

Stephen Foster

FLEC is an incredible and effective bar associate committee. It is not only the only lobbyist the Family Law Section has, FLEC has also been called upon many times for its opinion on legislation, which has been effective and helpful to the consumer. Currently, FLEC is expanding its basic skills by contacting the law schools in Washington, Idaho, and Oregon. There is also an ongoing skill sessions that rotate between eastern and western Washington, where FLEC members volunteer their time to train young lawyers and or legal assistants on how to prepare for a motion and present a motion. Also, FLEC offers general office practices, i.e. how to set up a new file, and how to monitor the process dissolution from the initial filing to the final filing. Overall, FLEC is probably one of the most demonstrative bar association committees currently in existence, and I want to be a part.