.2d 139 (2021); affirms State v. Davila, 183 Wn.App. 154, 166-73 (2014); 9-0.

Turner v. United States, 582 U.S. ___, 137 S.Ct. 1885, 198 L.Ed.2d 443 (2017)

In robbery/murder case government's theory is that a group attacked victim, two of the group confess and testify for government, other witnesses testify they observed a group attack, one appellant's confession is admitted, after conviction defense discovers government withheld evidence of the identity of a person running toward the scene after the murder and some impeachment evidence; held: while the withheld evidence was favorable to the defense, it was "too little, too weak, or too distant" from the main evidentiary points, nor is it "reasonably probable" that it would have led to a differing result at trial, cumulative effect of the withheld evidence is insufficient to undermine confidence in the verdict, Smith v. Cain, 565 U.S. 73, 75-76, 132 S.Ct. 627, 181 L.Ed.2d 571 (2012); regardless, better course is for government to disclose "any evidence favorable to the defendant," United States v. Augurs, 427 U.S. 98, 108, 96 S.Ct. 2392, 49 L.Ed.2d 342 (1976); 6-2.

State v. Armstrong, 188 Wn.2d 344-46 (2017)

Police neglect to collect store surveillance video which purports to show defendant committing the offense, store employee testifies to what video showed, see: State v. Kinard, 109 Wn.App. 428 (2001), (unclear from opinion if testimony was at trial or at pretrial hearing) and that, per store policy, video was destroyed; held: there being no evidence of bad faith by police nor that failure to obtain video violated policy, see: State v. Groth, 163 Wn.App. 548 (2011), due process clause was not violated, State v. Wittenbarger, 124 Wn.2d 467 (1994), Arizona v. Youngblood, 102 L.Ed.2d 281 (1988), State v. Koeller, 15 Wn.App.2d 245 (2020), State v. Yusuf, 21 Wn.App.2d 960 (2022); 6-3.

Pers. Restraint of Lui, 188 Wn.2d 525, 565-67 (2016)

Defense is unable to obtain detective's personnel file via public records request, state does not disclose the file, some evidence of detective's history that is known is excluded at trial, defense claims on appeal that state has burden of producing file for, at least, in camera review; Court apparently holds that because defense did not seek to compel disclosure of the file pursuant to public records act, Bainbridge Island Police Guild v. City of Puyallup, 172 Wn.2d 398 (2011), and that there was no evidence presented here that the file would contain material impeachment or exculpatory evidence, then there is no error; 7-2.

State v. Derri, 17 Wn.App.2d 376 (2021), aff'd on different grounds, 199 Wn.2d 658 (2022)

During trial state discovers that the police had access to a video from outside the building where the offense occurred, defense seeks mistrial, court offers continuance which defense declines, claims it could have done further investigation based upon the video, trial court denies motion to dismiss, CrR 8.3(b), and mistrial for discovery violation; held: trial court's decision was not manifestly unreasonable or based on untenable grounds or reasons; destruction of a different video by a non-state actor pursuant to a video-retention policy did not entitle defense to a missing evidence instruction; I.

Seattle v. Lange, 18 Wn.App.2d 139 (2021)

In DUI case police disclose to city that blood test analyst had erred in another case that caused a false positive, city discloses it to defense "days before trial," trial court suppresses blood test results for discovery violation, city seeks writ; held: CrRLJ 47(a)(3) mandates disclosure of any information which tends to negate guilt, impeachment information meets that test, unlike a constitutional Brady issue the rules do not require proof of materiality before mandating disclosure as long as the information sought is discoverable under the rules, suppression is a proper remedy within discretion of the trial court, CrRLJ 4.7(g)(7)(i) does not require proof of prejudice; I.

Matter of Mulamba, 199 Wn.2d 488 (2022)

After conviction for child abuse defense discovers jail records of state's witness-codefendant regarding suicide attempts, contraband and statement by jail guard that the witness is “untrustworthy,” and that prosecutor met with the witness in jail, counseling her that she would better off in prison than in the jail; held: the jail records have some potential impeachment value, prosecutor has access to confidential jail records, RCW 70.48.100(2) (2020), where state has designated an incarcerated individual as a witness state has a duty to disclose those records to defense where prosecution has some knowledge, actual or constructive, of records defense should receive; here, because the witness was not the sole basis for the state’s case and she was otherwise impeached there was no reasonable probability that the trial would have turned out differently had the material been disclosed, cf.: In re Stenson, 174 Wn.2d 474 (2012); 8-1.

EVIDENCE
Reputation and Character

State v. Deach, 40 Wn.App. 614 (1985)

Prosecutor's reviewing a defendant's version of an event on cross-examination without bringing out any inconsistencies is not an attack on his truthful character for purposes of ER 608(a)(2), which permits admission of a witness's truthful character after his truthfulness has been attacked by "reputation evidence or otherwise"; I.

State v. Fondren, 41 Wn.App. 17 (1985)

In homicide case, evidence of victim's peaceful character is only admissible to rebut evidence that the victim was the first aggressor, ER 404(a)(2), State v. Bius, 23 Wn.App. 807 (1979); evidence of specific acts are admissible for the limited purpose of showing whether the defendant had a reasonable apprehension of danger, ER 404; where defendant did not know who victim was, evidence of specific acts is not admissible, State v. Walker, 13 Wn.App. 545, 547-48 (1975); III.

State v. Robinson, 44 Wn.App. 611 (1986)

Where there is corroborating physical evidence in an indecent liberties case, then trial court does not abuse its discretion by preventing defense from inquiring into its primary witness's character for truthfulness, ER 608(b), distinguishing State v. York, 28 Wn.App. 33 (1980); where prosecutor does not attack defendant's reputation for truthfulness, then defendant's character trait for truthfulness is not pertinent to the charge of indecent liberties as his honesty makes it no less likely that he committed the crime, State v. Harper, 35 Wn.App. 855, 859-60 (1984), distinguishing State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984); III.

State v. Jackson, 46 Wn.App. 360 (1986)

Reputation for moral decency is not pertinent to whether one has committed indecent liberties or incest, but see: State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 827-30 (2000), State v. Cox, 17 Wn.App.2d 178 (2021); I.

State v. Alexander, 52 Wn.App. 897 (1988)

In self-defense case, victim's reputation for violence is admissible, ER 405(a), while specific acts of violence are not admissible, ER 405(b), as victim's character trait of violence is not an essential element of claim of self-defense, State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 565-66 (2014), State v. Hutchinson, 135 Wn.2d 863, 886-87 (1998); thus, while victim's claim of peaceful character could be impeached by cross-examination regarding specific acts of violence, they are collateral to the principal issues being tried, State v. Oswalt, 62 Wn.2d 118, 121 (1963), and the examiner is bound by the denial and cannot offer independent evidence to impeach, State v. Heath, 58 Wn.App. 320 (1990); I.

State v. O'Neill, 58 Wn.App. 367 (1990)

In DUI case, trial court properly suppressed defendant's proposed testimony that he had never been convicted of a crime, as the character trait that defendant was law-abiding was not offered in the form of reputation evidence, ER 405(a); 2-1, I.

State v. Heath, 58 Wn.App. 320 (1990)

In kidnapping case, defense witness testifies that defendant wouldn't hurt anyone; on cross, state asks if witness is aware of a prior kidnapping by defendant, witness denies believing it; witness is asked if she is aware of a prior assault on children, witness says she heard a different version; because character witness denied knowing about or believing the specific instances of misconduct, ER 405(a), the impeachment was "ineffective," thus state lacked a good faith basis for inquiry into the specific instances of conduct which should have been excluded by trial court; I.

State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561 (1991)

In murder case, defense offers reputation evidence that victim was homosexual to support claim that defendant killed victim after victim grabbed defendant's crotch and tried to kiss him; held: while evidence of victim's reputation as a homosexual may tend to prove that he grabbed defendant's crotch, it is not "of consequence to the determination of the action," ER 401, because self-defense is only available to a defendant who is responding to a perceived threat of great bodily harm or to the victim's commission of a violent felony, State v. Griffith, 91 Wn.2d 572, 576 (1979), which is not present here; evidence of specific instances of homosexual behavior clearly inadmissible, ER 404(b), 405(a), see: State v. Munguia, 107 Wn.App. 328, 335-36 (2001); II.

State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829 (1991)

Cellmates testify to incriminating statements made by defendant in jail, defense offer of reputation evidence as to veracity by cellmate's probation officer refused; held: the criminal justice system is not the "community in which [witness] resides," ER 608(a), as system is neither neutral enough nor generalized enough to be classed as a community and a probation officer is not equipped to provide an unbiased and reliable evaluation of an inmate's general reputation for truth telling, see: State v. Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925, 934-5 (1997), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 315 (2005), State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 804-05 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014), but see: State v. Land, 121 Wn.2d 494 (1993).

State v. Janes, 64 Wn.App. 134 (1992), rev'd on other grounds, 121 Wn.2d 220 (1993)

In murder/self-defense case, defendant's reputation for peacefulness to support diminished capacity was properly excluded, since the only issue was defendant's mental state, and reputation is not probative of mental state; but see: State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271, 279 n. 9 (1994); I.

State v. Land, 121 Wn.2d 494 (1993)

Reputation evidence, ER 608, may include reputation in any substantial, neutral, general community of people among whom witness is well known, including business community, State v. Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925, 935-6 (1997), State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77, 94-5 (1997), op. withdrawn, in part, 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999), overruling State v. Swenson, 62 Wn.2d 259 (1963);

Supreme Court adopts federal approach to ER 608; relevant factors include frequency of contact between members of community, amount of time a person is known in the community, role a person plays in the community and number of people in the community, see: State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 804-05 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014); 5-3.

State v. Eakins, 127 Wn.2d 490 (1995)

In assault case, defendant admits the act charged but submits expert testimony in support of diminished capacity defense, trial court excludes character evidence of defendant's reputation as a peaceful law-abiding citizen; held: where specific intent is an element of the crime and defendant produces expert testimony demonstrating that defendant suffered from a mental condition that impaired his ability to form that intent, defendant's evidence of a pertinent character trait is admissible, ER 404(a)(1), to show circumstantially that the expert was correct, see: State v. Arine, 182 Wash. 697 (1935), State v. Kelly, 102 Wn.2d 188, 193 (1984), State v. Allen, 89 Wn.2d 651, 657 (1978), Kennewick v. Day, 142 Wn.2d 1 (2000), distinguishing State v. Lewis, 37 Wn.2d 540, 544 (1950), effectively overruling State v. Janes, 64 Wn.App. 134, 144-5 (1992), rev'd on other grounds, 121 Wn.2d 220 (1993); affirms State v. Eakins, 73 Wn.App. 271 (1994); 4-1-4.

State v. Callahan, 87 Wn.App. 925 (1997)

In self-defense case, defendant denies knowing victim before the shooting, offers police testimony as to victim's reputation acquired from past encounters with criminal justice system and testimony of a person who knew victim two years before, both excluded; defendant offers evidence of his own reputation for peacefulness in his workplace; held: reputation evidence must be based upon witness's personal knowledge of victim's reputation in community, defendant's lack of knowledge supports exclusion, State v. Negrin, 37 Wn.App. 516, 526 (1984); "criminal justice system" is neither neutral nor sufficiently generalized to be classified as a community, State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 874 (1991), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 315 (2005); trial court's exclusion of reputation testimony as remote is within proper discretion; defendant's reputation for peacefulness in work community is admissible, State v. Land, 121 Wn.2d 494, 498-501 (1993); II.

State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77, 94-5 (1997), op. withdrawn, in part, State v. Carol M.D., 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999)

Boy Scouts is a sufficient community to admit evidence of a witness's poor reputation for truthfulness, State v. Land, 121 Wn.2d 494, 498 (1993); II.

State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 827-30 (2000)

Sexual morality is a pertinent character trait in rape case, State v. Cox, 17 Wn.App.2d 178 (2021), but see: State v. Jackson, 46 Wn.App. 360 (1986); "good moral character" is too broad; III.

Kennewick v. Day, 142 Wn.2d 1 (2000)

In drug possession case with unwitting possession defense, evidence of defendant's reputation for sobriety from drugs and alcohol is relevant, State v. Eakins, 127 Wn.2d 490 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Munguia, 107 Wn.App. 328, 335-36 (2001)

In murder case where defendant claims self-defense from homosexual advance, evidence of victim's homosexual internet sites on his computer does not tend to prove that he attempted to sexually assault defendant, and is thus inadmissible character evidence, State v. Bell, 60 Wn.App. 561, 564 (1991), ER 404(b), 405(a); III.

State v. Woods, 117 Wn.App. 278 (2003)

In rape of a child case, results of psychosexual evaluation opining that defendant has no predisposition to sexual attraction to children or sexual impulsivity is relevant, as sexual morality is a pertinent character trait in sex offenses, State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 823 (2000), but was properly excluded as opinion evidence is not admissible as proof of character, State v. Kelly, 102 Wn.2d 188, 195 (1984), ER 405(a); III.

State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 315 (2005)

In assault case, defendant's reputation for peacefulness within his family is insufficiently neutral and generalized to be classed as a community, State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 874 (1991); II.

State v. Mercer-Drummer, 128 Wn.App. 625 (2005)

Evidence that defendant has never been convicted of a crime is not an essential element of assault, obstructing or resisting, thus is not admissible to show that defendant is a "law abiding citizen," ER 405(a), and was not offered in the form of reputation evidence, State v. O'Neill, 58 Wn.App. 367 (1990); 2-1, II.

State v. Fisher, 130 Wn.App. 1, 16-18 (2005)

In child abuse case, defense witness testifies defendant had a reputation for "almost being a teddy bear" around children, state inquires if witness' opinion would change if he knew defendant spanked victim; held: character witness may be crossed concerning personal knowledge of specific prior acts of misconduct by defendant; must be good faith of plaintiff to discredit witness, not defendant, State v. Styles, 93 Wn.2d 173, 176-77 (1980), State v. McFadden, 63 Wn.App. 441, 450 n.25 (1991), within discretion of trial court; II.

State v. Gregory, 158 Wn.2d 759, 804-05 (2006), overruled, on other grounds, State v. W.R., 181 Wn.2d 757 (2014)

Poor reputation for truthfulness within a family is insufficiently neutral and generalized to be classed as a community, State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 874 (1991), State v. Binh Thach, 126 Wn.App. 297, 315 (2005); 8-1.

State v. Perez-Valdez, 172 Wn.2d 808, 819-21 (2011)

In rape case, trial court admits, without objection, evidence that defendant is of good moral character, later grants state's motion to preclude reference to that evidence in closing argument; held: general reputation for good character is not pertinent to a specific element of rape of a child, ER 404(a)(1); it is not error to bar argument about a nonpertinent trait of the defendant; 5-4.

State v. Stacy, 181 Wn.App. 553, 565-66 (2014)

In assault case trial court admits reputation evidence that defendant is peaceful but excludes evidence that defendant had not been in a fight since 8th grade; held: specific instances of conduct to prove peacefulness is properly excluded as character is not an essential element of the offense or defense, ER 405(b), State v. Mercer-Drummer, 128 Wn.App. 625, 632 (2005); I.

State v. Riley, 12 Wn.App.2d 714 460 P.3d 184 (2020)

Trial court prohibits defense from offering witnesses, in telephone harassment trial, to testify that defendant and victim did not have a violent relationship as rebuttal to evidence admitted that defendant committed prior acts of violence to prove a true threat and genuine fear; held: while evidence of defendant's peaceful character may have been admissible as reputation evidence, ER 404(a)(1), 405(a), recasting peaceful character evidence as rebuttal thus avoiding the need to establish a foundation for character evidence is not permitted; 2-1.

State v. Cox, 17 Wn.App.2d 178 (2021)

In rape case defense offers witnesses to testify that they were friends of defendant, that they never heard anything negative about his sexual morality and that his reputation for sexual morality is good, trial court's excludes it as none of them had any actual knowledge of defendant's sexual morality; held exclusion was error as reputation evidence of good sexual morality is pertinent to a sex crime charge, State v. Griswold, 98 Wn.App. 817, 827-30 (2000), but see: State v. Jackson, 46 Wn.App. 360 (1986); proving a positive reputation by negative inference, the absence of bad information, is a proper method of establishing reputation, State v. Underwood, 35 Wash. 558, 572 (1904); III.

EVIDENCE
Scientific*

Seattle v. Peterson, 39 Wn.App. 524 (1985)

To have radar evidence admitted to prove speeding, plaintiff must establish, through expert testimony, that the radar unit was so designed and constructed that the results produced by proper operation are reliable; Frye test must be met, State v. Canaday, 90 Wn.2d 808 (1978); see: State v. Roberts, 73 Wn.App. 141 (1994), Bellevue v. Lightfoot, 75 Wn.App. 44 (1994); I.

State v. Flett, 40 Wn.App. 277 (1985)

Hair comparison analysis is admissible in discretion of trial court, 23 ALR 4th 1199 (1983); III.

Tennant v. Roys, 44 Wn.App. 305 (1986)

Blood test results in civil case are admissible where the blood sample was analyzed but once in spite of WAC 448-14-020 which states that blood analysis "should include . . . duplicate analysis", as "should" is directional, not mandatory; I.

State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987)

Expert testimony on "rape trauma syndrome" to prove that the victim did not consent is not sufficiently accepted in the scientific community to be admissible, and constitutes an opinion as to the guilt of the defendant, thereby invading the exclusive province of the jury, State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 813-21 (1993), see: State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009), but see: State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990).

State v. Huynh, 49 Wn.App. 192 (1987)

Scientific evidence that two samples of gasoline might or could have matched held not to meet standard of Frye v. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923) due to questionable scientific method and lack of corroborative testing; I.

Bellevue v. Mociulski, 51 Wn.App. 855 (1988)

Speed measuring device (radar) affidavits are admissible in traffic infraction cases, CrRLJ 6.13, as an exception to the hearsay rule; I.

State v. Toennis, 52 Wn.App. 176 (1988)

Evidence of battered child syndrome is admissible, State v. Mulder, 29 Wn.App. 513 (1981), to explain continuing nature of abuse and to rebut any inference of accidental injury; II.

State v. Briggs, 55 Wn.App. 44 (1989)

In rape case where victim claims rapist did not stutter, and defense maintains that defendant stutters, it was within trial court's discretion to allow speech expert to relate names of well-known personalities who stutter but not when performing and that there are situations in

---

* See also: EVIDENCE/DNA

which there was a high probability that a person would not stutter, including the statistical percentage of that probability, see: State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 70 (1994); I.

State v. Noltie, 57 Wn.App. 21 (1990)

Colposcopy, a gynecological magnifier, is not subject to Frye test; see also: State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895 (1991); I.

State v. Aaron, 57 Wn.App. 277 (1990)

Police officer may explain that use of gloves, socks or handkerchiefs is a common reason for absence of fingerprints without meeting the rigors of a scientific theory as it is not sophisticated expert testimony; I.

State v. Stevens, 58 Wn.App. 478 (1990)

Expert's testimony as to behaviors consistent in sexually abused children that she had observed in working with such children in the field is admissible where expert does not testify that victims in this case fit a profile, State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263, 279-80 (1988), State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754, 764-65 (1989), State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990), see: State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009), State v. Case, 13 Wn.App.2d 657 (2020), distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987); I.

State v. Hanson, 58 Wn.App. 504 (1990)

Battered woman syndrome testimony is irrelevant to support accident defense or for purposes of enhancing defendant's credibility, distinguishing State v. Allery, 101 Wn.2d 591 (1984), State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263 (1988); 2-1, I.

State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634 (1990)

In statutory rape case, therapist, acknowledging inconsistencies in victim's testimony, states it is not unusual for victims to be reluctant to testify, common for victims not to tell whole story or to add or subtract facts; held: therapist did not espouse a theory proving guilt, State v. Ciskie, 110 Wn.2d 263 (1988), distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987), see: State v. Hudson, 150 Wn.App. 646 (2009),; because therapist's testimony was based upon her personal observations and was not an explanatory theory, then state need not meet test of Frye v. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923) or ER 702; cf.: State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 813-21 (1993); I.

State v. Graham, 59 Wn.App. 418 (1990)

In statutory rape case, expert testifies that a delay in reporting abuse by young women is common, to rebut defense inference that delay demonstrated that victim was lying; held: testimony not offered to prove abuse, but merely that delay is not inconsistent with abuse, State v. Madison, 53 Wn.App. 754 (1989), distinguishing State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987); I.

State v. Young, 62 Wn.App. 895 (1991)

Frye standard does not apply to the expression of expert medical opinions concerning the cause of an injury, as there is a distinction between a new scientific technique and the development of a body of medical knowledge and expertise; I.

State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51 (1991)

Defense motion to appoint psychiatrist to examine victim to assist in cross-examination properly denied as no compelling reason and no question as to competency to testify was shown, State v. Demos, 94 Wn.2d 733, 738 (1980), State v. Tobias, 53 Wn.App. 635, 637 (1989), State v. Israel, 91 Wn.App. 846, 849-53 (1998); denial of funds to hire experts, CrR 3.1(f), is proper where the witness's testimony is not a necessity, State v. Kelly, 102 Wn.2d 188, 200-01 (1984), within trial court's informed discretion, State v. Melos, 42 Wn.App. 638, 640 (1986), State v. Young, 125 Wn.2d 688 (1995); 9-0.

State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829 (1991)

Electrophoresis blood typing, acid phosphate semen testing, infrared spectroscopy, x-ray fluorescent spectroscopy, epi-illumination microscopy and spectrophotometer evidence are admissible; expert testimony couched in terms of "could have," "possible," or "similar" is admissible when analyzing common sources of trace evidence, State v. Batten, 17 Wn.App. 428 (1977).

State v. Becerra, 66 Wn.App. 202 (1992)

Where lab reports are not provided to defense at least 15 days before trial, or less time upon good cause, they must be excluded, CrR 6.13(b); III.

State v. Braham, 67 Wn.App. 930 (1992)

In child molestation case, expert testimony about "grooming," i.e., the dynamics of victim-offender relationships prior to the initiation of sexual abuse, is inadmissible "profile" testimony which impermissibly places defendant in a group more likely to commit the crime, State v. Petrich, 101 Wn.2d 566 (1984), State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287, 293 (1983), State v. Claflin, 38 Wn.App. 847 (1985), see: State v. Avenando-Lopez, 79 Wn.App. 706 (1995), but see: Pers. Restraint of Phelps, 190 Wn.2d 155 (2018); I.

State v. Jones, 71 Wn.App. 798, 813-21 (1993)

In child sex abuse case, expert testimony that behavior of victim is common to sexually abused children, specifically sexual acting out and nightmares, no Frye standard applied; held: when personal experience is used as a basis for generalized statements regarding the behavior of sexually abused children as a class, the testimony crosses over to scientific testimony regarding a profile or syndrome, whether or not the term is used, and should be subject to the Frye standard, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294 (1992), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), State v. Maule, 35 Wn.App. 287 (1983); when the testimony is limited to the witness's observations of a specific group, Frye is not applicable, State v. Cleveland, 58 Wn.App. 634, 646 (1990); because the use of testimony on general behavioral characteristics of sexually abused children is still in dispute among experts, its use as a general profile to prove existence of abuse is inappropriate, State v. Black, 109 Wn.2d 336 (1987), although it is admissible to rebut allegations by defendant that victim's behavior is inconsistent with abuse; I.

State v. Roberts, 73 Wn.App. 141 (1994)

In speeding infraction case, officer testifies, without objection, that his radar gun had clocked defendant above speed limit, after which defense motion to dismiss on grounds court could not consider radar testimony because state had not proved radar device was constructed and designed to determine speed, Seattle v. Peterson, 39 Wn.App. 524 (1985); held: while state was required to prove authentication, since evidence from a process or system must be authenticated before admission, ER 901(b)(9), where no authentication objection is made, the requirement of authentication is waived, ER 103(a)(1), Seattle v. Bryan, 53 Wn.2d 321, 324 (1958); where evidence is admitted, trial court must consider it in light most favorable to nonmoving party in ruling on motion to dismiss; II.

Bellevue v. Lightfoot, 75 Wn.App. 214 (1994)

Radar evidence does not require expert testimony that the engineering design of the particular radar device is generally accepted as reliable in the scientific community, rather it is sufficient that, in addition to evidence that it was functioning properly, a qualified expert testify that the particular device passed the requisite tests and checks to ensure its operational accuracy, Bellevue v. Mociulski, 51 Wn.App. 855 (1988), distinguishing Seattle v. Peterson, 39 Wn.App. 524 (1985); I.

State v. Copeland, 130 Wn.2d 244 (1996)

Frye standard will continue to apply to novel scientific evidence in Washington, court declines to adopt Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 125 L.Ed.2d 469 (1993), see: Kurmho Tire v. Carmichael, 143 L.Ed.2d 238 (1999); 9-0.

State v. Stenson, 132 Wn.2d 668, 712-18 (1997)

Phenolphthalein test for blood, while presumptive because other materials other than blood can cause a positive reaction, is admissible where supported by forensic scientist's testimony that stains looked like blood by visual and microscopic inspection; 8-0.

State v. Hayden, 90 Wn.App. 100 (1998)

Enhanced digital imaging fingerprint analysis, performed by qualified experts using appropriate software, meets Frye test; I.

State v. Greene, 139 Wn.2d 64 (1999)

Dissociative Identity Disorder (DID), formerly called multiple personality disorder, meets Frye test, as it is accepted in DSM-IV; even if generally accepted in principle, scientific evidence is inadmissible unless helpful to trier of fact under particular facts of specific case, ER 702; here, the evidence failed to establish which personality the mental evaluation should focus upon, thus expert testimony is inadmissible, see: State v. Wheaton, 121 Wn.2d 347 (1993); reverses State v. Greene, 92 Wn.App. 80 (1998); 9-0.

State v. Baity, 140 Wn.2d 1 (2000)

Horizontal gaze nystagmus (HGN) testing satisfies Frye test, State v. Cissne, 72 Wn.App. 677 (1994); drug recognition evaluation (DRE) protocol and chart used to classify behavioral patterns associated with categories of drugs meet Frye standard where all 12 steps of protocol have been undertaken; officer may not testify in a fashion that casts an aura of scientific certainty to the testimony, State v. Quaale, 182 Wn.2d 191 (2014), nor may officer predict specific levels of drugs present; qualified officer may express opinion that suspect's behavior and physical attributes are or are not consistent with behavioral and physical signs associated with certain categories of drugs, at 17-18; to meet ER 702, DRE evidence must include a description of witness's training, education and experience together with a showing that test was properly administered; court may not refer to DRE witness as an "expert" until witness is qualified, at 4 n. 1; 9-0.

State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832 (1999)

Latent earprint identification does not meet Frye standard, although on retrial a comparison of latent earprints and an opinion of nonexclusion may be offered; II.

State v. Roberts, 142 Wn.2d 471, 520-22 (2000)

Blood splatter evidence based upon expert's viewing photographs is admissible; 6-3.

State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747, 761-62 (2002)

Police officer who completed 40-hour DEA course on meth labs, attended other conferences and a refresher course is qualified as an expert, within discretion of trial court, ER 702, State v. Ortiz, 119 Wn.2d 294, 310 (1992),disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015); III.

State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844, 862-64 (2002)

Bank teller hides radio tracking device in bait money which is used to find defendant, who demands a Frye hearing as predicate to admissibility of evidence of the device; held: tracking device does not involve novel scientific theory, employs common technology, thus no hearing was required, see: State v. Ramirez, 5 Wn.App.2d 118, 135-38 (2018); I.

State v. Willis, 113 Wn.App. 389 (2002), aff'd, 151 Wn.2d 265 (2004)

In child rape case, while propriety and effect of specific interviewing techniques on children may be a proper subject for expert testimony, distinguishing State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 655 (1990), here the offer of proof established that without a verbatim report the expert could not evaluate the interview techniques thus, apparently, because the interviews weren't recorded, it was proper for trial court to exclude the testimony; I.

State v. Phillips, 123 Wn.App. 761 (2004)

In vehicular homicide case, trial court admits accident reconstruction expert's use of PC-Crash computer-assisted reconstruction calculations following Frye hearing; held: general acceptance in the relevant scientific, technical or specialized community may be found from testimony that asserts the general acceptance, from articles and publications, from widespread use or from holdings of other courts, State v. Kunze, 97 Wn.App. 832, 853 (1999); if there is a significant dispute between qualified experts as to the validity of scientific evidence, there is no general acceptance, State v. Cauthron, 120 Wn.2d 879, 887 (1993), but mere disagreement as to the conclusions or weight given the results does not amount to a significant dispute, State v. Russell, 125 Wn.2d 24, 51 (1994), see: State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019); decisions from other jurisdictions may be considered not as to whether the courts have accepted the evidence, but whether the scientific community accepts the evidence and whether other jurisdictions have found evidence of widespread use, State v. Jones, 130 Wn.2d 302, 307 (1996); here, because accident reconstruction software and computer simulations are based on the application of long-standing scientific principles, the evidence is admissible, see also: State v. Sipin, 130 Wn.App. 403 (2005); II.

State v. Bashaw, 169 Wn.2d 133, 140-44 (2010) , overruled, on other grounds, State v. Guzman Nuñez, 174 Wn.2d 707 (2012)

To prove a drug offense occurred within 1000 feet of a school bus stop, officer testifies that he used a rolling measuring device that he borrowed from the chief, that he hadn't used it before but they are commonly used by police, and explained how it works, defense foundation objection is overruled; held: authentication requires that the party offering the results make a prima facie showing that the device was functioning properly and produced accurate results, ER 901(a), which state failed to do; "[n]o comparison of results generated by the device to a known distance was made nor was there any evidence that it had ever been inspected or calibrated," at ¶ 15, see also: State v. Pearson, 180 Wn.App. 576 (2014); reverses State v. Bashaw, 144 Wn.App. 196 (2008); 6-3.

State v. Weaville, 162 Wn.App. 801, 823-25 (2011)

Forensic toxicologist who testifies she is educated in effects of drugs on humans is qualified to render opinions on effects of MDMA, State v. Flett, 40 Wn.App. 277, 285 (1985); I.

State v. Groth, 163 Wn.App. 548, 561-64 (2011)

Human tracking evidence, while not a scientific discipline, is admissible as expert testimony, within trial court's discretion where court is satisfied as to witness' skill and experience; I.

Pers. Restraint of Morris, 176 Wn.2d 157, 168-71 (2012)

In child abuse case, expert testimony about the suggestibility of young children as it relates to specific interview techniques is helpful to the jury, distinguishing State v. Swan, 114 Wn.2d 613, 656 (1990), see: State v. Willis, 151 Wn.2d 255, 261 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Brewczynski, 173 Wn.App. 541, 554-57 (2013)

Expert testifies that defendant's boot matched bloody footprint embedded in a blanket by shaping clay around the sole of the boot and comparing it to the overlay of the bloody print; held: "[c]ourts typically reject the Frye test when the method used by the expert is a matter of physical comparison rather than a scientific test;" III.

State v. Quaale, 182 Wn.2d 191 (2014)

At DUI investigation trooper does horizontal gaze nystagmus (HGN) test, at trial trooper testifies over objection that, based upon the test there was "no doubt" defendant was impaired; held: to determine admissibility of challenged opinion testimony, factors are (1) type of witness, (2) specific nature of testimony, (3) charge, (4) defense and (5) other evidence before trier of fact, *State v. Montgomer*y, 163 Wn.2d 577 (2008); here, officer's opinion on the core disputed fact in the form of a conclusion from scientific evidence that the jury was not in a position to independently assess, testimony violated defendant's constitutional right to have a fact critical to his guilt determined by the jury, State v. Baity, 140 Wn.2d 1 (2000), cf.: Seattle v. Heatley, 70 Wn.App. 573 (1993), State v. Song Wang, 5 Wn.App.2d 12, 28-30 (2018); affirms State v. Quaale, 177 Wn.App. 603 (2013); 5-4.

State v. Pigott, 181 Wn.App. 247 (2014)

ACE-V fingerprint analysis technique is accepted in the scientific community and does not require a Frye hearing, State v. Lizarraga, 191 Wn.App. 530, 565-67 (2015); I.

Pers. Restraint of Morris, 189 Wn.App. 484 (2015)

Abusive head trauma, as a cause of assault of a child, is accepted in the scientific community and failure to challenge an expert on that causation testimony is not ineffective assistance; differential diagnosis methodology is a reliable method of ascertaining causation; I.

State v. Ramirez, 5 Wn.App.2d 118, 135-38 (2018)

Historic cell site analysis used to identify the approximate location of a cell phone at a given time meets the Frye test, see: State v. Vermillion, 112 Wn.App. 844, 862-64 (2002); III.

State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784 (2019)

In murder/arson case trial court excludes some of defense arson expert's testimony ruling that he did not follow the scientific method and did not follow well established scientific methodology; held: ER 702 requires trial court to engage in a gatekeeping role and trial court may exclude testimony it determines does not adhere to reliable methodology, which is reviewed for abuse of discretion; while there is a 6th amendment right to present a defense trial court remains gatekeeper, and ER 702 rulings are based upon abuse of discretion standard, State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 762 (2007), State v. Clark, 187 Wn.2d 641, 648-56 (2017), although appellate court will look to the constitutional issue de novo, State v. Jennings, ___ Wn.2d ___, 502 P.3d 1255 (2022); 6-3.

State v. DeJesus, 7 Wn.App.2d 849 (2019)

Ballistics identification meets Frye test and does not require a "Frye hearing," reports upon which defense rely do not affect the general scientific acceptance of ballistic identification, rather the problems they espouse bear on the question of reliability of the individual test and tester at issue; I.

Seattle v. Levesque, 12 Wn.App.2d 687 (2020)

Officer, not a drug recognition expert, testifies that defendant showed signs consistent with a central nervous system stimulant and was definitely impaired; held: officer was not qualified to opine as to whether defendant was affected by a specific category of drugs, State v. Baity, 140 Wn.2d 1 (2000), distinguishing State v. McPherson, 111 Wn.App. 747, 761-62 (2002); I.

State v. Murry, 13 Wn.App.2d 542 (2020), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Canela, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL803396 (2022)

Trial court admits evidence of a Transmission Electronics Microscope (TEM), scientists testify at Frye hearing that TEM is used in the scientific community to examine nanoparticles, including asbestos fibers and viruses, defense argues that it was inadmissible as proper scientific community is the criminal forensic community; held: to admit expert testimony court must look to the scientific community familiar with the technology, not just forensics, L.M. v. Hamilton, 193 Wn.2d 113, 135 (2019); III.

State v. Markovich, 19 Wn.App.2d 137 (2021)

Defendant testifies at trial that he had a head injury, court precludes physician's testimony that defendant's head injury could compound existing encephalopathy and thus his statements to police were unreliable; held: trial court properly exercised discretion in excluding the testimony as there was no evidence that defendant was actually diagnosed with the effects of a head injury; I.

State v. Heng, 22 Wn.App.2d 717 (2022)

In felony murder/arson case fire marshal testifies as to her opinion of how many fires were set, concurs that she did not follow National Fire Protection Agency (NPFA) 921, trial court admits the testimony; held: admissibility is within trial court's discretion as witness was qualified as an expert, Lakey v. Puget Sound Energy, Inc., 176 Wn.2d 909 (2013), State v. Arndt, 194 Wn.2d 784, 802 (2019); I.

State v. Caril, 23 Wn.App.2d 416 (2022)

To support diminished capacity defense counsel seeks to inquire of psychologist about contents of competency evaluation that defense expert relied upon, court excludes it, although relevant its probative value was outweighed by unfair prejudice and confusion because of the difference between competency versus capacity to form intent at time of the incident; held: when a party seeks to introduce otherwise inadmissible facts through an expert who has relied on them trial court has discretion to determine the extent to which the expert my relate the inadmissible information to the trier of fact, ER 705; court has discretion to exclude such evidence to prevent a mechanism for admitting otherwise inadmissible evidence, State v. Anderson, 44 Wn.App. 644, 652 (1986); an expert's testimony disclosing inadmissible facts or data to explain the expert's opinion "is not proof of them" as substantive evidence, Grp. Health Co-op. of Puget Sound, Inc. v. State Through Dep't of Revenue, 106 Wn.2d 391, 399 (1986), State v. Wineberg, 74 Wn.2d 372, 381 (1968); I.

EVIDENCE
Sufficiency*

State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d 216 (1980)

Review on challenge to sufficiency of the evidence is no longer substantial evidence, but is now whether, after viewing the evidence most favorable to the state, any rational trier of fact could have found guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, per Jackson v. Virginia, 61 L.Ed.2d 560 (1979); Moore v. Duckworth, 61 L.Ed.2d 865 (1979); 6-3.

State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788 (1983)

Defendant, charged with taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070, admits he did not know who owned the car, which was stolen either that day or the day prior; held: court could infer defendant had knowledge that car was taken unlawfully, see: State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996), State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999); I.

State v. Kerry, 34 Wn.App. 674 (1983)

Merely because defense puts on evidence does not preclude review for sufficiency, State v. Portrey, 102 Wn.App. 898, 903 n. 1 (2000); I.

State v. Gerard, 36 Wn.App. 7 (1983)

Witnesses testify they saw respondent near motorbike that had a "for sale" sign on it, they later saw respondent driving the bike, although they describe bike differently; held: respondent's proximity to bike establishes knowledge element for taking and riding; taking evidence in light most favorable to state, evidence is sufficient; I.

State v. Baeza, 100 Wn.2d 487 (1983)

Challenge to sufficiency of evidence may be raised for first time on appeal; 9-0.

Richardson v. United States, 82 L.Ed.2d 242 (1984)

Following a hung jury, defendant has no valid double jeopardy claim to prevent retrial, as there has been no termination of original jeopardy, regardless of sufficiency of the evidence; 7-2.

State v. Howell, 40 Wn.App. 49 (1985)

Where jury convicts, after which trial court arrests judgment and dismisses for failure to prove venue, appellate court can reinstate verdict, since defendant was already convicted and court is merely reinstating verdict, not retrying case, see: Auburn v. Hedlund, 137 Wn.App. 494 (2007), rev'd, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 645 (2009); III.

State v. CLR, 40 Wn.App. 839 (1985)

---

* See chapters on substantive crimes, e.g., ASSAULT, BURGLARY, DEADLY WEAPON/FIREARM, FORGERY, ROBBERY, SEX OFFENSES, VUCSA.

Defendant observes, does not hear, undercover officer speaking with a prostitute, shouts "he's vice," is charged with obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020(3); held: state failed to prove actual knowledge that the officer was engaged in official duties; see also: State v. Graham, 130 Wn.2d 711 (1996), State v. Ware, 111 Wn.App. 738 (2002); I.

Seattle v. Camby, 104 Wn.2d 49 (1985)

Intoxicated defendant repeatedly threatens bar bouncer who testified he was not provoked; defendant charged with harassment, SMC § 12A.06.040; held: proscription against fighting words is not violated by language directed against a civilian unless the language, evaluated in the context in which it was uttered, is of such a nature that it would be likely to provoke a violent reaction from an ordinary citizen; addressee's actual reaction is relevant; reverses Seattle v. Camby, 38 Wn.App. 442 (1984); but see: State v. Allen, 88 Wn.2d 394 (1977), State v. Thomas, 46 Wn.App. 723 (1987), Elonis v. United States, 575 U.S. 723, 135 S.Ct. 2001, 192 L.Ed.2d 1 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Flieger, 45 Wn.App. 667 (1986)

Where information and probable cause affidavit establish that state cannot make factual issue on each element, then the trial court may resolve the issue prior to trial; III.

State v. Johnson, 45 Wn.App. 794 (1986)

Situs or venue is not an element of the crime which may be proved by circumstantial evidence, distinguishing dicta in State v. Marino, 100 Wn.2d 719, 727 (1984); venue may be proved by reference to streets, buildings and other landmarks that the jury probably knows of, State v. Kincaid, 69 Wash. 273 (1912); II.

State v. Knapstad, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986)

Where defense files an affidavit alleging that there are no material disputed facts, that the undisputed facts do not establish a prima facie case, and sets forth with specificity all facts and law relied upon, then state must file an affidavit denying the facts alleged in defendant's affidavit or allege other material facts, whereupon court must ascertain whether the facts which state relies upon establish a prima facie case and, if not, court must dismiss, apparently without prejudice; affirms State v. Knapstad, 41 Wn.App. 781 (1985); see: State v. Brown, 64 Wn.App. 606 (1992), State v. Groom, 80 Wn.App. 717, 728 (1996), aff'd, 133 Wn.2d 679 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581, 598-99 (1999), State v. Lansdowne, 111 Wn.App. 882 (2002), State v. Freigang, 115 Wn.App. 496 (2002), State v. Carter, 138 Wn.App. 350 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Hall, 46 Wn.App. 689 (1987)

Uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice who was on drugs at the time of the offense is sufficient to convict at a bench trial as long as the court, exercising due caution, believes the accomplice; III.

State v. Plank, 46 Wn.App. 728 (1987)

Merely being a passenger in a stolen vehicle is insufficient evidence, by itself, to convict of possessing stolen property; I.

State v. Hendrix, 50 Wn.App. 510 (1988)

Where victim picks defendant from montage but cannot make in-court identification, evidence is sufficient; I.

State v. Coleman, 54 Wn.App. 742 (1989)

In ruling on a motion to dismiss at end of state's case or in arrest of judgment, trial court must not weigh the evidence but must assume the truth of state's evidence, State v. Randecker, 79 Wn.2d 512, 517-18 (1971), in determining whether there was sufficient evidence to justify a rational trier of fact to find guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, State v. Green, 94 Wn.2d (1980); I.

State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77 (1990)

A request that a witness "drop charges" is not witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120, where the defendant and witness knew each other, and the context is such that there was no attempt to induce the witness to withhold testimony, reversing State v. Rempel, 53 Wn.App. 799 (1989), see also: State v. Jensen, 57 Wn.App. 501 (1990), State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 446-47 (2000), cf.: State v. Williamson, 131 Wn.App. 1 (2004), State v. Thompson, 153 Wn.App. 325, 328-35 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490 (1990)

"[A]bsence of any explanation for use of what appears to have been a recently stolen automobile . . . and . . . flight" provide sufficient evidence to infer guilty knowledge, but see: State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021), cf.: State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996), State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999); fleeing from a police officer is obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020(3), State v. Ware, 111 Wn.App. 738 (2002); fleeing from a police officer effecting an arrest without probable cause is still obstructing as the officer is "engaged in the performance of his official duties provided he is not on a frolic of his own," State v. Contreras, 92 Wn.App. 307 (1998), Spokane v. Hays, 99 Wn.App. 653, 661 (2000), see: State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995), State v. K.A.B., 14 Wn.App.2d 677 (2020), see also: State v. Graham, 130 Wn.2d 711 (1996), State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017), but see: State v. Barnes, 96 Wn.App. 217, 224-25 (1999), disapproved, State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, 493-95 (2017); I.

State v. Stearns, 61 Wn.App. 224 (1991)

In determining sufficiency, circumstantial evidence is not to be considered any less reliable than direct evidence, and specific intent may be inferred where defendant's conduct plainly indicates intent as a matter of logical probability, State v. Delmarter, 94 Wn.2d 634, 638 (1980); I.

State v. Brown, 64 Wn.App. 606 (1992)

Pretrial motion to dismiss for insufficiency pursuant to State v. Knapstad, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986) applies only to the entire case and not to aggravating circumstances in aggravated murder 1° case, see also: State v. Meacham, 154 Wn.App. 467 (2010); I.

State v. Austin, 65 Wn.App. 759 (1992)

Defendant stating, "come on let's fight" and pulling a knife is not a threat to do future harm, thus insufficient to prove harassment, RCW 9A.46.020, Seattle v. Allen, 80 Wn.App. 824 (1996), but see: State v. Williams, 98 Wn.App. 765, 775-76 (2000), 144 Wn.2d 197, 211-12 (2001); I.

State v. Chiariello, 66 Wn.App. 241 (1992)

In burglary 1° case by deadly weapon or assault, RCW 9A.52.020, insufficient evidence was submitted to jury on deadly weapon alternative, but defendant admitted assaulting complainant, thus appellate court could ascertain that conviction was based upon remaining ground for which sufficient evidence was presented, see: State v. Maupin, 63 Wn.App. 887, 894 (1992); III.

State v. Johnson, 66 Wn.App. 297 (1992)

Following conviction, trial court orders defendant to post bail or report to jail within 72 hours, defendant flees, is charged with bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170; held: defendant cannot violate bail jumping statute unless he has been ordered to appear in court on a specific date, State v. Rider, 118 Wn.App. 734, 739-40 (2003), State v. Cardwell, 155 wn.App. 41, 47-48 (2010), cf.: State v. Plank, 47 Wn.App. 461 (1987), State v. Aguilar, 153 Wn.App. 265, 276-78 (2009) , State v. Coleman, 155 Wn.App. 951, 963-64 (2010); I.

State v. Vermillion, 66 Wn.App. 332 (1992)

ER 404(b) "handiwork" evidence can establish intent requirement of attempted burglary; III.

State v. Ahlquist, 67 Wn.App. 442 (1992)

In a trial in absentia, arresting officer can identify booking photo with name as that of person he arrested, distinguishing State v. Hunter, 29 Wn.App. 218 (1981); I.

State v. Thompson, 69 Wn.App. 436 (1993)

Evidence was sufficient to convict for criminal trespass where defendant admitted he did not live on apartment complex premises and had no permission from manager to be there, had been previously admonished by police, did not offer an excuse to justify presence, attempted to flee or hide from police, cf.: State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992), see: State v. Morgan, 78 Wn.App. 208, 211 (1995), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002), State v. Bellerouche, 129 Wn.App. 912 (2005); I.

State v. VanValkenburgh, 70 Wn.App. 812 (1993)

In malicious mischief case, defendant's malice towards lessee of property rather than owner is sufficient to convict, since a lessee has a property interest, and thus property damaged is "property of another," RCW 9A.48.080, which is broader than fee ownership interest; even if intent to damage owner is required, doctrine of transferred intent supports conviction, cf.: State v. Cogswell, 54 Wn.2d 240, 244-5 (1959)(dicta); III.

State v. Dyson, 74 Wn.App. 237, 248-9 (1994)

In harassment case (anonymous telephone calls), RCW 9.61.230(2), multiple hang-up calls is sufficient; I.

State v. Martinez, 76 Wn.App. 1, 4-6 (1994)

To prove extortion, RCW 9A.56.110, communication of the extorsive threat completes the crime, whether or not victim complies or attempts to comply; I.

Seattle v. Schurr, 76 Wn.App. 82 (1994)

Using another's identification to return merchandise to a store for a refund, where there is no proof that the merchandise was stolen, is insufficient to convict of criminal impersonation ordinance, SMC § 12A.08.130(B)(1), as no economic interest is injured by the assumption of the false identity; I.

State v. Myles, 127 Wn.2d 807 (1995)

Concealed weapons statute, RCW 9.41.250, which prohibits "furtively carry[ing] with intent to conceal" a weapon does not require an overt movement to conceal, reversing State v. Myles, 75 Wn.App. 643 (1994); carrying a kitchen knife in an inner pocket at 1:00 a.m. "in the presence of other people in an inhospitable situation" is sufficient to convict; 6-3.

State v. Alvarez, 128 Wn.2d 1 (1995)

One threatening act is sufficient to support a harassment conviction, RCW 9A.46.020; where evidence is sufficient but trial court's findings are not, proper remedy is remand, State v. Souza, 60 Wn.App. 534 (1991); affirms State v. Alvarez, 74 Wn.App. 250 (1994); 6-3.

State v. Gilbert, 79 Wn.App. 383 (1995)

To prove malicious mischief 2°, sales tax may be included in repair cost to reach $250 threshold; III.

State v. Aitken, 79 Wn.App. 890, 897-901 (1995)

Defendant assumes name of dead person, opens bank account, deposits checks that bounce, submits withdrawal slip, is convicted of money laundering, RCW 9A.83.020(1); held: since there were no "proceeds" to manipulate, evidence is insufficient, see: State v. McCarty, 90 Wn.App. 195 (1998); II.

State v. Pollard, 80 Wn.App. 60 (1995)

Random encounter with a victim who is threatened because of race is sufficient to prove malicious harassment, former RCW 9A.36.080(1), see: State v. Lynch, 93 Wn.App. 716, 720-23 (1999); I.

State v. Groom, 80 Wn.App. 717, 723 (1996), aff'd, on other grounds, 133 Wn.2d 679 (1997)

The existence of a defense is not relevant to a motion to dismiss pursuant to State v. Knapstad, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986); III.

Seattle v. Allen, 80 Wn.App. 824 (1996)

Defendant tells victim "he was going to shoot us if we didn't do what we was told" is insufficient to establish a threat to cause bodily injury in the future for purposes of harassment, Seattle Municipal Code § 12A.06.040, RCW 9A.46.020(1), as it is a threat to cause immediate bodily injury not future bodily injury, State v. Austin, 65 Wn.App. 759, 760-1 (1992), see also:

State v. Gallaher, 24 Wn.App. 819, 821-2 (1979), State v. Edwards, 84 Wn.App. 5 (1996), State v. Young, 83 Wn.App. 937 (1974), but see: State v. Williams, 98 Wn.App. 765, 775-76 (2000), 144 Wn.2d 192, 211-12 (2001), State v. Cross, 156 Wn.App. 568, 580-85 (2010); RCW 9A.46.020 amended by 1997 legislature to prohibit threat to cause immediate injury; I.

State v. Dodgen, 81 Wn.App. 487, 492-4 (1996)

Where defendant fails to make corpus delicti objection to a confession, moves instead to dismiss at close of state's case, then presents evidence on his behalf, reviewing court will look to evidence as a whole to determine whether corpus was established, State v. Chavez, 65 Wn.App. 602, 605 (1992), State v. Smith, 56 Wn.App. 909, 914 (1990), State v. Liles-Heide, 94 Wn.App. 569 (1999); I.

State v. Dunn, 82 Wn.App. 122 (1996)

Motion to dismiss pursuant to State v. Knapstad, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986), may be heard where defense affidavit fails to include all of material facts as long as it is clear the material undisputed facts were before court; here, defense affidavit referred to police report which was not attached, but trial court's decision referred to all records, cf.: Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581, 598-99 (1999); for purposes of criminal mistreatment 2°, RCW 9A.42.030(1), taking drugs by pregnant mother resulting in positive drug test for newborn infant is insufficient as fetus is not child; III.

State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996)

Fourteen-year old driving a stolen car with broken rear wing window is insufficient to find that respondent knew vehicle was taken unlawfully, see: State v. Hudson, 56 Wn.App. 490, 495 (1990), State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788, 790 (1983), State v. Couet, 71 Wn.2d 773, 776 (1967), cf.: State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999); I.

State v. Lee, 82 Wn.App. 298 (1996), aff'd, 135 Wn.2d 369 (1998)

In stalking case, former RCW 9A.46.110, evidence that defendant stalked victim over a three-month period despite her repeated requests to leave her alone plus defendant having abused victim in past and victim's testimony that she was terrified is sufficient to establish that defendant "intimidated, harassed, or placed [her] in fear" by his conduct; "without lawful authority: means authority found in 'readily ascertainable sources' of statutory or common law," at 303, State v. Smith, 111 Wn.2d 1, 11 (1988), not controlled by tort law on invasion of privacy; repeatedly appearing at victim's restaurant workplace, staring at her for up to ten hours at a time, leaving notes that he would "keep her in sight" is sufficient to establish the element "follows," [now defined, RCW 9A.46.110(6)(a)]; sufficiency of "reasonable fear" is one for the trier of fact from all the circumstances, including staring, repeated references in notes to victim's need for protection, and that victim had been warned by her mother, at 306; I.

State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 14-18 (1996)

Test for sufficiency of an affirmative defense: considering evidence in light most favorable to state, could a rational trier of fact find that defendant failed to prove the defense by preponderance?, Spokane v. Beck, 130 Wn.App. 481 (2005), State v. Matthews, 132 Wn.App. 936 (2006); 9-0.

State v. Savaria, 82 Wn.App. 832, 839-41 (1996), overruled, in part, State v. C.G., 150 Wn.App. 604, 611 (2003)

Glaring at and exhibiting middle finger to victim is insufficient to establish attempt to influence the testimony of victim at trial for purposes of intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.110, see: State v. King, 135 Wn.App. 662 (2006); I.

State v. Edwards, 84 Wn.App. 5 (1996)

Defendant threatens to burn a store if employees harass his family, is convicted of threatening a building, RCW 9.61.160; held: a conditional threat to injure property is within the definition of threat that applies, RCW 9A.04.110(25), see: State v. Young, 83 Wn.2d 937, 942 (1974), Seattle v. Allen, 80 Wn.App. 824 (1996), State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006), State v. Cross, 156 Wn.App. 568, 580-85 (2010), see also: State v. Williams, 98 Wn.App. 765, 775-76 (2000), 144 Wn.2d 192, 211-12 (2001); intent to injure is not an element, State v. Kepiro, 61 Wn.App. 116, 121 (1991); II.

State v. Barnes, 85 Wn.App. 638, 665-8 (1997)

To prove leading organized crime, RCW 9A.82.060, state must prove that defendant intentionally organized, managed, directed, supervised or financed three or more persons with intent to engage in a pattern of criminal profiteering activity, defined as "engaging in at least three acts of criminal profiteering," RCW 9A.82.010(15), need not prove that any of those three people actually engage in any of the charged acts of criminal profiteering, as defendant may engage in some of the activities with others and perform others alone; II.

State v. R.H., 86 Wn.App. 807 (1997)

In criminal trespass case, restaurant manager testifies he told a group of loiterers to leave parking lot, they remain, respondent arrives later, manager calls police who advise the group they must go, respondent planned to patronize restaurant, manager testifies patrons may remain, respondent returns to parking lot and is arrested; held: because the offense requires the state to prove "enters or remains unlawfully," RCW 9A.52.080(1), then state must disprove that "premises were . . . open to members of the public and the actor complied with . . . conditions imposed," RCW 9A.52.090(2), State v. Finley, 97 Wn.App. 129 (1999), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002), State v. Green, 157 Wn.App. 833 (2010), State v. C.B., 195 Wn.App. 528 (2016); I.

Seattle v. Edwards, 87 Wn.App. 305 (1997), overruled, on other grounds, State v. Miller, 156 Wn.2d 23 (2005)

In willful violation of a protective order case, where the order states that it is effective "until one year from today or until further order of the court," contact after a year is insufficient to convict; prosecutor's failure to prove that the order was the last order entered is insufficient to convict, burden is not on defense to present a later order, cf.: State v. Snapp, 119 Wn.App. 614, 623-26 (2004); I.

State v. Pesta, 87 Wn.App. 515 (1997)

To prove custodial interference 1°, RCW 9A.40.060 (1998), a temporary parenting plan is sufficient, see: State v. Veliz, 176 Wn.2d 849, 859 n.5 (2013), only that portion of the parenting plan which addresses custody or visitation need be proved; I.

State v. Jackson, 87 Wn.App. 801, 807-9 (1997), aff'd, 137 Wn.2d 712, 727-30 (1999)

Delaying health care is an element of criminal mistreatment 1°, RCW 9A.42.020, but state must prove that the withholding of health care caused great bodily harm; I.

State v. Dejarlais, 87 Wn.App. 297 (1997)

Consent to contact is not a defense to violation of a protective order, RCW 26.50.110, distinguishing Reed v. Reed, 149 Wash. 352 (1928); victim's testimony that defendant had sexual intercourse with her is sufficient to prove rape 3°; II.2

Brogan v. United States, 139 L.Ed.2d 830 (1998)

Under federal false statement act, 18 USC § 1001, answering "no" to investigator's question whether union officer accepted illegal gifts is sufficient to convict, there is no "exculpatory no" doctrine which provides that simple denials of guilt are not criminal; 7-2.

State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998)

Where unnecessary elements are included, without objection, in the "to convict" instruction (here, venue), the law of the case doctrine obliges the state to prove the elements, and defense may challenge sufficiency of the added elements on appeal, State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), State v. Barringer, 32 Wn.App. 882, 887-8 (1982), State v. Hobbs, 71 Wn.App. 419 (1993), State v. Worland, 20 Wn.App. 559, 566 (1978), cf.: State v. Dent, 123 Wn.2d 467, 479-81 (1994), State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788 (1983) , State v. Calvin, 176 Wn.App. 1, 19-23 (2013), State v. France, 180 Wn.2d 809 (2014), State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870 (2015), cf.: State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018), Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017); 5-4.

State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 869-71 (1998)

Proof of defendant's presence in court when judge told him to reappear in six days, plus defendant's signature on notice, plus posting of bond is sufficient to prove bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170(1); I.

State v. McCarty, 90 Wn.App. 195 (1998)

Defendant borrows money knowing it was from drug sales and buys cars, is convicted of money laundering, RCW 9A.83.020(1)(a); held: mere knowledge that the proffered property is proceeds of unlawful activity is sufficient, state need not prove manipulation of proceeds in order to conceal criminal origin where the allegation is that defendant conducted a financial transaction, distinguishing attempting to conduct a financial transaction, State v. Aitken, 79 Wn.App. 890 (1995), accord: State v. Casey, 81 Wn.App. 524, 531 n.18 (1996); II.

State v. Van Woerden, 93 Wn.App. 110 (1998)

In criminal mistreatment 2º case, RCW 9A.42.030, causing post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) is insufficient, as a mental illness does not constitute "bodily injury," and PTSD is not an "impairment of physical condition," RCW 9A.42.010(2)(b) and (c); II.

State v. Womble, 93 Wn.App. 599 (1999)

Moving motor vehicle 5-40 feet within owner's driveway is sufficient to prove taking and riding, RCW 9A.56.070(1); passenger who flees scene, testifies he did not know where he had been earlier, that driver said she had parked "her" car half a mile from where he met her was sufficient to prove knowledge, as flight and absence of a plausible explanation are corroborative of guilty knowledge, State v. Couet, 71 Wn.2d 773, 776 (1967), cf.: State v. L.A., 82 Wn.App. 275 (1996), State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788 (1983), State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021); I.

State v. Alams, 93 Wn.App. 754, 758-59 (1999)

Providing a bad check in payment of a pre-existing, past due debt is sufficient to prove UIBC, RCW 9A.56.060, State v. Bradley, 190 Wash. 538 (1937); I.

State v. Jackson, 137 Wn.2d 712, 727-30 (1999)

In criminal mistreatment 1°, RCW 9A.42.020, failure to protect a child from assault is insufficient to prove that defendant caused great bodily harm by withholding basic necessities of life by failing to provide shelter, affirming State v. Jackson, 87 Wn.App. 801, 807-09 (1997), cf.: State v. Berube, 150 Wn.2d 498, 509-10 (2003); 7-2.

State v. Liles-Heide, 94 Wn.App. 569 (1999)

Where defense introduces evidence following denial of a corpus delicti motion, defendant waives her challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence as it stood at the point she made her motion, court will then review the evidence as a whole to determine if there is sufficient evidence of the corpus delicti; I.

State v. Rivera, 95 Wn.App. 961 (1999)

To prove bigamy, state must prove that first marriage was valid, not merely that parties believe it was valid; to prove a foreign marriage, state must prove foreign law as a fact; III.

State v. Ball, 97 Wn.App. 534 (1999)

To prove bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170(1), proof that defendant was aware of an obligation to appear in court at a scheduled hearing satisfies mens rea knowledge element, State v. Carver, 122 Wn.App. 300 (2004), see also: State v. Malvern, 110 Wn.App. 811 (2002), but see: 2001 amendments to RCW 9A.76.170; II.

State v. Schloredt, 97 Wn.App. 789, 792-94 (1999)

A credit card is an "access device" for purposes of possessing stolen property, RCW 9A.56.010(1), whether or not it was cancelled at the time it was possessed, see: State v. Clay, 144 Wn.App. 894 (2008), State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019), but see: State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10 (2012); I.

Redmond v. Burkhart, 99 Wn.App. 21 (2000)

Telephone harassment, RCW 9.61.230, which forbids a person to "make" a threatening call does not oblige proof that defendant initiated the telephone call intending to threaten, as the term "make" refers to the call in its entirety, but see: State v. Lilyblad, 134 Wn.App. 462 (2006), Elonis v. United States, 575 U.S. 723, 135 S.Ct. 2001, 192 L.Ed.2d 1 (2015); I.

State v. Pope, 100 Wn.App. 624 (2000)

Bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170, can be proved where defendant fails to appear for a post-sentencing probation violation hearing; state must prove that defendant is held for or convicted of a specific crime, which must be reflected in instructions; II.

State v. Avila, 102 Wn.App. 882 (2000)

Student tells another student that he will blow off a teacher's head, which is reported to the teacher, respondent is charged with intimidating a teacher, RCW 28A.635.100; held: state must prove that respondent intended to make a threat, threatened force or violence, that the teacher was intimidated while peacefully discharging his teaching duties, but need not prove that respondent intended to carry out the threat or that he intended to communicate the threat, directly or indirectly, to the teacher, see: State v. Edwards, 84 Wn.App. 5, 9 (1996), State v. Kepiro, 61 Wn.App. 116, 123 (1991), State v. Hansen, 122 Wn.2d 712, 718 (1993), State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006), cf.: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015); III.

State v. Ainslie, 103 Wn.App. 1 (2000)

Defendant is seen in car near juvenile's house only when the juvenile is in the neighborhood, gets out of car and stands by it when juvenile approaches, enters juvenile's yard, returns after being chased away, is convicted of stalking, RCW 9A.46.110; held: evidence is sufficient to establish that defendant "repeatedly follows" victim, State v. Kintz, 144 Wn.App. 515 (2008), 169 Wn.2d 537 (2010), State v. Whittaker, 192 Wn.App. 395 (2016), and, in light of victim's age, her fear was objectively reasonable, see: State v. Lee, 135 Wn.2d 369 (1998); I.

State v. Warfield, 103 Wn.App. 152 (2000)

Defendants, as private citizens, "arrest" complainant on an out-of-state warrant, call police who verify the warrant and allow defendants to retake custody, defendants drive complainant to out-of-state jurisdiction, surrender him, are charged with unlawful imprisonment, RCW 9A.40.040; held: because statute prohibits "knowingly restrains another person," and defines restrain as "to restrict a person's movements without consent and without legal authority...", RCW 9A.40.010(1), state failed to prove that defendants knowingly acted without lawful authority, see: State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 303-04 (2014), State v. Dillon, 12 Wn.App.2d 133 (2020), thus dismissed; II.

State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 445-47 (2000)

Demand that witness get the charges dropped or he will have criminal charges filed against witness and will be compelled to seek revenge is sufficient to prove intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.110(1), see: State v. Williamson, 131 Wn.App. 1 (2004), State v. King, 135 Wn.App. 662 (2006), distinguishing State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77, 83-84 (1990); II.

State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 211-12 (2001)

"Don't make me strap your ass" is sufficient to prove threat to cause bodily harm in the future for purposes of harassment, RCW 9A.46.020, cf.: State v. Austin, 65 Wn.App. 759 (1992), Seattle v. Allen, 80 Wn.App. 824 (1996), State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36 (2004), State v. Hosier, 124 Wn.App. 696, 708-11 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 1 (2006), State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016), State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020), see also: Seattle v. Buford-Johnson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6112342 (2021); reverses, on other grounds, State v. Williams, 98 Wn.App. 765 (2000); 5-3.

State v. J.M., 101 Wn.App. 716 (2000), aff'd, 144 Wn.2d 472 (2001)

Respondent tells a friend he wants to kill his teacher, friend reports threat which is told to the teacher who testifies he is afraid, respondent is convicted of harassment, RCW 9A.46.020(1)(a)(i); held: only mens rea of harassment is that perpetrator knowingly communicates a threat to cause bodily injury; state need not prove that perpetrator knew or should have known that the person threatened would learn of the threat, State v. Kiehl, 128 Wn.App. 88 (2005), but only that the person threatened did learn of it and was placed in reasonable fear, cf.: Elonis v. United States, 575 U.S. 723, 135 S.Ct. 2001, 192 L.Ed.2d 1 (2015); state must prove that respondent knew subjectively that the threat would be interpreted, by whomever received it, as a serious expression of intent to inflict harm and, in so assessing, trier of fact may consider whether a reasonable person could foresee that the statement would be so interpreted by whomever received it, see: State v. Shipp, 93 Wn.2d 510, 516-17 (1980), State v. Ragin, 94 Wn.App. 407 (1999), State v. Knowles, 91 Wn.App. 367, 393 (1998), State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36 (2004), State v. Hoosier, 124 Wn.App. 696 (2004), State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006), State v. Morales, 174 Wn.App. 370 (2013), State v. Boyle,183 Wn.App. 1, 6-9 (2014), State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016), State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020), Seattle v. Buford-Johnson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6112342 (2021); overrules, in part, State v. G.S., 104 Wn.App. 643 (2001); I.

State v. Rodgers, 146 Wn.2d 55 (2002)

Defendant drives to an area of town, leaves car, walks two blocks, shoots at a house, is convicted of drive-by shooting, RCW 9A.36.045(1); held: statute requires proof that shooting be from a car or from the immediate area of a motor vehicle, two blocks is insufficient, State v. Vasquez, 2 Wn.App.2d 632 (2018); affirms State v. Locklear, 105 Wn.App. 555 (2001); 9-0.

Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002)

Police, with agreement of housing authority, issue trespass warning to individuals perceived to have violated rules of conduct, prohibiting them from returning to housing project for any reason; defendants are convicted of criminal trespass for entering project; held: state must prove absence of statutory defenses to criminal trespass, RCW 9A.52.090(3), State v. R.H., 86 Wn.App. 807, 812 (1997), State v. Finley, 97 Wn.App. 129, 138 (1999); where defendant offers some evidence that he was invited, then state must disprove the invitation or prove that defendant exceeded the scope of the invitation, State v. Thompson, 69 Wn.App. 436 (1993), State v. Green, 157 Wn.App. 833 (2010), see: State v. Blair, 65 Wn.App. 64 (1992), State v. Glover, 116 Wn.2d 509 (1991); 9-0.

State v. Seek, 109 Wn.App. 876 (2002)

Bigamy, RCW 9A.64.010, is not a strict liability offense, state must prove wrongful intent; I.

State v. Ware, 111 Wn.App. 738, 745-46 (2002)

Fleeing from a police officer is resisting arrest, RCW 9A.76.040(1); statement by respondent "you're not going to take me" establishes mens rea; III.

State v. Lansdowne, 111 Wn.App. 882 (2002)

Complainant, in defendants' home, hears defendant state on telephone that complainant "is not leaving here alive…I pack a gun," trial court dismisses unlawful imprisonment with deadly weapon for insufficiency at Knapstad motion; on another occasion, defendant telephones school, informs secretary that she will send someone to beat up a teacher, uses words "shit" and "bitch," trial court dismisses telephone harassment at Knapstad hearing; held: even though evidence is contested, trial court erred in dismissing as a rational trier of fact could have found the elements, appellate court does not comment on deadly weapon allegation sufficiency; threatening a third party is sufficient to evidence intent to intimidate; curse words are indecent; III.

State v. Coria, 146 Wn.2d 631 (2002)

Husband who damages property owned by husband and his wife damages property of another for purposes of malicious mischief statute, RCW 9A.48..080(1)(a), see: State v. Pike, 118 Wn.2d 585 (1992), State v. Webb, 64 Wn.App. 480 (1992), State v. Birch, 36 Wn.App. 405 (1984), Bellevue v. Jacke, 96 Wn.App. 209 (1999), State v. Wooten, 178 Wn.2d 890 (2013); reverses State v. Coria, 105 Wn.App. 51 (2001); 8-1.

State v. Wiggins, 113 Wn.App. 209 (2002)

Defendant is arrested in possession of an empty gasoline can and a glass bottle with gauze stuffed into it, admits he was on his way to gas station to make a Molotov cocktail to throw on his ex-girlfriend's lawn, is convicted of unlawful possession of explosives, RCW 70.74.022(1); held: unambiguous language of statute requires a showing that defendant had all of the components necessary to assemble an explosive or improvised device, insufficient here; because statute is a strict liability offense, there can be no attempted unlawful possession of explosives; III.

State v. Hepton, 113 Wn.App. 673, 683-84 (2002)

In reckless burning case, evidence that defendant put beaker of methamphetamine-laced ether on a burner plus defendant's admission that he had experience with these chemicals is sufficient to prove that he "knowingly" caused a fire; III.

State v. Wiggins, 114 Wn.App. 478 (2002)

Defendant is arrested with empty gasoline can and glass bottle with gauze, tells police he was going to buy gas to throw Molotov cocktail at girlfriend's home, is convicted of unlawful possession of explosives, RCW 70.74.022(1); held: because statute requires possession all of the components necessary to make an explosive or "improvised device," evidence was insufficient to convict, as defendant lacked gasoline; III.

State v. Freigang, 115 Wn.App. 496 (2002)

To rule on Knapstad motion, trial court may consider an affidavit of a prosecuting attorney and is not bound by the limitations of CR 56(e), but court may only consider admissible evidence referenced in the affidavit, see: State v. Carter, 138 Wn.App. 350, 362-67 (2007); II.

State v. Johnson, 115 Wn.App. 890 (2003)

Female officer arrests defendant who threatens to stab her and uses female genital invective, defendant is convicted of malicious harassment, RCW 9A.36.080(1), based on gender; held: evidence was sufficient to find that defendant's conduct was motivated by officer's gender, see: State v. Read, 163 Wn.App. 853 (2011); III.

State v. Berube, 150 Wn.2d 498, 509-10 (2003)

In homicide by abuse case, instruction that states "there must be a causal connection between death…and…criminal conduct…so that the act done or omitted was a proximate cause" does not state that defendant had a legal duty to act, see: State v. Jackson, 137 Wn.2d 712, 727-30 (1999), and thus was proper; 6-3.

State v. C.G., 150 Wn.2d 604 (2003)

Respondent threatens to kill her teacher, at felony harassment trial teacher testifies the threat caused him concern that respondent might harm him, does not testify that he was afraid he would be killed; held: RCW 9A.46.020(2) requires proof of reasonable fear that the threat to kill will be carried out, absent some evidence of fear of death is insufficient to sustain conviction of felony, reversing State v. C.G., 114 Wn.App. 101 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Liden, 118 Wn.App. 734, 739-40 (2003)

Defendant is convicted of bail jumping for failure to appear for trial on 9 August, notice to defendant stated that trial was on the "[w]eek of August 6;" held: state failed to prove that defendant knew the exact date on when to appear, State v. Cardwell, 155 Wn.App. 41, 47-48 (2010), thus dismissed, State v. Johnston, 66 Wn.App. 297 (1992), cf.: 2001 amendments to RCW 9A.76.170, State v. Aguilar, 153 Wn.App. 265, 276-78 (2009); II.

State v. Warfield, 119 Wn.App. 871, 884-86 (2003)

Evidence is sufficient to establish knowing possession of unlawful firearm where state proves that defendant leased apartment where firearm was found in master bedroom closet, closet had defendant's clothes, defendant was sporadically residing there; II.

State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36 (2004)

Student tells a friend in class that he'll bring a gun to school tomorrow and shoot everyone, at trial claims he was joking, is convicted of felony harassment; held: First Amendment does not require that state prove defendant actually intended to carry out the threat, see: State v. J.M., 144 Wn.2d 472 (2001), State v. Kiehl, 128 Wn.App. 885; test of true threat: a statement made in a context wherein a reasonable person would foresee that the statement would be interpreted as a serious expression of intention to inflict bodily harm, State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 208-09 (2001), State v. Hosier, 124 Wn.App. 696, 708-11 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 1 (2006), State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006), State v. Brown, 137 Wn.App. 587 (2007), State v. Meneses, 149 Wn.App. 707, 713-14 (2009), aff'd, 169 Wn.2d 586 (2010), State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274 (2010), State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779 (2013), State v. Boyle, 183 Wn.App. 1 (2014), State v. Trey M., 186 Wn.2d 884 (2016), State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019); here, considering context of respondent's past relationship with the listener, joking during class, laughing or giggling when comments were made, evidence is insufficient to establish a true threat, State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016), State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020), Seattle v. Buford-Johnson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6112342 (2021); 5-4.

State v. Holt, 119 Wn.App. 712, 722-24 (2004)

In criminal mistreatment case, RCW 9A.42.030(1), allowing juveniles to be in presence of meth lab, coupled with testimony of danger of fires and explosions, is sufficient to prove recklessness; II.

State v. Munson, 120 Wn.App. 103 (2004)

In leading organized crime case, RCW 9A.82.060, where information charges that defendant did intentionally "organize, manage, direct and finance" others with intent to engage in "forgery..., theft..., and possession of a controlled substance," prosecutor need not prove, at least at a bench trial, that defendant committed each of the alternatives, as statute lists alternatives in disjunctive, state may charge in conjunctive and prove disjunctive, State v. Ford, 33 Wn.App. 788, 789-90 (1983); III.

State v. Hernandez, 120 Wn.App. 389 (2004)

Spitting in patrol car, resulting in 15 minutes cleaning of the car, does not establish "tampering" or creating a substantial risk of interruption or impairment of officer's service to the public, RCW 9A.48.080(1)(b), thus evidence was insufficient to convict of malicious mischief 2°, distinguishing State v. Gardner, 104 Wn.App. 541 (2001), cf.: State v. Turner, 167 Wn.App. 871, 876-79 (2012); III.

State v. Askham, 120 Wn.App. 872, 881-85 (2004)

Stalking, RCW 9A.46.110, does not include snooping through complainant's trash, as that is not "following;" to prove stalking by harassment, state need not call an expert to testify that the conduct would cause a reasonable person to suffer emotional distress, as it is "within the ken" of the average fact finder, State v. Marshall, 39 Wn.App. 180, 184 (1984); III.

State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185, 192-93 (2004)

Constitutional validity of underlying charge is not a defense to bail jumping, see: State v. Gonzales, 103 Wn.2d 564 (1985); II.

State v. Carver, 122 Wn.App. 300 (2004)

Forgetting to appear is not a defense to bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170(1) since statute was amended in 2001, cf.: State v. Bryant, 89 Wn.App. 857, 873 (1998); II.

State v. McGary, 122 Wn.App. 308 (2004)

To prove criminal mistreatment 2°, RCW 9A.42.030(1), state must prove that defendant created an imminent and substantial risk of death or great bodily harm by withholding basic necessities of life; children in a drunk driver's car is insufficient; II.

State v. Fredrick, 123 Wn.App. 347 (2004)

In bail jumping case, affirmative defense of "uncontrollable circumstances," RCW 9A.76.170(2), 9A.76.010(4), does not negate mens rea element, thus state need not disprove the defense, State v. Lively, 130 Wn.2d 1, 10-11 (1996), see also: State v. White, 137 Wn.App. 227 (2007); II.

State v. Gray, 124 Wn.App. 322 (2004)

In assault 3° on health care provider, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(h), absence of evidence that victim, a nursing assistant, was certified under Title 18 RCW or that hospital was licensed under ch. 70.41 RCW, is insufficient to prove the crime; III.

State v. Hosier, 124 Wn.App. 696, 708-11 (2004), aff'd, on other grounds, 157 Wn.2d 1 (2006)

Leaving note expressing a desire to kidnap and abuse is sufficient to establish harassment, RCW 9A.46.020, where recipient of note changed her behavior to protect herself, establishing a "true threat," State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 207-08 (2001), State v. Trey M., 186 Wn.2d 884 (2016), see: State v. J.M., 101 Wn.App. 716 (2000), aff'd, 144 Wn.2d 472 (2001), State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274 (2010), State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779 (2013), State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019); II.

State v. Williamson, 131 Wn.App. 1 (2004)

Defendant asks one witness to tell child rape complainant that if she doesn't recant her parents will go to jail, is convicted of witness tampering, RCW 9A.72.120; held: because a person tampers with a witness if s/he attempts to alter the witness' testimony, State v. Whitfield, 132 Wn.App. 878, 897-98 (2006), asking one person to tell another to recant coupled with a false explanation of adverse consequences is sufficient to convict, State v. Gill, 103 Wn.App. 435, 445-47 (2000), distinguishing State v. Rempel, 114 Wn.2d 77 (1990); II.

State v. Kiehl, 128 Wn.App. 88 (2005)

Defendant tells his counselor that he will kill a judge, counselor informs judge, at trial jury is instructed that to convict state must prove defendant threatened to kill the judge, placing counselor in fear that the threat would be carried out, judge does not testify at trial; held: harassment statute requires that the person threatened must find out about the threat and the person threatened must be in fear, State v. J.M., 144 Wn.2d 472 (2001), see: State v. Morales, 174 Wn.App. 370 (2013), thus evidence here was insufficient; III.

State v. Berry, 129 Wn.App. 59 (2005)

Defendant passes a check using identification of a fictitious person, is convicted of identity theft, former RCW 9.35.020, amended by LAWS OF 2004, ch. 272, § 2; held: to commit identify theft, the defendant must possess or use the means of identification of a real person, thus evidence is insufficient to convict, cf.: State v. Sells, 166 Wn.App. 918 (2012), State v. Fedorov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 193-96 (2014); I.

State v. Huber, 129 Wn.App. 499 (2005)

In bail jumping case, state offers documents, calls no witnesses to identify defendant; held: name identity alone is insufficient, State v. Kelly, 52 Wn.2d 676, 678 (1958), State v. Brezillac, 19 Wn.App. 11, 12 (1978), State v. Ceja Santos, 163 Wn.App. 780 (2011), cf.: State v. Binder, 106 Wn.2d 417, 419, 721 P.2d 967 (1986), see: State v. Sapp, 181 Wn.App. 910 (2014), State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 70-71 (2014), defense counsel's introduction of defendant to jury is not evidence; II.

State v. Bellerouche, 129 Wn.App. 912, 915-16 (2005)

Defendant is excluded from an apartment complex, is caught on driveway, convicted of trespass; held: while driveway may be impliedly open to the public for some other purpose, it is not open to defendant, who was excluded; I.

State v. Presba, 131 Wn.App. 47, 55-57 (2005)

Defendant gives name of friend to officer at traffic stop to avoid ticket and arrest, is convicted of identity theft, RCW 9.35.020(1); held: to convict of identity theft, state need not prove that defendant used financial information or sought monetary gain; while statement of legislative intent addresses "improperly obtaining financial information," RCW 9.35.001, that does not override unambiguous elements section of statute, State v. Alvarez, 74 Wn.App. 250, 258 (1994); I.

State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006)

Defendant threatens to blow up airport, is charged with threat to bomb, RCW 9.61.160, trial court fails to define "true threat;" held: while evidence was sufficient, trial court erred in not instructing jury that a "true threat" is a statement "in a context or under such circumstances wherein a reasonable person would foresee that the statement would be interpreted…as a serious expression of an intention to inflict bodily harm," State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 207-08 (2001), Watts v. United States, 22 L.Ed.2d 664 (1969), see: State v. Tellez, 141 Wn.App. 479 (2007), State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274 (2010); whether a true threat is made is determined under an objective standard that focuses on the speaker, State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36, 44 (2004), State v. Trey M., 186 Wn.2d 884 (2016), see: State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016), State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020); 8-1.

State v. Godsey, 131 Wn.App. 278, 290-91 (2006)

Defendant is asked by police if he is Ray Godsey, denies it, is convicted of making a false statement, RCW 9A.76.175; held: even though police know arrestee is who he says he's not, jury could reasonably infer defendant knew it was "reasonably likely" police would rely on this false information; III.

State v. Paulson, 131 Wn.App. 579, 585-88 (2006)

Shooting a dog multiple times with an arrow is sufficient to prove undue suffering and intent for purposes of animal cruelty, RCW 16.52.205(1); II.

State v. Donery, 131 Wn.App. 667 (2006)

Persistent prison misbehavior, RCW 9.94.070(1), requires that state prove that defendant lost all potential earned early release time in Department of Corrections; state need not prove that defendant lost all good time in the county jail prior to commitment to DOC, see: Pers. Restraint of Williams, 121 Wn.2d 655 (1993); DOC lacks power to take away good time awarded by a county jail; II.

State v. Burke, 132 Wn.App. 415 (2006)

Physical behavior such as a fighting stance is sufficient to prove a threat, RCW 9A.76.180(3)(a), State v. Pinkney, 2 Wn.App.2d 574 (2018); a fighting stance plus profanities directed at a police officer is insufficient to prove an intent to influence officer's behavior for purposes of proving intimidating a public official, RCW 9A.76.180(1), State v. Montano, 169 Wn.2d 872 (2010), State v. Moncada, 172 Wn.App. 364 (2012), cf.: Seattle v. Meah, 165 Wn.App. 453 (2011); an assault on a law enforcement officer does not, without more, imply an attempt to influence that officer's behavior; II.

State v. Colquitt, 133 Wn.App. 789 (2006)

Defendant agrees that, should he fail drug court, trial court can admit police report that included a field test, is terminated from drug court, RCW 2.28.170, is found guilty; held: defendant did not enter a "stipulation to the sufficiency of the evidence," did not confess, no lab test report was admitted, thus evidence was insufficient to convict, State v. Roche, 114 Wn.App. 424 (2002), cf.: State v. Hernandez, 85 Wn.App. 672, 675 (1997), Pers. Restraint of Delmarter, 124 Wn.App. 154 (2004), see also: State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23, 33-38 (2010); 2-1, II.

State v. Wolf, 134 Wn.App. 196 (2006)

In unlawful possession of firearm case, defendant stipulates that he had previously been convicted of a serious offense, Old Chief v. United States, 136 L.Ed.2d 574 (1997), parties agree that fact of stipulation would be included in a jury instruction, stipulation is not read to jury during presentation of evidence, defense claims insufficiency; held: by stipulating, defense waived the right to put the state to its burden of proof on the element to which he stipulated, State v. Stevens, 137 Wn.App. 460, 466 (2007); I.

State v. King, 135 Wn.App. 662, 668-72 (2006)

After conviction in court, defendant slams books on table, blurts "this is bullshit," tells arresting officer "I'll see you but you won't see me," is convicted of intimidating a witness, RCW 9A.72.110(3)(a)(ii); held: in context, evidence was sufficient that defendant's statement was a true threat, State v. Meneses, 149 Wn.App. 707, 713-14 (2009), aff'd, 169 Wn.2d 586, 590-92 (2010), see: State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36 (2004), State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020), jury instruction defining threat per RCW 9A.72.110(3)(a) is adequate, court need not define "true threat," but see: State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274 (2010), State v. Atkins, 156 Wn.App. 799-804-07 (2010), State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019); III.

State v. O'Neal, 159 Wn.2d 500 (2007)

Evidence is sufficient to find firearm enhancement to drug case where police find a loaded gun in an open bedroom closet, all three co-defendants lived in the trailer for two months, more than twenty firearms were in the residence, some loaded, State v. Simonson, 91 Wn.App. 874, 883 (1998); 7-2.

State v. Brown, 137 Wn.App. 587 (2007)

In intimidating a judge case, RCW 9A.72.160, defendant tells third party that he has thought about shooting the judge; held: an expression of thoughts of harming a judge in the past is not a "true threat," State v. Knowles, 91 Wn.App. 367, 373 (1998), State v. Johnston, 157 Wn.2d 355, 360-61 (2006), to use force in the future, thus dismissed, cf.: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015); II.

State v. Carter, 138 Wn.App. 350, 362-67 (2007)

A pre-trial motion to dismiss, State v. Knapstad, 107 Wn.2d 346 (1986), requires a sworn statement in support and in response, see: State v. Freigang, 115 Wn.App. 496, 502 (2002), State v. Jackson, 82 Wn.App. 594, 608 (1996), trial court errs in considering unsworn e-mail; II.

State v. Tellez, 141 Wn.App. 479 (2007)

In telephone harassment case, trial court must define "true threat" in an instruction, State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36, 43 (2004), State v. Williams, 144 Wn.2d 197, 207 (2001), State v. Schaler, 145 Wn.App. 628 (2008), but need not include it in to convict instruction nor must it be pled in information, distinguishing State v. Johnston, 156 Wn.2d 355 (2006), see: State v. Warren, 161 Wn.App. 727, 748-56 (2011); I.

State v. Brown, 162 Wn.2d 422, 428-30 (2007)

In witness intimidation case, victim testifies that defendant threatened her to prevent her from talking to police but information charged only that defendant threatened to influence her testimony, RCW 9A.72.110(a); held: evidence is insufficient to support the only alternative charged; 5-4.

State v. Lilyblad, 163 Wn.2d 1 (2008)

Telephone harassment, RCW 9.61.239 (2003), requires state to prove that at the time defendant made the telephone call he formed the intent to harass, Elonis v. United States, 575 U.S. 723, 135 S.Ct. 2001, 192 L.Ed.2d 1 (2015), overruling, in part, Redmond v. Burkhart, 99 Wn.App. 21 (2000), State v. Alphonse, 142 Wn.App. 417 (2008), see: State v. Alphonse, 147 Wn.App. 891 (2008), cf.: State v. Meneses, 169 Wn.2d 586, 590-92 (2010); affirms State v. Lilyblad, 134 Wn.App. 462 (2006); 9-0.

State v. McReynolds, 142 Wn.App. 941 (2008)

In luring case, RCW 9A.40.090, defendant following and signaling to a girl to come over to him, braking and continuing near her is insufficient, cf.: State v. Homan, 181 Wn.2d 102 (2014), 191 Wn.App. 759 (2015); after mistrial is granted, trial court dismisses for insuffiency, state appeals; held: oral declaration of a mistrial does not change posture of the case, dismissal acts as an acquittal, State v. Matuszewski, 30 Wn.App. 714, 717-18 (1981), State v. Motycka, 21 Wn.App. 798, 802 (1978), State v. Dye, 81 Wash. 388, 391 (1914); III.

State v. O'Meara, 143 Wn.App. 638 (2008)

Trial court grants pretrial motion to dismiss use of drug paraphernalia charge, RCW 69.50.412, finding that there was no evidence that defendant used a pipe found in a baggie along with marijuana and a playing card tin containing marijuana; held: a rational trier of fact could conclude that defendant used the tin for storage of marijuana and used the pipe to smoke marijuana, in violation of the statute, thus dismissal was error; II.

State v. Clay, 144 Wn.App. 894 (2008)

A credit card that has not been activated is an "access device," RCW 9A.56.010(1)(2006), but see: State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10 (2012), see: State v. Schloredt, 97 Wn.App. 789 (1999), State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019); I.

State v. Vant, 145 Wn.App. 592, 598-600 (2008)

Protection order forbids defendant from knowingly coming within one mile of his niece or her residence, defendant goes to niece's mother's home, testifies he "assumed" she lived there, niece testifies she lived there off and on but was not present when defendant was arrested; held: reasonable trier of fact could find defendant violated order; II.

State v. Garcia, 146 Wn.App. 821 (2008)

Defendant is observed shoplifting by security guards who chase him into another store where second store's security guard attempts to detain defendant who shoves that guard, is convicted of assault 3º with intent to resist lawful detention, RCW 9A.36.031(1)(a); held: absent agency relationship, second guard had no authority to lawfully detain shoplifter from another store, RCW 9A.16.080, 4.24.220; absent evidence of a breach of the peace, a private citizen has no authority to perform a citizen's arrest, see: Stone Mach. Co., v. Kessler, 1 Wn.App. 543750, 754-57 (1970), Seattle v. Camby, 104 Wn.2d 49, 53 (1985), remanded for judgment on lesser assault 4º; 2-1, III.

State v. Chang, 147 Wn.App. 490, 498-504 (2008)

A stolen check may be an access device, RCW 9A.56.010(1), to support a charge of possession of stolen checking account numbers; I.

State v. Meneses, 149 Wn.App. 707 (2009), aff'd, 169 Wn.2d 586 (2010)

In telephone harassment case, RCW 9.61.230, instruction that "a person commits the crime of telephone harassment when he, with intent to harass, makes a telephone call" clearly implies that defendant initiated the call with intent to harass, State v. Lilyblad, 163 Wn.2d 1 (2008); a threat to kill accompanied by racial slurs, derogatory statements is a "true threat."

State v. Mitchell, 149 Wn.App. 716, 719-24 (2009), 169 Wn.2d 437 (2010)

In criminal mistreatment case, RCW 9A.42.005, 9A.42.020(1), a severely malnourished 4-year old is both a dependent person and a child and has a physical disability because he was too weak to walk, state need not use the word "disability" during testimony; I.

State v. Sloan, 149 Wn.App. 736 (2009)

Defendant calls his estranged wife's home, another answers the phone, wife hears defendant threaten to kill her; held: state need not prove that the intended party answered the telephone, merely that she heard the intended threat, thus evidence is sufficient to prove telephone harassment, RCW 9.61.230, State v. Tellez, 141 Wn.App. 479 (2007); II.

State v. Haines, 151 Wn.App. 428, 433-37 (2009)

Stalking, RCW 9A.46.110(1), requires two, not six, separate acts of harassment; I.

State v. Lakotiy, 151 Wn.App. 699, 713-15 (2009)

Sufficient evidence of constructive possession exists where (1) defendant is standing next to a stolen car in a small storage unit, (2) the car had been partially disassembled and ignition removed, (3) several parts of the car were on the ground next to the car, (4) another individual in the storage unit was working on the stolen care, and (5) when defendant saw the officers he reached back and placed a set of jiggler keys and an ignition on the rear of the vehicle, establishing more than mere proximity, cf.: State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383 (1990), State v. Alvarez, 105 Wn.App. 215 (2001), State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004), State v. Enlow, 143 Wn.App. 463 (2008); I.

State v. Aguilar, 153 Wn.App. 265, 276-79 (2009)

In bail jumping case, defendant is ordered to appear on a certain date, warrant is issued for another reason before that date so court doesn't convene, defendant testifies that he didn't appear and did not intend to appear; held: evidence is sufficient to prove bail jumping when defendant is (1) held for, charged with or convicted, (2) has knowledge of a subsequent appearance and (3) fails to appear, State v. Downing, 122 Wn.App. 185, 192 (2004), whether or not court actually convened on date defendant was to appear is not an element, cf.: State v. Liden, 118 Wn.App. 734, 739-40 (2003), State v. Cardwell, 155 Wn.App. 41, 47-48 (2010), State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021); to convict instruction should state the particular crime, but need not classify the charge; III.

State v. Thompson, 153 Wn.App. 325 (2009)

Defendants videotape incompetent vulnerable adult, coaching her to acknowledge that she gave her estate to defendants who present the tape at a guardianship hearing, state charges defendants with witness tampering and theft and uses the tape at the criminal trial without calling victim; defendants, knowing that victim suffered from dementia, had her sign over her estate; held: a witness need not be called as a witness nor need the witness be competent to support a charge of witness tampering, state need not prove that defendants knew victim was competent, video meets necessary definition of "witness" and "testimony;" I.

State v. Drum, 168 Wn.2d 23 (2010)

Defendant enters drug court, signing stipulation to police reports and agreeing that the facts in the reports are sufficient to establish guilt, when defendant opts out of drug court trial court finds him guilty; held: courts are not bound by stipulations to legal conclusions, thus stipulation to sufficiency is not binding, court must still determine if evidence establishes guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; 5-4.

State v. Kintz, 169 Wn.2d 537 (2010)

Defendant repeatedly drives up to complainants, stopping to talk or driving past, each time breaking contact and then repeating, is convicted of stalking, RCW 9A.46.110; held: conduct was sufficient to establish requirement of "two or more separate occasions," RCW 9A.46.110(6)(e), cf.: Seattle v. Meah, 165 Wn.App. 453 (2011), State v. Johnson, 185 Wn.App. 655, 666-70 (2015), and is sufficient to prove both "harassed" and "followed" alternatives, State v. Haines, 151 Wn.App. 428 (2009) , State v. Whittaker, 192 Wn.App. 395 (2016); affirms State v. Kintz, 144 Wn.App. 515 (2008); 7-2.

State v. Montano, 169 Wn.2d 872 (2010)

Absent evidence of an intent to influence police officers, threats by themselves are insufficient to prove intimidating a public official, RCW 9A.76.180, State v. Burke, 132 Wn.App. 415 (2006), State v. Moncada, 172 Wn.2d 364 (2012), cf.: State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015); 6-3.

State v. Coleman, 155 Wn.App. 951, 963-64 (2010)

In bail jumping case, defendant is ordered to appear on a date at 9:00 a.m., state proves defendant did not appear as of 8:30 a.m.; held: nothing established that defendant was absent at the time specified on the notice, thus evidence is insufficient, cf.: State v. Hart, 195 Wn.App. 449, 460 (2016), abrogated, on other grounds, State v. Burns, 193 Wn.2d 190 (2019); I.

State v. Cross, 156 Wn.App. 568, 580-85 (2010)

Defendant tells officer "I would kick your ass if I wasn't in handcuffs," is convicted of harassment; held: a conditional threat is sufficient to prove harassment, RCW 9A.46.020(1), State v. Edwards, 84 Wn.App. 5 (1996); jury's finding that victim had a reasonable fear that bodily harm could have resulted is sufficient to prove misdemeanor harassment, distinguishing State v. C.G., 150 Wn.2d 604 (2003); 2-1, II.

State v. Koch, 157 Wn.App. 20 (2010)

Defendant lives with elderly father who previously accused him of assault, father refuses medical assistance, defendant does not force unwanted care on father, who dies, defendant is convicted of criminal mistreatment, RCW 9A.42.020, and manslaughter 2° after trial court declines to instruct jury that use of physical force, absent consent, is assault even if purpose is to provide assistance; held: while the evidence was sufficient to support the conviction, defense was denied due process by failing to instruct jury that presented defendant's theory of the case; 2-1.

State v. Green, 157 Wn.App. 833 (2010)

Public school sends parent letter excluding her from the school, parent returns, is charged with criminal trespass, trial court declines to admit evidence of the reason for the trespass exclusion; held: exclusion order violated due process as it did not advise defendant of her right to appeal, see: Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 47 L.Ed.2d 18 (1976), Bremerton v. Widell, 146 Wn.2d 561 (2002); state had burden to prove defendant acted unlawfully when entering school property, RCW 9A.52.090(2) and thus had to prove that she had disrupted a classroom procedure or learning activity, RCW 28A.605.020, without which evidence was insufficient to convict; I.

State v. Williams, 171 Wn.2d 474 (2011)

Making a false statement to police by itself is insufficient to support a conviction for obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020, some conduct is required, State v. E.J.J., 183 Wn.2d 497 (2015); reverses State v. Williams, 152 Wn.App. 937 (2009); 9-0.

State v. Newcomb, 160 Wn.App. 184 (2011)

Complainant has an easement through defendant's property, defendant bulldozes the easement, trial court dismisses malicious mischief charge; held: an easement is a property interest for purposes of "property of another," RCW 9A.48.010(1), thus damage to the easement is sufficient to prove malicious mischief; II.

State v. Sweany, 162 Wn.App. 223 (2011)

To prove arson 1° by causing a fire on "property valued at ten thousand dollars or more with intent to collect insurance," RCW 9A.48.020(1)(b), the value is insurance value not market value; in order to prove market value, evidence is sufficient if price paid exceeds threshold if not too remote in time, State v. Melrose, 2 Wn.App. 824, 831 (1970); III.

State v. Ceja Santos, 163 Wn.App. 780 (2011)

To prove priors for felony DUI, state offers certified copies of judgments without more; held: name identity alone is insufficient to prove a prior as an element of a crime, State v. Huber, 129 Wn.App. 499, 502 (2005), state must show that defendant was the person convicted of the prior offenses, see: State v. Brezillic, 19 Wn.App. 11 (1978), State v. Sapp, 181 Wn.App. 910 (2014), State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 70-71 (2014); III.

State v. Read, 163 Wn.App. 853 (2011)

Defendant, angry at receiving a ticket, aggressively advances toward parking lot attendant, yells racial slur, moves very close to her, says "I know where you work," is charged with malicious harassment, RCW 9A.36.080, argues that the court must find that victim's race was the primary motivating factor behind a threat; held: evidence is sufficient that defendant made a "true threat," State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36 (2004), see: State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779 (2013), cf.: State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016), and that he threatened defendant "because of" her race, State v. Pollard, 80 Wn.App. 60 (1995), State v. Johnson, 115 Wn.App. 890 (2003); I.

State v. Budik, 173 Wn.2d 727 (2012)

Defendant is shot, companion killed, defendant tells police he doesn't know who shot him but names shooter to others, police testify investigation was delayed, is convicted of rendering criminal assistance 1°, RCW 9A.76.050, challenges sufficiency; held: deception contemplated by RCW 9A.76.050(4) requires an affirmative act or statement, not mere false disavowals of knowledge, cf.: State v. Mollett, 181 Wn.App. 701 (2014), reversing State v. Budik, 156 Wn.App. 123, 127-30 (2010); 7-2.

State v. Steen, 164 Wn.App. 789 (2011)

Police, lawfully exercising community caretaking function, pound on door of trailer, order anyone inside to come out with hands up, after no response enter through window, find defendant who says he was sleeping and didn't hear, order him to put his hands up, defendant complies, handcuff and place in patrol car, ask for his name which defendant refuses to provide, later find warrant and arrest, defendant is convicted of obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020(1); held: while refusal to provide name by itself is not a crime, State v. Williams, 171 Wn.2d 474, 484 (2011), a reasonable jury could find that defendant's failure to come out with hands up was willful, could infer that he heard and decided not to open door, which impeded officers performing their community caretaking duty, see: Shoreline v. McLemore, 193 Wn.2d 225 (2019); defendant does not have a First or Fifth Amendment privilege not to provide his name; while prosecutor should not have argued to jury that refusal to give his name is substantive evidence of obstructing, trial court's instruction that a defendant's mere refusal to answer question is not sufficient to arrest for obstructing cured the error; 2-1, II.

State v. Stribling, 164 Wn.App. 867, 872-77 (2011)

Asking a minor to take nude photos of herself, which she refuses to do, is insufficient to prove sexual exploitation of a minor, RCW 9.68A.040(1)(b) (1989); 2-1, II.

Seattle v. Meah, 165 Wn.App. 453 (2011)

Defendant bothers complainant on a bus, follows her when she disembarks and continues to bother her for two blocks, is convicted of stalking; held: stalking ordinance, SMC § 12A.06.03 (2008), requires proof that defendant "repeatedly harasses or follows another person," and defines repeatedly as "two or more separate occasions," here there was one following, thus evidence is insufficient, State v. Johnson, 185 Wn.App. 655, 666-70 (2015), cf.: State v. Whittaker, 192 Wn.App. 395 (2016), distinguishing State v. Kintz, 169 Wn.2d 537 (2010); 2-1, I.

State v. Toscano, 166 Wn.App. 546 (2012)

Defendant intentionally blocks an intersection to hinder a police officer chasing a relative, is convicted of intimidating a public servant, RCW 9A.76.180 (2011); held: blocking an intersection is not a form of communication, necessary to establish a true threat, distinguishing State v. Burke, 132 Wn.App. 415, 417-18 (2006); 2-1, III.

State v. Kirwin, 166 Wn.App. 659 (2012)

Defendant-mother removes children from jurisdiction, depriving father of court-ordered visitation, is charged with custodial interference under prong prohibiting denying access to parent having physical custody, RCW 9A.40.060(1) (1998), to convict instruction addresses only depriving parent of visitation, RCW 9A.40.060(2); held: where state presents sufficient evidence of the offense in the to convict instruction but not the crime charged in the information, remedy is dismissal with prejudice; 2-1, III.

State v. Strong, 167 Wn.App. 206 (2012)

Threat to disclose victim-correction officer's violation of non-fraternization policy, which could result in discharge, unless paid money is extortion 2°, RCW 9A.56.130 (2002), does not punish speech protected by First Amendment; III.

State v. Thompson, 169 Wn.App. 436, 475-77 (2012)

Victim is beaten by defendant when he intervenes in a sexual assault on another victim, jury finds beating of intervenor was for sexual motivation; held: trier of fact could have found that a purpose in beating intervenor was for sexual gratification in his conduct involving the women; I.

State v. Wooten, 178 Wn.2d 890 (2013)

For purposes of malicious mischief, purchaser of land under a real estate contract is not an exclusive owner, "property of another" is property in which the actor possesses anything less than exclusive ownership, RCW 9A.48.010(1)(c) (2002); 5-4.

State v. Moncada, 172 Wn.App. 364 (2012)

Threats plus resisting arrest are insufficient to prove intimidating a public officer, RCW 9A.76.180 (2011), State v. Montano, 169 Wn.2d 872, 879 (2010), State v. Burke, 132 Wn.App. 415, 422 (2006), as there must be some evidence independent of the threat itself to establish an attempt to influence the public servant's official action; III.

State v. Morales, 174 Wn.App. 370 (2013)

In harassment case, defendant tells Diaz that he will kill Farias, Diaz tells Farias, information accuses defendant of threatening Farias who was placed in fear, to convict instruction states that defendant placed "Diaz &/or Farias" in reasonable fear; held: while harassment may lie where either the person threatened or the person to whom defendant communicates the threat is placed in reasonable fear, State v. J.M., 144 Wn.2d 472, 488 (2001), here the information does not charge defendant with placing Diaz in fear, thus he was tried on an uncharged alternative theory requiring reversal; 2-1, III.

State v. Benitez, 175 Wn.App. 116, 123-26 (2013)

In bench trial, state need not prove surplusage charged in information as law of the case doctrine does not apply to a bench trial, State v. Hawthorne, 48 Wn.App. 23, 27 (1984), see: State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017); II.

State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 788-96 (2013)

In threats against governor case, RCW 9A.36.090 (2011), (1) an email identifying the sender's city as "Gregoiremustdie" and stating a desire for the governor to witness a family member raped and murdered and that governor had put the state in the toilet is not a true threat as it is "more in the nature of hyperbolic political speech," at 791 ¶20; (2) calling governor a "gender specific epithet" and stating she should be burned at the stake reaches only "the margins of a true threat" due to passive and impersonal phrasing, and is thus protected speech, see: State v. Schaler, 169 Wn.2d 274, 283-84 (2010), State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36 (2004), State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016), State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020); (3) message that governor must die and inviting public to her public execution, coupled with defendant's later acknowledgement of a recent shooting of a congresswoman, is sufficient to establish a true threat, cf.: Seattle v. Buford-Johnson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6112342 (2021); 2-1, II.

State v. Davis, 176 Wn.App. 849 (2013)

Defendant Nelson places firearm in a bag, puts bag on counter in her own residence, makes firearm available for her nephew, who killed police officers and who she knows has been shot; held: defendant had dominion and control over her own residence and the firearm while in her residence, State v. Cantabrana, 83 Wn.App. 204 (1996), and physical custody, while brief, which is the definition of actual possession, State v. Jones, 146 Wn.App. 328, 333 (2002), sufficient for jury to find possession of stolen firearm; defendant Eddie, in response to killer's inquiry "where's the gun?" replies the gun is on a counter and hands it to slayer; held: sufficient to establish Eddie could immediately reduce the gun to actual possession, thereby exercising dominion and control and constructively possessing it in spite of brief actual possession, distinguishing State v. Callahan, 77 Wn.2d 27 (1969); defendant Douglas is in defendant Eddie's car and Nelson's home where the gun was located, no evidence that he handled it even momentarily; held: apart from proximity, no evidence established that Douglas had dominion and control over the car, premises or the gun, thus insufficient to establish possession, State v. Jones, supra. at 333, State v. Callahan, supra., State v. Spruell, 57 Wn.App. 383 (1990), State v. Cote, 123 Wn.App. 546 (2004), State v. Enlow, 143 Wn.App. 463 (2008); 2-1, II.

State v. Hendrickson, 177 Wn.App. 67, 77-78 (2013)

A threat to blow up a person that does not target a particular location does not constitute a threat to bomb, RCW 9.61.160(1) (2003); III.

State v. Quintanilla, 178 Wn.App. 173 (2013)

A loan of money with expectation that it be repaid is sufficient to establish an extension of credit for purposes of extortionate means to collect extensions of credit, RCW 9A.82.040 (2001); III.

State v. K.L.B., 180 Wn.2d 735 (2014)

A transit "Fare Enforcement Officer" employed by a private security firm, uniformed, authorized to issue civil citations is not a public servant for purposes of making a false statement to a public servant, RCW 9A.76.175 (2001), cf.: State v. Graham, 130 Wash.2d 711, 719 (1996), State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 794, 808–09, (1998), State v. Hendrickson, 177 Wn.App. 67, 75, 311 P.3d 41 (2013); 5-2.

State v. France, 180 Wn.2d 809 (2014)

Defendant threatens lawyers from jail, in felony harassment trial court defines "threat" to include "intent immediately to use force" as well as "threatened … to do any act … intended to harm …physical safety," RCW 9A.04.110(28) (2011), defendant could not have immediately used force, on appeal defendant maintains that definition became law of the case which state had to prove, State v. Allen, 176 Wn.2d 611, 626 (2013), State v. Stevens, 158 Wn.2d 304, 309–10 (2006); held: multiple definitions of statutory terms do not necessarily create either new elements or alternate means, see: State v. Smith, 159 Wn.2d 778, 785 (2007), State v. Linehan, 147 Wn.2d 638, 646 (2002); an instruction that provides for ten definitions of threat do not create ten alternative means, State v. Marko, 107 Wn.App. 215, 218–19 (2001), State v. Makekau, 194 Wn.App. 407 (2016), State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); 9-0.

State v. Bauer, 180 Wn.2d 929 (2014))

Defendant leaves loaded gun on dresser, 9-year old visitor takes gun to school and shoots another student, defendant is charged with assault 3° "[w]ith criminal negligence, causes bodily harm to another person by means of a weapon…," RCW 9A.36.031(1)(d) (2011), trial court denies Knapstad motion; held: legal cause in criminal cases is narrower than legal cause in tort cases, cf.: State v. Harris, 199 Wn.App. 137 (2017); where gun was taken without owner's permission or knowledge and later used to cause injury legal causation is not satisfied, McGrane v. Cline, 94 Wn.App. 925 (1999); reverses State v. Bauer, 174 Wn.App. 59 (2013); 6-3.

State v. Homan, 181 Wn.2d 102 (2014)

Defendant passes 9 year old on a bicycle, asks if he wants candy at his house, is convicted of luring, RCW 9A.40.090; held: invitation to come to a house is sufficient to prove luring, State v. Dana, 84 Wn.App. 166 (1996), distinguishing State v. McReynolds, 142 Wn.App. 941, 948 (2008), State v. Homan, 191 Wn.App. 759 (2015); reverses *State v. Homan,*172 Wn.App. 488 (2012); 7-1.

State v. Federov, 181 Wn.App. 187, 193-96 (2014)

At arrest defendant gives police someone else's name and a date of birth one day off for the other person, later give correct birth date, argues evidence is insufficient for identity theft, RCW 9.35.020(1) (2008); held: rational trier of fact could find that defendant used the name and birth date of a "specific, real person;" using fake name to a police officer making arrest is the crime of false statement, RCW 9A.76.175 (2001), which is sufficient to prove intent to commit a crime for purposes of identity theft; I.

State v. Mollett, 181 Wn.App. 701 (2014)

Defendant is present when a friend kills a trooper, before slayer is apprehended police interview defendant who says she does not know slayer, had not seen him on the property where she was interviewed that night and was helping a friend move at the time of the shooting, is convicted of rendering criminal assistance 1º, RCW 9A.76.050(1) and -.070(1) (2011); held: statements by a defendant that she knew nothing about the crime and did not know the criminal are "mere false disavowals of knowledge," insufficient by themselves to convict of rendering, *State v. Budik,*173 Wn.2d 727, 737 (2012); statements that defendant was not present at the shooting and had not seen defendant that night were affirmative misrepresentations concealing the shooter which are sufficient to convict of rendering; I.

State v. Hudlow, 182 Wn.App. 266, 284-89 (2014)

Defendant is charged with delivery of methamphetamine, to convict instruction states defendant knew the substance delivered was meth, no direct evidence establishes defendant's knowledge that the substance was meth; held: while knowledge of the nature of a controlled substance delivered is not an element of delivery, State v. Nuñez-Martinez, 90 Wn.App. 250, 255-56 (1998), its presence in the to convict instruction obliges the state to prove that defendant knew it was meth under law of the case doctrine, State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97, 102 (1998), State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016) ; lack of direct evidence requires reversal, but here there was sufficient circumstantial evidence to defeat a sufficiency dismissal; III.

State v. Harrington, 181 Wn.App. 805 (2014)

Defendant displays gun, shuts victim in bedroom, commands she sit on the floor and drink alcohol, shoves her and holds her at gunpoint; held: evidence is sufficient to prove kidnapping 1º, RCW 9A.40.020 (2011), "with intent…to inflict bodily injury" and "to inflict extreme mental distress," distinguishing State v. Garcia, 179 Wn.2d 828, 835-44 (2014); "extreme mental distress" is not vague; III.

State v. Sapp, 181 Wn.App. 910 (2014)

To prove a prior conviction to elevate communicating with a minor for immoral purposes to a felony, name identity by itself is insufficient, but name identity plus same sex, race and date of birth is sufficient, State v. Goggin, 185 Wn.App. 59, 70-71 (2014), distinguishing State v. Huber, 129 Wn.App. 499, 502 (2005), State v. Ceja Santos, 163 Wn.App. 780 (2011), but see: State v. Priest, 147 Wn.App. 662 (2008); III.

State v. E.J.J., 183 Wn.2d 497 (2015)

Yelling at police, without conduct, is insufficient to prove obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020(1) (2001), State v. Williams, 171 Wn.2d 474, 485 (2011), Mountlake Terrace v. Stone, 6 Wn.App. 161 (1971), State v. Grant, 89 Wn.2d 678 (1978), State v. Hoffman, 35 Wn.App. 13, 16-17 (1983), "we cannot be certain that [defendant's] conviction was not based on speech alone," at 508, thus reversed and dismissed; 9-0.

State v. Ozuna, 184 Wn.2d 238 (2015)

Guards find letter written by defendant threatening a witness in defendant's jail cell, convicted of intimidating a former witness, RCW 9A.72.110 (2011); held: a defendant "directs a threat" when he communicates a threat to someone though not necessarily the intended victim, circumstantial evidence here establishes that the threat was communicated to a third party albeit not the corrections officer who confiscated it, see: State v. Hansen, 122 Wn.2d 712 (1993), State v. Anderson, 111 Wn.App. 317 (2002); 9-0.

State v. Smith, 185 Wn.App. 945, 956-58 (2015)

In failure to register bench trial, judge can compare signatures and conclude defendant signed letter, Mitchell v. Mitchell, 24 Wn.2d 701, 704 (1946); II.

State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870, 881-83 (2015)

In child rape case information alleges victim's initials and, in parentheses, date of birth, defendant maintains that date of birth must be proved per law of the case doctrine even though it's not an element of the crime as it was alleged in the charging document, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017); held: by using parenthetical date of birth information state did not add the victim's birth date to elements to be proved at trial; III.

State v. Rich, 184 Wn.2d 897 (2016)

While proof of DUI alone does not necessarily establish proof of reckless endangerment, RCW 9A.36.050(1), see: State v. Hanna, 123 Wn.2d 704 (1994), State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997), State v. Birch, 183 Wash. 670, 673 (1935), here DUI, defendant's admission she was "tipsy," child in front seat, speeding is sufficient to prove reckless endangerment even absent erratic or dangerous driving; reverses, in part, State v. Rich, 186 Wn.App. 632 (2015); 9-0.

State v. Trey M., 186 Wn.2d 884 (2016)

During therapy sessions respondent expresses desire to kill other students, therapist reports it to police, respondent is convicted of harassment; held: objective "reasonable person" test remains in place to prove true threat, distinguishing Elonis v. United States, —– U.S. ——, 135 S.Ct. 2001, 192 L.Ed.2d 1 (2015) and Virginia v. Black, 538 U.S. 343, 123 S.Ct. 1536, 155 L.Ed.2d 535 (2003); 5-4.

State v. Whittaker, 192 Wn.App. 395, 401-09 (2016)

Looking into victim's window or door on two occasions separated by several minutes is sufficient for jury to find the "repeated" element of stalking, RCW 9A.46.110(1) (2013), State v. Kintz, 169 Wn.2d 537 (2010); I.

State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016)

Teenager's tweet that she wants to punch complainant and that complainant must die is not a true threat, complainant was not frightened, context is that respondent desired to harm but did not intend to, State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36, 54 (2004), State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779 (2013), State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019), State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020), Seattle v. Buford-Johnson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6112342 (2021); I.

State v. C.B., 195 Wn.App. 528 (2016)

Respondent encourages two other teenagers to go to complainant's door, knock, shout racial slur and run away, is convicted of criminal trespass 2°; held: while a walkway and front porch is impliedly open to third parties to approach for a "customary purpose," that implied license does not extend to people "dingdong ditching" and yelling racist comments; III.

State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017)

Defendant is charged with theft 2° of access device, to convict instruction includes an element that requires proof that defendant intended to deprive victim of an access device, statute only requires proof that defendant intended to deprive of property, RCW 9A.56.020(1)(a) (2004); held: law of the case doctrine obliges the state to prove all elements contained in to convict instruction, even surplusage, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1988), State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017), see: State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018); law of the case doctrine is grounded in state common law, thus Washington will not follow Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237,, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016); 9-0.

State v. Jusilla, 197 Wn.App. 908 (2017)

In unlawful possession of firearm case to convict instruction includes serial numbers and make and model of guns, state offers no evidence to support serial numbers; held: law of the case doctrine requires state to prove what is in the to convict instruction even if they are not elements of the crime, State v. Hickman, 135 Wn.2d 97 (1998), State v. Johnson, 188 Wn.2d 742 (2017), see: State v. Tyler, 191 Wn.2d 205 (2018), cf.: Musacchio v. United States, 577 U.S. 237, 136 S.Ct. 709, 193 L.Ed.2d 639 (2016), unless the extra elements are in parenthesis, State v. Muñoz-Rivera, 190 Wn.App. 870 (2015); in burglary 1° case under deadly weapon prong evidence is sufficient to prove firearm where state offers photographs of guns, witnesses testify that they found loaded rifles, no one testified that the rifles were operable, but that can be inferred from photos and testimony, State v. Mathé, 35 Wn.App. 572 (1983),State v. Emery, 161 Wn.App. 172, 197-200 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 174 Wn.2d 741 (2012), State v. Tasker, 193 Wn.App. 575 (2016), State v. Crowder, 196 Wn.App. 861, 872-73 (2016); I.

State v. Harris, 199 Wn.App. 137 (2017)

Defendant shoots victim five times, ten weeks later victim dies, conflicting testimony is offered as to whether or not cause of death was homicide; held: while actual cause in fact ("but for") is the same in criminal and civil cases, legal causation is narrower than in tort cases, see: State v. Bauer, 180 Wn.2d 929 (2014); here, defendant committed an intentional act capable of causing harm which establishes legal causation, as opposed to Bauer, id., where defendant committed a negligent act; I.

State v. Disney, 199 Wn.App. 422 (2017)

Defendant complains to police and other agencies that defense counsel in prior case sexually touched him under counsel table in court, after investigation state declines to file charge against defense counsel, charges defendant with malicious prosecution, RCW 9.62.010 (2003); held: lack of probable cause is an element of malicious prosecution which state must prove based upon an objective, not a subjective, determination; while defendant's belief in the righteousness of his complaint is evidence it is not dispositive, court may weigh defendant's belief along with other evidence, thus evidence was sufficient to support trial judge's determination; III.

State v. McClure, 200 Wn.App. 231 (2017)

Defendant damages property then threatens to damage property of victim further if victim doesn't write a letter stating that no charges would be filed, defendant is convicted of extortion, RCW 9A.56.120 (2011); held: "extortion" means knowingly to obtain or attempt to obtain by threat property or services of the owner," RCW 9A.56.110 (1999), because victim would have the ability to receive restitution following a criminal conviction the evidence is sufficient to prove defendant attempted to obtain property; II.

State v. D.E.D., 200 Wn.App. 484, (2017)

Following unlawful detention respondent pulls his arms away to avoid being handcuffed, declines to put his hands behind his back, takes police officer two minutes to handcuff, is convicted of obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020 (2001); held: while criminal behavior following an unlawful arrest is not subject to suppression, the obstructing statute does not create an obligation to cooperate with a police investigation and not resist, passively resisting handcuffing when a suspect is not under arrest does not constitute obstructing a public servant where it does not hinder or obstruct the investigation into whether he was the armed youth the officer was trying to find; 2-1, III.

State v. Wilson, 1 Wn.App.2d 73 (2017)

Defendant-stepparent asks five-year old, in bedroom, to "suck on his spot," victim says no, defendant says "go ahead," victim says no again, defendant say okay, is charged with attempted rape of a child; held: in the context of defendant being a caretaker of young victim who "directs" victim to have sexual contact in an isolated place evidence is sufficient to prove attempt, State v. Jackson, 62 Wn.App. 53, 57 (1991), distinguishing State v. Grundy, 76 Wn.App. 335 (1994); I.

State v. Vasquez, 2 Wn.App.2d 632 (2018)

Defendant runs 63 feet from his vehicle and shoots, is convicted of drive-by shooting, RCW 9A.36.045; held: to convict of drive-by shooting defendant must be in the immediate area of the vehicle, 63 feet is too far, State v. Jameison, 4 Wn.App.2d 184 (2018), State v. Rodgers, 146 Wn.2d 55 (2002); III.

State v. Pinkney, 2 Wn.App.2d 574 (2018)

"Threaten," RCW 9A.46.020, includes all threats whether or not verbalized, State v. Burke, 132 Wn.App. 415 (2006); here, clenching one's fist in another's face and growling conveys to a reasonable person the intention to cause bodily harm to that person; II.

State v. Frahm, 3 Wn.App.2d 812 (2018), rev. granted, 2018 WL 5730386

Defendant rear-ends another vehicle which is disabled, citizen seeks to aid injured driver of disabled vehicle, a third vehicle hits the disabled vehicle, propels it into the citizen who dies, defendant is convicted of vehicular homicide; held: intervening act of second collision resulting in death of good Samaritan was reasonably foreseeable and was not a superseding cause; "[i]n determining whether an intervening act is a superseding cause, we consider whether the intervening act (1) 'created a different type of harm,' (2) 'constituted an extraordinary act,' and (3) 'operated independently' of the defendant's actions," State v. Roggenkamp, 115 Wn. App. 927, 945 (2003), aff'd, 153 Wn.2d 614 (2005); whether an act is a proximate cause and whether there is a superseding, intervening cause are questions of fact for the jury, State v. Meekins, 125 Wn.App. 390, 397 (2005); II.

Shoreline v. McLemore, 193 Wn.2d 225 (2019)

Bystander calls 911 to report argument in a home, police arrive, hear argument, demand entry, defendant tells police to leave, police break down door, discover no evidence of domestic violence but arrest defendant for obstructing, RCW 9A.76.020; 4-4 decision, thus trial court is affirmed.

State v. Sandoval, 8 Wn.App.2d 267 (2019)

A cancelled credit card that was active at the time it was stolen is an access device, RCW 9A.56.010(1) (2017), : State v. Schloredt, 97 Wn.App. 789 (1999), cf.: State v. Rose, 175 Wn.2d 10 (2012); II.

State v. Melland, 9 Wn.App.2d 562 (2019)

Defendant is charged with assault 2°/RCW 9A.36.021(1)(a) (2011)/intentional assault and recklessly cause substantial bodily harm, evidence shows that he grabbed a phone complainant was holding and her finger broke; held: evidence is insufficient to show that defendant knew of a substantial risk and disregarded the risk that a wrongful act may occur, thus state failed to prove recklessness, RCW 9A.08.010(1)(c); I.

State v. Wilson, 10 Wn.App.2d 719 (2019)

Defendant observes a dog attacking his dog, shoots the attacker with an arrow, is convicted of animal cruelty after trial court declines to instruct jury as to statutory defense, RCW 16.08.020, holding that the defense only applies to livestock; held: defense of "reasonable necessity" does not apply where a person sees a dog chasing or biting his dog; II.

State v. Dawley, 11 Wn.App.2d 527 (2019)

Defendant telling police officer that he would use "Green Beret tactics," "what happens if I came to your house and I put you into killing range with a firearm," is convicted of intimidating a public servant, RCW 9A.76.180; held: statute implicates First Amendment but is not unconstitutionally overbroad if limited to a true threat, see: State v. Stephenson, 89 Wn.App. 794 (1998); here, defendant made no serious expression of intent to inflict bodily harm thus evidence is insufficient; I.

State v. D.R.C., 13 Wn.App.2d 818 (2020)

In harassment case, RCW 9A.46.020(1) and (2)(a), respondent sent a series of text messages to her friends, indicating she wanted to kill her mother, texts were sent in the midst of a mother-daughter fight, were vaguely worded and peppered with smiling emojis and the initialism "LOL," no indication respondent ever meant for her mother to see the texts or that she ever threatened her mother directly, "given these circumstances, the state has not met its burden of proving a true threat," State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36, 43 (2004), State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567, 583 (2016), Seattle v. Buford-Johnson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6112342 (2021); III.

State v. Miller, 14 Wn.App.2d 469 (2020)

In an attempt to steal from a woman defendant gives investment company his true name but lies and says he is victim's nephew, is convicted of criminal impersonation, RCW 9A.60.040(1)(a) (2004); held: falsely using a family relationship is sufficient to convict of criminal impersonation; III.

State v. Majeed, 14 Wn.App.2d 868 (2020)

Police officer poses as a minor on-line, defendant agrees to engage in sex, is convicted of commercial sexual abuse of a minor, RCW 9.68A.100(1)(b) (2013); held: to prove commercial sexual abuse of a minor state must offer evidence that defendant offered money for sex with a corporeal minor, thus evidence is insufficient, dismissed with prejudice; III.

State v. Brake, 15 Wn.App.2d 740 (2020)

2020 amendments to bail jumping, RCW 9A.76.170, are not retroactive to cases on direct appeal, State v. Hoffman16 Wn.App.2d 563 (2021); II.

State v. Peters, 16 Wn.App.2d 454 (2021)

Defendant referred sex buyers to specific sex workers and agencies on a web site, scheduling appointments for sex buyers, vouching for would-be customers, and giving them detailed instructions about how to get through screening processes, advising enterprise owners with regard to specific apartment complexes to use and connecting individual sex workers with bookers, and agencies creating and running a website on which agencies and individual sex workers could post advertisements is sufficient to convict of promoting prostitution 2°, RCW 9A.88.080(1)(b); I.

State v. Slater, 197 Wn.2d 660 (2021)

A single failure to appear in court is not indicative of consciousness of guilt, thus it is error for a court to admit such evidence of flight, State v. Bruton, 66 Wn.2d 111, 112 (1965), cf.: State v. Cobb, 22 Wn.App. 221, 224 (1978), State v. Jefferson, 11 Wn.App. 566, 570 (1974); 9-0.

State v. J.A.V., ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 501 P.3d 159 (2021)

To prove malicious mischief state need not show who owned the property damaged, just that respondent did not own the property, "property of another" is defined as property in which the actor possesses anything less than exclusive ownership, RCW 9A.48.010(1)(c); III.

Seattle v. Buford-Johnson, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2021WL6112342 (2021)

Defendant drives past police officer, yells "fuck the police," point as if he had a gun, is convicted of harassment, SMC 12A.06.040a(A)(2); held: while evidence is sufficient to establish that the officer was placed "in objectively reasonable fear of bodily harm," defendant's statement and actions do not establish a true threat, rather it was a generalized and political statement of animosity as defendant did not stop driving, stopped immediately at a red light, thus more suggestive of a casual encounter or idle talk than a serious threat, State v. Kilburn, 151 Wn.2d 36 (2004), State v. Kohonen, 192 Wn.App. 567 (2016), cf.: State v. King, 135 Wn.App. 662, 668-72 (2006), State v. Locke, 175 Wn.App. 779, 788-96 (2013); I.

State v. Braun, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 2022WL176424 (2022)

Human trafficking, RCW 9A.40.100, can be proved even when defendant did not personally use force, fraud or coercion as long as he knew someone would do so; methods of subjugating people's wills includes subtle forms of coercion; III.

State v. Bergstrom, ___ Wn.2d ___, 2022WL244125 (2022)

In bail jumping case state need not prove that defendant "knowingly failed to appear," rather only that defendant received notice and had knowledge of the required court dates, reversing, in part, State v. Bergstrom, 15 Wn.App.2d 92 (2020); 9-0.

State v. Meza, 22 Wn.App.2d 514 (2022)

In felony murder/kidnap case victim is kidnapped, beaten and shot, left in a park after which accomplice returns in ten minutes and kills him, defense maintains kidnapping was complete before the murder; held: kidnapping is a continuing course of conduct crime, a killing that occurs before the victim reaches safety is "in the course of" the kidnapping, State v. Leech, 114 Wn.2d 700 (1990), State v. Gilmer, 96 Wn.App. 875 (1999), State v. Dudrey, 30 Wn.App. 447 (1981); here, a reasonable juror could find that victim was not in a place of safety; I.

State v. Valdiglesias LaValle, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 518 P.3d 658 (2022)

Defendant asks her 10-year old son to poison her ex-husband so that they will be "together forever," is convicted of criminal solicitation to commit murder, RCW 9A.28,030(1) (2011); held: the element of criminal solicitation that the person "offers to give…money or other thing of value" to engage in conduct does not apply as a "thing of value" must include things, tangible or intangible, that have monetary value, thus dismissed; I.

State v. Harrison, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 244 (2022)

As a condition of entry into drug court defendant waives right to appeal sufficiency of facts in written reports, after revocation defendant appeals challenging sufficiency of the evidence contained in the stipulation (clearly insufficient here); held: where defendant knowingly and voluntarily waives the right to appeal he cannot challenge sufficiency on appeal, but see: State v. Baeza, 100 Wn.2d 487 (1983); II.

EXPERT WITNESS
Appointment

State v. Griffith, 91 Wn.2d 572 (1979)

For sanity evaluation, defense expert must be appointed if requested, but purpose of defense expert is not to prepare for examination by court appointed experts per RCW 10.77.060; 9-0.

State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982)

Court need not appoint polygraph expert where state declines to stipulate to admissibility of results and defense fails to lay any foundation on reliability of polygraph evidence; II.

Seattle v. Gordon, 39 Wn.App. 437 (1985)

Where defense counsel questions defendant's competency, trial court has considerable discretion to determine whether there was "reason to doubt" defendant's competency, giving considerable weight to counsel's opinion; here, defense counsel raised the competency issue for the first time at trial without an affidavit, making it appear that it was a trial tactic rather than a true concern; once court finds a reason to doubt, then court must appoint experts, RCW 10.77.060(1), State v. Fedoruk, 5 Wn.App.2d 317 (2018); accord: State v. Lord, 117 Wn.2d 829, 900-3 (1991); I.

State v. Melos, 42 Wn.App. 638 (1986)

Indigent sex crime defendant is not entitled to an expert at public expense for psychiatric evidence not necessary for the defense to the charge or to rebut adverse evidence presented by the state at sentencing, cf.: State v. Young, 125 Wn.2d 688 (1995); defendant has no right to the psychiatrist of his choice at state expense; I.

State v. Hermanson, 65 Wn.App. 450 (1992)

Sex deviancy expert must be appointed for indigent defendant where state agrees to plea bargain a charge so that defendant is eligible for sex offender sentencing alternative, RCW 9.94A.120(7), if amenable to treatment; not an abuse of discretion to deny public funds for expert solely for sentencing purposes, absent state's agreement to reduce the charge if defendant is amenable to treatment; see: State v. Melos, 42 Wn.App. 638 (1986), State v. Tuffree, 35 Wn.App. 243 (1983), State v. Aamold, 60 Wn.App. 175, 177 (1991), see also State v. Young, 125 Wn.2d 688 (1995); I.

Mount Vernon v. Cochran, 70 Wn.App. 517 (1993)

City appeals appointment of breath test expert for indigent; held: where an expert is appointed solely for trial testimony, and admissibility can be determined at the pre-appointment stage, then the expert services may not be "necessary," CrRLJ 3.1(f), if the evidence is inadmissible, State v. Sandomingo, 39 Wn.App. 709, 712 (1985), State v. Niemczyk, 31 Wn.App. 803 (1982); admissibility is not an issue, however, where the expert is sought for review and consultation, see: United States v. Sims, 617 F.2d 1371, 1375 n. 3 (9th Cir. 1980), thus appointment was not an abuse of discretion; I.

State v. Young, 125 Wn.2d 688 (1995)

Decision to order a special sexual offender sentencing alternative sex deviancy expert at public expense is within trial court's discretion, see: State v. Melos, 42 Wn.App. 638 (1986), State v. Tuffree, 35 Wn.App. 243 (1983), State v. Hermanson, 65 Wn.App. 450 (1992); 9-0.

State v. Adams, 77 Wn.App. 50, 54-5 (1995)

At competency hearing to determine whether court will order antipsychotic medication, defendant requests appointment of a psychologist because state's witness "told a lot of lies," denied by trial court; held: defendant's failure to specify a reason for appointment of expert supports trial court's exercise of discretion; I.

State v. D., 89 Wn.App. 77, 88-90 (1997), op withdrawn, in part, State v. Carol M.D., 97 Wn.App. 355 (1999)

Alleged victim of child abuse is inconsistent as to whether she was abused, states at one time she could not remember if she was abused, trial court denies funds for expert testimony on false memory syndrome; held: because reliability of alleged victim's memory was crux of defense, trial court abused its discretion, see: State v. Hoffman, 116 Wn.2d 51, 90 (1991); III.

State v. Baggett, 103 Wn.App. 564, 571-72 (2000)

Defendant, charged with assault 2°, obtains appointed diminished capacity expert, is acquitted of assault but convicted of unlawful display of a weapon as a lesser, court imposes costs of expert; held: although defendant was acquitted of the offense for which he retained the expert, where conviction is linked both substantively and procedurally to the same prosecution, court did not exceed its authority, RCW 10.01.160(1), see: State v. Buchanan, 78 Wn.App. 648, 653 n.3 (1995); III.

State v. Punsalan, 156 Wn.2d 875 (2006)

Indigent defendants represented by private counsel may be entitled to expert assistance at public expense, CrR 3.1(f); 9-0.

State v. French, 157 Wn.2d 593, 606-09 (2006)

Trial court's refusal to authorize funds to translate an extradition document, CrR 3.1(f), was not an abuse of discretion; 9-0.

State v. Cuthbert, 154 Wn.App. 318, 326-36 (2010)

In theft case involving misuse of guardianship funds, court denies defense motion for a forensic accountant at public expense, CrR 3.1(f); held: "simply because defense counsel must rebut a prosecution case built on numbers or mathematical evidence," trial court exercised proper discretion in denying expert, State v. Heffner, 126 Wn.App. 803 (2009); here, defendant had an accounting degree and had worked as an auditor thus could have assisted in his own defense without an expert; II.

State v. McEnroe, 174 Wn.2d 795 (2012)

Where the court denies a motion to seal a document that is contemporaneously submitted along with the sealing motion, the party may withdraw the underlying document; 7-2.

Hinton v. Alabama, 571 U.S. 263, 134 S.Ct. 1081, 188 L.Ed.2d 1 (2014)

Defense counsel, erroneously believing that there was a cap on what could be appropriated to hire an expert retains a one-eyed firearms examiner who is badly impeached on cross; held: while selection of an expert witness is a strategic decision that is "virtually unchallengeable," counsel's error of law which caused him to retain an expert that counsel agreed was inadequate was ineffective assistance; per curiam.

McWilliams v. Dunn, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S.Ct. 1790, 198 L.Ed.2d 341 (2017)

Two days before capital sentencing hearing court appointed neuropsychologist (employed by the state Department of Mental Health) provides an evaluation and mental health records, defense seeks a recess and an expert to assist defense in evaluating the report and translate the data into a legal strategy, denied by trial court; held: Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 105 S.Ct. 1087, 84 L.Ed.2d 53 (1985) requires, when threshold criteria are met, the government must provide an indigent defendant with access to a mental health expert who is sufficiently available to the defense, and independent of the prosecution, to effectively "assist in evaluation, preparation, and presentation of the defense, *id.*at 83, 105 S.Ct. 1087, which should include help in preparing direct or cross-examination, denied by trial court here, thus reversed; 5-4.

FAILURE TO REGISTER AS A SEX/KIDNAPPING OFFENDER

Pers. Restraint of Estavillo, 69 Wn.App. 401 (1993)

Sexual offender registration statute, RCW 9A.44.130, is not an ex post facto enactment, see: State v. Handran, 113 Wn.2d 11, 14 (1989); 2-1, I.

State v. Clark, 75 Wn.App. 827 (1994)

Sex offender registration requirement is a collateral consequence of pleading guilty, and failure to advise is not grounds for withdrawal of plea, at 831; I.

State v. S.M.H., 76 Wn.App. 550 (1995)

A juvenile convicted of burglary with sexual motivation, RCW 13.40.135, is not required to register as a sex offender, RCW 9A.44.130; I.

State v. Heiskell, 129 Wn.2d 113 (1996)

Juveniles must wait two years before first applying for waiver from sex offender registration requirement, RCW 9A.44.140(4), see also: State v. Hooper, 154 Wn.App. 428 (2010); reverses State v. Heiskell, 77 Wn.App. 943 (1995); 6-3.

State v. Munds, 83 Wn.App. 489 (1996)

Failure to include sex offender registration requirement in judgment and sentence, RCW 10.01.200, may be cured by subsequent notification, State v. Clark, 75 Wn.App. 827, 832-3 (1994); defendant need not be on supervision to be obliged to register; III.

State v. Pray, 96 Wn.App. 25 (1999)

Sex offender moves out of Seattle home to Bellingham where over seven days he stays with a friend in an apartment and then two motels, is convicted of failure to register, RCW 9A.44.030(1); held: rational trier of fact could find that temporary habitation is a residence, distinguishing State v. Pickett, 95 Wn.App. 475 (1999), see: State v. Prestegard, 108 Wn.App. 14, 20-22 (2001), see: State v. Batson, 194 Wn.App. 326 (2016), but see: State v. Stratton, 130 Wn.App. 760 (2005); I.

State v. Vanderpool, 99 Wn.App. 709, 712-14 (2000)

Inability to understand the sex offender registration statute is not a defense to failure to register, State v. Reed, 84 Wn.App. 379, 384 (1997); III.

State v. Prestegard, 108 Wn.App. 14 (2001)

In failure to register as sex offender case, court declines to admit testimony of clerks that sheriff's office routinely lost court documents and therefore lost defendant's registration; held: evidence of the routine practice of an organization, ER 406, is admissible without foundational requirements necessary for establishing a person's habit; II.

State v. King, 111 Wn.App. 430 (2002)

Due to apparent statutory numbering error, failure to register as a kidnapper is deemed a sex offense, failure to register as a sex offender is not; held: where inadvertent numbering error undermines express intent of statutes and renders them irrational, court may correct the error where legislative intent is clear and there is no ambiguity, State v. Albright, 144 Wn.App. 566 (2008), see: State v. Taylor, 97 Wn.2d 724, 729 (1982); I.

Smith v. Doe, 155 L.Ed.2d 165 (2003)

Alaska statute requiring sex offenders to register even if convicted of sex offense before sex offender registration statute was enacted does not violate ex post facto clause because registration is non-punitive, State v. Ward, 123 Wn.2d 488 (1994), State v. Enquist, 163 Wn.App. 41 (2011), State v. Boyd, 1 Wn.App.2d 501 (2017), see: Kansas v. Hendricks, 138 L.Ed.2d 501 (1997); 6-3.

State v. Stratton, 130 Wn.App. 760 (2005)

In failure to register case, RCW 9A.44.130, where defendant defaults on mortgage, returns keys but continues to use telephone and postal service at registered residence and lives in his car at the premises, he is not lacking a fixed residence and thus has not violated the statute, distinguishing State v. Pickett, 95 Wn.App. 475 (1999); II.

State v. Nelson, 131 Wn.App. 175 (2005)

Failure to register as a sex offender, RCW 9A.44.130, is not a sex offense for purposes or requiring a DOC presentence report, RCW 9.94A.500(1); evidence that defendant did not notify sheriff in the county he was last registered that he had ceased to live at his prior registered address is sufficient to convict; II.

State v. Watson, 160 Wn.2d 1 (2007)

Failure to register as a sex offender, RCW 9A.44.130(4)(a)(i), which requires that, when a defendant is released from jail following a probation violation and returns to the same home he was living in he must re-register regardless if he previously registered, is not vague, State v. Smith, 185 Wn.App. 945 (2015); affirms State v. Watson, 130 Wn.App. 376 (2005); 5-4.

State v. Gossage, 138 Wn.App. 298, 304-06 (2007)

When sex offender seeks relief from the duty to register, RCW 9A.44.140(3)(a), granting such a petition is wholly discretionary, statute does not specify a procedure, trial court need not hold an evidentiary hearing, see also: State v. Hooper, 154 Wn.App. 433 (2010); I.

State v. Stewart, 141 Wn.App. 791 (2007)

Evidence is sufficient to convict for failure to register as a sex offender where defendant moves to another county and fails to register within 24 hours even if he provides his CCO with his new county address; III.

State v. Gossage, 165 Wn.2d 1 (2008)

When sex offender seeks relief from the duty to register, RCW 9A.44.140(3), trial court must grant a certificate of discharge when there are no outstanding sentencing requirements and the ten year crime-free period has been met, even when there are expired but unpaid legal financial obligations, RCW 9.94A.760(4), see: State v. McMillan, 152 Wn.App. 423 (2009), State v. Porter, 188 Wn.App. 735 (2015); reverses State v. Gossage, 138 Wn.App. 298 (2007); 9-0.

State v. Albright, 144 Wn.App. 566 (2008)

Failure to register as a sex offender is a sex offense even though legislature mis-numbered it, State v. King, 111 Wn.App. 430 (2002); court may correct to avoid an absurd result, State v. Taylor, 97 Wn.2d 724, 729 (1982); II.

State v. Peterson, 145 Wn.App. 672 (2008), aff'd, on other grounds, 168 Wn.2d 763 (2010)

Information charging failure to register as a sex offender, RCW 9A.44.130, must contain the mens rea element of "knowingly;" varying time requirements of when a sex offender must register if one is homeless or moving from a fixed address are not elements of the crime and do not create different means of committing the crime, State v. Bennett, 154 Wn.App. 202 (2010); I.

State v. Werneth, 147 Wn.App. 549 (2008)

To support a sex offense registration requirement, RCW 9A.44.130(11)(a) (2006), an out-of-state conviction must be legally or factually comparable to a Washington sex offense, State v. Russell, 104 Wn.App. 422, 440 (2001); III.

State v. Drake, 149 Wn.App. 88 (2009)

Proof of failure to pay rent and landlord's testimony that defendant "ceased to be a resident," is insufficient to establish failure to register as a sex offender, RCW 9A.44.130(1)(a), absent evidence that defendant received notice of termination of tenancy under landlord-tenant act, RCW 59.18.200; III.

State v. Ramos, 149 Wn.App. 266 (2009)

RCW 4.24.550(6), which delegates to county sheriffs the authority to assign risk level classifications for some sex offenders for purposes of sex offender registration, violates separation of powers doctrine, cf.: State v. Brosius, 154 Wn.App. 714, 718-21 (2010), see also: State v. Caton, 163 Wn.App. 659 (2011), rev'd, on other grounds, 163 Wn.App. 659 (2011); II.

State v. Durrett, 150 Wn.App. 402 (2009)

Homeless sex offender reports one week then fails to report then reports then fails to report again, is convicted of two counts of failure to register, RCW 9A.44.130 (2006); held: requirement that a homeless person report weekly is an ongoing duty rather than a collection of discrete actions, thus unit of prosecution only supports one count, State v. Green, 156 Wn.App. 96 (2010); had defendant not reported at all, he could only have been convicted of one count, his partial compliance cannot support more charges; 2-1, I.

State v. Howe, 151 Wn.App. 338 (2009)

In a failure to register case, RCW 9A.44.130(1)(a), where state fails to prove that a prior out-of-state conviction amounted to a sex offense in Washington, then the evidence at trial was insufficient and case must be dismissed with prejudice, State v. Werneth, 147 Wn.App. 549 (2008); 2-1, II.

State v. Peterson, 168 Wn.2d 763 (2010)

Failure to register, RCW 9A.44.130, is not an alternative means crime requiring jury unanimity, but see: State v. Mason, 170 Wn.App. 375 (2012); residential status, e.g. homelessness, is not an element of the crime; affirms State v. Peterson, 145 Wn.App. 672 (2008); 9-0.

State v. Brosius, 154 Wn.App. 714 (2010)

In failure to register case, while county sheriff's classification as a level III sex offender which determines frequency and nature of reporting violates separation of powers doctrine, State v. Ramos, 149 Wn.App. 266 (2009), Juvenile Rehabilitation Administration's classification, RCW 13.40.217(3), 4.24.5502, 72.09.345(3), is valid as statutes provide adequate procedural safeguards to prevent abuse of administrative discretion; failure to plead that defendant was a level III risk classification is sufficient for an information where challenged for the first time on appeal, see also: State v. Peterson, 145 Wn.App. 672, 677-78 (2008), affirmed, 168 Wn.2d 763 (2010); II.

State v. Green, 156 Wn.App. 96 (2010)

Defendant fails to register for a year, is charged with failure to register on a date 90 days after he last registered, is acquitted, state charges him with failure to register 90 days thereafter, trial court dismisses; held: failure to register is ongoing and continuing until defendant registers again, State v. Durrett, 150 Wn.App. 402 (2009); 2-1, II.

State v. Williams, 157 Wn.App. 689 (2010)

Sentencing court does not abuse discretion by prohibiting unsupervised contact with minors following conviction for failure to register, distinguishing State v. Riles, 135 Wn.2d 326, 352 (1998) , abrogated on other grounds, State v. Valencia, 169 Wn.2d 782 (2010); I.

State v. Enquist, 163 Wn.App. 41 (2011)

Failure to register/homeless, RCW 9A.44.130 (2006), does not violate ex post facto clause, Smith v. Doe, 583 U.S. 84, 155 L.Ed.2d 165 (2003), State v. Ward, 123 Wn.2d 488 (1994), State v. Boyd, 1 Wn.App.2d 501 (2017), or constitutional right to travel, State v. Smith, 185 Wn.App. 945, 953-54 (2015); II.

State v. Caton, 174 Wn.2d 239 (2012)

Sheriff's office fixes a date for which sex offender is to report, RCW 9.94A.130(7) (2008), see: RCW 9.94A.130(5)(b) (2011), defendant reports day after, is charged and convicted of failure to register and sentenced to fifty months; held: statute requires defendant to report every ninety days, not on date set by sheriff, thus evidence is insufficient, reversing State v. Caton, 163 Wn.App. 659 (2011); if statute can be read to make it a crime to not report on sheriff's specified date even if offender reports within the 90-day period, it is ambiguous; per curiam.

State v. Smith, 185 Wn.App. 945 (2015)

Failure to register, RCW 9A.44.130 (2011), is not vague, State v. Watson, 160 Wn.2d 1 (2007), and does not impair the constitutional right to travel, State v. Enquist, 163 Wn.App. 41, 50-51 (2011); II.

State v. Batson, 194 Wn.App. 326 (2016)

Defendant, having lived in a shelter, failed to report weekly to the sheriff, state charges him with failure to register as a sex offender, alleging that he lacked a fixed residence, RCW 9A.44.130(5) (2015), offers evidence about the shelter where defendant had been but offers no evidence that defendant did not have another fixed residence; held: state has the burden of proving that defendant lacked a fixed residence, thus evidence was insufficient; I.

State v. Wilcox, 196 Wn.App. 206 (2016)

Failure to register under former RCW 9A.44.030(46)(a)(v) (2015) is not a sex offense if defendant has not been previously convicted of failure to register in violation of RCW 9A.44.132(1) (2015); II.

State v. Dollarhyde, 9 Wn.App.2d 351 (2019)

Evidence is insufficient to prove failure to register/homeless, RCW 9A.44.130(6)(b) (2017), where there is no evidence that sheriff made a clear and specific request for an accounting of defendant's whereabouts for a specific week; III.

State v. Gregg, 9 Wn.App.2d 569 (2019), rev. granted, 194 Wn.2d 1002 (2019)

On plea form paragraph stating that because the offense is a felony firearm offense judge may require registration as a firearm offender, RCW 9.41.335, is crossed out even though it applies, defendant seeks to withdraw plea; held: registration as a firearm offender is a collateral consequence of a guilty plea, misinformation is not grounds to withdraw the plea; I.

State v. Cathers, 13 Wn.App.2d 29 (2020)

Sex offender lives at a residence, hires a cat sitter while he travels for twelve days, is convicted of failure to register, RCW 9A.44.130(6)(a) (2017), which obliges notification of the sheriff after three business days of lacking a fixed residence; held: being temporarily gone from a residence for twelve days does not establish that defendant lacks a fixed residence; III.

State v. Batson, 196 Wn.2d 670 (2020)

RCW 9A.44.128(10)(h) (2015), requiring a duty to register as a sex offender in Washington if required to register after having been convicted in another state is not an improper delegation, reversing State v. Batson, 9 Wn.App.2d 546 (2019); 6-3.

FELONY FLIGHT/ELUDING

State v. Sherman, 98 Wn.2d 53 (1982)

Felony flight statute is not vague; defendant is entitled to instruction that the manner of driving creates only a rebuttable presumption of the mental state of willful and wanton disregard, State v. Aamold, 60 Wn.App. 175 (1991); felony flight statute does not violate equal protection, State v. Zornes, 78 Wn.2d 9 (1970); 9-0.

State v. Stayton, 39 Wn.App. 46 (1984)

Approves "to convict" instruction which does not require that defendant's willful failure to stop occurred while attempting to elude a pursuing police vehicle, see also: State v. Flora, 160 Wn.App. 549, 552-56 (2011); II.

State v. Owens, 39 Wn.App. 130 (1984)

Trier of fact may determine reasonableness of defendant's actions fleeing police following unlawful attempted traffic stop, State v. Aydelotte, 35 Wn.App. 125 (1983); III.

State v. Brown, 40 Wn.App. 91 (1985)

Avoiding an unlawful arrest is not a defense to felony flight; III.

State v. Malone, 106 Wn.2d 607 (1986)

Idaho police officer chases defendant into Washington, defendant attempts to elude Idaho officer in Washington, is charged with felony flight, RCW 46.61.1024; held: charge is proper, as statute does not restrict terms "police vehicle" or "police officer" to Washington vehicles or officers; 6-2.

State v. Thomas, 109 Wn.2d 222 (1987)

In felony flight case where defense was diminished capacity due to voluntary intoxication, failure of defense counsel to offer instruction that circumstantial evidence of defendant's manner of driving only creates rebuttable inference of wanton and willful disregard, State v. Sherman, 98 Wn.2d 53 (1982), is ineffective assistance; calling an alcohol counselor trainee who cannot qualify as an expert is ineffective assistance; 5-4.

State v. Whitcomb, 51 Wn.App. 322 (1988)

State need not prove that anyone else was endangered by defendant's conduct or that a high probability of harm actually existed; state need only show that defendant engaged in conduct from which a willful or wanton disregard for the lives or property of others may be inferred; I.

State v. Mitchell, 56 Wn.App. 610 (1990)

Defense is not entitled to instruction that defendant's objective conduct could be rebutted only by subjective evidence pertaining to defendant's mental state, State v. Sherman, 98 Wn.2d 53 (1982), distinguishing State v. Thomas, 109 Wn.2d 222 (1987); I.

State v. Sampson, 65 Wn.App. 9 (1992)

Defendant's testimony that he skidded 75 feet through intersection and drove three times speed limit but was always in control does not entitle him to State v. Sherman, 98 Wn.2d 53 (1982) instruction, as there is insufficient evidence to show that he had no subjective intent to drive in the manner in which he drove; I.

State v. Delmarter, 68 Wn.App. 770 (1993)

Instruction that jury may infer reckless driving from speeding is constitutional error, as no rational trier of fact could find, beyond a reasonable doubt, that driving 45 m.p.h. in a 25 m.p.h. zone, without more, is reckless driving, Schwendeman v. Wallenstein, 971 F.2d 313 (9th Cir. 1992); see also: State v. Holcomb, 31 Wn.App. 398 (1982); but see: State v. Burt, 24 Wn.App. 867 (1979); II.

State v. Gallegos, 73 Wn.App. 644 (1994)

Intent to elude is not an element of attempting to elude a pursuing police vehicle, RCW 46.61.024, as the word "attempt" in the statute has nothing to do with criminal attempt, at 648-50; refusal to cooperate, RCW 46.61.021, is a statutory lesser of felony flight, State v. Brown, 40 Wn.App. 91, 96 n. 3 (1985); here, trial court refused to so instruct, held: test is whether there is evidence supporting an inference that the defendant is guilty of the lesser offense instead of the greater one, State v. Bergeson, 64 Wn.App. 366, 369 (1992); I.

State v. Hudson, 85 Wn.App. 401 (1997)

Proof that officer was in uniform is a necessary element of attempting to elude, RCW 46.61.024, evidence that police were in a marked vehicle and that defendant knew they were police is insufficient to establish that they were in uniform, distinguishing State v. Trowbridge, 49 Wn.App. 360, 362-3 (1987); accord: State v. Fussell, 84 Wn.App. 126 (1996), State v. Ritts, 94 Wn.App. 784 (1999); I.

State v. Duffy, 86 Wn.App. 334, 339-41 (1997)

Lack of probable cause to stop is not a basis to dismiss a charge of attempting to elude, State v. Mather, 28 Wn.App. 700, 703 (1981); III.

State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453 (1999)

Negligent driving 2º, RCW 46.61.525, is not a lesser of reckless driving, as an infraction cannot be a lesser of a crime, at 466-68; instruction that jury may infer recklessness from speeding was proper here, where evidence established that defendant traveled twice the speed limit, drove erratically, ran a four-way stop and cut across lanes to negotiate a corner, distinguishing State v. Delmarter, 68 Wn.App. 770 (1993), at 468-70, State v. Randhawa, 133 Wn.2d 67 (1997); II.

State v. Ritts, 94 Wn.App. 784 (1999)

Defendant flees from uniformed officers in vehicle with sirens and lights but not marked with lettering or a logo, trial court dismisses; held: RCW 46.61.024 requires that the pursuing vehicle be "appropriately marked," which must include lettering or a logo on the sides, RCW 46.08.065, distinguishing State v. Trowbridge, 49 Wn.App. 360, 362-63 (1987), see: State v. Argueta, 107 Wn.App. 532 (2001); III.

State v. Flowers, 99 Wn.App. 57 (2000)

In attempt to elude case, police observe motorcycle "doing donuts," signal to stop with lights and siren, rider looks at officer, speeds away and flees before apprehension at scene, defendant later confesses; held: evidence supports an inference that someone attempted to elude, thus establishing corpus; II.

State v. Refuerzo, 102 Wn.App. 341 (2000)

A marked police bicycle is an official police vehicle; I.

State v. Treat, 109 Wn.App. 419, 426-27 (2001)

Defendant fails to stop for pursuing police for ¼ mile, stops briefly, accelerates at a deputy and attempts to take off again is sufficient, State v. Perez, 166 Wn.App. 55, 60-61 (2012), to prove eluding; RCW 46.61.024 does not require that police vehicle remain moving; III.

State v. Tandecki, 153 Wn.2d 842 (2005)

Whether to stop "immediately" is an essential element of attempting to elude, RCW 46.61.024, but is not reversible error if missing from information but raised for the first time on appeal, State v. Kjorsvik, 117 Wn.2d 93 (1991); affirms State v. Tandecki¸120 Wn.App. 303 (2004); 9-0.

State v. Ratliff, 140 Wn.App. 12 (2007)

"Reckless manner" element of eluding, RCW 46.61.024(1) (2003), is properly defined as "a rash or heedless manner, indifferent to the consequences," the same as in vehicular homicide/assault, State v. Roggenkamp, 153 Wn.2d 614, 618 (2007), as amendment per LAWS OF 2003, ch. 101, § 1 substituted reckless manner for "wanton or willful disregard," see: State v. Ridgley, 141 Wn.App. 771 (2007); III.

State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 643-45 (2010)

"Reckless manner" and "equipped with lights and sirens" are necessary elements of RCW 46.61.024 (2003) which must be pled in information and may be raised for first time on appeal, but see: State v. Pittman, 185 Wn.App. 614 (2015); III.

State v. Flora, 160 Wn.App. 549, 552-56 (2011)

In eluding case, "willfully" must be defined per RCW 9A.08.010(4); I.

State v. Hunley, 161 Wn.App. 919, 924-26 (2011), affirmed, on other grounds, 165 Wn.2d 901 (2012)

Reckless driving is not a lesser of attempting to elude per 2003 amendments to RCW 46.61.024, legislatively overruling, in part, State v. Parker, 35 Wn.App. 650 (1983), State v. Gallegos, 73 Wn.App. 644 (1994); 2-1, II.

State v. Perez, 166 Wn.App. 55, 61-63 (2012)

In eluding case, defendant testified that he did not see lights or hear a siren, defense counsel did not request an instruction on the affirmative defense that a reasonable person would not believe the signal to stop was given by a police officer, RCW 46.61.024(2) (2010); held:

defendant must show that counsel's failure to request the instruction was other than tactical, defendant would have had to prove the affirmative defense, state had to prove that conduct was willful; III.

State v. Chouap, 170 Wn.App. 114, 122-26 (2012)

Defendant is convicted of two counts of eluding a pursuing police vehicle for recklessly eluding Tacoma police who stop pursuit, later is pursued by Lakewood police and recklessly eludes them; held: each was a separate unit of prosecution; II.

State v. Williams, 178 Wn.App. 104 (2013)

Instruction for endangerment enhancement to eluding statute, RCW 9.94A.834 (2008), that uses the words "threatened with physical injury or harm" rather than "endangered" is sufficient; I.

State v. Pittman, 185 Wn.App. 614 (2015)

Information charging attempting to elude, RCW 46.61.024(1) (2010), need not include the method by which police signaled to stop regardless of statutory language that "signal…may be by hand, voice, emergency light, or siren," distinguishing State v. Naillieux, 158 Wn.App. 630, 643-45 (2010), where raised for the first time on appeal; II.

State v. Feely, 192 Wn.App. 751, 759-62 (2016)

Endangerment enhancement to eluding, RCW 9.94A.834 (2008), applies to endangering officers who were not following the defendant; I.

State v. Winborne, 4 Wn.App.2d 147, 176-78 (2018)

In felony eluding a police trial, defense motion in limine to preclude officer from testifying that defendant drove recklessly or eluded police is denied, officers so testify; held: witness may not testify to opinions of elements of a crime, State v. Farr-Lenzini, 93 Wn.App. 453 (1999), trial court abused discretion in admitting testifmony; 2-1, III.

State v. Schilling, 9 Wn.App.2d 115 (2019)

"Reckless" in eluding statute, RCW 46.61.024(1), is not vague; III.

FORGERY

G367

State v. Mark, 94 Wn.2d 520 (1980)

Defendant-pharmacist billed DSHS for prescriptions where defendant had filled in physicians' names held not a forgery since it was not purported to be signatures of physicians, rather a false representation; must purport to be the writing of someone other than the true maker to be a forgery; 9-0.

In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203 (1980)

Unauthorized use of the proceeds of an instrument which was not falsely made or completed is theft, not forgery; 6-2.

State v. Marshall, 25 Wn.App. 240 (1980)

No forgery if defendant uses true or actual name; i.

State v. Sullivan, 28 Wn.App. 29 (1980)

Defendant cannot be convicted of forgery for offering a written instrument known to be forged if another person presented the instrument on defendant's behalf; presenting a stolen credit card is not forgery unless defendant signs slip; I.

State v. Brown, 29 Wn.App. 11 (1981)

State need not prove checks were forged in Washington if it proves they were altered there; I.

State v. Edwards, 51 Wn.App. 763 (1988)

Defendant-employee accepts a check from a customer with payee line blank, defendant asserts she will stamp in business name, instead fills in her own name and cashes check; held: forgery, distinguishing In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203 (1980); II.

State v. Skorpen, 57 Wn.App. 144 (1990)

Offering a check which defendant did not forge and which he did not know was forged, is not forgery, RCW 9A.60.020(1); a forged check does not, by itself, constitute evidence of a debt, as extrinsic evidence is necessary that payee in good faith paid the check or took it for value; II.

State v. Scoby, 117 Wn.2d 55 (1991)

A $1 bill altered to look like a $20 bill by cutting off and pasting corners is written instrument, RCW 9A.60.010; obviousness of alteration and defendant's possession of a $20 bill with identical corners torn off establishes corroborative evidence of guilty knowledge beyond mere possession, State v. Douglas, 71 Wn.2d 303 (1967), State v. Ladely, 82 Wn.2d 172 (1973); affirms State v. Scoby, 57 Wn.App. 809 (1990); 9-0.

State v. Soderholm, 68 Wn.App. 363 (1993)

While an element of forgery is that defendant lacked authority to sign an instrument, State v. Conklin, 79 Wn.2d 805, 808 (1971), "to convict" instruction requiring state to prove the instrument was "falsely made," defined as "the maker did not authorize the making" is sufficient; I.

State v. Esquivel, 71 Wn.App. 868 (1993)

Showing an inauthentic alien registration card to police which contains defendant's correct name and signature is sufficient to establish a false document and intent to defraud, cf.: State v. Vasquez, 178 Wn.2d 1 (2013), RCW 9A.60.020(1)(b); by showing the cards to officers, defendants misrepresented their legal status in United States, even though they did not misrepresent their legal names; intent to defraud specific officers is not required, see: RCW 10.58.040; because the documents' only value would be to falsely represent defendants' right to legally be in United States, there was sufficient evidence to establish forgeries, State v. Tinajero, 154 Wn.App. 745 (2009); III.

State v. Smith, 72 Wn.App. 237 (1993)

An unsigned check, even if accepted, lacks legal efficacy, and thus cannot support a charge of forgery, State v. Taes, 5 Wn.2d 51, 53 (1940); II.

State v. Aitken, 79 Wn.App. 890 (1995)

Defendant assumes name of dead person, opens bank account, deposits checks that bounce, submits withdrawal slip, is convicted of forgery; held: assuming a name intending to defraud is forgery, State v. Lutes, 38 Wn.2d 475, 480-1 (1951); a withdrawal slip is an instrument for purposes of forgery, State v. Scoby, 57 Wn.App. 809, 811 (1990), aff'd, 117 Wn.2d 55 (1991); II.

State v. Sanders, 86 Wn.App. 466 (1997)

Defendant forges ex-wife's signature on a proposed court order, argues that the order is consistent with the judge's ruling, thus state must prove materiality; held: offering a forged document for filing at a public office, RCW 40.16.030, does not require proof that document was not "materially false"; II.

State v. Young, 97 Wn.App. 235, 239-40 (1999)

Presenting a post-dated check can constitute forgery, RCW 62A.3-113, State v. Love, 176 Wn.App. 911, 922-24 (2013); I.

State v. Daniels, 106 Wn.App. 571 (2001)

Store receives telephone call purporting to authorize purchase of a gift certificate that would be picked up by a third party who was authorized to sign the credit card slip and pick up the gift certificate, defendant appears, signs false name, is arrested; held: unauthorized signature on a credit card charge slip is forgery, as the slip has legal efficacy even if not legally valid, State v. Scoby, 117 Wn.2d 55 (1991), State v. Morse, 38 Wn.2d 927 (1951); I.

State v. Richards, 109 Wn.App. 648 (2001)

Defendant signs false name to traffic citation; held: a signed traffic citation is a written instrument with legal efficacy that may be susceptible to forgery, State v. Bradshaw, 3 Wn.App.2d 187 (2018); II.

State v. Simmons, 113 Wn.App. 29 (2002)

Forgery statute, RCW 9A.60.020(1), which defines forgery as "intent to injure or defraud" does not create alternative means of committing forgery by injuring and defrauding, as the words are employed "in the same sense;" II.

State v. Williams, 118 Wn.App. 178 (2003)

Defendant, having been in a collision while impersonating another, retains counsel under false name, signs settlement checks, release of claims, a "client information sheet" for counsel and a chiropractor's patient history form all in false name, is convicted of multiple counts; held: unit of prosecution for forgery is each written instrument falsely made, not a single intent to defraud; II.

State v. Lampley, 136 Wn.App. 836, 840-43 (2006)

Defendant is found with a check made out to another with a forged endorsement, trial court instructs jury that the check is worth the face value, RCW 9A.56.010(18)(v)(i), even though the payor had written a replacement check to the payee; held: because the drawer actually signed the check, the check is genuine and the value is its face amount, State v. Easton, 69 Wn.2d 965 (1966), State v. Love, 176 Wn.App. 911, 922-24 (2013); II.

State v. Tinajero, 154 Wn.App. 745 (2009)

Following arrest on a warrant, defendant is found in possession of a forged Social Security card and permanent resident card with a different name, employer testifies that person named on Social Security card worked for him, trial court dismisses unlawful possession of fictitious identification charge, RCW 9A.56.320(4), finding that employer was not deprived of anything; held: because employer was obliged to ensure that employees had legal status to work, employer was deprived of information that may have been material to hiring, thus dismissal reversed, see: State v. Esquival, 71 Wn.App. 868 (1993), State v. Vasquez, 178 Wn.2d 1 (2013); III.

State v. Vasquez, 178 Wn.2d 1 (2013)

Defendant is detained for shoplifting, is found to possess fake social security card and fake permanent resident card, is convicted of forgery, Court of Appeals holds that court can infer intent to injure or defraud, asking "why else would [he] have them?," State v. Vasquez, 166 Wn.App. 50 (2012); held: while slight corroborating evidence is sufficient to convict a possessor of fake identity cards, State v. Esquivel, 71 Wn.App. 868, 870 (1993), State v. Tinajero, 154 Wn.App. 745 (2009), because intent to injure or defraud is an element of the crime, mere possession of forged documents is not enough to sustain a forgery conviction; 9-0.

State v. Ring, 191 Wn.App. 787 (2015)

In forgery case legal efficacy of the written instrument is not an essential element of the crime, rather it is definitional, State v. Johnson, 180 Wn.2d 295, 300-02 (2014), State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 420 (2020) ,distinguishing State v. Kuluris, 132 Wash. 149 (1925); II.

State v. Bradshaw, 3 Wn.App.2d 187 (2018)

Escrow agent provides client with a copy of her certificate of insurance which was altered to show a higher amount of liability insurance than the one filed with the state, is convicted of forgery; held: a certificate of liability insurance is a document of "legal efficacy" as long as it is filed with a public office and has legal significant for the public office for purposes of forgery statute, RCW 9A.60.020(1) (2011), and need not be issued by the public office, State v. Richards, 109 Wn.App. 648, 650 (2001); a certificate of insurance, as a representation of limits of coverage, has legal efficacy as a foundation for legal liability; I.

State v. Smith, 13 Wn.App.2d 420 (2020)

Defendant applies for bank accounts using a social security number belonging to another, obtains money from the account from funds he did not have, is convicted of forgery; held: the "legal efficacy" of a bank account application is a question of law, State v. Ring, 191 Wn.App. 787 (2015); bank account application is a written instrument for purposes of forgery, RCW 9A.60.020(1) (2011); II.

State v. Hillman, ___ Wn.App.2d ___, 519 P.3d 593 (2022)

Court admits, over authenticity objection, a document where expert witnesses testify that the signature was forged by defendant; held: proponent need not rule out all possibilities inconsistent with authenticity, there need be only sufficient proof that would allow a reasonable juror to find in favor of authenticity, ER 901(b)(2), -(b)(4), a witness need not have been present at the creation of a document in order to authenticate its contents, see: State v. Sapp, 182 Wn.App. 910, 914-16 (2014); III.

GUILTY PLEAS*

State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1 (1980)

CrR 4.2(a) confers upon defendant the right to plead guilty at arraignment, unhampered by state's opinions or desires, State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901 (2000), see: State v.Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001), but see: State v. Duhaime, 29 Wn.App. 842 (1981), State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662 (1991), State v. Ford, 125 Wn.2d 919 (1995); 7-2.

State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354 (1980)

Guilty plea to habitual criminal allegation waives review of sufficiency of the supplemental information (unless issue is jurisdictional), State v. Hahn, 100 Wn.App. 391, 394-97 (2000), see: State v. DeRosia, 124 Wn.App. 138, 144-45 (2004); affirms, on different grounds, State v. Majors, 24 Wn.App. 481 (1979); see: State v. Hilyard, 63 Wn.App. 413 (1991); 9-0.

In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203 (1980)

Factual basis for plea must be enough to show there is sufficient evidence for jury to conclude defendant is guilty; can challenge factual basis in personal restraint petition; 6-2.

In re Teems, 28 Wn.App. 631 (1981)

Trial court need not make oral inquiries of defendant to determine that he understands nature of offense and consequences of plea as long as a written statement is entered per CrR 4.2 and In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203 (1980), State v. Codiga, 162 Wn.2d 912, 923-24 (2008); factual basis for plea can be made by defense or state on the record; court should, but need not, get affirmance of facts from defendant; III.

State v. Powell, 29 Wn.App. 163 (1981)

Factual basis for plea must set forth defendant's conduct and state of mind in sufficient detail for a jury to have concluded that he was guilty of the charge; "I did participate in the first degree murder of Charles Allison" is insufficient; II.

State v. Pouncey, 29 Wn.App. 629 (1981)

An equivocal plea can be accepted as long as record establishes a factual basis; II.

State v. Duhaime, 29 Wn.App. 842 (1981)

No right to plead guilty to lesser included offense over state's objection, distinguishing State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1 (1980); see: State v. Bowerman, 115 Wn.2d 794 (1990), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), State v. Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001); I.

State v. Haner, 95 Wn.2d 858 (1981)

---

* See also: PLEA BARGAINING

Pursuant to a plea bargain, state moves to amend information from assault 2° to assault 3° and to delete firearm allegation, trial court denies motion to amend; held: no abuse of discretion for trial court to deny state's motion to amend, as a motion to amend is not part of state's initial decision to prosecute but "implicates" the court, State v. Lamb, 175 Wn.2d 121, 130-32 (2012), see: State v. Agustin, 1 Wn.App.2d 911 (2018), but see: State v. Westwood, 10 Wn.App.2d 543 (2019); 6-3.

In re Taylor, 31 Wn.App. 254 (1982)

"I was directly involved in planning, carrying out plan and aftermath of murder of Myrtle Boston" is not adequate factual basis for plea of guilty to murder 1°; 2-1; III.

State v. Luther, 31 Wn.App. 589 (1982)

Defendant need not be advised jury must be unanimous for plea to be valid; I.

State v. Pam, 31 Wn.App. 692 (1982)

In defendant's habitual criminal trial, defendant's former attorneys are called to testify as to what advice they gave defendant when he pled guilty on the prior offenses; held: by pleading guilty, defendant waives the attorney-client privilege as to the attorney's advice regarding rights defendant waives by pleading guilty; I.

State v. Perez, 33 Wn.App. 258 (1982)

Prior to entry of plea, prosecutor agrees not to oppose intensive parole; at plea hearing, no record is made of this agreement; held: harmless here but prospectively noncompliance with CR 4.2(d) is grounds, ipso facto, for setting plea aside; II.

In re Baca, 34 Wn.App. 468 (1983)

Defendant, pleading guilty to robbery 1° with deadly weapon, informs court he has no prior felonies, court advises defendant of five-year mandatory minimum; after sentencing, court discovers defendant has prior felony, offers to permit defendant to withdraw plea which defendant declines to do, stating he would wait until Parole Board acts; held: no relief as difference between five and seven-and-one-half years is not "alarmingly disproportionate"; III.

State v. Morley, 35 Wn.App. 45 (1983)

Defendant pleads guilty to probation recommendation, prior to sentencing is arrested for two misdemeanors, at sentencing prosecutor equivocates, court, at sentencing, states that defendant "committed two more crimes," sentences to prison, motion to withdraw plea is denied; held: court failed to hold evidentiary hearing to permit defense to call witnesses and require state to prove defendant's alleged breach by a preponderance, In re James, 96 Wn.2d 847 (1982), State v. Roberson, 118 Wn.App. 151 (2003); remanded for a determination whether to allow withdrawal of plea or specific performance "with the defendant's preference to be accorded considerable weight"; court defines specific performance as resentencing before different judge with state bound to make an unequivocal recommendation, cf.: State v. Barber,170 Wn.2d 854 (2011); III.

State v. Osborne, 35 Wn.App. 751 (1983)

Neither a defendant's subjective fear of trial nor pressures beyond the control of the state will render a guilty plea involuntary; factual basis for plea may be established by the information and affidavit of probable cause; I.

State v. Norval, 35 Wn.App. 775 (1983)

Extensive discussion as to what it takes to withdraw an Alford plea, see: State v. D.T.M., 78 Wn.App. 216 (1995); I.

In re Hews, 99 Wn.2d 80 (1983)

Pursuant to a plea bargain, defendant charged initially with felony murder 1° (robbery) pleads to murder 2°, but states in colloquy that he didn't intend to kill anyone; Supreme Court remands, finding prima facie case of an invalid plea; because plea was pre-Wood v. Morris, 87 Wn.2d 501 (1976), trial court is not limited to record, but may consider extrinsic evidence; 7-2; "I escaped from . . . work release" does provide adequate factual basis for plea, reversing In re Evans, 31 Wn.App. 330 (1982); 9-0.

State v. Frazier, 99 Wn.2d 180 (1983)

Juvenile may not plead guilty in juvenile court when decline hearing is pending; 9-0.

State v. Malik, 37 Wn.App. 414 (1984)

Failure to advise defendant prior to plea of guilty of specific immigration consequences is not grounds for withdrawal of plea and is not ineffective assistance of counsel where attorney advised suspect to seek private counsel regarding immigration problems, see: State v. Ward, 123 Wn.2d 488, 512-15 (1994), Pers. Restraint of Yim, 139 Wn.2d 581, 587-90 (1999), State v. Martinez-Lazo, 100 Wn.2d 869, 876-78 (2000), State v. Jamison, 105 Wn.App. 572, 589-96 (2001), Pers. Restraint of Ramos, 181 Wn.App. 743 (2014), but see: Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356, 176 L.Ed.2d 284 (2010), State v. Holley, 75 Wn.App. 191 (1994), State v. Sandoval, 171 Wn.2d 163 (2011), State v. Chetty, 167 Wn.App. 432 (2012), Pers. Restraint of Yung-Cheng Tsai, 183 Wn.2d 91 (2015), Chaidez v. United States, 568 U.S. 342, 133 S.Ct. 1103 185 L.Ed.2d 149 (2013), State v. Littlefair, 112 Wn.App. 749, 763-69 (2002), State v. Chetty, 184 Wn.App. 607 (2014), Pers. Restraint of Garcia-Mendoza, 196 Wn.2d 836 (2021); I.

State v. Dixon, 38 Wn.App. 74 (1984)

Motion to withdraw guilty plea must be based upon "manifest injustice," State v. Taylor, 83 Wn.2d 594, 595 (1974), but see: State v. McDermond, 112 Wn.App. 239 (2002); dicta that there may be somewhat relaxed standard to withdraw Alford plea; II.

State v. Lujan, 38 Wn.App. 735 (1984)

Where defendant challenges validity of prior plea, burden shifts to state; state meets its burden by offering facially valid plea statement, need not offer colloquy; written plea statement is sufficient for court to accept plea, In re Keene, 95 Wn.2d 203 (1980); II.

In re Barr, 102 Wn.2d 265 (1984)

Defendant is charged with two counts statutory rape, pleads to one count indecent liberties, at plea colloquy, it was established that victim was 14 years of age, while statute requires that victim be less than 14; colloquy establishes that defendant was pleading pursuant to a plea bargain; held: where defendant pleads to a substituted charge as a result of a plea bargain, a factual basis for the original charge will suffice to validate the plea, see: In re Hews, 108 Wn.2d 579, 593 (1987), State v. Hahn, 100 Wn.App. 391, 394-97 (2000), State v. Morreira, 107 Wn.App. 450, 456 (2001), State v. Bao Sheng Zhao, 157 Wn.2d 188 (2006), State v. Robinson, 8 Wn.App.2d 629 (2019), State v. Wilson, 16 Wn.App.2d 537 (2021); 9-0.

Ohio v. Johnson, 81 L.Ed.2d 425 (1984)

Defendant charged with murder pleads guilty over state's objection to manslaughter, whereupon court dismisses murder charge as violation of double jeopardy; held: guilty plea to lesser included offense while charges on greater offense remain pending is not an implied acquittal implicating the double jeopardy clause; 7-2.

State v. Smith, 40 Wn.App. 67 (1985)

Factual basis for a plea may be based upon any reliable source, including defendant's statement and prosecutor's recitation of the facts as long as it is part of the record, State v. Newton, 87 Wn.2d 363 (1976); I.

State v. Music, 40 Wn.App. 423 (1985)

A guilty plea induced by prosecutor's threat to file additional charges is not necessarily impermissibly coercive; here, more severe charges were justified by evidence; prosecutor's offer of proof may establish factual basis for plea even if defendant's statement is insufficient; I.

State v. Johnson, 104 Wn.2d 338 (1985)

Defendant's stipulation to facts from which he is found guilty is not equivalent to guilty plea, and trial court need not ensure defendant understands nature of crime and consequences of stipulation, State v. Mierz, 127 Wn.2d 460 (1995), see: State v. Humphries, 181 Wn.2d 708 (2014); 9-0.

State v. Austin, 105 Wn.2d 511 (1986)

Defendant, charged with attempted violation of RCW 69.50.403(a)(3), a gross misdemeanor, but pleads guilty to violation of same statute, a felony, acknowledging that offense is felony; held: guilty plea is affirmed, as defendant knew consequences of plea, even though she pled guilty to an offense greater than that which was charged; 8-0.

State v. James, 108 Wn.2d 483 (1987)

While a defendant has an unconditional right to plead guilty at arraignment, State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1 (1980), once a not guilty plea is entered, the court may permit state to amend the information irrespective of defendant's desire to change his plea to guilty to original charge, see: State v. Bowerman, 115 Wn.2d 794 (1990), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Condon, 182 Wn.2d 307, 321-26 (2015), State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662 (1991), State v. Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001); 9-0.

State v. Schaupp, 111 Wn.2d 34 (1988)

Court grants state's motion to amend from murder 1° to manslaughter 2°, to which defendant pleads guilty; court later vacates plea, over defendant's objection, when it learns state misled court into believing crucial witness was not available; held: where defendant pleads guilty, s/he is entitled to specific enforcement of plea agreement to extent that guilty plea may not be set aside unless there is fraud or wrongdoing by defense, see: State v. Malone, 138 Wn.App. 587 (2007); 5-4.

State v. Arko, 52 Wn.App. 130 (1988)

It is not a breach of a plea bargain for the state to support, on appeal, an exceptional sentence even though the state recommended a sentence within the standard range, unless the parties so agreed as part of the initial plea bargain; I.

State v. Pizzuto, 55 Wn.App. 421 (1989)

Confessions to a police officer are not excludable as plea negotiations, ER 410, unless officer has express plea bargaining authority, see: State v. Nowinski, 124 Wn.App. 617 (2004); I.

State v. Rhode, 56 Wn.App. 69 (1989)

Where trial court accepts a guilty plea, it may not later withdraw the acceptance because it doesn't approve of the SRA sentence range; III.

State v. Mendez, 56 Wn.App. 458 (1990)

Defendant, without interpreter, enters guilty plea, responding in English to colloquy questions, following which defense counsel states he is satisfied defendant is pleading voluntarily and knowingly; defendant later seeks to withdraw plea, claiming he did not understand sufficient English; held: appointment of interpreter is within discretion of trial court, which has no affirmative obligation to appoint where lack of fluency is not apparent; defendant failed to meet his burden of demonstrating manifest injustice, State v. Osborne, 102 Wn.2d 87, 97 (1984), State v. Teshome, 122 Wn.App. 705, 714 (2004), CrR 4.2; I.

State v. Bogart, 57 Wn.App. 353 (1990)

Counsel, representing defendant charged with robbery 2°, is informed by prosecutor that if defendant doesn't plead by pretrial hearing, charge will be amended to robbery 1°; at time of pretrial hearing, counsel is on vacation, substitute counsel enters plea of not guilty; later, defendant tenders plea to robbery 2°, which is rejected, defendant is convicted of robbery 1°; held: in absence of detrimental reliance, state can revoke plea offer at any time, State v. Wheeler, 95 Wn.2d 799 (1981), State v. Yates, 161 Wn.2d 714, 740-41 (2007); defense must show defendant relied on bargain in such a way that a fair trial is no longer possible, State v. Budge, 125 Wn.App. 341 (2005); here, fair trial was not impeded; "'[t]he Due Process Clause is not a code of ethics for prosecutors; its concern is with the manner in which persons are deprived of their liberty,'" at 358; III.

State v. Coppin, 57 Wn.App. 866 (1990)

A prosecutor fulfills his or her duty under a plea agreement by simply making the promised recommendation, and need not advocate it, State v. Hixson, 94 Wn.App. 862, 868-69 (1999), State v. Halsey, 140 Wn.App. 313 (2007); Division II holds that United States v.

Benchimol, 85 L.Ed.2d 462 (1985) repudiates State v. Peterson, 97 Wn.2d 864 (1982); here, prosecutor recommended, in accordance with plea bargain, maximum end of standard range and referred to prior bad acts of defendant to support recommendation, following which court imposed exceptional sentence; prosecutor's argument did not cross the line in derogation of plea agreement, In re Palodichuk, 22 Wn.App. 107 (1978); where prosecutor responds with candor to questions of the judge, no breach of plea agreement occurs, RPC 3.3.

State v. Skiggn, 58 Wn.App. 831 (1990)

Where defense counsel errs in calculating sentence range and fills in erroneous prosecutor's recommendation, then defendant is only entitled to withdraw plea, and is not entitled to specific performance, distinguishing State v. Miller, 110 Wn.2d 528, 532 (1988), State v. Cosner, 85 Wn.2d 45 (1975), State v. Adams, 119 Wn.App. 373, 379-80 (2003), see: State v. Wilson, 102 Wn.App. 161 (2000), State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507 (2006), Pers. Restraint of Murillo, 134 Wn.App. 521 (2006); I.

Pers. Restraint of Moore, 116 Wn.2d 30 (1991)

The sentence imposed pursuant to a plea bargain must be statutorily authorized; a defendant cannot agree to be punished more than the legislature has allowed; 9-0.

State v. Thompson, 60 Wn.App. 662 (1991)

Where defendant pleads not guilty, and court later permits state to amend information, defendant does not obtain the unconditional right to plead guilty, State v. Martin, 94 Wn.2d 1 (1980), unless amended information is substantially different, see: State v. Conwell, 141 Wn.2d 901 (2000), State v. Hubbard, 106 Wn.App. 149 (2001); II.

State v. Saas, 118 Wn.2d 37 (1991)

In determining whether factual basis exists, trial court need not be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant is guilty, rather a factual basis exists if there is sufficient evidence for jury to conclude that defendant is guilty, State v. Newton, 87 Wn.2d 363 (1976), see: State v. Zumwalt, 79 Wn.App. 124 (1995), disapproved, on other grounds, State v. Bisson, 156 Wn.2d 507, 520 n.5 (2006); plea is voluntary as long as defendant is advised of all direct consequences of plea, need not be advised of collateral consequences, State v. Barton, 83 Wn.2d 301, 305 (1980); 9-0.

State v. Hilyard, 63 Wn.App. 413 (1991)

Defendant pleads guilty to lesser charge, as part of plea bargain stipulates to exceptional sentence, then appeals, arguing exceptional sentence was not supported by record or justified by law; held: stipulation to a sentence outside SRA standard range is an adequate reason for exceptional sentence by itself, RCW 9.94A.080(3), plea agreement is a waiver of defendant's right to argue for a sentence within sentence range; see: State v. Majors, 94 Wn.2d 354 (1980); II.

